SMALL MEETING AND SMALLER VOTE

Ten to Twenty Vote in Favor of the "Real Boston" Movement After Addresses

Proposed Bill Discussed at Meeting in Colonial Hall

The attendance Tuesday evening at the first joint meeting of the Board of Trade, Civic League and Merchants' Association to hear "Real Boston" explained by those thoroughly conversant with the movement was somewhat of a disappointment. With an important matter such as this is, Colonial hall should have been filled to overflowing. On the contrary however there were about 100 present before the meeting adjourned. At the start there was less than half this number but they came in gradually.

George H. Brown presided, and said he was glad there had come a day when the three associations could get together. The Board of Trade has been the pioneer in upholding Quincy. He believed if the Citizens Association could have been consolidated with the Board of Trade much more good would have been accomplished. He introduced as the first speaker C. Neal Barney, ex-mayor of Lynn.

Mr. Barney said that he was pleased to talk to men who believe in the

to come. Many people have the idea that Boston is a place of a few historical relics. Boston, however, is one of the liveliest communities in the country, but does not get the credit of it, whereas if the forty cities and towns that make the "Real Boston" are classed together, it would mean an increase in business and would compare favorably with any community in the country.

It is greater than many of the larger cities, but does not get credit for it. About seventy-five percent of persons going abroad register as coming from Boston. To all intents and purposes they do come from Boston. He then spoke of the remarkable growth of urban life. Fifty percent of the population lived within a radius of ten miles of the State House, yet Boston has not treated the growth as other cities have. See how the unity of interests are recognized by other great cities, and they get the benefit of it in statistical reports.

We have forty different governments or municipalities and almost as many different kinds of government. In the last half century there has grown up a large community interest such as Metropolitan water, sewers, parks etc. Thus our interests are much those of the community. It is this spirit that gives us the desire to get together without loosing our LOCAL ADVANTAGES.

There are many things that can better be done together. The cities and towns that compose this district have nothing to say, except through their representatives in the Legislature how the money shall be expended. We should have some advisory power over these things. He then spoke of the New York method of government by

Gregorian Solemn High Mass for John A. McDonnell

The funeral services of John A. McDonnell were held this morning at 10 o'clock from St. John's church. Previous to the church services, prayers were said over the body at the home, 53 Bigelow street. Delegations from four organizations to which he belonged were present at this service, and went to the church also. The Gregorian solemn high mass of requiem was conducted by the following: Celebrant, Rev. Fr. Matthew F. McDonnell, a brother of the deceased; deacon, Rev. Fr. Andrew J. Fitzgerald of Braintree; sub deacon, Rev. Fr. P. J. Scannell of Quincy; master of ceremonies, Rev. Fr. Neil Paul Brennan. Within the sanctuary rail were: Rev. John P. Cuffe and Rev. James F. McNiff of Atlantic, Rev. Henry T. Grady and Rev. William J. Duffy of West Quincy, Rev. Daniel J. Gleason of Randolph, Rev. Daniel C. Riordan of Boston, Rev. John J. Ryan of Harvard Square, Rev. Thomas W. Coughlin of Mt. Auburn, Rev. Thomas J. Brannon of Holbrook, Rev. John J. Coan of Quincy.

The Gregorian chant was sung by the church choir with Mary Burns and Joseph E. McCarthy as soloists. John F. Mahon was the organist.

Floral contributions emblematic of the orders were sent by the four organizations represented by delegations. Numerous wreaths and bouquets were sent by individuals.

The Board of Trade was represented by Eugene R. Stone, John R. Richards, William H. Teasdale and Arthur W. Stetson.

Knights of Columbus, Quincy council, by James F. Burke, William A. Carey, Eugene O'Connor and Charles C. Hearn. The Catholic Order of Foresters, Quincy court, Number 76, by Michael Sweeney and Henry McGrath. The Granite Manufacturers by Alex Falconer, Forbes Craig, James Joss and Napoleon Reed.

After the services at the church, the priests and many of the mourners followed the hearse to St. Mary's cemetery in West Quincy, where committal prayers were said by Rev. Matthew F. McDonnell. The funeral was one of the largest held in Quincy for some time, attesting the esteem in which Mr. McDonnell was held by his friends and fellow citizens. He is survived by a widow and seven children, a brother and three sisters.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

A regular meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening, but was of short duration. There was practically no business to be acted upon and after hearing the financial report read, the meeting adjourned. The financial report showed expenditures as follows:

QUINCY MUSIC HALL

THE HIGHEST CLASS OF LICENSE—A THEATRE LICENSE, is now issued to Music Hall and the highest rating both "as a whole" and "for safety of audience"—"Excellent"—is given. Previously the fire exists and facilities for fire prevention were ample for a Hall License, but to obtain the present highest class of License and rating, the whole main exit has been torn down and made absolutely fire-proof, large automatic smoke and fire vents have been constructed over the stage, all scenery has been made fire-proof, and the previous generous exit facilities have been very greatly increased. There are now ten (10) doors opening from the Hall, and six (6) separate exits, 2 of 8 feet each, 1 of 7 1-2 feet, 2 of 5 feet each and 1 of 3 1-2 feet, a total of 37 feet of exit. All exits are lighted continually by both gas and electricity. There is an asbestos curtain, by which the stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are chemical fire extinguishers, and fire pails throughout the Hall.

The Location is in the heart of the city. The street cars with double tracks pass the door.

The Elaborate, Permanent Decorations which have recently been put up are most attractive, and add much to the appearance of the Hall.

The Floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The Ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded Hall. A large fan has recently been installed.

The Hall is Lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The Heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

For Advertising the Music Hall Billboards are valuable.

To Darken the Hall, there are special window fittings so that at noonday the Hall can be made as dark as at midnight.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish an absolutely safe and large and really first class Hall.

THE BENEFITS OF TROLLEY FREIGHT

Explained by Old Colony Street Railway Company to an Abused Public

Proposed Depot on Washington Street Will Be Up-to-Date

Editor of Daily Ledger:

Once on a time I read the incident of a man who went to a watchmaker's to get his watch which had there been repaired. The charges were so excessive that he sarcastically asked the watchmaker if he would be kind enough to take the watch in part payment for the repairs.

I confess to a kindred feeling when on several occasions I have had the privilege of receiving express matter by a recent comer to our city about which the conundrum was asked, "For what was Eve made?" In some of these instances I would have been glad to give this express company the goods brought in part payment for the express charges.

But seriously, why should I be mulcted in some instances double, in others treble what I pay my local expressman? Wondering if there was no relief it was brought to my attention that the Old Colony Street Railway proposed doing an express business in different parts of Quincy. In answer to my inquiry to the officials I received the following courteous and illuminating reply. For the benefit of the suffering public may I ask you to publish this letter.

Rufus B. Tobey.

We have a petition in the City Council for a track location on Washington street to connect with property on the northerly side for the purpose of carrying on trolley express work. The property is nearly opposite Foster street, and was formerly a livery stable. We propose to take down some of these buildings and in front of the lot put up a modern up to date structure, probably reinforced concrete, with offices in front, and something that will look up to date on the street.

Anyone in Quincy can bring goods to the station and come to the station for them, and it is not detrimental to any local expressman as it does not take his business from him, but is rather a benefit to him, because he can bring goods for his customers and come after them. In other words it is open for the public.

We can also make direct shipments to points south to New York, and beyond if necessary. We have a New York connection at Providence, so that goods could be shipped direct on boat to New York, and we connect with boats in Providence each week day morning, taking goods that left New York on the 5 o'clock boat the night before, a matter that would be appreciated by a great many.

We are operating now in nearly all the towns south of Quincy to New Bedford, Newport, Fall River and Providence, and will on the completion of this station install similar service for Quincy.

We have all the rights necessary to do this kind of business in Quincy, and the track connection is a small matter to complete and connect with proposed terminals.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

That wife in Baltimore who started in to kiss her husband 46 times on his birthday met with a cropper to begin. He threw her out of the window.

What won't a man do for sport! There is a base ball player in Little Rock, Ark., who has had his toes cut off to increase his speed on the bases and in the field.

The man with a nose like a beacon light must think the good old days have long gone by when he reads in the papers of 1863 that Old Bourbon was only a dollar a gallon and Medford rum twenty cents a quart.

Less than 100 attended the "Real Boston" meeting on Tuesday evening, although it was public and held under the auspices of three of the leading business organizations of the city. It is "Real Quincy" and not "Real Boston" that most interests our people now.

We heard an orator say the other day that the time was coming when no man in the public eye would dare do wrong. He hasn't been following the Lorimer senatorship case at Washington or he would see the time has not arrived yet. Washington senators are all in the same boat with Lorimer so it would hardly do to start the reform just now.

One of the best sermons we have heard in many a day was that by an old darky who was asked what religious denomination he belonged to, and replied: "Bless you, chile, it's this way. There are three roads leading from here to the town—a straight road, a road that goes round in a sort of circle, and a road through the woods. When I go to the town with a load of grain they don't say, 'Uncle More, what road did you come by?' but 'Is your wheat good?'"

Quincy men are in demand in larger fields, as has often been noted, but not quite so forcibly as recently when the pastor of one of our leading churches was called by two Chicago churches, and now the secretary of our Y. M. C. A. to the city of Lawrence with a new $170,000 plant. Once Chicago took our superintendent of schools, and Boston has several of our masters and teachers who made successes first in Quincy. But then the first Vice President of the United States was a Quincy statesman, and we furnished the United States two Presidents, and Massachusetts the first Governor under the Constitution.

IRELAND'S APPEAL.

The coming two or three weeks promises a historic debate in the English Parliament over Irish home rule, Premier Asquith having promised that the Liberal government will favor complete local self government.

The method under which Ireland has been governed during the past century, is somewhat as if Congress attempted to handle local government for such outlying communities as Florida, Texas, or California. The spirit of American fair play in the rest of the country would not tolerate such absentee control.

Ireland had a parliament, usually co-equal with that at London, for the 500 years ending about a century ago. The expedient of governing the country from London is thus a comparatively recent innovation. Ireland merely asks the local home rule given 28 other dependencies, and does not question the authority of the English parliament.

Its plea is simply the old "taxation without representation" principle, for which our fathers quit their homes for patriotic martyrdom. It costs but $13,000,000 for the civil government of Scotland, while in Ireland a country that is poorer and about the same in population, the cost is $22,000,000.

Industries have steadily declined under alien rule. There were 193,861 textile workers in 1871, and but 109,588 under recent figures.

John Bull has his choice. Shall his Irish subjects be happy, contented, and industrially prosperous, loyally supporting him, or shall they be kept in a state of perpetual shillaleh swinging by having Irish affairs settled by Englishmen?

Better make a friend of your neighbor, Mr. Bull! We have got pretty well acquainted with him over here, and he is very useful in our business, with his warm heart, his kindly humor his buoyant energy and merry spirits. He will be a mighty good follower if you will but make him feel that he is one of the family instead of an unwilling captive.

ISN'T THIS ABSURD!

Suppose you have a present to send to a friend in the next township, and another to send to a friend in Berlin, Germany. Suppose the two presents, packed, weigh precisely four pounds each. The United State postoffice department will carry one of the packages six miles, say from Beverly to Manchester for 64 cents. The United States postoffice department will undertake to convery the other package to Berlin, Germany, more than three thousand miles for 48 cents. The first package must not weigh over four pounds, or the postal authorities won't carry it at any price. But the second might weigh as much as 11 pounds, and be as much as 3 feet 6 inches long and still be accepted for transportation to Germany at the rate of 12 cents per pound.

This hypothetical case sets forth clearly the absurdity of the contention that the parcel post would not be practical in this country. It is practical in nearly all the civilized countries of the world save the United States, and the United States has a parcel agreement with 48 of them—will carry parcel post packages to 48 different countries—yet folks will shake their heads and tell us that they are afraid it won't work—here. And of course the stockholders of the express companies and the express company senators and representatives in congress are quite sure that it won't work.—Beverly Times.

DRIFT OF OPINION

A $10,000 minister with one large church, instead of ten $1000 ministers in ten struggling small churches, would make religion more effective and would be a more business-like procedure, is the opinion of the Rev. George Luther Cady, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church, Dorchester. This sounds pretty good for the minister who gets the $10,000 job. But how about the other nine who are to be thrown out summarily? Are we to have the trust idea applied to churches in such fashion that we shall be ruthless as to what happens to those who can't quite reach trust size in the pulpit? How about the nine quartettes who would be deprived of their places, and the nine organists, and the nine janitors, and the more than nine dealers in such necessities as a church building has to have to run it? There are also lots of people in what we may call minor churches who haven't either the money or the desire to attend a great and wealthy church of the kind that can pay a pastor a $10,000 salary and provide music by people who must get a living like wealthy people from their vocalism; where would they worship? Come to think it all over, the trust idea in religion isn't really a very heartful idea, is it? It would throw the little fellows aside as ruthlessly as does a great business corporation.—Brockton Enterprise.

Perhaps the apprehension regarding the nature of the material to be used in the new federal building in Barre will be appreciated when outsiders are told that in Quincy, Mass., the great granite center of Massachusetts, a plain lime-stone building was erected for post office purposes by the government, while out in Cleveland, O., the state of limestone, a handsome federal building of granite was erected. Coming nearer home, we find a marble structure in Montpelier; whereas, Montpelier is in the Barre granite belt and is indebted to Barre granite for much of its prosperity. Now, is there any wonder over the local apprehension lest Barre granite should not be used in the construction of the federal building to be erected in one of the most conspicuous positions in the city? With a huge mountain—two of them, in fact—within three miles of the site of the proposed building, it would be strange indeed if the building were to be constructed of anything but Barre granite.—Barre Daily Times.

PANAMA CANAL INSPECTED

Quincy Man Has Doubts If It Will Be Opened in 1915

We arrived in Colon Feb. 6, and at 8.30 we started for Panama. The excursion was arranged by the steamship company and a great part of the passengers took in the excursion to see the great canal. We made the excursion on a special train of the Panama railroad, and went by Mt. Hope cemetery where there are laid away 20,000 French canal employees. At Gatum lake the train stopped for twenty minutes for the passengers to see the great lakes. The locks are not finished and will not be for a long time. Now there can be seen for many miles the Calebra cut and signs of the canal are seen all along. At 9.52 we are across the last cascada and continue to Panama, where we arrive at 11.50.

We had a good lunch at the hotel Tivoli which is run by the United States. All along the cut there are not many men working. Where the railroad now runs will be 62 feet of water to be connected with the great lake of 164 square miles. It is dug through in several places but larger part of it is swamp. It is intended to fill the lake with water run from one lock to another.

Looking from our car to the other side, it looks like New England. On each side of the cut are houses which the United States own. After dinner I bought postal cards and tried to find a post office. We found one and they say two cents for postage stamps. The government owns five miles each side of the zone but do not own Panama or Colon, but have certain rights there. We took a ride and had a good look at the Pacific ocean.

A few stores have things to sell, but the prices are high. One side of the street they talk United States and on the other Spanish. A large part of the people are unbleached. Everywhere are great steam shovels. When finished it will take from ten to fifteen hours for a vessel to go from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It is said it will be completed in 1915, but it does not look like it. The Panama railroad is to be relocated at a cost of over three million dollars, as the present location of the railroad will be part of the great lake, which will be from 68 to 85 feet deep.

The canal is being made in parts. For a few miles it is partly completed. Then there is a long space left where no work has been done. I did not see many men at work. They have 4131 dump cars, 68 locomotives, 100 small cars. The water is not salt but fresh, as the two oceans do not run into the lake. I do not think any vessel will pass from Colon to Panama in five years. To get the flag stones on both sides, set in cement, will take ten or more years and it will be a question if then completed. The canal is not expected to pay a profit in money.

Shall it be fortified? If not what is to prevent foreign vessels going through. What is to prevent the Japanese going up in flying machines at night and dropping bombs on the locks and blowing them to pieces so that it will take years to repair them.

The United States still keeps the right to cure the yellow fever therefore on our side we find quantities of tar to kill the mosquitoes, and they will do it.

At 5.30 we return to Colon and at 8.30 set sail for Laguayra, LaGuayra, Venezuela. Another letter in a few days.

Charles W. Guy.

NEW YORK'S RAPID TRANSIT.

Passengers Wait While Horse Car Conductor Has Tooth Pulled.

It was a usual day on a New York crosstown horse car. Of course none of those on board were in a hurry or they would have walked, but even at that it was annoying when the conductor pulled the bell rope once and ran into a house near by while the car waited. At the end of five minutes he reappeared, holding his jaw in one hand and a tooth in the other.

"I had a toothache," he explained, "and the pain became more than I could stand, so I just went into that there dentist's and had it pulled."

—Mrs. Bowlker tells some interesting tales of the league's work for clean markets. She tells of one little girl who, going to market for the family, saw the butcher chewing tobacco and spitting on the floor. "If you're going to do that I shall never buy my family's provisions here again," was the warning she gave him Mrs. Bowlker emphasized the point that it is the customers who have power to insist on clean shops, by not buying at dirty ones.—Boston Record.

SECRETARY GAY

steady and healthy growth during these years until it is now regarded as an indispensible fixture in the community.

When we look back seven years and recall the character of the work which had been done previously, the sentiment which existed in the city, then consider the present 20th century type of work which is being conducted in the building and throughout the city, and the universal sentiment in its favor—it seems a wonderful evolution for a few short years to produce and in itself offers a striking testimonial to Mr. Gay and his persistant efforts.

In leaving now he can do so with the happy satisfaction of an accomplished task—a $45,000 plant free from debt, a work well organized, and the future bright; this in addition to the knowledge of having been useful in the development of hundreds of lives toward manly christian character.

In the last two years Secretary Gay has refused three or more very flattering calls to other fields, preferring to remain here till such time as the task he had set for himself should have been completed.

Lawrence is a hustling mill city of 86,000 population, and is growing more rapidly than any of the cities of its class in Massachusetts and the association there is now building a fine $115,000 building, which when finished and furnished will be second to none in the State. The cost including furnishings and land will be $170,000. The building will contain a dormitory of 60 rooms, swimming plunge 60 feet long, room for 5 bowling alleys, separate boys department, lunch room and other up-to-date features. The building will be finished in September next, and will be dedicated at that time without debt. A force of eight or ten men aside from the janitorial force will be required to run it when the work is fully organized.

The city stands ready it "be shown," and Mr. Gay can show them without a doubt. His many friends in Quincy will regret his leaving, but will rejoice with him in his well earned position.

The Quincy association appointed as a committee resolution on the work of Secretary Gay,—President R. D. Chase and J. A. Sedgwick.

Also the following committee of four to select a new general secretary for the association—R. D. Chase, N. G. Nickerson, Frank W. Crane and J. A. Sedgwick.

THE TAX-LIMIT LAW.

The law providing that cities shall not raise by taxation more than $12 a year for current expenses was counted upon at the outset to promote a number of highly desirable public ends. Taking everything into account, it can not be said that predictions to this end by sanguine supporters of the movement have been fulfilled. During the quarter of a century that has elapsed since the law went into effect, conditions have changed, to the recognition of which must be charged the growing demand that the limit be raised or eliminated. Many cities have found it necessary, from time to time, to go before the legislature, in praying for leave to borrow money for current expenses, when if no limit had been imposed, the sums would have been put into the regular tax levy. The subject has annually come in for a share of discussion, with the pros and cons marshalled with vim and enthusiasm. One of the mayors who specially condemns the existent restrictions would have the law repealed. To meet however, the objections of people who fear lapses into extravagance, he would provide that no city shall borrow except for purposes specifically authorized by the great and general court. Despite the criticism to which the law has been subjected, it is doubtful indeed whether the time has arrived for repeal. As between this extreme and increasing the present limit, it is more likely that the latter alternative will commend itself to majority legislative favor.—Salem News.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

By invitation of the Watertown Woman's club, a conference on civil service reform will be held in the Unitarian building, Church street, Watertown, on Thursday afternoon, March 2, at 2.15 o'clock, Miss Georgie A. Bacon, president of the federation, presiding. Club presidents and all interested club members are cordially invited. It is expected that Charles Warren, chairman of the Massachusetts civil service commission will speak, also Miss Anna Murphy of Framingham, who will tell of her method of teaching civil government, good citizenship and the merit system. Time will be allowed for discussion and for a social hour with the Hostess Club. Train leaves North station, Boston, via Watertown branch, at 1.25 P. M., returning at 4.20 and 5.04 P. M. Electrics leave subway, Park street, via Harvard square and via Waltham, at frequent intervals, running time 43 minutes; leave car at Watertown square. Please present by admission, personal card, with name of club written upon it.

The Norwood Woman's club has had the matter of the collection of rubbish by that town under consideration through its town improvement committee for some time, and the formation of the Clean-up club at the Winslow school was a step of interest to the children. The committee on town affairs of the Norwood Business Association has taken the matter up and it will be brought before the voters of the town at a town meeting, with an article asking for an appropriation for the collection of rubbish. The committee's idea is to interest all the school children in the same plan as the Winslow school children, in this clean-up work which will be for their own benefit as well as that of the community.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

Presidents afternoon of Quincy Alliance on Monday was a pleasant affair although not so largely attended as usual on account of much illness in the city. It was regretted that the president Mrs. E. B. Marsh was among those unable to be present. Mrs. Henry Tirrell first vice president presided most graciously and acceptably. Following the devotional and business session there was music, Miss Minnie Hardwick being the soloist accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Pfaffmann.

An especially interesting feature of the afternoon was the heart to heart talks by the visiting presidents from neighboring Alliances, who told of the works of their Alliance.

The hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. Charles Bickford and Mrs. Charles H. Johnson and Mrs. Bickford and Mrs. Pfaffmann presided at the cocoa urns. The afternoon was very informal and social.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, president, called the meeting of the Quincy Women's club together promptly at half-past two on Tuesday for a short business session.

Following the secretary's report there was an announcement from the Art and Literature committee of a gentlemen's night to be held at the clubhouse on Wednesday evening, Mar. 15. This was to have been held in February but was postponed on account of the weather and illness of the soloist. For entertainment there will be an interpretative reading of Hamlet by Prof. Charles Bickford, a group of songs by Miss Dreyer of Boston with Miss Williams as accompanist. The evening will be complimentary to club members and they will also be privileged to invite a guest, a man preferred as it is to be a gentlemen's night.

Mrs. N. G. Nickerson made an appeal for old rubber which she is collecting to sell to raise money for charitable work. If notified she would send for it or if there was only a small quantity could be brought to clubhouse.

The discussion on enlarging the club membership to 450 was postponed until March 14, as the present meeting was a public one and a vote could not be easily be taken.

The afternoon's program opened with a group of songs by Miss Edith Marion Glines with Mrs. Mary Chandler West at the piano. She sang A Happy Song and I Hear you caling me, Birthday, Little House o' Dreams, singing most sweetly and charmingly, receiving applause of appreciation after each selection and so hearty a one at the end that she responded to the encore with ohn Hermann Loud's clever little song, The Little Irish girl.

Mrs. Mary L. Wade, chairman of the Home Economics committee introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mr. Bernarth H. Smith, chief of food and drug inspection of Boston, who was highly recommended by Dr. Wiley the food expert. He paid a tribute to women's clubs for although the pure food bill was before the house some fifteen years it was not put through until the women's clubs and consumer's league put their shouler to the wheel. There was now a business moral tone that was lacking when labels were absent. The United States has no jurisdiction in states only in Products going out of one state into another.

Drugs are much adulterated and patent medicines contain about 90 per cent of alcohol. Most of the olive oil was cotton oil raised in our southern states, shipped to France and Italy returning to us with high sounding gay labels for which we paid a big price. Rice a common food product is highly polished and varnished often treated with blueing to make it look whiter. There was a qeustion about using preservatives as high authorities disagree on their harmfulness but where preservative were sused poor fruits etc. Could be used where pure fruitneeded no preservative. Housekeepers should avoid ground nutmeg as it was the poor and wormy nuts ground up. Figs had received serious consideration conditions were so bad where they were prepared for shipment to our country. Our government enforced such stringent rules that we were receiving figs that were safe to eat. Flours are bleached and alterated.

Cheap penny candies that the school children buy are shellacked to make them attractive and shiny. This shellack contained yellow arsenic, poisonous even in small quantities. Fish was something to be watched as conditions were bad. Much came from Gloucester where the fish are washed in water taken from the harbor which is filthy with sewage and filth. This was being looked after by the government and would surely be improved. In opening sardines see that the white side of fish is up if backs are up fish should be condemned and grocer told not to carry that brand.

Weights and measures is something that housekeepers should look into. No kitchen should be without scales and everything should be weighed. Many things are sold short weight, butter from 1 to 3 percent; milk 1 to 5; potatoes 10 to 15 and meat varied much. Some marketmen's thumbs had been sold thousands of times. Don't buy by the pail or package. If buying lard get it by the pound. If this method is adopted short weight would soon be rectified. It was the real duty of the housekeeper to see that she gets a dollars worth for every 100 cents expended. Too often the sealer of weights and measures filled position because of politics rather than qualification. This should be looked up.

Milk especially needs to have a careful watch and there should be a milk inspector in every town. An inspector would be much cheaper than an epidemic.

One wondered at the conclusion of Mr. Smith's lecture if it were safe to eat anything but after all pure food and right conditions rest entirely with the consumer and instead of giving up eating this or that why not all look at the matter sensibly and decide henceforth to read the labels on what you buy and insist on your grocer selling you the right goods also, don't accept short measure but have it out with your dealer for he will gladly conform to public demand.

The meeting was an open one, so many not members of the club enjoyed the lecture. The Exchange department, an active part of the Home Economics committee served refreshments as their part of the entertainment.

Mrs. Conway, chairman being assisted by her whole committee. Hot chocolate was served, the pourers being Mrs. G. B. Bates, Miss Mary L. Hinkley and Miss Norma Lowe and others assisted in passing sandwiches and other dainties. It was an instructive and pleasant meeting in every way.

STORY, SONG OR HOBBY

Required of Everyone of Wollaston Congregational Club

A potpourri of club talent characterized the monthly meeting of the Wollaston Congregational club in the vestry on Tuesday evening. The meeting was given over to the unrestrained control of Messrs. Bain and Mann, "Incorporated amusement dispensers" who endeavored to run the entertainment in an orderly manner.

After inspiration gathered from a flowing bowl of fruit punch, that its maker, W. A. Mann, vouched for by saying it contained nothing deleterious, the program continued, each one present being compelled to tell a story, sing a song, or dilate upon his favorite hobby.

This action surprised because of the lot of talent it was never before known the club contained and resulted in a most pleasurable evening. With L. F. Besse at the piano some rousing choruses of old familiar songs were sung.

Mr. Cohen, a Wollaston tailor, was a guest of the club, and contributed a pathetic recitation and several Hebrew stories. His introduction brought out the fact that he has two sons on the stage, one in vaudeville and the other starring with DeWolfe Hopper.

Mr. Roberts related the incidents attending the Men's fair held in the church 25 years ago. All the cake, aprons and other articles on sale were manufactured by the men. This novelty so widely advertised the show that people attended from Lynn and Salem and towns to the north of Boston as well as the South Shore.

At the business meeting, on motion of Rufus B. Tobey, a committee was appointed to arrange for an observance in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the Civil War.

SMALL MEETING

burroughs but the New England plan was better.

In Boston we have many local interests, and for these matters we desire to have a large federation of the cities and towns. It means that each of the forty cities or towns shall have one representative and that they shall come together in a Metropolitan Council. They should simply have advisory powers, as to the amounts needed by the whole community. As it is now some particular section may want some appropriation, and when the matter comes up in the State House they will pack the committee room in favor and there will be but little opposition for the reason that the other communities have but little notice of what is to come up. With the proposed advisory council this would be impossible.

In 1907 there was an informal gathering of the mayors and chairmen of the boards of selectmen who held two meetings and considered the bills pending before the Legislature and made and were thus able to give the committees at the State House much information. He believed that should be continued. The representatives sent to the councils would have no power to spend money, but to consider measures in their broader aspect, It is of great importance that the world should know the industrial figures. Such figures given out by the census would give the people of the world an idea of what Boston really is. It would give us some representation that would be worth something to our communities.

Sydney R. Wrightington, a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, said the spirit of the times was one of cooperation. This desire to get together and work together has driven men to cities. It is that spirit that has led men to get into an organization which shall influence the social and business life. The Boston Chamber of Commerce was composed of 4500 members who work through committees. Communities cannot afford to establish industrial schools and other things that Boston has, yet they should have the same privileges.

He then spoke of the work the different committees of the was doing. It deals with the greater problems from a business standpoint and extension of trade of Boston. But we have been concealing our real assets in municipal statistical comparisons.

He then gave a number of statistics. By the 1910 census Philadelphia had a population of 1,500,000, New York 4,700,000 and Boston 670,000. In area New York had 312 square miles, Philadelphia 125 square miles and Boston 34 square miles.

He spoke of the increase in industrial matters, and said if it had been the "Real Boston" the increase would have been 39 percent or more than New York. People of the west do not understand our real growth. They think the towns they see when they visit Boston are a part of Boston and do not realize that they are separate municipalities. They regard Boston as a small conservative city and do not consider it as an active business centre.

In the 1910 census while Boston was placed in the eighth or ninth place, it ought to have been the third or fourth. That is the idea of this movement to show in the census what it really is. To give it the statistical rating it should have.

In the 1910 census, Boston will be in the SECOND CLASS.

It ought to be in the first class. If we can reach the step proposed we shall be given our proper place in the census standing for 1910, which will not be made up for some time yet. It is this spirit that the Boston Chamber of Commerce has been considering, and the plan has been made in the report just given out, which recommends an advisory council. Here the men who are in touch with local wants can give their ideas, and the improvements desired can be understandingly considered. Yet it does not take away any local control and the cities and towns do not lose their individuality. We are opposed to annexation, as we believe it impossible to preserve the local identity by annexation. We therefor urge this simple form of lose federation. We need to awake to our possibilities and obligations.

In reply to questions, Mr. Wightington said that Brookline, Milton and Newton were hostile to the movement, particularly Newton, but on the whole there was but little opposition except from those identified with interests that might be effected. It would have no effect on the financial development of the water front, yet it would stimulate the plan for the development of the entire harbor. Cities and towns would not lose their individuality. The plan did not propose to disturb local conditions.

A PROTEST.

Chairman Brown suggested that it would be a good idea to get the sentiment of those present on the movement This brought Representative Thomas to his feet, who made a vigorous protest. It would be a different thing when you annexed the forty towns and cities. While south of Boston there are perhaps ten representatives, Boston had 50 and when any bill came up the Mayor of Boston would say to the fifty representatives vote against it. Are we qualified at the present time to say what is best for Quincy? The Boston Chamber of Commerce do not stand by the March Bennett bill. He wanted the citizens to hear the opposition before they put themselves on record. He then started to haul the Chamber of Commerce over the coals for investing their money in Texas and other places, when Henry L. Kincaide raised the point that Mr. Thomas was wandering away from the question.

Representative Thomas then said that he did not want his hands tied when the matter came up, and that he should not feel bound to vote for it.

PRESIDENT STONE.

President Stone of the Board of Trade said that the meeting was not to try and force any matter, but simply to have the plan explained. He thought the advantage would be great and that the meeting had been very instructive.

Henry L. Kincaide, hoped that the meeting would put itself on record. He was heartily in favor of the proposed movement. It would do more for Quincy than anything else, and the proposition has a great deal of merit. He would like to have an individual expression.

John Q. A. Field did not feel like voting until he know more about it. He was opopsed to the city losing its individuality.

Chairman Brown then requested all in favor of the movement to rise and about one third of those present did so. There was no one to stand in opposition.

WESTERN UNION "DAY LETTER."

The Day Letter is the latest Western Union innovation to popularize and extend the facilities of the telegraph service. That Company announces today the inauguration of the fifty word Day Letter as the day companion to the fifty word Night Letter, which is now so much used for all kinds of correspondence.

It is just a year since the Western Union launched the Night Letter and the popularity and success of that service in providing the means for an extended use of the telegraph by the public has prompted the Company to give to the public similar advantages in the day service.

Day Letters are to transmitted as the facilities of the Company will permit during business hours of the day, full rate telegrams having priority of transmission and will be accepted at all offices of the Western Union at any hour during the day, or they may be sent in by telephone.

The rate charged for a Day Letter of fifty words or less is one and one-half times the fifty word Night Letter rate, and for each additional ten words or less one-fifth the initial charge. For example, the Night Letter rate between New York and Chicago is 50 cents, the Day Letter rate will be one and one-half times that, or 75 cents, with 15 cents for each additional ten words. The New York San Francisco Night Letter rate is $1.00; the Day Letter rate $1.50.

The Day Letter and the Night Letter give the United States the cheapest telegraph service in the world.

BRIEFS

March.

Was your gas bill less for February, under the new rates?

The month came in cold but not stormy or blustering.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Swingle are entertaining Daniel Newman of Kankakee, Ill., who married a sister of Mrs. Swingle.

Quincy Pickwick club has a Dickens night tonight with Mr. H. H. Schumacher as the host and Miss Marjorie Fay and Miss Elizabeth Hubbard in charge of the program.

Mrs. Everett C. Bumpus is to give the last in her series of Italian art lectures, next Tuesday morning at eleven o'clock at her home on Presidents hill. Venice and the work of Andrea Palladis will be her subject.

Considerable interest is being taken in the plans of the commission for abolishing the grade crossings which will be exhibited at the Board of Trade meeting this evening for the first time in Quincy. It is not known generally whether it is planned to elevate or depress the tracks.

END OF WINTER TRADE.

The past winter has had so much mild weather that the merchants must have many winter fabrics and heavy goods unsold. Those who stand pat without advertising will keep their stocks until after fall and must take chances on style changes.

The big city department stores have set an example, more pronounced than ever of late years, of offering slashing cuts at the end of a season. Women find that the prices prevailing on suitings and other goods are cut to about old-time cheapness by the stock clearing sales of this period.

Advertisements of such sales have become such a regular trade feature that most women readers look over the newspapers now with confident expectations, of seeing opportunities for economy. The man who disappoints this expectation would better get out his camphor and moth balls as he will not need his winter goods again befor the late fall.—Boston Courier.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

VATICAN NOTE TO SPAIN

Contents Said to Indicate That Agreement Is Impossible

Madrid, March 1.—The religious question has again assumed prominence and threatens the existence of the ministry, which will be subjected at an early date to a furious attack by the Conservatives.

The Vatican has sent another note to the administration. The text, it is understood, is more intransigeant than ever, making impossible all hope of an agreement.

El Liberal and El Imparcial declare that the Vatican's note to the government is a reiterated refusal to resume negotiations with Spain unless the government agrees to reach an accord with Rome on the religious questions figuring in the program of Premier Canalejas, before they are submitted to parliament. This, these papers say, was the response to the government's suggestion that if the Holy See was prepared to resume negotiations for a revision of the concordat, Spain would appoint an ambassador to the Vatican.

RAVAGES BY PLAGUE

Deaths In Chinese City Said to Number Two Thousand Daily

St. Petersburg, March 1.—A Chinese city about fifty miles north of Harbin is being ravaged by the plague. The deaths there are reported to number 2000 daily. The disease is raging at Kirin, Hulanchen, opposite Harbin, and at Bodune, 100 miles southeast of the Manchurian capital.

Bread riots have occured throughout the stricken district. The foreign consuls are preparing to leave. Troops have refused to march into the plague places and martial law has been established. The Chinese emperor has reprimanded the Manchurian authorities for not having dealt more energetically with the situation.

DEAF MUTE GUILTY OF "PROFANE LANGUAGE"

He Is Fined and Bound Over to Keep the Peace

St. Louis, March 1.—With all the eloquence he could throw into his fingers Charles Faith, a deaf mute, tried to convince Judge Klieber that he could not be possibly guilty of breach of the peace, the charge preferred against him by Miss Rose Smith, a comely saleswoman.

There was a big laugh when the complaint was read charging Faith with having made "loud and unusual noises and having used unseemly, profane, obscene and offensive language."

"I'll fine you $10 and bind you over to keep the peace," said the court.

Faith paid the $10, but said he was at a loss to know just how a deaf man could emphasize the peacefulness which nature had bestowed upon him. His lawyer suggested that he wear a muff or have his fingers amputated.

BODIES MAY BE EXHUMED

Case of Nurse Leonard to Be Presented Before Grand Jury

Boston, March 1.—The question of exhuming the bodies of patients attended by Miss Amelia M. Leonard was considered yesterday by those investigating the amazing mystery of the young nurse now detained under $10,000 bail in jail on a charge of larceny.

Facts attending the deaths of at least three of Nurse Leonard's patients, from whom she is alleged to have stolen thousands of dollars' worth of jewelry and other property, have been called to the attention of District Attorney Pelletier, who would not discuss the case, beyond stating that the Leonard case would be placed before the grand jury next week.

REMINGTON SENTENCED

Murderer Who Repudiated His Confession Gets Twelve Years

Boston, March 1.—William H. Remington was sentenced to serve from twelve to fifteen eyars in the state prison for the murder of Max Sorokien in Boston.

Remington, who is 28 years old, was found guilty of manslaughter. One week after the death of Sorokien, Remington, then an inmate at the state hospital in Tewksbury, confessed to the crime. Afterwards at his trial he repudiated the confession.

Minister Gets a Divorce

Cambridge, Mass., March 1.—Rev. William W. Downs of Malden, familiarly called "Parson" Downs, was granted a divorce from his young wife, whom he accused of a statutory offense.

REPUBLICANS NAME MERRIAM

Bloodshed and Riots Mark Holding of First Direct Primaries—Democratic Worker Acting as Special Deputy Sheriff Shoots and Kills a Man—Reports of Wholesale Vote Frauds In One Ward of the City

Chicago, March 1.—The latest returns from Chicago's first direct primaries for mayoralty candidates indicate former Mayor Harrison's nomination for mayor by the Democrats over Graham and Dunne. The Republicans nominated Charles E. Merriam, professor of political economy at the University of Chicago.

One killing and several less serious disturbances, including a stabbing, marked the primaries. Many persons were injured in conflicts in various parts of the city.

Arthur Quinn, son of James A. Quinn, former city sealer and a well known politician, shot and killed Richard Clark, after the latter had shot Quinn in the foot. The shooting was the climax of an election row.

Quinn is a Democratic worker and is a supporter of Harrison. He was acting as a special deputy sheriff when the trouble started. He fired three shots at his antagonist and the latter died while being taken to a hospital.

Words passed betweeen the two and Clark is said to have drawn a pistol, shooting Quinn in the foot. The former ran, pursued by an election inspector. Meanwhile, Policeman Loftus is said to have seized the fugitive and to have been holding him when Quinn hobbled up.

Some claim that Quinn shot Clark while the latter was helpless in the hands of the policeman, while others declared the shooting justifiable.

Reports of wholesale vote frauds came from the Eighteenth ward, and an election inspector ordered election clerks in the ward to remove their candidates' badges and commanded various inspectors to cease challenging voters.

It is estimated that the cost of the primaries to the city and candidates will be $750,000. The campaign has been so bitter that those seeking the primary nomination for mayor had all demanded watchers at the polls. The expense of this item alone will be $80,000

MONIS FOR PREMIER

Considered Peculiarly Fitted to Reorganize French Ministry

Paris, March 1.—There is practically no doubt that Antoine E. E. Monis will be M. Briand's sucessor as premier. Before deciding to accept the responsibility Monis informed the president that he would consult with his friends, and the result of this consultation makes it almost certain that he will accept the difficult task.

M. Monis is regarded in political circles as peculiarly fitted to organize successfully a workable ministry. He is acceptable to all sections of the Republican majority, while assured also of the support of the radical Socialist section, whose defection was the principal cause of Briand's resignation.

BRUTAL TO THE INSANE

Commission Says Keeper at Matteawan Should Be Discharged

Albany, March 1.—The state commission of lunacy has filed with Governor Dix a preliminary report of its investigation into charges of alleged cruelties practised on inmates at Matteawan state hospital for the insane.

Sufficient evidence was found by the commission to convince them, they say, of the truth of the charges that Attendent William McDonald was harsh in his treatment of inmates and they have recommended that McDonald be discharged. McDonald, it is stated, was not involved in the alleged brutality practised on John J. Nugent, the patient who died in the

COURT SCORES VERDICT

Miss French Awarded $10,000 In Her Breach of Promise Suit

New York, March 1.—Miss Henrietta French, the South Dakota girl who sued David H. Decker, Jr., a civil engineer of this city, for breach of promise of marriage, was awarded a verdict of $10,000 by a jury in the supreme court.

Justice Erlanger reserved decision on a motion to set the verdict aside, declaring it was "extremely excessive." "This is a sympathetic verdict," he said, "and there is no justification for it."

NEARLY 400 MISSING

Finnish Fishermen and Their Families Perish on Ice Floes

St. Petersburg, March 1.—According to the official report of the fishing disaster in the Gulf of Finland 500 persons were engaged several miles off the shore of Lavensarf island when the ice beneath them broke from the shore and drifted away, carrying the fishermen with their families, horses and outfits far to sea.

Their cries for help were not heard at the time, but late in the evening the shore watchman observed the ice floe and ice breakers were sent in pursuit. A three days' search proved futile. In the meantime the floe broke into several parts, each bearing forty or fifty persons. In the breakup many fell into the water and perished. Two parties, totaling 120 persons, were subsequently driven ashore. No news of the remainder has been received.

7000-MILE RACE BEGUN

Big Stake For First Square Rigger to Reach Buenos Ayres

Boston, March 1.—Two "square-riggers," under full canvas, felt their way out of Boston bay and began a 7000-mile race to South America, a race that will be watched with interest, for such races have become rare in these days of steam.

They are two Norwegian barks, the Sofie and the Kylemore, both carrying heavy cargoes, and both having Buenos Ayres as their destination.

A small fortune is wagered on the outcome of the race, and whichever craft wins, the crew of the other will lose heavily, as bets of everything from the pay for the cruise to the last cherished trinket has been put up on both sides. The length of the voyage is estimated at two months at least.

SQUAW AND THREE CHILDREN CAUGHT

Official Report of Battle With Indians In Nevada

Washington, March 1.—Confirmation of the press despatches telling of a battle between the Nevada state police and twelve Shoshone Indians is received in a telegram to the bureau of Indian affairs. It came from George B. Haggett, superintendent of the Western Shoshone reservation.

The telegram asserts that the police, who had been following the Indians for some time, overtook the Red Men at a place named Gold Circle, and that one policeman and eight Indians were killed during the engagement. Four were taken prisoners. The Indians are supposed to have murdered and mutilated four stockmen about a month ago.

When Captain J. P. Donnelly of the state police and his force approached, the Indians started their regular war dance and then opened the fight. Four bucks, two squaws and two children were killed and one young squaw and three children were captured. Ed Hoffe, a member of Captain Donnelly's posse, was killed. None of the others was wounded.

CRAZED BY GRIEF

Woman Takes the Lives of Her Mother, Nephew and Herself

Philadelphia, March 1.—Miss Jennette Lewis, aged 27 years, murdered her mother, Mrs. Sarah Lewis, aged 57 years, and her nephew, Edward B. Midlen, Jr. aged 9 years, by administering cyanide of potassium and afterwards committed suicide by taking a dose of the deadly drug.

The tragedy occured at the home of Edward B. Midlen at Pelham, a suburb. Miss Lewis' sister, who was the wife of Midlen, died Monday night in a hospital in this city and it is believed that the young woman was crazed by grief over the death of her sister.

WILL BE EXTRADITED

Case of Absconder Is Taken Up by the State Department

Boston, March 1.—Governor Foss received a telegram late last night from Secretary of State Knox, stating that Robert E. Davie, the absconding broker, had been provisionally arrested in Rio Janeiro.

The action taken by the department of state was taken as a result of a communication between District Attorney Pelletier and Knox.

This action means that Davie will be held pending the sending of the papers to Washington. In any event it will mean that the extradition proceedings will proceed without a hitch.

Measure For Direct Election of Senators Is Knocked Out

FIFTY-FOUR TO THIRTY-THREE

Seven Less Votes Than the Two-Thirds Necessary—But One New England Senator In Favor of Change—Fight Will Be Renewed by Borah Within Three Weeks After Assembling of Sixty-Second Congress

Washington, March 1.—By a vote of 54 to 33, seven less than the necessary two-thirds, the senate refused to pass the Borah resolution for a constitutional amendment providing for the direct election of United States senators. Thirty-three Republicans and twenty-one Democrats voted for the resolution and twenty-three Republicans and ten Democrats against it.

The Democrats voting against the resolution were chiefly from the southern states and undoubtedly were influenced by the acceptance last week of the Sutherland amendment retaining federal control of elections. The New England senators, except Frye, who voted yes, and Aldrich, who was absent, voted solidly against the change.

In the next congress the seats of eight senators who voted against the popular elections will be filled by men who presumably would favor the plan, namely: Hale of Maine, Burrows of Michigan, Depew of New York, Dick of Ohio, Flint of California, Kean of New Jersey, Scott of West Virginia and Bulkeley of Connecticut.

The result of the vote clearly demonstrates why the progressives, while consenting to the vote, would have been glad to throw the issue over to the extra session. Borah states that he will renew the fight within three weeks after the assembling of the Sixty-second congress and that he expects victory.

Senator Gallinger first voted aye, but later said it was an inadvertence and asked to be recorded in the negative. The absentees were Senators Aldrich, Crawford, Frazier and Terrell. It was announced that had they been present Frazier would have voted aye, Terrell nay. There was no announcement about Aldrich. Crawford, entering after the rollcall was complete, said he had been delayed by a stalled street-car and would have voted aye.

The vote is taken to indicate that the progressive wing of the party is gradually gaining the upper hand in the senate even though the measure was lost.

GREY DEFENDS BRYCE

Ambassador's Part In Reciprocity Agreement Is Praised

London, March 1.—The Unionist attack upon the part with Ambassador Bryce had in the United States-Canadian reciprocity negotiations was renewed in the house of commons. Sir Edward Grey, the foreign secretary, gave Bryce's course the same unquivocal support which it received recently from Premier Asquith.

In the reciprocity proceedings at Washington the action of Bryce had been, he believed, beneficial both to Canada and the United Kingdom, because in communicating with the Canadian representatives and the American officials he had kept British interests in view.

FISHING SCHOONER SUNK

Skippers Blame One Another For Collision Off Thatcher's Island

Gloucester, Mass., March 1.—The schooner Sylvia M. Nunan of Kennebunk, Me., was run down and sunk by the schooner Grayling two miles off Thatcher's island, shortly before midnight. All of the crew of the Nunan reached the deck of the Grayling in safety, and were landed here.

Each skipper blames the other for the collision. It is believed that the vessels were holding their courses too long, and that the collision resulted because neither would give way.

KILLED BY WOOD ALCOHOL

Fate of Three Indians, One of Whom Was College Graduate

Omaha, March 1.—Three Shoshone Indians, one of them a recent graduate and football star at Carlisle, died at FortKashkie, on the Wind river reservation, from the effects of drinking wood alcohol, according to dispatches from Lander, Wyo.

The three are George Enos, his son, George, Jr., and a relative, Miss Susette Sorelle. The younger Enos was a well known athlete at Carlisle.

Temple to Have Hearing

Taunton, Mass., March 1.—Formal charges were preferred by the city council last night against City Treasurer Temple, who was recently removed from office following the discovery of an alleged discrepancy in the city accounts, but who was later reinstated pending a full investigation. The council voted to give Temple a hearing on March 11 on the charges.

HIGH HONOR FOR NEGRO

William H. Lewis Will Be Assistant to Wickersham

LEWIS IS NOMINATED

Negro to Be Assistant Attorney General of the United States

Boston, March 1.—A dispatch from Washington states that President Taft yesterday nominated William H. Lewis of Boston to be assistant attorney general of the United States.

It is understood that Lewis is the first negro ever appointed to the office of assistant attorney general of the United States. He was born in Berkeley, Va., now a part of Norfolk, about 45 years ago. He came to Massachusetts when about 16 years old.

TARIFF BOARD BILL NEXT IN THE SENATE

Vote on the Lorimer Matter Is to Be Taken Today

Washington, March 1.—The agreement of the senate reached last night to vote at 1:30 today upon the resolution to unseat Senator Lorimer of Illinois and to make "unfinished business" of the bill to create a permanent tariff board materially improved the legislative situation.

This improvement does not by any means wipe out the probability of an extra session of congress, but it gave a ray of hope which was seized upon eagerly by the advocates of Canadian reciprocity."

CLERK AND MONEY GONE

Bank Package Shy More Than $1000 When It Reaches Destination

Winchester, N. H., March 1.—Between $1015 and $1035 in cash disappeared from a package consigned by the Winchester National bank to the Boston clearing house, last Thursday evening, before the package reached its destination.

The news that there was a shortage of money became known yesterday afternoon when detectives began an investigation of the probable whereabouts of the missing money, and also sought to find Harold Eastman, a clerk at the bank, who has not been seen in this town since last Thursday night.

CROCKER-IRWIN NUPTIALS

Bride Receives Million Dollars From Father as Wedding Gift

San Francisco, March 1.—The wedding of Charles T. Crocker and Miss Helene Irwin was celebrated yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride, the service being conducted by Archbishop Riordan.

This marriage will unite two fortunes that will at least aggregate $20,000,000. The bride's father, William G. Irwin, presented her with $1,000,000 in bonds. Her mother gave her an automobile. The bridegroom's gift is a diamond necklace with emerald and pearl pendants.

Washington, March 1.—The general deficiency bill, the final appropriation measure before it, carrying $8,060,126, was passed by the house on a viva voco vote at midnight last night and the house adjourned.

THE LONGEST WATER CONDUIT

System For Los Angeles Will Be 240 Miles Long

GREAT BORE IS COMPLETED

Five-Mile Tunnel Pierces Crest of Sierra Madre Range Through Five Miles of Solid Granite—Work Finished a Year Ahead of Time and $411,800 Below Estimated Cost—Water Safe From Contamination

Los Angeles, Cal., March 1.—With world's records broken for low cost and rapidity of construction, the boring of the great five-mile Elizabeth tunnel, the most important feature of the new $26,000,000 municipal water project of Los Angeles, was completed yesterday. It pierces the crest of the Sierra Madre range, sixty-seven miles west of this city, and has been drilled through 26,780 feet of solid granite. Work began at both ends of the big bore on Oct. 5, 1907, and went on day and night. The work was finished a year ahead of time and $411,800 under the estimate.

Imperial Rome's longest aqueduct was fifty-seven miles; New York's Catskill aqueduct, ninety-one miles long, but the Los Angeles aqueduct in the San Fernando valley, now under construction, will be 240 miles long and involves engineering features having no parallel in history.

Two hundred and fifty miles to the north of Los Angeles, beyond the coast range of mountains and across the barren waste of Mojava desert is the Owens valley. Los Angeles is going there for its water supply. The valley lies in a narrow and deep cleft in the earth, with towering mountain ranges on either side.

Much of the valley and all of this part of the Sierra range lies within the Sierra forest reserve which, with the city's land purchases of more than 120 square miles, guards the city in perpetuity against any contamination of the water supply. Composed of melting snows and glacial ice, the streams of the region are of great purity.

The Los Angeles aqueduct was promoted by the need for greater water supply for the rapidly increasing population of the City of the Angels. It was found possible to develop electric power early in the construction of the system by utilizing falls in the route, thus getting a quick financial return, to somewhat offset expenses.

It is estimated that the completed system will irrigate more than 100,000 acres of land, making possible within a radius of twenty-five miles of Los Angeles a population of 500,000 people. The man in charge of the work is William Mullholland, superintendent of the Los Angeles water department.

The Elizabeth tunnel is through five miles of solid granite, and is fourteen feet wide and eleven feet high. With three drill crews working at each end the estimated possible progress was twenty feet a day. Power for the work was obtained from a power plant erected at the cost of $250,000. During the work the men were given bonus money for work in excess of a certain number of feet of boring estimated possible in a day.

More than 2000 men are toiling in the desert for the completion of the enormous project for which the inhabitants of Los Angeles taxed themselves $88 a head by overwhelming vote. Climatic conditions under which the water system is being constructed are terribly severe, many miles of the country through which the work is progressing being without either food or water. Five large reservoirs are included in the system, with an aggregate capacity of 376,256,000,000 gallons.

Along some of the line where conditions make it possible the workmen have established their families with schools for the children and teachers imported from the city to minister to their educational needs during the four years they are in the desert.

Of the 226 miles of conduit 22 miles will be an open unlined ditch through clay, mainly in the Owens river valley; 20 miles will be a covered ditch, lined with cement or rubble; 139 miles will be a covered conduit of cement, 18 miles will be tunnel through rock, 10 miles tunnel through earth, 9 miles of steel siphons crossing canons and 2 miles of steel flumes crossing depressions. Eventually the conduit will be covered throughout its entire length, but at first that is not necessary or desirable.

It will be the longest conduit supplying a city with water in the world, and with one exception the longest for any purpose. That exception is the Coolgardie system in West Australia, where water for mining purposes is sent through a thirty-inch pipe and is lifted over a mountain range 1447 feet by pumping stations along the line.

The Owens river watershed is absolutely inaccessible, and as the city will control the valley, it is guaranteed a supply of pure mountain water. The city's present source of supply is the San Fernando valley.

SOME WAYS OF HELPING.

The Associated Charities stands for an effort to bring needy families into the right relation with the community in which they live. With all the opportunities for moral, physical and social betterment with which Boston is endowed, the bewildered and discouraged poor still need a personal friend to guide them, and the busy and bewildered rich need some one whose judgment and knowledge of conditions they can trust to help them, when they would help their less fortunate neighbors. The following example will serve to show some of the many ways in which the Associated Charities tries to bring about a friendly and mutually helpful relation. It is a hypothetical story, but quite typical.

Mrs. Saunders, whom you have called in to do a day's cleaning in a domestic crisis, pauses in her dealings with your brasses to ask you timidly, but with evident sincerity, if you can spare one or two pairs of the children's old shoes for the family living in the tenement over hers, who are, judged even by the moderate standards of the Saunders family, in direst need. With a deep-drawn sigh she tells of the father out of work, the mother ailing, a young baby, a child with "spells," and two other children who cannot go to school for lack of proper clothing.

When the story is finished you feel that a large responsibility has been dropped into the busiest morning of your life, and that you don't quite know what to do with it. You remember some one has begged you not to give, indiscriminately and blindly, a pair of shoes or a dollar, without finding out what real need may be, and you recall that you were told that the Associated Charities would help in just such an emergency as this. You call up the Society and give them the name and address of family, and receive an assurance that Miss B., the District Secretary will call upon the family within a few hours and report to you.

If you could look into the Connors' poor kitchen that afternoon you would see Miss B. having sympathetic talk with Mrs. Connor, who, her first reserve melted by the evidently sincere interest of her visitor, is confiding all the story to her; of her husband's loss of work through drink (not much drink, but too much for a motorman); of the rent now eight weeks overdue, and of her dread of tonight when the children will have to go supperless to bed. Her aged mother is lying on a bed in the adjoining room, too feeble to sit near the stove, where the last of a bag of coal is making fictitous cheer. She is helpless and a great care to the already overburdened wife. Charlie, sixteen, is earning $3.00 a week as errand boy for a grocer near by; Susan, in her last year of school, is inclined to be wild; Jennie is a good little girl who minds the baby and helps her mother in several ways after school; while Mary, four years old, is very "bad" with epilepsy.

Mrs. Connor says her husband is not a bad man, but she sometimes thinks "he could look for work a little harder than he does." Her own health is much broken by family cares, lack of sufficient food, and extra work in the form of washing which she has taken to eke out the family income during her husband's idleness. Miss B. leaves the home with the promise of a little food to be sent at once and more tomorrow if Mr. Connor will come and work for it. She has before her the problem of helping this family to live and be clothed, without teaching the man the dangerous lesson so easily learned, that other people will provide for his family if he does not.

The next morning you receive a report with a suggestion of what she hopes to do for them, and lo; she asks you to continue your interest, and to give Mr. Connor some wood to chop, or other temporary job to pay for the fuel and groceries which must be given while references are being looked up and an effort made to find more permanent work for Mr. Connor. This you do, and valuable time is gained for following the clues that Miss B. has tactfully gleaned in that first interview. Your own slender bond with the family is strengthened and made more personal, and you are touched with real sympathy for the, unsuccessful man, when you see and talk with him, and find that some good is mixed with his weakness and ignorance. You feel that you would like to keep in touch with the family, and, since you are too busy to do this yourself, Miss B. suggests that you persuade a young friend just out of college, whose time is not so full as yours, to offer herself as visitor to the Connors.

Next you learn that a former employer of Mr. Connor has been found who is still interested enough to give him a trial as teamster, and that the priest has been asked to call and to se his influence to keep the man sober and at work, with at least present success. The priest has also aided the friendly visitor in persuading Mrs. Connor to let her epileptic child go to the hospital for such children where she will be, if not cured, at least given the best chance to improve. The Dispensary doctor, whom the District Secretary has asked to call, advised a month's rest for the monther, and she has been placed, with the baby, in a boarding place in the country, while her aged mother has gone into the Home of the Little Sisters of the Poor. When Mrs. Connor returns it is hoped that her strength will be equal to the care of the remainder of her household. During her absence Susan and Jennie, with some help and oversight from Mrs. Saunders, who is a real friend and neighbor, will keep the house for their father and Charlie. Your young friend who has accepted the post of friendly visitor has become deeply interested and visits them often during this crisis, to see that the girls do not have too much to do and to instill a sense of responsibility in Susan, as head of the household. This proves to have a steadying effect upon Susan, who really "bears her part."

Eventually the visitor places Jennie, who has ability, in the trade school; and, finding on further acquaintance that Charlie is a really promising boy, she secures a loan for him which enables him to take an evening course in the automobile school, while still earning his $3.00 a week as errand boy. All this she does with the cooperation and advice of the Secretary and the weekly Conference, so that the experience of older workers and the suggestions of several minds are brought to bear upon the problems which might have proved too difficult for her alone.

The subsequent history of the family probably will not show that all their troubles are over and that they have entered into an Elysium of plenty and industry. Mr. Connor proves always an intermittent worker, and his wife has often to work beyond her strength, but at least they have been helped over their worst crisis and several doors have been opened to larger opportunities and more intelligent living. Their several responsibilities, toward their own lives and each other, have been kept before them, and you may reasonably hope that some of the influences which, by telephoning to the Associated Charities on that busy morning, you focused upon this nearly "submerged" family, will bear fruit in a cleaner, stronger and more intelligent younger generation, with who can tell how far-reaching an effect in the more distant future.—Associated Charities of Boston.

WASINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Feb. 24, 1911.

Less than a week of the session remains and Congress will doubtless crowd as much legislation as possible in the final Saturday, and probably move the hands of the clock backward in order to secure a few minutes more time. The President will be busy on March 4th, affixing his signature to the delayed bills. Congress is working frantically in order to finish things before twelve o'clock March 4th. Men, legislators, statesmen, making laws for the greatest nation of the world, fritter the early days of the session most frivolously and then do hurry scurry work in final fleeting minutes. So it has been, so it is, so it will be.

Whether there will be an extra session called immediately after March the 4th depends entirely upon the action of Congress on the reciprocity agreement which the President has made with the Canadian government. Much of the time of Congress has already been taken up listening to the selfish plaints of isolated interests—interests that have so long been favored that they imagine themselves the people and the nation. They are active and loud and like a scant brigade marching around a hill, by their activity and noise make an impression upon a one-sided onlooker of the whole army. They have their representatives in both houses of Congress, too, though some of them will not stay much longer. Bellwether Aldrich is at a southern resort having, as he says, the time of his life, and Bellwether Hale of Maine has just seven days more, but he is playing his role of obstructionist and will play it till the curtain falls. There will be no encores as far as he is concerned. After he is out of the Senate his inability to learn or forget will hinder progress no more.

Much precious time has been wasted this session on the Lorimer case, and that portion of the Senate gallery occupied the past week by impressionable ladies was a scene of fashion and of tears when Senator Lorimer pleaded his case for four hours and rehearsed his career from bootblack to the Senate and explained how his success in politics and his election to the Senate was to be ascribed to popularity won by his kindness to Jew and Gentile alikek. Incidentally he disclosed what kind of a statesman he is by saying that Senator Aldrich was his bellwether and that he always voted the way he did. It has long been known by the wise that in the Senate little Rhode Island swung some of the larger states, but a confession direct from Illinois may be edifying to stalwart doubters.

The Japanese war scare will not down. Representative Hobson parades it in the House and says there will be war with that country in ten months or long before the completion of the Panama Canal. It seems that our treaty with that country of 1894 is about to expire and that the President has submitted to the Senate the text of a new treaty with Japan. Protests from California against this treaty are coming in. It appears that the exclusion clause preventing the importation of Japanese coolies or laborers is omitted from the new treaty. The situation is ugly, no matter what viewpoint one may have. San Francisco, the nerve-centre of the Pacific slope, is the most intensely union-labor bestridden city in the hemisphere, if not in the world. Two years ago it came near disrupting our peaceful relations with Japan by the exclusion of Japanese children from the schools. Now, after securing from Congress its approval of San Francisco for the International Exposition, it is foremost in alienating Japan on whom in great part the success of the Exposition will depend.

The chief signal officer of the army, General Allen, is disposed to make prompt use of the twenty-five thousand dollars appropriated in the amry bill for the purchase of flying machines. This country has been behind European countries in the adoption of aeroplanes for military purposes. France is the leader in the art, and now has a fleet of more than thirty fliers manned by thoroughly trained aviators. It has appropriated one hundred million francs for improvements in military aviation. As many as seven types of aeroplanes are used in the French equipment. Besides there are hundreds of aeroplanes owned by private individuals and should the time come for military operations, the French army would be strengthened by the skilled owners of these private flying-machines.

A largely attended barn dance was held at Brown's bungalow, Houghs Neck, Tuesday evening.

The Memorial hall committee of the several Patriotic orders meets this evening at the home of C. P. Gould, 87 Adams street.

It is rumored that the Commission plan is to raise the railroad track from Wollaston to Braintree. A six foot raise is proposed at School street.

At the regular meeting of Paul J. Revere, W. R. C., held Tuesday evening a large number were present. Mrs. Jennie E. Holton of Edwards street was the winner of a linen centrepiece.

A large touring car, whose owner could not be learned, took fire from leaking gasoline on Watson hill, Quincy avenue, Braintree, Tuesday afternoon and was burned all but the frame.

BIGELOW CLUB DANCE.

The fifth annual dance of the Bigelow baseball club was held in Quincy Music hall Tuesday evening with the largest attendance on record. The floor was crowded at the opening dance, and up to the time of the fourth dance, couples were arriving. The order of dances included the usual number of waltzes, two steps and schottisches, a Virginia reel, galop, duchess, a pan American and two moonlight waltzes. There were sixteen regular and four extra dances.

Music was furnished by Kutz's orchestra of five pieces. The corps of young men in charge of the dance were: Edmund J. Sanders, floor director; Edward Sweeney, assistant floor director; Edward Kiernan, chief of aids. The aids were: Williams Avery, Charles Costello, George Gavin, Warren Blanchard, Raymond Coyle, James Kelley, Francis Mahoney. Dance committee—Joseph Moran, Russell Oliver, Joseph Pinel, James Muir, John Pinel, Steward Sheriff, Joseph Sweeney.

NOT ALL AS SUCCESSFUL

As Quincy in Securing Agreement in Granite Industry

Some other granite centers were not as successful in reaching agreements on bill of prices as Quincy. The Globe says:

More than 2,500 workers in quarries and stone yards in New England held long and animated sessions Tuesday and Tuesday night with representatives of the manufacturers and in the union lodge halls in an endeavor to secure a settlement of their demands for better working conditions to govern their labor for the next five years.

While the men employed at Rockport, Mass., and Bethel, Vt., were not able to arrive at a satisfactory settlement and may not be found at the gates when the whistle blows March 1, the existing three-year agreement as to wages and conditions having terminated no official sanction of any strike was intimated beyond the announcement that less than 100 paving cutters at Milford would refuse to go to work Wednesday. The men demand a flat increase of 50 cents a day.

The granite cutters at Milford, N. H., numbering about 200, compromised with the manufacturers at midnight, after a session of both parties which had continued six hours, the cutters to receive an increase of 15 cents a day, a Saturday half-holiday during June, July and August for two years and all the year round for the three following years. A protest against the machine "hand surface," which it was claimed was injurious to health, was met by a promise of the manufacturers to instal a new style machine.

The stonecutters and allied organizations put in claims for an increase in wages averaging about 25 cents a day, with a Saturday half-holiday the year round, the half-holiday now being allowed forthree to six months in the year. There was also a demand for time and a half for overtime work.

The principal disagreement at Bethel and Rockport was over the Saturday half-holiday.

The officials of the labor organizations advised the men to remain out until their demands were satisfactorily adjusted and the agreements for the next term of five years were consummated.

CHILD SCALDED.

A painful accident occurred this morning to little Camelia Amara, six year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guiseppe Amara of Water street. The mother was pouring boiling water from the tea kettle when the child ran up to her and joggled her arm. She received the stream of water on the back and was terribly scalded. When Dr. Reardon arrived orders were given to have her taken to the City Hospital at once. Owing to the extreme youth of the child there is hope of recovery without disfigurement.

COMING EVENTS.

Under this heading The Ledger will print single line notices of future happenings of interest to Quincy people. Secretaries of clubs, societies and other organizations are requested to forward to The Ledger notices of their meetings, entertainments, etc.

If a report of the entertainment is desired send to this office tickets for the use of the reporters which will guarantee a full and accurate account in The Ledger the next day.

HIS OLD SWEETHEART

And "My Turn Next" Given at St. John's Hall

The last entertainment and dance in aid of the St. John's bazaar was held Tuesday evening at St. John's hall under the auspices of the district two committee composed of Rev. Neil P. Brennan, Councilman Edward P. Histen, Miss Mary E. Lyons and Miss Anna W. Walsh.

The program of the evening was a most interesting one. It opened with a reverie given by the young ladies of the Quincy Catholic club entitled 'His Old Sweethearts." This is the same entertainment given by members of the club at one of their recent socials at Colonial hall and the cast was the same, except in one or two instances. One of these was that the bachelor for Tuesday evening was Lawrence W. Lyons, the genial clerk of the District court. Being naturally a bachelor he took his part in a manner that brought forth rounds of applause. In fact the young ladies all took their parts well.

Mary, the bride was impersonated by Mrs. George B. Gavin who wore her wedding gown, and made a beautiful picture. The complete cast was as follows:

Bettie	Bessie Mahoney
Kate	Mary G. Heaney
Blanche	Lulu T. Crowley
Elizabeth	Julia J. Ford
Mildred	Nellie Coughlin
Clara	Julia B. Roche
Jeannette	Josephine T. Collagan
Helen	Josephine McGarthy
Tegia	Helen H. Gavin
Mary	Mrs. George B. Gavin
Bachelor	Lawrence W. Lyons

The den of the bachelor was attractively decorated and the whole presentation was exceptionally well carried out.

Following this came the presentation of a farce entitled "My turn next," which was produced under the direction of Erastus Osgood, and was the same as presented at the recent reunion of the Sacred Heart parish. This was also equally well received and caused no end of laughter. The cast was as follows:

Taraxicum Twitters	John A. Duggan
Tim Bolus	John McGowan
Tom Trap	James Costello
Farmer Wheatear	Peter Colligan
Lydia (Twitter's Wife)	Bertha McDonough
Cicely (Her Niece)	Agnes Dolan
Peggy	Alice Golden

The evening closed with dancing, which came to an end at midnight. The attendance was unusually large the hall being taxed to its full capacity.

WEST QUINCY SOCIAL.

A very pleasant and profitable evening was spent at the Hall Place M. E. church Tuesday evening when Miss Lillian Whitman gave an interesting entertainment, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the church. The program consisted of monologues and pianologues "My Gasoline Automobile" the last was a lively discourse on the foibles of the automobile "crank." It left the audience in a jolly mood and the topical song with which it closed lent a charm and variety to the program. For refined humor and trained musical skill, it could not be surpassed. Miss Whitman was fine throughout the entire program and kept her audience amused the entire evening. During the intermission ice cream and cake were served by the refreshment committee which was composed of Mrs. Bent, president of the Ladies Aid, Mrs. George Hawes vice president and Mrs. Wm. McCormick, past president.

Quincy, Mar. 1, 1911 Mar. 1-3t.

SCARLET FEVER EPIDEMIC

But Rumors Have Been Very Much Exaggerated

Greatly exaggerated rumors regarding the status of the scarlet fever epidemic have been spread broadcast throughout the city, and the number of cases has been placed anywhere between 25 and 50 in West Quincy. As a matter of fact there are not more than 25 cases in the whole city. Fifteen cases were reported in West Quincy up to this morning. Of these but one case is that of a pupil in the Willard school. There are cases in the homes of six other pupils but not of the pupils themselves. The school physician made a thorough examination of the condition of all the pupils in the school and not one new case or even suspicious case was found.

The alarm among parents is needless and pupils may be sent to school in absolute safety. The source of the disease has been found, and it is not in any school.

The cases in Wollaston and West Quincy were from one and the same cause, and now that it has been found and steps have been taken to prevent the spread of the disease there is not cause of further alarm.

There is one case in the Gridley Bryant school, one in the Willard and not more than four new ones in Wollaston.

The reason for the disease was ignorance on the part of one mother. She took her child, who had a light attack of scarlet fever, to the Day Nursery. The other mothers whose children were left there carried germs on their clothing to the places in which they worked. As a number of them were employed in Wollaston the outcropping of the disease was first apparent there. In West Quincy, its spread was not discovered until some time after the Wollaston epidemic. As soon as it was discovered by the Board of Health, immediate action was taken and comparatively few new cases have been reported that were not the direct result of the original exposure at the Day Nursery. Now that the process of prevention is well under way, the public may feel secure since the tide of disease has been stemmed and precautionary measures have been taken in all parts of the city.

FREE CANAL IN FAVOR

Resolve Reported in Legislature for a Commission

Largely through the efforts of the Quincy Board of Trade and Quincy men the Committee on Harbors and Public Lands of the Legislature reported in the Senate on Tuesday as follows:

A resolve on the recommendation of Gov. Foss that the "governor, with the consent of the council, shall appoint a commission of seven persons within 30 days after the passage of this act one of whom he shall designate as chairman, to consider how best the commonwealth may cooperate with the federal government in the consrtuction of a ship canal free and open to the commerce of the world and without tolls or charge for the passage of freight thereon across the state, as now being surveyed by engineers of the U. S. war department under the river and harbor act of 1909—the same being the intercoastal waterway between Boston and the Rio Grande, Texas, in harmony with the plans advocated by the Atlantic deep waterway association.

"To consider how best the commonwealth may cooperate with other states, more especially Rhode Island, in the development of these island waterways.

"To consider the value of such a canal to the state and its interests in the development of institutions, the reduction of the cost of handling raw material and manufactured products or otherwise and the benefit to transportation generally along the Atlantic coast.

'The commissioners shall serve without pay and shall report to the general court their findings on or before May 1, 1911."

The Daily Ledger would suggest Frank Fessenden Crane of Quincy as chairman of the commission.

GRAND DANCE BY ITALIANS

The First of the Musical Social Club in Alpha Hall

The first grand dance of the Italian Musical Social club was held in Alpha hall Tuesday evening. A good crowd came out to enjoy dancing to Wilson's orchestra, and to witness or take part in the prize waltz. Dancing was started at 8 o'clock and was continued until 12. The order of dances included sixteen dances with the usual number of two steps, waltzes and schottisches, two duchesses, a waltz german and the prize waltz which was number fifteen. Seven couples were entered in the competition, and after the first round three couples were eliminated. After long consideration on the part of the judges the prizes were awarded as follows: First—Francis Sweeney and partner; second—Primo Cappaferri and partner.

Those who had charge of arangements were: Orlando Pace, floor director; Louis Marcatonio assistant floor director; Arnaldo de Nicola, chief of aids; Louis Mazzola, Munzio Farella and C. Giglio, aids.

RECITAL.

A most enjoyable evening is looked forward to by musical and society people of Quincy when on March 16th a recital is to be given in Colonial hall by Miss Florence Gertrude Olney, pianist and Mrs. Edith Cary Page, soprano. These two artists need no introduction in Quincy. A high class and especially attractive program has been arranged. It

QUICKLY ARRESTED.

Antoni Giovannangill of Intervale street went on the war path late Tuesday night and after filling up with the liquor that stimulates, shouldered his gun and started forth to celebrate. By that time the hour had reached 11.30, and most of the people in that vicinity had retired for the night. Their peaceful slumber were rudely disturbed however by several shots fired in rapid succession and visions of another Restelli flashed through the minds of many. Officer Dinneen was onto his job, however, and it was not many minutes before he had carroled Antoni and had rung for the patrol and sent him to the police station to cool off In court he was fined $20 for his nights celebration and was given time to raise the money

THE SKY MAN'S TALE.

Down in the sky sailors' boardin' house a tar comes in one day.
His face were white from hunger's blight when he turned his phiz our way,
And he says, "If you'll give me a glass of grog I'll tell you my doleful tale—
How I was marooned and starved till I swooned on a cloud where the airships sail."

So we give him two drams with such good effect that he says, "That just suits me,"
And his trousers he yanks and mumbles thanks and reaches for number three,
And he says: "I was mate of the Wilbur First, of which I was mortal proud,
When a mutiny rose, and with grub and clothes I was cast on a floatin' cloud.

"Now, it's fun when you're cast on a desert isle and have oysters and goats to eat,
But takin' a plunge in a big black sponge would soon have R. Crusoe beat.
So I nearly starved 'fore I finally flagged a passin' acroplane.
But the chill and the wet sets me shiverin' yet, so I'll order that drink again."

Paris to Be More Beautiful.

Paris, already conceded to be one of the most beautiful cities in the world, recently has borrowed $200,000,000, with which immense sum it proposes to put on some more architectural and scenic frills. Half of the sum will be devoted to the upkeep of municipal buildings, for new buildings, for parks and promenades. That single interesting unit in the scheme is an "X" bridge over the Seine, one drive connecting the Rue de Rennes with the Rue de Louvre and the other connecting the wharf of the Louvre with the wharf Conti. A single river pier will serve as the bridge support.

$1,000,000 BUILDING FOR LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS.

Brotherhood Erects Skyscraper In Cleveland as Business Proposition.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has recently completed an unusual enterprise in Cleveland. It is a thirteen story office building costing about $1,000,000, erected wholly as an investment rather than as a national headquarters. Every member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has an equal interest. It is claimed to be the only building erected on this plan by a labor organization in the world.

The erection of such a building was authorized by action of the delegates at the Columbus convention in June, 1908, on a resolution introduced by John H. Welsh of Atlanta, Ga., and Z. B. Mansfield of Shawnee, Okla. The new building was completed about on schedule time. All the work was done by union labor, and each contractor having to do any part of the work was required to insure all workmen against accident. The building was erected without a single assessment on the membership, all needed money being on hand.

This monument to organized labor occupies a site in the main business section of Cleveland, but a half block from the public square and close to the new courthouse, the postoffice and the city hall. It stands upon a corner and occupies 178 feet on one street and 124 feet on another. The exterior finish of the first story is of granite and the remaining twelve stories of white terra cotta. The interior is in mahogany and white Italian marble. The walls are in tints, the doors and window trimmings bronze.

Much the greater part of the building is given up to office rooms, the ground floor, however, having an auditorium with a seating capacity of 1,400. Aside from this auditorium the floor space comprises 161,000 square feet. In all there are 400 offices.

R. R. Plan Not In Favor

BOARD OF TRADE HOT OVER IT

Unanimous in Turning Down Proposed Plan in Vicinity of Water Street

Also Ask the City Council to Protest

RESOLVED—"That this plan is not satisfactory to the Quincy Board of Trade, and that a committee of three, including the president, be appointed to see the Commission and protest against it, and that this committee requests the City Council to protest against the present plans as shown here tonight."

This was the action taken by the Quincy Board of Trade at a largely attended meeting on Wednesday evening, over fifty representative citizens being present. President E. R. Stone was in the chair and Frank F. Prescott was secretary pro tem.

The most important business of the evening was an exhibition of the "Railroad plans" for the abolition of the Water street grade. These plans, City Solicitor McAnarney explained, had been submitted by the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. to the special commission and seem to meet their approvial. They have not, however, been approved. Mr. McAnarney requested permission to submit them to the trade organizations of Quincy, which accounted for their appearance. Without expressing his opinion as City Solicitor or a citizen, he explained the plans that were shown on large blue prints on the wall. He also enlarged on the engineers' description which is printed in full in this issue. He desired to obtain the opinion of the meeting be it favorable or unfavorable to the plans.

Many questions were asked by members present. To G. B. Bates he said, elevation of the tracks at Water street would not permit the depression of the tracks at Saville street as proposed in the Bate's plan, but might possibly allow depression under the City plan. But at this time we should consider Water street as requested by the commission. It was only by their courtesy that the plans were here.

Mr. McAnarney gave a legal opinion that no one could claim indirect damages because of relocation of streets, dead ends, etc., unless the grade in front of their estates was raised or lowered.

G. B. Bates opposed the Railroad plans as presented, and A. L. Whitman and J. Q. A. Field asked questions.

F. F. Crane offered the resolve above quoted.

Ex-Senator Sprague thought all streets should be considered together in a comprehensive plan, in which Councilman Richards agreed.

Mr. McAnarney said there was no alternative tonight but to pass on these plans.

Councilman Branch inquired if we should do more than approve or disapprove. Should we tell why?

Mr. McAnarney—Not necessarily.

Mr. Crane favored his resolve. It was enough for him to know that the Granite Manufacturers Association had acted unanimously against the plans.

Mr. Branch opposed the plan. Thought the best plan had not yet been presented.

W. H. Teasdale also opposed.

City Solicitor McAnarney then expressed himself emphatically on the Railroad plans. He said their adoption would be an outrage on the pubblic; yes a crime. He had told the commission so, and he also told them that the trade organizations of Quincy would have similar views. He was glad the Board of Trade had put itself on record in remonstrance.

A. L. Whitman said there was but one way to abolish the Quincy grade crossings and that was by depression of tracks. Applause.

Refreshments were then served.

Later in the evening the Board of Trade extended a vote of thanks to City Solicitor McAnarney and City Engineer Sargent for bringing the plans before the Board of Trade.

BOSTON BOULEVARD.

The resolutions offered at the last meeting by Frank F. Prescott favoring a relocation of the proposed Old Colony boulevard from the South Station Boston, to Quincy and the South Shore was next in order. It proposes a route entirely on the water side of the railroad from Boston to City Square, Quincy.

Councilman Richards favored.

SERVICE OF SONG

Pleasing Program by Choir of Water Street Church

"Driven from home" was the title of a service of song given by the choir of the First Presbyterian church, Water street, on Wednesday evening before a large and appreciative audience, and they were well repaid, for the service was excellently rendered and received many words of praise from those present, who heartily congratulated the soloists and choir upon their efforts.

The service was given in the church under the direction of the choir leader, Archie Parson, and the solos and choruses were beautifully rendered, showing that the choir is second to none in the city.

The reader of the evening was Arthur Tremayne, and much credit is due him for the clear and understanding way in which he read, as it enabled the audience to follow the thread of the story without difficulty.

Miss Minnie Miller sang sweetly the solo parts, as did also William Warmington, the favorite tenor soloist. Besides the organ accompaniment there were several other musical instruments, all of which harmonized well with the voices. Mrs. Daniel Ross presided at the organ. The service was for the benefit of the choir fund, and a goodly sum was realized.

ASSAULT AT SHIPYARD.

James Barr, a blacksmith helper at the Fore River shipyard, was arrested Wednesday afternoon for assault on James Keller, who received a bad beating. It is alleged that the two men had some words in the shop in the afternoon, and that Keller at the time had a bar of iron in his hand that was nearly red hot. Barr thought so he says, that Keller was going to assault him with the hot iron, and ke went for Keller and gave him a terrible beating about the head, so much so that the services of a physician were required to dress his wounds. When he appeared in court his head was so bandaged up that he could hardly see.

Francis W. Bird, the "Sage of Walpole," once went to see Dr. S. G. Howe, and found him with his feet swathed in flannels and extended on a chair. "Howe, what is the matter?" he asked.

"I have got the gout," said Howe.

"You have got the gout—such a temperance man as you!"

"Yes, Bird, my ancestors drank wine, and I have to foot the bills!"

MOTHER GOOSE CARNIVAL

All the Famous Characters Visit Norfolk Downs

An audience that filled the church to the doors witnessed the "Mother Goose Carnival" performed by the Women's Missionary society at the Park and Downs church on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. The cantata, consisting of song and verse opens with the appearance of Mother Goose on the stage, who sings the old familiar nursery songs.

The escort then brings on Old King Cole and his fiddlers three, after which a crowd of motley characters representing all the loved characters of Mother Goose land troupe on the stage. "Polly brings the kettle on and they all take tea." Then in a game resembling London Bridge each character tells in verse the part she represents.

The whole affair was a huge success on both evenings, and was under the direction of an entertainment committee consisting of Mrs. B. A. Banks, Mrs. Frank C. Knowlton, Mrs. George Smith and Mrs. Reginald Shaw.

Following the cantata the cast circulated through the audience with wares for sale, which added materially to the financial success of the occasion.

Preceding the entertainment pleasing solos were rendered on the violin by Miss Steffens, and on the piano by Miss Ermine Baker.

Mrs. Herbert Hanscom presided at the piano.

Composing the cast were the following:

Mother Goose,
Mrs. James A. Macdonald
Polly, Mrs. Reginald Shaw

TAKE VIEW OF BRIDGES

Committee of the Legislature Also Visit Quincy Shipyard

The Committee on Harbors and Bridges of the Legislature before whom bills are pending relative to the Weymouth Fore River and Weymouth Back river bridges, are in town today looking at the two structures. The committee accompanied by Representatives Thomas and Langelier arrived in Quincy shortly after 11 o'clock, coming by automobiles. A stop was made at City Hall where Mayor Shea was taken aboard. They then proceeded to Quincy Point to view the Fore river bridge, for which there is a bill pending to repair as well as to widen the draw.

From there they went to the Back river bridge, which the government has ordered rebuilt, for which the towns have asked assistance from the State.

Returning the party went to the Fore River shipyard and made a hurried inspection of the work under construction at the yard, particularly the Argentine battleship, which is one of the reasons advanced why the draw of the Fore river bridge should be widened, to enable the dreadnaught to pass through. The committee was entertained informally at lunch by the Fore River Shipbuilding Co.

A FEW POLISHERS OUT.

There was some little trouble in one the polishing mills at South Quincy on Wednesday, and as a result part of the men walked out. Under the new bill of prices which went into effect Wednesday all of the polishers were to receive an increase of 25 cents per day. In the case of this firm it is claimed that those who were receiving the minimum wage received the increase, but that when it came to the high price men the boss informed them that they were to receive an increase of but fifteen cents per day.

Not being satisfied with this they left work claiming that under the new bill the increase of 25 cents per day was to be paid to all emploees whether they were minimum men or high price men. None but the high price men quit work as the others were receiving the full amount of the increase. It is understood that he matter has been adjusted and that the men will return to work today.

WHAT RAILROAD PLAN PROPOSES

A Tunnel Under Railroad Near Quincy Adams Freight Depot and Heavy Street Grades

Dead Ends for Water Street on Both Sides of Railroad

A description of the "Railroad" plans for abolishing the Water street crossing is described below by the engineers. It needs only this explanation:

'First new way" is from tunnel under railroad to Pearl street on the east, and into Water street on the west.

"Second new way" is from tunnel to Water street on the east.

"Third new way" is from First new way on a curve into Liberty street.

"Fourth new way" is from First new way into the freight yard where crane is located.

The engineer's description in full:

By the plan as now presented by the Railroad for the elimination of the grade crossing at Water street, it is proposed to elevate the railroad tracks about 5 feet, and to construct a new way 60 feet in width passing under the railroad tracks at a point about 300 feet southerly from the present Water street crossing.

The way marked "Second New Way" connects Water street on the easterly side of the railroad tracks

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Charles F. Murphy favors the direct election of United States Senators by Tammany.

The peace of mind of many Democrats appears to require a daily assurance that W. J. Bryan is out of politics.

We are not prepared to say that the Baltimore celebration accomplished very much, but it greatly increased the consumption of licker and vittels.

LENTEN SERVICES.

Commencing last night at 7.30, special services will be held every Wednesday and Friday evenings in all Catholic churches of the city. Wednesday there was the distribution of the blessed ashes followed by the benediction of the blessed sacrament. On Wednesday evenings, throughout Lent, there will be the service of the rosary and sermon and benediction of the blessed sacrament. On Friday evenings there will be the service of the stations of the cross followed by the benediction of the blessed sacrament.

UPHELD BY SUPREME COURT.

A case of interest to expressmen holding permits for the transportation of liquor was decided by the Supreme court Tuesday, when the court affirmed the finding of Judge Avery, in imposing a fine of $50 on Joseph Fostello of Quincy for violating the express law.

Fostello was arrested April 14, 1910, for the illegal transportation of liquor. He was driving a team on which there were liquors when he was overhauled by an officer. The book containing the entries of liquor packages was on another team and Fostello was brought into court and fined. The case was appealed, and taken to the Supreme court, on the ground that as the book was on the main team it covered the law. The Supreme court, however, upheld the lower court.

BRIEFS

Not much fault can be found with the March weather thus far.

What will the Merchants do to the "Railroad plan" for Water street?

The first degree will be exemplified by Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, tonight at its meeting in Greenleaf hall.

James R. Oxner, carpenter, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. His liabilities amount to $13,753 and assets $11,230.

Miss Mary Gahan of 117 Standish avenue, who has been confined to her home by an attack of the grip, is able to be about again.

Quincy friends will be grieved to learn of the death at Diamond ranch, Monument, Oregon on Feb. 21 of Eleanor T., wife of Tom A. Jones formerly of Wollaston. Mr. Jones is a brother of Mrs. L. B. George of Wollaston.

The weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club was held Wednesday evening, eight table being in play. The high scores were lower than some of the tops that have been made during the past winter. The winners of the tournament were Henry F. Tilden and Mark L. Reed, Jr. The former secured 77 percent, and the latter 66 per cent. Ice cream and cake were served after the play.

Bumpus camp, Army of the Philippines held a meeting in Boston Tuesday evening. Judge E. C. Bumpus of Presidents hill, father of the late Lieutenant Bumpus for whom the camp was named, was unable to be present but sent in his letter of regret. During the evening pictures of the original Camp Bumpus at Leyte on the Philippines were shown by corporal George M. McDonald of the 82rd company.

RAILROAD PLAN

with the proposed First New Way—replacing a portion of Presidents Avenue which will be discontinued.

The way marked "Third New Way" connects Liberty street on the westerly side of the railroad tracks with the proposed First New Way.

The Fourth New Way connects the Crane yard with the First New Way and serves as an approach to the proposed station on the westerly side of the railroad tracks.

Pleasant Street is extended to connect with the Fourth New Way.

STREET GRADES.

The grades of the First New Way are as follows: On the westerly side of the railroad the grade descends towards the railroad tracks at the rate of 3 percent for a distance of 443 feet, thence runs level under the proposed railroad bridge for a distance of 93 feet.

On the easterly side of the railroad tracks the grade ascends at a rate of 2.13 percent towards Franklin street a distance of 513 feet.

The grade of the Second New Way ascends from the First New Way going toward Water Street at a rate of 5 percent for a distance of 165 feet, thence descends slightly to Water street.

The Third New Way ascends from the First New Way at a grade of 2.03 percent a distance of 160 feet to Liberty Street.

The Fourth New Way runs level from its intersection with the First New Way to the centre of Pleasant Street as extended, thence ascends at a 3 percent grade a distance of 285.5 feet, thence continues level for a distance of about 51 feet and thence descends at a grade of 2.44 percent a distance of about 100 feet to the Crane yard.

Pleasant street is extended to meet the Fourth New Way at a 7 percent grade.

The grade of Presidents avenue ascends from the First New Way at a grade of 5 percent for a distance of about 190 feet.

The grade of Federal avenue ascends at the same rate of 5 percent for a distance of about 186 feet.

SCHOOL STREET

Elevating the railroad tracks 5 feet at the point of the proposed crossing at Water Street will necessitate the raising of the railroad tracks from a point about 850 feet north of the present School street bridge to a point at same distance south of the proposed crossing at Water street.

This will necessitate an elevation of the railroad tracks under the present School street bridge of about 3.5 feet, which increase in elevation (together with the fact that an 18 foot clearance will be required at the School Street Bridge) will necessitate the elevation of the School street bridge about 9.5 feet above its present elevation.

The proposed grades for School street at the approaches to the railroad bridge will be as follows: on the easterly side the approach from Franklin street will be at the rate of 5.04 percent for a distance of 259 feet.

The approach on the westerly side will be at a rate of 5.23 percent for a distance of 222 feet.

The grade of Marsh street will be raised to 5 percent for a distance of about 60 feet.

DRAINAGE.

The surface water which will drain on to the street under the railroad bridge will be provided for by a proposed 18 inch pipe drain extending along the railroad location from Town brook to the proposed First New Way.

PROTESTS AGAINST BOXING.

The physical culturists seem to have run up against the ethical culturists in Quincy. The communication which appeared in Tuesday's Daily Ledger relative to a proposed boxing match had the result of waking up certain influential citizens who are opposed to that form of sport, and telephone wires were busy Wednesday conveying information and protests to and fro. The match is scheduled for this evening. Those in charge are determined to go ahead with it, and those opposed are equally determined that it shall not take place. There are interesting legal questions, as well as ethical ones, involved. The outcome will determine for a long time whether such contests shall be permitted in the City of Presidents. Whatever the outcome, it is proved once more that the most effective way of attracting attention to a moral issue is through the local press.

TAXES ARE WELL PAID

Water Receipts Not Increasing As Fast as They Should

Again in February there was a good collection of taxes, the figures for 1911 showing a marked improvement over the two preceding years. City Auditor Fairbanks reports collections as follows:

1911 to March 1,	$94,492.14
1910 to March 1,	59,128.91
1909 to March 1,	55,819.61

On the other hand the water receipts do not show as large an increase as they should. Possibly the introduction of meters is reducing the revenue of the city, for a large number of new services have been added the past year. The figures are:

1911 to March 1,	$42,977.57
1910 to March 1,	41,692.77
1909 to March 1,	37,259.69

Sewer assessments to the amount of $2984.29 were paid to March 1, compared with $3,080.93 in 1910 and $2,282.43 in 1909.

Bills for house connections with the sewer netted $928.76, compared with $1,191.16 and $1,224.37.

GALAHAD SOCIAL.

The Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church held a very enjoyable social in the parish house Tuesday evening with an attendance of about 50 couples. The room was handsomely decorated with flags and bunting and presented a pretty picture to the spectator as he peered in the door. Before the dancing began the following brief but excellent musical program was rendered by friends of the Brotherhood. A cornet duet by Miss Elizabeth Furnald and Mr. Newcomb, With Mrs. H. P. Furnald as accompanist. Reading by Miss Daisy F. Burnell. Piano duet by Miss Elsie Turner and Miss Clara Bragdon.

The music for dancing was furnished by Smith's orchestra, and the music was so good and everyone was having such a good time, that it was nearly midnight before the guests departed for their homes. During the intermission refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served by members of the Brotherhood.

The committee in charge of the social included: Thomas E. Keast, Harvey Smith and Harry Nicholson. The floor director was Roy Prout. The entertainment committee of the club consists of the following: Allen Walker, Gibbs McDonald, William Warmington, John Spargo and Frank Wrigley. This committee has general supervision over all the entertainments. A big dance is planned by them for sometime in the latter part of April to take place in Alpha hall.

A TRIP TO EUROPE.

Members and friends to the number of about 200 attended the open meeting and ladies night held in Wollaston hall on Tuesday evening under auspices of the Men's club of St. Chrysostoms parish. An illustrated lecture entitled "A trip to Europe and return" was delivered by James A. Burns of the Cunard line. Mr. Burns displayed upwards of 125 views of great beauty and clearness that showed besides the Cunarders, and their history from the beginning up to the present time, views of famous places abroad. The lecture closed with the exhibition of patriotic slides and the singing of the National anthem. After the lecture dancing was informally enjoyed.

SATISFACTION ALL ROUND.

A meeting of the Granite Manufacturers association was held Tuesday evening at which time the new bills with the cutters, polishers and tool sharpeners were explained in detail. There was a general feeling of satisfaction that the differences had been peacefully adjusted and the committees after being extended a vote of thanks were discharged.

A mass meeting of the three branches of the Granite employees was held Tuesday evening at St. Mary's hall, at which time the new bills of the cutters, polishers and tool sharpeners were read for the information of men who were told to report for work as usual Wednesday.

DEAR TO ALUMNI HEARTS.

Scene of Historic Table Scarring and Athletic Celebrations—Where Carrie Nation Downed Demon Rum, but Unconsciously Posed In Flashlight of Bacchanalian Orgy.

Mory's, one of the most famous college taverns in the country, known to Yale men everywhere, is to close its doors on Sept. 1.

No place in New Haven outside of the university itself has been more closely associated with the life of Yale than Mory's. There the boy from prep school got his first impression of the godlike sophomore. In freshman year one looked forward to the next year's privilege of being able to go dine at Mory's; in sophomore year you proudly took your subfreshman friend for supper there—chop with peas and a toby of ale for the guest, scrambled eggs and sausages and a toby of ale for the host.

For it was that chop that formed the immediate secondary function of Mory's. Mory's is primarily a bar—the Temple Bar. Secondarily, it is a house of chops—of Southdown chops invariably and inseparately accompanied by sausages and baked potatoes and occasionally by peas.

When Table Scarring Began.

The third material element of Mory's is the table. When the original proprietor in a careless moment allowed some egotistic youth to prove the folly of a name by inscribing his initials on the top of the polished table he wrought far better than he knew, for the precedent took root, as precedents will in a tradition worshiping community, with the result that every successive owner of decorative initials tried carving them deep in that brown surface.

On the walls now hang the original tables—icons for the disciple of Mory's. Though he can never equal the handicraft of his forbears, he can at least emulate them and try to make the tables of the present worthy to hang on other walls as lesser divinities for future generations.

Mory's stands at the corner of Temple and Center streets, one block from the green. Annually, the night before college opens, it is in full glory. Trepidating freshmen, shivering at the thought of the "rush" to come, are taken there under the wing of patronizing upper class men to have their bodies nourished and their nerves steadied before torchlight procession, wrestling matches and a night of bolted doors and vengeful sophomores.

The night before the Harvard game Mory's is crammed to the utmost capacity of its three small rooms. Here the tavern appears in a new capacity—the center for the entertainment of out of town guests. The secrecy of Yale societies prevents that welcome for which Harvard clubs are famous. Mory's virtually shares with the University club, Huebleins' and the Hofbrau House responsibility for offering such hospitality.

From time immemorial the Hogans have been intimately associated with Mory's. Some time in the dim past the proprietor decided to get students to make out his bills for him that he might the more wholly devote himself to the purveying of potations. By the promise of a monthly feast he tempted a half dozen undergraduates to come down for this purpose. Thus originated the "Hogans," an election to which club is passed down from year to year to men of the class below. Qualifications for membership are good fellowship, good voice and good digestion. One Sunday in every four the Hogans devote to the virtuous task of auditing accounts, feasting on choicest viands and concocting such harmony as would make jealous the glee club quartet.

Carrie Nation's Visit.

A few years ago Carrie Nation carried a crusade into the very heart of New Haven and of course laid siege to this stronghold of the enemy. Diplomacy and strategy combined to relieve the fortress and baffle even the heroine of Medicine Lodge. Instead of risking a pitched battle the students sent out a white flag and sued for peace before a drop of beer had been shed. Mrs. Nation dictated as terms of peace the signing of the pledge and the discarding of cigarettes. The students accepted the terms with meekness. They said they had long thought drinking was bad for them, but had not had the courage of their convictions to give it up. Cigarettes, too, now that they really stopped to consider the matter, they realized were the invention of the devil. The treaty of peace was signed.

In commemoration of this happy event the students insisted that Mrs. Nation be photographed with them. She acquiesced. A dozen of them escorted her to the photographer's, where it was explained that a good group picture must be made by flashlight. In the semidarkness the group was posed, Mrs. Nation in the center. The flashlight went off, and the picture was taken.

When the prints appeared next day Mrs. Nation was disclosed presiding over a bacchanalian orgy. Students waved beer bottles in the air, and all were obviously smoking cigarettes.

EVENING WITH MOZART.

A musical treat of great interest was enjoyed by those who were present at Livermore hall on Tuesday, where an evening with Mozart was given by the pupils of the Quincy Mansion Mansion school.

The program was taken up with a biography of this great composer of the German school, and an interpretation of his compositions together with a vocal solo by Mrs. Bertha Cushing Child.

Opening the evening was a piano duet, the overture to the "Marriage of Figaro" excellently rendered by Miss Briggs and Miss Woodward. A paper on "The life of Mozart" was entertainingly read by Miss Scharff and was followed by this pleasing program:

Piano solo, Rondo in D major
Miss White.
Piano duet,
Aria from the "Marriage of Figaro"
Miss Hallowell, Miss Pullman.
Piano solo,
Menuet Favori (Arranged by Bendel)
Miss Arnold.
Vocal solo, Slumber Song
Miss Pullman.
Piano solo,
First Movement from Sonate I
Miss Kerlin
Piano duet,
Serenade from "Don Giovani"
Miss Arnold, Miss Briggs.
Piano solo, The First Pieces
Miss Mary Child.
Two pianos,
Rondo in D major (Arranged by Maas)
Miss Parsons, Miss Hallowell.
Piano solo, Andante from Sonate VII
Miss E. Robinson.
Vocal solo,
Silently Blending" from the "Marriage of Figaro"
Miss Bertha Scharff.
Piano solo, Rondo a la Turca
Miss Parsons.
Vocal solo, The Violet
Mrs. Bertha Cushing Child
Piano solo, Fantasie in D minor
Miss Bopp.
Two pianos,
Minuet from the E. Flat Symphony
Miss Kerr, Miss Pike.

"REAL BOSTON."

A series of conferences on "Real Boston" is announced by the B. Y. M. C. Union for the four Sunday afternoons in March. President Frank L. Locke will preside, and the different phases of the subject will be considered on the different dates by prominent men, each an expert in his particular department. The meetings are to be open to the public and after the addresses there will be opportunity for questions. Topics and speakers are as follows:

March 5, historical and geographical, illustrated, Arthur A. Shurtleff, landscape architect, advising Metropolitan Improvement Commissions.

March 12, civic and political, C. Neal Barney, ex-Mayor of Lynn.

March 26, social and educational, Robert A. Woods, director of the South End House.

The speakers announced and this method of treating the subject assures an attractive presentation of a timely topic. The course promises to be one of unusual interest.

—Electricity is being taught in Chcago grammar schools.

ELKS NOMINATIONS.

Nominations of officers to be elected in March were made at the meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks Tuesday evening. There are practically no contests the officers moving up. The officers nominated were:

Loyal Knight—Phillip H. Sullivan.
Lecturing Knights—John D. Smith and Edward L. Larkin.
Tyler—Edward D. Larkin.
Secretary—Leo J. McMaster.
Treasurer—Rednor P. Coombs.
Trustee for three years—James F. Burke.

The auditing committee who have been examining the books reported on the financial standing of the lodge. After the business session the degree was worked.

Danderine
Grows Hair and we can
PROVE IT!
The Great DANDERINE Never Fails to Produce the Desired Results.

IT enlivens and invigorates the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, resulting in a continuous and increasing growth of the hair.

Letters of praise are continually coming in from nearly all parts of the country stating that Danderine has renewed the growth of hair in cases that were considered absolutely hopeless.
A lady from Brooklyn writes: "After a short trial my hair stopped falling, and I now have a lovely head of hair, very heavy and over one and a quarter yards long."

Danderine stimulates the scalp, makes it healthy and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp invigorator known. It is a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a small bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

Now on sale at every drug and toilet store in the land; 3 sizes 25c, 50c and $1.00

Cut This Out
Free To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage.

QUINCY, THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1911

Sirolin Prevents Consumption

This Famous Preparation Keeps The System in Tone

Consumption is caused by carelessness.
It is caused by the tubercle bacillus—or consumption germ—attacking the lungs when they are weakened by the effects of a cold, or when the general vitality is lowered.
Sirolin prevents consumption because—
It promptly dispels the most severe cold without leaving the lungs in a weakened condition.
It tones up the entire system, develops the appetite, and acts as an invigorating tonic. It is different from the ordinary preparation for coughs and colds.
Sirolin has no depressing action; it contains no narcotics or other harmful ingredients.
It is the most successful remedy for influenza, bronchitis, colds, coughs, grippe, and other pulmonary affections in the whole field of medicine.

Relieves Whooping Cough
Sirolin is widely used, and with great success, to relieve whooping cough. It soothes the irritation, and checks the malady to such an extent that it runs its course with a minimum of discomfort to the child.

Sirolin Is Not A Patent Nostrum
Its principal ingredient is a palatable derivative of guaiacol, the active principle of creosote—in use by medical men the world over in the treatment of grippe, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis, and all organic and functional derangements of the throat and air-passages. It is a physician's remedy, commended by leading doctors.
Sirolin is a clear, syrup-like liquid, pleasant to the taste.
If your druggist has not yet got Sirolin, send $1.00 for a full-sized bottle. Send for our interesting Sirolin booklet.
Sirolin contains no morphine, codeine, habit-forming or constipating drug.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

The scarlet fever situation in the schools of the city is as follows: Adams—two cases; Atherton Hough—none; Coddington—one; Cranch—none Gridley Bryant—two; John Hancock—three; Lincoln—one; Massachusetts Field—two; Quincy—three; Washington—none; Willard—one; Wollaston—three; St. John's school—none; Woodward—three; High school—two. Total number of cases in all the schools of the city, twenty three. In the Wollaston school there are no new cases, that is since Feb. 23. In the Quincy school, Atlantic, the three pupils who have the disease are convalescent. In the Lincoln, John Hancock, Willard, Gridley Bryant, Coddington, Woodward and High school the cases are at least two days old. The yellow journal reports concerning the big epidemic are thus seen to be groundless. Only 15 cases are in need of medical treatment at the present time, and these are so widely distributed that there is little cause for alarm. All the schools have been fumigated daily and every precaution has been taken to put an end to the existence of the disease. At the Lincoln and John Hancock schools a number of children who had colds were sent home as a precautionary measure, but none of them had any symptoms of scarlet fever. For the same reason several pupils were sent home from other schools, and children spread the alarm concerning the big number of cases.

QUINCY HIGH.

The school concert which is to be given Saturday evening in High school hall should be one of the best ever heard in Quincy. The soloists and reader are eminent in their profession and their contributions will be sure to please the audience however critical. The chorus of 150 pupils who will support the soloists have been well trained by Miss Perkins and although the cantata is quite a difficult one there can be no doubt of its being well rendered. The girls' sextet and the double male quartet will assist in the cantata and will give selections by themselves. The reader, Mrs. Elvie Burnett Willard, is considered the best in the country, especially in child imitation. Miss Rosetta Key, soprano soloist, Edward E. Bullock, tenor, and Bertel A. Willard, bass, all have excellent reputations as vocalists which they never fail to live up to.

Miss Eleanor Whittemore, '12, is now singing with the girls' sextet.

Roy Sidelinger '10 has recovered from his illness and will return to school on Monday.

• • •

The following High school pupils are taking part in the Y. M. C. A. boys' campaign: Alex Robertson, H. Trask, H. Sutermeister, R. Estey, D. Gearwar, W. Safford, H. Cantley, F. Roache, J. Jenkins, S. Prout, G. Daniels.

"Busty" Arthur returned to school Monday after a long absence on account of pneumonia. "Busty" is looking as well as ever now and his reception on Monday was nothing if not cordial.

• • •

R. J. B. Cranshaw, Jr., '11, was out Wednesday with a light attack of the grip.

At the dual indoor meet between Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. and Quincy Y. M. C. A. at Hyde Park Wednesday evening. H. Trask '12 got second place in the potato race.

• • •

Mr. Adams, principal of Newton High school, visited the school on Wednesday.

The next game for Quincy will be the most important of the season. Oliver Ames is one of the teams Quincy will have to defeat to lay claim to the state championship. The game in the local gymnasium has been the subject of much controversy. The game was awarded to Oliver Ames by the Boston papers with the score 19 to 18. In the opinion of many, the game was a tie 19 to 19. If Quincy defeats Oliver Ames at North Easton and then defeats Revere High she can claim the championship of Eastern Massachusetts. In order to get the state championship, Westfield High must be defeated.

The discussion relative to the basketball championship of Quincy is all folly. The Y. M. C. A. claims the championship. If the High school team feels confident it can defeat the would-be champions; let it issue a challenge and arrange for a game or a series of three. Likewise if there is any uncertainty about the relay championship have it settled by deeds and not by words.

The Y. P. R. U. minstrels to be given at the Unitarian chapel Friday evening will be of interest to High school pupils. The circle will be made up of almost altogether of graduates and undergraduates of the school. Paul Blackmur is president of the organization and William Edwards is treasurer.

The Samoset club minstrels which were given in Alpha hall Monday evening were given by a group of recent high school graduates. Among them were: William W. Nichols, Brandt Lupton, James Claflin, William Murphy, J. E. Gourlie, Max Pinkham, Harry Campbell, Robert Sibley, Eugene Saunders, J. E. Lewis, Carleton Lewis, Charles Sayward and Sidney Claflin.

The baseball fever will attack the school in a few weeks now and the athletes will doff their basketball suits and don baseball togs. The prospects for a winning team are bright this year. The schedule will be printed in a few weeks.

Captain Cranshaw of the track team is arranging dual meets with Lowell high school and Boston Latin to take place later in the spring.

GRADED SCHOOLS.

The parents of the Adams school pupils will meet in the school building Thursday evening, March 9, for the purpose of forming a Parents and Teachers association. Albert L. Barbour superintendent of schools, will be the speaker.

Several teachers from the Boston schools visited the Cranch school on Wednesday.

The attendance at the Wollaston school is improving slowly and is now back to normal.

The Parents and Teachers association of the Massachusetts Fields school will have a meeting this evening at 7.45. Mrs. Mary L. Wade will deliver a lecture on: "The diet for school children."

The lecture by Charles H. Johnson at the Coddington school last Friday evening was a source of much pleasure to all who attended. Many of the school children were in the audience.

The Parents and Teachers association of the Cranch school will meet in the school building, Wednesday evening, Mar. 8. Miss Mabel Adams, formerly of Quincy, and now a teacher in the Horace Mann school, Boston, will speak on "Correct English in the home."

A number of Boston school teachers visited the Adams school on Wednesday.

Miss Clara E. G. Thayer, 5th grade teacher at the Wollaston school, returned to school Wednesday after an absence of nearly a week on account of illness.

The boys of the Massachusetts Fields school are beginning baseball practice. The captain of the team will be elected next week.

A number of school children in Wollaston have seen robins and bluebirds on their way to and from school during the noon hour.

The candy sale at the Washington school last week netted over $20, practically the same amount realized a year ago. The sale was well patronized especially by graduates of the school.

A very successful candy sale was given in the Quincy school on Monday. A short play was given by a number of the girls of the school in connection with the sale.

• • •

Mrs. Cushman who was substituting for Miss Marden at the Washington school has returned to Boston.

• • •

Miss Cannon teacher at th e Washington school, who has been ill with typhoid fever is reported convalescent.

• • •

The Willard school basketball team defeated the Gridley Bryant team on Monday by a score of 20 to 7. Bonafini was the star of the game shooting 6 baskets from the floor. Captain O'Connor got three baskets from free tries. Bennett of the Gridley Bryant was the star of his team securing 3 goals from the floor.

The results of the basketball season for the Willard school is as follows:

Willard, 12; Cranch 4
Willard, 15; Pioneers 10
Willard, 18; West Streets 7
Willard, 6; Copeland Streets 15
Willard, 18; West Streets 13
Willard, 20; Gridley Bryant 7

A candy sale will be held in the Willard school Friday afternoon at 3.30. Parents and friends are invited to attend.

Robert Davis of the Coddington school took part in a play, Dr. Cure-All, at the Quincy Point church Wednesday evening.

WOODWARD INSTITUTE.

he Alumnae Association meeting held last Friday evening in the school building was a very enjoyable affair. A reception, a short business session followed by an entertainment, dancing and refreshments occupied the attention of those present from 8 until 10 o'clock.

Founder's Day on March 10 will be observed by the school in a manner similar to that of former years. Musical exercises followed by a play will be the program.

Mr. Adams, principal of Newton High school visited the Institute on Wednesday.

Miss Dorothy Foley of Willard street who is confined at the Boston City Hospital with scarlet fever, was remembered by the class of 1911 of the Woodward Institute with a beautiful bouquet of flowers.

ST. JOHN'S SCHOOL.

A very enjoyable operetta and musical program were given in St. John's hall Friday evening. The first part of the program consisted of vocal solos, recitations, instrumental solos and orchestral selections. An operetta "Grandpa's Birthday" comprised the second part of the entertainment.

The St. John's school is one of the few schools of the city which is free from scarlet fever.

SCHOOL NOTES.

There will be a meeting of the Master club this evening in the High school building. The subject for discussion is: Industrial education in the schools. A lunch will be served in connection with the meeting.

Out of Door Advertising.

"What Can Be Done to Eliminate Objectionable Out of Door Advertising?" was the principal topic discussed by the Associated Billposters and Distributers, who held their annual meeting in Chicago a short time ago. The chairman of the censors' committee said in his report: "Our aim is to eliminate everything objectionable from out of door advertising. We are in harmony with all the organizations which are working for this end. We have cooperated with the Woman's Christian Temperance union, the art leagues and the civic leagues of the different cities in which we work."

—If the Indians who are asking that moving picture makers be prohibited from representing the Indian in all sorts of mean and murderous projects are successful, they will have done a service to the public at large as well as to themselves. Those Indian pictures are not only detrimental to youthful minds, but they are fearfully tiresome and monotonous to adults who are unlucky enough to sit before them.—Revere Journal.

BOARD OF TRADE

Mr. Prescott said the Metropolitan Park Commission had reported in favor of such a buolevard, and that in January the "Big Four" commission reported to the Legislature in favor. They outlined a route on the water side as far as Pope's Hill station, but then went under the railroad, and intersected Ueponset avenue near the present highway bridge. Mr. Prescott proposes to continue on the water side from Pope's Hill to the river, and cross the river by a new bridge, and then join the present Quincy Shore reservation, and thereby reach Hancock street near the High school.

Thus Quincy and West Quincy would have new avenues to Boston. This Boulevard would connect with Valley street near Merrymount Park, and would furnish a short cut to Houghs Neck. Or via Valley street and Canal street to Washington street, and thence to Quincy Point and the South Shore without going over the congested streets of City Square.

At the outset it seems advisable for the new Boulevard to keep away from Neponset avenue at Neponset, which is paved and congested with street cars; and also avoid Hancock street on the Quincy side of the river.

A new bridge on the easterly side of the railroad would not be any more expensive than to rebuild the present Hancock street bridge to double its present width. Then the traffic through Neponset could not be controlled as it could over a bridge at the new location. This boulevard is to cost a million dollars, and Quincy will be heavily assessed, and it should be located where it will be some advantage to Quincy and the South Shore.

Councilman Branch thought there might be objections to the relocation. Probably the commission had good seasons for locating boulevard as they did. From the Quincy end it seemed good. Would be sorry to see action taken, however, if not informed.

Mr. McAnarney said the "Big Four" included the Railroad Commissioners, the Boston Rapid Transit commission, the Harbor and Land Commissioners and the Metropolitan Park board.

F. F. Crane thought that big interests would oppose any boulevard between the railroad and the water.

Mr. Prescott said the "Big Four" had already reported to the Legislature just such a route on the east of the railroad.

Councilman Richards favored an additional bridge somewhere, either east of the railroad or west of Hancock street.

A. L. Whitman considered the water front Quincys best asset, and opposed giving up any more to the Metropolitan Park Commissioners.

It was voted that a committee of five, to include the president, be appointed to attend the hearing at the State House when held to secure the best route possible for Quincy.

Voted to lay the resolution on the table.

OTHER BUSINESS.

A protest of the Boston Gear Works on the train service at Norfolk Downs was referred to the committee.

A communication from the Boston Chamber of Commerce announced a New England exposition for October 1911. W. H. Teasdale urged the Board of Trade and Quincy to become interested.

J. R. Richards reminded the Board of Trade that the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. had not kept agreement to provide better freight facilities for granite at Quincy Adams. Voted that the secretary enter a vigorous protest to the railroad officials.

Four gentlemen were elected to membership.

Voted that a committee of three be appointed on resolutions on death of John A. McDonnell.

Voted that a committee of five be appointed with full powers to meet the Retail Merchants Association, the Granite Manufacturers Association, Civic League and other organizations relative to amalgamation.

A resolve was offered by J. R. Richards, that it is the sense of the Board of Trade that such contests as proposed by the Quincy Rowing Association is not for the best interests of Quincy.

Adjourned at 10.20.

Cookery Notes

Panned Oysters.

For these savories use casseroles or cocottes a little deeper than those sold for shirring eggs. The squatty little brown ones with handles are ideal for this purpose. Butter them lightly and lay in each a round of toast cut to fit the bottom of the dish. This may be stamped out of bread with the cooky cutter or empty baking powder can, discarding the crusts and toasting the rounds. Moisten with a little oyster liquor, lay six or seven good sized oysters on the toast, sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper, dot with bits of butter; add if you like a tablespoonful of cream, though this is not an essential; set in an oven of steady heat and bake about ten minutes or until the oysters ruffle and crimp. Then serve at once in the pans in which they are cooked, setting them, of course, on a plate so as not to injure the table. Pass lemon with them and serve more toast as an accompaniment or thin slices of buttered brown bread.

Chocolate Layer Cake.

For a layer cake with a filling of chocolate cream mix half a cupful of butter with a cupful of sugar. After creaming add two beaten eggs and half a cupful of milk. Lift two teaspoonfuls of baking powder with one cupful and a half of flour and stir the moist ingredients into it. Let the mixture bake in two or three layers and when cold spread them with the following filling: Grate a quarter of a pound of chocolate. Melt it and add a quarter of a cupful of sugar and a teaspoonful of cornstarch. Measure out one cupful and a half of milk. Add a little to the mixture and put the rest over the stove to boil. When it boils add the mixture and continue to cook till it thickens, being careful to stir it constantly to prevent lumps from forming.

BRIEFS

W. F. Carman of Upland road has accepted a position with the Fore River Shipbuilding Co.

Mrs. A. G. Fletcher holds a whist party at her home on Garfield street this afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cleaves of Warren avenue are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son born Monday.

The two children of Mrs. Anna Frouland of 382 Granite street were removed to the hospital Tuesday with scarlet fever.

Clan McGregor has accepted an invitation to make Clan MacKenzie of Boston a fraternal visit Monday, Mar. 27.

Dr. R. McLellan has been elected physician of Clan McGregor, in place of Dr. H. P. Healey who has moved to Connecticut.

The bridge trustees held their monthly meeting in the office of Mayor Shea Wednesday. The Mayor was not present, however, being confined to his home by a severe cold.

The Committee on Bridges of the legislature will be in Quincy today and will visit the Fore River bridge for which a bill for repairing and widening the draw is pending.

Mrs. John Berry of Willard street passed away Tuesday morning, aged 80 years. She leaves three daughters, Mrs. Joseph W. Dennen, Mrs. James Ogle and Miss Annie Berry, also one son, George P. Berry.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Rose of Albany, New York, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son born Sunday, who will be christened Harry Washburn Rose. Mr. and Mrs. Rose moved from Warren avenue, Wollaston, to Albany last summer.

The Jolly Sixteen whist club held a theatre party Tuesday evening attending the Majestic theatre and shed many tears over Madame X. Some of the men who had not cried for years shed tears which ran down their cheeks as large as snowballs.

The prizes at the whist party of the Lady Associates at Houghs Neck this week were won by Mrs. Merriam, Mrs. Margenson and Mrs. O. G. Fosdick, Frank Rose, Walter Buchan and Mr. Merriam. The consolations went to Mrs. Walter Buchan and O. G. Fosdick.

Mrs. Mary Anderson was tendered a surprise party Tuesday evening at St. Paul's M. E. church by the ladies of the church, when she was presented with a purse of money by Pastor Rydstrom in behalf of the ladies. Refreshments were served and a pleasant evening enjoyed.

IS VINDICATED BY SENATORS

Majority In Favor of Lorimer Retaining His Seat

VOTE IS FORTY-SIX TO FORTY

Action on Resolution Declaring Illinois Man Not Legally Elected Is Taken After Many Weeks of Wrangling—Insurgents and "Lame Ducks" Rally to His Support—Cullom Votes For His Colleague

Washington, March 2.—The senate on rollcall decided that Senator Lorimer of Illinois was not illegally elected; the vote was 46 to 40 in his favor. Senator Crane of Massachusetts voted for Lorimer and Senator Lodge voted against him.

Senator Lorimer did not vote because of his interest in the case, and Senator Taliaferro was in his seat, but did not respond to his name. The vote of Senator Cullom, Lorimer's colleague from Illinois, was awaited with great interest. Both sides had claimed him. He voted for Lorimer.

Of the twelve senators from New England, Lodge of Massachusetts and Page of Vermont alone voted for the Beveridge resolution, Senator Aldrich being absent.

Inasmuch as the majority of the committee on privileges and elections did not accompany its report exonerating Lorimer with a resolution upon which a vote could be taken in the senate, the action yesterday was in connection with the Beveridge resolution. This resolution is as follows:

"Resolved, that William Lorimer was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the senate of the United States by the legislature of the state of Illinois."

The negative votes, therefore, were cast by those who favored the Illinois senator's retention of his seat.

The Republican insurgents to a man voted against Lorimer and were joined by Burton, Dixon, Jones, Lodge, Nelson, Page, Root, Smith, Sutherland, Warner and Young of the regulars.

Analysis of the vote shows, however, that Democratic votes were necessary to save the Illinois senator, and eleven Democrats came over, namely: Bailey, Bankhead, Fletcher, Foster, Johnston, Paynter, Simmons, Smith, Thornton, Tillman and Watson. Frazier, a member of the committee, would have voted against Lorimer had he been present.

The failure to unseat Lorimer is equally to be charged also to the Republican "lame ducks" of the senate, of whom no less than nine cast their votes in his favor. These were Hale, Scott, Flint, Piles, Kean, Dick, Depew, Carter and Bulkley. Of these only Hale, Flint and Piles are retiring voluntarily. The vote is so close and is of such a character that it constitutes only a semi-vindication of the Illinois senator, but it is final and not subject to appeal.

The scene when the vote was taken was one of the most intense but suppressed excitement. Not until Senator Wetmore, next to the last name on the list, had voted, was the forty-six pro-Lorimer total complete. The result had been expected, but everybody waited breathlessly for the announcement. It was received with applause from the galleries, but as usual this was quickly suppressed by the presiding officer.

"The resolution is lost," announced the vice president, and instantly the senate was in confusion, people leaving the galleries and the floor. It was some minutes before the senate could resume its proceedings.

RAPS THE KAISER

Proffesor Offends Army Officers at University of Wurzburg Dinner

Berlin, March 2.—There was an unpleasant incident at the dinner of the University of Wurzburg, in celebration of the ninetieth birthday of Prince Regent Luitpold of Bavaria.

Professor Regel had been selected to propose a toast to Emperor William and in doing so criticized the emperor severely, saying that he found it unpleasant to be required to toast a person with whom such fault could be found.

It was with difficulty that several generals and other officers of the army were prevented from abruptly retiring from the hall in protest.

COOK UNDER SUSPICION

Four Persons Dead and Three Seriously Ill From Poisoning

Helena, Ark., March 2.—Four children of William Ray, a timber man of Elaine, are dead, and his wife and two other children are in a hospital as a result of poisoning.

Whether the family was intentionally or accidentally infected by ptomaine has not been determined. Pending investigation, Will Crag, a negro cook, is detained.

New Mexico's Act Approved

Washington, March 2.—The house formally approved of the constitution of New Mexico, advancing that territory another step toward statehood.

PROTEST AGAINST LEWIS

Negro's Appointment Not Pleasing to Certain People In Washington

Washington, March 2.—The appointment of William H. Lewis, a negro of Boston, as assistant attorney general of the United States, has already brought down a storm of criticism on the head of President Taft from southern members of congress and social and official sets of the capital.

From members of official and social sets objections were raised at the first mention of Lewis' name. The bitterest protest, however, came from the Democrats in the senate and house.

Ordinarily the rank of an assistant attorney general gives him precedence socially over brigadier generals, captains of the navy, the district commissioners, the justices of the district courts, the director of the bureau of American republics, the secretary of the Smithsonian institution and numerous other officials.

LASHING FOR WIFE BEATER

Offender's Plea For Mercy Has No Effect Upon the Court

Baltimore, March 2.—The spectacle was witnessed in the criminal court here of a man, who had brutally beaten his wife, pleading for mercy with tears streaming down his face, when he heard the sentence of five lashes at the whipping post and imprisonment in jail.

But there was no mercy because the testimony showed that Frank McCauley struck his wife seven or eight times, choked her and then took from her more than $20. It was the second sentence of a wife beater to the post by Judge Duffy within a month.

SKYROCKET BANKER GUILTY OF LARCENY

Robin Throws Himself Upon Mercy of the Court

New York, March 2.—Joseph G. Robin, the fallen banker, abandoned his plea of insanity and pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with the larceny of $27,000 from the Washington Savings bank, of which he was formerly president. Seven indictments against him remain. He was remanded to the Tombs until March 27, when he will be sentenced.

Beginning as a Russian immigrant in this country, poverty-stricken, knowing neither the language nor the customs of the country, Robin pushed his way up to a height from which his fall caused a distinct tremor all through New York's tremendous financial structures. In only a few years, though starting out penniless, he was worth millions—and then came the crash.

Through his operations, the Washington Savings bank, the Northern bank of New York, the Carnegie Trust company and a string of minor concerns which he promoted, went into insolvency. No full statement of his larcenies has yet been made public by the state bank examiners.

PAPERS TO BE CHANGED

Broker Davie Now Charged With "Larceny by Embezzlement"

Boston, March 2.—The first actual step in the move to bring back Robert E. Davie, the Boston broker, charged with a $250,000 stock swindle, and now under arrest in Rio Janeiro, was taken by the police when Chief Inspector Watts ordered one of his inspectors to Washington to secure President Taft's signature to a new set of extradition papers.

The new papers will ask for the extradition of Davie on the charge that he committed "larceny by embezzlement." The first papers charged larceny. This is not an extraditable charge in this government's treaty with Brazil. Embezzlement is.

NORTON'S NEW POSITION

Taft's Secretary to Become Vice President of New York Bank

New York, March 2.—It is reported here that Charles D. Norton, whose resignation as secretary to President Taft has been announced, will become vice president of the First National bank of this city, succeeding Thomas W. Lamont, who withdrew the first of the year to enter the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co.

It is considered likely that, as Lamont's successor, Norton will enter also, in all probability, the long list of directorates for which the vice presidents of the First National are usually chosen.

Granite Workers Idle

Rockport, Mass., March 2.—More than 1000 men employed in the granite quarries around Rockport remained away from the quarries because most of the unions represented in the granite cutting industry have not, through their officers, signed the new wage agreement, the old agreement having expired Feb. 28.

TAFT HELPS TO CLEAR DECKS

Senate Is Relieved of Magazine Postage Proposition

GOES TO SPECIAL COMMISSION

Enemies of Reciprocity Trying to Arrange For Vote on McCall Bill If They Can Secure Pledges Enough to Kill It—"Frame Up" Would Not Deter President From Calling an Extra Session of Congress

Washington, March 2.—Another log was removed from the senatorial jam on the initiative of President Taft, when it was decided to eliminate the amendment to increase magazine postage from the postoffice appropriation bill and the delegation of magazine publishers who called upon the president assented to a proposition that the whole matter be referred to a special commission.

They did this willingly, believing that a rigid and impartial investigation would disclose that the low rate of postage on magazines is not responsible for the large postal deficit. This solution probably will be satisfactory to the committee, which, as a matter of fact, had already decided to withdraw the amendment, fearing that the appropriation bill would fail of passage if the administration insisted upon a right to keep it in.

The tariff board bill is now the unfinished business of the senate, in accordance with the arrangement made Tuesday evening, and will come up automatically at 1 o'clock every day until adjournment or it is acted on.

With the general strain eased a little by the agreement of Tuesday evening, reciprocity is now the chief subject of discussion at the Capitol. The enemies of the McCall bill have been trying hard to arrange for a vote on the bill if enough votes could be secured to kill it.

Senator Gronna of North Dakota, one of the most determined opponents of the bill, is quoted as saying that the votes have been found, but this statement is by no means accepted. One of the steering committee states that the situation depends somewhat on whether the Democrats want to avoid an extra session enough to change their general attitude and vote against the bill.

The more conservative opinion is that the bill will not be permitted to reach a vote under any circumstances. President Taft has intimated that if a vote were cast simply as the result of a "frame up," he would call the extra session just the same.

If this is so, nothing would be gained by the Gronna plan, while the Republican party would be blamed for again refusing to take a step toward reducting the duties on foodstuffs.

Of course, this issue cuts both ways, but the fact that a hostile senate dares not go on record against reciprocity and probably would vote for it under protest indicates how these statesmen sense the general current of public opinion.

THE CHINESE FAMINE

Missionary Reports Three Thousand Persons Dying Each Day

Shanghai, March 2.—A missionary, who has arrived here from the famine district, where he had been engaged in relief work, states that 3000 persons are dying daily and that 350,000 are wholly dependent on the foreign famine committee which was organized here.

In many places cattle, dogs and cats are being killed for food, and houses are pulled down by the occupants and the debris exchanged for anything that can be eaten.

There is urgent need of help pending the arrival of the American transport Buford, which is bringing supplies donated by the people of the United States.

OFFERS REWARD OF $1000

Railway Company Anxious to Get Men Who Shot and Robbed Conductor

Providence, March 2.—A reward of $1000 was offered by the Rhode Island company for the arrest and conviction of the three men who on Monday night robbed and shot Conductor Daniel P. Coyle in Cranston.

The Rhode Island company operates the street cars on which Coyle was working at the time. No clue to the identity or trace of the whereabouts of the highwaymen have been found. Coyle is recovering.

Paupers Inherit a Million

Leicester, Eng., March 2.—It is reported that two men living at Blaby, who are drawing a government old age pension of 5 shilings weekly on account of extreme poverty, have inherited $1,000,000, bequeathed them by a brother, Henry Bowns, of Salt Lake City.

Big Strike of Paper Box Makers

New York, March 2.—Fifteen hundred paper box makers employed by Jewish manufacturers struck for higher wages and were joined by the drivers of the various concerns. About 6000 workers are now out.

Be Proud Then why rest contented with thin, scraggly, rough hair? Ayer's Hair Vigor gives softness and richness to the hair, makes it thicker, heavier. Cannot change the color. Safe to use? Ask your own doctor. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

THE LACK OF MONEY

Given as Reason For Women Marrying Men They Do Not Love

Chicago, March 2.—Money, not the possession of it, but the lack of it, is responsible for the degradation of the millions of women who must marry men whom they do not love. Lack of economic independence has compelled woman to place this stigma upon their sex.

These were the conclusions of Professor Zueblin in a lecture on "The Family." He advanced a new reason for the existence of "the unwritten law." He said that it was due to the fact that a woman with "a million dollar personality" found herself dependent upon a "thousand dollar masculine income."

DOOM OF DREADNOUGHTS

Foreseen by Naval Achitect, Who Describes Future Battleships

London, March 2.—Westcott Abell, professor of naval architecutre at the University of Liverpool, predicts the amandonment of heavy plating above the waterline of warships and the eventual disappearance of the Dreadnought type.

The future battleship, he said, would be an oil driven, semi-submersible, protected by a thick horizontal deck and under water armor strong enough to resist torpedoes.

No Cholera on Caronia

New York, March 2.—The steamer Caronia, from Mediterranean ports, where cholera was recently prevalent and which was detained at quarantine because of a suspicious case of illness on board, was released. The result of the examination was negative.

—Eight miles of ornamental street lighting are now in service in the main streets at Minneapolis.

BURGLARS BAGGED BY BOSTON POLICE

Brothers With Bag of Jewelry Run Into Officers' Arms

Boston, March 2.—In the arrest of three young men for breaking and entering the building at 345A Washington street the police of station 2 believe they have caught members of the gang of burglars who have been breaking into stores in the same locality for several weeks past and stealing articles of every description.

Policeman Patton found the door of 345A Washington street unlocked, and with Officer Lindsay went into the building and up stairs. Two young men almost ran into the officers' arms as they entered the building. At the police station they gave the names of Harry C. Hunt, 20 years old, and Fred E. Hunt, 17 years old. They said they were brothers and that their folks lived in South Boston. The elder of the two carried a satchel full of articles taken from jewelry stores in the building. Each carried a loaded revolver.

A sergeant and half a dozen additional policemen were then sent back to seach for more burglars. With lanterns they made a complete tour of the building. The third burglar was captured early this morning among the machinery at the top of the elevator shaft.

Bold Robbery In Broad Daylight

New York, March 2.—In broad daylight yesterday afternoon robbers made a bold descent on a store in a thickly settled portion of Brooklyn, seized the proprietor, dragged him to the rear of the store and at the point of a pistol made him give up $400 in cash.

THE PERFECT WAY

Scores of Quincy Citizens Have Learned It.

If you suffer from backache.
The perfect way is to cure the kidneys.
A bad back means sick kidneys.
Neglect it, urinary troubles follow.
Are endorsed by Quincy people.

W. Charlesworth, 33 Cranch Street, Quincy, Mass., says. "About five years ago I began to suffer from kidney trouble. I had pains in my back which were very severe at times and cold or damp weather aggravated my suffering. I knew that my kidneys were at fault and used everything I could think of in an effort to obtain relief, but to no avail. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly advertised, I finally decided to give them a trial and procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. Before I had finished the contents of two boxes, the backache was a thing of the past and I felt better in every way. Doan's Kidney Pills have my highest endorsement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

A SHADOW OF ILLEGALITY

Rests Upon Some Loans Made by Cities and Towns

MANY ARE NEAR BANKRUPTCY

Wildcat Borrowings Revealed In Report of Chief of Massachusetts Bureau of Statistics, Who Says Legislature May Have to Rescue Some From Ruin—State Finance Commission Urged to Meet the Situation

Boston, March 2.—Charles F. Gettemy, chief of the Massachusetts bureau of statistics, reports to the senate that in fifteen cities and 156 towns examined by his department in response to an order of the senate, there is a total of $1,124,231.98 municipal indebtedness and no provision for meeting it.

Wholesale and indiscriminate borrowing from individuals, trust funds, cemetery funds, Gettemy reports, has plunged the cities and towns of the commonwealth into hopeless confusion from which the legislature will have to rescue them.

Chief Gettemy intimates that there is a shadow of illegality resting upon some of the loans made apparently in accordance with the law.

Borrowings amounting to nearly half a million are made from trust funds left for town improvements, but appropriated by the town for current expenses. Towns are paying 6 percent upon these misappropriated funds.

Several towns have asked for legislative permission to refund. In some cases, however, refunding must be gradual so as not to financially wreck the present taxpayers.

The inquiry of Gettemy resulting from a senate order of Frank Bennett adds another chapter to town wildcat finance. The proposition for a state finance commission is urged to meet the situation.

The ruling of ex-Attorney General Malone that towns which have borrowed in this way must regard such borrowings as narrowing their debt limit makes it impossible for them to borrow further without legislation.

(1) Loans from individuals or banks, obtained chiefly on demand notes $269,694.28
(2) Trust funds (other than cemetery funds) received by cities and towns, the principal of which has been used . 460,171.82
(3) Cemetery funds, for "perpetual care" of lots 394,365.88

Total $1,124,231.98

Of which sum $621,799.28 is the outstanding indebtedness of this character in cities and $502,432.70 in towns.

MILITIA PAY BILL PASSED

House Votes to Place Volunteers Upon Government Payrolls

Washington, March 2.—The house passed the militia pay bill, which places the officers and men of the state militia upon the government payrolls.

The bill provides that officers of the various state militias shall receive a graduated compensation of from 5 to 25 percent of the pay allowed an officer of similar rank in the regular army.

The allowance given to enlisted men will amount to about $48 a year each, the understanding being that they are to attend a required number of drills and that they will be available for two years' war service if needed.

DEADLOCK IS BROKEN

Man Opposed to Fitzgerald Is Temporary Mayor of Boston

Boston, March 2.—Walter L. Collins was elected chairman of the city council yesterday after a deadlock which has existed many weeks. This office makes Collins mayor of the city during the absence of Mayor Fitzgerald.

This result has a double political significance in that Collins owes his success to the chair of presiding officer in part to the active work of James Donovan, the Democratic supporter of James Storrow against the mayor, and in part to his own (Collins') opposition to the mayor.

Suicide on Tombstone

St. John, March 2.—Standing upon a tombstone in the old Loyalist burying ground here, Andrew S. Foster, until recently recently a resident of Springfield, Mass., shot himself through the heart with a revolver. Foster, who was about 60 years of age, is believed to have been deranged mentally.

Thief Gets Away With Tray of Gems

Akron, O., March 2.—A tray of of diamonds, estimated in value at $10,000, was stolen from E. B. Wingerter's jewelry store by a man who entered the front door while Wingerter was in the rear, seized the tray and escaped.

Washington, March 2.—Representative Henry S. Boutelle of Illinois was nominated by President Taft to be United States minister to Portugal.

NEW RECORD IN CITY PRIMARY EXPENSES

Final Figures In Chicago's Contest For Mayoralty

Chicago, March 2.—Charles E. Merriam, professor of political economy at the University of Chicago, a Republican, and former Mayor Carter H. Harrison, a Democrat, were chosen as candidates for mayor of Chicago at the primary election. The election will be held April 4.

The following is the final count of the 1324 precincts: Democrats—Harrison, 55,069; Graham, 38,541; Dunne, 53,513. Republicans—Merriam, 54,288; Scully, 1210; Thompson, 26,108; Murray, 2823; Smulski, 24,167.

A record was made in the amount of money spent in a primary in Chicago. It is shown that $696,500 was spent by the organizations of the various candidates for office and by the city to get out and care for the vote. This was approximately $3 for every vote cast at the primary.

QUITS CIVIC FEDERATION

Mitchell's Action Prompted by Vote of United Mine Workers

New York, March 2.—John Mitchell, former head of the United Mine Workers of America, and lately chairman of the trade agreement department of the National Civic federation, has made public his resignation of his office and membership in the latter organization.

Mitchell's severance of relations with the Civic federation follows the attitude taken by the United Mine Workers of America in declaring that any member of their organization accepting a position with the National Civic federation would thereby forfeit membership in the union. With this choice placed before Mitchell, he decided to resign from the Civic federation.

REUF'S LAST HOPE GONE

San Francisco's Former Boss Must Go to Penitentiary

San Francisco, March 2.—Abraham Reuf, ex-political leader of San Francisco, who has been out on bail of nearly $250,000 for some time, pending the result of certain appeals against his sentence for bribery, is back in jail.

He was taken into custody after the state supreme court announced that a recent order granting him a rehearing had been vacated.

This action of the court apparently sets aside Reuf's last hope for escaping his sentence of fourteen years in San Quentin.

TEN YEARS FOR BIGAMY

Ogilvie Also Found to Have Stolen United States Canteen Funds

London, March 2.—Felix F. A. Ogilvie was sentenced in the Old Bailey court to ten years' imprisonment for bigamy. The prisoner was charged with three illegal alliances.

Ogilvie served in the United States army and admitted, in a written statement, that he had stolen the canteen funds of a cavalry regiment in that country.

Liquor Law Resolve Passes Both Branches of Maine Legislature

Augusta, Me., March 2.—Resubmission to the vote of the people of Maine of the amendment to the state constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors now lacks only the signature of Governor Plaisted before being put into effect. The resubmission resolve, which received its final passage in the house Tuesday, yesterday went through the last stage in the senate, by a vote of 23 to 7, and was sent to the governor.

Governor Plaisted has repeatedly declared himself in favor of resubmission, and his signature to the resolve is anticipated. The matter will then come before the people at a special election to be held next September.

A REMARKABLE CASE

Connecticut Man Breathless Seven Days, but Still Living

South Norwalk, Conn., March 2.—His physicians pronounced William Shirdivene dead seven days ago and arrangements for his funeral were begun. He still lives, although he has not drawn nor exhaled a breath in all the seven days.

The doctors say it is an astounding case of suspended animation. When they irritate a nerve center or a great nerve in Shirdivene's body with a needle some of the muscles supplied by the nerve responds to the irritation. So the muscles are alive.

Besides, the deteriorative changes that take place soon after death are lacking. Shirdivene is in the same physical condition as before his "demise."

—There are over 2500 luminous arc lamps in use along the streets of St. Louis.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BRIEFS

The Naval bill reported to the Senate on Wednesday retains the eight-hour law, but makes it applicable only to battleships. Other warships are not included.

The Y. P. R. U. minstrels will be given in the Unitarian chapel on Friday evening. An old fashioned minstrel show including songs, dances, local hits etc will be on the first part of the program and an olio will follow.

The Ladies Aid society of the Universalist church reld a whist party Wednesday evening at the residence of Mrs. George W. Wheeler on Hancock street. Eight tables participated and souvenirs were given the having the best scores.

At a meeting of the Employed Boys club of the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening, reports of the bi-State conference at Worcester were given by five delegates. It was voted that the club give a play sometime during April. Erastus Osgood has very kindly consented to act as coach.

BAD EGGS CASE.

The cases against Charles F. Bent, William J. Meade and William W. Wild, the three men arrested by special officer McKay on Feb. 21, for peddling bad eggs ,was heard in court this morning, after which the case went over to March 16.

WOLLASTON SOCIAL.

A large number attended the monthly social in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church on Wednesday evening. The program opened with several groups of songs delightfully given by Mrs. Herbert Y. Follett. Games followed and refreshments were served. An old fashioned sing which was joined in by all present, with Mrs. Roach at the piano, closed the evening. As chairman of the refreshment committee was Mrs. Gannett, while Mrs. O. A. Blaisdell headed the entertainment committee.

Spiced Sweet Potatoes.

For this dish the potatoes must be perfectly sound and of fine flavor. Indifferent ones are not for this festal occasion. Select those of uniform size, wash clean, boil tender, skin and stand aside to become cold. Cut into quarter inch rounds, place a layer on the bottom of a buttered dish, dot with bits of butter and sprinkle with a mixture of brown sugar and cinnamon. Alternate layers of potato and seasoning until the dish is filled, finishing with plenty of butter. Cover and stand in the oven until thoroughly heated through, then uncover and brown. Serve at once without redishing.

DR. CURE-ALL AT POINT FAIR

Many Other Attractions Offered by Ladies' Aid

The opening day of the fair at the Washington Street Congregational church was manifestly successful both in point of attendance and sales and the character of the Colonial tea and the entertainment.

The fair opened at 3 o'clock in order that those who wished to make early purchases might be accommodated. Tea was served from 6 to 7.30 under the direction of Mrs. P. H. Holman and Mrs. Newcomb. The menu included: Shrimp wiggle, English monkey, baked beans, rolls, tarts, cake and tea.

Opportunity was given the people to patronize the various booths before and after the play. The tables in charge of the following:

Candy—Mrs. James Melville, Mrs. Fred Smith, Mrs. William Pearson and Miss Evelyn Hayden.

Punch—Mrs. Dr. Bushnell, Mrs. Eugene R. Stone.

Fancy Work—Mrs. C. W. Newcomb, Mrs. Marcus Wight, Jr., and Miss May Oliver.

Cake—Mrs. Thomas McKenney, Mrs. Sarah Kelsey.

The entertainment was a farce in two acts entitled "Dr. Cure All." Mrs. Isabelle Davis directed the play which was very acceptably produced with the following cast:

Dr. Cure All—Pearl M. Hayden; Maria, the maid, Margaret L. Magee; Patients, Ella Melville, Doris Cummings, Robert Davis, Edith Ames, Blanche B. Hayden, Alice Arnold and Dorothy Packard.

The doctor's cures worked all right, but the doses given were a little two powerful, and the woman desiring obesity became terribly fat, and the one who wanted to grow thin, became a living skeleton. The youth desiring a mustache got one of brilliant terracotta; the woman desiring golden hair, received a head of gray hair; and the mother whose bashful child caused her much embarrassment, was greatly shocked by a complete reverse in conduct on the part of her offspring. The only cure which gave entire satisfaction was that of the widow seeking a good husband. The doctor proposed to her in short order and started for the clergyman's to have the knot tied, just in time to escape the avalanche of wrathful words which the patients had in store for him. All the parts were well taken and the audience was well pleased. Mildred Bonney and Marion Whitmarsh assisted Mrs. Davis in running the play. Between the acts, two bass solos Loch Lomond and Kathleen Mavourneen were rendered by Mr. Henderson of Montclair, N. J.

COMING EVENTS.

Under this heading The Ledger will print single line notices of future happenings of interest to Quincy people. Secretaries of clubs, societies and other organizations are requested to forward to The Ledger notices of their meetings, entertainments, etc.

If a report of the entertainment is desired send to this office tickets for the use of the reporters which will guarantee a full and accurate account in The Ledger the next day.

QUINCY KNIGHTS TEMPLAR

Commandery to be Organized Here This Month

A meeting of those interested in the institution of a commandery of Knights Templar was held Wednesday evening at which time assurance was received that a commandery will be instituted here. It will be known as Quincy commandery, No. 47. While the date for institution has not been definitely settled, it will probably be the last Monday of this month.

The new commandery will start off with a charter list of from 150 to 175 Sir Knights, and already has a number of applications for the degrees from companions of the Royal Arch chapter. It is probable that Sir Knight Albert W. Fay, past commander of South Shore commandery will be the first commander.

The asylum of the commandery will probably be located in the apartments of Rural lodge, which when built were designed to accommodate a commandery. The jurisdiction of the new commandery will be Quincy, Wollaston and Braintree. Within this jurisdiction there are now three flourishing blue lodges and a Royal Arch chapter which has a large membership.

BOYS CAMPAIGN.

The meeting at the First Presbyterian church Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Quincy Adams extension club of the Y. M. C. A. was attended by over 150 boys. Reports of the State conference were given by Alex Robertson, Herbert Sutermeister Everett Clark, George McDonald, Willett Safford, George Daniels, James Jenkins, Fred Roache and Roland Estey. A challenge to prayer, right living and service was given by the speakers, and a brief after service brought good results.

A number of the boys also gave reports of the conference to the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. at their meeting Tuesday evening. The following were the speakers: Henry Trask, Theodore DuPlessis, Sam Prout, Dwight Gearwar and Howard Cantley.

At the Employed Boys supper Wednesday evening five delegates told of impressions and inspirations received at the state conference. J. A. Sedgewick presided at the after-dinner exercises.

The meeting at Houghs Neck was the best of the series so far. Seven fellows spoke on the conference and issued a challenge in their remarks to the boys of Houghs Neck, a challenge to live better lives and to get right with God through prayer and service. Thirty boys accepted the challenge. The total number of boys who have taken their stand for right living in the campaign so far is 150. This evening a meeting will be held in the Wollaston Congregational church under the auspices of the Boys club.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Master Richard Ericson, son of Councilman Charles A. Ericson, celebrated his ninth birthday anniversary Wednesday evening, by tentertaining a number of his friends at his home on Glendale road. The young people had a jolly time with games and music, not forgetting the appetizing refreshments which were served. The surprise of the evening came when Miss Esther Asklund, in behalf of those present, presented Master Richard with a gold ring.

Those present were: Hilda Erickson, Agda Ekblom, Gertrude Hibbett, Elsie Broberg, Louise Crossman, Esther Asklund, Mildred Fleming, Hilda Ekblom, Edith Pearson, Elsie Carlson, Edith Johnson, Celia Erickson, Elmer Asklund, Roland Broberg, Henry Erickson, William Hibbett.

LINEMAN INJRED.

Eugene Wentworth, a lineman employed by the telephone company, was painfully injured at South Quincy this morning, although his injuries are not of a serious nature. As near as can be learned, Wentworth with others was engaged in loading a pole onto one of the company's auto trucks when the pole slipped and fell off pinning Wentworth to the ground. He was hurried to the office of Dr. Jones where it was found that although no bones were broken the muscles of his legs were badly strained. He will be laid up for a week or two.

THE TENTH VICTORY

Quincy High Is After the State Championship

Quincy High defeated Taunton in rather a slow contest on the Taunton floor Wednesday afternoon by a score of 41 to 10. Prout and Manning were the stars for Quincy, the former getting 7 baskets and practically all on difficult shots.

This gives Quincy her tenth consecutive victory. Only three games are left on the regular schedule. Oliver Ames at North Easton Mar. 7, Rockland at Rockland Mar. 10, and St. John's Preparatory at Danvers on Mar. 17. Quincy is going at a winning pace, and the results of next Tuesday's game will be watched by all basketball enthusiasts throughout the state.

The summary of the game is as follows:

QUINCY		TAAUNTON
H. Chapman, rf		lb Lockhart
Manning lf		rb J. Anthony
Findley rf
Prout c		c Irving
Tirrell c
M. Chapman rb		lf H. Hall
Harmon lb		rf J. Hall

Score, Quincy 41; Taunton 10. Goals from floor Prout 7, Manning 6, H. Chapman 4, M. Chapman, Lockhart 2, H. Hall 2. Goals from fouls Manning 5, J. Hall 2. Referee, Hickey. Scorer Rice. Time 20m halves.

QUINCY WINS AT HYDE PARK

Defeated However in the Relay Race for Four Men

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. defeated Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. on its home floor in a dual track meet Wednesday evening by a score of 32 to 23. Phelan and Prout did not accompany the Quincy team, but their services were not needed in anything but the relay race, and no account of that was taken in the score. Hyde Park got first in the fence vault and shot put, and Quincy took the bulk of the points in the jumps and potato race. Quincy was defeated in the relay race.

The summary:

Potato race—Wilson (Q) 1st; Trask (Q) 2nd; Hargraves (H P) 3rd.

Running high jump—McArdle (Q) 1st; Wood (Q) 2nd; Cann (H. P.) 3rd. Height 5 ft. 2 1-2 in.

Summary of points four places counting:

	Q.	H. P.
Potato race	8	3
High jump	8	3
Shot put	2	9
Standing broad	11	0
Fence Vault	3	8
	32	23

For Leftovers.

The squash leftover from dinner may be used up in pancakes. Have ready about a pint of cold mashed squash and add a tablespoonful of butter, a little salt, half a cupful of milk, an egg and half a cupful of flour sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder. If the batter is too thin add more flour or if too stiff more milk. Drop the batter by tablespoonfuls on to a hot buttered griddle or a soapstone one and bake like other cakes of the kind. Serve the cakes directly from the griddle with butter. If there are leftover corn and stewed tomatoes in the larder mix them, and when they begin to boil flavor with a little onion juice, half a teaspoonful of sugar and serve very hot.

"All I demand for my client," shouted the attorney in the voice of a man who was paid for it," is justice."

"I'm very sorry I can't accommodate you," replied the judge, "but the law won't allow me to give him more than seven years."—Tit-Bits.

MORAN HAS BIG JOB ON HAND

English Lightweight to Clash With McFarland In New York.

BATTLE SHOULD BE A HUMMER

Packy Has Weight, Height and Reach In His Favor, but Little Briton Will More Than Make Up For It With His Aggressiveness.

By TOMMY CLARK.

Lightweights are now occupying the center of the pugilistic stage. Within the last few months more battles between the 133 pound boys have been held than in any other division. The next big contest on the calendar is the bout between Packy McFarland of Chicago and Owen Moran of England. The boys are to clash at the Fairmont A. C. in New York March 14.

The meeting of the pair has been anxiously looked forward to by the fight fans for some time. Promoters all over the country have made several efforts to match the men, but failed owing to some difficulty in getting McFarland and Moran to a mutual understanding regarding the weight.

When the boys signed articles for the coming bout it could be plainly seen that they were anxious to swap punches, as each realized that the other stands in his way to a clear road to the title, so they easily came to an agreement, Moran allowing Packy to weigh 135 pounds at 5 o'clock the day of the contest.

When Moran faces McFarland he will have the toughest job of his career on hand. In this battle the little Englishman will be giving away weight, height and reach, but is confident he can add the Chicago boy's scalp to his belt. But can he? Packy is conceded to be about the shiftiest boxer in the ring today. He is the most accurate of punchers and a wonderful judge of distance; but, like most clever men, he is no terrific hitter and seldom knocks out a man.

On the other hand, Moran is by far the hardest hitting lad of his inches in the ring and a finished fighter. Once stung he tears in and battles like a demon.

McFarland is the tallest lightweight in the ring today. He is five feet eight inches in his bare feet. When he enters the ring with Moran he will tip the scales around 138 or 140 pounds. Moran is the smallest man in the lightweight division. He is five feet four inches and can easily tip the beam at 133 pounds. Up until about a year ago he had been fighting featherweights.

With both boys in good condition the scrap should result in one of the best battles of the year. Considering everything, McFarland should outpoint Moran, for he has every advantage in his favor.

BASEBALL CHIRPS

Samuel Strang Nicklin, the old New York and Baltimore player, is studying music in Paris. Sammy believes he is good for the .300 class in grand opera.

As capable umpires are getting so scarce, President Lynch of the National league will engage a scout to visit the minor leagues and look over the arbiters.

Manager Bobby Wallace of the St. Louis Browns has picked up a new first baseman. The player's name is McAuley. He played with the semi-pro West Ends of Chicago last year.

Another new curve has been developed on the Pacific coast. Pitcher Hall of the Tacoma team claims that he has a twister that he calls the "fork ball" that is going to keep the batters guessing. He holds the ball between his forefinger and the second finger and throws it overhand.

LAND COURT.

To Grace R. Badger of Newton, George L. Huntress, Trustee, of Winchester, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth; Emily C. Roberts of Medfield, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Sarah S. C. Pratt and Mrs. John Pratt of Boston, in the county of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth; Francis C. Welch and J. Henry Russell, Trustees under the will of John Bryant, late of Cohasset, in said County of Norfolk, deceased; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Thomas W. Thacher of Brookline, in said County of Norfolk, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Cohasset, bounded Westerly by Atlantic Avenue, Northwesterly and Westerly by land of Grace R. Badger, then by an irregular line by the sea, Easterly, Southeasterly, Southerly and again Southeasterly all by land of Francis C. Welch and J. Henry Russell, Trustees under the will of John Bryant to the point of beginning.

Petitioner also claims the land, thatch, beach and flats lying between the line of average high water mark of the sea adjoining the premises above described and low water mark of the sea, all the land within the limits of the flats appurtenant to the premises above described, and all riparian rights to the above described premises in any wise appertaining or belonging.

Petitioner claims as appurtenant to the above described land a right of way over a private way called the Old Whitehead Road over land of Francis C. Welch and J. Henry Russell, Trustees under the will of John Bryant, and over a way leading therefrom all as established by a certain agreement made by Elizabeth P. Lee with said Trustees dated June 10, 1908 recorded with Norfolk Deeds Book 1086 Page 506, and filed as Document No. 761 in Land Court Records, Norfolk District, also such right of way over a private way running westerly from said Atlantic Avenue as is established by decision of the Land Court filed April 23, 1908, in case No. 1924. See plans 1924A3 and 1924A4.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the twenty-seventh day of March A. D. 1911, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this first day of March in the year nineteen hundred and eleven.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

PASTOR TAKES BRIDE

Miss Kate Simmons Married to Rev. Ezra C. Wyandt

At a pretty wedding on Thursday evening at the home of her parents on South Central avenue, Miss Kate Burnham Simmons became the bride of Rev. Ezra Clayton Wyandt. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Malcolm MacPhail of Dorchester, secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, and a close friend and associate of the groom, assisted by Rev. Carl G. Horst of the Wollaston Unitarian church.

The bride wore a becoming costume of white messaline and lace, with trimming of pearl, and carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas. She was attended by a niece, Caroline Sydney Simmons, as flower girl, attired in pink and white muslin and carrying a basket of pink and white sweet peas.

The bride was given away by her father, Walter E. Simmons, the single ring service being used. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by John E. Simmons a brother.

The wedding ceremony was performed before a bank of potted palms, Southern smilax forming the interior decorations of the house. Vocal solos were sung by Miss Rosetta Key, daughter of Rev. William S. Key, a former pastor of the Wollaston Unitarian church.

A shower of confetti and good wishes followed the departure of the couple on their wedding trip. On their return they will reside in Dorchester. The couple were the recipients of a numerous array of gifts, among which many articles of beauty and costliness were represented. Catering arrangements were in charge of H. P. Furnald of Quincy.

The Simmons family is a prominent Wollaston family of long standing, Mr. Simmons being indentified in a responsible capacity with the firm of A. Shuman and Company. The groom comes of an old Maryland family, and is the pastor of the Church for the Deaf in Boston. He is the son of Mrs. Mary E. Wyandt of Keedysville, Maryland.

WOLLASTON BOYS RESPOND

To Challenge to Better Christian Living

A boys' campaign meeting was held in the Wollaston Congregational church Thursday evening under the auspices of the Wollaston Extension Club of the Y. M. C. A. About 125 boys were present to join in singing illustrated songs, "Throw out the life line", "I love to tell the story", "Work for the night is coming" and "Stand up, stand up for Jesus." The whole conference delegation was present to tell what the conference did for them. In the challenge service, 32 boys accepted the challenge to better Christian living.

The boy delegates will meet with the Sunday School superintendents of the city Saturday evening to give their reports of the conference at Worcester. There will be a discussion at the meeting with regard to holding a Sunday School boys' athletic meet in the spring.

Some of the members of legislative committee on Bridges who were in Quincy on Thursday returned to Boston in automobile, some by train and some by a tug from the Fore River shipyard.

MERCHANTS REMONSTRATE

Turn Down the "Railroad Plans" for Water Street

A special meeting of the Merchants association was held Thursday evening at the rooms of the Board of Trade. The meeting was held to examine the "Railroad plans" for the abolition of the railroad crossing at Water street. City Solicitor John W. McAnarney was present and explained them in detail. After hearing Mr. McAnarney and asking many questions, it was unanimously voted to protest the adoption of the railroad plans as presented, and to appoint a special committee to appear in remonstrance.

WAR MEDALS PRESENTED

At Supper to Paul Revere Post of the Grand Army

There was a large attendance of veterans and ladies at Grand Army hall Thursday evening at the supper given to the members of Paul Revere post, 88, by the Sons of Veterans and the Sons of Veterans Auxiliary. The supper was served at 8 o'clock, the menu including baked beans, cold meats, rolls and coffee.

Following the supper there was an entertainment, which included banjo solos by Henry O. Studley; trombone solo by Harry Field, accompanied by Miss Field on the piano; piano solos by Miss Field, and a recitation by Past Commander George L. Phillips. There were also remarks by Commander Ring of Paul Revere post and others.

One of the pleasing features of the evening was the presentation to Commander Harry Gould and Past Commander George F. Phillips of Abner B. Packard camp, Sons of Veterans, with Spanish war medals. These medals are a special mark gotten up by the Sons of Veterans for presentation to members of the Spanish War Veterans. George Gragg presented the medal to Commander Gould, and Past Commander George L. Phillips presented the medal to his son Past Commander George F. Phillips. The evening closed with a social hour.

BOYS' MEET SATURDAY.

The State athletic meet for boys will be held in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Saturday beginning at 2 o'clock sharp. About 115 entries have been received from ten associations throughout the Eastern part of the State. The events will be: 15 yards dash, running broad jump, shot put, and regular relay races. The boys running high jump, potato relay races will be divided into three classes: class A, 12-13 years; class B, 14-15; class C, 15-16.

The relay races which will be the centre of the greatest amount of interest are: Malden vs. Quincy, Lynn vs. Somerville, Clapp Memorial vs. Cambridge. Quincy is keeping mum about her chances but she is certainly a dark horse.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The uncertainty of the weather indicates that the ground hog saw his shadow in spots!

Before Mexico starts another revolution the leaders ought to establish a chain of shooting galleries and practice at a few targets.

When all is said and done, Gov. Woodrow Wilson cast the vote of the New Jersey legislature for Senator Martine.

California women are agitating the whipping post for delinquent husbands. Happily a very small minority is interested personally in the issue. Others do their own walloping.

Senator Burton says the people of Adams County, Ohio, are very religious, and he doesn't believe they realized that it was wrong for them to sell their votes. Shall we or shall we not send missionaries to Adams County?

Congress expects to finish its business, affirm president Taft's reciprocity agreement with Canada, and adjourn on March 4. Just to think the country can have nearly a whole year's rest, and thus get down to business and prosperity again. Congress performs one of its greatest services to the country when it adjourns.

Now is the time for our people to pull together and pull strong for what will be for the best interests of the city as a whole and not for individuals. There should be no deals, no personal gains but a good honest united effort to have our grade crossings abolished in the right way. It will never be done again, now is the time for action. Lynn has changed its mind on how it should be done and perhaps are not too late to get what they want but here in Quincy it is best to be right in the beginning, make up your mind what you want and get it. Is it to be what the city wants, an improvement and a benefit or is a monopoly to rule? Money or the people?

"It is the duty of the state of Massachusetts either to develop the water front holdings or sell them to those who could do so. Enterprise is what is needed, and the greatest fear that the people of this state should have is that the railroad presidency fall into the hands of an unenterprising man."

In his efforts to show that the shipyard is not receiving water today below cost, Commissioner Bainbridge seems to have put himself into a position difficult to explain. If, as he claims, the total cost to the city for Metropolitan water is only six cents per 1000 gallons, and all of it is sold at a profit, how is it that the receipts were not large enough to pay all the expenses?

We repeat, why?

Quincy was charged in 1910 with 1,058,376,937 gallons of water. The shipyard used less than 58,376,937, so there was a balance of 1,000,000,000 gallons.

Houses with meters are charged over 30 cents per 1,000 gallons (23 cents per hundred cubic feet) and at this rate the 1,000,000,000 gallons would bring in just $300,000.

If only half of this water was sold at this rate, the receipts would be $150,000.

But even then the amount is too high, for the actual receipts in 1910 were but $115,766.37, including the shipyard and all takers.

That the receipts were not large enough to pay all water expenses, is shown by the fact that it was necessary in 1910 to raise $19,148.45 by taxation, which was over fifty cents per $1000 valuation, as the assessed valuation of the city was $32,458,055, and an assessment of $1 per $1,000 would yield $32,458.

During his cross-examination by the City Council, the Commissioner intimated that Water department was not properly financed. Who will inaugurate a reform?

The reason why the Water department is not self supporting is because the Quincy water debt and interest are so large, much larger per capita than in other cities. When a city of 32,000 has to pay a maturing water debt and interest of $70,000 annually it cannot have low water rates. Money should not be borrowed on thirty year loans to pay for connecting up consumers and other current expenses. A $30,000 loan for 30 years, at 4 per cent, payable $1,000 each year, requires the payment of $18,600 in interest. A $30,000 for 10 years, at 4 per cent, payable $1,000 each year, requires the payment of only $6,600 in interest, a saving of $12,000. No city loan should extend over more than ten years, and many should be for a much shorter term.

ACCEPTING THE DECISION.

Utterances ranging from a pessimistic gloom to a prediction of government ownership of the railroads, are heard from transportation authorities, voicing their disappointment at the railroad rate decision.

They need have little idea, however, that the people of the United States are or will be ready for many a year, to issue the enormous amount of bonds that will be needed to finance government ownership.

Of course the railroad owners would be glad to sell out to the government at a handsome price for their stock holdings. If the government ever decided on such ownership, it would have to pay a handsome price, just as a lot of land rises in value 50 percent when a city wants to build a schoolhouse.

The railroads are now up against the same proposition that constantly occurs in every man's business. They have learned that they cannot sell their commodity at an advanced rate. This is no novel and exceptional hardship. Ninety per cent of the manufacturers, the same proportion of the newspaper publishers, are constantly up against the same proposition. Like these other classes of producers, they must produce their profits by economical operation.

The manufacturer who learned from his salesman, the newspaper publisher who learns from his readers or advertisers, that the consumers of his product will pay no more money for it, does not sit down and bewail their bitter fate. It does not occur to them to say that the government must buy them out. Instead they see where they can systemize existing processes and cut off needless expense.

Here and there about the country are roads that are struggling to pay dividends against such handicaps as sparsely settled territory, too much competition, poor management, and over capitalization. If such roads are doing the best they can for efficiency methods, no one asks them to run trains at a loss. In some cases labor costs must be cut, in others expensive schemes for extension might just as well be abandoned, as they constitute a burden which eventually has to be paid by shippers and the travelling public.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The growing importance of women in the world of business and economics is illustrated by the report that the first month of business transacted by the postal savings bank at Norwood shows a large proportion of women depositors. The bank was established in Norwood because the policy of the government is to start the new institution in an industrial center where there is at least a large proportion of foreigners. Now the first month's business shows not many foreigners; but a large number of thrifty married and unmarried women.

There is not the slightest doubt that women, more and more, are entering into business of the world. They are becoming stockholders in our largest railroad and industrial corporations. For a local illustration take the New Haven railroad, which has a surprising number of women stockholders, and the same is true of the Pennsylvania, the American Telephone and Telegraph company, and other substatial corporations. Some of the women doubtless hold stock that really is owned by their husbands, but the bulk of them own the property outright.

Our savings banks also disclose a large percentage of women depositors the percentage increasing as women enter commercial life and become self- supporting. It is no wonder therefore that in a typical town of eastern Massachusetts this tendency appears when a new and safe method of investment appears.—Boston Globe.

DIET OF SCHOOL CHILDREN

Talk by Mrs. Wade at Massachusetts Fields School

At the monthly meeting of the Parents and Teachers' Association of the Massachusetts Fields school on Thursday evening, Mrs. Mary L. Wade of Wollaston was the speaker. Taking for her subject "Diet of school children" Mrs. Wade said in part:

It is fortunate for the child that it is becoming realized more and more tha the food question is undoubtedly the most important problem to his physical welfare, and has as well a most profound effect upon his disposition and character. It is scarcely necessary to say that the period of childhood, from 6 to 18, is one of the most critical in the life of the individual. It is a time of active growth both physically and mentally. It is a time when any serious check to the perfect and complete evolution of the organs and functions of the body may lead to ineradicable mischief and severely handicap the individual in the subsequent struggle for existence. It is a period in which the constitution of an individual is established for life, and success in digestion and assimilation is of greater importance than mental development.

More and more is it becoming realized by parents and teachers,t hat the breaking down in health of school children is more often due to impaired nutrition and not enough sleep than from overwork. At no period of life is it so necessary to provide a complete and liberal diet. Mothers should not regulate their children's diet by their own wants, for while all an adult needs is enough to furnish energy and repair waste, every bone, muscle and nerve in a child is calling for food whereby to grow. The grown man carries several days' rations in the form of fat, and he will not suffer if he goes a day or two without food. The young animal, however, carries no reserve, and should never be punished by being made to go without food.

The amount of food needed increases rapidly from birth to about four years of age, very slowly from four to ten, with a rapid increase from this time to twenty-four. From ten to twenty-four the carbo-hydrates or energy giving foods should be increased more rapidly than other food principles. It is important to have a good nutritious breakfast, and one that will not put too great a tax upon the digestion. Nothing is better than fruits and well cooked cereals. The dried fruits as dates, figs and raisins are valuable, baked apples and bananas cooked and raw if ripe.

A light lunch should be carried to school, and it is better for children to eat their chief meal in the middle of the day at least up to the age of twelve. Supper should comprise only easily digested foods, and pastry, cheese and meats are better omitted. The best luncheon a youth can have is a dish of roasted potatoes, well buttered, and a glass of milk. The craving of sweets by children is natural and should be gratified. No other food is so quickly assimilated by the body, and as it takes but a short time for sugar to enter the circulation, care must be used that it be eaten at the proper times and in not too large quantities.

Children should never be allowed pennies to spend for candy, said Mrs. Wade, as she dilated upon the arsenic, shellac and other injurious substances found in the so-called "penny candies."

Impaired appetites as the result of sleeping in badly ventilated rooms were mentioned, and the talk closed with a discussion of relative food values, during which Mrs. Wade drew attention to a food chart she recommended using as a guide.

The interest of those present was evinced by the questions asked of the speaker at the end of the talk.

Principal Goodspeed spoke briefly of the sickness and diseases that had visited the school during the past year, and told the measures in force making toward their direction and subjection.

At the business meeting the reports of the secretary and treasurer were read, the latter bringing up a discussion as to the disposition of the funds in the treasury amounting to some eighty odd dolars. Opinion was divided between the decoration of the various school rooms with pictures and the like, and the purchase of a reflectorscope that could be used both by the classes and the association.

SUPPER OF LUTHERANS

Necessary to Set the Tables Several Times

The annual supper of the Swedish Lutheran church was held in Protection hall Thursday evening. The first quota of people sat down at 5.30, and it was nearly 10 o'clock before the last were served. Nearly 250 people partook of the supper, the menu being: Meat balls, mashed potatoes, mashed turnips, pickles, rolls, cake, coffee. The affair was a combination supper and social with a brief entertainment in addition. The church choir rendered several selections under the direction of Miss Emma Vitting. The latter also gave a number of excellent piano solos. The committee in charge of the supper was: Mrs. Andrew Anderson, Mrs. Herman Kjellberg, Mrs. August Viden, Mrs. Freeberg, Mrs. Axel Norden, Mrs. George Nordahl, Mrs. Gustaf Nelson, Mrs. Von Colln, Mrs. John Gustafson, Mrs. Andrew Johnson.

SCALD WAS FATAL.

Camelia Amara, the six year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guiseppe Amara of Water street, who was terribly scalded with boiling water Wednesday, died Thursday afternoon. The little girl's mother was pouring boiling water from a tea kettle when the child ran up to her and so joggled her arm that the stream of water ran down the child's back, scalding it terribly. The little girl was removed to the City Hospital where she died.

LIVELY RUNAWAY.

There was a lively runaway in City Square Thursday afternoon that came near resulting seriously. The horse of Charles Peterson attached to a light wagon was left standing near the depot, the forward and rear wheels of one side being chained together. An automobile came around the corner and started the horse. He ran down Depot street, the two chained wheels dragging. On the sidewalk in front of Bernard Fritz tailor shop, Mrs. Daniel R. McKay and her daughter Gertrude were walking and as the team flew by, Miss McKay got a glancing blow and was thrown down, but fortunately escaped with some bruises.

The now thoroughly frightened horse ran toward the chains about the First church and it looked for a minute as if the team would hit a woman with a baby carriage that was passing. Just at this minute, however, the horse turned and ran toward the Savings Bank building, the wheels striking the stone posts, which seemed to check the speed. In the meantime Mr. Peterson was running after his horse which he caught near the Savings Bank building.

The executive committee of Paul J. Revere, W. R. C., meets Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Alberta Hewson of Newcomb place.

Luther R. Hanson has been appointed administrator of estate of Joshua E. Hanson, who died April 15.

Commissioner Bainbridge advertises today for bids for heating and ventilating the Montclair school. The bids will be opened Monday, March 13, at 10 o'clock.

A very successful and enjoyable basket party was given by Scandia lodge in Electa hall Thursday evening. The baskets were auctioned off and the special favorites brought good round sums. After the lunch was eaten, dancing was in order for the remainder of the evening.

"Tam O'Shanter" and "Breaking into Scotch" will be presented by the Scottish Musical society at Quincy on April 18. Those who have come to know the dry humor of the Scottish bard, Robert Burns, can appreciate the possibilities of the opening sketch.

The High school concert looked forward to with pleasant anticipation the past few weeks is to come off tomorrow night in High School hall. There will be a chorus of 150 voices and soloist. Miss Perkins musical instructor has the students well trained and a fine performance is assured.

Chester I. Campbell of Wollaston, manager of the Auto show in Mechanics building, Boston, is a very busy man these days. One show after another follows quickly and no one understands the management of these enterprises quite as well as Mr. Campbell. He says the coming Auto show will be the best yet and is sure to attract thousands.

Members of Adams Chapter, D. R., were grieved to learn of the death early this morning of Mrs. Charles H. Belcher one of their beloved members. Mrs. Belcher has been seriously ill for several weks at the home of her sister Mrs. Charles F. Wilde, Prospect avenue, Wollaston. Funeral services will be held at her home in Randolph on Monday afternoon.

Another old Quincy landmark is being removed to make room for the march of progress. The landmark is an old house situated on the top of Paynes hill, known as the Adam Glover house. As near as can be learned the house was built somewhere about 1678 for Theophilus Glover, and is now owned by Charles E. Ford. The building is about 35 by 26 feet with the front entrance in the centre leading into low studied rooms on either side. The building is now being razed.

A CHALLENGE.

Editor of the Daily Ledger:

In a recent issue of a local newspaper, the writer observed an article with reference to the basketball championship of the city. The writer of that article was mistaken in his application of the meaning of what I had to say with regard to the question, and I am taking the liberty of writing you to have it set right. In talking with a representative of the newspaper in question, I made the remark that Quincy High school could not claim the State championship until she defeated Oliver Ames at North Eastern. It was also stated by me that inasmuch as the Y. M. C. A. claimed the championship of the city it was up to High school to challenge the Y. M. C. A. if there was any doubt about it. The author of the article got the two things mixed up in his mind, and misquoted several statements. In order to avoid any further arguments on the subject, I hereby challenge the High school five to play a game, or a series of games with the Y. M. C. A. team, and thus settle the dispute once and for all. In giving this challenge it is with full knowledge that it is not "up to" the Y. M. C. A. to do the challenging. The intention is to prevent any further waste of words in discussing the subject.

BOXING BOUTS AT COLISEUM

Not a Prize Fight But a Clean Show Throughou

There was an attendance of upwards of 1200 people at the Coliseum on Thursday evening to witness the boxing bouts held under the auspices of the Quincy Rowing association. There has been considerable talk during the past few days about these boxing bouts. They have been characterized as brutal prize fights, etc. As a matter of fact, however, the bouts of Thursday evening were fine exhibitions of manly art, entirely free from anything that tended toward brutality; a clean show from beginning to end, and nothing occurred at which objection could be taken.

Chief Burrell and a squad of eight officers were present, but they had nothing to do except to watch the entertainment, for the crowd was thoroughly orderly throughout.

The law was strictly adhered to, and unles a man presented his membership ticket at the door he was refused admittance, and no amount of argument made any impression on the two officers stationed at the outer door.

The first bout was between Frankie O'Connor of Boston and Tommy Flannagan of Cambridge. It was a fast one, and the boys were pretty evenly matched, but O'connor got the decision.

The second bout was between Bob LaFavour of Brockton and Jerry Gaines the market champion. LaFavour was the heavier built of the two, but Gaines considerably taller, which gave him a little advantage. LaFavour got the decision.

The final bout of the evening was between Johnny Glover of South Boston and Kid Goodman of the West End. This was the main bout of the evening. The two men were fairly even up to the conclusion of the eighth round, and the general opinion seemed to be that the result would be a draw. Glover's nimbleness and long reach did the business, and to these he owed the decision in his favor. Goodman was much the heavier of the two men and could he have reached his opponent he would have won, but the long arm of Glover kept him at a distance, although he would occasionally break through the guard and reach his man. The decision was given to Glover.

BRIEFS

Mrs. C. P. Gould is to have a tea pouring at her home 87 Adams street, March 17th to which all Patriotic orders are invited.

The members of Quincy L. O. L. are working hard to make a success of their annual dance which will be held in Alpha hall late in March.

Next Thursday evening is the date of the masquerade party of Manet encampment of Odd Fellows. The band will positively appear.

John Q. A. Field, the ex-councilman and a former county commissioner, will contribute a letter to the Daily Ledger of Saturday on abolition of the Water street crossing.

Mrs. C. Alice Litchfield of Linden street, Brookline is to entertain the S. Agnes Parker Sewing circle of Paul J. Revere, W. R. C., at her home on Wednesday afternoon.

Master Jack Wentworth of Miller Stile road is confined to the house with the measles. All hope that the triplets in the family may escape any serious illness.

The bill authorizing the Boston & Northern street railway to purchase the Old Colony street railway which operates in Quincy has been reported favorably in the legislature. Both companies are owned by the Massachusetts Electric company.

The Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor are preparing an entertainment to be given at Music hall in April. It will be a night with Bobbie Burns and his far famed characters which always appeal to the Scotchman.

The preparatory address at the United Presbyterian church Thursday evening was delivered by Rev. T. C. Atchison, D. D., of Lawrence. The text chosen by the speaker was in John 1:46—"Jesus said unto him, come and see." The meeting was well attended and Mr. Atchison delivered an excellent address.

A new serial story starts in Saturday's Ledger "The Hon. Senator Sagebrush, a story of political trickery and love, full of action, high purposes and real thrills. Don't forget to send in your order to have the boy leave you a Ledger every day for you won't want to miss a line of this story.

A surprise party was given Wednesday evening to Miss Bessie Wilbur at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Estey ,Brook street. A pleasant evening was passed with games, music and refreshments. She was presented with a beautiful gold neck chain with garnet and pearl pendant. Over thirty friends were present. Miss Wilbur is to go to Bridgewater to reside with her parents who have purchased a farm there.

MUST ALWAYS HAVE BOOK

When Transporting Liquors on an Express Team

A decision of more than ordinary interest to the Quincy police, as well as to Quincy expressmen has been handed down by the full bench of the Supreme judicial court in the case of Joseph Fostello, a Quincy expressman. The question is one that has been pending a long time and hereafter expressmen transporting intoxicating liquors into no-license cities and towns will be obliged to keep in their possession while in the performance oftheir duties a record book containing entries of packages of "wet goods" which they are transporting and will make entries in the record book of the names of consignees to whom they are carting liquors.

The full bench of the Supreme judicial Court decided this in the case of the Commonwealth against Joseph Fostello, a Quincy and Boston expressman. Fostello was arrested on April 14, 1910, by the police of Quincy for not having his record book with him when a police officer called for the book.

At the time of the arrest Fostello was driving his team to his "general depot," a place where the goods are sorted and transferred to the various teams for delivery in different sections of that city. His contention was he did not have the book with him because he was on his way to his "general depot," where entries required under the statutes of the Commonwealth are made in the book before the actual delivery of the "wet goods."

The Supreme Court says in part: "The statute provides that a book "shall be kept which at all times will be opened to inspection of officers.'

"The plain implication of this is that the book shall accompany the liquors and be in the possession of the party transporting them with entries required at each stage of the transportation from their receipt until their delivery.

"If this construction of the statute seems to impose an undue burden upon persons and corporations engaged in a general express business it is for the Legislature to devise a remedy."

MOTHERS' MEETING.

The Quincy Mothers' Association held its meeting on Wednesday afternoon. The attendance was not as large as usual, probably because there is at present a good deal of sickness in the families of members of the association. The afternoon was however a delightful one and those present thoroughly enjoyed Miss Randall's breezy paper. Her subject was "Mother Instinct." In the course of her talk Miss Randall set forth how the mother instinct was strong in good teachers and many unmarried women and to what extent their love for children leads them. She pointed out their very great helpfulness and the important part which the maiden aunt so often plays in the household of which she is a member; how she ministers to children for pure love because of the mother instinct which is so strong within her. Also how large a contribution unmarried women make to society in a financial way, and how many sacrifices they make for the advancement of the children of other people.

The devotional services were led by Mrs. A. M. Thompson wife of Rev. A. M. Thompson of the United Presbyterian church.

COMEDY A MAN'S VOICE

The Attraction at Closing Night of Quincy Point Fair

The second day of the fair at the Quincy Point church was even more successful than the first. Over 200 people were present at supper time and it was necessary to have the meal served twice to different sets of people. The first hundred sat down at 6.30.

The menu consisted of: Cold ham, escalloped potatoes, shrimp salad, baked beans, pies, rolls and coffee. There was an abundance of everything and the Ladies' Aid society lived up to its reputation.

The different booths were well patronized throughout the evening and by the time of closing but little remained.

Before the comedy was presented, a sonata was rendered by the Kitchen symphony. Mrs. C. P. Marshall played the piano and the following young ladies beat the pans, bottles, jars, etc.: May Oliver, Clara Bushnell, Ada Gerrior, Helen Sherburne, Clara Buzzell, Viola Hayden, Harold Newcomb operated the bass kettledrum. The sonata was very acceptably rendered and the members of the orchestra showed great proficiency in reading the music. Mrs. Arthur B. Foster armed with a sauce pan and a big spoon directed the operations from the foreground.

A Man's Voice, a comedy in two acts was given by members of the Ladies' Aid society with its usual marked success.

Gwendolin Perkins who was well protected from the snares of matrimony by two old aunts, Miss Matilda and Miss Arabella, was enamored of Tom, son of the judge of the village. It was a difficult task to get an opportunity to see him but Hannah, the maid, connived at a little scheme of Gwendolin's to talk with Tom. He was to climb down the chimney and out into the room through the fireplace. The aunts were hustled off to prayer meeting, Mrs. Josiah Ingalls, proprietor of the Dove Inn for single unprotected females, a visitor with the sisters was shown to her room for letter-writing and the coast was clear. Tom had his troubles however and got stuck in the chimney. Encouraged by Gwendolin from below he made mighty efforts to free himself but in so doing alarmed Mrs. Ingalls who came hurrying downstairs to see what the trouble was. Tom was still in the chimney when the aunts got back from prayer meeting. Miss Matilda was in favor of building a nice roaring fire and having a comfortable evening about the fire place but the pitiful meows of the Tom cat in the chimney caused her to change her mind. It was decided by the aunts that Gwendolin be placed in charge of Mrs. Ingalls and sent to the Dove Inn.

The second act finds Mrs. Ingalls in her private room at the Inn awaiting the arrival of the aunts with their charge. The trip was rather a rough one and the maidenettes and "Gwen" arrive sadly dishevelled. Betty the chambermaid of the Inn is given the bundles of the new inmate to take upstairs and "Gwen" soon asks to be excused. The aunts were just starting back when a man's voice is heard issuing from room 36 where their niece has been placed. All became terrified, the aunts hurrying hither and thither, Betty, the maid calling the fire department instead of the police and Mrs. Ingalls bustling about to find the source of the voice. Gwendolin comes down stairs just in time to prevent hysteria on the part of the other women and the mystery is cleared. Tom had made her a present of a graphophone just before she left home and one of the records contained a song sung by himself. The niece wished to play

LAWS AND LAW MAKING.

Representative Langelier gave an interesting and instructive talk on laws and law making to the members of John Hancock lodge of Odd Fellows Wednesday evening. About 100 members were present and they gleaned much information of what is daily going on at Beacon Hill.

Representative Langelier spoke of the personality of the members of the Legislature the history of bills in their different stages and the time given by the members to their consideration. He also spoke of some of the so-called freak bills, that annually make their appearance, and contrasted law making today with 100 years ago. He touched upon the methods of election, explaining the direct nomination process and the convention process. The good and bad in political parties, and the qualifications a voter must possess here and in England.

Years ago, he said, penalities were imposed on towns for failure to choose a representative to the General Court. In closing Representative Langelier read some of the bills now pending before the Legislature.

WESTERLY AGREEMENT.

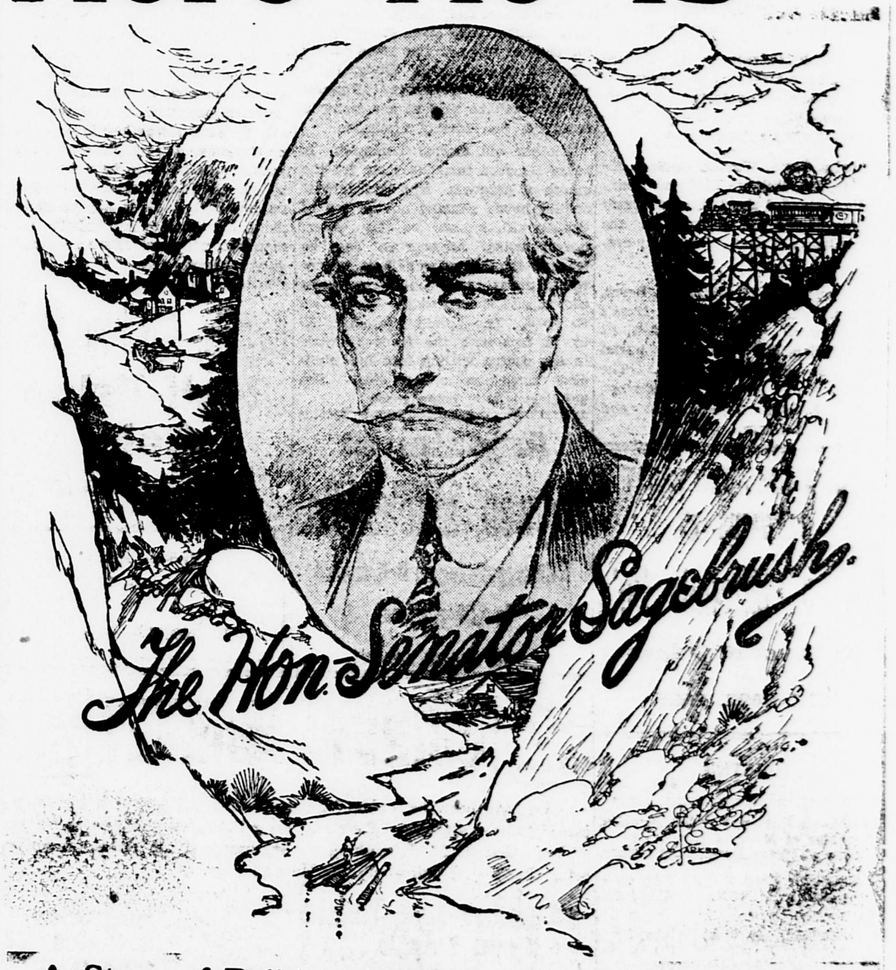

The granite cutters at Westerly, R. I., came to an agreement with the manufacturers on Wednesday, the new scale covering a term of five years. The new scale of wages gives the cutters 40 5-8 cents per hour, which is reported as being 5-8 of a cent higher than paid in other parts of New England. The quarrymen get a raise of eight percent receiving from 25 to 27 cents per hour, and the polishers will receive 34 cents per hour.

COUGH AND COLD SYRUP
Made at Home, Touches spot.

A great big, full pint of laxative cough syrup of the finest quality known to the medical world can readily be made by any woman or even child. To a pint of granulated sugar add a half pint of boiling water; stir and cool. Obtain at drug store 2 1-2 ozs. Essence Mentho-Laxene, empty it into a pint bottle and fill up with the syrup. A teaspoonful every hour or two will check or stop a cold in the head, and cure any cough that is curable. It will pay any family to keep it always in the home to avoid the diseases due to colds, such as pneumonia, bronchitis, sore throat, diphtheria and consumption. It is marvelously quick in action and permanent too.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

It doesn't make a particle of difference to the public what is the name or nationality of the girl Miss Billie Burke may happen to be impersonating on the stage. It is Miss Billie Burke herself they want to see. Miss Burke will open a two weeks engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, on Monday evening next in "Suzanne," the comedy in which she recently scored a big success at the Lyceum Theatre, New York. In this play Miss Burke impersonates a sweet little Belgian girl. The first time she came to the Hollis as a star she played a French bride. That was in "Love Watches"—and the public fell over themselves to get in to see her. Then she came back in "Mrs. Dot" as an English widow—and it was the same way. And now they want to see her just as much as a Belgian. "Suzanne" is a most interesting little play. It was written by two Belgians and its scenes are laid in Brussels. The heroine is the daughter of a funny old beer bottler. She helps in the business and between whiles tries to keep peace between her parents who will quarrel now and then. She's betrothed to a young Belgian, but she's in love with the Parisian who has come to learn business methods from her father. How she finds out that the Belgian is a scamp and induces her parents to let her marry the Parisian—that's the play. It's a real picture of Belgian life and customs and all very entertaining. "Suzanne" will be preceded at every performance by "The Philosopher in the Apple Orchard," a playlet founded on one of Anthony Hope's stories, which gives Miss Burke a chance to appear in quite a different kind of role and one in which she is quite as charming. Miss Burke's matinees are on Wednesday and Saturday.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Cyril Scott in "The Lottery Man," under the direction of the Messrs. Shubert, is the announcement for a limited engagement commencing Monday, March 6th at the Majestic Theatre, Boston. Briefly, "The Lottery Man" concerns the attempt of Jack Wright, a young journalist, to run a lottery in connection with his paper, by which he hopes to advertise the paper, and also realize a considerable sum of money from the success of the scheme. He offers himself as the human prize this being an added inducement. Jack's scheme is not entirely unworthy, however, as he hopes to devote some of the proceeds of the lottery to provide greater comfort for his sweet, old-fashioned mother. The word "old-fashioned," moreover, is well taken, for a direct contrast is offered to this type of mother by another character in the play,—the mother of Jack's chum—who devotes her time to obesity cares and "beauty treatments," in order to present a youthful appearance. Much of the humor of the play is afforded by "Lizzie," the companion of the beauty faddist, upon whom her employer Mrs. Peyton, first tries all of her "cures" to test their success. Lizzie, to say the least, is neither fat nor heavy, but she must share her mistress' physical culture exercises, diet and various other remedies for reducing.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

It is seldom that theatre goers are afforded the opportunity of witnessing a more gripping, intense and vitally interesting play than "The Fourth Estate," which Liebler & Company are presenting to the patrons of the Shubert Theatre, Boston, now in its second week there, and starting on its third week March 6. In "The Fourth Estate," Wheeler Brand, a young managing editor, is the central figure of the play's story, and in him is portrayed the best type of the newspaper man of today. He abhors corruption, and in his newspaper he sees only a servant of the public, who, as such, should at all times be honest, fearless and faithful. He unearths a story of graft in a venal decision of a Judge on the United States bench, and although that same Judge is the father of the girl he loves, he never wavers in his duty, even though it appears that he must lose the girl, who for a time believes his campaign is only a personal fight waged against her father. The love story is deftly interwoven, while the attempt of the "interest" to control the big dailies of today is vividly pictured.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

With Mary Norman, the impersonator; Charles Lovenberg's big musical comedy, "College Life" with a company of twenty singers, dancers and comedians; Yorke and Adams, late stars of "Playing the Ponies," and the Eight Berlin Madcaps among the principal features, the bill for B. F. Keith's next week again promises to break all records. Mary Norman is unquestionably the greatest artiste in her line in modern times, and the simplicity of her methods in imitating well-known types of women has never been excelled. "College Life" is one of those big vaudeville productions that the public seem to demand nowadays. It is full of ginger from start to finish, with an endless amount of fun, rollicking college songs, and a beautiful stage setting. Yorke and Adams are two of the greatest Hebrew comedians on the stage today, and come with an entirely new programme. The Eight Berlin Madcaps is one of the liveliest aggregations of pretty girls that has ever come to America. Another feature will be Gerald Griffin and company in one of the funniest comedies ever written, called "Other People's Money," while other features will be John Birch, "the man with the hats," the Three Atheletes in gymnastic feats, and Sharp and Wilkes in singing and dancing.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

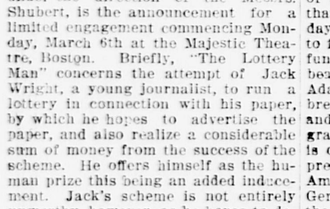

"The End of the Bridge," the play that won the prize of $500 offered by John Craig in the recent competition open to Harvard and Radcliffe students, will be produced for the first time on any stage at the Castle Square Theatre next week. Its author is Miss Florence Lincoln, a student in Radcliffe, and in "The End of the Bridge" she has written a play in four acts that tells a romantic story of life at the present day. Its theme is the conflict between ambition and duty, and its leading character are a distinguished physician, Dr. John Garret, and his ward, Miss Jean Mannering. The first act finds Dr. Garret at the height of his reputation and about to accept an offer to join the staff of a great German medical institution. Fate and his sense of duty demand his remaining at home and his marriage with his ward, and the progress of the play shows that after many trials this marriage eventually becomes a happy one. To both come knowledge that they love each other, and the doctor especially realizes that he has lost nothing in sacrificing himself to his sense of duty. Among the other characters in the play is the little boy Peter, the son of a friend of Dr. Garret. He is office boy in the doctor's office, but he has no knowledge of his father, and there is an especially touching scene in which the two take part, each not knowing the other's relationship. In writing this play, Miss Lincoln has striven to make it effective on the stage, and although its theme is serious, it is lightened with not a little humor. The leading roles will be acted by John Craig, Mary Young and George Hassell.

The easy way to wash clothes.

Take a cake of Lenox Soap, cut it into small pieces and dissolve these in three quarts of boiling water. Keep at boiling point until a solution is formed.

This solution will do better work than soap—and without any waste.

Rub the soap solution on the soiled parts, fold and roll each piece separately, pack in a tub, cover with warm soapy water, let stand over night, and in the morning you will find that the really hard work of washing—the rubbing on the washboard—is not half as hard as usual.

AUTOMOBILE SHOW.

The Ninth Annual Boston Automobile Show, scheduled to take place in Mechanics building, and Horticultural hall during the week of March 4th to 11th, will as usual so far surpass all other trade exhibitions held in Boston during the year that comparison in that regard is wholly out of the question. While the Annual Auto Shows in Boston are known to all to be the largest in the country—and claimed to be the largest and best attended exhibition by a single industry anywhere in the world, the management has been in receipt of so many inquiries for particulars which might impart an idea of the business done during the show week that General Manager Chester I. Campbell has put his systems department to work to acquire statistics of the exhibition with results surprising to even those connected directly with the Show Management.

The area of the combined exhibit space of the two buildings is 126,000 square feet, and more than 19,000 yards of floor covering will be required, or nearly twelve miles. About 450 men are employed to erect decorative effects which cost $27,000. Ninety-four different makes of pleasure cars will be shown, and 37 different makes of trucks and commercial vehicles. Attendants and salesmen to the number of 2,640 will be required to look after the various exhibits which show an actual value in property invested of more than five million dollars for the 400 exhibits by as many different firms. 8,462 incandescent lamps and 680 arc lamps will be used to light the various halls, and four distinct orchestras will render popular and classic music in different parts of the buildings.

Eight years ago, at the first Boston Auto Show, a forecast for such a Show as depicted by these figures would have been considered beyond the wildest flight of imagination, but today even the most conservative of these conversant with the manufacture and sale of motor vehicles would listen with interest to almost any stretch of fancy that might be used to outline future automobile exhibitions.

In addition to the attractions offered by the exhibits themselves and the wonderful decorative features will be added many novelties for the comfort, entertainment, and convenience of the visiting crowds, which will undoubtedly be greatly in excess this year of the largest number handled heretofore. Principal among these will be the cafe, where good food will be obtainable at reasonables rates. The music will be of the best procurable, and the following special occasions have been announced by the management:—Tuesday evening, March 7th, Military night; Wednesday, March 8th, Society Day; Thursday, March 9th, Commercial Car day.

Interest among the trade and manufacturers is intense, and the competition that has been aroused is expected to result in more brand-new and unusually attractive ideas in both construction of cars and style of bodies for cars than were ever before brought out in a single season.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

VAUDEVILLE AT WOLLASTON

Hotel Life in Squash Town by the Imperials

The name "Imperial" in the past has been coupled in the entertainment line with a strong array of talent and marked departures from the usual scenic effects. The vaudeville program offered under this name by the Wollaston Social club in the Unitarian vestry on Thursday evening proved no exception to the rule.

The evening opened with an overture by the Imperial orchestra, consisting of Miss Ruth Cahill, E. Thornton Walters and Herbert Percival. First on the program came the Professor Tcharpolutski Skinfunny quartet, an original farce of sustained merriment from the pen of one of the club members, Irving L. Shaw. The advertisement for a quartet by the professor followed by their subsequent engagement and trial, caused the audience to laugh long and heartily. In the respective characters of professor, Irishman, German, Jew and Negro were: William A. Mann, Axel Nelson, Edgar Hey and Gorham Nickerson.

Miss Grace A. L. Parker came next with her pleasing whistling solos and was obliged to respond to the usual loud applause. She was accompanied by Miss Eva C. Hungerford.

Probably the most beautiful and interesting act on the entire program was given under the name of the "Moulton Sisters" by Miss Margaret Hall and Miss Elsie Moulton. Scenic effects abounded in this act, as did attractive music and artistic results. The curtain rose with the song the "Old see saw" in which the young ladies were seen in costumes of spangled white seated upon a see saw lined with multi colored electric lights while lights were directed on the singers from the sides of the stage.

A Colonial song and dance by Miss Margaret Hall compelled an encore, after which came a feature by Miss Elsie Moulton heralded on the program as the "Blaze of light." This consisted of a skirt dance with colored lights played upon the swirling fabric of the dancer. The dance was repeated behind a gauze curtain upon which were thrown Easter lily, butterfly, sky and patriotic effects that caused the spontaneous applause of the audience.

Bizz and Buzz, eccentric black face comedians with an inexhaustible supply of jokes and songs also delineated the fast disappearing art of black face chicken reeling. The artists were Herbert Percival and Frank Bishop.

Miss Abbie Penley, whom a Wollaston audience always hears with pleasure, contributed a group of songs, including "Arcady, ever young," "Save up your kisses" and "Silver threads among the gold."

With a sidesplitting, and for the actors nearly head splitting, comedy sketch entitled "Hotel life in Squash Town" the Imperial Burlesque Company closed the evening's performance. As the name suggests the scene depicted the life of a country hotel and the events ordinary and extraordinary attending the same. Clifton H. Baker was in the part of the landlord, while Arthur W. Rohn as the waitress was a close rival of Julian Eltinge. In the respective parts of porter, butcher, Jew, "Terrible Terry" the tough and commercial travellers the following cast shone: Roy C. Baker, Clarence Hulton, Charles E. Barker, Axel Nelson, Ralph W. Oldham and Jesse I. Litchfield. The scenery was the work of Arthur W. Rohn and was worthy of a professional. One drop should receive special mention for its excellence This was a view of First hill, Wollaston, with the Wollaston pharmacy on one side and Grand View realisticly winding its way over the hill with the customary residences on each side.

HAD A FAIR TRIAL

Former Mayor White Loses In Appeal to Supreme Court

Boston, March 3.—William P. White, former mayor of Lawrence, was yesterday declared by the supreme judicial court to have had a fair trial on the charge of having bribed three aldermen of that city and not entitled to a new trial.

White, with five others, was indicted on the charge of having bribed three aldermen to vote in favor of the removal of Hamilton, then chief engineer of the Lawrence fire department. At the trial one of the men was found not guilty and the others were convicted.

White took exceptions to the manner in which the jury were impanelled, claiming that the district attorney had no right to challenge two of the jurors after the whole twelve had been seated. The court, however, overrules this contention.

QUINCY POINT FAIR

it over at her earliest opportunity and in doing so caused the consternation among the other inmates.

Miss Matilda who was very much set against matrimony finally withdrew her objections to Tom and Mrs. Ingalls decided to give up the idea of the Dove Inn and run a matrimonial agency instead.

All parts were well taken and it would be a difficult task to choose the "star." Mrs. Newcomb and Mrs. Holman as the aunts, were excellent and gave a very natural and effective interpretation of the parts. Miss Cora Barnes took the part of Gwendolin, the niece, splendidly and Miss Elizabeth Schouler as Mrs. Josiah Ingalls, performed creditably. Mrs. George Baily as Hannah, the maid was extremely funny and Miss Helen Lincoln as Betty, simulated the perturbation and forwardness of the chambermaid to perfection.

The cast:

Miss Matlida Perkins, averse to matrimony, Mrs. Rollin H. Newcomb
Miss Arabella Perkins, her younger sister, Mrs. Percy H. Holman
Gwendolin Perkins, their niece, Mrs. Cora Barnes
Mrs. Josiah Ingalls, proprietor of the Dove-Inn, Miss Elizabeth Schouler
Hannah the Misses Perkins' maid, Mrs. George Baily
Betty, chambermaid at the Dove-Inn, Miss Helen Lincoln
The Man's Voice, which does not materialize.

Between the acts two soprano solos were well rendered by Mrs. Walter Perry, a member of the Ladies' Aid society. A violin obligato was played by Mr. Perry and the piano accompaniment by Mrs. Charles P. Marshall.

The evening was profitable for the society and pleasurable to all, thus fulfilling the object of fair.

IDEAL HOMES EXPOSITION.

The First Real Estate and Ideal Homes Exposition Ever Held in New England to Open in Horticultural Hall, Boston, April 3.

For the first time in the history of Massachusetts its real estate and building interests will combine in a big public exposition to be held in Horticultural hall, Boston, from April 3 to 15. It will be known as the Greater Boston Real Estate and Ideal Homes Exposition and will be conducted under the auspices of the Boston Real Estate Exchange, with E. J. Howe as manager. The Exposition will be so arranged that in one morning, afternoon or evening a visitor can see the many scattered sites in Boston and its suburbs which would be impossible for one to see in several weeks by a personal tour of the places represented. Visitors will also be shown attractive plans of houses, economical methods of good construction dwelling necessities and conveniences with approximate estimates of cost, etc.

It will exemplify the prosperity of the entire metropolitan district and state by bringing together those interests that make for a healthy, substantial growth in any community. It will be the first time home seekers, home finders and home builders will be brought together in an exposition of home interests. The exhibition will include displays of models of houses, terraces, and flats; miniature reproductions of plots of land development for residential occupation, with landscape characteristics; exhibits of concrete, terra cotta and other building materials; roofings; the latest heating, lighting and plumbing conveniences attractive portable houses; plans of attractive low cost dwellings and bungalows; house decorations—all forming a combined exposition of lands and homes of an interesting and instructive nature. The best efforts of architects, builders, furnishers and real estate men will be there for the inspection of visitors.

A prominent feature in connection with the show which has already resulted in keen competition is the prize of $100 which has been offered by the directors of the Boston Real Estate Exchange for the best plan of a small dwelling to cost not exceeding $4,000 to be shown at the Exposition. The prize will be awarded on the basis of tasteful design, economical construction and interior arrangement. Secretary Viaux of the real estate exchange has received many letters about this competition, one of which came from California. Another important and interesting exhibit will be that of "The Home Beautiful." This will be a complete six room dwelling, of good, substantial design and practical from every standpoint. It will represent a cost of $15,000.

FLAG DAY FOR QUINCY

Anniversary of Inauguration of Two Presidents

Today is the anniversary of the inauguration of JOHN ADAMS as President of these United States, and he had the distinction of being the first President inaugurated at Washington. President Washington was first inaugurated at New York, and four years later at Philadelphia.

Like the anniversary today, it was on a Saturday, March 4, 1797, that John Adams ,after a service of eight years as Vice President, became President. Thomas Jefferson first took the oath as Vice President in the Senate chamber, and pronounced a high compliment to John Adams. He then led the way to the chamber of the House where the inauguration of Adams took place. The new President spoke at some length, eulogized Washington who was present, denied quite emphatically that he favored a stronger government than that ordained in the Constitution, and pronounced the oath after the chief justice of the United States.

Abigail Adams, teh President's wife and mother of a future President, was not present at ceremonies as will be seen by letters written by the President.

PRESIDENTS LETTERS.

Under date of March 5, 1797, Mr. Adams writes to Mrs. Adams:

"Your dearest friend never had a more trying day than yesterday. A solemn scene it was indeed, and it was made more affecting to me by the presence of the General, whose countenance was as serene and unclouded as the day. * * When the ceremony was over, he came and made me a visit, and cordially congratulated me, and wished my administration might be happy, successful and honorable. It is now settled that I am to go into his house. It is whispered that he intends to take French leave tomorrow. My chariot is finished and I made my first appearance in it yesterday. It is simple, but elegant enough. My horses are young but clever.

In the chamber of the House of Representatives was a multitude as great as the space could contain, and I believe, but Washington's. The sight of the sun setting full orbed, and another rising, though less splendid, was a novelty. Justice Ellsworth administered the oath with great energy. I was unwell and did not know whether I should get through it or not. I did, however. How the business was received I know not, only I have been told that Mason ,the treaty publisher, said we should lose nothing by the change, for he never heard such a speech in public in his life. All agree that, taken altogether, it was the sublimest thing ever exhibited in America."

SCARCELY A DRY EYE

Again, March 9, Mr. Adams writes:

"I have no letter this week and begin to fear that your respect to our late President has laid a foundation for a sick spring and summer. The public papers must give you an account of proceedings, which I am wholly unable to describe. What judgment is formed of my part of the late transactions by my friends, or my enemies, I know not. There is a reserve in both beyond my comprehension. * * * It is the general report that there was more weeping than there has been at the representation of any tragedy. But whether it was whether from the loss of their beloved President, or from the accession of an unbeloved one * * or whatever cause, I know not.

"One thing I know; I am a being of too much sensibility to act my part well in such an exhibition. * * I have ventured to say things, both in that speech and in my farewell to the Senate, so open to scoffs and sarcasm

WIERD AND FANCIFUL

Private Masquerade at Alpha Hall a Brilliant Affair

The most brilliant affair of the season was held Friday evening in Alpha hall, where over 50 couples gathered to participate in a masquerade given under the auspices of the well known committee of five, Perley E. Barbour, William E. Cooper, Angelo Conti, Walter P. Ela and Elmer F. Ricker.

As the guests arrived at the head of the stairs they were challenged by a burly Somerville policeman, who on closer investigation proved to be no other than J. W. Graham.

As the grand march was in progress a vision was presented to the spectator which might have been little short of awe-inspiring if he were not initiated. All sorts of wierd and fanciful costumes and masks were on exhibit, and it would have been a task for Sherlock Holmes to discover the identity of the wearers before the unmasking took place. As the eyes of the spectator became accustomed to the dazzling aspect a number of the costumes were noted. Among the most striking were :

George Washington—Walter P. Ela.
Martha Washington—Mrs. Ela.
Cowboy—Elmer Ricker.
Military Maid—Mrs. Ricker.
Convict—Perley E. Barbour.
Gypsy—Mrs. Barbour.
Italian fusileer—Angelo Conti.
Old Maid—Mrs. W. E. Cooper.
Lady—Dr. C. R. Marstin.
Little Girl—Mrs. C. R. Marstin.
Carmencita—Mrs. W. E. Burke.
Friar—W. E. Burke.
Tramp—Dr. S. C. Hardwick.
Scotch girl—Mrs. S. C. Hardwick.
Dolly Varden—Mrs. A. M. Parker.
Monk—A. M. Parker.
Clown—Dr. Arthur Gould of Braintree.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL

THE HIGHEST CLASS OF LICENSE—A THEATRE LICENSE, is now issued to Music Hall and the highest rating both "as a whole" and "for safety of audience"—"Excellent"—is given. Previously the fire exists and facilities for fire prevention were ample for a Hall License, but to obtain the present highest class of License and rating, the whole main exit has been torn down and made absolutely fire-proof, large automatic smoke and fire vents have been constructed over the stage, all scenery has been made fire-proof, and the previous generous exit facilities have been very greatly increased. There are now ten (10) doors opening from the Hall, and six (6) separate exits, 2 of 8 feet each, 1 of 7 1-2 feet, 2 of 5 feet each and 1 of 3 1-2 feet, a total of 37 feet of exit. All exits are lighted continually by both gas and electricity. There is an asbestos curtain, by which the stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are chemical fire extinguishers, and fire pails throughout the Hall.

The Location is in the heart of the city. The street cars with double tracks pass the door.

The Elaborate, Permanent Decorations which have recently been put up are most attractive, and add much to the appearance of the Hall.

The Floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The Ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded Hall. A large fan has recently been installed.

The Hall is Lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The Heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

To Darken the Hall, there are special window fittings so that at noonday the Hall can be made as dark as at midnight.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish an absolutely safe and large and really first class Hall.

BILL ELLIS' MINSTRELS

Prove a Great Attraction at Unitarian Chapel

The second entertainment in the course under the auspices of the Young People's Religious Union of the First church was a minstrel show, being the last appearance of Bill Ellis' famous world minstrels, which was given at the chapel Friday evening by the young people of the church, before a large and appreciative audience. The program was a pleasing one, and was carried out in a manner that reflected great credit to Miss Catherine Saville, the chairman in charge.

When the curtain was drawn aside at a little after 8 o'clock it disclosed a double row of black shiny faces of nearly half a hundred young ladies and gentlemen, the white face of J. Harry Slade in the centre forming quite a contrast. Miss Ruth Penniman was the accompanist, and the bones were rattled by Miss Ella Packard and Walter C. Rogers, while Mrs. Wallace B. Carr and William E. Weston shook the tambos.

In the double row which comprised the circle were: Mrs. James H. Slade, the soloist; Miss Minnie Packard, Miss Ruth Packard, Miss Dorothy Packard, Miss Lela Smith, Miss Roberta Smith, Miss Elsie Turner, Miss Louise Steele, Miss Addie Towne, Miss Georgiana Waldron, Miss Gerna Saville, Miss Catherine Saville, Miss Stella Barker, Miss Lucile Elwell, Miss Alice Arnold and Miss Edith Hyland, Rev. C. B. Ames, Jack Pfaffmann, Clark Saville, Kenneth Edwards, William Edwards, Harry Glover, Walter Nichols, Bruce Saville, Fred Howe, Everett Rhodes, Herbert Johnson, Maurice Blaukmur, Brewster Walker and Roy Weston.

Part one of the program included solos by the four end people and Mrs. James H. Slade. Between these numbers there were the usual jokes by the four end men, which were very

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

DEPRESS THE TRACKS.

Lorimer thought that because they whitewashed him he would be whiter than snow.

The man who stole the hive of bees in the District of Columbia may yet get stung.

It sometimes occurs that an investigating committee takes the place of whitewash.

The Chicago restaurant that was robbed of one day's receipts—$3,000 must have entertained a small poker party during the day.

"The old flag is good enough for our school houses," says the Rochester Post-Express, but an appropriation is better.

Under the proposed anti-treat law in Indian, one may buy another a drink if he thinks it will save his life. And many a man will be found "just dying for a drink."

Congress has found that raising the price of postage on publications of any sort, is not desired by the people. No, Mr. Congressmen, we do not want light and truth taxed. If you will stop paying the railroads $47,000,000 for carrying mails, and cut that sum in two which will still be ample the post office will show a large surplus.

Many of the Senators are awfully afraid the people will soon elect their senators, instead of permitting the corporations to name them through state legislatures, as at present. If the constitution is amended so as to permit this reform in electing senators, it is certain the trusts will have a hard time sticking their attorneys into Senatorial seats.

We often wonder how we ever got along with a four-page Ledger and we shall not be content until it is even bigger for Quincy can surely support an eight-page daily. Friday's advertising would not have gone in a four-page paper and left any room for news as six pages was hardly large enough. Every page was full of good local news, home happenings that we all want to know about. Friday is a popular day with advertisers for it catches the Friday evening buyers as well as those of Saturday and the City is attractive as to window display and the sidewalks crowded with shoppers. Are you doing all the business you can handle? If not why not advertise in the "Home Daily" and get busy. Now is the time.

Before we knew the make-up of the committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce which drafted the "Real Boston" bill, we commented on the fact that it favored the rich cities and towns at the expense of those less favored. It is not surprising when the make up of the committee is known. It included March G. Bennett, Slyvester Baxter of Malden, George H. Cox of Cambridge, William M. Flanders of Newton, Reginald G. Robbins of Milton, Leslie C. Weed of Brookline, Robert A. Woods of Boston and Sydney R. Wrightington of Lexington.

The so-called rich towns of Brookline, Malden, Newton and Milton are all represented, but not Quincy, or Somerville, or Everett, or Chelsea, or Waltham, or Hyde Park, or Woburn, or Weymouth, and many others, but seven or eight of the 40 cities and towns being represented. If the district is awake, the assesments to be levied for the expenses of "Real Boston" will be upon "assessed valuation" and not upon consumption of water.

Senator Lodge Puts Through Hingham Bridge Bill

Again Quincy should extend thanks to Senator Lodge. A Washington dispatch to the Globe says:

Senator Lodge took advantage of a pause in the senate today to put through the bill for a bridge across Weymouth Back river. This bill was passed by the house yesterday. It provides for the construction of a bridge at a cost of $100,000. Half this sum will be paid by the government and the other half by Weymouth, Quincy and Hingham.

SENATOR LODGE

Only a legislator with the experience of Senator Lodge could have secured the passage of this bill which has had many ups and downs, and at times looked hopeless. It will save the city of Quincy and towns of Weymouth and Hingham $50,000.

REAL BOSON VOTES.

Chief executives of 17 cities and towns out of the 40 communities included in the plan of the Boston chamber of commerce for a "real Boston" federation were guests of Mayor Charles E. Hatfield of Newton at a luncheon at the Exchange club yesterday afternoon, says the Globe. Mayor Hatfield called the meeting to obtain an expression of sentiment on the proposed federation plan. Eight executives favored it and seven said they opposed the project.

In the evening after a spirited discussion in which opposition was voiced only by Newton representatives, 200 members of the Boston chamber of commerce adopted by an overwhelming majority on a voice vote a report of its special committee on a "real Boston" bill.

"The great thing the chamber is against is annexation, but such a federation will lead to it," said Winfield S. Slocum, city solicitor of Newton.

timely and created a great deal of merriment.

Then came the olio which opened with two solos by Mons. J. Barraja-Frauenfelder, who sang "A son of the desert am I" and "My Motter." This was followed by two clever entertainers, L. Brewster Walker and Bruce W. Saville who made their first and only appearance on any stage at this performance.

The third number was indicated on the program by three large question marks. This proved to be a mandolin and banjo duet by Jack Hallowell and George Newcomb with Mrs. Lucy Newcomb Emery as accompanist.

Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis followed with several character sketches which meant one long laugh.

"Under the yum-yum tree, that's the yummist place to be" was a laughable skit by Miss Catherine Saville and William E. Weston.

The long program closed by the Packard sisters in one of their laughable skits. Taken as a whole it was one of the best entertainments of its kind given in Quincy for a long time.

J. Q. A. FIELD EXPLAINS PLAN

Believes Railroad Scheme the Best at Water Street

Editor Daily Ledger:

The meeting of the Board of Trade held Wednesday evening, Mar. 1, I attended upon an invitation from the president of the board. Mr. McAnarney was there with the plan from the Commissioners appointed by the courts to eliminate the grade crossings in Quincy. The only plan presented that evening by Mr. McAnarney dealt with the grade crossing at Quincy Adams.

I should refrain from making any comments upon the same, on account of the courtesy of being an invited guest, but as I read the evening "Ledger" of March 2, making their acts public, I now feel justified in placing before the people of Quincy what, in my judgment, is for the best interests of all concerned at Quincy Adams, viz.: going under the railroad at a point above the depot.

The Board of Trade unanimously voted that the plan was not satisfactory to them. I was allowed to ask Mr. McAnarney to re-state the grades as appeared upon that plan which he was pointing out. As I understood from him, the Manufacturers' Association were opposed to going under the railroad at Quincy Adams, passed by a unanimous vote.

Mr. McAnarney stated that the proposed plan went under the railroad, elevating the railroad at that point 5 feet above the present level of the railroad tracks from a point of about 850 feet north of the present School street bridge, to a point at the same disance outh of the proposed crossing at Water street. His statement called for a 60-foot in width bridge. I did not understand him to state the elevation. Said bridge being 60 feet wide, should be, I think, explained to the public.

My statement before the Commission of the bridge and plan I left with them, showed one sidewalk of 6 feet in width, with steps from that sidewalk up onto the platform of the depot. Also posts to strengthen the upper structure upon the edge of the sidewalk, with another line of posts 4 feet in width running up to strengthen the the bridge. That leaves the width of 25 feet each side of the line of posts in the centre for a travelled ways.

What does this mean? It means that there is a width carrying three heavy teams abreast in each opening, as each heavy wagon carries a width of 7 feet outside of hubs, which would be 21 feet, leaving 4 feet extra for the teams upon each side. That makes a passageway of six teams abreast. It seems to me that does not mean a death trap in any sense of the word.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

PROLOGUE.

This story of a young man's honest attempt to "break" the "boss" and the power of the "machine" is an absorbingly intimate portrayal of the working of the "wheels within wheels" in a desperate political struggle of today. The senator, strongly intrenched behind his party "machine," presents an almost invulnerable front, and the conflict between father and son as this young lawyer, single handed, fights for what he honestly believes to be the truth and right holds one with a tremendous sympathetic interest.

CHAPTER I.

BECAUSE PATRICIA SAID "NO."

SOME one was giving a crush dance at the Country club, and Blount, though he was only a week end guest of the Beverleys, was ill natured enough to be resentful. What right had a gay and frivolous world to come and thrust its light hearted happiness upon him when Patricia had said "No?" It was like bullying a cripple, he told himself morosely, and when he had read the single telegram which had come while he was at dinner he went out and found a chair in a corner of the veranda, where the frivolities had not as yet intruded.

Blount was a level eyed, square shouldered young man of an up to date world, and the stock from which he had descended was prosaic and practical rather than poetic or sentimental. But just now he was unconsciously giving a very lifelike imitation of the disappointed lover the world over.

It was thus, and by the merest chance, that Gantry found him. The railroad man at least was unfeignedly glad.

"Pull up a chair," said Blount, not too ungraciously, considering his just cause to be more ungracious. "I was thinking of you just a little while ago, Dick. I saw your name in the list of transcontinental representatives to the traffic meeting, and—well, at the present moment I think you are the one man in the world I wanted most to meet."

"That sounds good to me," laughed Dick Gantry, settling himself comfortably in a lazy chair and feeling in his pockets for a cigar. "The 'effete east' has corralled you, hasn't it, Evan? I thought maybe it would when I heard you were taking the postgraduate frills in the Harvard law school. By the way, how much longer are you in for?"

"I am out of the law school, if that is what you mean," said Blount—"out and admitted to the bar. If you get into trouble with the Boston police let me know and I'll ask for a change of venue to the greasewood hills and Judge Lynch's court."

"Are you ever coming back to them, Blount? I believe you told me once in the old college days that you were western born."

"I told you the truth, and until tonight I never thought much about going back," was Blount's rather cryptogrammatic answer.

"But now you are thinking of it?" inquired the railroad man, waking up. "That's good. We're needing a few bright young lawyers mighty bad. Is that why I'm the particular fellow you wanted to meet?"

Blount passed the newly come telegram across the interval between the two chairs. "Read that," he said.

Gantry smoothed the square of yellow paper carefully and held it up to the softened glow of the electric ceiling globe. Its date line carried the name of the chief city in the "greasewood country," the capital of the state, and the time markings sufficiently indicated its late arrival:

To Evan Shelby Blount, Standish Apartments, Boston:

You have had everything that money could buy you, and you owe me nothing but an occasional sight of your face. If you are not tied to some woman's apron string, why can't you come west and grow up with your native state?

DAVID BLOUNT.

It was characteristic of Gantry that he folded the telegram in the original creasings before he handed it back.

"Well?" said Blount when the pause had grown overlong.

"I was just thinking," was the reflective rejoinder. "We used to be fairly chummy in the old Ann Arbor days, Evan, and yet I never knew till this blessed minute that Senator Blount was your father."

"He was and is," was the quiet reply. "I supposed everybody knew it."

"I didn't," Gantry denied, adding, "What you don't tell people about yourself would make a pretty big book if it were printed. Long ago you admitted to me that you were western born, but you never told me any more."

"Perhaps it was because there was so little to tell. I had a boyhood, like other boys—or, no, possibly it wasn't quite the usual. I was born on the Circle Bar when the ranch was a hard day's drive from the nearest shipping corral on the railroad. At twelve I could 'ride line,' 'cut out' and 'rope down' like any other ranch bred youngster, and I had never seen a town bigger than Painted Hat."

"And what happened when you were twelve?" queried Gantry.

"The greatest misfortune that can ever come to a half grown boy, Dick. My mother died."

"That was hard," Gantry assented; then, "Your father married again."

"Not for some years," Blount qualified. "But for me the heavens were fallen. I was sent away to school, and from school I went to college, to Europe and back here to the law school. In all that time I've never seen the Circle Bar or my native state; have never been west of Omaha."

"Then the senator's—your father's—political life has never touched you?"

"It touched me on the sympathetic side, Dick. I saw a large hearted, open handed old cattle king wading into the muddy stream of politics to gratify an ambition that wasn't his own—a woman's ambition. In order that the woman might mix and mingle in Washington society for a brief minute or two he got himself elected to fill out an unexpired term of two months in the United States senate—bought it, some said. That was three years ago, wasn't it? But Washington hasn't forgotten. When I was down there last winter the 5 o'clock tea people were still recalling Mrs. Blount's gowns and the wild western naïvete of 'the Hon. Senator Sagebrush.'"

Gantry was chuckling softly.

"Land of love, Evan," he said, "you're an educated man, all right, but you've got a lot to learn yet—about the senator and his politics, I mean. Great snipes, man, he isn't in it for the social frills and furbelows! He never was. Let me intimate a few things. Politically speaking, David Blount is the biggest man in his state today. He can have anything he wants, from the head of the ticket down. You spoke rather sneeringly just now of his two months in the senate. He might have gone back if he had wanted to, and he actually did a much more difficult thing—named his successor. I can tell you the situation out in the greasewood country if you want to know it."

"Make it simple," was Blount's condition.

"The outlook for us is precisely what it is in a dozen other states this year—everything promising a renewal of the bullheaded legislative fight on the railroads," said Gantry. "There is only one issue before the people, and that is the Transcontinental railway. The reformers, as they call themselves, would like to legislate us out of exist-

MILTON

The play given under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the Episcopal church was well attended. The parts were well taken and the play met with the approval of the audience.

The Silent Five defeated the Brockton Independents on Wednesday by a score of 31 to 8.

P. E. Bates and Jacob Turner are running for positions on the board of Selectmen in opposition to the present board.

The police and fire veterans feel confident that they will be awarded pensions at the coming town meeting

The annual ball of Camp Oliver W. Peabody, Sons of Veterans, was held Monday evening in Town hall. Music was furnished by Linton's orchestra. A large crowd turned out for the affair.

Milton High gave Canton High an overwhelming defeat in a league game this week. The chances are bright for Milton lads to win the league championship.

Politics are unusually quiet about town but there are those who are of the opinion that it is the calm before the storm.

The fire department has been busy this week responding to alarms in all parts of the town. On Tuesday box 25 was sounded for the big fire on Brush Hill road in the garage owned by Murray Howe. Two automobiles valued at $10,000 were totally ruined and the building valued at $1,000 was burned to the ground. The chauffeur just escaped with his life through a window in the rear of the garage.

On the same day the fire department responded to a call from box 12 for a small fire on Thatcher street. Steamer 19 of Mattapan also responded to the call. The horses attached to the steamer became unmanagable and driver Hayes was thrown off the seat. Three ribs were broken by the fall and his body was badly bruised. The injuries while not fatal were quite serious.

Box 29 was sounded Wednesday morning at 9.21 for a chimney fire in a house on Ridgedale road occupied by John Murphy.

On Thursday morning at 5.40 the fire department was aroused by a call at box 12. The fire was in a small store on Thatcher street owned by Herbert Flaherty. The loss was about $100.

The open dance at Cunningham gym will be held on the evening of March 15.

INCREASE FOR PASTOR.

Enthusiasm and good feeling prevailed at the annual meeting on Thursday evening at the Atlantic Memorial church and there was a large attendance. Henry Von Emdon was president and William F. Cummings clerk. The meeting elected Paul Butler as treasurer, W. N. Ware as one of the directors and Millard F. Baker as auditor. The bylaws were revised and the board of trustees increased to five; the new members are Charles F. Lettley, Charles K. Hadlock and Charles A. Hall.

The financial report showed all bills for current expenses paid and a balance in the treasury. The report of the building committee showed that when all pledges were paid the mortgage on the $24,000 plant would be reduced to $4,500. It was voted to increase the salary of Rev. Thomas W. Davison, the poplar pastor from $1200 to $1500.

ATLANTIC TO CELEBRATE

Grand Time on Fourth of July Is Assured

Atantic is to have a Fourth of July celebration this year that is planned to eclipse any of their previous efforts. Last year there was no separate celebration of the national holiday in this section of the city as the residents combined with the general committee of Quincy in the celebration. This year however the ward must unbottle its enthusiasm.

This was decided last evening at a meeting of the July 4th permanent organization. The meeting was held at the residence of ex-Representative Frank E. Badger on Clive street, which was attended by 25 of the leading citizens of the ward.

The question of having a local celebration this year, or combining in the general celebration as last year, was discussed, after which it was unanimously voted to hold a celebration in Ward Six.

Plans were discussed and arrangements made to canvas for funds. The general committee hope to make this year's affair eclipse any previous efforts.

It is planned to have bonfires the night before. An antique and horrible parade in the morning, to be followed by base ball games and other field sports, as well as water sports. A game of ball in the afternoon between two crack nines, and band concerts. In the evening there will be a band concert and display of fireworks. Committees on the different events will be appointed at the next meeting.

Divided Payment Plan

is not like the old installment plan still in vogue in many stores. Our divided payment plan is simply extending credit accommodations with the privilege of dividing payments by the week or month.

The larger part of our trade is cash, yet sometimes you need or desire a new piece of furniture and do not care to draw money from the bank to pay for it, then our divided payment plan comes in.

This little accommodation has proven to be a winning policy for us and we are willing to help you buy your new outfit at any time.

We do not expect impossibilities. Our object is accommodation.

We are here to stay. We expect to sell to you again. We hope to furnish the homes of your children. We want to always hold your good will, and the way to do it is by being sincere and fair.

TYPICAL WINTER WEATHER.

February Temperature a Little Below Normal—Rain or Snow on Sixteen Days.

Typical winter weather conditions prevailed throughout February. The mean temperature of the month was 22.9 degrees, which is 2.0 degrees below the normal, and the lowest for February since 1907. Last year it was 25.7 degrees. Although the month was steadily colder than the average, there were no very low temperatures, the minimum reached being one degree above zero on the 6th, while the highest was 52 degrees on the 26th.

The total precipitation of 3.20 inches was .80 inch less than the usual amount and the smallest for February since 1905. In 1910 the total was 4.03 inches. A measurable quantity of rain or snow fell on 16 days, the most on any day being 1.00 inch on the 4th. During the month there were 23 inches of snow and the ground was continuously covered from the 7th to the 26th. There was rather less relative humidity than usual and about the average cloudiness and sunshine.

There was much less wind than is customary, the mean velocity of 19.1 miles per hour being the lowest on record for February. The maximum velocity was 55 miles per hour from the southeast on the 4th, and the only other gale of the month was that of the 27th, when 50 miles per hour was recorded. The prevailing direction was northwest. An aurora was observed on the evening of the 21st.—L. A. Wells, Blue Hill Observatory.

MUST TAKE OUR MEDICINE.

Judge Hammond of the supreme coudrt overruled on Thursday says the Globe, all objections made by Boston, Cambridge, Melrose, Hyde Park, Belmont and Wakefield to the apportionment made by commissioners appointed by the court for the cost of the maintenance of the metropolitan park system for a period of five years beginning July 1 next.

The judge said: "I have considerable doubt as to the right of the commissioners to make separate assessments of such part of the expense of the Charles river basin as is to be assessed upon the cities and towns of the metropolitan districts, but have thought the best course in the present state of the case is to accept the award made by the commissioners."

BOYS MEETING.

The meeting for younger boys in the Y. M. C. A. this morning was attended by over 200 boys. All the announcing of songs and speakers was done by means of the stereopticon. Four illustrated songs were sung by the boys, "Throw out the life line" "Work for the Night is coming" "I love to tell the story" and "Stand up, stand up for Jesus." Twelve conference delegates gave three minute addresses telling of the help they received from the conference. The meeting was one of the best of the season and the attendance was one of the largest yet.

BRIEFS

Depress the tracks.

A commodious three apartment house is being constructed on the west side of Sixth avenue. Mr. Zirlstein, the tailor is the owner.

Rev. C. E. Jackson of St. John's church, East Boston is to preach at the Lenten service at Christ church on Wednesday evening.

The monthly meeting of the officers and teachers of First Church Sunday school is to be held in the chapel on Monday evening at half-past seven.

Isaiah M. Stewart has purchased an estate on Billings road.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Epworth League which was to have been held Monday evening, has been postponed one week and will be held in the vestry of the church, Monday evening March 13th.

Rev. Frederick J. Walton, assistant minister at St. Pauls church, Boston, is to preach at the Thursday evening service at St. Chrysostom's church.

The eighth grade pupils of the Quincy school held a successful candy sale Monday afternoon. The proceeds will go toward retuning and refinishing the piano.

Fragment society of First church is to have an apron and candy sale in the chapel on Wednesday afternoon followed at half past six by one of their appetizing suppers.

Rev. Richard E. Armstrong is to address the Men's club of Christ church in the church Monday evening after which there will be a social hour in the parish house.

The monthy business meeting of the Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church will be held in the parish rooms Friday afternoon at two o'clock. At this meeting members will contribute a dollar and tell how they earned it. During Lent the Guild will meet every Friday afternoon and do charitable sewing and women of the parish whether members of the Guild or not are invited to assist in this Lenten work.

A new market was opened last Saturday by Howard Rogers in the biulding formerly occupied by Whitman's dry goods store.

The play given by the Signal Corps proved so good that the boys have received several invitations to reproduce "The Game" in other towns.

Rev. Fannie E. Austin will occupy the pulpit at the Universalist church Sunday morning. Miss Austin comes as a candidate having just closed a four years' successful pastorate in Maine and all should make an effort to hear her on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew S. Odom of Hanna street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

Owing to the illness of the caretaker at the Adams house and the death of one of its members the annual meeting of Adams Chapter, D. R. on Monday afternoon will probably have to be adjourned. If so decided due notice will be given members of date and place.

Insular Officials Not Involved In Friar Land Frauds

HOUSE COMMITTEE'S FINDING

Majority and Minority Reports Agree That Public Officials Were Guided by Best Interpretation of the Law—Not In Accord as to Sugar Trust's Acquisition of 56,000 Acres of Land Through Poole's Agency

Washington, March 4.—Complete exoneration of the officers of the Philippine islands government of all charges of irregularities or improprieties in connection with the administration, sales or leases of lands in the Philippines; yet on the other hand pointed criticisms of the inadequacy of the present laws to prevent monopolies in what are known as "the friar lands," are expressed in both the majority and minority reports of the house committee on insular affairs submitted to the house.

The charge made on the floor of the house a year ago by Representative Martin of Colorado, that the so-called sugar trust had acquired 56,000 acres of the "friar lands," led to an investigation of the entire question of the administration of public lands as well as "friar lands."

Both reports concur in the opinion that the organic act of 1902 in limiting the individuals to forty acres and corporations to 2500 acres in the amount of public lands that may be acquired does not impose the same restrictions on the disposition of the friar lands.

The majority report argues that as a practical expedient the "friar lands" should be disposed of in larger quantities to attract buyers, while the minority claim that the sale of the "friar lands" in large tracts may develop a system of absentee landlordism as obnoxious to the Filipinos as that of the friars against whom they once rebelled.

The latter also suggests that a friendly proceeding be begun in the courts by the officers of the Filipino government to determine the exact legal status of the "friar lands" with respect to public lands regulations.

As to the acquisition by E. L. Poole of 56,000 acres of the "friar lands" on behalf of Horace Havemeyer, Charles J. Welch and Charles H. Senff, both reports declare the public officers involved were not culpable, being guided by the best available interpretations of the law. The majority members, however, deny that the land was obtained by the sugar trust, while the minority assert that if the sugar trust did not acquire it, "the next-door neighbor to the sugar trust" did, and that there is apparent a community of interest evidencing a holding by one person of upwards of 56,000 acres of land.

The minority accepts the situation as unavoidable, but holds the incident up as a warning against "further exploitation of the lands by American capitalists," and suggests that no more sales of large tracts of the "friar lands" be consummated pending the action of congress or the outcome of court proceedings that might be instituted by the Philippine officers.

There will be a third report of the investigation, embodying the views of the Democrats on the committee, prepared by Representative Jones of Virginia, but it is not yet ready. It is understood that the Jones report, like the others, absolves the Philippine officials of wrong-doing and concedes that they acted within the interpretation of law laid down by the law officers by whose opinion they were bound to be guided; but holds that their action was in pursuance of a mistaken policy.

Report Favors New Mexico

Washington, March 4.—The subcommittee of the senate committee on territories decided to recommend favorable action on the constitution of New Mexico. The house already has adopted the constitution.

SUNNY MONDAY

Sunny Monday laundry soap contains marvelous dirt-starting qualities not found in any other soap. It makes the dirt fly before it, and saves time, rubbing, clothes and backs. Sunny Monday can be used in any kind of water—hard, soft, cold, luke warm, hot or boiling—and the results are always the same.

A little after 10.30 the masqueraders filed down to the lower hall for refreshments. The sight that met their eyes as they entered the room was beyond question the most beautiful of its kind even seen in Quincy. The color scheme was carried out in red, with streamers, bells, potted azaleas, and table decorations of various sorts, all harmonizing. The centre table was decorated with a magnificent centre piece surrounded by candlesticks with red candles and red shades. Above a large bell with a lattice of red crepe paper radiating from it gave the finishing touch to the artistic effect. In the corners of the room and around the sides were palms and azaleas. The smaller tables, seating four each were duplicates in miniature of the large centre table which seated twelve.

While the guests were eating the orchestra played popular music and all joined in singing the choruses of the familiar tunes.

The menu:

Lobster a la Newberg
Chicken Mayonaise Fancy Sandwiches
Olives Salted Nuts
Masquerade ices Algonquin bombs
Fancy cakes Confections
Coffee

The masquerade ices were in shapes of animals.

After the dishes were cleared three solos were sung by Dr. Arthur Gould of Braintree with his wife as accompanist.

A baby carriage was trundled in bearing the prizes which were awarded as follows: First for women, Mrs. S. C. Hardwick a Highland lassie; second, Mrs. Elmer Ricker, Military girl. For men, first Alfred Remick, hobo; second Ira M. Whittemore, Buster Brown. The prizes for women were large bunches of violets inserted in hollowed out cabbage heads. The men received Jack in boxes with cigars in the bottom.

Before the guests returned to the ball room, after the refreshments had been consumed, three rousing cheers were given for Dr. Gould the singer, and for the committee.

The committee of five spared no effort to make the evening a success and it was generally agreed among the guests that nothing was lacking in the matter of arrangements, and that things were as nearly perfect as possible.

Dancing was resumed at 11.30, and as the hour of midnight approached enthusiasm waxed greater. The final waltz presented a novelty. As the dancers were whirling about the floor rolls of confetti were thrown into the air, and in descednding caught on the wires which had been strung overhead fluttering down upon the dancers.

The music was furnished by Wilson's orchestra and all the musicians were in costume.

The McDonald-Weber Co., of Boston furnished the refreshments.

The task of giving a faithful description of the decorations and costumes would require the brush and pen of an artist, but the meagre details that have been given must satisfy the reader in the absence of these.

COURT HOUSE APPROPRIATION.

Although Quincy is deeply interested, not much has been heard about the bill pending in the legislature for an additional appropriation for the court house building. It has been found that while the amount authorized has been enough to purchase the site and erect the building, it is not sufficient to furnish the building, and authority has been asked to expend an additional sum of $20,000.

CITY SQUARE RUNAWAY.

A horse owned by John Q. A. Field ran away in City Square yesterday afternoon, but was captured before any damage had been done. The horse attached to a buggy was left standing in front of the Savings Bank building. Suddenly, for some unknown reason, the horse started off on his own hook toward home. He put on quite a burst of speed as he went through City Square, and then settled down to his regular gait. When near Emerson's carriage shop a young man ran out and stopped the horse and carried him back to the Savings Bank building where he was rewarded with a dime.

WORK AT LYNN STOPPED.

The Lynn Item reports that President Charles S. Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad has given his word that upon receipt of a letter addressed to him by the Mayor of Lynn asking him to do so, he will immediately order the work now being done on the plans for the elevation of the Boston & Maine railroad tracks in this city suspended pending a settlement of the arguments being made for depression. Work was stopped Friday.

TODAY'S COURT.

Frank R. Grover was arraigned for trespass at Randolph. Case continued until next Saturday.

Thomas J. Joyce was fined $10 for drunkenness at Milton.

The continued case of Harry Solon, for assault on Mrs. Samuel Goldberg at Quincy on the holiday, came up this morning, when he was found not guilty and discharged. This was a case that grew out of trouble over children of Mrs. Goldberg, whom it was claimed Solon had assaulted. Mrs. Goldberg and Solon had a war of words during which it was alleged he knocked the woman down.

The continued case of Antonio Valentine of Quincy for violation of the liquor law, was heard and the defendant discharged, the government abandoning the case. The case was on the charge of keeping and exposing intoxicating liquors. The date of the warrant was Feb. 18 and the police were not allowed to tell the conditions found on Feb. 19, so abandoned the case.

GRANITE MEN OUT.

The granite men at Hardwick, Vt., are still out and, in all 700 men are idle. It is understood the manufacturers have offered a minimum of 41 cents per hour, or $3.28 per day, while the men still hold out for 42 cents an hour or $3.36 per day.

LOSS TO GRANITE FIRM.

The sheds of the American Granite Co. at Montpelier, Vt., were destroyed by fire Friday with a loss of $10,000. Many workmen had narrow escapes in attempting to save their tools.

HIDDEN DANGERS

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Quincy Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the coming of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Quincy proof:

H. A. Vinton, 1366 Hancock Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills completely cured me of kidney trouble which had been in my system for at least ten years. I had pains in my back and loins and I believed my trouble to be rheumatism. I consulted a doctor and tried many remedies but found only temporary relief. Being advised to take Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box and began their use. They quickly drove away the pains in my back and my health is better today than it has been for a long time."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

LAND COURT

To Sarah E. Conery of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth; James C. Fraser and Robert H. Fraser of Wollaston in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Henry B. Black of Everett, in the County of Middlesex and said Commonwealth; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Elizabeth Malcolm of Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, to register and confirm her title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Quincy, bounded Northwesterly by Blake Street forty-five (45) feet; Northeasterly by land of James C. Fraser ninety (90) feet; Southeasterly by land of Robert H. Fraser forty-five (45) feet; and Southwesterly by land of Henry B. Black ninety (90) feet; being Lot No. 18 on plan recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book 735, Page 640.

Petitioner claims as appurtenant to the above described land a right of way over said Blake Street as shown on said plan.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the twentieth day of March A. D. 1911, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this seventeenth day of February in the year nineteen hundred and eleven.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

ence. We shall beat the tomtom and do our best to stay on earth."

"Naturally," said Blount. "And my father—how does he stand?"

"The idea of your having to ask me!" exclaimed Gantry. "But really I wish I could tell you. There are a good many people in our neck of woods who would like to know. It will make all the difference in the world when it comes to a showdown."

"Why will it?"

"Because, apart from the railroad and the anti-railroad factions, there is a very complete and smooth running machine organization."

"And my father is identified with the machine?"

"Land of glory!" he ejaculated. "Where have you been burying yourself, Evan? Didn't I just tell you that he is the biggest man in the state? Oh, no"—with heavy irony—"he isn't identified with the machine; he merely owns it and runs it."

"Ah," said Blount, and a little later, "Thank you, Dick; I am pretty badly out of touch, as you've discovered." Then he changed the subject abruptly. "How long will your traffic meeting last?"

"We practically finished today. An hour or two on Monday will settle it."

"After which you'll go west?"

"By the Monday noon train, if I can make it."

Silence for a time until Blount broke in upon Gantry's tapping of the dance music rhythm with: "If I can get ready I may go with you, Dick. Would you mind?"

"Yes; I would mind so much that I'd willingly miss a train and worry out a few more of the chilly Boston hours rather than lose the chance of having you along. Ever meet your father's-er—the present Mrs. Blount, Evan?" he asked suddenly.

"No."

"She is a fine woman," Gantry ventured.

"So I have understood." This time Blount's reply was icy. But now Gantry's eyes were twinkling, and he pressed his advantage.

"You'll have to reckon with her if you go to the greasewood country, Evan. Next to your father, she is the court of last resort. Indeed, there are a good many who say that she is the court."

Blount said nothing. Nevertheless Gantry tried once more:

"Not interested, Evan?"

Blount turned and looked his companion coldly in the eyes.

"Not in the slightest degree, Dick. Will you take that for your answer now and remember it hereafter?"

"Sure!" laughed the railroad man. "I didn't know it was a sore spot with you."

He found a match and relighted his cigar. When he began again he was still thinking of the "apron string" clause in the senator's telegram.

"I can't understand how any man with western blood in his veins could ever be content to marry and settle down in this overcivilized neck of woods," he said.

"Can't you?" Blount smiled, with large lenience.

"No, I can't," asserted the westerner, adding: "Of course I don't know the eastern young woman. She may be all that is lovely and enticing"—

"She is," declared Blount, with the air of one who had lived long enough to know.

"You say that as if you'd been taking a few lessons," Gantry laughed. Then, with the friendly impudence which only a college comradeship could excuse, "Is she here tonight?"

"No."

"Tell me about her," Gantry begged. "I don't often read a love story, but I like to hear 'em."

"There isn't much to tell, Dick," said Blount. "I've known her for a year, and I've loved her from the first day. That is chapter 1, and chapter 2 ends the story with one small word. She says 'No.'"

"The dickens she does!" said Gantry in hearty sympathy. "Tough, isn't it, old man? What's the obstacle?"

"It is Miss Anners' career. She has been studying at home and abroad in preparation for social settlement work in the large cities. Of course I knew about it. But I thought—I hoped"—

"You hoped it was only a young woman's fad, which it probably is," Gantry cut in.

"Y-yes, I'm afraid that was just what I did hope, Dick. But I couldn't talk against it. Confound it all, you can't go about smashing ideals for the people you love best!"

It was quite late when Gantry, pleading weariness on the score of his hard week's work at the railroad meeting, went to bed.

In the long talk with Gantry Blount had learned many things about the political situation in his native state—things which were enlightening, if not particularly encouraging.

Oddly enough, he had not recognized in Gantry a skillful special pleader for the railroad interests; hence he was preparing to go to the new field with a rather strong prepossession in favor of the defendant corporation. Gantry had intimated pretty broadly that there was room for an assistant corporation counsel for the railroad, with headquarters in the capital of his native state. Blount saw at once that the requirements would be political rather than legal, and in his mind's eye he saw himself standing firmly as the defender of legitimate business rights in a region where popular prejudice was capable of rising to anarchistic heights.

The picture rather pleased him. He would not have been a true descendant of the fighting Blounts of Tennessee if the prospect of a conflict had been other than inspiring.

PET MEASURES OF PRESIDENT

Many Passed During Session of Present Congress

RECIPROCITY MUST GO OVER

Date For Calling Extra Session Not Decided Upon—Magazine Men Win In Senate and Big Appropriation Bills Are Passed—Senate Concurs In House Bill Which Makes Peary a Rear Admiral

Washington, March 4.—Having abandoned hope of seeing reciprocity passed by the present congress, President Taft late yesterday declared that he had noticed the setting sun, and that he also had seen a new moon in the heavens.

The president has not yet decided when he will issue his proclamation calling the next congress together, nor has the date been fixed.

Despite the fact that the measure which above all others he desired to see passed at this session did not become a law, the president is rejoicing over the large number of bills he favored which have been passed.

The judiciary codification bill he considers one of the most important additions to the legal procedure of the country passed in the last half century. The provision for the fortification of the Panama canal was particularly pleasing to him.

Much has been accomplished by the present session, he feels, which will be of lasting benefit to the country. He had no unkind words for the dying congress because it could not see its way clear to pass his reciprocity measure. He is waiting for the "new moon" of the coming congress to fulfill his desires in that direction.

The senate last evening passed the postoffice appropriation bill, carrying about $258,000,000, after striking from it the provision increasing to 4 cents a pound the postal rate on the advertising sections of the large magazines. Postmaster General Hitchcock sat in the chamber while the bill was under consideration, and witnessed the defeat of the plan that he had recommended.

Before passing the postoffice bill the senate passed the sundry civil and the naval bills, two more of the great supply measures for administration of the government. The $3,000,000 to fortify the canal was approved, and the senate joined with the house in giving the tariff board $200,000.

The plans of friends of Robert E. Peary to secure congressional recognition of his polar achievements progressed rapidly when the house, by a vote of 154 to 34, passed an amended senate bill, according him honors.

The original senate bill authorized the house of representatives to appoint Peary a rear admiral in the navy, to be carried as an additional number in grade, and to place him upon the retired list at the highest pay in the grade.

The house amended this so as to authorize the president to place him on the retired list of the corps of civil engineers with the rank of rear admiral, to date from April 6, 1909, and so as to tender the thanks of congress for "his Arctic explorations resulting in reaching the North Pole."

The senate last evening concurred in the house amendments and passed the bill which makes it a law as soon as signed. Under this bill Peary will be placed "on the retired list of the corps of engineers, with the rank of rear admiral, to date from April 6, 1909, with the highest retired pay of that grade under the existing law."

ENTITLED TO DIVORCE

Woman Testifies That Husband Had Over Two Thousand Jags

Denver, March 4.—In her statement to District Judge Riddle just before he granted her a divorce, Mrs. Mattie F. Work said:

"I married David E. Work on Jan. 1, 1891, and during the entire period of our married life, up to the time we separated six months ago, he was intoxicated two or three times a week."

According to the wife, Work accumulated 2033 "jags" during the nineteen years, six months and seventeen days of their married life at two "jags" a week.

JOHN Q. A. FIELD EXPLAINS PLAN

Taking Mr. McAnarney's statement of the grade on the westerly side, 3 per cent shows conclusively it is far from being a hole in the ground. The plan as proposed on the westerly side, as near as I could see, was a modification, to some extent, of the plan I left with the Commission.

On the easterly side of the railroad the grade ascends at the rate of 2.13 per cent toward Franklin street, a distance of 513 feet, which is a very easy grade. The second new way, ascending from the first new way, going toward Water street, in a statement made by Mr. McAnarney, was over 5 per cent for a distance of over 165 feet, thence descending slightly to Water street.

I think in the statement of 5 per cent Mr. McAnarney must have gotten confounded with the 5 per cent grade if the street was raised at Water street as that grade on this new way tending toward Water street, would be a 5 per cent grade, and I believe more than that coming north from Presidents avenue. My plan shows a 3 per cent grade from the point where it turns from the bridge to Water street.

The third new way, which is upon the westerly side, ascends from the first new way from the bridge, a distance of 160 feet to Liberty street.

The fourth new way ascends at a 3 per cent grade to Pleasant street, thence descends at a grade of 2.44 per cent to the crane yard, which makes a very easy grade going or coming from the crane yard. Pleasant street has been extended about 7 per cent grade, which is about that at present.

The grade of Presidents avenue as stated by Mr. McAnarney, is 5 per cent for a distance of about 190 feet. My plan shows 3 per cent.

The grade of Federal avenue instead of showing 5 per cent my plan shows 3 per cent.

The grade of either of the last avenues can be modified, in my judgment, to 2 per cent and not disturb any property adjoining it. As considerable talk was made about raising the grade at School street, which grade would be the same as proposed, as I understand it, by the other plans, is no different from the grade asked for by those plans of Water street. For keeping Water street and raising the grade as it is, connecting that with Franklin street there must be a grade of over 4 1-2 per cent or about 400 to 500 feet each way. The above grades as taken were put upon the plans by Mr. Tupper, whom I believe to be a reliable engineer.

If Water street should be extended over the railroad, as I understand one plan to propose, the approaches to the freight yard, if a cut is made there as stated by Mr. McAnarney of 2 per cent, would be a very hard proposition, looking at it from a point of the teaming interests, as many large stones have to be hauled from there and carried from there with sometimes a number of horses. As a petition was put in to have the crane erected by the Manufacturers' Association at the expense of $15,000, it would seem a hardship to force the railroad to move that crane.

I opposed the crane from the reason which I set forth at that time, believing, as I did, that one-half of the money would erect three good derricks there, giving us three times the facilities they have today, which I believe would be sufficient for a long time to come, but the granite manufacturers thought otherwise, and now they claim as was stated at the meeting the other night, it was a hardship upon the manufacturers to pay $1.50 a load for carrying stone to that crane when the loss of time at the crane comes out of the teamsters and not the manufacturers.

To get a street over the railroad, I think would necessitate taking away all the buildings upon one side or the other of the proposed road, in order to get in such width for teaming purposes as would be required for the long stretch of heavy grades. Water street, I think, at present is 45 feet in width. Taking out two sidewalks would make the street very narrow, as I have said, which would make it imperative for the purpose said street would have to accommodate, it would have to be widened to 60 feet, and the railroad requiring 18 feet headway it would be very expensive for every person doing any business in connecion with that street to ascend those grades.

Whichever plan is taken for the elimination of the grade crossing some would and must be injured by the taking of property which necessarily must be paid for.

The raise in price for teaming at the Quincy Adams station is caused by the delay in unloading, brought about by the manufacturers themselves, in petitioning for the present facilities.

John Q. A. Field.

that I expected them in abundance. I have not yet seen any. I have been so strongly used in this country, so belied and so undefended, that I was determined to say some things as an appeal to posterity. Foreign nations and future times will understand them better than my friends or enemies will own they do.

"My dear wife, your society is invaluable to me, and yet I cannot enjoy it before July, I fear. All will depend upon public events. I am, with an effection that can end only with my life, and I hope not then, your faithful friend and husband.

(Signed) JOHN ADAMS.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Another Quincy President, John Quincy Adams was also inaugurated on March 4, twenty years after his illustrious father in 1825. On that date he revived much of the old and solemn ceremonial, but with him it ended, as the country had now outgrown English and Colonial forms. He was afterwards a member of Congress being first elected in 1831. The greater part of his useful life was spent in the halls of Congress until his death there in 1848.

The houses in Quincy in which the Presidents were born are now preserved by the Daughters of the Revolution and the Quincy Historical Society; also the Presidents' mansion on Adams street where they lived; and their burial place with their wives is beneath the entrance to the First Congregational church, which was built of stone in 1828. Inside the church are mural monuments to both Presidents and their wives.

MASONIC ACTIVITY.

There is notable activity in Rural lodge of Masons in anticipation of the institution of commandery of Knights Templar. There is work at each communication and many applications for degrees. Since the fire all the rooms of the Masonic apartments have been retinted, and the woodwork newly oiled, and attention given to the carpets and upholstery, so that the apartments are unusually attractive. They have been rented to the Quincy commandery of Knights Templar which will meet on the fourth Mondays of each month. It is said the new commandery will be the first new one in Massachusetts for 20 years.

FINE CONCERT.

A benefit concert is to be given in Jordan hall, Boston on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Harvard Edda club. Alice Nielson leading soprano of the Metropolitan and Boston Opera company will be assisted by Henry Eichheim of the Boston Symphony orchestra, Pierian Sodality of Harvard and the Swedish Singing Society Harmoni. The proceeds from the concert will be devoted to the establishment of a scholarship.

The Harvard Edda club is an organization of students of Scandinavian descent attending Harvard. The club during the past two years has undertaken to carry on an educational campaign among the Scandinavian Americans of Greater Boston. Evening classes have been established at the Prospect Union, where instruction in English and other subjects have been given by teachers supplied by the Edda club. By appearing before Scandinavian churches, lodges, and other organizations, and in various other ways, the club has reached many of these people and presented to them the opportunities that are theirs for acquainting themselves with the English language and for procuring a general knowledge of things much needed for success. The result has been good. The men in the Edda club who have hitherto done this work have done it without any compensation. This year the club has undertaken to establish an endowment fund out of which a scholarship shall be secured to the teacher or teachers whom the Club selects to carry on the instruction at the Prospect Union.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

"A SLUG FEST."

Editors Daily Ledger:

Referring to the "boxing match" conducted at the Coliseum Thursday night, I observe that your reporter characterizes it as unobjectionable. He may be entirely right. I was not there and am not going to sit in judgment on the question, but in fairness to those who have been protesting against the contest I am going to ask you to republish the following report of the affair which appeared in yesterday's Boston Post, so that the public may have the benefit of both points of view. I desire to call attention to the words "slug-fest," "ribbons" and "distress" in the Post report.

Yours truly,
Arthur B. Hultman.

QUINCY, March 2.—Johnny Glover of South Boston gave Kid Goodman a bad drubbing in a gruelling 10-round bout before 1,200 members of the Quincy Rowing Association in the Coliseum tonight.

There never was a time when Goodman had a look in, although he fought with that same bulldog tenacity that characterizes all of his battles, but Glover was too strong and clever for him. They fought at top speed all the way.

The last three rounds were battled at a terrific pace with Glover driving Goodman all over the ring, but the game West End boy came back for more each time. In the last round Glover made a desperate effort to finish Goodman but to no avail.

Jerry Gaines, the market champion didn't unpack his wallop in his bout with Bob Lefavour of Brockton. It was a slug fest and both men went 10 rounds, cutting each other to ribbons, and at the finish Martin Clougherty, the referee, decided that the Brockton man was the winner.

Frank O'Connor of Boston had an easy win over Tommy Flanagan of Cambridge. The latter was in distress in each session after the fourth, but O'Connor was unable to place a haymaker.

The crowd certainly got some action and the decisions by Referee Clougherty pleased all.

FEBRUARY SHIPBUILDING.

Washington news reports that there were 58 sail and steam vessels, aggregating 9102 gross tons, completed in the United States in the month of February, 1911, according to the shipbuilding returns of the bureau of Navigation of the department of commerce and labor. The largest steel steam vessels documented in the month were the Corozal and Montoso, each of 3083 gross tons. They were built at Newport News, Va., for the New York & Porto Rico steamship company.

OVER GOVERNOR'S VETO

Civil Service Measure Is Passed by Massachusetts House

Boston, March 4.—With only two Democrats supporting Governor Foss, the lower branch of the legislature voted to override the governor on the first veto of his administration.

The vote came on the so-called Lomasney bill. It sought to prevent the civil service commission from examining applicants relative to their records prior to 16 years of age. A two-thirds vote was necessary in the house to pass the bill over the governor's veto. The vote was 155 to 51.

BRIEFS

Depress the tracks.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held Monday evening.

There was a little fall of snow last evening as a reminder that winter is still with us.

Ralph W. Hobbs has been appointed administrator of estate of Edwin R. Rand of Boston, bond $2000.

Francis W. Abbott of 49 Spear street will have a birthday party this evening.

Agnes M. Paterson has been appointed administratrix of estate of William J. Paterson of Boston, bond $5,000.

The flag at City Hall was flying today in honor of the inauguration of the Quincy Presidents on March 4, 1797 and March 4, 1825.

Miss Georgie Michael of South Quincy is the week end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Alden A. Sherwin of West Townsend.

Mrs. George Beane who has been at the Quincy Hospital where she was operated upon three week ago, has so far recovered that she was able to return to her home at North Weymouth this week

Miss Kate F. Merritt of School street was called to New York today by the death of her brother Albert Merritt who died suddenly at his home in Brooklyn. He was in his 68th year, and leaves a son and daughter. Funeral services will be held Sunday.

Yes the Ledger is newsy. Wasn't that a good paper yesterday? In fact it is good every day. If you happen to miss an issue you olse just the bit of news you ought to know about. Get the Ledger habit and read the "home daily" before you sleep.

The attention of mothers having boys in the Quincy High school is called to the address which Head Master, James D. Howlett, is to give at the next regular meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary. His subject will be Boys and should be of special interest. The meeting is at 3 P. M. Friday, March 10, at Association hall. All are cordially invited.

Mrs. Smith caretaker at the birthplace of President John Adams is ill with scarlet fever and will be removed to the hospital. As the house will have to be fumigated the annual meeting of Adams Chapter, D. R., which was to have been held there on Monday will have to be adjourned and will probably be held Monday afternoon, March 13, at the house of the Quincy Women's club, Presidents hill.

Mayor Shea was the guest on Friday at a dinner given by Mayor Hatfield of Newton to the Mayors and chairman of the Boards of Selectmen of some of the forty cities and towns that make up the real Boston. The dinner was held at the Exchange club and the Real Boston movement was the subject discussed. Mayor Shea expressed himself as favoring the movement but all opposed any form that would mean annexation to Boston.

Members of Adams Chapter, D. R., who are to attend the funeral of Mrs. Charles H. Belcher at Randolph on Monday afternoon should take the 1.20 Brockton car from City square. Mrs. Belcher died on Friday at Wollaston at the home of her sister Mrs. Wilde. She has been a member of Adams Chapter for several years and has many friends in this city as well as in her home town of Randolph. Her passing on is felt by a wide circle of friends.

BLOCKED BY SIX-INCH DOOR

New York Police Engage In a Spectacular Gambling Raid

New York, March 4.—The most spectacular battle in the police war against gambling resorts was fought in Times square, where great crowds witnessed the engagement. Hydraulic jacks, axes and sledge hammers had failed to break the steel barred door, nearly six inches thick, which protected a third floor room on Broadway from invasion by a squad of detectives. They were finally forced to run up a ladder to one of the windows fronting on Broadway.

By the time the police had got into the room by the way of the ladder the alleged principals in the gambling resort had escaped through windows in the rear. No less than 200 men were found in the room, however, and numerous arrests were made.

SPORTING NOTES.

Quincy Y. M. C. A. first and second teams will meet the Milton Five and the Silent Five, teams representing the Cunningham "gym" of Milton, in the local gymnasium this evening.

The State indoor athletic meet for boys is taking place in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium this afternoon. Ten associations are represented and the entry list closed with 115 names down for the different events.

In the first round of interclass track games at Boston University yesterday, Herman Wigren '12 of Quincy won first place in three events, the standing high jump, shot put and two standing jumps.

Milton High school defeated Stone's school of Boston at hockey Friday afternoon by the score of 7 to 0.

Rockland High defeated Braintree High in a league basketball game yesterday by a score of 22 to 8.

Thayer Academy defeated Powder Point school at Duxbury on Friday in a close game of basketball by a score of 35 to 30. Wilson of Thayer was the star, shooting six baskets.

William J. Hackett of North Weymouth, running for the Brookline gymnasium, was defeated by Thomas Lilly of the North Dorchester A. A. in a 12-mile race at East Weymouth Friday evening. Hackett was obliged to quit in the 11th mile and Lilly finished in the time of 1hr., 4 min. Lilly was more than a lap ahead of Hackett when the latter gave up the race.

The Union A. C. of South Weymouth defeated the East Braintree A. A. at South Weymouth Friday evening by a score of 39 to 19.

CONCERT BY HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS

With the Assistance of Soloists They Successfully Render the Cantata, "Joan of Arc"

Part One Included Readings, Solos, Quartets and Sextets

The High school pupils had a full house on Saturday evening for their annual concert ,and all were delighted with the program presented. It showed that music is not neglected in the Quincy schools, and that many of the undergraduates of our High school have decided talents in that line. The programwas a varied one including orchestra numbers, choruses, girls' sextet, boys' double quartet, girls' glee club and finally the cantata, "Joan of Arc" by the school and soloists.

The school was assisted by Miss Rosetta Key, soprano; Edward E. Bullock, tenor; and Bertel A. Willard, bass, also Mrs. Elvie Burnett Willard, reader. Miss Key sang "The rose in the garden" and "In April," and the audience clamored for more, but she did not respond. Mr. Bullock is always appreciated and his group of three songs received continued applause. Mr. Willard has a deep bass voice and his selections from Mozart, Deane and Petrie were enjoyed.

Mrs. Willard is a clever reader, and her audience felt they were upon the scene during her realistic rendering of "A race against time," a Southern story of the Klu-Klux period, and were greatly amused as she coyly recited "She liked him reel weel." Later in the evening she gave "The bear story" as told by a child and was again encored, when she told another child story.

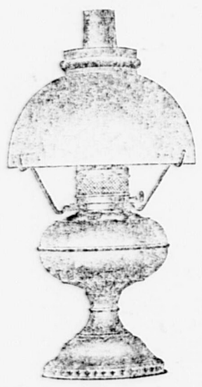

While the work of the soloists were superior, it was the numbers by the pupils which were of special interest. Under the direction of Miss Emma Perkins the music teacher since Sept. 1, the chorus numbers were excellent. A sextet including Misses Jean Arthur Olive Barnicoat, Elizabeth Arnold, Gertrude Meade, Junanita, Metherall and Eleanor Whittemore sang sweetly "In Spring." The boys' double quartet was a favorite; first with "Just a song at twilight," and then "The rosary" with Verne Franklin as soloist. They responded on the encore with "Little Tommy" and the audience wanted more. The group of songs by the Girls' glee club was much enjoyed. In one they were accompanied on the piano by Miss Eleanor Whittemore and Miss Cora Mansfield.

The crowning feature came last when the chorus and soloists rendered the cantata "Joan of Arc." It required forty minutes and introduced a variety

COMMUNITY HOUSE PLANS

Organization at Wollaston Will Be Perfected This Week

At a meeting in Odd Fellows hall on Thursday evening, to which some 70 of Wollaston's prominent citizens have been invited, organization will be perfected, plans formulated and arrangements made for ways and means for furthering the proposition of a "community house" for Wollaston.

The call of the meeting states that the need seems imperative and the time right for the construction of a suitable building properly equipped for the use of Wollaston people interested in or affiliated with its various Masonic, Odd Fellows and other fraternal orders, men's clubs, church aid organizations, women's societies, musical clubs, etc.

It further suggests that the contemplated building should embrace a modern thoroughly equipped kitchen, a banquet hall to seat at least 200, an auditorium capable of seating 500 (with stage and dressing rooms), a ladies' assembly or committee room, and such rooms as the fraternal societies would require.

The property would of necessity be in charge of and controlled by a board of directors or trustees, not in any way dominated by any user of the premises.

This action comes as the result of a committee, recently appointed consisting of William M. Chase, A. S. Johnson and Percy L. Davidson, of which the latter is secretary pro tem, which has nominated the following permanent committee: Amos D. Albee, Charles S. Adams, Charles Alden, Frank E. Badger, Clifton H. Baker, Charles E. Barker, C. H. Brooks, Frederick H. Bishop, Charles M. Bryant, Charles W. Bailey, Elisha B. Bird, Frank Burgess, C. A. Boynton, Charles H. Brigham, James H. Broughton, Chester I. Campbell, Randolph Bainbridge, John A. Barbour, Oscar A. Blaisdell, William M. Chase, S. F. Copeland, Louis E. Crosscup, Frank E. Cleveland, A. B. Cassidy, Dr. William G. Curtis, Charles E. Cherrington, Percy L. Davidson, A. W. Fay, Felix Favorite, R. R. Freeman, Thomas Fenno, Herbert Y. Follett, Chester N. Godfrey, C. E. Goodspeed. Walter M. Hatch, Wendell H. Hull John L. Hamilton, Charles P. Hutchins, Henry A. Harding, Eben Hardy, Edward E. Jameson, Charles W. Jones, A. S. Johnson, Dr. E. R. Johnson, William J. Leslie, Louis F. R. Langelier, Amos T. Leavitt, H. W. Marshall, Charles E. Monroe, C. A. Macfarland, A. N. Murray, John Morgan, Arthur Murphy, Nathan G. Nickerson, F. F. O'Reilley, C. Eaton Pierce, Frank A. Page, Walter S. Pinkham, Charles A. Waterhouse and Herbert T. Whitman.

A DOUBLE FINE.

James Barr, an employe at the shipyard, filled up with fire water Saturday, and when he reached the boarding house of Mrs. Laura Peters Wallace at 661 Washington street he was in a condition to fight. Armed with a knife he started in to clean out the house attacking everybody who came within reach of him. Word was sent to the police station, and Officer Whalen gathered him in. Barr was locked up on the charge of drunkenness. In court he was not only araigned for drunkenness, but also on a continued case for assault at the Fore River yards last week on James Keeler. He was sentenced to three months for the assault (appealed) and fined $10 for drunkenness.

—The annual shower of seed catalogues have commenced to arrive, much to the discomfort of the mail carriers and the farmers. There are so many of "the best seeds in the world" and the books have such beautiful covers, it befogs the mind and the crops are all harvested before the average farmer can make up his mind which firm to trade with.

TOWN MEETINGS IN SUBURBS

Many Towns in Massachusetts Are Electing Officers

Over 200 towns of Massachusetts are electing their town officers for 1911-12 today. As usual there are many local contests:

AT COHASSET.

The Fore River Shipbuilding company and the New Haven railroad have become issues in the town meeting contests today at Cohasset. Philander Bates of that town, who is seeking office for the thirty-eighth year, being accused of subserviency to the interests of these companies by W. O. Souther, who is seeking Mr. Bates' defeat. Another issue was the attempt of Herbert Tilden to tie up the issue of the Cohasset Sentinel published by Miss Floretta Vining, by a writ of attachment. While the sheriff was holding the regular issue under the writ, Miss Vining, however, aided by volunteer workers, got out a duplicate edition. The tieing up of the paper is said to have been done because it was thought the paper contained articles detrimental to Mr. Bates. A libel case against W. O. Souther, Jr., will come before the Quincy court on Wednesday.

The Bates forces had their first innings at Cohasset this morning when their candidate for moderator was elected over the candidate of the Southern forces were defeated. A large vote is being polled. Voting will close at 1 o'clock.

IN BRAINTREE.

Braintree will poll about 1,000 of its total voting strength of 1,700. The light vote is due to the fact that here is but one contest. This is between I. Wendell Gammons and Dr. C. A. Sullivan for member of the school committee, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Rev. C. C. Hill Crathern.

IN MILTON.

Five contests at Milton for town officers is bringing out a large vote. The main interest is in the election of selectmen where there are two independents running against the regular caucus nominees. There is also a contest for the two vacancies on the school board, four candidates seeking the positions. Two candidates are seeking the positions of assessors, and three for the board of health and two candidates for the three-year term as sewer commissioner.

IN WEYMOUTH

The contests at Weymouth are but few. For the position of Selectmen there are seven candidates seeking the five positions, and seven for the five positions as overseers of the poor. Four candidates for the two vacancies on the school board and eleven for the ten officers as town constables.

MRS. GREGG'S BIRTHDAY.

Mrs. Abigail Curtis Gregg of Braintree observed her 85th birthday anniversary Saturday at her home on Middle street, where relatives and friends gathered in large numbers. She was assisted in receiving by her granddaughters, Mrs. Henry M. Faxon of Quincy and Mrs. James D. Ellsworth and Miss Mary Bates, Miss Amy Gallagher and Mrs. George Anderson and her two great grandchildren Mary Faxon and Elizabeth Ellsworth.

The ushers were Joseph G. Morrison and Alva Morrison, grandsons, and Henry M. Faxon of Quincy. In the long list of friends who called were the members of the women's guild of Christ's Episcopal church of Quincy, of which Mrs. Gregg is the oldest member, and the members of St. Mary's guild of the Emmanuel Episcopal church of this town. The two rectors, Rev. Richard E. Armstrong of Quincy and Rev. F. C. Williams of this town, were also present.

Mrs. Gregg received many beautiful presents from her relatives and many friends. During the afternoon, refreshments were served by her two great grandaughters, Misses Faxon and Ellsworth, and coffee was poured by Miss Bates, Miss Gallagher and Mrs. Anderson.

TODAY'S COURT.

Emel Blomster was fined $10 and George Robinson $5 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Nester Kinnanen was arraigned for assault on Toiro Tiennen at Quincy, and was placed on probation until July 8, on payment of $5 costs before that time.

Jas. Barr was arraigned for drunkenness and assault at Quincy on James Keller. He was fined $10 for drunkenness and sentenced to three months in jail for the assault. Assault case appealed.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO GRANITE EMPLOYEE

Crushed by Heavy Block of Granite and Sustains Several Fractures

Taken to City Hospital and not Expected to Recover

Romeo Agguzuio an employee at the Railway granite yards, was severely if not fatally injured this morning He was engaged with other workmen in loading granite onto a car, and had just taken the chain off a stone when it caught and the stone fell over on to him, crushing him against another stone.

Dr. Ash was summoned and found that the man had suffered a fracture of the arm, a fracture of two ribs, and in addition his chest was badly crushed.

The police ambulance was called, and he was removed to the City Hospital. But slight hopes are entertained for his recovery.

He is 43 years of age and resides at 88 Willard street, where he has a wife and three children.

HAD HAY IN HIS CELLAR

It Took Fire and Nearly Destroyed His House

Quincy firemen were forced to turn haymakers on Sunday morning, in taking several tons of burning bales of hay from the cellar of the house at 34 Sewall street, near the Sailors' Home, owned and occupied by George A. Wetmore.

Mr. Wetmore was thawing out water pipes in the cellar when fire was in some way communicated to the hay and quickly spread beyond his control. A telephone call was sent to the Wollaston fire station and was immediately followed by an alarm from box 154 at 10.12. A neighbor's garden hose failed to prevent its spread, and the fire department found a blaze creeping up the rear of the house with clouds of smoke pouring out from all sides.

A few minutes served to bring the fire under control, but to put out the fire in the hay was another matter, and the firemen were forced to bring the bales out and saturate them with water. Mr. Wetmore estimates the damage at approximately $150, partially covered by insurance. The building is a two story house and the principal damage is in the rear of the house and the rafters of the first floor. The furniture and other articles were removed by the neighbors and are practically undamaged.

—Several secret societies of Lynn suffered loss by fire Sunday morning when the Paul Revere building at Glemere, owned by the Knights of Pythias was badly burned. Ten different lodges occupied it, including the Odd Fellows. On the street floor were four stores.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Senator Borah's right. Begorra!

Miss Canada better wait till she's asked.

Trousers this spring and summer will be worn much longer than usual. Probably until late in the fall.

One of the prominent captains of industry announces that there are not enough $10,000-a-year men in this country. Personally a good many men will agree with him.

A complaint reaches the editor from a subscriber that he may have to subscribe for more than one paper. He says it is so newsy and takes so long to read, that other members of the family get angry in waiting their turn. Please tell your neighbor about the "new Ledger."

Would the chairman of the Finance Committee of the City Council please tell the people of Quincy how he would squeeze into the annual appropriation order of 1911 an appropriation of $20,000 or $10,000 or even $5,000, within the $12 limit, that departments might pay the city for water used. If the time ever comes when the city must pay itself for water we hope it will be at as low a rate as the shipyard now secures Metropolitan water.

THE WAR ON BUCKET SHOPS.

Figures were given out the past week at Washington, to the effect that 4,000 bucket shops have recently suspended business, owing to the campaign waged against them by the department of justice. Seven-eighths of the telegraphers formerly employed in these offices, and five eighths of the clerks, are now in other business.

With this strenuous campaign, a distinct type of decadent humanity is going to be a little more scarce. Of course the seedy victims of the stock gambling craze will always be found on the pathetic fringes of Wall street and the other great exchanges. With shabby clothes, strained faces, and unkempt faces, they will still be watching the rise and fall of the financial giants of Wall street, hoping to snatch a few meager eighths and quarters, as crumbs escaping the notice of bulls and bears seeking for more luscious prey.

Laws against bucket shops may not greatly effect this army of camp followers about the metropolitan exchanges. But a host of offices in the smaller cities will cease to minister to the gambling craze. The men who follow Wall street's green cloth from a distance are not so down and out a type as the decrepit vultures about the big city quotation sheets. Uusually they are small clerks and merchants. Having failed to meet the very moderate requirements of success in their own sphere, they fatuously dream that they can beat out a game in which the country's brightest men are fighting on their own ground with tools by which they have already won a fortune out of the savings of the people.

People who have money to invest will buy stocks as heretofore, but they should do business with the regular bankers and brokers of their home towns who can help innocent persons to distinguish between an investment and a gamble.

TO PLEASE HER HUSBAND

Playwright's Wife Sues For Divorce and Changes Her Counsel

Annapolis, March 4.—Mrs. Bella Armstrong, who is suing Paul Armstrong, the playwright, for divorce in the local court, astonished Judge Brashears when she said that she did not particularly desire a divorce herself, but had brought suit at the instance of her husband.

She also said that she desired to drop Alonzo L. Miles as her counsel, because her husband did not wish him to have anything to do with the case.

LETER FROM FLORIDA.

St. Augustine, Fla. Mar. 1, 1911.
Editor of Ledger:

I left Palm Beach last week for this place. St. Augustine is the oldest city in America. Ponce de Leon discovered Florida in 1512 over one hundred years before the Piligrims landed in Plymouth. Everything about the city is ancient. Fort Marion an old Spanish fort was begun 1565 and it was over a hundred years before its completion. It is a very large fort, covering acres. We went all over it. It has several conning towers, one at each quarter. It has several dungeons where prisoners were kept. Two were fearful where they put their political rivals at times and it was made so tight, that victims placed there would undergo the severest torture, starving to death suffocating for want of air. When put in there in was good bye to the world, never to see it again. The victim would last only, at most, 3 or 4 days. This was in the days of the Spanish inquisition.

The city gate, through which I walk every morning before breakfast, is an ancient structure. Just after the discovery of Florida, before the year 1600 a high wall was built around the city to protect it from the encroachments of the Indians who were numerous in Florida at that time. After civilization had gained a foothold the Indians were largely exterminated, the great wall was removed, but the main entrance, the city gate, was left standing as a mark to acquaint the visitors of its ancient origin.

Ponce de Leon and his followers had a great many battles with the Indians who were constantly attacking his company and after a few years, in a battle with the indians he was hit by an arrow in the thigh and in withdrawing it, it broke off in the bone and could not be extracted. He was conveyed to Cuba where he died, being buried with great pomp in Havana. His successor was Mendendez a Spanish nobleman and general, who was sent over by the King of Spain to establish the Roman Catholic religion among the Indians of Florida. Florida in that era extended from the gulf to Cheaspeake bay west to the Mississippi. He had a great many battles with the Indians to establish his supremacy. After some years he was conquered by the French, but after a while, gained control again. The Spanish King ordered him to get rid of the French by exile or extermination. He chose the latter and it was a wholesale massacre from beginning to end, not only every Frenchman, but every woman and child. Finally the King sent over a lot of Mission fathers and succeeded in colonizing Florida by establishing Spanish Missions from the gulf to Virginia and west to the Mississippi. Many of the old mission ruins are seen today.

I have much more to say about this ancient region, but will defer till my next.

WHEN COMPANY COMES IN.

Charles L. Tompkins.

When we have company come in,
It makes me awful glad,
'Cause Ma puts on her comp'ny smile,
And I ain't 'frald o' dad.

Ma'll say, "I'm awful glad you've come,
Have been expectin' you."
An' Pa he grins an acts polite,
Which he don't of'en do.

The comp'ny pats me on the head
An' says, "Fine boy you've got,
I 'spect you're very proud o' him,"
And Pa says, "Well, why not?"

Then everybody talks and laughs,
An' has a raft o' fun,
But when the comp'ny's gone again,
My troubles have begun.

For Pa gets cross and scowls and scowls
An' pitches in to me;
Says I don't ever do things right,
So far as he can see.

An' Ma she frets and worries, too,
An' says I'm in her way,
Till I am glad to get a chance
To run away and play.

I don't see why they act that way,
When only us are here,
Then be so nice to other folks—
I think it's very queer.

I guess the reason it is so,
Is 'cause it's always been,
An' maybe that's why they're so glad,
When company comes in.

—Two pronounced factors that are said to be winning converts daily to the cause of popular elections in settling federal senatorial successions are the present deadlocks over the choice of senators and the dirty features of the Lorimer case. The influence is cumulative; for there have been legislative deadlocks when scandals such as have thus far this year failed to materialize were strikingly in evidence. But this must not be interpreted as in any way modifying the disgust in which existent deadlocks are held by decent elements in states where balloting has been fruitless. As for the Lorimer revelations, they unhappily are all too familiar.—Salem News

JOHN ADAMS ON PEACE

In a little work upon the "Principles of the Founders" I brought together a few years ago many striking passages from Washington, Jefferson and Franklin in condemnation of the war system of nations. I was myself surprised in making the collection at the number variety and power of their utterances upon the subject. I was surprised when I first learned that Samuel Adams in the period between the revolution and the adoption of the constitution prepared for the Massachusetts Legislature a memorial to Congress urging the incorporation of an arbitration clause in all of our subsequent commercial treaties with other nations.

So far as I know, this was the first suggestion of such a provision in a high place and Massachusetts and the United tSates may well remember it with pride. I believe it is not too much to say that the most illustrious group of champions of the policy of supplanting the war system by the peaceful and legal organization of the world at the end of the 18th century was the group of founders of this American republic.

The views of John Adams in this field were by no means so advanced as those of Franklin and Jefferson. Many will remember the very different tenor of his reply to Noah Worcester's invitation to him to become an honorary member of the new peace society from that of Jefferson's warm reply, and we recall much else. But there is one very impressive word of his, only recently brought to my attention, although doubtless known to many of your readers which in this connection should be remembered. It occurs in an important review of his administration, in a long letter to James Lloyd in January, 1815, and is as follows:

"I desire no other inscription on my gravestone than 'Here lies John Adams, who took upon himself the responsibility of the peace with France in the year 1800.'"

GIRLS IN OPIUM DENS

Doctor Says There Are Many Confirmed Smokers In Boston

Boston, March 6.—Startling disclosures in regard to the growth in this city and country of the use of opium, morphine and cocaine, not only by men and women in the ordinary walks of life, but by doctors, nurses in hospitals, prisoners in jails, and others, were made by Dr. William F. Boos of the Massachusetts General hospital at the annual meeting of the Watch and Ward society last evening.

The doctor stated that in this country opium smoking has become very common indeed. Its growth has been very large since 1891, he said.

"In Boston a great number of young women are to be found smoking opium," he continued. "These girls learn to like the restaurant life on Harrison avenue and the Chinese ways. The next step is easy, and before they know it they have become confirmed smokers of opium."

EXPIRES AMID GREAT TUMULT

Sixty-First Congress Has Become Matter of History

EXTRA SESSION ON APRIL 4

Sweeping Program May Keep Legislators In Washington Well Into Midsummer Months—Bailey Resigns His Seat, but Reconsiders When Friends Urge Him—Cannon Lays Down Gavel After Eight Years In the Chair of House—Filibuster of House Democrats Kills Tariff Board Measure After Its Passage In Senate

Washington, March 6.—President Taft has kept his word. The Sixty-first congress having adjourned without action by the senate on the Canadian reciprocity agreement, the president has summoned the new congress to meet in extraordinary session on April 4.

Already the leaders in both branches—the Democrats ruling the house and the Democrats and insurgent Republicans dominating the senate—are arranging a sweeping program of legislation which may keep them here well into the months of midsummer.

The sensation of the final scenes of the last congress was the resignation of Senator Bailey of Texas. Piqued by the attitude of the senate minority in choosing the leadership of Senator Owen of Oklahoma to his own leadership in the final hours, the Texan announced his resignation to the vice president, and wired it to Governor Colquit of Texas. He later yielded to the great pressure brought to bear by his friends and associates in both parties, supplemented by the urgent request of Colquit, and decided to withdraw his resignation.

Congress enacted the big appropriation bills before adjournment, but the reciprocity and tariff commission measures, favored so earnestly by the president, failed of passage.

Mr. Taft is determined that the reciprocity arrangement with Canada shall be put into operation and he will express himself in strong language to this effect in his message to the new congress. He is "out for a record" that will appeal to the support of the country in the next presidential campaign.

The Democrats, too, entrusted with power in congress for the first time in many years, are outlining a big program of reforms. They may stop at nothing short of a complete revision of the tariff.

Riotous Scenes In House

Veterans say the riotous scenes in the house before the tariff board bill was withdrawn surpassed in violence and turmoil those accompanying the closing of any recent session of that body. The determination of the Democrats to prevent the passage of the tariff board bill, which had passed the senate early in the day, exhibited itself in a most persistent filibuster, which at times looked almost like the famous "rules fight" of last spring.

Representative Johnson of Kentucky, for instance, stood in the aisle and loudly expressed his regret that the speaker "was not a younger man." The speaker promptly replied he would not take advantage of his age. The house greeted the interchange with tumultuous cheering.

From Storm to Calm

There was a series of roll calls on parliamentary motions, every one of which meant the loss of more than half an hour. At last, while the vote was being taken on the resolution to force the bill to passage, Mr. Payne, realizing both the impracticability of reaching a favorable vote and the narrow margin of time before the hour of adjournment, asked the attention of the house, and in a brief statement withdrew the bill. This probably eliminated the tariff board legislation for a long time to come, for the Democrats who accomplished its defeat will control the house in the coming Sixty-second congress.

Uncle Joe Retires

The house then turned its attention to the appropriation bills. The clock was set back half an hour and in strong contract with the turbulent scenes which had gone before, the house devoted itself to an exchange of courtesies. These were the more notable by reason of the fact that they marked the retirement of Speaker Cannon after eight years in the chair and thirty-six years in the house, and the passage of house control from a powerful Republican majority to a Democratic majority even larger.

First Speaker Cannon asked Mr. Underwood of Alabama, who will head the ways and means committee of the new house, to take the chair, and Cannon took a seat with his colleagues. Then Speaker-to-be Clark offered a resolution paying a high personal tribute to the retiring speaker, and Underwood put the resolution before the house, which adopted it unanimously.

The house adjourned sine die, following a speech by Speaker Cannon in which he discussed the policy he had sought to observe in presiding. The speaker expressed faith that the next house will observe fair play under the constitution.

Speaker Cannon in his farewell speech said he would be glad to serve under the "genial rule" of Speaker-to-be Clark. Following adjournment, members of the house joined in chorus, singing "America" and other patriotic songs.

After the Battle

Provision of $3,000,000 for the fortification of the Panama canal.

Provision for two new battleships.

Recodification of the judicial code—regarded as most important for the amelioration of the law's dqlays.

Creation of forest reserves in the southern Appalachian and White mountains.

Providing for the construction of embassy and legation buildings abroad.

Requiring the inspection of locomotive boilers.

Creating Robert E. Peary a rear admiral on the retired list of the navy and tendering the thanks of congress to him.

Creating a commission of five senators and five representatives to investigate conditions in Alaska.

Measures of importance that fell by the wayside were:

Failure of the Canadian reciprocity agreement and consequent certainty of an extra session.

Failure of the permanent tariff board bill, which passed the senate, but was killed by a filibuster in the house.

Failure of the resolution to admit to statehood Arizona and New Mexico, killed by a filibuster in the senate.

Failure of the proposal to increase the rate of postage on the advertising sections of the large magazines, but a commission provided for to investigate the subject.

Failure of the resolution providing for the direct election of United States senators.

Failure of the general age pension bill.

Failure to act on Ballinger-Pinchot investigation reports.

Failure to enact the ocean mail subsidy, passed by the senate alone.

Failure of the effort to unseat William Lorimer as senator from Illinois, on the ground of alleged bribery in his election.

Failure of the bill fixing canal tolls and settling the form of government for the Panama canal zone.

Woman Plunges to Death

Boston, March 6.—Losing her balance at the top of a flight of stairs leading to the basement of the home of Mrs. H. M. Federhen, 558 Columbus avenue, Annie Dacey, employed as a maid there, tumbled to the bottom and was instantly killed. The woman's skull was crushed.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Woman As Candidate in Universalist Pulpit

FIRST UIVERSALIST.

Miss Fannie E. Austin of Leonminster a candidate for the pastorate at the Universalist church, occupied the pulpit Sunday, and preached an interesting sermon to a large audience. It is hoped to have Miss Austin preach next Sunday.

The Dorcas society will meet Tuesday evening with Miss Mary Blake of Cottage street.

Friday afternoon and evening the Dorcas society will hold a cake and candy sale at the residence of Mrs. B. G. Barnes on Faxon avenue.

WOLLASTON M. E.

An excellent sermon was preached Sunday morning by Rev. Wesley Wiggin at the Methodist church from Cor. 13:8—theme, "The unfailing love of Christ." Communion at close of sermon.

"Methodism's modern prophet" was the subject of the Epworth League meeting, and the subject of the evening service was "Christ all in all."

The Ladies' Aid will meet this evening with Mrs. Crothers, 149 Beale street. It is a special meeting with business of importance.

The Stewards class will meet Tuesday evening at 7.30.

A Sunday school board meeting will be held after the prayer meeting of Friday evening.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

Rev. Carl G. Horst took as the text for the morning sermon the words found in the twelfth chapter of 1 Cor. the fourth verse: "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit." Taking as an example, the great variety of form, color and development found in the material world, the preacher led the thought into the realm of physical life, where we find so many individuals and never one the exact counterpart of another. Still further the thought may be carried, until we come to see that the great human family is made up of persons who share the same general characteristics but are essentially different in their mental and spiritual gifts. The vital matter that concerns us is that we prove good stewards of these gifts of the spirit—that each individual be faithful to his charge however large or small his sphere.

Those persons to whom much has been given must constantly bear in mind that of them much will be required; and one of the requisites of true greatness is the fine appreciation of the work ofthose humble souls who, content to fill faithfully a small niche, make possible the large work of the more influential.

"Put the best I am into the best I can," urged the preacher, and let us all be co-laborers with God; it is character which counts and God is as truly with the lowly as with those in exalted positions."

The first of a series of mid-week Lenten services for the deepening of the moral and religious life will be held Wednesday evening at 7.45 o'clock. Miss Winnefred White will be the soloist and the Rev. Roderick Stebbins, for twenty-five years now pastor of the First Congregational parish in Milton, will preach the sermon. The public is cordially invited.

Several members of our Alliance attended today an important conference of the New England Alliance branches at the National headquarters of our church in Boston.

The Unitarian Church-Helpers will meet at the home of Mrs. J. I. Litchfield, 207 Arlington street, Thursday, at 2 o'clock.

The March vespers will be held Sunday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock.

The Rev. Charles E. Park will conduct the Wednesday half hour service at noon in King's chapel this week.

The vestry was thoroughly fumigated last week.

The Unitarian ministers of New Engand will spend a quiet day for worship and reconsecration in the West Newton Unitarian church, Monday, March 20.

CALVARY BAPTIST.

The pastor took his Sunday morning text from II Chron. 15:12. The subject of the sermon was: "Has the covenant been kept?" A communion service followed the sermon and two new members were welcomed into the fellowship of the church.

The Christian Endeavor meeting was led by Miss Esther McDonald.

In the evening the pastor spoke on the theme, "How are you planning?" taking his text from Gen. 11:4. The difference between the plans of the worldly and the christian was brought out very clearly. God's will was the most important factor in the plans of the christian.

Miss Beatrice Ingham of Somerville a graduate of Perkins Institute for the blind, sang some beautiful solos. Her deficiency in sight was surely made up in the quality of her voice.

The Bible Study class will meet with Arthur Boynton, Coddington street, on Tuesday evening.

The mid-week prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening at 7.30. Subject: "How to make God's presence Real?"

The Ladies' Mission Circle will meet with Mrs. Porter, Brooks avenue, on Friday afternoon.

FIRST UNITARIAN.

"The other side" was the subject of the sermon of Rev. Ellery Channing Butler at the First church Sunday morning. Music was by the regular choir quartet.

On Wednesday the annual sale and supper of the Fragment society will be held in the chapel. The sale of candy and aprons begins at 4 o'clock and at 6.30 one of those famous suppers will be served.

The annual parish meeting will be held next Monday evening, and all are requested to attend.

SWEDISH METHODIST.

Rev. August Flink of Sandviken, Sweden, preached at the Sunday morning service, taking his text from the 73rd Psalm, 28th verse. "Joy in God" was the subject of the sermon.

The Epworth league meeting was conducted by Miss Edla Mattson. The scripture passage was found in the 11th chapter of Hebrews.

Mr. Flink preached again in the evening, using as his text, Matt. 15:29-31. All the meetings of the day were well attended and inspiring.

A Leader and Stewards meeting will be held in the church this evening.

The regular church prayer meeting wil be held Thursday evening at 7.30.

The fourth quarterly conference of the church will be held Friday evening at 7.30. Frank E. Broman, superintendent of Swedish Methodist work in the Boston district, will be the speaker of the evening.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

The pastor preached the Sunday morning sermon from the text II Kings 5:13. "If he had bid thee do great things."

Frank Harold, publicity secretary of the "World in Boston" spoke at the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting on "Stewardship," and also gave a very illuminating address on "The World in Boston" at the evening service.

The monthly meeting of the Woman's Missionary society will be held in the manse this evening. "Africa" is the foreign missionary subject.

The stewards of "The World in Boston" will meet in the church Tuesday evening.

The regular prayer meetings will be held Thursday evening, the one for young people at 7 and the regular church prayer meeting at 7.30.

SWEDISH BAPTIST.

The text for the Sunday morning sermon by the pastor was found in Isa. 53:3—"A man of sorrows and acquainted with grief."

The young people's meeting was led by John O. Hellstrom. The subject of the meeting was: "Lesson from the life of Mosses."

The pastor delivered the evening address from the text: Heb. 6:19, "The hope which we have is an anchor of the soul." Quite a number of visitors were present from Schenectardy N. Y., and New Sweden, Maine.

The regular mid-week prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

The pastor preached an excellent communion sermon in the morning and conducted the celebration of the Lord's supper immediately after the preaching service. One new member was taken into the church on profession of faith.

The Bible school classes were well attended. Following the study of the lessons, rehearsals for the Easter concert was conducted.

The Y. P. S. C. E. held its monthly consecration meeting at 6.15.

The sixth monthly musical service was held at 7.30. The following program was rendered by the choir and organist.

Organ Prelude—
"Ave Maria d' Arcadelt," Liszt
Anthem—"Lord, God Almighty," Verdi
Solo—"Fear not ye O Israel," Buck
Solo—"Open to me the Gates," Bischoff
Offertory—"Vesper Hymn," Lemaire
Solo and Chorus—"Even Me," Warren
Postulde, Zundel

A short address was given by the pastor.

The regular meeting of Unity Circle King's Daughters will be held Tuesday evening at 7.30. Mrs. Franis Abele, Jr., will give an "Outline of the History of Unity Circle."

A Missionary service in the interets of the Congregational Church Building society will be held Friday evening at 7.45.

SWEDISH LUTHERAN.

The pastor preached at the Sunday morning service using as his theme: "The Gospel of the Cross." Miss Sadie Nelson sang a splendid solo.

The evening topic chosen by the pastor was: "Great Thoughts on the Way of Humiliation."

Both meetings were well attended the Lenten services bringing out larger audiences than usual.

A meeting of the Building committee will be held in the church Tuesday evening.

Beginning with Thursday, March 9, special mid-week services will be held through the Lenten season.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

The pastor preached his Sunday forenoon sermon from the text John 10: 9. "Christ the Door" was the theme of the sermon.

The Sunday school services at noon were well attended.

In the evening the communion service was held. The topic of the pastor's sermon was "The Unchanging Christ." Text: Heb. 13: 8. Seven persons, all ladies, were taken into church membership, five by profession of faith and two by certificate.

A cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Alex McPhie, 29 Nightingale avenue, in Tuesday evening at 7.45.

The church prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening at 7.30. Topic: "The Sabbath school lesson."

A meeting of the Stewards will be held at 7.30 Friday evening at the home of the pastor, 182 Glendale road.

ATLANTIC METHODIST.

The pastor spoke Sunday morning on "Power through a vision." Text, Acts 26:19—"I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." He emhasized the thought that the secret of Paul's power was his obedience to the heavenly vision. His was a vision for service. He needs our personality as a transmitter of power. He speaks to men through men.

At the evening service he spoke on "Your attiude of mind." Text: Nehemiah 4:6 "The people had a mind to work." The successful christian must be in a receptive attitude toward God, a forgiving attitude toward his enemy, a trustful attitude toward his friends a patient attitude toward trouble, and an aggressive attitude toward work. It is not what one says, it is not what one does, that counts, but the spirit-attitude of man in which things are said and done. Nehemiah and the men of Israel built the wall around Jerusalem because "the people had a mind to work." To have a strong, wholesome, aggressive attitude toward christian work we must not be out of touch with our God.

This evening there will be a meeting of the official board of the church at the home of M. E. Kilpatrick, 143 Newbury avenue. A full attendance is requested.

At the Friday evening prayer meeting the pastor will speak on "A consecrated personality."

On Saturday evening there will be a business meeting of the Epworth League at the home of Miss Mary Beale, 28 Vane street, Norfolk Downs. All members are requested to be present.

Next Sabbath morning the pastor will preach the second sermon in his series on power, the subject: "Power through self-conquest."

At the people's popular service at 7 P. M., Rev. Dr. R. I. Flewelling of Harvard Street M. E. church, Cambridge, will be the messenger. Dr. Flewelling is a former pastor and a large attendance is expected to hear his stirring messages.

FUNERAL OF MRS. HODGKINSON

Worthy Tribute by Pastor of Hall Place Church

The funeral services of Mrs. Catherine Elizabeth Hodgkinson, wife of Frank Thomas Hodgkinson of 176 Willard street were held at the Hall Place Methodist Episcopal church, Sunday afternoon at 2.30, Rev. Carl H. Raupach, pastor, officiating, the church being nearly filled with relatives and friends.

Miss Olive Grant and Miss Margaret Shirley sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," "Saved by Grace", and "Goodnight." Mr. Raupach spoke of "death" as we view it, and its actual meaning; the experience of death being the bridging over as it were, of the dark waters which separate us from the beautiful beyond, and said that to the Christian death is not a terrible experience, it is falling asleep here to waken on the other side, to live with Jesus throughout eternity with joy and gladness. He spoke of the Christian's hope and emphasized some of the precious promises from God's word which come to us again and bring fresh courage, hope and comfort in the time of sorrow and of need. He spoke especially of the promise of Jesus in John 14-2—"I go to prepare a place for you" and said that there was also some preparation required of us in order that we might go to that place which Jesus is preparing for us. He also spoke of the life of the departed sister, of the weeks and months of preparation that had been made in her life, of her hope and courage, and the longing that she would soon be better so that she might take her place in the active work, but though that wish could not be granted her, yet she was serving God before His throne in Heaven this day, freed from all pain and sorrow and care.

At the close of the services those present were given a chance to take a farewell look at the departed sister. Interment was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. The three brothers, Charles Barron, Oscar Barron and John Barron, and three brothers-in-law, I. P. Horton, J. Dodge and C. Hutchins acted as bearers.

Mrs. Hodgkinson was born in Woburn, Feb. 10, 1864 and was one of fifteen children of Oscar H. and Catherine (Bartley) Barron. While she was still very young the family moved to Quincy, Mrs. Hodgkinson receiving most of her education in Quincy. After finishing school she worked as housekeeper. On Jan. 23, 1885, she was married to Frank Thomas Hodgkinson of Quincy Point by the Rev. R. T. Sawyer.

About two years ago she was taken ill and on Nov. 20, 1909, she underwent an operation at the Quincy Hospital, which for a time seemed apparently successful, but the old trouble soon recurred and she was obliged to give up her household duties to her daughter who has proved a faithful nurse. Ever since that time she has struggled nobly and bravely, fighting against great odds, but it was of no avail. Her faith, hopefulness and courage was a source of inspiration and help to the many who visited her and her patience and gentleness, even in her extreme suffering was touching to all around her. Throughout the earlier months of her illness she thought constantly of friends who were ill and was always devising some new surprise or pleasure for them.

In December she was again removed to the Quincy Hospital, but there was no help for her and a few days before Christmas she was brought home. Since then her decline had been rapid and she had been unable to have any visitors for some time. In January she was received into the Hall Place M. E. church as a member on probation, although unable to attend the services. During the past month she failed rapidly and on Thursday, March 2, the weary struggle for life was ended and the tired soul took its flight to Heaven, to be at rest forevermore with the Father.

She is survived by her husband, two daughters, Maud E. and Catherine B., and one son, Charles. Also five sisters and three brothers. Mrs. John Dodge, Mrs. I. P. Horton, Mrs. Charles Hutchins and Miss Melissa Barron of West Somerville, Mrs. Warnock of South Boston, Charles, Oscar and John Barron of Quincy. She is also survived by her mother, Mrs. Catherine B. Barron of Somerville, who is eighty years of age. Two sons were buried in infancy.

The flowers from sympathizing relatives and friends were many and beautiful, a silent token of love, expressing what words fail to do in such a time of sororw.

—There are people who consider it curious that a brilliantly capable man like L. D. Brandeis of Boston should spend a good share of his time in defending popular interests at numerous points with no expectation of a foe. But why curious? The government has enlisted plenty of men in the public service at inadequate salaries because they feel that their largest field of usefulness lies there. All the great medical discoveries have been made by men without expectation of reward, simply through interest in the work. Human nature is so constructed that under conditions that give the person half a chance he finds immense satisfaction in undertaking the big tasks in the service of mankind. Brandeis is so human that he find his unpaid work the best fun in the world.—Haverhill Gazette.

That's Only Our Future Population on Eliot's "Six to Family" Plan.

Arthur Baker, a Chicago editor and mathematical wag, has become interested in Dr. Eliot's anti-race suicide talk. Figuring on the basis of six children to a family, Mr. Baker says:

"The thirteenth generation would be standing three deep on each others' shoulders, crowding every foot of dry land, the number bordering on quintillions. One quintillion looks like this—1,000,000,000,000,000,000."

Root Stops Church Organ.

The drain from the water motor of the Presbyterian church organ at Liberty, N. Y., became clogged the other day, and on digging up the drain it was found that the root from a poplar tree which stood thirty feet from the drain had entered the pipe and in the six years which the drain had been there had grown forty-seven feet of root, filling the four inch pipe.

"Yes," said the business man, "I have given up trying to collect that little bill from Bilkins. You see, he is a pretty big, husky fellow, and he used to throw my collectors out."

"Then why didn't you employ a woman collector He couldn't do that to a woman."

"That's what I thought, so I got one and sent her around, but she never came back."

"Why not?"

"He married her."—Chicago Evening Post.

BRIEFS

Not much snow has accumulated although it has fallen all day.

Quincy was largely represented at the opening of the big motor show.

Where will the City Council make cuts in the estimates of the Mayor and School Committee?

Two new cases of scarlet fever were reported this morning. One at West Quincy and one at South Quincy.

Mrs. Oscar Blaisdell of Wollaston has returned from a few days' visit in Whitman.

Henry Hill of Wollaston was the guest of Mrs. W. H. Hill of Whitman for a few days last week.

Mayor Shea, who has been suffering from a severe cold, is confined to his home with it today.

Mrs. M. L. Brown and sons Marshall and Robert of Wollaston were guests last week of Mrs. Brown's mother at North Scituate.

Lawyer William E. Howe, Jr., of Bigelow street was with a week end party at Boone lake and hooked a few bass through the ice.

Interest in whist is reviving, as was evinced by the number who enjoyed the game at the rooms of the Granite City club Saturday evening. Although the regular whist tournaments are held on Wednesday evenings there were eight tables playing whist Saturday evening.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held tonight. Several important matters are scheduled to be reported upon by the various standing committees. At the last meeting President Bryant requested that members be in their seats before 7.35 so that the meeting might start promptly on time.

BRIEFS

Snowy today.

City Council tonight.

Next week the sun will rise before 6.

Candidates will be initiated on Wednesday evening by John Hancock lodge, I. O. O. F.

The annual concert and ball of Quincy council, K. of C., will be held Monday evening, April 17.

A hearing will be given at the City Council this evening on location of cross over on Washington street to enter the new trolley freight depot.

Dr. Fred A. Bartlett of Billings road, Atlantic, has recently been appointed local medical examiner for the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Civil service examinations for clerks, firemen, policemen, foremen and inspectors, janitors and engineers in the service of the city, where by law they are required to hold first or second class licenses, will be held in Quincy, April 12.

A large number participated Saturday night in the weekly drive whist party at the rooms of the Knights of Columbus. The prizes were awarded to Martin W. Cunniff and John A. Duggan. There was vocal and instrumental music and refreshments.

At the Saturday evening whist party held in Clan McGregor hall the souvenirs were awarded to D. McLennon, Grace Hollinshead, Robert Craig, Mrs. James Birnie, Robert Mitchell and Mary Starr. The consolations went to Mrs. J. Kelman and Mr. L. Gleason.

FISHERMAN WRECKED

Crew of Twelve Safe After Pounding Around In the Surf

Highland Light, Mass., March 6.—The fisherman Mattakeesett, Gloucester-bound with 20,000 pounds of fish, drove ashore on the beach inside Peaked Hill bars, in a heavy northerly gale.

Four dories, containing twelve of the crew, landed safely through the terrific surf just off the Peaked Hill life saving station, but the fifth dory, containing Captain Parsons and two of the crew, driven south along the shore in a vain search for a break in the wall of surf, was capsized near Highland light.

These three men, battered almost lifeless after their dory had capsized, were rescued by Surfman Oliver of the Highland life saving station who, unaided, hauled the three men through the surf to safety.

Six Persons Killed as Walls Crash

Center, Tex., March 6.—Caught in crashing brick walls of a small building, from which they were carrying dry goods menaced by flames, six persons perished here. Many others were hurt, some of them fatally.

RECORD OVER-SEA FLIGHT

Frenchman Covers 124 Miles Without Vessels to Guide Him

Nice, France, March 6.—Lieutenant Bague accomplished a sensational and daring feat Sunday by flying over the Mediterranean from Antibes to the island of Gorgona, off the Italian coast.

He covered a distance of more than 124.5 miles, establishing a new record for over-sea flight. This he did without the assistance of tugs, torpedo boats or any other craft to guide him or add to his confidence by their presence.

LITTLE CONCERNED OVER THEIR FATE

Lynn Bandits Cheerful as Electrocution Draws Near

Boston, March 6.—Some time between today and tomorrow's sunrise, if present plans are carried out, Andrew Ipsen, 19, and Wassili Ivanowsky, 24, the "Lynn bandits," will go to the electric chair in the death-room of Charlestown prison.

Yesterday, probably the last but one of their lives, the two youthful murderers spent in laughing and chatting, playing cards and singing, apparently the least affected of any in the great prison. Even to the "death watch," hardened to the tragic surroundings of "dead man's row," the indifference of the two youths was regarded with amazement.

Ipsen and Ivanowski will die for the murders of Thomas A. Landregan, a prominent shoe manufacturer of Lynn, and his bodyguard, Policeman James H. Carroll, on June 25 last.

BIG BLOCK IS DESTROYED

Thrilling Scenes at a Million Dollar Fire In Minneapolis

Minneapolis, March 6.—Fire destroyed the Syndicate block on Nicolet avenue, the largest block in Minneapolis. The total loss is estimated at $1,000,000, and it is possible that two lives were lost, although this has not been determined.

Twelve persons were rescued from the upper stories of the building, while the flames were roaring around them. Some of these sustained slight injuries, but none was seriously hurt.

One fireman on a ladder forty feet above the street made a jump of ten feet to reach a woman on a fire escape.

Jury In Breach of Promise Case Decides Against Miss Grunspan

New York, March 6.—After a night's wrangling, the jury in the $100,000 breach of promise suit brought by Anna B. Grunspan against William E. Walling, millionaire Socialist and settlement worker, returned a verdict in favor of Walling.

The Parisian shopgirl wept bitterly and fled from the courtroom with her lawyers, while Walling and his wife, Anna Strunsky, remained and received the congratulations of a throng which crowded the courtroom and corridors.

NICKEL VALUED AT $1700

Rare Piece May Be the Only One of Its Issue In Existence

Painesville, O., March 6.—Mrs. A. M. Smith of this city unwittingly lost $1700 when she made change in paying a Chardon farmer for some produce here. Mrs. Smith's loss enriches in the same amount Max Dworken, a Cleveland real estate dealer, who received a 5-cent piece while in Chardon after a purchase.

The nickel is dated 1870, and coin collectors say it may be the only one of its issue in existence. The peculiarity about the piece of money is that it bears the phrase "In God We Trust" on one side, which does not appear upon the more recent 5-cent pieces. Collectors believe the coin is worth $1700.

DIFFERS WITH LAWYER

District Attorney French Fails to Find Obscene Lines In Bible

Boston, March 6.—United States Attorney French differs with James W. Stillman, an attorney, in his contention that the Bible should be excluded from the mails because, as Stillman alleges, it contains certain obscene passages.

Mr. French, in a letter to Stillman, says he has read carefully the alleged objectionable passages in a Bible left in his office by Stillman, but failed to find anything that tends to deprave the mind.

PRINCESS PAYS WAGES OF SIN

Love For Paterno Cost Her Life as Well as Fortune

SLAYER'S BLACK CHARACTER

Control Over His Victim and Extortion of Money From Her Shown to Have Been Premeditated—Once Threatened Murder Within Palace Walls—Queen Helena Deeply Affected as She Tells Orphans of Mother's Death

Rome, March 6.—Sobbing bitterly in the arms of Queen Helena of Italy as she broke the tidings to them that their mother was dead, the two children of the murdered Princess Giulia Trigona di Sant' Elia took their farewell of the Eternal City and prepared to go to their father at Palermo, where the princess will be buried.

Almost at the same hour it was announced by the physicians that Baron Vincenzo Paterno, slayer of the beautiful lady-in-waiting, will recover to face a tribunal of justice for his crime.

The parting of the daughters of the princess and the queen was pathetic in the extreme, and the queen found herself unable to tell the children the real cause of the death. Until they are reached by gossip, or grow older, they will continue to believe that their mother met her death in an automobile accident.

When on the verge of expulsion from the army, it has been discovered, the baron met the princess and not only became infatuated with her but believed that he saw a way out of the financial troubles that had in part almost wrecked his name and character.

He was powerful enough to become a prominent member of the Mafia, and as such succeeded in having Prince Trigona elected mayor of Palermo, his native city.

This action earned for him not only the prince's earnest friendship but introduction into his household, and, what he most desired, an opportunity to meet the princess.

Lack of character had not deprived the baron of lack of good looks, nor ways that proved fascinating to the princess. She fell into a passion that cost her her fortune, lost her the friendship almost of the queen, and in the end cost her her life.

For Paterno, no sooner had he firmly ensconsed himself in her affections—as soon as he knew that he had a hold on her—not only used it to further the friendship he desired, but held it over her as a sort of blackmail club with which he extorted money to pay his appalling debts and inflated living expenses.

In desperation the princess drew upon her patrimony, reducing it to a figure now estimated to be about $160 a month. She apparently struggled at times to resist, to save her self-respect and her fortune for the benefit of her husband and her children.

Matters even got so bad that the baron on one occasion, within the very walls of the Quirinal, the imperial palace, threatened to murder her, to choke her to death, in front of the very court itself, if she refused to give him the money he demanded. A struggle followed and in the scuffle the princess was hurt, and her bracelet was torn from arm, the baron pocketing it.

The beginning of the end came when the prince, up until that time entirely unsuspicious of his supposed friend and benefactor, came home unexpectedly and discovered the relations between the two.

He attempted to shoot the wrecker of his princely home, but was unsuccessful, and, in some manner or other, news of the state of affairs reached the ears of Queen Helena.

She at once called the princess, her favorite lady-in-waiting, before her, and before the interview had ended the princess had thrown herself at the feet of her royal mistress, confessed to everything and promised solemnly to renounce the baron and return to the care of her family.

Her action in consenting to the final meeting at the obscure hotel is believed now to have been for the purpose of terminating their acquaintance, and without any thought that sordid matters of money could possibly enter into the discussion.

The police, however, feel sure that it was no mere anger at being thrown over by the woman with whom he was infatuated that caused Paterno to kill the princess. That his demand for money, perhaps impossible of satisfaction, was the real cause they are now satisfied.

Ten Thousand Miners May Strike

Columbus, O., March 6.—A strike of 10,000 coal miners of Ohio and western Pennsylvania probably will be called by the United Mine Workers within the next week, according to Secretary Savage of District No. 6.

Death of Mrs. Douglas

Brockton, Mass., March 6.—Mrs. Naomie A. Douglas, aged 63, wife of former Governor William L. Douglas, died last night at her home in this city. She had been an invalid for two years.

FIGHT FOR HUMAN BONES

Souvenir Hunters Give Squad of New York Police a Hard Battle

New York, March 4.—A crowd of 2000 souvenir hunters struggled with a small force of police in a wild effort to get human bones which were unearthed by workmen on the site of the Forsythe Methodist Episcopal church.

The report that the laborers had uncovered scores of skeletons in the ancient burying ground about the church spread through the lower East Side and people swarmed there out of morbid curiosity.

Five big barrels had been filled with the bones, and so eager were men and women to get one of the bones that they rushed a squad of officers down a six-foot embankment. The police had to call assistance before they dispersed the crowd.

RAISING GOATS FOR FUR

Three Thousand Angoras Will Soon Dot the Hills of Berkshire

Chester, Mass., March 4.—John B. Kalipell of Butte, Mont., has written to his agent in this town that he intends to ship about 3000 goats of the angora variety to the land he has purchased in the Berkshires and enter on raising goats for their fur.

His venture is being looked upon with interest by the farmers in this section as it opens up possibilities to them of making some of their hillside farms yield something more than the rocks for which they are now famous.

The town of Washington expects a boom in its farming industry and an added picturesqueness to its daily life when Kalipell engages some of the local farm hands to act as shepherds for him.

UNPREPARED FOR EVEN A MINOR WAR

McLechlan Wants Army Reorganized or Abandoned

Washington, March 4.—Asserting that the army of the United States is wretchedly unorganized and extravagantly administered, that it is totally unprepared to fight and that an appropriation of $1,000,000,000 per annum cannot rehabilitate it under its present form of maladministration, Mr. McLachlan of California made an impassioned speech in the house in favor of the military establishment.

Mr. McLachlan criticized the suppression of the recent 'confidential report" of fthe secretary of war, which, he declares, would uphold all of his contentions.

He described the unpreparedness of the army to meet even a minor war and said that until the army is entirely reorganized and placed on a modern military basis all appropriations for its upkeep constitutes a criminal waste of funds. "The army should be entirely reorganized or immediately disbanded," he said.

EVOLUTIONS IN AIR

Successfully Carried Out by Squad of Military Airships

Pau, France, March 4.—The first aerial military evolution ever witnessed, culminating in a sensational charge of a squad of Bleriot monoplanes, took place here.

Captain Bellanger led the detachment of flyers. His followers were Lieutenants De Rose, De Malherbe and Princetau and Naval Ensign Conneau. The five machines left their hangars here one after the other with Bellanger in the van. They immediately aligned in military formation, and executed several difficult evolutions. Then at the word of command they started off on a charge to Paris.

BELLING IS SENTENCED

His Imprisonment Ranges From Fifteen Months to Nineteen Years

New York, March 4.—In sentencing Charles A. Belling, the former manager and vice president of the Bronx National bank, to a term in Sing Sing, Judge Foster said that it was an impossibility for any court to allow a bank official who pleaded guilty to a crime to go free although the officials of the institution and others urged clemency.

The former banker was given a term of not less than one year and three months and not more than nineteen years. Belling was charged with forging stock.

Monument For Tyler's Grave

Washington, March 4.—The house approved a bill to provide for the erection of a monument over the grave of President John Tyler at Richmond. The limit of expense in the bill is $10,000

King Alfonso's Son Sick

Madrid, March 4.—The illness of Prince Jaime, the second son of King Alfonso of Spain, is causing serious apprehension. The boy is suffering from an affliction of the throat.

Death of Professor Van Hoff

Berlin, March 4.—Professor Jakob H. Van Hoff, the chemist and author, is dead. He was professor of chemistry at Berlin university, and in 1901 received the Nobel prize of $40,000 for research in chemistry. He was born in Rotterdam in 1852.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

It was after the ashes had been knocked from the bedtime pipe that Blount left his chair and the secluded corner of the veranda to go and wander among the parked automobiles on the lawn.

Blount had just awakened a sleepy chauffeur to ask him to uncover the engine of a new Italian car when a stir at the veranda entrance told him that at least a few of the dancing guests were leaving early.

He drew back when the little group in the veranda came down the steps, preceded by a club footman, who was calling the number of the car. And it was not until he was turning away that he found himself face to face with a very beautiful and very clear eyed young woman who was buttoning an automobile dust coat up under her chin.

"Patricia!" he burst out. "For pity's sake, you don't mean to tell me that you have been here all the evening?"

Her quiet smile gave the impression not quite of frigidity perhaps, but of that quality of serene self possession which strangers sometimes mistook for coldness.

"Why shouldn't I be here?" she asked. "Didn't you know that the Cranfords, the people who are entertaining, were old friends of ours?"

Blount shook his head. "No. I didn't know it, and because I didn't I have lost an entire evening. It was cruel of you to deny me this last evening, Patricia."

"'This last evening?'" she echoed. "Why 'last?'"

"Because I am leaving Boston and New England Monday. It is the only thing to do."

"I am sorry you are taking it this way, Evan," she deprecated in the sisterly tone that always made him hotly resentful. "It hurts my sense of proportion."

"Sometimes I think you haven't any sense of proportion, Patricia," he said half morosely. "If you have I am sure it is dreadfully distorted."

A white haired old gentleman in the tonneau was calling impatiently to Patricia to come and take her place so that he might close the door.

"It is you who have the distorted perspective, Evan," she countered. "Where are you going?"

"I am going west day after tomorrow."

"How odd!" she said. "We are going west, too—papa and I—though not quite so soon as Monday."

"You are?" he queried. "Whereabouts in the west?"

She did not tell him where. The car motor was whirring, the chauffeur was swinging up to his seat behind the pilot wheel, and the old gentleman in the tonneau was growing quite violently impatient.

"I shan't say goodby," she said hastily, giving him her hand at parting, "nor shall I tell you where we are going. Let it be auf wiedersehen—till we meet again."

CHAPTER II.

THE BOSS.

In a private dining room in the Intermountain hotel, whose entrance portico faces the capitol grounds in the chief city of the Sagebrush State, two men were finishing dinner.

On the guest book of the Intermountain one of the men had registered from Chicago. The name was illegible to the cursory eye, but since it was the signature of an empire builder it was sufficiently well known in all the vast region served by the Transcontinental railway system.

The owner of the name had finished his ice and was sitting back to clip the end from a very long and very black cigar. He was a man past middle age, large framed and heavy, with the square, resolute face of a born master of circumstances.

Though he figured only as the first vice president of the Transcontinental company, Hardwick McVickar was really the active head of its affairs and the director of its policy.

Across the small round table sat the railway magnate's dinner guest, a man who was more than McVickar's match in big boned, square shouldered physique; a man whose half century was written only in the thick grizzled hair and heavy graying mustaches.

"I wish I could convince you that it isn't worth while to hold me at arm's length, senator," McVickar was saying. "You know as well as I do that under the present law in this state we are practically bankrupt. We do a losing business from the moment we cross your state line."

"Yes; it seems to me that I have heard something like that before," was the noncommittal rejoinder.

"You have heard the simple truth, then. And it is a bald injustice not only to the railroad, but to the people it serves. We can't give adequate service when the cost exceeds the earnings."

"And you are unable to convince the members of the railroad commission?" asked the man whom the vice president addressed as "senator."

"You know well enough that we can't convince an anti-railroad commission," was the half angry retort.

"Yet you are still running the railroad," suggested the other.

"Yes; luckily the Transcontinental system does not lie wholly within your state boundaries. If it did we might as well surrender our charter and go out of business."

"All of which has come to be a pretty old story, McVickar," said the listener quietly. "You didn't make me motor thirty miles to hear you tell it all over again, I know. What do you want?"

"We want a square deal," was the curt reply.

"So do the people of this state," asserted the man across the table. "You bled us, Hardwick—bled us to death while you had the chance. You are justly, if not legally, in debt to every man in this state who had ever shipped a carload of freight or paid a passenger fare over your line before the present rate law went into effect."

"You are too many for me, Blount, and I'm no apprentice at the game either. In all the years we've dickered together you've always been a consistent fighter for your own hand. What's happened to you? Have you acquired a new set of convictions, or is this only a different way of whipping the devil around the stump?"

"Oh, I don't know," returned the guest. "We are all growing older—and wiser perhaps. You don't deny the debt you owe us, do you?"

"Do we owe you anything, Blount?" asked the magnate pointedly. "If we do we are willing to pay it in spot cash on demand."

The big man on the other side of the table was leaning back in his chair with his hands in his pockets, and the smile wrinkling at the corners of his eyes was half genial, half satirical.

"It's lucky we are alone, McVickar," he said. "A third party might imagine that you are trying to bribe me."

"That's all right, Blount. We understand each other. Nothing for nothing is the accepted rule in this world of ours, and we all recognize it. You are figuring on something. I know you are. Name it. If it is anything less than a mortgage on the earth and one or two of the planets I'll get it for you."

"I am afraid we are more than a mile or two apart yet," said the man who was not smoking after a long minute. "Let's go back to the beginning and start over again. I said that Gordon is going to be the next governor."

"I know you did, and I said he wouldn't be, not if we can help it," said the railway magnate, with equal determination.

"The methods you will take to defeat him will insure his election, McVickar. You fellows are mighty slow to learn your lesson. You don't know anything but bribery. The times have changed, and you have not changed with them. I say Gordon will be the next governor."

Again there was a strained silence. It was the vice president who broke it.

"If we had the safest kind of majority in the legislature we couldn't be sure of accomplishing anything with Gordon in the governor's office," he asserted. "You don't need to be told that."

"Oh, I don't know," was the calm rejoinder. "Gordon is an honest man and a fair man. If you could go to him with clean hands, but you could not do that, McVickar. You're too badly out of practice."

"You are not putting it quite fairly, senator. We are too badly whipped to take any chances."

"I know. That is what you always say, and you have said it so much you and your fellow railroad managers, that you have lost the straightforward combination. You don't know how to make a clean fight, and it's your own fault."

Once more the man with the square jaw took time to consider.

"Your're sparring with me, Blount," he said finally. "You are talking to me as you might talk to a committee of the Good Government league. Let's get together. You control the political situation, and we recognize that fact. Meet me halfway and tell me what you want."

"I want a square deal all around, Hardwick; that's all. And you've got to make a clean fight this time if you want me with you. A new day has dawned in American politics. I and my kind recognize it, and you and your kind don't seem to recognize it. That is the difference between us. In the present case it comes down to this: You are going to fight for a railroad majority in the legislature, and you want Reynolds for the head of the ticket because you know that you can depend upon his veto if you don't get your majority. You are not going to get Reynolds or the majority either without the help of the party organization."

"We can put it simpler than that," said the railroad man. "We get nothing without your help as the head of the party organization. That is why I asked you here to dinner with me tonight."

"I have been wondering for the last half hour if you really believe that you need me, McVickar. When I gave you fair warning two years ago you wouldn't take it, and we did you up. Are you sure you are ready now to holler enough?"

AKED TO QUIT NEW YORK

New York, March 6.—Frankly stating the disappointment he had experienced in his ministry to the wealthy and fashionable congregation of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, Rev. Charles F. Aked formerly announced from his pulpit yesterday that he had received a unanimous call to the First Congregational church of San Francisco, and said he had been unable to find any good reason why he should not accept.

He regretfully acknowledged his fears that the great enterprises which he had hoped to lead as pastor of one of the wealthiest churches in America were only "such stuff as dreams are made of." Notwithstanding the salary of $12,000, or his ties of friendship in the metropolis, he did not see how he could contemplate a permanent ministry here under present conditions.

WOMEN "SPONGE" OFF ARTISTIC TALENT

Mrs. Powell's Idea of Women's Clubs and Clubwomen

New York, March 6.—As a result of a row in the Women's Press club, Mrs. Alma W. Powell resigned as chairman of the music committee.

"Club women are useless members of society," she said, "and most of the so-called women's clubs are 'sponge clubs' because they sponge off all the artistic talent they can get to come and amuse these nice old ladies a whole afternoon for nothing."

Mrs. Powell says she got the talent for the club's music day and the performers were a little late in coming. Mrs. Powell, in apologizing for the delay, said that as the artists were paid nothing they could not be expected to be on the minute.

Mme. Von Klenner said that any singer should feel honored to appear before the Women's Press club and make no apologies for them. Mrs. Powell thought it over and resigned.

HAS ANOTHER FORTUNE

"Death Valley Scotty" Knows Where to Unearth Gold Nuggets

Reno, Nev., March 6.—"Death Valley Scotty," the man of mystery from the Funeral range, has again budded forth laden with gold nuggets gathered from no one knows where and no one knows how much.

"Scotty" appeared unheralded and unexpected on the streets of Winnemucca, clad in his characteristic garb, the slouched sombrero, blue flannel shirt, red handkerchief, much-worn overcoat, old black trousers and miner's tools.

GLANDERS IN HAVERHILL

Teamster Dies of Disease and Watering Troughs Are Closed

Haverhill, Mass., March 6.—As a result of an epidemic of glanders, Alderman Wood, who has charge of the street department, issued an order to close all watering troughs in the city.

Dr. Brickell, the city veterinarian, reports new cases of glanders. One person, a teamster, has already fallen a victim to glanders. An examination after the man's death revealed the fact that he had contracted the disease in a stable.

DECLARES EDDY WILL "FALSE"

Estate of Christian Science Leader Claimed by Nephew

HE FILES MOTION IN COURT

Asks to Be Admitted as Party to Litigation, Taking Exceptions to Residuary Clause Which Leaves Estate to Church—Says Glover Is Barred as Beneficiary Because of Release Which He Signed

Concord, N. H., March 6.—Another move was made in the legal controversy over the will of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy by the filing by George W. Baker of Concord, N. H., a nephew of Mrs. Eddy, in the superior court of Merrimack county, of a motion for leave to intervene in the suit of Mrs. Eddy's son, George W. Glover of Lead, S. D., against the trustees of her estate. The motion prays also that George W. Glover be enjoined from continuing the litigation.

The motion declared that the will of Mrs. Eddy is "wholly false" because of the residuary clause by which the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston, is bequeathed an estate estimated to be worth $2,000,000. That George W. Glover is barred from any benefit from the will because of the release which it declares he and others signed several years ago is a declaration which immediately precedes in the motion the assertion that George W. Barker alone, as "the nearest of kin," is entitled by the statutes of distribution of the state of New Hampshire to "take, receive and hold" Mrs. Eddy's property.

"Wherefore," it continues, "George W. Baker prays that he may be admitted as a party to the litigation; that the plaintiff and his attorneys be strictly enjoined from proceeding further with the litigation, or with any other litigation under any alleged claim as heir-at-law of said Mary Baker G. Eddy; and that George W. Baker may be substituted for the plaintiff in the proceedings," which it prays will "be stayed pending the disposal of the questions of law and facts arising, or to arise in the regular course in the probate court, and for such other reliefs as may be just."

The motion, which was filed very late Saturday night, did not come as an entire surprise to those interested in the case, George W. Baker having on Feb. 12 given notice that he would file a petition to be allowed to intervene as next of kin.

The motion, which is a document of about 1200 words, recites the facts as to the death of Mrs. Eddy, and the subsequent filing of her will; the suit of George W. Glover and others against Henry M. Baker of Bow, N. H., and the other executors, based on a claim that the will is invalid because of the terms of the residuary clause.

ADAM DIDN'T GET AN APPLE

Connecticut Man Says It Was a Pear That Caused Trouble

Hartford, March 6.—George W. Smith of Melrose, secretary of the Connecticut Horticultural society, in an address here declared that apples could not possibly grow in a tropical country like the Garden of Eden.

Talking historically, Smith said the pear had its earlies authentic origin in western Asia.

"Eve might have used an orange, a pomegranate or a fig, but she couldn't have offered an apple to Adam. By elimination, it becomes apparent that it was a pear that got Adam into trouble and started things that are as yet unfinished."

NAVY BAN IS LIFTED

Tars Allowed Ashore at Portsmouth After a Controversy

Portsmouth, N. H., March 6.—Sailors on the government craft in the navy yard here are enjoying their first shore leave since the last of the ships entered the harbor two weeks ago. Most of the ship commanders had refused to permit the marines to enter the city.

Captain Wilner, commandant of the navy yard, withdrew from the controversy over whether or not the Jack Tars should be granted shore leave. The other commanders immediately gave notice to the men they could go ashore.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

SOCIAL CLUB RAIDED

Police Found Only Empty Barrels and Glasses

Inspector Goodhue and a squad of officers raided the rooms occupied by the South Quincy Social club in Malnati block about midnight Saturday night. The members of the club had gone when the officers arrived. They seized an empty half, and an empty quarter barrel, empty beer bottles, pitcher and glasses. It is claimed by the police that the half barrel was delivered by an expressman at the rooms early Saturday evening. The contents of the half had been drank during the evening.

BASKET BALL VICTORIES

Y. M. C. A. Teams Win from Milton Boys

The Y. M. C. A. basketball teams were both victorious on Saturday, the first team defeating the Milton Five, 37 to 18, and the second team winning by 24 to 16 from the Silent Five. The first team played their best game of the season, showing great proficiency in passing and blocking as well as in shooting baskets. Trask got 6 baskets, Morris 5, Jenkins 4 and the backs, Dackers and Rich one each. For the visitors Powell, the centre, was the star. Shields and Leary played well, getting two baskets apiece. The summary:

QUINCY	MILTON
Trask, rf	lb, Ryan
Morris, lf	rb, Blake
Jenkins, c	c, Powell
Dackers, rb	lf, Craig
	rf, Shields
Rich, lb	lf, Leary

Score—Quincy, 37; Milton, 18. Goals from floor—Trask 6, Morris 5, Jenkins 4, Dackers, Rich, Powell 3, Shields 2, Leary 2, Ryan. Goals from fouls—Morris 3, Powell 2. Referee—Parker. Scorer—LaRose. Time—20m halves. Attendance—200.

SECOND TEAMS.

The second team defeated the Silent Five in a close contest. Childs and Dineen secured 3 baskets each and Booth who appeared on the second team for the first time on Saturday got two. Doucette was the best man on the Milton team, getting three baskets from the floor. Childs' 6 baskets on free tries aided Quincy very materially in winning the victory.

The summary:

QUINCY	SILENT FIVE
Dineen, rf	lb, Rich
Childs, lf	rb, Hearn
Booth, c	c, Ward
Holmes, rb	lf, Doucette
Newcomb, lb	rf, Bent

Score—Quincy, 24; Milton, 16. Goals from floor—Childs 3, Newcomb 3, Booth 2, Dineen, Doucette 3, Rich 2, Hearn, Bent. Goals from fouls—Childs 6, Hearn, Doucette. Referee—Parker. Scorer—LaRose. Time—20m periods.

LOCAL SPORTS.

Milton High won Saturday from Massachusetts Normal Art 39 to 10.

At a recent meeting of the newly organized Colonial base ball club of West Quincy, held at the home of William R. McDonald, the following officers were elected: President, Frank L. McPherson; treasurer, Ralph A. Elcock; secretary, Clement J. Patriarca; manager, Frank L. McPherson; captain, Clement J. Patriarca. The Colonials will be composed of players who have had considerable experience on the diamond, and will undoubtedly have one of the strongest 17-18 year old teams in greater Boston. The following players have been signed up for the season of 1911: Frank L. McPherson, William R. McDonald, Ralph A. Elcock, Clement J. Patriarca, Joseph O'Connor, Albert Thomas, James Doyle, Ambrose O'Dowd, Oswald Shea and Michael J. Saville.

Tomorrow Quincy High will meet Oliver Ames High of North Easton for the state championship. Weymouth High plays Bridgewater High.

BOHEMIA PLANS RADIUM RESORT

Joachimsthal Baths to Be Open to All Nations.

REMARKABLE CURES REPORTED

Capitalists' Offers to Purchase or Lease Refused, and Government Will Build Plant to Utilize Curative Springs. Lame Child Reported as Walking After Two Dozen Baths.

Since it was discovered that not only the mineral from the mines of Joachimsthal, in the Erz mountains of Bohemia, contains nearly all the radium hitherto found in the world, but that the springs of Joachimsthal hold radium in such quantities that marvelous cures have been accomplished, numerous capitalists and companies have applied for concessions enabling them to make use of the springs on a large scale. But the government has for the time being rejected all applications and is about to build an extensive kurhaus at its own expense which will be opened this year.

Joachimsthal has six springs, of which three are proved to be radio active. They pass through mineral strata containing radium and are radio active the moment they come to the surface.

Pipe Line For Water.

As the state owns the mines where the springs appear it has long since caught the springs in pipes in the mountains and brings the water to Joachimsthal, a distance of nearly three miles.

Count Sylva Tarouca owns the land adjoining the government property, which extends over twenty-five square miles, and he is about to build a modern hotel to be opened next fall. Another hotel will be built by the municipality of Joachimsthal.

The government kurhaus will have no accommodation other than the baths, the inhalation and drinking rooms. It will be placed under the management of an assistant of Professor Neusser, a famous specialist, who has studied the effect of radium on diseases for several years.

The three government springs at present yield water enough for 450 baths a day, but as it cannot be applied pure, the effect being too strong, about 1,000 baths are available. The springs are cool, and the water will have to be warmed before use.

Many Cures Reported.

Very primitive baths have been in use in Joachimsthal for a very long time, as their healing effect was well known in all the country around long before any one heard of radium. The primitive bathing and drinking cures have been most effective in curing rheumatism, neuralgia and nervous diseases. A patient who had kidney complaint was cured, and a lame child on whom the effect of the radio-active water was tried as an experiment walked after taking two dozen baths.

The highest medical authorities entertain no doubt that Joachimsthal will soon become a health resort of the first order.

The quantity of radium hitherto obtained from the government mines has amounted to six grams produced by a tedious and costly process from 60,000 kilograms of mineral. A gram of radium is considered worth $80,000.

One gram was lent by the Austrian government to Mme. Curie for experiments.

EDISON HIDES HIS VOICE.

Has Promised Wife Not to Give Out Phonographic Record.

The sentimental side of Thomas A Edison, the inventor, who among other things evolved the phonograph, is revealed in a letter to the president of the boys' science department at Soldan high school, St. Louis. In reply to a request for a phonographic record of his voice to reproduce on "Edison day" he wrote that he has promised his wife that he will never make a record of his voice and allow it to come into possession of any one but Mrs. Edison.

The letter is one of the treasured possessions of Soldan high school and will be framed and hung in a most conspicuous position on the walls of the school.

RAID AT BRAINTREE.

The premises of Mary DeLeo, at 1058 Washington street, Braintree, was raided by Chief Loring on Saturday, when he seized 54 bottles of beer and a quantity of whiskey and brandy.

Many believe that the order authorizing the Mayor to sign a water contract involved an appropriation of over $300, and if so required a two-thirds vote. An appropriation will be necessary before it can be put into effect, and may not easily receive the two-thirds vote.

A GOOD ONE ON CONNIE MACK.

Hugh Fullerton tells a story on Connie Mack, manager of the world's championship Philadelphia American club. During the celebration in Philadelphia of the Athletics' victory in the world's championship series the entire city was given over to the affair and honors were being heaped upon Connie. Mack was the biggest man in Philadelphia at that time, and every man of wealth and prominence in every line counted it an honor to sit with him. He was at one of the swell Philadelphia clubs as a guest of a member when a stranger, who also was a visitor at the club, was led forward and introduced.

"This is Mr. Mack," said the host to the stranger.

"I'm pleased," said the stranger, shaking the extended hand. "I've seen your play and enjoyed it immensely."

"Indeed," said Mack politely. "You must be an old time fan."

"I am," answered the stranger. "I especially enjoy the romantic Irish melodramas; but, Mr. Mack, it seems to me that on the stage you seem much heavier."

GRAY, BILLIARD STAR.

Australian Champion, Now In London, Astounding English Billiard World.

Fancy a billiard player monopolizing the table from Wednesday until Friday! This is what the English experts have to put up with just now during the tour of George Gray, the young Australian phenomenon, who thinks nothing of running up over a thousand points at a time. The English game differs from the style of play here. The pockets are brought into requisition in addition to the carroms, and the table is larger, with smaller balls. There are probably a half dozen better all round exponents of the art in England at the present time, but nevertheless through devoting six hours a day of the past ten years to practice the young antipodean has so mastered a particular shot that he is now making all his opponents look silly.

His favorite stroke is what is termed a "red loser." This consists in nursing the red ball down from the end rail to the middle pocket and glancing "in off." Once in this position it is dollars to doughnuts the run will go into the hundreds. Already Gray has made eight strings of over a thousand points, and, from the way he is shaping, it will not surprise any one if he yet runs the two thousands. It is quite a new experience for the spectators to sit through a whole session and sometimes two or three and watch one man go on raising his break. To the opponent it must be aggravating in the extreme.

HOLBEIN WILL TRY AGAIN.

Famous Swimmer to Make Last Effort to Cross English Channel.

Montague Holbein, who has several times almost accomplished the swimming of the English channel, will make one last effort next summer. He has learned a new leg stroke by which he not only hopes to increase his pace, but also to lessen the strain on his stamina. It is called the "northern kick" and offers an absolute minimum of resistance to the water when the legs are being drawn into a position for a kicking. Its motion increases the speed, and there is not nearly the same fatigue resulting.

Australian Oarsmen May Coach In U. S.

Information from Australia says that two of the world's greatest professional scullers—Richard Arnst, present world's champion, and Harry Pearce—are likely to become connected with the rowing departments of two of the foremost universities in the United States—one in the east and the other in the middle west.

Syracuse and Columbia to Meet.

Columbia college of New York, after eight years, has resumed track relations with Syracuse, and on May 8 the athletes of these colleges will meet at Syracuse.

STATE MEET AT Y. M. C. A.

Malden Boys First and Quincy Boys Second

The fifth annual meet of the Boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. of Massachusetts was held in the Quincy Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Saturday afternoon with 115 entries. The team representing the Malden association carried away the cup with a score of 29 points. Quincy was second with 22, and Clapp Memorial of Weymouth, third with 16.

Kenneth Briggs of Quincy (class A) was the individual star of the meet. He won first in the 15-yard dash, first in the potato race, and third in the standing broad jump, thus scoring 12 points for his team. Harris of Malden (class A) and Neal of Malden (class B) were the next in line, with 11 and 10 points respectively. Kemp of Quincy won the potato race in class C, very handily defeating Bumpus of Clapp Memorial by two yards. Andrews of Quincy got second place in the class B potato race, and R. Prout secured third in the dash for class B.

In addition to the cup awarded to the winning team, individual cups were given to the winners in the three classes. Briggs got the cup for class A boys, Neal of Malden with 10 points was awarded the class B cup, and Bumpus of Clapp Memorial received the class C cup. It was thought at first that four men were tied for the cup with 5 points each, and Homan of Lynn won on the toss up. Later investigation proved that Bumpus deserved the cup since he scored 8 points by winning first in the three standing jumps, and second in the potato race.

Neal of Malden was one of the best performers in the class B contests. Faith of Newton elicited much applause for his excellent form in the high jump. All the events were closely contested and much enthusiasm was astir particularly when a Quincy boy was one of the favorite contestants. Besides the cups, medals and ribbons were awarded to the winners of places in the different events, and the members of the winning relay teams. Malden had a well balanced team with good men in both the running events and the jumps. Quincy was strong in the dashes and potato races, but very weak in the jumps. Clapp Memorial had a well balanced team but lacked men of winning calibre. Bumpus is a comer but has not had sufficient training to be at top form.

The officials of the meet were: Starter—Buxton of Lynn. Timers—C. M. Gifford of Clapp Memorial and J. J. Floyd of Quincy. Judges at finish—J. McArdle, C. Parker, E. A. Rattei and W. Avery. Field judges—H. H. Buxton, P. Wood, E. Prout and J. Phelan Smith of Malden. Scorer—Clee of Quincy.

The summary:

But Proposed Location on Washington St. for Depot Meets with Some Objection

Numerous Appropriation Orders Introduced Into City Council

Several rulings by President Bryant during the session of the City Council on Monday evening were a warning to the councilmen that he intends to keep them strictly to the rules in the conduct of city business. Once an appeal was taken from his ruling, but the Council was nearly unanimous in sustaining him. President Bryant had frequently to rap for order, as conversation between members was interrupting business. It was also noticed that at roll call every member was in his seat.

Councilman Campbell was the only absent member.

ADDING MACHINE.

Mayor Shea forwarded a communication from the Assessors asking for an appropriation for an adding machine.

Laid on the table until later, when Councilman Branch offered an order for $360 to purchase an adding machine. Referred to Finance Committee.

PARK WANTS.

The Mayor forwarded the following communications from the Park Commissioners:

Asking for an appropriation for $750 to equip one playground.

Asking for an appropriation of $1,500 for an addition to the bath house.

Asking for an appropriation of $6,000 for building a pleasure drive through Merrymount park.

Asking for an appropriation of $500 to put the park at the junction of Copeland, Common and West streets in condition. All referred to Committee on Public Grounds.

SCREEN HOUSE.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Board of Health asking for an appropriation of $2,150 to build a screen house at Houghs Neck. Referred to Finance committee.

SACHEM STREET.

A petition was received for the acceptance of Sachem street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

BUCKLEY STREET.

A petition to accept Buckley street between Morton street and Suomi road was received and referred to the Committee on Streets.

MEMORIAL HALL.

A largely signed petition was received setting forth that there was occasion for a hall in Quincy to be known as a "Memorial hall" to be used by the Grand Army and Spanish War veterans, and asking the city to provide such a hall. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

A number of applications for minor licenses were received and referred to Committee on Licenses.

Several petitions were received from the Telephone Co., for attachments. Referred to Committee on Streets.

GRADE CROSSING.

Remonstrances against the proposed plan for changing the grade at Water street were received from the Board of Trade, Granite Manufacturers Association and Merchants' Association. Laid on the table until later, when Councilman Branch offered a resolution remonstrating against the change as proposed which was adopted.

TROLLEY FREIGHT.

A public hearing, which lasted an hour and 40 minutes, was given at 7.45 on the petition of the Old Colony street railway for a cross-over on Washington street near Foster street to enter the Tisdale property for a trolley freight depot.

P. R. Blackmur, the former city solicitor, appeared for the petitioners. He said it was not a question of franchise, as that had already been granted under conditions. The company has looked about for a central location which would best accommodate the people. The company is willing to put in on Washington street any kind of construction that may be required. For a depot it is proposed to erect a concrete building some distance back from the street line, which will not be an eyesore, but artistic and in keeping with the neighborhood. We have letters from officials and business men of southeastern Massachusetts commending the establishment of trolley freight.

H. G. Smith, general manager of the For River shipyard, spoke in favor of the petition. Trolley freights had interested him for some time. Establishment of service would be of advantage to shipyard and citizens. Location was central and desirable. Understood company now had connection with New York via Providence. Said he was not particular on just this location.

John L. Miller said the movement was commendable and should be encouraged. Should welcome anything that will touch the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. May be of benefit to our granite industry. Good building would be no detriment to neighborhood.

Henry L. Kincaide as a business man favored. Depot should be near centre of city. The merchants were working to build up a trade from South Shore towns and would welcome trolley freight. Location was admirable with plenty of room. Could not see that it would be objectionable to neighborhood. In reply to question, he said that the Packard lot at the corner of Cottage avenue would suit him better.

No one else desired to appear in favor and President Bryant asked if there were any remonstrants.

Charles H. Hardwick who represents considerable residential property in the vicinity, appeared in opposition to the location. Did not object to trolley freight. Washington street is too narrow; it has but a single track located on the side of the street. Tall trees obstruct the view. Street is the principal artery of travel between South Shore and Boston and to Nantasket beach. Had large auto travel. Freight cars would have to cross full width of street. Would be particularly dangerous in shooting out of depot.

MILTON UNCHARITABLE

Votes to Assess a Charity for Tuition of Children

Milton held the largest and most interesting town meeting in its history on Monday. The old board of selectmen was reelected but Maurice Duffy led Jacob Turner by only five votes. In a bitter contest, two members of the school committee were reelected, and in the race for auditorship James F. Mitchell and William B. Batchelder were elected the latter with a lead of only five votes over William A. Will.

The officers elected are:

Selectmen—Henry S. Barnes, Philip S. Dalton, Maurice Duffy.

Clerk—Henry B. Martin.

Treasurer—J. Porter Holmes.

Assessor—George W. Nickerson.

Tax Collector—Josiah Babcock.

School committee—Mrs. Anne R. Cunningham, Reginald L. Robbins.

Auditors—William B. Batchelder and James F. Mitchell.

Park Commissioner—Horatio A. Lamb.

Sewer Commissioner for 3 years, Asaph Churchill.

Sewer Commissioner for 1 year—Charles G. Waitt.

Water Commissioner—Thomas B. Gordon.

Board of Health—R. L. Burnett.

Trustee of Cemetery—J. Frank Pope.

Tree Warden—Nathaniel T. Kidder.

On the license question: Yes, 200; no, 729.

The recommendation of the warrant committee that a committee of five be appointed to prepare for the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the incorporation of the town was unanimously accepted.

Consideration of the proposition of precinct voting, and of pensioning firemen who have been incapacitated in service, was postponed.

A demand was made on the Leopold Morse orphanage home for infirm Hebrews for extra school expenses incurred through the schooling of its inmates.

Twelve constables were to have been chosen, but only four candidates were named on the ballot. Twenty men received votes for the remaining eight positions, but only six of these received more than six votes apiece, and the other two will have to be appointed later.

The town appropriations were: Town officers, $9,000; schools, $86,000; Board of Health, $2,500; library, $8,700; highways and bridges, $57,000; poor department, $5,800; fire department, $24,640; police, $27,500; street lights, $16,025. Total, $310,107.

CONCEALED WEAPON.

When Santi DiFerri of Canal street left home this morning he little thought that half an hour later he would be in court charged with carrying a concealed weapon. DiFerri went to the depot to take the 10 o'clock train, and while seated in the waiting room frequently threw his coat open, disclosing a revolver protruding from his inside pocket. Some of the ladies at the depot became frightened and Officer Murray was notified. When DiFerri saw Jim coming he ran into the toilet room, and Jim promptly went after him, and placed him under arrest. On being searched it was found that he had a five chamber 38 calibre revolver in his pocket, four of the chambers being loaded. He was given a ride in the auto to the police station, and then back to the court room, where he was fined $25 for carrying a concealed weapon, which was also forfeited.

MERCHANT MARRIED

Serenaded by Odd Fellows Band and a Jolly Time

A very happy group of people assembled in the house at 45 Bedford street, Monday evening to witness the marriage ceremony of Costas G. Emanuel, of the well known firm S. G. Emanuel & Co., and Miss Eva Gertrude Prario, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Prario, of 5 Filbert street, West Quincy.

At 7.30 the familiar strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Miss Myrtle Hobart opened the ceremony. The bride, handsomely attired in a gown of pink silk with white spangled trimming, advanced with her brother, Henry Prario, who gave her away. They were followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Mabelle E. Prario, a sister of the bride, who was dressed in white and Miss Ida Teaque of Hyde Park wearing a gown of pink. The groom was attended by Newman H. Savage and Henry G. Prario.

After the ceremony a reception was held in which the guests, numbering about fifty were given an opportunity to congratulate the young people and to inspect the abundance of beautiful gifts. Prominent among the presents were a solid silver tea service and a clock with gold trimmings and diamond setting given by the uncle of the groom, George Pillalas of Brockton.

Just at the close of the ceremony the guests were startled by hearing music outside. Upon investigation it was found that the Odd Fellows band, of Manet Encampment had come up to give a serenade. They were invited inside, where more music was rendered. After all had partaken of the collation, the newly married couple scurried out to the touring car amid a shower of rice, confetti and good wishes, and were taken to the Quincy station. The wedding trip will include, New York and Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel will be at home to friends after April 1 in the new home, 45 Bedford street.

DAY NURSERY BLAMELESS.

Editor Daily Ledger:

In the Quincy Daily Ledger of Mar. 1, there appeared an article setting forth numerous statements regarding the scarlet fever cases then in Quincy. The Quincy Day Nursery was blamed for originating and spreading the disease. Such a statement was without foundation and entirely erroneous. Credit should be given the Quincy Day Nursery, and all those connected with it, for the prompt measures taken and lived up to as soon as a case of scarlet fever appeared in the nursery. The scarlet fever did not start in the Quincy Day Nursery.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED

To Protest Against Adoption of Railroad Plan

A meeting of representatives of the Board of Trade, Merchants' Association and Granite Manufacturers' Association was held in one of the committee rooms at City Hall Monday night, to take action relative to abolishing the grade crossings. The meeting appointed a committee consisting of Henry L. Kincaide, Eugene R. Stone and H. E. Crane to protest the adoption of the plans before the special commission.

A SURPRISE PARTY.

Walter H. Berry of Berry Bros. was pleasantly surprised at his home Monday evening when his clerks called on him in a body. To add to the surprise, Miss Mary Grant presented him on behalf of the clerks with a silver mounted fountain pen. Mr. Berry was at a loss to find words to thank them. To Mrs. Berry who had planned the surprise, was presented a beautiful silver belt buckle.

Lunch was served, after which all adjourned to the parlor where music and singing were enjoyed, as there are some fine singers among the clerks. After that whist was played, and ice cream and cake were served. Each one was presented with a favor which on being opened was fun for all, as some were very funny.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Leon Berry, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Berry, Corliss Berry, Donald Berry, Miss Mary Grant, Miss Margaret Stewart, Miss Lottie Rendle, Miss Ella Regan and Messrs. A. I. Dixon, Robert McNairn, Lewis Smith, Daniel Coleman, Melvin Higgins, Edward Roach, Michael Flaherty, Thomas Flaherty, Edward Sanborn, Leon Rhines, Charles Brown, Timothy Regan and J. R. Sullivan.

A PROTEST.

Editors Daily Ledger:

We note with pleasure that there has been a protest made against what is otherwise called a manly sport. We refer to the degrading exhibition "prize fighting" so called.

To conceive of intelligent men paying any price to behold two of their fellows stand and batter and mutilate each other is transporting themselves from a christian nation to the depths of paganism.

We are glad to raise our voice in protest against it, and hope our City Council will count it not a duty only, but a privilege to revoke the license of those who hold such disgraceful entertainments.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL CONTRACTS AWARDED

Lowest Bidders Win in Every Case and All Are Out--of--Town Contractors

Total Amount Called For Is $68,625 Out of $75,000

The contracts for building the new twelve room brick school building with assembly hall at Wollaston, for which $75,000 was appropriated by the City Council, were awarded this morning by the Mayor and Commissioner. In every case the contracts were awarded to the lowest reponsible bidders.

The contract for the erection of the building was awarded to C. S. Cunningham & Son of Lynn, whose bid was $59,900.

The contract for the heating and ventilating was awarded to Walter B. Ross of Boston, whose bid was $5,550, who was over $4,000 lower than the second lowest bid.

The contract for the plumbing was awarded to M. A. Dane & Son Co. of Lynn, whose bid was $3,175.

This makes a grand total of $68,625 leaving $6,375 for architects fees, supervision, etc.

MRS. EMMA BELCHER.

The funeral of Mrs. Emma H. Belcher of Randolph, who died at Wollaston, was held Monday afternoon from the First Congregational church at Randolph and was largely attended. Representatives were present from the Ladies Library Association, Capt. Horace Niles W. R. C.; Adams chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, and the Monday Art club. The floral display was beautiful. The services were conducted by Rev. C. R. Hamlin, pastor of the church. During the services there was music by the Puritan quartette. The burial was at the Central cemetery, Randolph.

SHOCK WAS FATAL.

Word has just been received in Atlantic that the Rev. John W. Bowler passed away at his home in Springfield, Feb. 28. It will be remembered that Mr. Bowler preached illustrated sermons both morning and evening at the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church on Lincoln Sunday. He intended giving an illustrated lecture on Abraham Lincoln Monday evening, Feb. 13. Just before leaving the house where he has been staying during his work in Atlantic he was stricken with apoplexy. He was moved on Tuesday to his home in Springfield and died there the following week. The funeral was held Thursday. He leaves a widow one son and daughter.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

There are some 400,000 automobiles in use in this country. And yet there are not enough miles to go 'round.

Large sums of money should not be carried in the pockets. It makes them bulge unbecomingly and is annoying to one's friends.

The way that Mexican revolution drags along it would seem that the marksmanship of neither side is anything to brag about.

When asked about the Champ Clark Canadian annexation talk, Premier Asquith said he did not wish to give a fictitious value to such apparent nonsense. Oh, you Chump Clark.

Quincy now has a "Big Four," and what is better, it acts as a unit. The Granite Manufacturers Association, the Board of Trade, the Retail Merchants' Association, and the City Council have each adopted, unanimously, resolutions against the "railroad plan" for the abolition of the Water street grade crossing. It is certainly encouraging to see the business organizations of the city united, and acting for the best interests of the city. It is for the benefit of the railroad, as well as the citizens, that the work of the abolition of the grade crossings shall be satisfactory to the people of Quincy and there must be some plan that will meet with general approbation. The railroad should remember that no other city has so much heavy teaming as Quincy. It is just as important that grades shall be avoided in Quincy streets as it is that the railroad should have an easy grade.

THE CHURCH AND WEALTH.

Rev. Charles F. Aked, who came over from England four years ago, to take the pastorate of the Fifth avenue Baptist church of New York, popularly known as the John D. Rockefeller church, has concluded that this fashionable society does not give him the opportunity he sought.

He said Sunday that he intended to take a pastorate in a more democratic church in San Francisco. He lays bare the weaknesses of the churches that are stifled by the stupefying influences of wealth.

The average church worker offers a particularly glad hand to men of wealth. With their aid, it seems to him as if the struggle for dollars to pay the minister and the janitor could become a shade less hysterical. He hopes, the financial burden removed, that there will be time for the church's true mission, to pump some spiritual oxygen into souls in a state of coma.

But the easier the money comes, the harder it is to get people's time and thought. It is like the Norman baron, who terror haunted on his death bed, endowed churches with ill gotten gains. The rich man thinks he can square things with the Lord and his brethren, by giving one or two per cent of his income to works of beneficence.

But if he be asked to give two hours a week to Sunday School work, the prospect seems a frightful burden. His presence among a group of young men would be of infinite value to both. The young men would do him as much good as he could do them.

He could make them realize better that the world's keenest minds have sanctioned the Christian faith. They would bring him into closer touch with the hopes and fears, the joys and sorrows, of our poor average humanity.

Rev. Mr. Aked's people need to realize that you can't buy substitutes in the army of the Lord. And they also ought to realize that there is no satisfaction in life more thrilling than the happiness that comes from making some personal sacrifice to help the other fellow.

HANNON ALIAS BANCROFT

A Boston paper of Monday evening tells how a Wollaston man became a victim, but also how he landed his man.

Arthur P. Homer, a selling agent of gasoline engines and motor boats, with offices at 88 Broad street, and home at Wollaston, caused the arrest in the Parker house today of P. Joseph Hannon, 23 years old, of 66 Draper street, Dorchester, who he alleges secured $80 from him Feb. 15 last.

For more than a year Homer told the police that he has known the defendant as "Frederick Bancroft." When they first met Hannon introduced himself to the complainant as "Frederick Bancroft," and claimed that he was a son of Gen. William A. Bancroft.

The two men became very friendly, and Homer admitted that he never doubted his new-found friend, believing until quite recently that his friend was a sort of street railway magnate. Homer thought so much of "Bancroft" that he invited him to his home at Wollaston and introduced him to his wife. Frequently "Bancroft" visited Homer at his Wollaston home, where he was a welcome guest and where everything was done to make his stay pleasant.

Feb. 15 it is alleged that Hannon secured $80 from Homer. He said that he had certain obligations to meet and that he was financially distressed. Believing that his friend was Gen. Bancroft's son, the selling agent gave him the $80 and although he did not desire it Hannon, it is asserted by the police, gave him a receipt for the money to which the name "Frederick Bancroft" was signed.

This morning Homer received a telephone call from "Bancroft" who was at the Parker house. "Bancroft" was in a bad way financially, he said, and wanted his friend the gasoline engine man to come to his assistance Homer wanted "Bancroft" to come to his place of business, but the latter said "no," saying that it would be to the advantage of Homer if he should meet him at the hotel. G. Homer came. At the hotel, it is alleged, that "Bancroft" made another demand for money and said that if Homer did not give it to him he would put him out of commission.

Instead, Homer slipped to the street and told his story to crossing patrolman Mathoney of division 2. The latter locked "Bancroft" up, and at station 2 the prisoner gave his correct name and address. Homer said that he would prosecute him.

Hannon has been arrested before and has been on probation. He came before Justice Wentworth in the first session of the municipal criminal court. Homer told the story concerning how the $80 was secured. "Honest John "Quinn who was representing Hannon, had a secret conference with the judge after Homer had given his testimony, and a setnence of four months in the common jail was imposed. At Quinn's request the judge changed the sentence from jail to the house of correction, and Hannon appealed.

A Century's Lapse

What Was Accomplished Under an Indian Fakir's Instructions

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There are many singular processes known in the east that are not understood in the west. In India we hear of people being buried and a long while afterward resurrected. Ordinarily persons shake their heads at such stories, but there has been so much testimony as to these strange doings that the feeling has gained ground that there is something in them. There is certaintly nothing new in them. What these Indians know has been handed down to them through centuries.

During the reign of terror in France a young girl, Marie de Maurier, the daughter of a nobleman, was condemned to death with others of her class whom the revolutionists desired to eliminate. She was expecting to be taken to the guillotine and executed when the door of her cell was opened and a man of swarthy features, with a fez on his head, entered. He lighted a taper he held in his hand, and a strange odor soon pervaded the cell. The girl sat on a pile of straw in a corner, but the man stood with his face near a window, holding at the same time a vial under his nose. Mlle. de Maurier sank down apparently dead. The man took her in his arms and carried her out to the prison dead house, where she was put into a coffin. The coffin was then placed in a cart and driven away in charge of the swarthy man, who before leaving dropped several gold pieces into the palm of the jailer.

The body of Mlle. de Maurier was carried to the laboratory of a distinguished French savant, Professor Chantan, who received it from the swarthy man. Both entered the laboratory with it, and the professor locked the doors. That was the last seen of Marie de Maurier for a hundred years.

In 1808 Paul Chantan, the great-great-grandson of Professor Chantan, a young scientist of promise, went to the family vault in the cemetery of Pere Lachaise and, taking down from an upper shelf a casket, had it removed to his laboratory. There he lifted from the coffin the body of a young girl. Having laid it on a table, he took from his pocket a manuscript and began to read:

Record of the case of Mlle. Marie de Maurier, who was to have been guillotined on the 5th of March, 1798. Her jailer was bribed to permit Hyder Cassim, an Indian fakir, to place her in a comatose condition, and she, being considered dead, was taken to the laboratory of Professor Antoine Chantan, where the Indian in the presence of Chantan prepared her to lie dormant for an indefinite period. One hundred years after the application of this process let the oldest born lineal descendant of Professor Chantan take the body from the family vault in Pere Lachaise and determine if it can be resuscitated under the following instructions, to wit—

Then followed minute instructions, which young Chantan read carefully again and again. Finally, when he had thoroughly familiarized himself with them, he began to apply them.

Two hours after the commencement of the process Mlle. de Maurier showed a faint tinge of redness in the cheeks, and in thirty minutes more the operator noticed a pink tinge under the finger nails. Placing a mirror under the nostrils, he detected a slight moisture on the glass. Listening for the heartbeat, he discovered that it throbbed very slowly. All these symptoms gradually gained ground until three hours and fifty minutes after the young scientist had begun the resuscitation, when the subject opened her eyes.

"Is it time?" she moaned.

"Don't excite yourself," said Chantan. "You are in a critical condition, but if you can avoid giving way to any strong emotion you will come out all right."

"But why do I care, since I am to be executed?"

"That matter is past and gone. You have been unconscious for a long while. The revolution is accomplished. The republic is established on a permanent basis, and there is no longer need for executions."

"Thank heaven!"

The professor had prepared a lounge and, taking the girl in his arms, lifted her from the table on to it, covering her with an afghan. He noticed that the body was quite warm.

"Have the emigres returned?" asked the girl as soon as she was made comfortable.

"Long ago."

"I wonder if my uncle and my cousins are here."

To this the young man made no reply. Presently he asked her if she had any consciousness whatever before recovering her faculties.

"I fancy it could not have been long before I opened my eyes. The first thing I knew was you standing over me saying what you said." A blush overspread his features.

"What did I say?"

He was obliged to urge her, but she finally told him that he had said:

"If I succeed in bringing you back to life I will love you forever."

He had spoken the words believing that they were said to a dead person and never dreamed that a living being heard them. He was silent a few moments and then said with great feeling:

"And I will."

He was bending over her as he spoke. Her joy at having been told that she was not to be beheaded, but instead that this young man, who had brought her from nothingness to life, loved her, knew no bounds. She threw her arms about his neck.

Notwithstanding that Chantan reciprocated the emotion that caused this act he shuddered. A terrible gulf stood between him and this new and suddenly born love. A hundred years intervened between her going to sleep and her awakening. How could he tell her that during that long period she had been on a shelf in a tomb in Pere Lachaise; that those she would expect to find alive to rejoice with her in her escape from death on the guillotine had been in their graves for many years? And what would he do with her? He had kept the secret that he intended to obey an injunction handed down to him from his great-great-grandfather to resuscitate one supposed to be dead. How could he take this homeless girl to his mother and sisters dressed in a fashion of a hundred years ago? Indeed, he dreaded lest the faded and rotten fabrics of her clothing would fall to pieces as soon as she left the laboratory.

He had prepared a luncheon in case he was successful in his experiment, realizing that food would be at once needed, and now, noticing a pallor come over the girl's face, he brought her a glass of wine and offered her some dainty bits to eat. She partook of both and seemed refreshed. Then she began anew her questionings.

"How long have I been asleep?"

"Oh, a long while."

"What has happened since I began my slumber?"

"Many things. Napoleon Bonaparte made himself emperor, but was overpowered by the other European sovereigns and abdicated."

"I never heard of him. What a long time I have slept! Go on."

"Then the Bourbons were placed again on the throne of France, but the people would not remain tranquil under their rule and drove them out. After that Napoleon's nephew was elected president and afterward made himself emperor. He was conquered by the Prussians and a republic was proclaimed. This is the government we live under now."

"Heavens, how old I must be!"

"I have told you all of what has happened since you went to sleep that I can tell you now. I must take action with regard to your future. Since you are comfortable here and I don't dare for the present to permit you to make the slightest effort I will leave you, though only long enough to make certain provisions. You will need a woman to attend you, and that is the first matter for me to arrange. Do you fear to remain, say, half an hour, alone?"

"No."

He bent over her and kissed her. There was a cold clamminess to her lips he did not like. He was much troubled. This bringing a woman back from a past century appalled him. The brief synopsis of what had passed since she had become unconscious was in itself harrowing. What would he say when she began to ask where were those who had been near and dear to her?

At the door he turned for another look. He started. It seemed to him that since her resuscitation Marie had grown ten years older.

Locking his charge in the laboratory, he went out, thinking as he went what course to pursue. He felt that but one plan was practicable—he must go to his mother and give her his confidence. Calling a fiacre, he directed the driver to take him home.

Arriving, he called for his mother to follow him and, leading her to his own room, showed her the mandate of the first Chantan to resuscitate the body of Mlle. de Maurier. Mme. Chantan read the paper without displaying any especial interest, but when her son began to tell his story her face assumed a very different expression. When he recounted his taking the body from Pere Lachaise her features grew anxious. But when he told her that he had actually brought back to life a body that had been in the tomb a hundred years she had no doubt whatever that her son was insane.

Mme. Chantan was a remarkably self contained woman. As soon as her son began to tell her that he wished her to help him take care of the resuscitated girl she arose, stepped to the door, passed out, closed it and turned the key. Paul Chantan was a prisoner.

The idea that Marie would be left alone locked in his laboratory with but such provisions as he had provided for immediate use threw him into a terrible agony. He hammered on the door, called, screamed and acted like a veritable madman. In an hour two men came, overpowered him and, taking him down to a carriage, drove him to a lunatic asylum.

How long Chantan remained in the asylum he did not know, for he was attacked with brain fever and passed into delirium. When he came to himself he could see by the leaves on the trees without his window and by the heat that the season had changed. Before the attendants knew of his altered condition he had had time to lay his plans. He wrote to his mother that he was aware he had suffered from insanity, but had recovered. Mme. Chantan came at once to see him, and within a few days he was permitted to order a fiacre and drive away.

He drove at once to his laboratory.

After he had inserted the key in the lock it was some time before he could nerve himself to turn it. When he entered, there on the lounge was a body, but it was not the body of a young girl. He saw instead a small dried up figure the hue of papier mache. The eyes were entirely sunken away, and the teeth had disappeared. It was the corpse of a woman more than a hundred years old.

LADY COOK SEEKS FLIGHT

Noted Suffragist Said to Be In Fear of Her Life

Chicago, March 7.—Lady Tennessee Claflin Cook of England is ill at the Congress hotel from terror and is in fear of her life in consequence of threatening letters and telephone messages received from alleged relatives of her first husband.

She has pleaded with friends to get her out of the city secretly so that her persecuters will be given the slip.

Fearing to appear in public, she has cancelled her engagement to go to Springfield today with the Chicago women suffragists. She also has cancelled her lecture engagement at the Auditorium. Lady Cook came from her home in England to lead the Illinois women in their fight to win the ballot.

CULLOM AND LORIMER STRONGLY ASSAILED

Their Resignations Demanded by Indignant Illinois Citizens

Rockford, Ills., March 7.—At a mass meeting attended by 2000 residents of Winnebago county, and marked by enthusiasm that was more intense than that shown at political conventions, the resignation of Senators Lorimer and Cullom was demanded. Speeches were made denouncing the senators who voted for Lorimer's retention and the senator himself.

Attorney Heuter, secretary of the Citizens' committee, finished reading the resolution, and then the assemblage heard the slow tolling of the bell in the steeple of a church, one stroke for each of the forty-six senators who voted to retain Lorimer.

When the crowd went out ushers distributed badges of mourning which the citizens will wear for thirty days because of the senate's action.

HANLEY EXONERATED

Not Negligent In Shooting and Killing Brother Police Officer

Boston, March 7.—Chief Justice Bolster of the municipal court has filed a report of an inquest exonerating Patrolman Patrick J. Hanley in the fatal shooting of Richard Gallivan, a fellow patrolman of Division 2.

The shooting happened on the night of Feb. 7 and Chief Justice Bolster says that Hanley was not negligent, and that there is no evidence to justify criminal prosecution.

The only witness against him is a man whom he had under arrest when the fatal shot was fired.

FINE SKIN-GRAFTING JOB

Baltimore Negro Has New Cuticle Covering His Whole Back

Baltimore, March 7.—A remarkable experiment in skin-grafting has been completed at a hospital in this city, in that 430 square inches of the patient's skin had to be replaced, and this was all done during a period of many months with cuticle taken from other portions of his own body.

That is what most women say when the grocer asks them what kind of laundry soap they want.

It isn't surprising.

Lenox is not a new soap. It is not an experiment. The price is low. The quality is high. The shape is convenient. Best of all, Lenox Soap does the work it is intended to do.

FOR STARVING CHINESE

Transport With Cargo of Food, Valued at $50,000, Leaves Seattle

Seattle, March 7.—The United States army transport Buford, loaded with provisions for the famine sufferers in north China, has sailed for China, flying the pennant of the National Red Cross, the Christian Herald of New York and the Seattle Commercial club.

The cargo, valued at $50,000 and contributed by organizations and citizens from all parts of the United States, will keep 30,000 starving Chinese alive until the new crops are ready for harvest next June.

WHOLE TOWN ARRESTED

Men, Women and Children Are Accused of Being Moonshiners

Wheeling, March 7.—About 200 men, women and children were arrested at Fortney, W. Va., when the federal authorities swooped down on the town. All are charged with manufacturing moonshine whisky, and will be held, probably, for the grand jury.

After receiving news of the large amount of illicit liquor being sent from this section, the federal authorities raided the town, and arrested practically all of the inhabitants.

NINETY BURNED TO DEATH

Many Children Among Victims In Russian Theatre Holocaust

St. Petersburg, March 6.—Ninety persons, many of whom were children, were burned to death and forty others injured in a fire that destroyed a moving picture theatre at Bolozoie.

The flames broke out while the exhibition was in progress and quickly enveloped the building, cutting off every avenue of escape. Futile attempts at rescue were made by those who happened to be close by the exits when the fire started and by others from the outside, but the fury of the flames drove them back before they could reach the shrieking victims, who fought desperately among themselves.

HIS STRENGTH DOUBTED

New Premier of France Too Mild For Socialists and Radicals

Paris, March 7.—Premier Monis read the ministerial declaration in the chamber of deputies yesterday afternoon. Its conservative tone astonished the Socialists and extreme Radicals, who had been expected to support the new government. These members interrupted with jeering the reference in the manifesto to the church and the schools, in which it was stated:

"We will apply without feebleness and without violence the laws dealing with religious orders and the separation of the church and state. We will protect against all attack our public schools."

It is impossible to determine the precise strength of the ministry in the chamber until there is a test vote.

Elliott to Head Missouri Pacific at Salary of $100,000

Chicago, March 7.—Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific railway, has decided definitely to accept the presidency of the Missouri Pacific, succeeding George J. Gould, according to reports in Chicago railroad circles.

It is understood that Elliott will be elected at the annual meeting in St. Louis on March 14. It has been reported that Elliott will receive a salary of $100,000 a year.

C. W. GUY AT COLON

Makes a Trip to Caracas, Capital of Venezuela

Charles W. Guy continues his Panama letters today:

Through an oversight in one of my previous letters, I did not make it quite clear as to the stateroom occupied by Mrs. Guy's sister. She was on the right side of the boat some distance from our room and had a lady from Boston as a room mate. Aso, owing to my poor writing, the word "Yams" was read as "ham" in speaking of the things brought to Jamaica by the women for sae.

I think that I did not mention in my previous letters that the sidewalks in Havana are only wide enough for one person, and the streets only wide enough for two teams. The houses project over the sidewalk, Spanish style, to keep out the sun.

The morning we left Colon for Panama we saw for the first time in the sky the southern cross which is formed of four intensely bright stars around which are thousands of smaller stars. This is a sight only to be seen here.

Leaving Colon we arrived at La Guayra, Venezuela, 830 miles from Colon, on Feb. 9, Feb. 10 we left port. It has been hot with the steamer at anchor. LaGuayra is the chief harbor of Venezuela and is made up of hills or mountains. Its chief product is children, bananas, oranges, etc. How the people live without work seems strange. It is now winter yet things grow without cultivation. Cocoa beans from which chocolate is made grows here.

We are told that breakfast for all going ashore will be served at 6 o'clock. There are two trips a short and a long one. We took the short trip and was glad afterward that we did so. The trips were to Caracas, the capital. It is in the mountains about eight miles as the bird flies, and about forty miles by the railroad. This road cost twenty million dollars. The cars are 30 feet long, so that they can go around curves, as we go up the side of the mountain. The locomotives are short but have no coggs on the wheels, yet they rise about 5,000 feet, going up an incline plain but continuously around corners, so that the engine is often in sight. Up, up, we keep going.

The road seems to be built on a shelf, and a snake must have been used to lay it out. Coal dust and pitch is used for fuel, pressed into blocks eight inches square. Every little while we stopped to take water, as we used much steam. We would get off and look down 2,000 feet to the valley below once in a while, and see a hut with banana trees and palms around it. The air was very cool up high, so that we had to put on light coats, a great change from the steamer. We made the trip in about three hours.

This road it will be remembered was built by an old president who tried to confiscate the bonds, but English capitol made a fuss, and there was prospects of war when President Cleveland settled the matter by arbitration. This President is now an exile in France, his property having been confiscated by the country.

Arriving at Caracas, we had lunch at the Grant hotel. As it was Spanish feed, and we are not Spanish, we did not like the stuff. We managed to get a few oranges and bananas and had to be content with them. Postal cards here are five cents and postage two cents. But our money made us trouble, yet the people like to get United States money. They will take one of our bills and give us back change in their money. One dealer said he would change a five dollar bill giving us $2 in United States money and $3 in their money. As their money is worth but 45 cents we decided not to change. The population is 30,000 with 10,346 houses. The streets are very straight but the pavements very rough.

As we were going up we met loads and loads of unbleached pilgrims bound for the monastry at LaGuayra. They were packed in common freight cars as we ship pigs. The execursion cost them eighty cents the round trip. They were black, I tell you, and of all shades.

When we returned to the railroad station we found one thousand people of all colors and nationalities to see us off. Many were not slow in begging a shilling or six pence or anything. Some had chocolate and some had slippers to sell. Some of the Spanish are very fine looking people. Nearly all, except the pure white people, go barefooted.

We left about 5 o'clock and arrived at LaGuayra in about two hours. As we came down the valley we could see the fog rising from 1,000 to 2,000 feet making clouds which we passed through. Toward the end we saw a lot of buildings surrounded by high walls. It was the home of the lepers. We had to get into lighters to go aboard of the steamer, and the waves bounced them considerable, but none of us got into the water. We waited until the boat got to the platform and then jumped. All being old sailors we landed all right. We are all glad to be at home again at 7.30. Such a day we had. I never expect to see again. Climbing Mt. Washington is very feeble compared with the mountain here. Goodbye, LaGuayra, I don't expect to see you again. As you are different from our people we do not expect to see you again on earth or in heaven. Another letter soon.

Charles W. Guy.

NO LICENSE VICTORIES

Only Here and There a Town in Favor of License

No License was popular in most of the towns holding town meetings on Monday, Hull being an exception. The votes of several towns follow:

	Yes.	No.
Abington	248	388
Bridgewater	95	249
Braintree	229	531
Hingham	115	349
Randolph	275	356
Rockland	508	794
Scituate	132	278
Winthrop	171	872
Winchester	45	311
Watertown	589	1065
Natick	883	1005
Westwood	19	80
Norwood	287	711
Hyde Park	1003	1295
Cohasset	159	348
Revere	893	1545
Dedham	350	961
Stoughton	393	560
Weymouth	520	766
Milton	200	729
Danvers	504	759
Arlington	90	311
Holbrook	85	168

The good government association and the Citizens' no-license league were both victorious in Hyde Park. The five "good government" candidates for selectmen were elected and the town went dry by 295 votes.

In Cohasset, Selectman Philander Bates was reelected for another term of three years. Mr. Bates has served in the capacity of selectman for 37 consecutive years. Elmer L. Olmstead, his opponent, was defeated by 42 votes. One of the issues of the contest was the Cohasset poor house, which was built three years ago at the cost of $25,000. Its seven inmates live like kings, each having a private bathroom in connection with his apartments.

Mr. Bates was also elected overseer of the poor and assessor.

The town meeting in Lincoln was the scene of a hand to hand conflict between the inspector of cattle and a prominent doctor of the town. It will be remembered by some of our citizens that Charles Francis Adams took up his residence in this town to avoid disturbance in political affairs.

In Danvers a special committee consisting of the selectmen and moderator, was appointed to attend the hearing in the general court and advocate and work for the petition of the Boston and Eastern R. R. Co. to get its charter to run trains between Danvers and Boston. The townspeople are anxious to get better train service and believe the Boston and Eastern will do better by them than the Boston and Maine.

IN WEYMOUTH.

These officers were elected at the Weymouth town meeting:

Selectmen and overseers—A. Francis Barnes, Willard J. Dunbar, Bradford Hawes, Edward W. Hunt, George L. Newton.

Clerk—John A. Raymond.

Treasurer—John H. Stetson.

Assessors—Gilman B. Loud and Warren T. Simpson.

Tax Collector—Winslow M. Tirrell.

License question—Yes, 520; no, 766.

CITY COUNCIL

Accidents had been numerous on Washington street at Foster street and Canal street. Extraordinary care would be necessary to avoid accidents. Cars will often be held up in street, and add to congestion. Lot of land was small, less than 100 feet frontage. Location a detriment to civic betterment. Could not be made attractive. Cars always noisy on curves. Noisy late in evening and early in morning.

Ex-Councilman McDevitt opposed on general principles. Thought company was doing nothing for public.

A. W. Stetson, representing the Stetson property objected to location. Had a large freight office on one side now and did not want one on other side. Would be noisy. Cross over near Foster street would be dangerous.

Dr. Sidney Hardwick, who said he used the street as much as anyone, objected because of congestion. Intersecting streets now made it dangerous. Has had close call himself New track would make it worse. Dangerous for children.

In answer to a question he said he did not know of any abutters in favor.

President Bryant asked if it would not be better if tracks were in centre of street. He answered, not much.

Asked to suggest a location, Dr. Hardwick named Quincy avenue.

Rev. Dr. Hardy objected to location for aesthetic reasons, as well as danger. For fifteen years he had pleaded for a more beautiful Quincy, and a good start had been made in this vicinity for a civic centre. A trolley freight depot would be retrogressive. Would be short sighted on part of city. It was easy to prevent, but difficult later to correct a mistake. The Council can now aid. It was too near our show buildings, the library, post office, court house, school and Stone temple.

Others opposed were asked to stand, and about half a dozen arose.

Robert Hardwick also objected strenuously. Many other locations would be less dangerous. Switching would cause congestion.

E. S. Beckford objected because it would be a mulitation of street. Hoped Council would not grant.

P. R. Blackmur then summed up the arguments and argued in favor of the petition.

C. H. Hardwick spoke in rebuttal, and answered several questions by councilmen.

Hearing closed at 9.25 and order was recommitted to committee.

POLE LOCATIONS, ETC.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the Telephone Co. attachments, location for poles, and permission to lay underground conduits. Ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the Electric Light Co a location for poles. Ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the Gas Co., permission to lay mains in various streets. Ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on streets reported an order granting the Angier Mills permission to build an industrial track and overhead bridge across Old Colony avenue. The order provides certain restrictions as to the heights of the bridge, etc., and for the laying of the track which must be paved between the rails and eighteen inches outside. It also provides that the location may be revoked by the City Council on thirty days' notice. Ordered to a second reading.

HANCOCK STREET WIDENING.

The Committee on Streets reported an order for a public hearing April 3, on the widening of Hancock street on the west side between Saville and Dimmock streets. Order adopted.

ADDITIONAL POLICE.

The Finance Committee reported an amendment to the order for five additional policemen making the number two. Order passed.

ADDITIONAL FIREMEN.

The Finance Committee reported ought not to pass on the order for five additional permanent firemen. Report accepted.

NEW ORDERS.

Councilman Cherrington offered an order for rebuilding Channing street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Craig offered an order for $400 for a gravel sidewalk on Franklin street from Kendrick avenue to near Ritchie road. Referred to Committee on Streets.

STREET LIGHTS.

Councilman Ericson offered an order for three lights on the Granite street end of Quarry street.

Councilman Branch moved reference to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Smith opposed.

Councilman Branch understood from Mayor if money was available he considered this an order to put in a light. If that is so we should consider the needs. If the Mayor used his own discretion that was another matter.

In reply to a question as to where the money came from for lights, the Mayor said that it came from rebates on lights that were not burning.

Councilman Smith asked the Mayor if he took these orders as a command and his honor replied no.

Councilman Leslie asked if there was any money available now for lights and the Mayor replied no. Lights would have to wait until there was money, Mr. Leslie hoped the order would go to the committee.

The motion to refer to the Committee on Streets was lost, and the order referred to the Executive.

Councilman Bolster offered orders for street lights at the corner of Gordon and Water streets, and at the corner of Brook road and Water street. Referred to Executive.

STREET WATERING.

Councilman Gardner offered an order for street watering or oiling from April 20, to Oct. 20. Referred to Committee on Streets.

FEE FOR LICENSES.

Councilman Bailey offered an amendment to the License ordinance fixing the fee for a common victuallers license at $5. Referred to Committee on Licenses.

SNOW ON SIDEWALKS.

Councilman Bolster offered an amendment to the street ordinance so as to provide that the occupants of any building abutting on a sidewalk shall remove the snow from the sidewalk within five hours after the ceasing to fall of the snow. Referred to Committee on Ordinances.

GAS MAINS.

Councilman Gardner offered resolve requesting the Citizens Gas Co., to lay its mains in streets that are to be rebuilt this year. Adopted.

HYDRANT WANTED.

Councilman Studley offered an order for a hydrant on Cleverly court. Referred to Executive.

SCHOOL HALL.

Councilman Sodergren offered an order requesting the School Committee to present plans for finishing the hall in the Quincy school building.

Order ruled out of order as that matter was now in the hands of a committee.

Councilman Sodergren offered an order that the Public Buildings Committee report on the order for finishing the hall in the Quincy school building at the next meeting. Adopted.

Councilman Sodergren offered an order for a public hearing March 20, on finishing the hall of the Quincy school building.

Order ruled out of order as that matter was in the hands of a committee.

QUINCY STREET.

Councilman Craig presented a petition that Quincy street be watered or oiled. Referred to Committee on Streets.

SEWER LOAN.

Councilman Nowland offered an order for $30,000 for extending the sewer system. Referred to joint Committee on Finance and Sewers.

WATER METERS.

Councilman Branch offered an order for $20,000 for Water meters. Refered to joint Committee on Water Supply and Finance.

TRANSFER.

Councilman Branch offered an order transferring $72.07 from furnishing for Lincoln school and $11.69 from furnishing of the Coddington school to be appropriation for furnishing of the Houghs Neck school.

OTHER ORDERS.

Councilman Cherrington offered an order for a drain and catch basin on Newbury avenue and Walker street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Craig offered an order for a gravel sidewalk on Rodman street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Cherrington offered an order for a drain and catch basin on Faxon road. Referred to Committee on streets.

Councilman Nowland offered an order for a granolithic sidewalk on Whitney road. Referred to Committee on Streets.

HALF HOLIDAY.

On motion of Councilman Smith, the order providing for a half holiday for city laborers was taken from the committee, the committee being favorable.

Councilman Smith then offered a substitute order which provided that work of city laborers shall cease on Saturday at 12 o'clock noon during June, July and August.

Substitute accepted and order referred to Finance Committee.

In reply to a question President Bryant said the order should go to the Finance committee as it was a new order and provided for the expenditure of money.

Councilman Smith did not think it necessary.

President Bryant said he had ruled it should go to the Finance Committee.

On motion of Councilman Smith the reference was withdrawn.

President Bryant ruled the order could not be put on its adoption. It involves an expenditure of money. This order takes the place of the original order, and is a new order and requires two readings.

Councilman Smith claimed that the substitute was an amendment to the original order, and decreases the amount of money and therefore could go through tonight. He appealed from the ruling of the President.

On a rising vote the ruling of the chair was sustained.

The order was then ordered to a second reading.

Councilman Smith moved when the council adjourned it be for one week. Motion lost.

SEWER CONNECTIONS.

The order transferring $1500 and receipts from house connections with the sewer to the appropriation for that purpose took its second reading and was passed.

The order appropriating $749.89 for sewer house connections of 1910 took its second reading and was passed.

Adjourned at 10.38 until March 20.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, March 3, 1911.

The legislation that might have been is as usual the swelling theme of the Congress which expired on the 4th of March. All Congresses open with thrilling programs. Legislation is needed. "The world moves", as Galileo said, but Congress does not move with it. The parcels post bill has not been passed. The big Texas Senator objected to it about midnight in the midst of a filibuster, and that killed it. Many other urgent measures have failed even to receive attention. Public interests pine. The lobby is as ever active and insistent, making theirs appear the people's fight. It is a rude awakening to our national egoism to learn that the countries that we have so long referred to as effete despotisms are most pliable through their sensitive governments to the interests of the people than is our own complicated and clumsy legislative incumberance. For the last week in Congress there have been almost continuous night and day sessions with sleepy legislators pulling and scrapping at cross purposes in an endeavor to make political and personal capital. Few of them are representatives in any large sense of the whole people. Most of them represent first themselves, their private fortunes and ambitions, or at most provincial rather than national interests. There are, of course some Senators and Members of larger mold and completer preparation for legislative work, but they are without sufficient influence on the legislative mass and, unfortunately, some of those who are best equipped with intellect and experience, as, for example, the big Texas Senator, have influence in national affairs that is retrogressive and malign.

During the present session the Executive has doubtless risen in public estimation. His promptness and his good-humored intention to carry out reforms and confirm broad national policies have impressed the country. His Cabinet is one of the strongest and most efficient in national history. The accomplishment of the young Postmaster General in saving eleven millions of dollars in postal expenses is solid and brilliant, and if Congress were responsive to the efforts of the Postmaster General, this saving could easily be doubled, but there it is again—the Texas obstacle. The Postmaster General is in a fight to a finish with the magazines in a determination to increase postage rates on advertising matter. He is supported by the President, who told the magazine men in a recent interview that his contention for an increased rate on second class postage had only begun, and that they must expect to face the issue in the next Congress. The President said further that the United States had spent a quarter of a million of dollars investigating the subject, and that in view of this fact the demand of the magazine men for an investigation was unnecessary; a very thorough investigation had been made by the men who know most about the postoffice department, and that he, the President, would follow their recommendation. "The question we have to decide," said the President, "is whether there is a burden growing out of second class mail, and then who increases that burden beyond the government receipts. There has been a suggestion by those friendly advertisements I have seen covering whole pages, that the motive of Mr. Hitchcock and myself is to get even with somebody. Well, a man who has ordinary common sense does not seek the continued hostility of an interest as powerful as the magazines. He only goes into a fight of this kind from a sense of duty."

"I am going ahead with it as long as I am in office. You may be able to defeat the present proposal. These things are frequently capable of defeat for a time. But as long as I have the power, I am going to recommend the consideration of this question until it is settled. It is not in the slightest spirit of hostility to the magazines that I have made this recommendation."

Adams.

HALL PLACE CHURCH.

Rev. Carl H. Raupach of the Hall Place M. E. church spoke Sunday morning on the subject "A practical prayer for a practicable Lenten season," taking for his text "Create in me a clean heart O God; and renew a right spirit within me. The last communion service for this Conference year was observed at the close of the morning service. During the service, Miss Jessie Pugsley of South Wales, who took an active part in the great Chapman-Alexander revival i n Wales, sang "When the pearly gates shall open," and "I'm here on business for my king." The Junior and Epworth League services were omitted.

—The limit of cost of the battleship Florida, building at the New York Navy Yard, has been increased to $6,400,000, exclusive of indirect charges, so that the completion of this battleship is assured.

SUNDAY SERVICES

CHRIST CHURCH.

The holy communion service was conducted by the rector at 10.30 Sunday morning including special Lenten music and a sermon on a Lenten theme by the rector, "Blessed are the poor in spirit."

In the evening the first of a series of sermons on "The excerpts of the Gospel" was delivered by the rector. "Except ye be born again ye can in no wise enter into the Kingdom of Heaven."

The special preacher for the Wednesday evening service is Rev. C. E. Jackson, St. John's church, East Boston.

The steward of the World-in-Boston will meet Thursday evening at 7.45.

L. H. Clee of the Y. M. C. A. will speak to the Galahad club at its meeting Thursday evening at 7.30.

The rector will give a Lenten talk to the members of St. Margaret's Guild in the church on Friday evening, 7.30.

The children's Lenten service will be held Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

QUINCY POINT CHURCH.

The pastor began a series of Lenten sermons on "Life" at the Sunday morning service at the Point church. The theme was "The business of Life." "Straight is the way that leadeth unto Life" was the text.

In the evening the pastor preached the first of a series of Lenten addresses on 'Salvation." Both meetings were very well attended, and the sermons and music were especially fine.

The Boy Scouts will meet in the church this evening at 6.30.

The pastor and Deacon Charles Sherburne are delegates to the installation of the pastor of the East Weymouth church tonight.

A special parish meeting is called for Wednesday evening at 7.30.

The Home Missionary society will meet with Mrs. Daniel Higgins, 113 South street, Thursday afternoon at 2.30.

The mid-week prayer meeting with a special Lenten theme will be held Friday evening after which a half hour of Bible study in preparation for the Sunday School lesson will be conducted by the pastor.

ROBBERS GET HIS $100,000

Four Days Before New York Broker Discovered Loss

CLEVERLY EXECUTED SCHEME

Robber Bumps Into Man About to Deposit Securities Which He Carried In an Envelope—Another Comes to His Assistance as He Falls and Substitutes Envelope Containing Three Old Newspapers

New York, March 7.—George Bancroft, a broker, 86 years old, was robbed last Thursday afternoon of securities worth approximately $100,000 in the vestibule of the Produce Exchange Safety Deposit and Storage company, but he did not discover his loss until yesterday.

For the last twenty-five years it has been Bancroft's habit every Thursday afternoon to deposit the firm's valuables in a box rented by them from the deposit and storage company. The whole distance from his offices to the vaults is not more than two hundred feet and anyone making the trip is in constant sight of the office windows.

Last Thursday Bancroft as usual placed securities worth that day about $100,000 in a large envelope approximately 10 by 14 inches square, tied with red tape and with the firm's name printed on the corner, Alone, he walked from his office to the Produce Exchange. A flight of steps leads from the street level entrance to the vaults. As Mr. Bancroft reached the bottom of the steps he noticed a young man, whom he only remembers as rather undersized, leaning against the corridor wall.

Bancroft continued on his way down the corridor, but just as he was about to turn the corner at the end of the corridor into the vaults a tall man, in a great hurry came running around the corner in the opposite direction and bumped into him. The shock of the collision was sufficient to throw Bancroft off his feet. He fell and in falling dropped the envelope.

That was the cue for the undersized young man who had been leaning against the corridor wall. He stepped up to Mr. Bancroft, assisted him to his feet and was solicitous to tuck the fallen envelope under his arm. At least Bancroft thought it was the fallen envelope. He went on to deposit it in his box as usual. Yesterday when his son, George Bancroft, Jr., unlocked the box to check up the securities before the opening of business for the week, he found that the only envelope there contained three old newspapers. A clever substitution had been effected. Both the firm of George Bancroft & Co. and the private detectives working on the case are convinced that the substitution was worked by men who had made a close study of the Bancrofts, their habits and their business methods.

The securities were made up of railroad and industrial stocks which could easily be hypothecated in any stock brokerage house in the United States having connections with the New York Stock Exchange.

So bold a robbery in daylight, in the very heart of the financial district, shocked the nerves of the surprised police like a bomb. Years ago Inspector Byrnes had drawn a deadline across the city at Fulton street below which he ordered that no crook or pickpocket should go, even on an innocent errand, under a pain of instant trouble with the police. For years the financial district was the safest place in the world for a man with large sums of money or valuable securities on his person.

A robbery so cleverly executed indicates to the police a directing intelligence of no mean order. If a job of such size can be worked so easily in broad daylight there, it was declared the gravest concern for what may follow, unless the robbers are promptly caught.

CONFESS $12,000 ROBBERY

Brothers Arrested In Chicago For Big Job In New York

Chicago, March 7.—Two brothers, Walter and Clarence Lewis, 21 and 28, respectively, arrested here, confessed to robbing the home of Cesareo Vigil in New York on Feb. 27 and stealing $12,000 in diamonds and money after overpowering the maid and tying her to a bedpost.

When arrested they had a large sum of money and several jewels in their possession.

COOK IS HEARD FROM

Doctor Protests Against Peary Being Made a Rear Admiral

Chicago, March 7.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Arctic explorer, gave out the text of a telegram which he said he had sent to President Taft protesting against the Peary bill being signed by the president.

The telegram accuses the discoverer of the North Pole of gross immorality, exploitation of the public and other irregularities, personal and commercial.

DEATH OF NOTED JURIST

Francis Lowell Passes Away Unexpectedly at His Home In Boston

Boston, March 7.—Judge Francis C. Lowell of the United States circuit court, the third member of that distinguished family to bear the same honorary title, died suddenly at his home, 159 Beacon street. He was born in Boston fifty-six years ago.

Although the judge had not been in good health for more than a year, following a severe attack of pneumonia, his death was wholly unexpected. He was in court a week ago.

Before taking his place on the federal bench, the judge served the city of Boston and the state of Massachusetts as a member of the Boston common council and the house of representatives.

DOUBLE ELECTROCUTION

Slayers of Lynn Manufacturer and Policeman Pay Death Penalty

Boston, March 7.—For the murder of Thomas A. Landregan, a wealthy shoe manufacturer of Lynn, and Patrolman James H. Carroll of the Lynn police force, in a bold daylight robbery on a busy street, Andrei Ipsen, 19, and Wassili Ivanowski, 22, were electrocuted at the Charlestown state prison early today.

Ipsen was the first to enter the death chamber and at 12:12:33 the current was applied. He was declared dead at 12:19:13. Ivanowski followed, five minutes later, the current being turned on at 12:23:45, and he being pronounced dead at 12:30:36.

PARTY REALIGNMENT PREDICTED BY FOSS

Progressive Wings of Both Great Parties Will Join Hands

Holyoke, Mass., March 7.—A realignment of political parties in this country was predicted by Governor Foss in the course of an address before the Holyoke board of trade last evening. This he declared would come as a result of the failure of the senate to pass the Canadian reciprocity bill.

"The action of the Republican senate," said Foss, "in rejecting this opportunity to carry out the principles of its party platforms, the request of its president and the wishes of the people; its support of Lorimer and its opposition to other progressive measures of legislation, but emphasizes the necessity of securing legislation that will make the senators more responsible to public sentiment by their election by the direct vote of the people. The Republican leaders by their action have sounded their own death knell.

"It means, in my judgment, a realignment of parties. This is, in fact, already going on. It is taking place now. The only thing that the progressive wing of the Republican party can do is to join hands with the progressive wing of the Democratic party and secure legislation that will be in the interests of all the people and not of special privileges."

WILL KEEP HIS WORD

President Will Make Lewis Assistant Attorney General

Washington, March 6.—President Taft is expected to follow his hand and make a recess appointment of William H. Lewis, the Boston negro, to be an assistant attorney general, according to intimations at the White House. The incident will furnish another illustration of the determination of Mr. Taft to carry through a matter on which he has given his word.

He has promised the place to Lewis and the failure of the senate to act upon the nomination will not affect the feeling at the White House. The president knows that the next senate will have more time.

DECISIONS WILL STAND

Commission Says Railroad Rate Advances Must Be Annulled

Washington, March 7.—The request by the railways in official classification territory that they be permitted voluntarily to suspend proposed advances in class freight rates from March 15 until Nov. 1 next, was denied by the interstate commerce commission.

In the decisions announced in the great rate cases ten days ago, the decisions directed that the proposed tariffs advancing rates be annulled on or before March 10.

PROMPT ACTION IS EXPECTED

New House Will Not Delay on the Reciprocity Agreement

VERY SHORT EXTRA SESSION

General Revision of Tariff Will Be Postponed, but Bill May Be Passed Reducing Duties on Certain Necessaries of Life—Direct Elections and Reapportionment May Be Considered—Democratic Cleavage In Senate

Washington, March 7.—Democratic leaders in the house have agreed upon a tentative plan for the special session to be convened on April 4. The house Democrats probably will pass the Canadian reciprocity agreement, revise the wool and possibly part of the cotton schedule of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, and will then pass a bill reducing duties on about one hundred items, all necessaries of life, including certain articles of wearing apparel.

With this accomplished, the Democrats, according to present plans, will postpone a general revision of the tariff until they have had an opportunity to make a more complete investigation. This would make the extra session a short one, probably about thirty days.

There is a probability that the proposition of amending the United States constitution so as to permit the direct election of United States senators also will be taken up in the coming special session.

The only other legislation that is likely to be touched by the Democrats in the special session is a reapportionment bill. This bill, increasing the house membership to 433, failed in the senate in the closing hours chiefly through the opposition of Senators Root and Depew. The passage of a reapportionment before next December would result in considerable advantage to the Democrats, as it would make it possible for them to redistrict several states which may fall into the hands of Republicans next fall.

The action of Senator Bailey in resigning suddenly from the senate Saturday and then recalling the resignation has served to emphasize the cleavage in the Democratic minority in the senate. On the eve of the extra session the senate Democrats find themselves split into warring factions. Bailey is at the head of one faction and Stone of Missouri is leading the other.

The line of cleavage is shown in the Lorimer case. In the alignment against Bailey is his colleague, Culberson of Texas. The revolt against Bailey's nominal leadership has been growing for some time, and it will probably be stronger in the new senate than it was in the old. Nearly all of the new senators are expected to line up with the anti-Bailey faction. An exception, however, will be Senator Watson of West Virginia. His colleague, Clifton, also may join the Bailey faction.

The ways and means committee of the new house of representatives met yesterday and began building the committee structure of the lower branch. Its operations will mark the beginning of the greatest overhauling the house has experienced in sixteen years.

"BOB" VEAL SEIZED

Two Carloads From New York Are Condemned at Boston

Boston, March 7.—In spite of the recent agitation and attacks upon the "bob" veal traffic in this state, federal animal inspectors and agents of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals intercepted a carload of crated calves from New York, the entire number of which was ordered condemned by the federal authorities.

The entire lot of calves was ordered destroyed, which was done. A strict watch is being kept for further shipments. Under the New York state laws calves under four weeks of age must not be crated for shipment.

Command For Crown Prince

Berlin, March 7.—Crown Prince Frederick William, who has arrived at Suez, has been given command of the First regiment, Bodyguard of Hussars, now stationed at Langfuhr.

Freight Conductor Killed

Boston, March 7.—William F. Gassett, 31, a freight conductor, fell between two freight cars at Somerville, was run over and instantly killed.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

Once again the vice president refused to be hurried into making an admission. When he spoke it was as the fighting corporation commander.

"There is a limit to all things, senator, and you are pushing us pretty well up to it. I suppose you can swing the legislature, and you can have it and be hanged! We'll have our governor and our attorney general."

"You are betting on that, are you?" smiled the man in the opposite chair. "Is that your declaration of war?"

"Call it anything you like. We are not going to be legislated off the map if we can help it. Strong as your machine is, you can't swing Gordon in against Reynolds if we put up the right kind of fight, and when it comes to Rankin for attorney general you simply haven't another man in the party to put up against him."

"You've settled this definitely in your own mind, have you, Hardwick?" was the quiet question. "I'm sorry. I've been hoping you had learned your lesson—you and your tribe. I came here this evening prepared to show you a decent way out of your troubles, so far as this state is concerned."

Again the railroad magnate put his elbows on the table edge. "What was your 'decent way,' major?" he asked, using for the first time the courtesy title by which the ex-senator was best known in his home country.

"I don't mind telling you, though you will call it an old man's foolishness. I have a grown son, McVickar. Did you know that?"

"Yes."

"He is a lawyer, and a pretty bright one, they tell me. As I happen to know, he is well up on the corporation side of the argument, and I have been afraid he would marry and settle down somewhere in the east. I'm getting old, Hardwick, and I'd like to have him with me. Out of that notion grew another. I said to myself this: If McVickar could have a good, clean cut young man representing his railroad, a man who not only knew his business in the courts, but might also know how to plead his client's case before the public—if McVickar could have such a man as that for his corporation counsel and would agree to live somewhere within shouting distance of such a young man's ideals we might all be persuaded to bury the hatchet and live in peace and amity."

A slow smile spread itself over the strong face of the railway magnate. "Why didn't you say in the beginning that you wanted a place for your boy?"

"I'm not saying it now," was the sober retort. "You forget that you have just been telling me that you don't intend to comply with the condition."

"What condition?"

"That you turn over a new leaf and meet the people of this state halfway."

"There isn't any halfway point in a fight for life. You know that as well as I do. But we'll give your son the place gladly."

The man who had once been his own foreman of roundups straightened himself in his chair and smote the table with his fist.

"No, by thunder, you won't—not in a thousand years, McVickar! Maybe you could buy me—maybe you have bought me in times past—but you can't buy that boy! Listen and I'll tell you what I'm going to do. I telegraphed him this afternoon, telling him to throw up his job in Boston and come out here. If he comes pretty soon he will be legally a citizen of the state before election. You said we didn't have anybody but Rankin to run for attorney general. I'll show you if we haven't!"

Mr. Hardwick McVickar was not of those who fight as men beating the wind. What time the deft waiter was clearing the table and serving the small coffees he kept silence, but when the time was fully ripe he said what there was to be said.

"You've got us by the nape of the neck, as usual, Blount," he said. "Name your terms."

"I have named them. Get in line with the new public opinion, and we'll do what we can for you."

McVickar had anticipated the thing which was about to happen, not precisely in its present form, perhaps, but in some form which would involve the providing of a place for the senator's son, and he smiled inwardly when he remembered that he had given Gantry, the division traffic manager of the Transcontinental, instructions to look up one Evan Blount, a young lawyer, on his next visit to Boston.

By all odds it would be better to wait for Gantry's report before taking any decided steps in the bargaining with Evan Blount's father, but unhappily the crisis had arrived, and quite probably it could not be postponed. None the less the vice president tried for the postponement.

"You're asking a good deal, Blount, and you don't seem to realize it. If we should agree to meet the people of this state halfway, as you suggest, what guaranty have we that we won't be compelled to go all the way?"

The fine lined wrinkles were appearing again at the corners of the hereditary Blount eyes.

"You can't quite rise to the occasion, can you, Hardwick?" smiled the boss. "You'd like to be good, of course, but you want to be cocksure beforehand that it isn't going to cost too much."

"I'm only asking for a little time in which to consider it," was the vice president's final word.

"You have all the time there is between now and election. I've told you what I am going to do."

"You know very well that we can't allow you to do what you propose. With an unfriendly attorney general we might as well go out of business first as last."

"It is up to you, McVickar," was the calm reply.

CHAPTER III.

A FALSE GALLOP OF MEMORIES.

As a churlish fate decreed it turned out that Blount was not to have Gantry for a traveling companion beyond Chicago. On the second day of westward faring the railroad man, whose business followed him wherever he went, had instructions to meet Mr. Hardwick McVickar, his vice president, in the Illinois metropolis, and on the morning of the following day Blount continued his journey alone.

Twenty-four hours later the expatriated westerner had crossed his Rubicon, otherwise the clay colored stream of the Missouri river, at Omaha, and had entered upon scenes which ought to have been familiar—should have been and were not, so many and great were the changes wrought during his fourteen years of absence. In the smoking car he fell into talk with a prosperous looking man whose thin, hawklike face was so out of keeping with the air of prosperity—a lone passenger who had boarded the train at Omaha.

At first their conversation was baldly desultory. The hawk faced one, it seemed, was a mine owner whose property, vaguely located somewhere "in the mountains," was involved in litigation. It was the reference to the litigation which first drew Blount beyond the commonplaces, the awakened interest being wholly professional.

Oddly enough, since he had never expected to use it, he had specialized somewhat in mining law, and before many miles had been clicked off under the drumming trucks of the Pullman he found himself giving opinions and laying down plans of procedure for the man who, investing in mines, had apparently purchased more trouble than profits.

Into the cleft thus opened by the ax of business the hawk faced man inserted a wedge of cautious inquiry. In addition to his mining properties, he had been making investments in timberlands—bad investments, he feared, since the government had lately taken such a decided stand against the cutting of timber in the new forest reserves.

Again Blount was good naturedly helpful. One of his classmates in the law school had been preparing himself to enter the legal branch of the forest service, and Blount had acquired at second hand a working knowledge of the forestry situation in the west and of the legal status of the western timber pirates. Moreover, he had very clear and decided opinions upon the question of the conservation of the nation's timber resources, and he was frank enough to express them emphatically.

If he had been less unsuspicious he might have remarked the quickened attention of the prosperous looking person who seemed so willing to take advice from a chance acquaintance.

"If you were a government man yourself you could hardly put the case stronger," was the smiling commentary of this person, who was as yet nameless to Blount.

"How do you know I am not a government man?" said the expatriate, willing enough to play the game as the cards should fall.

"Because you are not traveling on government transportation," was the shrewd reply.

"You can't tell anything by that," Blount said, laughing. "A good many civilian employees of the government travel on regular tickets like other people."

"ESPECIALLY IF THEY ARE TRAVELING ON A SECRET MISSION."

"I know they do," admitted the other, and then, with a sharp side glance which Blount missed, "especially if they are traveling on a secret mission."

"You needn't be alarmed. You have not told me anything the government could make use of," returned Blount, carrying the jest one necessary move further along.

Romance in Merchandise

IN THE building of every great merchandise success there is a story of absorbing human interest, a story fused from the lives and characters of its builders.

A great business appears to be almost automatic in its development. In the full swing of its success it absorbs mountains of raw material and pours out unending rivers of finished merchandise; and it seems as if such an institution must always have been in operation and its product always in demand.

Yet back of this success, a hundred or even two hundred years, there was an insignificant beginning, compassed very likely by a single brain and two labor-scarred hands; followed by many heart-breaking years of experiment, of error, and of desperate chances when it was a daily fight for even the primitive right to exist. With this right established, there came such imperative need of expansion as taxed every resource of the mind, drained dry the uttermost springs of credit, and tested the very marrow of courage.

During all these years of struggle the merchandise and its makers have grown into a closer harmony, each becoming more nearly representative of the other; for nothing is more true than that goods or businesses which are the concrete result of years of study and effort, of days of tireless toil and nights of sleepless thought, come at last to represent and to stand for the character, ambitions, and ideals of their builders.

And merchandise so built has upon it the very finger prints, the intimate touch and fiber, of those whose lives have entered into its moulding. No wonder then that where such businesses are established, and where such goods are made, there has developed a pride of production, a perfection of workmanship, an unswerving loyalty to the highest business ideals.

It is these almost intangible things, these romances of merchandise, that have determined New England's destiny as a great manufacturing center, teeming with millions of skilled laborers and dotted with thousands of mills and factories.

DEMOCRATS WIN SEVEN MAYORS

Gain of Four In City Elections In Pine Tree State

BATH RECORDS A LANDSLIDE

Has Had But Four Democratic Mayors Since 1848, While Hallowell Has the Third Since 1852—Republican Candidate In Saco Loses Election Because His Name Is Not Placed on Official Ballot by Committee

Portland, Me., March 7.—Several striking features characterized the annual municipal elections held in eleven of Maine's twenty cities. The overturn in Bath takes precedence in importance. The Democrats kept up their victorious tendency so noticeable in the state election last September, winning seven mayors, as against three in the same cities a year ago, with one city, Saco, continuing Citizen-Democratic.

Bath has had but four Democratic mayors since its incorporation in 1848, and Frank A. Small, a shipbuilder, had a plurality over Clarence A. Peaslee larger than his opponent's total vote. The landslide swept the city, giving the Democrats six out of the seven wards.

Mayor-elect Emery O. Beane is the third Democrat to be so honored in Hallowell. His father, chairman of the Democratic state committee, served in 1891 and 1907., Hallowell became a city in 1852 and the first interruption in Republican victories came in 1876-7, when John W. Clark was mayor two terms.

William R. Pattangall, serving his third term in the Maine house of representatives, and the majority leader in the present session, was elected mayor of Waterville over Martin Blaisdell, a Republican and former mayor.

Adelbert J. Tolman, serving his fifth term as sheriff of Knox county, failed to be elected mayor of Rockland, the margin of his opponent, G. H. Blethen, Republican, being 309.

Mayor Frank A. Morey of Lewiston was given his fifth consecutive election on the Democratic ticket, defeating another Democrat in so doing, William H. Newell, county judge of probate, and also formerly mayor. Newell ran on Citizens' nomination papers and with Republican indorsement.

The failure of the Republican city committee of Saco to file nomination papers in time to have his name placed on the official ballots probably cost John G. Smith, the Republican nominee for mayor, his election.

The Democrats made gains in the city governments. The Republicans elected majorities in six, the Democrats in three and the Democratic-Citizen combination in one, with one city tied. Last year the Republicans had eight cities, the Democrats two, and the Democrat-Citizen ticket one. The following are the mayors elected:

Auburn, *I. L. Merrill, Rep.; Bath, F. A. Small, Dem.; Eastport, *W. J. Garnett, Rep.; Ellsworth, C. H. Leland, Dem.; Gardiner, B. E. Lamb, Rep.; Hallowell, E. O. Beane, Dem.; Lewiston, *F. A. Morey, Dem.; Rockland, G. H. Blethen, Rep.; South Portland, *J. A. S. Dyer, Dem.; Saco, W. J. Gilpatrick, D.-C.; Waterville, W. R. Pattangall, Dem. *Re-elected.

WANTS SMALL LOAN PROBE

Bank Commissioner Has Been Looking Into Boston Companies

Boston, March 7.—Bank Commissioner Chapin has urged a legislative investigation of the small loan companies in this city. He appeared before the legislative committee on banks an dbanking at the state house. He also urged that the companies be placed under the supervision of the bank commissioner.

Mr. Chapin said that he had investigated on his own hook and found conditions that warranted a thorough investigation by the legislature. Others argued for the commissioner's plan.

CHUMMY WITH DOGS

Little Coyote Fails to Realize That She Is Classed as Renegade

Spokane, March 7.—Discovered in a woodshed, made a willing captive and sent to the dog [illegible] of the S. P. C. A., a peaceable little coyote, apparently unconscious that she is of an outcast race and only a renegade in the canine world, is enjoying herself.

The little brown beast does not seem to know that she is a prairie wolf instead of a stub-nosed, lop-eared bulldog or poodle, and plays with the dogs in the cages adjoining as if they had been reared in the same kennel.

SAVES EXPENSE AND LIVES

Home-Made Couch Syrup.

An item like labeled cough syrup costs the people several million dollars a year. Every item the housewife can save on, is worth while, so that this home-made, reliable, laxative cough and cold medicine will be welcomed by thousands, who have never tried it. Many hundreds right in this community, already know its worth according to a well known druggist.

Buy at the drug store a 2 1-2 oz. package of Essence Mentho-Laxene, a concentrated fluid empty it into a pint bottle. Then make a syrup by pouring a half pint of boiling water into a pint of granulated sugar, stir, cool and fill up the bottle with syrup. Full directions and dosage are contained in each package. A saving of $2.00 to $3.00 is effected and it cures any curable cough.

FAILURE MAY TOTAL NEARLY $1,000,000

Alleged Bucket Shop Men Placed on Trial at Boston

Boston, March 7.—From a little book, which was fastened with a lock, found in the safe of the brokerage firm of Sederquist, Barry & Co., which failed two years ago, detectives from the district attorney's office found secrets which they will use in the trial of the four men connected with the firm, which began before Judge Jenney and a jury.

The statement of the discovery of the book was told in his opening speech to the jury by Assistant District Attorney Webber. Before making this known he declared that the failure of the firm would total up a loss of nearly $1,000,000.

The defendants are A. B. Sederquist, D. E. Bigelow, J. F. Barry and H. F. Curtis. There is a fifth defendant, but he has not been arrested. It is the biggest case of the kind that has been tried in Boston in many years.

The defendants are charged with keeping what is known as a bucket shop. Their main place was in Boston, with more than a dozen branches in other cities. Many of their patrons were women.

MAKES WORK EASIER

Quincy People Pleased to Learn How It Is Done.

It's pretty hard to attend to duties
With a constantly aching back;
With annoying urinary disorders.
Doan's Kidney Pills make work easier.
They cure backache.
They cure kidney ills.

James P. Daugherty, Hammond Place Quincy, Mass. says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and am glad to let other sufferers know what they have done for me. I was bothered a great deal by backache and had but little strength or energy to get through with my day's work. I took many so-called kidney cures, but did not succeed in finding relief until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I procured at the Cox Drug Store. I was surprised and gratified by the prompt way in which they relieved me. My back was soon strong and free from pain and I felt better in every respect. I would go to considerable trouble to get anyone to use Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have so much confidence in their merit."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS

Hold a Cabinet Meeting for East Norfolk District

At a cabinet meeting of the East Norfolk C. E. Union held in Bethany chapel, Monday evening, Rev. J. Spencer Voorhees, former State president and now field secretary of the Massachusetts C. E. Union, gave an excellent address on "Christian Endeavor." Following the speech an informal discussion took place during which many helpful suggestions were made by Mr. Voorhees. At 7 o'clock, a supper was served by members of the entertaining society.

The business session began at eight o'clock. An invitation was received from the First Presbyterian society to meet with them on April 3. The Finnish Congregational society was voted into membership in the Union. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy's resignation as councillor of the Union was accepted with regret, and a committee was appointed to draw up resolutions. The executive committee was given power to make plans for celebrating the 20th anniversary of the union the first of June. The meeting adjourned at 9.30.

Mr. Voorhees will devote his time today in calling on the different pastors in the district. From here he will go to the Clark Union which includes, the Weymouths, Rockland, Hingham and Cohasset.

A block of granite weighing nearly 700 tons was safely quarried at the Blue Hill quarry Monday, the dimensions are 25 by 30 by 11.

Lester H. Clee, the popular boys' work director of the Y. M. C. A., will speak to the members of the Galahad club at their meeting on Thursday evening.

An important business meeting of Makaria Fraternity will be held in the Makaria room, Bethany church, this evening. A new manager for the baseball team will be elected.

Bribe-Taking Cop Discharged

Boston, March 7.—Patrolman Edward J. Ford, who was suspended from duty on a charge of having accepted bribe money from a teamster, failed to appear at a hearing which was held on the charges and was found guilty by the trial board and ordered discharged from the department.

—A lady who made an address to the State Congress of Mothers the other day laid stress on the idea that there should be less general education of girls in schools and more education that would make them good homemakers, good wives and good mothers. Isn't it possible that a modern young woman can get a good education of the regulation stamp at school and also get a good education in home duties? And where in the world is a finer and more appropriate place for teaching the young women to be good homemakers than in the home? Who should be better fitted to teach the home arts and graces and general knowledge than a mother who knows them herself? Is it really necessary to have paid instructors in all matters affecting students?—Brockton Enterprise.

THE PRIMROSE PATH

By BYRON WILLIAMS

THE AUTHOR OF "THE STOLE TRUNK."

SOME of my friends have asked me why I resigned the editorship of the magazine having the greatest circulation in the world. The following letter, recently received, is one of the minor reasons:

"Dere editor: I have been taking your paper a long time, and I find it one, if not the best, magazine among my papers. Therefore I would like to have you publish my story. It is considered very fine. I want to get it in book form. It is all written. Each chapter is headed. All there is to be done is to put it to press. It is a love story, 'Loved or Not Loved.'

"There has been several read it, and all think it just fine. If you think you can print it threw in your paper I will promise you some fifteen or twenty new subscribers.

"Outlines of this as follows:

"'CHAPTER 1.

"'Mr. Little's home, the loss, causing his death. Roseline is forced to give up her friend, has to work to earn their daily support, her mother is greatly grieved. Roseline goes to secure her position. Meets Mr. Lisenbee, avoids him as a "mere stranger." His proposal, the refusal, his departure. Mrs. Little's death. Mr. Lisenbee vows to marry Roseline in disguise.

"'Dreams the night before her wedding day he is forcing her to marry him. She dreams this. So the next day when the man who comes after her comes, she reports she is ill.

"'Claude's confession to Roseline. She forgives him. The great wedding. Roseline takes her place in society again. In the meantime her friend marries. Finis."

"This is only a mere outline, so that you may know just how the story runs, which is fine. The best of language is used, which will be a boost to your paper. Let me know at once, as I have another almost completed, which, if this is a success, I can put threw at once."

Another reason I resigned is because of the receipt of a seventeen stanza poem entitled "A Calling," the first of which is as follows:

Lying on a cottage bed,
No human skill could relieve her.
She is lying their dead
From a disease called "brain fever."

Hardly had I recovered from this attack than I received among an armful of manuscript a letter from a man who wrote:

A SEVENTEEN STANZA POEM.

"I have three stories—'The Haunted House,' 'The Stole Trunk' and 'How Jeff Was Hung; or, The Mystery of a Murder.' I think 'The Stole Trunk' is the best of the three. How much will you give me for it? When you tell me I will send it along if you will send me postage. I sent a storie to a magazine once, and they never cent it back."

You may think these things are funny and conclude that an editor's job is a gay interim between meals. Let me use two barrels in refuting this. Nay, nay! Imagine a subscriber from a little town away off yonder writing in and asking, "Will you please give me a list of the plumbers in Chicago?" There are seven pages in the Chicago directory devoted to plumbers. Why remind an editor that he is compelled to help support them?

And the poor suffering people who appeal to you to "buy this story or the heriff will take my cow" is something pitiful. It would seem that the last financial ditch is well supplied with pens and paper and that literature is not only the best bet, but the only one, before the poorhouse.

THREATENED TO WHIP ME.

Once when I was publishing a country newspaper (and those were happy days, too) a subscriber threatened to whip me because I refused to print the history of his family as written in verse by his grandmother. I recall that I just escaped by suggesting that the poem was too good to waste on a home newspaper and advised him to send it to Upstart's Magazine. Before he got it back I had sold my paper. But manifold repentance has been done for this act—yes, for both of them, for that matter, for editing a country newspaper has many virtues to recommend it as a business when compared to the editorial sanctum of the great magazine and its daily routine.

A SINGULAR BIRD

By EDWARD BATY

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Miss' Barker, I reckon we uns have had enough o' this matrimonial business. Anyway, I have, seein' your husban' he's run away with my wife."

"Yo' mean, Mr. Todler, thet your wife run away with my husban.'"

"It's just as bad one way as t'other. I'm goin' to shut my baby boy up and never let him see a gal," said Mr. Todler.

"I was thinkin' o' doin' the same with my baby gal."

"We mought do it up hyar in these mountings and bring 'em clean up without the boy seein' a gal or the gal a boy."

"It's powerful lonsome. Nobody ever comes up hyar unless it's revenue men lookin' fo' stills."

"Waal, mornin', Miss' Barker."

"Mornin', Mr. Todler.

The homes of these two persons were far up in the highlands of east Tennessee. They were successful in keeping their children from seeing one of the opposite sex till they were sixteen years old. Then the boy demanded a gun. His father gave him one on condition that he never hunt off the inclosure. But one day the youngster followed a bird from tree to tree till he got on to Mrs. Barker's premises. There, sitting under a tree knitting, he saw Miss Barker. They looked at each other in astonishment.

"Oh, mother," called the girl, "come here! There's the funniest thing you ever saw!"

But Mrs. Barker was not within hearing.

"You mean," said young Todler, "that you are the funniest thing in the world. Queer, isn't it! You can talk just like a man, only your voice is different."

"You must be some kind of a woman."

"You must be some kind of a man.

"I know; mother often told me that there was a thing like you that I must keep away from. She says they poison women's lives. She's always been afraid I'd meet one of them."

"Pop's told me the same thing about what he calls a she man. He said one of them wrecked his life."

"Well," said the girl, "I don't see anything so terrible about you."

"Nor I about you."

She approached him, put her hand on his shoulder, drew it away quickly, put it on his neck, took off his hat and combed his hair with her fingers. He touched her cheek.

"Are you going to bite me?" she asked.

"Not I. Have you got any poison about you?"

"Poison! No. Why do you ask that?"

"Pop says these she men are vipers. That means snakes. Most snakes are poisonous."

"Your pop must be horrid."

She patted his cheek with the palm of her hand. He put his arm around her waist. With the other hand he pulled her chin around near his face. Instinct told him to touch his lips to hers.

"Isn't that nice?" he said.

"Kind o' nice."

"Do you wish me to do it again?"

"I don't care."

He did it again and again. Then he noticed her hair done up in a knot at the back of her head. Pulling at it, he at last got the hairpins out, and the coil fell on her shoulder.

"By gum!" he exclaimed. "What in thunder do you let your hair grow like that for?"

"Why do you cut yours off?"

Following a natural inclination, these two young things clung to each other, the boy winding his arms about the girl and the girl about the boy.

"I'm thinking," said the girl.

"About what?"

"My mom has warned me against your kind, and your pop has warned you against my kind. If we tell them anything about this they'll tie us both up the way they do the dogs."

"We needn't tell."

"Suppose we don't."

They concluded that they were too near the she-man's mother for safety, so they strolled away to a safe distance and remained together several hours. When they separated the he-woman kissed her, which shows plainly that lovers' kisses at meeting and parting are a matter of instinct.

When the girl went into the house and met her mother she said not a word about the queer creature she had met. And this shows that a prime law of nature with the sex is to get the better of each other, which enables them to get the better of their husbands. Her mother asked her where she had been so long, and she said she had been out in the woods listening to a frog croaking in the creek. A queer sound came from it she had never heard before.

When the boy went home his father asked him if he had had any luck. He replied that he had seen a bird of paradise, but it was so beautiful he hadn't the heart to kill it. His father suspected from an absendmindedness about his boy that he had seen a girl. He asked what the bird looked like.

"Pretty near as big as I—a big topknot at the back of its head and no legs. At least I could not see any."

The father groaned.

The next day Mr. Todler held a conference with Mrs. Barker, with the result that Todler took his son to her house, a minister said things over the two youngsters, and they were told that each could keep the other for a pet.

HOW QUINCY HAS MOVED UP

Cities of Massachusetts Which Have Fallen Behind in the Race for Population

Quincy Now Hard Pushed by Three Cities of State

The progress of Quincy could not be better shown at a glance than in the summary of population below. These are the figures by every census since 1880.

Only one town which was smaller than Quincy in 1880 is larger today, and that is Everett with a lead of but 842 in 1910.

Since 1880 Quincy has passed Chelsea, Pittsfield, Waltham, Gloucester, Chicopee, Northampton, Woburn, Newburyport, Weymouth and Attleboro.

At times North Adams and Pittsfield were ahead but are now a few hundred behind.

Our nearest rivals today are Chelsea, Pittsfield, and North Adams, but should we lose to any one of these, we have an equally good chance to pass either Everett, Taunton or Fitchburg, so that Quincy's chances are good for maintaining No. 20, just secured, or moving up to No. 19 or better in 1915.

Weymouth, which had the same population as Quincy 30 years ago, has been left far behind. Certainly with such an example near at hand Quincy can be given the credit of being progressive. Why has Quincy grown so much faster than Weymouth?

Not because Quincy is nearer to Boston. At the census of 1905, Brookline was the largest town, with Hyde Park second. Today there are six larger towns than Hyde Park. Revere, Leominster, Attleboro, Westfield and Peabody, all a greater distance from Boston ,have passed Hyde Park. Quincy is now No. 20 but Weymouth is No. 46.

The first twelve cities of the State are omitted from the list below, Malden being No. 13 in Massachusetts. The summary affords an interesting study:

NEW PASTOR AT WEYMOUTH

Quincy Pas'ors Assist in the Installation Services

Rev. Walter H. Commons was installed as pastor of the First Congregational church, East Weymouth, Tuesday evening. In the afternoon a ministerial council was held with pastors and delegates from churches in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Hingham and Cohasset. Rev. Henry O. Hannum of Holyoke was also summoned. Quincy was represented by Rev. E. N. Hardy, Rev. C. P. Marshall and Deacon Charles Sherburne.

Rev. Daniel W. Waldron acted as moderator of the meeting. Mr. Commons, the pastor-elect, was brought up a Quaker, but later through the influence of Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, former president of Union Theological Seminary, became a Congregationalist. When he received the call to East Weymouth, Mr. Commons was pastor of a church in Westfield, Mass.

The supper was held at 6.30, after which brief after-dinner speeches were given by Dr. Daniel Evans of Andover Theological Seminary, Rev. F. A. Poole of Worcester, Rev. Thomas A. Simms of Braintree, and by the pastor-elect, Rev. Walter H. Commons. Rev. Daniel Waldron was the toastmaster.

The installation ceremony in the evening was conducted by the following clergymen: Installation sermon, Rev. Henry O. Hannum of Holyoke; charge to pastor, Rev. William C. Gordan of Auburndale; address to people, Rev. Emery L. Bradford, former pastor of the church; right hand of fellowship, Rev. Henry C. Alvord, South Weymouth; scripture, Rev. George S. Scrivener of Weymouth; invitation, Rev. Edward Norton of Quincy. Prayer of installation, Rev. F. E. Emrich, Boston.

SERIOUS FALL AT SHIPYARD

Accidently Thrown into the Hole, 65 Feet Below

Angus Finlayson, fourteen year old son of Mrs. J. Q. Finlayson of 26 Taber street, was very seriously injured at the Fore River shipyard on Monday.

The boy had been assisting Gustave Theikuil, the yard photographer for some time, and in the afternoon accompanied him on board the Rivadavia, the Argentine dreadnought. When they reached the deck Mr. Theikuil was in the lead, and the boy followed carrying the tripod. The photographer stopped for a moment and the assistant stepped by. The plank he stepped onto had a loose end, and as it fell the boy went with it, landing in the hold of the vessel, 65 feet beneath the staging.

He was taken to the Fore River hospital, where Dr. Blanchard discovered the nature of his injuries. One leg, an arm, three ribs and the nose were fractured and the whole face was smashed in.

The ambulance was called, and the unconscious youth was taken to City Hospital, where Dr. Ramon Burke attended to his wounds. At last reports the sufferer was hanging between life and death in a semi-conscious condition.

Mrs. Finlayson, the mother, has a large family all of whom were more or less dependent upon him. Angus, the by who was injured, is amember of the Boys club of the First Presbyterian church.

COHASSET LIBEL CASE

William O. Souther, Jr., Arraignad in Quincy Court

An aftermath of the recent town meeting at Cohasset came today, when William O. Souther, Jr., was arraigned in court at Quincy on complaint of Herbert A. Tilden, for libel. The said libel being an article published in the Cohasset Sentinel in its issue of Feb. 24.

Souther was one o fthe leaders in the fight against Philander Bates, whom it is said Tilden, a former town officer, supported. The article in question is said to have reflected on the character of Tilden.

John W. McAnarney was counsel for Tilden, and Albert P. Worthen looked after the interest of Souther. Nine witnesses were sworn, and a long legal fight is assured. At the start Mr. Worthen filed a motion to quash for want of jurisdiction, but it was overruled by the court, which determined that the issues was probable cause.

The first witness was Albert H. Merriam of the New England Newspaper Union, which publishes the South Shore paper, for Miss Floretta Vining. He was on the witness stand for an hour or more, his evidence being that he had a conversation with Souther and Miss Vining in regard to the publication of the article on the day in question.

OVERTIME PERIOD WAS NECESSARY

Then Quincy High Lost to North Easton High by the Score of 14 to 12

One of the Best Games of the Season—Excitement Intense

Quincy High lost to Oliver Ames High school on Tuesday in the fiercest and closest basketball game of the season. At the end of the second 20-minute period the score stood 12 to 12, and an extra period was necessary. After play had been going on for 12 minutes, in the midst of the most intense excitement, Goward, left back on the Oliver Ames team shot a pretty basket from the floor and won the game. It was generally acknowledged by the players and spectators alike, that the contest was the most gruelling ever played by either team. The game was happily free from unpleasant elements and owing to the excellent decisions of the referee, A. J. Woodlock, there were no delays for argument.

Quincy found the gymnasium very strange, with low ceiling and much smaller dimensions than those in which she had played before. Thus, during the first of the game, the visiting five were unable to find the basket very well, and the half ended with the score 9 to 5 in favor of Oliver Ames.

The second half was one which will go down in history. Quincy outplayed the home team, but the latter encouraged by the cheers of the

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Milwaukee soon is to have a convention of coroners. This does not mean that it is a dead town.

Oregon has abolished the whipping post. Possibly Oregon husbands have ceased to beat their wives.

To be an importer in New York, now, is to be suspected of being a smuggler.

We ventured to say that when Senator Lorimer made his impassioned defense Senator Tillman wept some more.

It isn't necessary to work an electrical keyboard to see Captain Hobson perform. All that one has to do is to make a noise like a Japanese.

Senator Aldrich says he has not been so well in years. Evidently it has done the Senator a lot of good to get the tariff question off his mind.

We are glad the Park Commissioners have taken steps to prevent fires in Merrymount park by offering a substantial reward for information that will lead to the arrest of the parties guilty of setting the fires. Merrymount park is too beautiful a spot to be mutilated each spring by fire and the boys or men guilty of the offence should be severely dealt with.

Down in Beverly the City Sealer of Weights and Measures has got after the ice cream dealers, more especially those selling it in tins or "bricks" which are found to be one or two ounces below the required legal measure. Cream jars, are also found to vary, in many cases the buyer getting two cents worth less than he should when buying a pint of cream. There seems to be much activity in the way of pure food laws and their inforcement and that the buyer gets full value for every cent expended. This should reduce the cost of living somewhat.

The members of the City Council of 1911 many receive a rude shock when they learn that there is not margin enough within the debt limit to provide for one-tenth of their pet schemes this year. At each meeting appropriation order after appropriation order is introduced which cannot possibly materialize this year. After the loans of $134,000 for the Wollaston and Montclair schoolhouses and for certain streets authorized in 1910 were negotiated, it left a margin of only $56,-531.75 within the debt limit which Mayor Shea placed in his inaugural address at $190,531.75. Loans against this $56,531.75 have already been authorized by the new Council.

As the maturing debt is paid toward the end of the year there will be an opportunity to make new loans, but the city cannot afford to get any nearer the debt limit than at present. It should always have a leeway of $50,-000 for extraordinary emergency, such as the burning of a schoolhouse or fire station. The long term loans are not only burdening the city with interests, but are exhausting the lebt limit, and may soon check all improvements.

Already orders for over $100,000 within the debt limit are pending in the City Council, and many hope also to secure a new Adams school and other improvements.

It would seem, if a trolley freight depot is to be established on Washington street that it should be on the same side of the street as the railway tracks. Where a car crosses the whole street in going in or out of a yard it often puts a passing team or auto into a "pocket" and accidents will result. Then again a corner lot would seem more desirable.

For example, select the lot at the corner of Washington and Foster streets. Soon after passing the Y. M. C. A. the car could turn into the lot, and keep on the side toward the Y. M. C. A. Near the spur track a platform could be built to receive freight from two or three cars, and teams could enter from Foster street and back up the platform and get their packages.

There would be an opportunity on the corner to erect an office building. As the business grew other lots on Foster street could be secured, and the track if necessary extended nearly to Chestnut street. Such a location would remove much of the danger on Washington street under the other location, and be more central.

Some other corner lot might be even better than the Foster street corner on some other street. Possibly the Faxon avenue corner with car track near the Shaw building. Or the Cottage avenue corner. Or at Wild place; or near G. A. R. hall with entrance for teams on Mechanic street.

Perhaps one of the best possible locations is in the rear of Hotel Greenleaf on Granite street. A track from Hancock street along Granite street would not be objectionable and the sidewalk between the hotel and the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. is little used. In this neighborhood there is all the land that might be desired, and very central.

BASKET BALL

spectators exerted themselves to the utmost, and tied the game up. Goward, the left back, came to the fore three times in the game, once tying the score by shooting a basket, a second time by scoring on a free try, and last by shooting the winning goal after 12 minutes of the hardest basketball playing seen in the interscholastic world for many a day.

Although the home team wrested the victory from its opponents, yet Quincy has much to be proud of. Prout held Tracey, captain of Oliver Ames, to no score, and shot the prettiest basket of the game himself, making a clean shot from the centre of the floor. Harmon was opposed by Nelson, who has been called the best basketgetter in the state. The "light haired wonder" did his best, but was unable to get more than one basket. "Mil Chapman held Long down to a similar score. Manning was beyond question the individual star of the game, getting two baskets from the floor and shooting six fouls.

The game was a hard one to lose, not only because of its significance in the state championship, but also in view of the fact that Quincy practically outplayed the home team and then lost. But now that it is all over, it is not for the losers to complain, but to take courage from the fact that without any coaching, they were able to give the best teams in the state the hardest games they ever played. All honor to the team which aided only by its own efforts, has won the heartiest respect of every team it has met, for its prowess and indomitable spirit.

INTERVENE IN MEXICAN WAR

United States Forces Assembling For That Purpose

TO MOBILIZE ON THE BORDER

Government's Declaration That Movement Is For Peace Maneuvers Not Accepted—Purpose Believed to Be to Forestall Interference by Great Britain—Executive Officers at Washington Steeped With Mystery

Washington, March 8.—Troops which make up one-fourth the army of the United States, one-fifth the marine corps, the fifth division of the Atlantic fleet and the Pacific fleet are moving in the greatest military demonstration in which the United States has engaged since the Spanish-American war.

They will be mobilized on the Mexican border, ready for intervention in Mexico. This is believed to be the result of the statement by the British ambassador that unless the United States would protect the foreign interests in Mexico the European governments, particularly Great Britain and Germany, would be compelled to do so.

Major General Carter, U. S. A., will comand the provisional division. Brigades will be formed at San Antonio, Galveston and in the Los Angeles district.

Nineteen thousand troops, infantry, cavalry and artillery, were electrified by rush oders sent out from the war department yesterday. A force of 1400 marines is being collected along the Atlantic coast to join the complement which will be landed from the fleet at Guantanamo, which will become the base of naval operations in the Atlantic. The fifth division of the Atlantic fleet is now at New York. The Pacific fleet is being gathered from the Pacific coast navy yard to form a naval base in southern California.

The mobilization will be completed Sunday. All available ammunition is ordered to be taken with the troops.

The navy and marine corps are cooperating closely with the army in the movement.

It was officially announced at the White House and at the war and navy departments that the purpose of this great mobilization is the training of officers and men under service conditions and practice in co-operation between the land and navy forces. Unusual pains were taken by all officially concerned in the matter to give this color to the sudden activity, but these statements were accepted with increasing reserve.

There have been important joint maneuvers during the last few years, but they have been planned far in advance and carried out without a ripple of excitement or even of evidence of interest, at the White House. Now the executive offices are steeped in mystery.

This thick atmosphere of mystery and the zealous efforts to minimize the importance of the business, lent a curious significance to the fact that General Wood, chief of staff of the army, in an effort to elude interviewers, slipped out of one of the rear windows of the president's office and beat a masterly retreat through the secluded portions of the White House grounds to a rear entrance of the war department.

The real significance of these activities, which have ben confined apparently to the last forty-eight hours or less, is thought to relate very directly to the conditions in Mexico and in the growing belief that the situation there is by no means so satisfactory as the Mexican government would have it believed to be.

There are persistent reports that the physical condition of President Diaz has lately become such as to alarm his adherents, and that momentous developments are to be prepared for.

Wealthy Woman Has Not Left Her Premises For Forty Years

Bridgeport, Conn., March 8.—At a hearing on the application of her son for the appointment of a conservator over Mrs. William H. Thorpe, 70 years old, wife of a Grand Army man, in the probate court, testimony was given to show that Mrs. Thorpe, alleged to be incompetent and worth $75,000, has been kept a prisoner in her home for forty years.

In all that time, it was testified, she has never handled a dollar, has never left her own premises, never wore a woman's hat and, although there is a trolley line about two blocks from her house, she has never seen a trolley car. She has lived in this city practically all her life.

AEROPLANE LANDS ON HIGH MOUNTAIN

Renaux Makes Great Flight In France With a Passenger

Clermont Ferrand, France, March 8.—Aviator Renaux, flying from Saint Cloud with a passenger, landed on the summit of Puy-de-Dome, winning the special Michelin prize of $20,000. His time in the air for the distance of 217 miles was four hours and fifty-one minutes, making his rate of speed 44.9 miles an hour.

The special Michelin prize of $20,-000 was hung up last year for the first airman who, with a companion, should fly in six hours from Paris to the top of Puy-de-Dome after circling the steeple of the cathedral at Clermont-Ferrand.

Fulfilling the conditions of the trophy Renaux carried a passenger and, starting in the Seine-Etholse, first circled the Arc de Triomphe in Paris and then shot away for this place, where he made a turn about the spires of the cathedral, a few moments later alighting on the mountain top 4800 feet above the sea. The distance traveled, "as the crow flies," is 217 miles. Renaux used a Farman biplane and was accompanied by M. Senouque.

DAY NURSERY.

The Day Nursery Association very much appreciates the denial in Tuesday's Ledger which effectually removes a wrong impression given by an article published March first, stating that the original source of the epidemic of scarlet fever in Quincy was a cose brought to the Nursery.

Members of the Asociation wish also to express publicly their appreciation of the care and devotion shown by the Matron who, since she heard of the first cases of the disease in Wollaston, in November, has taken every precaution possible to protect the children and mothers of the Nursery. Each day she examined every child as it was brought in and it was not until late in January that she discovered anything at all suspicious; one of the children showed an eruption. She insisted that the mother's physician be sent for; he examined the child and pronounced it eczema.

As one of the rules of the Nursery is that no child with skin disease of any kind shall be admitted, Mrs. Loring isolated the child for the few hours that he must remain there until his mother could come for him, even taking the added precaution of rubbing his body with zinc ointment and binding him about with sterilized cheese cloth. The mother was later informed that she could not continue to bring her boy to the Nursery which was a fortunate decision as further development proved that he had scarlet fever. This is the only case which has appeared in the Nursery.

As soon as a case was discovered in the vicinity the matron showed great caution by refusing to send women out to work lest the disease should spread in that way.

The Nursery has been thoroughly fumigated and was opened by the Board of Health about ten days ago. It is now perfectly safe and no mother will be recommended unless pronounced by the Board of Health to be in sound condition.

MASONIC LODGE GROWING.

The present season is an unusually active one with Wollaston Masonic lodge. At the regular communication Tuesday evening four received their final degrees, Wor. Master Monroe being assisted by Wor. April 1st. "Browning"—Miss Chamberlain, Emerson college.

FEDERATION ART CONFERENCE.

The second section conference of the Federation Art committee was held in Waltham last week with the Waltham Woman's Club as the hostess. Mrs. Caroline E. C. Saville of Quincy, and Mrs. Ella S. Gallagher of Braintree had charge of the meeting. Mrs. Annie L. Cox, chairman of the art committee, explained what the Art department is trying to do in its section work. She said, in addressing the assembly: "It is hoped that these groups of clubs in different sections of the State may be given a better idea of the work and progress in art education and development of taste, made by other clubs, that each delegate may take back to her home club some new ideas of ways and means." Mrs. Saville read a paper written by Mrs. Flora P. Little of Bridgewater, on "Art Progress in Art eaching in the Public Schools."

Miss Elizabeth Merrill of Dorchester continued the subject, and illustrated her talk by showing some original paintings by the pupils of the Dorchester High School. This work emphasized the advancement of modern teaching in developing individual thought and artistic observation. She said most people have an instinct for beauty, which, if not trained, makes them lose their ideals. Ninety per cent of the people go through life seeing not the beauties of the world. If you study art it is small in results unless you try to make home and life more beautiful.

The last paper was by Mrs. Gallagher, who spoke on "Civic Art." She described the garden cities of England and America, and told of the history of Vandercroft as an example of the city beautiful. She spoke of the need of arousing people to a larger view of things, to see that it is better and less expensive to build well at first. That there must be concerted action in economical, hygienic and aesthetic ways. Men and women are feeling the impetus towards higher standards and a larger conception of civic needs.

MONDAY CLUB, WEYMOUTH.

Monday club of Weymouth held its "reciprocity" day Monday afternoon in the Davis Bates Clapp memorial building, East Weymouth. Mrs. Hattie B. Voorhees presided. The program consisted of addresses from representatives from several of the leading women's clubs in southern Massachusetts, special music and a social hour.

Miss Georgia Becon, president of the Massachusetts federation of women's clubs, delivered an address in regard to the work of the club in the state and the value of federation, and Mrs. Frank A. Pray of Weymouth read a poem entitled "The Club," written by the late Sam Walter Foss.

Other guests who spoke on the work and mission of women's clubs were Mrs. H. Gurney president of the Quincy Woman's club. Mrs. Sarah Stetson Howe president of the Old Colony club at South Weymouth, Mrs. M. S. Rogers president of the Philergians of Braintree, Mrs. Emma I. Fraser president of the East Boston Home club, and Mrs. L. W. Northrup of the Brookline Morning club.

The music was by Miss Ruth Stickney violinist, Mrs. Cora Gooch Brooks pianist and William Brooks 'cellist. The afternoon closed with a social hour in charge of Mrs. George D. Bullock.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. J. Herbert Walsh, Mrs. Frank J. A. Perry, Mrs. Walter E. Thompson, Mrs. Edwin P. Hunt, Mrs. John H. Guy, Mrs. Charles W. Baker, Mrs. Charles G. Jordan and Mrs. Edward W. Jones. Those who poured were Mrs. Warren Weston, Mrs. Frank O. Wellington, Mrs. Granville W. Tinkham and Mrs. Theodore H. Emerson.

COPLEY SOCIETY EXHIBITION.

The Copley society exhibition in Copley hall, Boston opened today and will continue until March 28. For the first time free days will be extended this year to women's clubs on application to the manager of the exhibition, H. A. Hallett. Mrs. Charles Bickford, chairman of the Art and Literature committee of the Quincy Women's club will probably arrange a party to go in from Quincy.

KING'S DAUGHTERS.

The regular monthly meeting of Unity circle of Kings Daughters was held in Bethany chapel Tuesday evening. The devotional exercises were in charge of Mrs. V. E. Miller who gave some very helpful thoughts in a most interesting paper.

Mrs. E. S. Moore sang a pleasing solo. The most important matter of business was the voting of $25 toward the first year's salary of the city secretary of Associated Charities.

Mrs. Francis Abele Jr., read a brief but illuminating history of Unity Circle. Some of the most interesting points were these: In 1889, two years after the Kings Daughters movement was started in New York, the Whatsoever Circle was started in Quincy by Mrs. M. E. Taber and Mrs. T. H. Wason.. Immediately following the organization of this first circle the Every Day Sunshine circle was formed by Mrs. Theophilus King. The two circles were joined on 1893 and Unity circle thus came into existence. During the 18 years of continuous existence of Unity circle 233 members have signed the constitution. A sum of $7340 has been earned by the members and has been disbursed for charitable work in Quincy, Boston and in numerous other localities about the state. The founding of the Pond Home for the Aged in Pondville, Mass., came as the direct result of the action of Unity Circle in 1894 in adopting a grandmother and caring for her until her death two years later. This home is the special charge of the different circles of Kings Daughters through-

FUNERAL OF MRS. GOUCHER

Untiring Worker for Many Years at Hall Place Church

Funeral services for Mrs. Edna Feyler Goucher, wife of Charles Alfred Goucher were held at her late home 607 Adams street, Tuesday afternoon at 2. Rev. Carl H. Raupach of the Hall Place M. E. church officiated. He closed his talk with a poem in which the thought was beautifully set forth, "that sometime we'll understand" why such a woman who seemed to be so needed should be taken away, "and know that all God's plans are right." Mrs. Moore and Miss Coe sang "Some day we'll understand"; "Passing out of the shadows" and "Beyond the stars." Interment was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Mrs. Goucher was born in Waldoboro, Me., Dec. 18, 1851, the youngest daughter of James H. and Louisa (Feyler) Burkett. She was married to Charles Alfred Goucher in Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, in 1872 and came to Quincy in the same year, Mr. Goucher having been in Quincy since 1868. She has been a faithful member of the Hall Place M. E. church for about eight years, active and untiring in all its work.

Mrs. Goucher had been in failing health for about a year but continued her work through June. On July 16 she went to the Quincy Hospital to undergo an operation. After her return home she gained slightly for a time, but soon lost it again, and for the past few months she has failed rapidly until on Saturday, March 4, she passed quietly away. Conscious throughout her entire illness, almost to the last moment, her whole thought was for those around her, and she leaves behind her, tender memories of the love, gentleness, patience and faithfulness which won for her such a large place in the hearts of not only her kindred, but her many friends with whom she has labored for so many years, for her bright smiles and cheering words helped wherever she went and brought courage to all. Mrs. Goucher was in her 60th year.

She is survived by her husband, two sisters, Mrs. A. R. Newton of South Framingham, Mrs. E. L. King of Quincy, who has been with her throughout her illness, and one brother, G. H. Burkett of Groveland, Mass.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful, being too numerous to mention, a silent tribute to the loving memory of this friend and sister endeared to all by her unselfish life. The funeral was very largely attended by relatives and friends.

Just What You Need to Make Baby Happy

You have no idea of the coziness and practical features of the 1911 Go-Cart until you have seen the showing newly installed on our floors.

They combine all the luxury of the old style carriage with the neatness and compactness of the later runabout models.

Years of progress and careful tests have evolved a style of cart that nears perfection. Soft comfortable cushions, resilient springs, rubber tires, water and sunproof hoods, easy running qualities are features that baby and mother will appreciate.

The three-quarter size is not as large or cumbersome as the old type, neither is it so small as to cramp the baby.

Prices from $4.98 to $35.

See our popular priced carriages, very latest models from $10 to $17.50.

Our Divided Payment Plan makes it "Easy to Buy, Easy to Pay."

CHARITIES CONFERENCE.

Boston is to entertain for a week in June the National Conference of Charities and Correction. This is the first time in 35 years the conference has met here. A gathering of 2500 to 4000 professional workers is expected to meet for a galaxy of meetings, as was given out at a meeting of the local publicity committee held at 43 Mt. Vernon street last week. Among the organizations that will time their annual conferences here in conjunction with the National Charities are the Jewish Federation of Charities, the St. Vincent de Paul Association, the Association of Probation Officers and the Association for the Study of Backward, Delinquent and Truant Children.

Amongst the topics to be considered by the conference will be the latest ideas of care of the insane, juvenile delinquency, effects of immigration upon country and city, dealing with tuberculosis, standards of labor as considered by such organizations as the Consumers' League, and the causes and cures of law-breaking.

FEDERATION ART CONFERENCE.

The second section conference of the Federation Art committee was held in Waltham last week with the Waltham Woman's Club as the hostess. Mrs. Caroline E. C. Saville of Quincy, and Mrs. Ella S. Gallagher of Braintree had charge of the meeting. Mrs. Annie L. Cox, chairman of the art committee, evplained what the Art department is trying to do in its section work. She said, in addressing the assembly: "It is hoped that these groups of clubs in different sections of the State may be given a better idea of the work and progress in art education and development of taste, made by other clubs, that each delegate may take back to her home club some new ideas of ways and means." Mrs. Saville read a paper written by Mrs. Flora P. Little of Bridgewater, on "Art Progress in Art eaching in the Public Schools."

Miss Elizabeth Merrill of Dorchester continued the subject, and illustrated her talk by showing some original paintings by the pupils of the Dorchester High School. This work emphasized the advancement of modern teaching in developing individual thought and artistic observation. She said most people have an instinct for beauty, which, if not trained, makes them lose their ideals. Ninety per cent of the people go through life seeing not the beauties of the world. If you study art it is small in results unless you try to make home and life more beautiful.

The last paper was by Mrs. Gallagher, who spoke on "Civic Art." She described the garden cities of England and America, and told of the history of Vandercroft as an example of the city beautiful. She spoke of the need of arousing people to a larger view of things, to see that it is better and less expensive to build well at first. That there must be concerted action in economical, hygienic and aesthetic ways. Men and women are feeling the impetus towards higher standards and a larger conception of civic needs.

MONDAY CLUB, WEYMOUTH.

Monday club of Weymouth held its "reciprocity" day Monday afternoon in the Davis Bates Clapp memorial building, East Weymouth. Mrs. Hattie B. Voorhees presided. The program consisted of addresses from representatives from several of the leading women's clubs in southern Massachusetts, special music and a social hour.

Miss Georgia Becon, president of the Massachusetts federation of women's clubs, delivered an address in regard to the work of the club in the state and the value of federation, and Mrs. Frank A. Pray of Weymouth read a poem entitled "The Club," written by the late Sam Walter Foss.

Other guests who spoke on the work and mission of women's clubs were Mrs. H. Gurney president of the Quincy Woman's club. Mrs. Sarah Stetson Howe president of the Old Colony club at South Weymouth, Mrs. M. S. Rogers president of the Philergians of Braintree, Mrs. Emma I. Fraser president of the East Boston Home club, and Mrs. L. W. Northrup of the Brookline Morning club.

The music was by Miss Ruth Stickney violinist, Mrs. Cora Gooch Brooks pianist and William Brooks 'cellist. The afternoon closed with a social hour in charge of Mrs. George D. Bullock.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. J. Herbert Walsh, Mrs. Frank J. A. Perry, Mrs. Walter E. Thompson, Mrs. Edwin P. Hunt, Mrs. John H. Guy, Mrs. Charles W. Baker, Mrs. Charles G. Jordan and Mrs. Edward W. Jones. Those who poured were Mrs. Warren Weston, Mrs. Frank O. Wellington, Mrs. Granville W. Tinkham and Mrs. Theodore H. Emerson.

COPLEY SOCIETY EXHIBITION.

The Copley society exhibition in Copley hall, Boston opened today and will continue until March 28. For the first time free days will be extended this year to women's clubs on application to the manager of the exhibition, H. A. Hallett. Mrs. Charles Bickford, chairman of the Art and Literature committee of the Quincy Women's club will probably arrange a party to go in from Quincy.

KING'S DAUGHTERS.

The regular monthly meeting of Unity circle of Kings Daughters was held in Bethany chapel Tuesday evening. The devotional exercises were in charge of Mrs. V. E. Miller who gave some very helpful thoughts in a most interesting paper.

Mrs. E. S. Moore sang a pleasing solo. The most important matter of business was the voting of $25 toward the first year's salary of the city secretary of Associated Charities.

Mrs. Francis Abele Jr., read a brief but illuminating history of Unity Circle. Some of the most interesting points were these: In 1889, two years after the Kings Daughters movement was started in New York, the Whatsoever Circle was started in Quincy by Mrs. M. E. Taber and Mrs. T. H. Wason.. Immediately following the organization of this first circle the Every Day Sunshine circle was formed by Mrs. Theophilus King. The two circles were joined on 1893 and Unity circle thus came into existence. During the 18 years of continuous existence of Unity circle 233 members have signed the constitution. A sum of $7340 has been earned by the members and has been disbursed for charitable work in Quincy, Boston and in numerous other localities about the state. The founding of the Pond Home for the Aged in Pondville, Mass., came as the direct result of the action of Unity Circle in 1894 in adopting a grandmother and caring for her until her death two years later. This home is the special charge of the different circles of Kings Daughters through-

FUNERAL OF MRS. GOUCHER

Untiring Worker for Many Years at Hall Place Church

Funeral services for Mrs. Edna Feyler Goucher, wife of Charles Alfred Goucher were held at her late home 607 Adams street, Tuesday afternoon at 2. Rev. Carl H. Raupach of the Hall Place M. E. church officiated. He closed his talk with a poem in which the thought was beautifully set forth, "that sometime we'll understand" why such a woman who seemed to be so needed should be taken away, "and know that all God's plans are right." Mrs. Moore and Miss Coe sang "Some day we'll understand"; "Passing out of the shadows" and "Beyond the stars." Interment was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Mrs. Goucher was born in Waldoboro, Me., Dec. 18, 1851, the youngest daughter of James H. and Louisa (Feyler) Burkett. She was married to Charles Alfred Goucher in Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, in 1872 and came to Quincy in the same year, Mr. Goucher having been in Quincy since 1868. She has been a faithful member of the Hall Place M. E. church for about eight years, active and untiring in all its work.

Mrs. Goucher had been in failing health for about a year but continued her work through June. On July 16 she went to the Quincy Hospital to undergo an operation. After her return home she gained slightly for a time, but soon lost it again, and for the past few months she has failed rapidly until on Saturday, March 4, she passed quietly away. Conscious throughout her entire illness, almost to the last moment, her whole thought was for those around her, and she leaves behind her, tender memories of the love, gentleness, patience and faithfulness which won for her such a large place in the hearts of not only her kindred, but her many friends with whom she has labored for so many years, for her bright smiles and cheering words helped wherever she went and brought courage to all. Mrs. Goucher was in her 60th year.

She is survived by her husband, two sisters, Mrs. A. R. Newton of South Framingham, Mrs. E. L. King of Quincy, who has been with her throughout her illness, and one brother, G. H. Burkett of Groveland, Mass.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful, being too numerous to mention, a silent tribute to the loving memory of this friend and sister endeared to all by her unselfish life. The funeral was very largely attended by relatives and friends.

Just What You Need to Make Baby Happy

You have no idea of the coziness and practical features of the 1911 Go-Cart until you have seen the showing newly installed on our floors.

They combine all the luxury of the old style carriage with the neatness and compactness of the later runabout models.

Years of progress and careful tests have evolved a style of cart that nears perfection. Soft comfortable cushions, resilient springs, rubber tires, water and sunproof hoods, easy running qualities are features that baby and mother will appreciate.

The three-quarter size is not as large or cumbersome as the old type, neither is it so small as to cramp the baby.

Prices from $4.98 to $35.

See our popular priced carriages, very latest models from $10 to $17.50.

CHARITIES CONFERENCE.

Boston is to entertain for a week in June the National Conference of Charities and Correction. This is the first time in 35 years the conference has met here. A gathering of 2500 to 4000 professional workers is expected to meet for a galaxy of meetings, as was given out at a meeting of the local publicity committee held at 43 Mt. Vernon street last week. Among the organizations that will time their annual conferences here in conjunction with the National Charities are the Jewish Federation of Charities, the St. Vincent de Paul Association, the Association of Probation Officers and the Association for the Study of Backward, Delinquent and Truant Children.

Amongst the topics to be considered by the conference will be the latest ideas of care of the insane, juvenile delinquency, effects of immigration upon country and city, dealing with tuberculosis, standards of labor as considered by such organizations as the Consumers' League, and the causes and cures of law-breaking.

PLAGUE PURSUING PRINCE?

German Legend Revived When Kaiser's Heir's Tour Is Stopped.

Superstitious Germans are glad the crown prince's journey in the far east has been cut short by the plague in China, for there is a Hohenzollern tradition that a great plague will some day carry off a junior member of the family. This to many means the heir.

Hitherto the tradition has been disregarded. It was a subject of joke with the Emperor Frederick. When the kaiser was a child his parents and tutors used to talk of "the great plague which will carry you off" in the sense in which old fashioned nurses threaten children with giants and ogres.

Some interpreted "great plague" to mean foreign invasion, an earthquake or other national calamity, but hardly any one associated it with an epidemic. The fact that plague has broken out on the route the crown prince would have traveled delights persons who believe in legends and prophecies. The prince's return, they hold, was indispensable to his safety.

Germans who know the crown prince declare that he will be very dissatisfied with the decision to recall him. He is not at all nervous as regards illness, but is keenly sensitive to criticism and would probably have preferred to take the risk and complete the voyage as planned.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

New Tailored Suits—Straw Hats—New Blouses and Trimmings—Dress Materials.

After all the season's rush and the wear and tear that it entails on one's winter best, the dainty freshness of summer hats and fabrics seem particularly enticing. Straw hats and fur coats are so often donned, together in March that they excite no comment for the temptation is irresistable, once the hat is home, to wear it to a tea or matinee even though the chilliness of the air makes fur the only comfortable wrap.

SMART SIMPLICITY.

The simple smart looking hat, that depends for its effect on the shape, straw and color more than on any trimming, and the various floral toques and small hats are the first to be worn on the street, since these types go best with tailor mades and the between season clothes that have their inning at this time of year if ever. The vivid colors of the millinery displays would show that the coming fashions are to be brightly tinted and marked by sharp color contrasts in trimmings and accessories. Many of the black and white combinations would be quite ordinary in effect were it not for the dash of "Royal Blue," "Pat Green" "Helen Pink," or "Aubergine" the new mahogany red that is having such a run in Paris just now. Hats made up in tones of one color with perhaps a black bow or quill to give chic, or those that combine several soft reds with brown, or the last tint with gray and peacock blue or deep purple hat that is very taking with the new hairline stripe tailor suits, are all distinctive types of present modes. To have the color of the hat or its trimmings repeated in the accessories of the costume is still a favorite fad with Knickerbocker girls. Leather bags and pocket books, belts and hosiery worn with the low shoe that is donned at the first opportunity where it is not worn through the winter, all carry out the contrasting or matching color scheme.

NEW DRESS MATERIALS.

The counters of all the smart shops are irresistibly attractive with their fascinating display of new materials and among the daintiest and most practical for present modes are the lovely shamrock poplins that rival silk in their lustrous surface but have unusual wear resisting and draping qualities owing to their wool filling, which makes them very pliable and prevents them from being injured by dampness or mussing as so many other delicate fabrics have a way of doing.

THE NEW COTTONS.

Among the new cottons marquisette is easily first favorite both for waists and dresses. The cotton crepe s are also leaders. Heavy embroideries done in mercerized cotton, and beaded patterns in jet and various colored beads are used extensively for these. A beaded cotton would have seemed absurd a few seasons back, but now beads are sewed as indiscriminately on wash fabrics as on silk or chiffon. The fact that handsome cotton dresses and waists go to the cleaner instead of the laundress makes this trimming possible. Lace motifs are fetchingly introduced among the embroideries, and the white lingerie scarfs, that have come into play this winter promise to be increasingly worn with the new light dresses. Clumps of heavy French knots that imitate beads are a feature of the new trimmings for waists and dresses.

STRIPES MODISH.

Stripes are high style in all materials, and the latest hosiery for wear with low ties and pumps show a great variety of striped effects in contrasting colors.

Lucy Carter.

The above designs are by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

Two very late models. Dress on left of bordered shamrock silk poplin in the new "Helen Pink" shade. Surplice edged with narrow lace frill. Gold lace chemisette, draped belt of satin with Dahlia rosette. Dress on right brocaded and plain Satin de La Reine in stone green. The plain satin in darker tone. Filet lace yoke and cuff. Bandings of plain satin to match brocade, silver buttons.

For Men Ayer's Hair Vigor is for men, too. It is a splendid hair-dressing. It is refreshing, cooling; and it keeps the scalp clean and healthy. It never changes the color of the hair, not in the least. Ask your doctor.

Prominent Boston Politician Has Long Been Sought

LINEHAN IS UNDER ARREST

Charges of Larceny, Conspiracy and Forgery Against Former State Senator and Alderman In Connection With Lumber Frauds Against City of Boston—Police Hope For Conviction Because of One Man's Confession

Boston, March 8.—Frank J. Linehan, former state senator and member of the old board of aldermen, for whom the police have been looking for ten days, surrendered himself at police headquarters yesterday afternoon.

Linehan was indicted by the December grand jury on a charge of larceny and conspiracy in connection with alleged lumber frauds in connection with the city. He was indicted in ten counts, including larceny, conspiracy and forgery.

The former senator rode up to police headquarters in an automobile, alone with the exception of the chauffeur. Linehan was at once booked by Inspector Pinkerton. He said he was 40 years old and was a conductor by occupation. After the formality of booking, Linehan, accompanied by Inspector Wolf, crossed the street to the superior court.

Linehan was arraigned before Justice Jenney and pleaded not guilty. He was placed under $5000 bonds and in default was sent to jail, where he spent the night.

It is asserted that Linehan had been dodging arrest for more than a week, arranging for bondsmen before he went to police headquarters.

Linehan has been prominent in politics for a long time. He lives in Dorchester and has carried on a contracting business, having obtained many jobs from the city. He had a stormy ordeal with the original financial commission which investigated some of his contracts. He was defiant and so belligerent at times while on the witness stand that a policeman was ordered to stand near him lest he might attempt to assault some of his questioners.

The alleged plan of conspiracy may cause an investigation about city hall to determine who was in league with the men who ordered lumber from certain lumber dealers about the city of Boston. The lumber would be received at a designated place and be receipted for. The man who ordered the lumber—usually over the telephone—would request that the bill be sent to the public grounds department or to the sewer department, it is stated. Then the lumber would be carted away and placed on flat cars and shipped out of the city.

The mysterious part of the scheme is how the men who engineered the game ever expected the bills to be passed at city hall without being detected as a swindle. Captain Dugan stated that no one at city hall was suspected of being implicated in any way with the deal.

John L. Sullivan, a foreman for a contracting company in South Boston, was arrested a week ago in connection with the conspiracy. He was held in $1500, but it is claimed he has told all he knows of the game and stated that he had no criminal intentions whatever in the deal. His attorney caused Sullivan to return from Chicago when he knew he was wanted. It is by the story of Sulivan, and certain witnesses, that the police hope to obtain a conviction.

PRENATAL INFLUENCE

Responsible For Man Being Stricken Blind While Looking at Corpse

St. Louis, March 8.—Oliver Nichaus has been blind for four days. His eyes became sightless as he stood beside the coffin of Mrs. Margaret Murphy, whom he had never known, and to whose funeral he was induced to go despite his inherited aversion to looking upon the dead.

Twenty years ago his mother collapsed in the presence of death and was unconscious for thirty-six hours. When the tragic truth burst upon him Nichaus sank into a chair and sobbed: "I'm blind! I should not have come here." Physicians believe his blindness is due to prenatal influence.

Women Among Stock Victims

New York, March 8.—George H. Munroe, charged with misuse of the mails in selling wireless stock, which the government contends he failed to deliver, was placed on trial in the United States circuit court here. Several witnesses, including many women, testified to sending money for stock in answer to circulars promising rich dividends.

ADMIRAL FREMONT DEAD

Commandant at Charlestown Navy Yard Stricken With Apoplexy

Boston, March 8.—Rear Admiral John C. Fremont, commandant at the Charlestown navy yard, the son of General John C. Fremont, popularly referred to as the "Pathfinder," died suddenly last night in his home at the navy yard, stricken with apoplexy.

The admiral, although about the yard all day, felt ill toward dark and was unable to attend a dinner to which he and Mrs. Fremont had been invited. Mrs. Fremont went alone, leaving the admiral with her daughters, who were with him when he was stricken.

Admiral Fremont was born in California sixty-two years ago. Twenty-five years ago he married Miss Anderson of Tennessee. Three children were born to them, Lieutenant John C. Fremont, U. S. N., and two daughters.

THE ARYAN SAFE IN PORT

American Ship 207 Days Out Had Been Given Up For Lost

San Diego, Cal., March 8.—Two hundred and seven days out from Philadelphia, the American ship Aryan, which had been given up for lost, has arrived here. Members of the crew told of unusual suffering.

The Aryan spoke but one vessel on her voyage around the Horn. Forty days after clearing a steam vessel was sighted, but since then nothing had been heard from the ship, and two months ago all hope for her safety was abandoned.

Despite the hardships which they suffered, the crew of twenty-two men and officers reached port in good physical condition, with the exception of Captain Kimmette, who is blind. What caused the blindness is not known. The Aryan bought 3000 tons of coal.

ARRESTED IN TIME TO SAVE KING'S LIFE

Anarchist Was Chosen by Lot to Assassinate Alfonso

Madrid, March 8.—An attempt to assassinate King Alfonso was narrowly frustrated at Alcazar de San Juan. Anarchistic plotters had made all plans to kill Alfonso when he arrived at that point on the royal train proceeding to the south of Spain.

Only a few hours before the train was due at Alcazar de San Juan the authorities learned of the conspiracy and arrested the would-be assassin just as he was leaving his home to go to the railroad station.

He had been chosen by lot to attempt the life of the king. The train arrived fifteen minutes after the anarchist was arrested.

The prisoner was brought to Madrid and through him the authorities expect to ascertain the names of the leaders in the wide-spread revolutionary conspiracy. The prisoner attempted to commit suicide in his cell. A quantity of poison was taken away from him.

TO FIGHT WHITE PLAGUE

Nearly Two Thousand More Beds Needed In Bay State

Boston, March 8.—The question of providing a subsidy to be paid by the state to cities and towns to encourage the construction of tuberculosis hospitals resulted in bringing out at a legislative hearing the fact that there are over 40,000 persons afflicted with the dread disease in the state today who are not protected from spreading the plague to others.

Fully 1750 additional beds are immediately necessary for the advanced cases, and if the subsidy is granted it will require an expenditure of at least $350,000 in excess of that already provided by law.

DEADLOCK IS STILL ON

But Dix Predicts Early Settlement of New York Senatorial Fight

Albany, March 8.—That further negotiations are in progress between Governor Dix and Charles F. Murphy looking to a settlement of the senatorial deadlock was indicated when it was learned that John A. Mason, secretary to the governor, left hurriedly for New York, presumably to see the Tamany leader.

Despite the fact that there were no desertions from the Sheehan ranks at yesterday's joint ballot, the governor last night expressed renewed confidence of an early settlement of the deadlock.

AUSTRIAN SPIES ARRESTED

Excitement Over Action of Italian Military Authorities

Rome, March 8.—Two Austrian spies have been arrested upon the Austro-Hungarian-Italian frontier and are being held by the military authorities pending trial, according to telegraphic advices received here from Bari.

Owing to the strained relations between Austria and Italy the arrest of the spies has created much excitement.

HOW MANY TIMES
DOES YOUR WIFE
HAVE TO DARN

one pair of socks of the kind you are now wearing? Do YOU know? SHE does! You can do away with darning now by using the new hosiery for men, which will wear much longer than any you have ever used before. The marvelous wearing strength is due to the new with which every pair is equipped.

If you haven't tried them yet you get a pair and test them. You will be very much surprised to find a fine lisle sock that will really wear better than any you have worn, even those which are heavy in weight.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Tongue Salad. Cut cold boiled tongue in thin slices and arrange on a platter. Make a dressing of a small onion, six anchovies and six springs of parsley all chopped fine. Add half a cup of French dressing and when mixed pour it over the tongue.

Light Cake. One often likes a simple light cake. The following is very good: Mix one-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, three-fourths of a cup of milk, two eggs, one teaspoonful of baking powder and one and three-fourths cups of flour. Flavor with vanilla. This recipe is very nice for Washington pies.

Mutton En Casserole. Take any bits of left over mutton and cut into inch cubes. To one cup add one cup of potatoes cut into cubes. Season with one level teaspoonful of salt, a generous shake of celery salt and paprika. Melt two rounded tablespoonfuls of drippings—saved from the mutton fat—in the bottom of the casserole. Blend with one rounded tablespoonful of flour. Add one cup of stock and one-half cup of strained tomato and stir until smooth. Add the meat and potatoes and cook in a slow oven about two hours. About one-half hour before serving add one-half cup of cold boiled rice.

Cream of Celery. Use all the green ends and tough stalks and the clean part of the roots. Cover them with water and let them cook until tender. Press the pulp through a strainer, saving the water also, which should be reduced to about one pint. Make one pint of thick white sauce with two rounding tablespoons of flour stirred into two tablespoons of hot butter, and then reduce with one pint of hot milk. When thick and smooth add the celery pulp and water. Season with salt and paprika, and serve with toasted wafers spread with cheese.—Mary J. Lincoln.

Raisin Icing. Bake a white cake and prepare this filling to spread between the layers. Boil two and one-half cupfuls of granulated sugar and one cupful of water until they spin a thread or soft ball when a spoonful is tried in cold water. Chop a cupful of seededraisins. Beat the whites of two eggs stiff, then gradually add the cooked sugar, beating it until white and almost cold. Then add the chopped raisins and stir well. It is then ready to spread between the layers.

DEFIED THE GOVERNMENT

Bishop of Oporto to Be Dismissed by Portuguese Authorities

Lisbon, March 8.—The government has decided to dismiss the bishop of Oporto on the grounds that he urged the priests of his diocese to read the forbidden pastoral letter and also encouraged the people to revolt. Several priests have been arrested for reading the letter to their congregations.

The communication, while setting forth that it is the duty of Catholics to respect the constituted authorities, even though they be hostile to Catholicism, adds that if a new law is unjust and contrary to the law of God, it is not binding upon Catholics.

Railroads Yield to Commerce Commission Concerning Freight Rates

New York, March 8.—There will be no appeal from the decision of the interstate commerce commission denying the railroads the right to increase their rates.

The eastern railroads yielded and at a meeting here decided to cancel the proposed advance on or before the 15th of March. The western railroads had already submitted.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

It was precisely at this point, as Blount remembered afterward, that the forestry subject was dropped. Later on, after the talk had drifted back to mining and from mining into politics, the hawk faced man announced his intention of going back to his section in the body of the car to take a nap.

A little further along toward evening the great range which had been visible for hours in the west began to define itself in peaks and high, bald shoulderings of wind swept mesas, and Blount was glad to find some stirrings of the homecoming wanderer's quickened pulse answering to the nearer view of the mountains.

At the dining car dinner, which was served while the high peaks of the main range were still reflecting the crimson and gold of the sunset, Blount missed his luncheon companion.

Now that he recalled it he remembered that he had seen nothing of the hawk faced man since the early afternoon. But the absence of companionship was a relief rather than a deprivation.

Almost without knowing it he found himself hastening through his dinner so that he might return to the Pullman window. When at length he had the longed for sight of a bunch of cattle, with the solitary night herd hanging by one leg in the saddle to watch the passing train, the call of the west was once more trumpeting in his ears.

At a small timber shipping station well within the mountains where the logs were shot down to the mills in a trough-like water chute from the wooded heights twenty miles distant there was a longer stop than usual, and Blount got off to make inquiries.

There was a freight wreck at some point a few miles farther west, and the train would probably be delayed for several hours.

By this time Blount was on well remembered ground. Forty miles away in a direction somewhat east of north lay the Blount home domain, where he had spent his happy boyhood. An hour's gallop to the westward the level rays of the setting sun would be playing upon the little station of Painted Hat, which had been the shipping point for the home ranch. And halfway between Painted Hat and the Circle Bar lay the horse corrals of one Debblieby, a hermit of the mountains and the boy Evan's earliest schoolmaster in the great book of nature.

Since Blount could not go on by train, what was to prevent the taking of an immediate and delightful plunge into the land of heart stirring recollections?

Arranging with the Pullman conductor to have his hand baggage left in Gantry's office at the capital, Blount crossed quickly to a livery stable opposite the station, bargained for a saddle horse, borrowed a poncho and a pair of leggings and presently, with the squeak of the saddle leather making sweet music in his ears, had broken violently, for the moment at least, with all the civilized traditions.

He would go to see Debblieby; drop in upon the old ranchman without warning and thus get his first taste of the homeland unmixed with any of the disappointing changes which were doubtless awaiting him at the real journey's end.

Now, it chanced that the livery stable was an adjunct to the single hotel in the small sawmill town, and as Blount swung up into the saddle he was a little surprised to see his companion of the Pullman smoking compartment standing on the porch of the hotel in earnest talk with three others who from their appearance might have figured either as "timber jacks" or cowboys.

Blount was on the point of speaking when he rode past the porch on his way to the northward trail pointed out by the liveryman, but a curious feeling restrained him.

He was almost sure that the prosperous looking gentleman with the bird of prey eyes was making him the subject of his earnest talk with the three men of doubtful occupation.

Quite naturally this impression deepened into a conviction when he looked back from the road crossing of the railroad track and saw that all four of the men on the porch were watching him.

After leaving the railroad Blount found himself crossing the broad mesa, with the eastern mountains near at hand, and the Lost river range struck out sharply in its sky line against the sunset horizon.

On this mesa the trail disappeared entirely, but so long as he was sure of the general direction Blount let it go and gave the tireless little broncho a loose rein. Debblieby's ranch lay among the foothills of the distant western range, and he was quite sure that he could ride straight to it in the dark if need be.

It was some little time after he had left the shoulderings of the eastern range behind that a curious thing happened.

Far away to the right he heard the sound of galloping hoofs. Though the moon was nearly at its full and the treeless landscape was bare of any kind of cover, he could not see the horseman who was evidently passing him and going in the same direction.

At first he thought it was some one who was making a detour to avoid him. Then he smiled at the absurdity of the thought and concluded that he himself was off the trail.

This conclusion was confirmed a little later when two other travelers, announcing themselves to the ear as the first one had done and also, like the first, invisible to the sharpest eye sweep of the brown plain, passed him at speed.

After that he had the solitudes and immensities to himself, and it was not until the broad mesa had been crossed and the broncho was picking its way among the hogback hills of the western range that the boyish thing he had been led to do took shape as a venture which might have discomforting consequences, for after the broncho had wandered through many canyons and had climbed a good half score of the hogback hills the young man from the east reluctantly admitted that the boyhood memories were altogether at fault in the deceptive moonlight. He was very thoroughly and painstakingly lost.

CHAPTER IV.

THE HIGHBINDERS.

WHEN the three men who had pulled him from his horse and bound him had withdrawn to the farther side of the campfire to wrangle morosely over what should be done with him, Blount found it difficult to realize that they were actually discussing, as one of the expedients, the propriety of knocking him on the head and flinging his body into the canyon.

The difficulty lay in the crude incredibility of things. Five minutes earlier he had been riding peacefully up the trail, wondering how badly he was lost and how much farther it was to Debblieby's. Then, at a sudden turn in the canyon bridle path, he had come upon a campfire and had found himself looking into the muzzle of a leveled Winchester.

From that to the unhorsing and the binding was but a rough and tumble half minute, since he was unarmed and the surprise had been complete, but the incredibilities remained.

That some ridiculous mistake had been made seemed to be the only possible explanation. But when he remembered the three invisible horsemen who had passed him on the broad mesa he was not so sure about the mistake.

Most naturally his thoughts went back to the little episode on the hotel porch. The passing glance he had given to the three men with whom his smoking room companion had been talking did not enable him to identify them with the three who were calmly discussing his fate at the nearby fire, but the conclusion was fairly obvious none the less.

Thus far he had been either too busy or too bewildered to think of asking questions, but when the more murderous of the expedients seemed actually about to prevail he thought it was time to try to find out why he was to be effaced.

"I don't want to seem to interfere with any arrangements you gentlemen are making," he called across to the group at the fire, "but if you will kindly tell me why you think it necessary to murder me I should be immensely obliged."

"You know mighty good and well why there's one too many of you on Lost river jest at this stage o' the game," said the hard faced brigand who had held the Winchester while his two accomplices had unhorsed and bound the victim.

"But I don't," insisted Blount good naturedly. "So far as I know, there is only one of me—on Lost river or anywhere else."

"That'll do for you. It ain't your put in, nohow," was the gruff decision of the court.

But Blount was too good a lawyer to be silenced that easily.

"Perhaps you might not especially regret killing the wrong man, but in the present case I am very sure I should. Who do you think I am?"

"The boss knows who you are, and that's enough for us," said the spokesman of the three highbinders.

"The boss?" questioned Blount.

"Yaas; I said the boss. Now hold your jaw!"

TAFT ACCEPTS RESIGNATION

IS DEFENDED BY PRESIDENT

Executive Declares His Confidence In Secretary of Interior During Long Siege and Pays Respects to Those Who Attacked His Character—Walter Fisher, the New Secretary, a Supporter of Pinchot Ideas

Washington, March 8.—Richard A. Ballinger's resignation as secretary of the interior has been accepted by President Taft, and Walter L. Fisher of Chicago has been appointed as his successor, his commission being signed immediately by the president. Fisher will take office in a few days.

Secretary Ballinger tendered his resignation in a letter on Jan. 19, basing it upon the condition of his health. The president replied at once, expressing his confidence in Ballinger, his reluctance to accept his resignation, and requesting the secretary to remain in office until the close of the session of congress. Immediately upon the adjournment of congress Ballinger renewed his request that he be relieved at a date suiting the president's convenince. Yesterday President Taft in a letter formally accepted the resignation.

The correspondence between the president and the secretary is not voluminous, but displays the confidence which the president has reposed in Ballinger throughout the long siege and the indignation with which he has viewed the attack upon the secretary's personal and official integrity.

"I have had the fullest opportunity," the president says in his letter accepting the resignation, "to know you, to know your standards of service to the government and the public, and to know your motives, to know how you have administered your office and to know the motives of those who have assailed you. I do not hesitate to say that you have been the object of one of the most unscrupulous conspiracies for the defamation of character that history can show."

And in the conclusion of his letter the president declares that "every fibre of my nature rebels against such hypocrisy (referring to the attack upon Ballinger's character), and nerves me to fight such a combination and such methods to the bitter end, lest success in this instance may form a demoralizing precedent. But personal consideration for you and yours makes me feel that I have no right to ask you for a further sacrifice."

The president goes on to declare it evident that he has been himself the ultimate object of the attack and says that to insist upon Ballinger's remaining in office "with the prospects of further efforts against you, is selfishly to impose on you more of a burden than I ought to impose."

Mr. Fisher, the new secretary, is a well-known lawyer of the west and became famous in Chicago through his advocacy of municipal reform. It is expected that he will reverse some of the Ballinger policies, for he is vice president of the National Conservation association and a close friend of Gifford Pinchot, whose ideas he has strongly supported.

Mr. Fisher, at the beginning of President Taft's term, was considered in connection with a cabinet place, and since then has been suggested for a vacancy on the United States supreme court bench. He was the first president of the Conservation association and one of its organizers. His information on such public questions as reclamation, irrigation and water power sites is broad and comprehensive.

MONEY IN CORNCOB PIPES

Missouri Industry, Though In Its Infancy, Is Yielding Great Profits

Jefferson City, Mo., March 8.—Corncob pipes continue to bring fame to Missouri and money to the five towns which make a specialty of manufacturing and shipping them to the consuming centers.

This unique industry, the converting of rough and practically worthless corncobs into a commodity which is in great demand the world over, while still in its infancy, netted seven factories $459,448 in the year 1910.

These are the advance figures made public by Labor Commissioner Hiller. In cob pipes alone the production of 1910 amounted to 26,455,584.

One Cause of Wife Desertion

Lynn, Mass., March 8.—The high cost of living is the cause for an increase of wife desertion in this city, according to the report of the overseers of the poor.

Drowned While Fox Hunting

Ellsworth, Me., March 8.—H. M. Thayer, a business man at Stonington, broke through the ice and was drowned while fox hunting at South Surry.

Death of Admiral Trilley

San Francisco, March 8.—Rear Admiral Joseph Trilley, retired, died here. He was 73 years old.

BUYS THREE ROADS

Boston and Maine Will Extend to the Granite Quarry Field

Boston, March 8.—A further change in the railroad map of Vermont, by which the Boston and Maine system will be enabled to reach Montpelier and Barre, important granite manufacturing centers, over its own lines, was announced at the head offices in this city last night.

Persons acting in the interests of the Vermont Valley Railroad company, a Vermont corporation controlled by the Boston and Maine system, have purchased the interests held by the Sortwell estate in the Montpelier and Wells River railroad, the Barre railroad and the Barre railway.

As soon as the legal preliminaries can be arranged the properties will be merged into and become a part of the Boston and Maine system, and thereafter be operated as part of the larger company.

PRUDENTIAL MUST SETTLE

City of Newark Entitled to About $1,200,000 as Three Years' Tax

Trenton, March 8.—The court of errors and appeals decided in favor of the city of Newark and against the Prudential Insurance company, on a question of taxation involving about $20,000,000 of ratables. The ratables represent money set aside by the company to pay preferred dividends on policies issued under the tontine plan.

The company argued that this money represented an indebtedness that should be deducted from its total assets. The court, however, held that this was not such an indebtedness within the meaning of the tax law.

The result is the city of Newark will collect about $400,000 a year in taxes from the company for each of the past three years.

MONTPELIER TURNS OVER TO LICENSE

Results of Elections In Other Cities In Vermont

Montpelier, Vt., March 8.—Contests on the license question were the chief features of the annual elections in Vermont cities, but Montpelier was the only one to make a change from last year. Montpelier swung over into the license column.

In Barre the first count gave a majority of one vote for no-license and a recount was held, which made the vote a tie. The ballots will be recounted again in the hope of breaking the deadlock. Last year the city went no-license.

Robert Roberts, who served two terms as mayor of Burlington some years ago, went into office again over the present incumbent, J. E. Burke. The license majority in Burlington was considerably increased.

In Rutland G. B. Underhill was again defeated for mayor, his successful opponent this time being P. W. Clement, the Citizens' candidate. The license majority was the largest in the history of the city.

St. Albans continues in the license column by an increased majority and S. V. Green, Republican, was elected mayor.

AGED WOMEN PERISH

Two Spinsters Cremated When Their Home Is Destroyed by Fire

Lewiston, Me., March 8.—Trapped in their own home by a fire which had gained great headway before they were awakened, Salome Townsend, 71, and her niece, Eleanor A. Townsend, 67, who lived together at East Sumner, were burned to death.

When the fire was discovered by neighbors the entire building was enveloped in flames and they could do nothing but stand by and watch it burn. Later a search of the ruins was made and the charred bodies of the spinsters were found. There was evidence that they had both tried desperately to escape.

INVESTIGATION IS ASKED

Relatives of English Girls and Women See Peril In Mormonism

London, March 8.—The charges that hundreds of young English girls are being sent to the Mormon colonies in Utah and other parts of the United States by agents of that church in various cities of this country were brought up in the shape of questions in the house of commons.

Numerous anti-Mormon meetings have been held throughout the country of late, and relatives of girls and women who have been enticed to Utah have been flooding Home Secretary Churchill with petitions asking for an investigation.

Ipswich Celebrates "Dry" Victory

Ipswich, Mass., March 8.—Church bells rang, bonfires glowed and a procession headed by a band marked the celebration in this town last night of the defeat of license by a vote of yes 407, and no 426. License has prevailed for the past two years.

WILL STUDY COLORED MAN

Galahad Brotherhood Have a Large Attendance

Much interest was displayed Tuesday evening when the Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church at its regular meeting discussed the plan of changing from the study on "The uplift of China" to work assigned them by the world in Boston exposition, namely "Day break on a dark continent."

This changing from the Yellowman of Asia to the colored man of Africa at their Sunday meetings was done after considerable argument had been expounded and that the study should only be taken up for the period of a month or five weeks, so that they would be able to resume and complete the study of China before the close of the Sunday sessions terminating in June. This World in Boston study will be open to all men at 12.05 A. M. in the choir room every Sunday.

Another striking feature of the evening, causing a great deal of enthusiasm was a small "sacrifice bank" that was placed upon the secretary table plainly numbered 286. This insignificant piece of workmanship lay unregarded by some and at intervals handled by others revolving many a curious thought within the minds of the inquisitive, but its mystery was not revealed until the end of the evening, when each member was seated around the round table, being amply supplied with refreshments by the ever able committee for such arrangements. It was then announced by a dignified brother that the small bank would hold so much money and that when it was full it would be turned over to the church for the purpose of redecorating its interior, so that we should go on record as having the most exquisite church in Quincy. Inside fifteen minutes 286 contained as much money as it could hold, and on behalf of the Brotherhood it was turned over to the rector.

The meeting will go on record as one of the best if not the best of the organization. There being a large attendance, business rapidly transacted, closing with a social spirit and looking forward to the next one.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

out the county. Contribution is also made toward the running expenses of Gordon Rest in Hanson, Mass., the state Kings Daughters home.

Special mention was made of the valuable services of the three women who founded the two original circles of Mr. H. H. Faxon who was of great assistance to the Circle during the latter part of his life and of Miss Amelia Bumpus who has been one of the most faithful and most beloved workers in the circle ever since its foundation.

The present Circle is one of the largest, if not the largest in the state and the scope of its work is of splendid breadth. The beauty of the Kings Daughters circle is due to the motive expressed in the motto as well as to the fact that it is non-sectarian and is interested in all kinds of good work. All the local charities receive very material assistance from this corps of busy women who are devoting so much time to the welfare of those in physical and spiritual need.

NOTICE

This is to give notice that Joseph W. Fruth had no authority to issue the notice which he did in the Daily Ledger of March 3, 1911. He has not for several weeks contributed anything to my support.

GOLF CLUB PROFESSIONAL

M. J. Brady Accepts Position with Wollaston Club

M. J. Brady of Brighton has been appointed professional to the Wollaston golf club to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Willie Maguire, who has a three-year position in Texas. The move of the committee of the club at Montclair in securing Brady for the place is appreciated by the members, says the Globe, for he is one of the native-born professionals who have done excellently at the game.

Brady's first engagement was with the Commonwealth C. C. of Chestnut Hill, where he was instructor for a couple of years. Last season he was attached to the Hyannisport club. He accepts the position at Wollaston with the good wishes of a great number of golfers, for he has gained respect and popularity wherever he has played.

Brady is the third home-bred professional that the Wollaston G. C. has employed, the others being Tom L. McNamara and Willie Maguire. Other professionals who have had positions with the club are Willie Chisholm, David Brown and R. G. McAndrew.

Brady will assume charge the latter part of the month. His opportunity at Wollaston will be greater than any he has had in the past, and he has it in him to take his place with the leading professionals in the country both as a player and as a factor in club success.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The Quincy Adams Extension club of the Y. M. C. A. met Tuesday evening in the First Presbyterian. Owing to the rapid growth of the club it was necessary to divide it in two parts. The new officers of the "Older Boys" are:

President—Thomas Veale; vice president—Carl Carlson; treasurer—William Michael; Secretary — Everett Clark; Inner Guard—Russell Kenn; Outer Guard—Joseph Spargo.

Officers of the "Younger Boys": President—Louis Marini; vice president—William Falconer; treasurer—William Cumming; secretary—Albert Imary. The usual bible stud y was pursued after the election of officers.

The Wollaston club will meet in the Baptist church Thursday evening. Spring plans will be discussed.

The Intermediates will have a baseball team in the spring,and will accept challenges from teams of boys 14 to 17 years old. Charles Holmes is the manager of the team.

The Quincy Adams Extension club will also have a baseball team and would like to arrange games with teams of boys ranging from 15 to 18 years.

Three games have been arranged: April 19—Medford Reserves at Medford; May 30—Worcester Employed Boys; July 4—Lowell Employed Boys at Lowell.

The track team will hold a meet with the Malden Y. M. C. A. team at Malden, Friday evening. Quincy expects to make her opponents hustle some to gain the victory. Phelan, Prout, McArdle, McInnes, Floyd, Wilson, Trask, R. Cranshaw, W. Cranshaw, Wilson White, Estey, Dineen and Wood will represent Quincy.

SECRETARY TO RESIGN.

It is understood from a reliable source that Richard D. Chase, secretary and treasurer of the Quincy Cooperative bank, will relinquish active duties with the bank at the end of his present term of office, May 1, although he has not as yet officially resigned. Mr. Chase has been an officer of the bank since its institution 22 years ago, and during all these years has been its secretary and treasurer. Another officer of the bank who has also held office during the same period is George H. Field, the present vice president.

GETTING LINE ON OLYMPIC MEN

Americans Making Early Start For 1912 Games In Sweden.

WILL HOLD MANY TRIAL MEETS

Athletes Who Make Highest Average on Percentage Basis Will Be Selected—Ramsdell, Craig, Davenport and Several Others Sure of Places.

With the holding of the Olympic games of 1912 in Sweden, President Everett C. Brown of the National Amateur Athletic union is already making preparations for the organization of an American team which will perform as admirably as the Yankee aggregations that carried off premier honors in the world's games held at Athens, London and St. Louis. That Brown believes this can be done is shown by the systematic way in which he is going about the organization of the American team.

Although the time for holding the games is over a year away, President

TEX RAMSDELL, WHO IS SURE OF PLACE ON TEAM.

Brown now believes it is expedient to begin getting a line on the best athletes in the country in the different events and also start the raising of a fund to defray the expenses of sending the team abroad.

A short time ago the National Amateur Athletic union gave $1,000 to the fund, and several times this amount already have been pledged by prominent athletic enthusiasts throughout the country. It is understood that President Taft will take steps to have a certain amount advanced from the national treasury, while a similar action is sure to be taken by some of the governors of the different states.

With the expense fund practically assured, it now is up to President Brown and Secretary Sullivan of the national body and the presidents and other officials of the different associations of the union to confer and hold trials to select the strongest men in the country to take part in the various events which make up the Olympic program. In all probability several trials will be held in the different sections, and the athletes who make the highest average on a percentage basis will be selected.

The fact must be admitted that America's athletes must be superior to those representing other countries, and our representatives will have to win by comfortable margins to be awarded the verdicts. Another thing which must be watched is the team work, which is liable to be used on the Yankee athletes in the different events, especially the track contests.

It is almost certain that these athletes will be selected to compete in Sweden: Sullivan selected F. L. (Tex) Ramsdell of the University of Pennsylvania for the 100 yard dash. R. C. Craig of the University of Michigan was chosen for the 220 yard dash.

Ira Davenport of the University of Chicago, who is looked upon as America's premier quarter miler, was chosen for this event. G. H. Whitely of Princeton was honored with the half mile, and A. F. Baker of Oberlin was awarded the one mile. W. A. Edwards of the University of California was selected for the high barriers and C. P. Gardner of Harvard for the low hurdles. T. P. Jones of Cornell was given the cross country run.

In the field events J. Wasson of Notre Dame was chosen for the broad jump, and K. W. Burdick of the University of Pennsylvania was awarded the high jump. J. Horner, Jr., of the University of Michigan was given the shot put and Lee Talbot of Pennsylvania State the hammer throw. L. S. Scott of Leland Stanford was honored with the pole vault.

ALL BECAUSE OF A FLY.

The patrol auto made a useless trip to the Quincy depot in record time Tuesday noon. It seems that there is a pre-arranged signal between the ticket agent and Officer Murray, that when the latter holds up his finger the agent shall telephone for the patrol. Tuesday noon while at the depot an early fly or something of that sort lit on Jim's nose and he put up his finger to brush it off. The agent saw the finger go up, and thinking it the signal promptly telephoned police headquarters, and down came the auto. Its arrival was the occasion for some surprise, and it needed some explanation to straighten matters out. Jim says the next time a fly lights on his nose he will turn his back to the station agent, or go around the corner out of sight before he brushes him off.

Wealthy Man Says That He Is a Robber

JOSEPH FELS is worth a big pile of money. Conservative estimates place his fortune at $8,000,000, and he says that he is a robber. He expresses sorrow that he is a robber, although tolerably content over being a millionaire. But he is striving to change conditions so that it will not be possible for other men to become multimillionaires.

Mr. Fels lives in Philadelphia, and he accumulated his fortune there. He does not think he is unique in being a millionaire and a robber. He says all millionaires are robbers, made such by the present political conditions.

"I haven't so much fault to find with the way Rockefeller and Carnegie are giving away their money as I have with the system that permitted them to get it," he says.

"Swollen fortunes for the few and prohibitive prices for the many are the direct result of special privileges.

"I am for single tax and low tariff. The tariff is about as insidious a crime against the prosperity of a common people as could be conceived by a fathead government which allows itself to be controlled by 'big business.'

"A box of forty matches is sold in an average grocery store in America for 1 cent. Six boxes of forty matches in a box are sold on the streets of London for a penny.

"Eggs in England cost 28 cents a dozen. The day I landed in New York eggs were 45 cents a dozen there. They were cold storage eggs too.

"Cost of living! Why, look at this suit of clothes. What do you suppose I paid for it in London? Just $20. To duplicate it here it would cost me $35, and I do not consider that the average wages of the common people in America are much if any higher than in Great Britain, cost of living considered."

Mr. Fels has recently made a tour as far west as the Pacific coast, making speeches in favor of Henry George's single tax theory. He says he is spending $100,000 a year in the effort to make such fortunes as he possesses impossible.

Quincy Built Cruiser Prominent in War News of Day

U. S. CRUISER DES MOINES

Quincy built warships are prominent in the war news of the day. A Pensacola dispatch of March 8 says: Under cover of darkness tonight, the scout cruisers Salem and Chester unexpectedly left for Galveston. The Salem was built at Quincy.

At the Charlestown Navy Yard says the Herald all yesterday and last night stores were being rushed aboard the armored cruiser Des Moines, Commander John C. Leonard, U. S. N. which was ordered to prepare for sea service. The crew of 300 men are making a speed record of the task of provisioning and coaling the cruiser, which had previously been placed out of commission.

By tomorrow morning this work will have been finished and after ammunition is taken aboard at either New York or Philadelphia the cruiser will be fully prepared for any emergency.

It is surmised that the cruiser will be directed to sail for Guantanama after the funeral of Rear Admiral Fremont tomorrow afternoon .

APRON AND CANDY SALE

Preceded by an Excellent Supper at Unitarian Chapel

The annual apron and candy sale of the Fragment society of the First church was held Wednesday afternoon and evening. The apron and candy sale opened at 4 o'clock. There was a good display of aprons at astonishingly low prices andquantities of toothsome home-made confections, all of which met with a ready sale.

At 6.30 Rev. Ellery C. Butler rapped for order and said he presumed all would be sorry to hear that supper was ready to be served. The people were evidently not sorry for they lost no time in getting to the dining room where the large tables were spread. The menu consisted of salads of various kinds, cold meats, rolls, coffee and pie, all of the home-made kind.

After supper many of those present gathered in the chapel for a social hour, and incidently to patronize the sales tables.

The ladies in charge were:

Apron table—Miss Mary Holden, Miss Lucy Spear, Miss Belle Nightingale.

Candy table—Mrs. Fred E. Drake, Mrs. Mark L. Read, Jr., Mrs. George P. Mead and Mrs. Herbert M. Parker.

Supper Committee—Mrs. E. Granville Pratt, Mrs. Horace G. Crocker, Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell, Mrs. George T. Magee, Mrs. Osborne Rogers, Mrs. Laura F. Tirrell, Mrs. Nathaniel S. Hunting, Mrs. Edward B. Marsh, Mrs. John Christensen, Mrs. Charles Bickford, Mrs. George Keys, Mrs. George F. Pfaffmann and Mrs. Abigail Waldron.

PLAIN
PIANO TALK

Why don't you settle that much-mooted question in your family by buying a piano NOW?

Talking about it won't put it into your home—will not stop the importunities of the young folk.

Let's guess why you are waiting. You want a piano: you feel the need of one; but you can't spare the money to pay cash just now, and you think you can save money by waiting until you can spare it. And you wait and wait.

You are wrong. No man can buy a piano in our store for less money by paying cash down than the man who takes advantage of our Divided Payment Plan, with interest at 6 per cent a year.

We wish to sell every piano on our floor, and we will help you buy it. If you want to borrow the money to pay for it, we will lend it to you at 6 per cent a year on the unpaid balance.

Suppose you tried to save money to pay cash. Could you do it? Would you do it?

Let us talk with you. Come in and see what we have. You can save from 20 to 40 per cent, if you buy this month.

WEST QUINCY SOCIAL.

A very pleasant time was spent at the Hall Place M. E. church, Wednesday evening, at the entertainment given under the auspices of the Epworth League. The program was in charge of the pastor, Rev. Carl H. Raupach, and consisted of mandolin selections by Mr. Cassidy of Wollaston; solos by Miss Jessie Pugsley, the sweet singer of South Wales, accompanied by Miss Ada Williams of West Quincy; solos by Mrs. Kimball of Boston; and readings by Mrs. E. A. Palmer of Boston. During the intermission ice cream was served by Miss Hilda Francis, assisted by Miss May Williams and Mrs. F. W. Bent.

BRIEFS

A. J. Fox is to break ground next week for a house on John street, Montclair.

Mrs. George Burr of Billings street went to the Framingham hospital on Wednesday, where she will undergo an operation.

Mary and Peter Dillon of Montclair are ill with the scarlet fever. The girl who is in a very critical condition was removed to the Brighton hospital on Wednesday. It is thought that she also has diphtheria.

The Ladies' Aid of the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church met with Mrs. Cheney, 67 Atlantic street on Wednesday. Plans were made for a very busy spring. Refreshments of cake, tea and candy were served.

Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook's chorus from the Weston School for Girls assisted by Miss Eldeine Young and Miss Agnes Nelson of Atlantic gave an entertainment at the Roxbury Neighborhood House on Wednesday evening.

The Rev. Ralph Flewelling of the Harvard Methodist Episcopal church, Cambridge, will occupy the pulpit of the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church on Sunday evening. Holy communion will be observed. Mr. Flewelling is a former pastor of the church.

ICE HOUSES DESTROYED

Three Buildings of J. F. Sheppard & Sons Were Full

The three large icehouses of Joel F. Sheppard & Sons situated on Pond meadow, Braintree were destroyed by fire at 5.30 Wednesday afternoon. The fire was discovered by Albert R. Hobart, who saw smoke rising from near the icehouses and went to investigate. An alarm was sounded but by the time the fire department arrived all three buildings were on fire and the fire was getting dangerously near a small building in which dynamite was stored to be used in blasting stumps during the summer.

A second alarm was immediately sounded which called additional help, but the fire had made too great a headway, and the three building were destroyed.

Each of the buildings were 50 by 100 feet and were filled with ice. Some of this can be used for commercial purposes but is unfit for domestic use. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

Just how the fire started is not known. It is said that some workmen were at the buildings Wednesday packing hay about the ice which leads some to believe that a careless smoker dropped a match which started a fire which smouldered along until it broke into a blaze.

For sometime this winter Messrs. Sheppard were handicapped about getting their ice crop, on account of the lack of water to flood their pond. Eventually, however, they succeeded in filling their houses, and hay was being packed around the ice to preserve it.

Wednesday noon, Eben W. Sheppard of Quincy, in speaking about the ice crop, said his houses were full and that he had some handsome twelve inch ice on the pond he would like to cut, but had no houses to put it in.

GRANITE CITY WHIST.

Eight tables participated in the weekly whist tournament at the rooms of the Granite City club Wednesday evening and after playing 25 hands partook of one of those famous Smith clam chowders. The two high scores were made by Alfred H. Remick and James A. Claflin. The former won 49 and lost 16, giving him 75 per cent, and the latter won 33 and lost 16, giving him 73 per cent.

HELD FOR LIBEL.

The hearing in the case of W. O. Souther, Jr., of Cohasset for libel, occupied the greater part of the day at the district court on Wednesday. At the conclusion the court held him in $200 for the grand jury. The alleged libel was published in the Cohasset Sentinel during the heat of the recent political battle.

LENTEN SERVICE AT WOLLASTON

Rev. Roderick Stebbins Gives a Fine Discourse

The first of the Lenten services at the Wollaston Unitarian church on Wednesday evening was very well attended both by members of the church and by their friends. William E. Weston presided at the organ, and Miss Winnifred White was the soloist.

Rev. Carl G. Horst conducted the devotional service, selecting as his scripture reading a part of the ninth chapter of the book of Acts.

Rev. Roderick Stebbins of the First Parish church in Milton, preached from the text found in the 73d Psalm 28th verse. "It is good for me to draw near to God, differentiating the physical contact with a place or a person, which may mean little or nothing; and that finer and more spiritual sympathy which lifts one into a sense of fellowship and communion with one dear, though an ocean or a continent may make a physical bar. The present generation, claimed the preacher, is in reality nearer to Jesus than were those who walked with Him in those far-away days in Palestine, because His life, seen through the vista of years, has taken its proper relative position with the lives of others of the same time. Our conception of God, too, is much broader and deeper than was possible in those days, and to draw near to Him means more than a dim wish to approach a physical being. Rather do we think of such as a communion of soul with soul, a recognition of the sustaining spirit of God in all the universe. God is to us power, inspiration, courage and His spirit is manifested in all our deepest and most unselfish aspirations for the good of our fellowmen.

As our capacity for self-sacrifice and devotion to other lives increases we are more truly drawing near to God, and every work faithfully done is making for character which shall ever-increasingly grow strong both here and hereafter. God is present in every part of his work, yet in all invisible; constantly recognized in the lives oof His children, yet silent and intangible.

The fine discourse wos followed by congregational singing of "Nearer, my God to Thee."

DEPRESSION OF TRACKS.

A conference was held Tuesday morning, says the Transcript, between President Mellen of the Boston & Maine Railroad and Senator Harvey and seven other residents of Waltham relative to the abolition of grade crossings in that city. The company has practically agreed to eliminate the crossings by building an elevated roadbed for about $1,000,000. A sentiment is developing, however, in favor of depression of the tracks. This was the object of the conference. Engineers engaged by the city had estimated that the depression would cost about $200,000 more than the elevated. President Mellen assured the committee that he will consider the plan, and he asked for a further expression of public opinion in the city relative to the question.

TO LAY CORNER STONE EASTER SUNDAY

Park and Downs Church to Have a Quincy Granite Church Before January 1912

Plans Admirably Adapted to Needs of the Community

Preparations are being made to lay the corner stone of the new church edifice for the Park and Downs Union Congregational church on Easter Sunday. Plans have been completed, and are in the hands of contractors for figures. Bids will be opened in a few days and work will be started immediately upon award of the contract.

The site of the new building is on Rawson road, between Beach and Hamilton streets, and is directly opposite the Massachusetts Fields school. The location is practically the geographical centre of the combined area of Wollaston Park and Norfolk, Downs, the territory from which the church draws its members.

The building which is to be built of Quincy granite, will be of the Spanish mission and Gothic type with windows of leaded glass. The plans were drawn by architect James H. Ritchie of 8 Beacon street, Boston.

The exterior measurements of the building are 85 feet in length, 55 feet wide with an approximate height of 65 feet. The main entrance will be on Rawson road, with side entrances on Hamilton street and the Beach street side. A belfry will form an important part of the church exterior, and will also be of Spanish mission type. The roofing will be of slate.

The main auditorium will have seating accommodations for 340. It will consist of a clear story supported by pillars on each side. Between the wall and the pillars on the sides will be aisles five feet wide. The main aisle will be of the same width. There will be a choir loft for 36 people, pastors room, choir room and organ space. The chancel will be 14 feet deep, 16 feet wide and 25 feet high. At the rear of the auditorium will be a gallery seating 140. The interior finish will be of cypress with exposed spans and beams.

Of first importance in the basement is the club room and ladies parlor 48 by 15 feet. Stairs to this lead from the main entrance and it may be cut off from the remainder of the building. It is planned to have this room open every evening to be used as a reading room and community centre. In its rear is a Sunday School department of divided class rooms to accommodate 400 and a separate infant department for 240. Other features are a kitchen and pantry with all modern appliances; library, dressing rooms, coat rooms, etc. The entire vestry may be thrown open into one large space in event of entertainments and the like.

The lighting of the building will be especially adequate, the auditorium being lighted by 27 windows consisting of 12 triple, 12 double and 4 single. The Sunday School will have a series of 16 double windows. An excellent ventilating system will be installed, 3 ducts and an electric fan being placed to draw off the used air. The heating will be by steam.

Comprising the building committee are: Rev. William B. Ayers, chairman Mrs. Theodore C. Gram, Mrs. John B. Atkins, Herbert Tucker, George A. Smith, John B. Given, Sereno N. Ayres, C. A. Boynton, N. S. Sanford and Fred M. Torrey.

The church has a most promising future as it is in an active condition and in the midst of a section that is rapidly growing. Last Sunday was the first anniversary of the initial communion service under the present pastorate of Rev. William B. Ayes. In that year 85 adults, nearly half of whom are men, have been added to the membership, while the Sunday School has been increased by 150. A live Men's club has also been organized

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It will require a modern card index system to keep track of Captain Hobson's Japanese war scares.

The season's ice crop was just right. That is, the ice didn't get so thick that it was too expensive to cut.

The question resolves itself into this: Is the Republican convention of 1912 going to be able to "point with pride" to the fact that it gave the country reciprocity with Canada.

A Democrat was one of the most fervent fast and furious defenders of an accused Republican Senator. This reciprocity business seems to be spreading.

The widening of Hancock street between City Square and Adams street will be more expensive than people generally imagine, but this short and narrow artery which has so many feeders at each end must soon be widened to accommodate the volume of travel, and now seems the proper time. In a few years this part of Hancock street will become a business part of the city, with stores built upon the street line, so that it is important that the street be widened now, when no buildings will have to be moved. It is said that the abutters will not claim damages, but will expect to receive full assessed value for the land taken by the city, and the city is fortunate to get it at these figures. The width of City Square attracts admiration of visitors to Quincy and the appearance of the city will be greatly improved by this widening.

The Park Commissioners made several requests of the City Council this week which the public would greatly appreciate. For many years the Daily Ledger has recognized the need of one or two roadways through Merrymount park making this delightful reservation more accessible. But the prospects are good for the early construction of the Metropolitan parkway from the High school to connect with the Quincy Shore reservation in the rear of Sailors' Home, and perhaps this should be completed first, so that the route may be known. Supervised playgrounds are highly endorsed where established and the city can afford an appropriation of $700 to continue this work. Five hundred is more than the city can afford at present for the West street playground, although a good thing. Whether the finances of the city will permit of an addition to the Ward Two bath house remains to be seen, the demands are so numerous.

ANOTHER RAID ON THE NOBILITY

The latest titled victim of the smiles of fair American girls is Lord George Hugo Cholmondeley. But instead of following the customary precedent of swapping his title for the healing balm of American millions, he marries a pretty chorus girl, Mrs. John A. Stirling, formerly Miss Clara Taylor.

Marriages to theatrical personages are apt to send the English parental pulse up above the fever mark. But when real worth is considered, they are not always an unfair swap. There is a condition of intermarriage in the English aristocracy that is making the type lose something of the force of the old English stock, which was originally a strain drawing its blood from the most virile races of Europe.

The turgid passivity of the English temperament is not unfrequently captivated by the tricksome sprightliness which brings many girls success in stage careers. When there is a snap of daring about it beyond the boundaries fixed by the conventions society creates for its own protection, it becomes all the more alluring.

One might well wish that all the fledgeling aristocrats could be lured into matrimony with our actresses instead of our wealthy girls. When an heiress takes millions across the water, she becomes in time an absentee landlord. Her remoteness from the conditions over which she exercises her despotic lordship is the same condition that has been one of the great causes of Ireland's age-long discontent.

The people who control America's great industries should live in America, so far as possible, if the workers in those industries are to secure humane treatment. We therefore hope that when our frisky chorus girls cross the seas, they will make their most winsome eyes and kick their highest before the admiring sprouts of foreign titledom, and help stop this exhausting drain of home resources into crumbling castles and uninhabitable palaces.

BIRTHDAY REMEMBERED.

When Edward J. Lennon, the city sanitary inspector, walked into the Board of Health office in the basement of City Hall this morning he found his desk decorated with a handsome bouquet of jonquils, which had been placed there by the young ladies employed in this part of the hall as a reminder that they had not forgotten that today Ed was passing another milestone in his eventful life. It is his seventieth, yet one to see him would hardly take him to be that age. When he saw the bouquet he removed his hat and corn cob, and a smile illuminated his face, as he thanked the young ladies for their remembrance.

PLEAD GUILTY.

William F. Stevens entered a plea of guilty in the District court this morning on a complaint of Officer Goodhue, for keeping a liquor nuisance at Malnati block, South Quincy, under the names of the South Quincy Social club. He paid. This is the place raided by the officers late last Saturday night. When they arrived all the beer that it was known went to the room earlier in the evening was gone, but the empties remained and these were seized.

TODAY'S COURT.

Mary Gelora was arraigned for violation of the liquor law at Braintree. Case continued until March 18.

George Ahearn was sentenced to three months in the house of correction for drunkenness at Milton. Sentence suspended until Oct. 2.

HAS BEEN THE SCENE OF MANY MURDERS

Reelfoot Lake May Become Property of State

Lexington, Ky., March 9.—After being a bone of contention, the cause of endless litigation, fighting and several murders, as the property of private individuals, Reelfoot lake, that famous body of water in Tennessee formed by an earthquake in 1811, is likely to become the property of the state of Tennessee, a bill for its purchase having been prepared for introduction in the legislature.

Reelfoot lake covers about fifty acres, and is the most valuable fishing preserve in Tennessee, and the hunting of game around its borders is unsurpassed. Hundreds of people live upon its products. They have for a hundred years fished and hunted there almost at will, despite all orders that they stop, and the fish and game they have secured has been used by them and sold in such quantities that little real work has been necessary.

That section has always been turbulent and if the state of Tennessee does acquire it, it will mark the end, probably, of all the trouble that has made that part of Tennessee feared by all other parts of the state.

K. OF C. MORTUARY FUND

Cannot Be Distributed Among Older Members of the Order

Hartford, March 9.—The supreme court, sitting here, denied the request of certain members of the Knights of Columbus that a mortuary fund of the order, amounting at the present time to between $500,000 and $500,000, be reserved for distribution among those who were members of the order prior to the year 1902.

The supreme court in its findings says that the corporation does not hold the funds in the suit upon a trust, other than a trust in favor of all insured members and their beneficiaries.

whose membership has now reached the 100 mark.

The society was first formed as a union church on April 4, 1895, under the name of the Park and Downs Union society. The first service was held on April 28, 1895, in the old Quincy mansion where subsequent meetings continued until the erection and dedication, on February 22, 1896, of a chapel on Rawson road near Willet street. It is an interesting fact that Dr. Locke, who will be remembered by old inhabitants as a former resident of Norfolk Downs, contributed the first dollar toward this building.

Various ministers occupied the pulpit each Sunday from the organization of the society until May 3, 1897. On this date the tender of the Wollaston Congregational society to supply the services of the Rev. Fred T. Knight was ratified with the understanding it become a Congregational church.

On June 28, 1897, the society was formally organized as the Park and Downs Union Congregational church with the following charter members: Rev. Fred T. Knight, Levi H. Milberry, Olive B. Milberry, Levi Nichols, Nellie J. Nichols, Cornelia D. Stone, Howard D. Bowles, Elizabeth D. Bowles, N. Stuart Sanford, Alice A. Sanford, Mrs. Hazen B. Chapman, Hugh A. MacDonald, Katharine MacDonald, Alexander MacDonald, Mary B. MacDonald, Fred M. Torrey, George L. Marr, Emily T. Turner, Nettie B. Shay, Caro W. Hanscome, Alda O. Shay, Charles A. Staples and Catharine W. Staples.

The church up to the present time has had three regular pastors. Rev. Fred T. Knight was installed on August 1, 1897, and held the pastorate until July 1, 1900. The term of his successor, Rev. Henry G. Megathlin, ran from September 9, 1900, to October 15, 1909. From this time until the advent of the present pastor on January 22, 1910, the pulpit was supplied by Rev. Edward Norton of Quincy. The installation of Rev. William B. Ayers took place on March 29, 1910.

Following a vote of the society on August 24, 1899, the church building was moved from its original location to its present site on Hamilton street and the vestry built under it. This did not improve the appearance of the building and in 1903 a movement was started for alterations. At a meeting on April 14, 1905, this was changed and definite steps for a new building were taken. From this date until the present time the congregation has been unceasingly at work with the result that the object of their labors has been nearly attained.

SUFFICIENCY MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Wollaston Methodist church will not be a "deficiency meeting" as there is no deficiency, so it has been decided to call it a "sufficiency meeting," and the date is Friday evening, March 17. A supper will be served free at 7 o'clock, after which departments will report as follows:

"My third year at Wollaston"—the pastor.

"Enlarging my nursery"—J. A. Sedgwick, Superintendent Sunday School.

"Me and my young people"—Mr. Bennett, president Epworth League.

"My organization"— Mr. Taylor, president Methodist Club.

"Reading of Wollaston Herald"—Mr. Belcher editor.

"Where it comes from and where it goes to"—Mr. Cassidy the treasurer.

"The ambitions of my aggregation"—Mrs. Crothers, president Ladies Aid.

"The Junior League"—Mrs. Pease, superintendent.

"Our missionary work"—Mrs. Wiggin, chairman.

"Queen Esther circle"—Miss Bennett, president.

LOOPHOLE IN THE LAW

Seventeen Hindus Must Be Admitted to the United States

Washington, March 9.—Seventeen Hindus, now detained by the immigration authorities at Seattle, must be admitted to the United States because of a loophole in the law, although the department of commerce and labor is morally convinced they should be kept out.

The Hindus originally immigrated to the Philippines, where the war department controls immigration and the department of commerce and labor has no authority. Later they came to Seattle.

Secretary Nagle was directed that his department must accept the inspection of the war department, though he proposes to recommend legislation which will give him authority to deal with such cases in the future.

Papa—"I hear you were a bad girl today, and had to be spanked."

Small Daughter—"Mamma is awful strict. If I'd a known she used to be a school teacher, I'd a told you not to marry her."—Tit-Bits.

C. W. GUY AT TRINIDAD

Chums with ex-Governor Draper on Steamer

Charles W. Guy continues his letter relative to his Panama trip:

Puerto Cabello one of the oldest towns in America. It was founded in 1555 and is only 70 miles from La-Guayra. The port doctor has just come aboard. At each port the doctor examines us to see that all are well before a landing can be made. We remain six hours at this place, but don't think I shall go ashore it is so hot. Gov. Draper said "It is hot, lets go on the upper deck." The party that took the long trip at La Guayra met us here. Our band went ashore to meet the returning excursionists. At their approach the steamer is all illuminated with red fire and candles.

We are now about 3655 miles from New York. Prayers are held in some places Sunday morning followed by bull fights, etc. Sunday is not much observed outside of the United States.

Sunday, Feb. 12, we are now at the Port of Spain, Trinidad. A number of passengers went ashore to look at the asphalt lake. Some may be going to church, but not many. One man tried to, but was requested to take off his shoes and stockings as all must be barefooted. How would that please the people of Quincy?

The asphalt lake is about hard enough to walk upon. It is dug out and shipped to all parts of the world. In a few days the place dug out is filled up again. So it continues to grow and grow. A few oil wells have been bored which showed that the oil is mixed with asphalt.

Feb. 12, Lincoln's birthday. The American flag in sight in my room. When the band played the "Red, White and Blue" a man from Quincy waved a small flag, and all the others clapped their hands as they had no flag. We had Lincoln ice cream and everything else for dinner. The steamer people make it a point to observe all occasions such as birthdays of the passengers, etc.

Monday, Feb. 13, 4 P. M. We have been over to the island of Trinidad. This is 400 miles from the last stopping place. It seems a strange place. The main product is cocoa beans. Indianaa not indians come from India. Their expenses are paid, but they must remain slaves until they pay up. They seem to be a strange people. They wear large earrings in the nose that come over the upper lip. Lots of bracelets on the arms, and rings on their toes.

Many of them are dressed very sightly, such as they have, but it is not much. Little children seen in the houses do not wear anything, making a great saving in clothing. Everything is of a tropical nature raised on the island. In trade they allow 22 cents for a quarter of our money. Nearly everyone speaks English and England owns the place, and it is well governed. They have good schools.

The population is composed of white people who have large department stores, and all clerks are good salesmen and very polite. The motormen and conductors are black and seem well educated and are very polite and willing to talk.

This is a great harbor large French and Americans steamers loading with sugar and asphalt. We went to the coolie village and botanical park. I believe we saw thousands of cocoa and cocoanut trees, also fields of cotton. It is said the cocoa exported amounts to five million a year. The temperature is 88 in the shade but it is hot and rather stifling. Hundreds of parrots are offered for sale at $5 each. Quite a few of the passengers bought them.

Trinidad was a part of Venezuela, but became an island years ago. It is the most southerly of the West Indies nearest the equator. It was discovered by Columbus July 14, 1498, but seen by John Cabot the year before. It is an island of wonders. Another letter soon.

C. W. Guy.

The Sirolin Sentinel

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

QUINCY, THURSDAY, MARCH 9, 1911

Rainy Day Dont's

Don't wear thin-soled shoes on rainy days.

Don't fail to change your damp clothes immediately when coming in out of the rain.

Don't forget to have a bottle of Sirolin in the house, and take a few doses as a cold-preventer, for the old saying that "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" is as true today as ever.

Don't leave your umbrella somewhere and forget where you left it.

Don't fail to eat plenty of warm, nourishing food and wear clothes that are loose and warm.

Don't forget that Sirolin has no depressing effect. It invigorates the system and kills the "blues."

Ask Your Druggist For Sirolin

Stop That Troublesome Cough.

Sirolin Will Do It.

This Famous Swiss Remedy Comes to America.

There are many people who expect to have a prolonged cold every Spring and Fall. They are accustomed to it, and regard its disagreeable symptoms as part of the inevitable annoyances of life.

They look for the attack to "wear off" in time—and it generally does.

But every long-standing cold leaves its weakening effects on the system, and especially on the delicate membranes of the lungs.

It turns the system into a fertile field for pneumonia, chronic catarrh, or that dread disease—Consumption.

The moral is:

Don't wait for a cold to "wear off." Break it up as soon as it begins.

Keep a Bottle of Sirolin at Home

Sirolin is the world's best remedy for coughs, colds, and other affections of the respiratory organs.

It is a preparation made by European chemists, and it has reached the highest mark of achievement in the successful treatment of pulmonary disorders.

Sirolin comes to America with an unequalled European reputation. A prominent physician says: "The use of Sirolin for the treatment of colds, coughs and other anections of the lungs, is the greatest step forward in the treatment in these disorders that has been made in many years."

The difference in action between Sirolin and the ordinary remedy for colds is principally this:

The ordinary remedy—whether in the shape of a liquid, or pills, or tablets—

Sirolin contains no morphine, codeine, habit-forming or constipating drug

gives a feeling of depression. It adds an additional weakness to an already lowered vitality. It affects the appetite and digestion unfavorably, and creates a sense of fullness in the head.

On the other hand—

Sirolin strengthens the system; enables it rapidly to throw off the effect of a cold; encourages the growth of new, healthy tissue; dispels the "blues," and relieves all distress almost immediately. It gives tone to the stomach, and builds up the appetite.

How Sirolin Relieves a Cough

It promotes a secretion which dissolves and expels the congested phlegm in the nasal and bronchial passages, thus promoting the expulsion of accumulated secretions. The cough is alleviated through the invigorating action of the Sirolin upon the mucous surfaces of the respiratory channels. The continued administration of Sirolin exerts a tonic and reconstructive influence upon the membranes until the tendency to cough ceases.

QUINCY HIGH.

The Senior dramatics committee will soon begin its work and an endeavor will be made to give a performance which will equal that of last year. Miss Mollie Brown will act as coach again this year. In a preliminary meeting the play "She Stoops to Conquer" by Goldsmith, was considered but owing to the large number of male parts and the paucity of female characters it will be rejected in all probability.

About 40 pupils and two teachers, Miss Kirmayer and Miss Salsman went to North Easton with the basketball team to witness the game with Oliver Ames.

• • •

A number of High school teachers and pupils have been to see the production of "The End of the Bridge" an original play by a Radcliffe girl, which is now meeting with great success in the Castle Square theatre.

Chester K. Allen '12 has severed his connection with the Thomas Crane public library.

• • •

The concert given in High school hall last Saturday evening deserved all the fine things that have been said of it since. The singing of the girls sextet was remarkably good. The voices were not only sweet but were possessed of clearness and strength that were unusual in High school pupils. The double quartet conducted itself well and received much well earned applause. The singing of the chorus was especially good this year in all parts but the sopranos deserve special mention for their splendid work in the cantata. Not a little credit is due the orchestra, composed of graduates and under-graduates of the school, which supported the vocalists with entire satisfaction. It would not be well to finish an appreciation of the concert without mentioning the splendid work of the supervisor of music, Miss Perkins. In directing the singing and accompanying the soloists, she showed a mastery of the principles of music which gave the finishing touch to the musical part of the program.

GRADED SCHOOLS.

The executive committee of the Parents and Teachers association of the Massachusetts Fields school voted to expend $25 for a reflectorscope to be used in connection with the work of geography and history classes.

• • •

The parents and teachers of Adams school children will meet in the school building this evening to form a Parents and Teachers association. Albert L. Barbour, superintendent of schools, will be the speaker.

• • •

Many visiting teachers from Boston and suburban towns and cities have been at the Cranch school during the past week. There were fifteen on one day recently.

• • •

The statement in last Thursday's issue that Miss Clara Thayer teacher at the Wollaston school was absent for a week on account of illness, was incorrect. It was Miss Cassandana Thayer, teacher in grade 5 at the Massachusetts Fields school, who was out sick. Miss Clara E. G. Thayer has been teaching at the Wollaston school for over 20 years and has had a wonderful record of attendance during that period.

• • •

The sixth grade scholars at the Cranch school have organized a baseball team with Vernon Arbuckle as captain.

The next meeting of the Parents and Teachers association of the Wollaston school will be on the evening of March 29. The meeting will take the form of a gentlemen's night. Dr. William T. Gallagher, master of the Thayer Academy will be the speaker.

• • •

The meeting of the Parents and Teachers association at the Massachusetts Fields school last Thursday was very well attended. Mrs. Mary L. Wade gave an interesting and instructive address on the subject "The diet of schoolchildren," which was fully reported in the Daily Ledger.

• • •

A number of teachers from the Boston schools visited the Wollaston school this week.

• • •

There has been considerable complaint about the Cranch schoolyard owing to the lack of gravel.

• • •

Miss Elizabeth Moseley, who has been substituting at the Gridley Bryant school, has been transferred to the Massachusetts Fields, where she has charge of a group of third grade pupils.

• • •

A candy sale will be held at the Lincoln school next Wednesday after school. The proceeds will go toward the expenses of the baseball team.

The janitor of the Gridley Bryant school has been obliged to give up work for a few days owing to an injury received two weeks ago. As he was putting out the flag he slipped and fell heavily upon the ground. His side pained him considerably but it was not thought that it was any more than a bruise. It was discovered yesterday that he had cracked a rib. His place is being taken by Mr. Hayden of Quincy Point.

• • •

The boys' basement at the Cranch school has been fitted with baskets so that the boys can get better practice before and after school and at recess.

• • •

A candy sale for the benefit of the baseball team will be held at the John Hancock school next Thursday.

• • •

The front lawn of the Gridley Bryant school has received a coat of dressing, in anticipation of warmer weather.

Thomas B. Pollard, master of the Washington school; Miss Anderson, teacher of the 8th grade, and twenty-three eighth grade scholars, will go to Jordan hall Saturday afternoon to witness a production of "The Merchant of Venice."

• • •

The baseball teams at the Coddington school will probably organize Friday afternoon.

Scarlet fever is on the wane at the John Hancock school. No new cases have been reported, and those who are sick are getting along comfortably.

Miss Edith L. Waugh of Brockton, a Bridgewater Normal school girl, is substituting for Miss Eva Marden. Miss Waugh began her work last Thursday and will complete the term in the position.

• • •

The baseball fever is epidemic among the boys in all the schools, and if warm weather continues, the game will be in full blaze next week.

Miss Caroline E. Morse, who taught at the Coddington school over 20 years ago, and is now principal of a primary school in Boston, was a visitor at the Coddington this week.

At the candy sale given by 8th grade pupils of the Willard school recently between $26 and $27 was cleared. The response from pupils and parents was most gratifying. The money will be used for athletic expenses and for supplying other urgent needs of the school.

The only scarlet fever cases reported this week in West Quincy were Peter Rogers, 317 Copeland street, and Agnes Koegler, 184 West street. The former was not a pupil himself, but had a brother and sister in the Willard school. The latter, Agnes Koegler, was a pupil at the Willard. The brother and sister of Peter Rogers have not been to school for over two weeks, so there is no danger to be feared from that source.

• • •

The lecture given two weeks ago at the Coddington school was a great success financially as well as a means of instruction.

• • •

Miss Grace Cronk of Wrentham, Mass., visited the Willard school on Tuesday of this week.

• • •

Many visitors from Cambridge, Boston, Weymouth and elsewhere have been at the Coddington school during the past week.

• • •

Miss Ellen Desmond, teacher in the third grade at the Willard school, who has been confined to her home for the past two weeks, returned to her duties on Tuesday.

• • •

A basketball game between the Gridley Bryant five and the Willard five which took place Tuesday afternoon, resulted in a victory for the Willard team by a score of 18 to 8. The scoring was done for Willard by Bonafini, 3 baskets, Hawes 2, Walsh 1, O'Connor 1, DiBona 1. O'Connor 2 fouls. For Gridley Bryant, Bennett, Quinn, Manning and Laurie shot one basket apiece.

PARENTS' ASSOCIATION.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Parents and Teachers association of the Cranch school was held in the school building Wednesday evening with an attendance of 175. The meeting was opened by the master of the school, Mr. Townsend, who introduced Albert Schenkelberger, chairman of the nominating committee. The constitution read by Mr. Schenkelberger was adopted. The folowing officers were elected:

President—George E. Pfaffmann.
Vice president—Arthur W. Hall.
Secretary and treasurer—Mrs. Albert M. Parker.
Executive committee—Charles Pearson, Mrs. Andrew Deane, Mrs. Francis Abele Jr.

A resolution was presented by Mr. Schenkelberger, That the attention of the School Committee be called to the condition of the school grounds. A committee of two, Paul E. Blackmur and Albert Schenkelberger was appointed to confer with the school board and see if conditions could be remedied at once.

George E. Pfaffmann, the new president, introduced Miss Mabel Adams, formerly of Quincy, and now a teacher in the Horace Mann school of Boston. Miss Adams gave a bright and interesting address on "The use of English in the home."

At the conclusion of the lecture an informal reception was held, during which refreshments were served by the teachers. The following teachers poured: Miss Elsie Martin, Miss Annie Healey, Miss Carrie Crane and Miss Elsie Turner. Music was furnished by Miss Ethel Humphrey.

Playing Hero

A Story of a Virginia Manor House Just Before Its Ruin

By WORTH WOODBURY

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There has never been and never will be again any such life as existed on the southern plantation up to the period when the system of slavery ceased to exist. In many respects it was an ideal life. Its pleasanter features were more pronounced in Virginia than in any other state, it having been the first of the colonies and planted by the cavaliers of England. Two hundred years later their descendants formed a unique people. The plantation was a patriarchal institution. The planter stood in the place of the patriarch, his children constituted the next grade, the negro house servants the next, and lastly came the field hands.

The children of the planter were educated in accordance with the somewhat lofty ideas of their English ancestors who lost their cause at Naseby some two centuries before. The young men lived an out of door life and mostly in the saddle. The young women's duties consisted largely in visiting the negroes on the plantation and ministering to their wants. There was no actual work done except by the negroes, and they were not overworked. The plantation supported every one on it and was administered usually with justice to all.

I saw the end of this system not as a part of it, but as a participator in the military struggle by which it fell. The plantation on which the incidents narrated in this story occurred is now divided into thirty parts. Even the beautiful grounds in which the manor house stood and still stands, slowly rotting away, are covered with potato vines, and the immense trees that shaded the roof from the hot southern sun have been cut down for firewood.

One afternoon—it was in 1862—I carried from a battlefield to this manor house a brother officer who had been wounded. It was then as it always had been, but was not to be in future. Two soldiers carried the wounded man on a stretcher through an avenue of trees to the front veranda and set down the stretcher, while I stalked inside. A quadroon house servant received me. I asked for the owner of the premises.

"What is it, Clarice?"

The voice came from a person on the second story and seemed to roll melodiously down the great winding staircase. When I first heard the opening strains of "Annie Laurie" I fell in love with the song, and when I heard these words, "What is it, Clarice?" I fell in love with the unseen voice.

"I have brought a young officer," I said, "from the fight going on over the river. He is badly wounded. Can you not find it in your heart to take him in? He would die if left on the field."

As I spoke a girl of twenty, perhaps, came down the staircase. Alas! she was the last of a long line of refined dames who had passed up and down that same staircase, built in England a hundred and fifty years before. Her complexion was that olive white mixed with vermilion which was often to be found among these highborn women of the south. She cast a quick glance at the limp form, the pale face lying on the stretcher, and her features were transfigured to express profound pity.

"This way," she said and, turning, opened a door that led to a chamber on the ground floor. We followed. I ordered the men to set down the stretcher, and one of them assisted me to lift the wounded man on to the bed. Then, telling the invalid that I would be back as soon as possible, I left him. We were members of the same staff, and I went at once to our general and reported what I had done. He directed me to find a surgeon if possible and take him with me to Kirkwood—my wounded comrade—and remain with him until he was out of danger or dead. I reminded the general that it would not do to ask a surgeon to go to one from so many who needed him, and he said he would send me one as soon as he could be spared.

It was a week before we could form any opinion as to Kirkwood's recovery. During that time my general's headquarters were not far from the Rutledge manor house where Kirkwood lay, and I was with the invalid a good deal of the time. My presence there was really unnecessary, for the women of the family—the men were all in the Confederate army—could not have taken better care of a son or a brother. Lillian Rutledge, who had thrilled me with her voice before I had even seen her and afterward by her personnel, was unconsciously leading me to fraudulently let the general believe that Kirkwood needed me. I fear I wished my friend might lie there hanging between life and death till the war was over, but unfortunately for me the surgeon at last said he could be moved, and I was obliged to move with him.

While he was there a medical director looked at the house with a view to taking it for a hospital. Miss Rutledge showed him through the rooms, I accompanying them. One room Miss Rutledge at first declined to open and on being pressed to do so told the medical officer that it could not be used. It required a deal of prodding to induce her to tell why. The reason finally drawn from her was that the room was haunted and any sick man put in it would be frightened to death.

The officer decided against using the house for the purpose, and I had caught the infection of curiosity. As soon as he had gone I began to question Miss Rutledge about the haunted room. She told me that during the early part of the eighteenth century one of her ancestors had been murdered there. He had married the daughter of a neighboring planter. She loved and was loved by another. This lover came to the house, and during an altercation between him and the husband in this room the latter had been stabbed there. Since then every one who had tried to sleep in the chamber had been driven out by the appearance of the murdered man.

The most natural thing in the world for a lover is to try to make a hero of himself. Virginia was full of military heroes, and as such I was merely one of thousands. I resolved to do what I could to show my courage by sleeping in the haunted room. Miss Rutledge begged me not to try it since the last person who did was thrown into a fever which, being followed by other symptoms, finally carried him off.

I was resolute, because in the first place I believed haunted chambers to be a myth, and in the second if anything marvelous did occur it would give me the desired opportunity to show my pluck. The evening before Kirkwood was moved I sent word to the general that if I could be spared from headquarters I would stay all night at the plantation with Kirkwood. He sent back an order for me to remain.

I pledged Miss Rutledge to say nothing about my intention to sleep in the haunted chamber, hoping in this way to head off any one who might be disposed to play ghost. She prepared the room herself for my occupancy, I keeping watch that no one should see her doing so. I waited till a late hour before going to bed, when not a person besides myself and Miss Rutledge, except in the invalid's chamber, was stirring. Then I went to the room I had occupied whenever I had remained for the night and, removing my boots, stole in the dark to the haunted chamber.

That my presence there might not be betrayed I took off my clothes in the dark. Feeling sure that the parts of ghosts are always played by persons in the flesh and that no one on this side of the dead line knew that the room was occupied, I went to sleep within a reasonable time.

I awoke with a start. At the other end of the room I saw a glimmering such as appears in the east at the first faint dawn. I watched it and soon saw that it was increasing, both spreading and growing in intensity. It grew till that end of the chamber was illuminated, or, rather, it seemed that there was no end to the chamber, but a misty, ill defined space. Then I saw in this space the bed in which I lay and asleep in it a figure. A door opened, and a man dressed in the costume in vogue at the end of the eighteenth century stole stealthily toward the bed. Reaching it, quick as a flash he buried a knife in the sleeper's bosom. Then all was dark again.

I felt all the horror one experiences in seeing a murder in cold blood. For more than a year I had seen men killed continually, sometimes thousands at a time, but that was under the exhilaration of battle. The vision, or whatever it was, left me all of a tremble. There being no further use for concealment, I lighted a candle that stood on a small table beside my bed. I would have given half my fortune—I was rich—to leave that bedroom, but my love for Lillian Rutledge was greater than my fear. I had come there to show her my pluck, and I did not propose to show the white feather. Yet I would have infinitely preferred to lead a forlorn hope against a battery of a hundred guns.

I had not long to wait for dawn, and when through a window came its first beams I blew out my candle and within half an hour had so far recovered from my disagreeable sensations as to fall asleep.

Shortly before 9 o'clock I went down to breakfast, feeling at liberty to play the hero, since no one had seen me during the night shaking like a leaf in the wind. However, that's what we boys did often during the war. If we temporarily lost our grip on our courage we looked about to learn who had seen us. Miss Rutledge's mother and other members of the family were present, so nothing was said about my experience. I assumed a careless deportment, though I confess I had not yet recovered my nerves. Finally I was alone with Miss Rutledge and she looked at me inquiringly. I confessed that I had seen a vision of murder.

"And stayed in the room?" she asked quickly.

"Yes. I only left it just before breakfast."

I failed to add that it was the hardest pull on my courage I had yet met with.

I did not see the Rutledge plantation again until after the war. Then I went down into Virginia and found it a wreck. I made inquiries for the family who had occupied it and found that that they had gone north, but where I could not learn. Everything in the south was in dire confusion. Every one seemed stunned, and no one knew anything.

It was several years before I found Lillian Rutledge; then I discovered her among the clerks of the treasury department at Washington. She did not remain there long after I met her. I told her that she had won me instantaneously, without my seeing her, with her sweet, melodious voice.

It was with that same voice that she gave me an answer to the most important question of my life. She is now an old woman, but even in age it retains something of the timbre of her girlhood.

LOCAL AFFAIRS AT STATE HOUSE

Another Metropolitan Commission to Plan for Us

Representative Cushing of Boston offered an important bill in the Legislature on Wednesday, to provide for the appointment of a commission to develop the resources and improve the conditions of the metropolitan district. The bill provides that the governor, with the consent of the council, shall appoint three persons, each to serve three years, to be known as the metropolitan planning commission. This commission is to have charge of the building laws, the prevention and relief of congestion of traffic, the control of fire hazard, the proper distribution of buildings for purposes of residence, manufacturing, trade, etc., the coordination of transportation, whether of passenger or freight and whether by railroad, railway, highway or water, and the distribution of telephone, gas, electric light and other public utilities.

In the Senate the committee on legal affairs reported a bill creating the eastern probate court to include Suffolk, Middlesex, Essex, Bristol, Norfolk, Plymouth and Barnstable counties.

Melvin M. Johnson, appearing for the organized temperance force before the committee on liquor laws, favored the abolition of the sixth class license. He was opposed to granting the state board of pharmacy any more power in the matter of liquor sales. Charles H. Innes, for the druggists' association, opposed the abolition of the sixth class license, but urged that the licensing power be placed in the hands of the state board of pharmacy. George W. Alden of Brockton and Delcevare King of Quincy, opposed granting the state board of pharmacy the power of licensing druggists of the sixth class and favored its abolition.

TROLLEY FREIGHT.

Declaring the granting of a permit to the Boston Elevated to conduct a trolley express business in Boston would tend to create a monopoly and crush out many of the firms now engaged in the expressing business, the opponents of this measure at the public hearing before the City Council at City Hall last night made a strenuous remonstrance, says the Journal. The meeting was adjourned for two weeks, when further arguments will be heard.

A NOVEL AND ECONOMICAL DESIGN.

Design 899, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

A cobblestone piazza with turned columns and composition caps, a hip roof, broken by well proportioned dormers and the Queen Anne windows, lend attractiveness to this exterior. The interior arrangement marks the type of the modern square house, with but three rooms downstairs, the one large living room across the entire front and three liberal sized chambers and a sewing room in the second story. The dining room has a built in sideboard, Dutch window and a beamed ceiling, all combined, making a very effective room. Access to the kitchen is through a butler's pantry. Finish in the first story is red oak, with birch floors; in the second story, pine to enamel, with birch floors. Size of house, 26 by 28 over the main part. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $2,950.

By special arrangement with me the editor of this paper will furnish one complete set of plans and specifications of design No. 899 for $25.

BRIEFS

Mattakeesett tribe, I. O. R. M. of Rockland is to visit Hodensaunee tribe of Quincy tomorrow night.

Manet encampment will have eight candidates for the Patriarchal degree on Friday evening.

Rev. Richard E. Armstrong will address St. Margaret's Guild on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. This service will be held in the church.

Many school boys are interested in the Panama letters of Charles W. Guy. It is a good way to study geography and should be encouraged.

The Y. P. C. U. of the Universalist church will hold an installation of officers in the vestry of the church, Mar. 15. Roger F. Etz of Tufts college will be the installing officer.

Senator Barnes of the Quincy district voted in favor of the civil service bill relative to minors which was passed over the Governors veto on Wednesday. All the Democratic senators voted against the Governor.

Francis H. Willcott of Ashmont, who passed away Wednesday evening at his home on Ocean street, was the father of Livi Willcott of Wollaston, trafic manager of the Quincy telephone exchange. Mrs. Willcott is a sister of Mrs. Lydia C. Hultman of Washington street, Quincy.

Kaiser's Son Has Appendicitis

Berlin, March 9.—Prince Adalbert, third son of Emperor William, is ill with appendicitis, but the attack is said to be very light.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

COVERS PERIOD OF FOUR YEARS

Investigation Discloses Steals From the City of Boston

HOW TREASURY WAS LOOTED

Contractors Said to Have Been In Collusion With City Officials In Overcharging For Material—Experts Working on Books Under Direction of Police—Evidence Bearing Upon Frauds Being Secured

Boston, March 9.—During the investigation that led to the arrest of former Senator Frank J. Linehan and John L. Sullivan, the police unearthed an amazing trail of city graft, it has become known.

The investigation covers a period of four years, and so far it has been found that there have been startling steals from the city in connection with the purchase of lumber, brick, crushed stone, cement, sewer pipe, hardware and other articles.

It is said that much of this graft was carried on with the collusion of city officials. When the facts are laid before the grand jury, probably next week, it is expected that there will be a number of new indictments and several more arrests. This was the scheme that it is said was carried out to loot the city treasury:

A man would get a contract from the city. Then he would order material in addition to that needed in carrying out the contract and have it charged to the city on another bill. In many cases, it is charged, with the collusion of city employes, the city would pay for the additional material and the contractor would dispose of it and put the proceeds in his pocket.

Experts working under the direction of the police are going over the books and looking up contracts, and it is said that there is great uneasiness in certain circles because of what may be dug up.

The finance commission, it is stated, has laid certain facts before the police which will aid them materially in the investigation which they have begun. In the former investigations made by the finance commission that body found itself lacking power to follow up their findings with prosecutions in the court, and so they have decided to turn what information they have bearing upon city frauds over to the police.

Linehan's confinement in the county jail has an ironic side, for Sheriff Seavey, his jailer, is one of his bitterest political and personal foes. When he was in the legislature, Linehan introduced several measures aimed at the sheriff and opposed that official in many other ways. Curiously enough, too, one of the first persons Linehan encountered on his way from police headquarters to the courthouse was former Representative Creed, whom he defeated for the senatorial nomination in the 1906 primaries.

Linehan is said to have been in Somerville during the ten days Police Inspector Wolf was waiting for him to come in and surrender.

Linehan is still in the Charles street jail, unable to secure the $5000 bail. He has apparently been deserted by his friends in his predicament, for no callers, not even his wife or relatives, appeared at the jail yesterday.

WEAK KIDNEYS MAKE WEAK BODIES

Kidney Diseases Cause Half the Common Aches and Ills of Quincy People.

As one weak link weakens a chain, so weak kidneys weaken the whole body and hasten the final breaking down.

Overwork, strains, colds and other causes injure the kidneys, and when their activity is lessened the whole body suffers from the excess of uric poison circulated in the blood.

Aches and pains and languor and urinary ills come, and there is an ever-increasing tendency towards diabetes and fatal Bright's disease. There is no real help for the sufferer except kidney help.

Doan's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys and cure every kidney ill. Quincy cures are the proof.

Mrs. J. Boyle, 8 Marsh St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and can say they are unequaled for curing kidney disorders. They built up my system and in six weeks, freed me from kidney complaint from which I had suffered for a long time."

Resignations Said to Be In Order In Interior Department

Washington, March 9.—Sweeping changes in the interior department are to follow the resignation of Richard A. Ballinger. It is reported that the resignation of Fred Dennett, commissioner of the general land offices, will be presented at once. Dennett was Ballinger's chief aide in the congressional investigation of the Pinchot charges.

The resignation of Oscar Lawler, assistant attorney general for the department, has been accepted. Ballinger is closing up his affairs and will leave for Seattle befofre the end of the week. His successor, Mr. Fisher, arrived today.

CARRIED OFF GIRL IN AN AUTOMOBILE

Four Men Who Kidnapped Young Italian Are Convicted

New York, March 9.—A jury brought in a verdict of guilty against four Italians, who last January kidnapped an Italian girl, Anna Sanfratello, on the street in Manhattan and carried her away in an automobile to Brooklyn, where they were captured by the police and the girl freed.

The men claimed that the seizure was made in carrying out an Italian form of marriage agreement between the girl and Natalo Pizzierone, one of her abductors, and the jury, while convicting the quartet, which included Pizzierone, recommended mercy. They will be sentenced later.

A TIP FOR WIVES

They Are Told How to Make Their Homes Comfortable and Happy

Hartford, March 9.—"Some of the things which men want of their wives," says Mrs. Trueman J. Spencer, in her address before the Hartford Motherhood club here, "are intelligence to run the household with business methods, sympathy and understanding of their husbands' ambitions and aims, a consideration of the tastes and individuality of their husbands—but most especially a willingness to bear children.

"A successful wife is more than a good housekeeper. The woman who makes the best wife is the woman who makes her home, be it humble or luxurious, a place for the comfort and happiness of her husband and children."

PASSED OVER HIS VETO

Bill Rejected by Governor Foss Goes on Statute Books

Boston, March 9.—By a vote of thirty-one to five, the senate passed over Governor Foss' veto the Brophy-Lomasney bill providing that applicants for the civil service shall not be asked whether they were arrested previous to their 16th year.

The bill now becomes a law, the house of representatives also having passed it over the governor's veto a week ago. Those senators who voted to sustain the governor's veto were all Republicans.

President and Cabinet In No Hurry to Take Country Into Their Confidence—Opinion That Hand Was Forced by Foreign Powers—United States Could Not Refuse to Act Without Sacrificing Monroe Doctrine

Washington, March 9.—Fear of the death of Porfirio Diaz, president of Mexico, through illness or assassination, apparently is at the bottom of the hasty war preparations which the United States is making in reference to the Mexican border.

Possibility of intervention in Mexico has been one of the nightmares of the Taft administration, for this government and all the world knows that with the strong hand of Diaz powerless a condition of anarchy would instantly develop in the Mexican republic which would continue until some other dominating military man, like General Reyes, would succeed in winning the army and restoring order.

Whatever the actual facts in relation to Diaz, the military and naval demonstration by the United States means also that he must restore order in Mexico or the United States government will be held responsible by foreign nations for the protection of property and subjects in that country.

Much mystery still exists regarding the developments which led up to the order, issued by President Taft as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, that this demonstration be made. Even the officers of the army who have charge of the movement of troops toward the Mexican border and the officers of the navy who are immediately responsible for fifteen of the best fighting vessels of the navy turning their prows toward the coast line of Mexico are in ignorance as to just what it all means. They do not know that they are going prepared to fight, if fighting is necessary.

More troops of the United States army were yesterday put under orders for mobilization on the Mexican frontier. More than 20,000 men are now on the way to the front or preparing to move. From all over the country troops are being rushed to the southwest. Aeroplanes are to be used for the first time under actual war conditions.

The president and his cabinet are not in a hurry to take the country into their confidence. Of course there is a reason for this. In due time the whole story must come out. Then the public will know why it was that an official statement was given out to the effect that this remarkable military and naval movement meant joint manouvers and nothing else.

The generally accepted story here is that the demonstration was decided upon after certain European countries, possibly Germany and England, had made it plain to the United States that unless this country restored order within the borders of Mexico a foreign power or foreign powers in co-operation would undertake the task. An ultimatum of this character from a foreign power would compel the United States to do just what it is doing.

The president could not refuse to act without sacrificing the Monroe Doctrine, for which this country has always been ready to fight. It may turn out that entirely different reasons are responsible for the demonstration, but one thing is certain. The movement of troops and of fighting ships of the navy means a good deal more than practice maneuvers.

The maneuver story could not possibly stand. The administration officials must have known this when they put it out. In the first place, maneuvers do not take place except as they are ordered by congress, or as congress provides the money for them. Again, maneuvers are planned months in advance.

No plan whatever has been made for the movement of troops and of vessels of the navy now going on. Furthermore, the troops are equipped with 200 rounds of ball cartridges, whereas it is the invariable practice to supply only blank for peace maneuvers. A week ago such a move was not contemplated. It was all brought about as the result of a sudden international development the exact character of which cannot be known until someone in authority is willing to speak.

It develops today that practically the entire available fighting force of the army now in the United States proper has been ordered to move toward the Mexican border. Even the defences along the Atlantic coast are left with only a few men in charge. This means that protection has been withdrawn from New York, Boston, Washington, and all the other coast cities.

For the first time in the military history of the country the coast artillerymen have been ordered to serve as infantrymen. This leads some of the military specialists to reach the decision that an invasion is contemplated, or looked upon as an eventuality of the movement.

SKIM MILK FOR HARVARD

Contractor Makes Declaration After Pressure at Legislative Hearing

Boston, March 9.—Skim milk is served to students in Harvard university dining halls, according to William A. Graustein, a milk contractor, who supplied Randall hall from the time when it was opened until March 1 last.

The declaration had been made by Graustein while speaking against pending milk bills before the legislative committees on public health and agriculture, without mentioning the name of the college, and Arthur D. Hill, counsel for the Massachusetts Milk Consumers' association and a Harvard man, demanded that the name be made public. One of the chairmen allso announced that he thought that the name should be made public under the circumstances, and Graustein reluctantly gave it.

Mr. Hill, after the hearing had been closed, informed Graustein that he intended to bring the matter to the attention of the college authorities.

WANTS SKINS MOUNTED

African Specimens Are For American People, Says Roosevelt

Washington, March 9.—Theodore Roosevelt, en route from New York to Atlanta, had a short stay in Washington while the train changed crews. He refused to discuss the movement of troops to the Mexican border, or to express an opinion on the resignation of Secretary Ballinger. He expressed regret, however, that the specimens of animals which he brought from Africa had not been mounted.

"These specimens, which are now lying in the national museum," said he, addressing newspaper men, "were brought here for the American people. They should be mounted and put on exhibition immediately, and congress should be prevailed upon to make an appropriation for that purpose."

LITIGATION IS BEGUN OVER HOPE DIAMOND

Jeweller Sues For $180,000 He Claims Is Due Him

Washington, March 9.—The famous Hope diamond continues its career of involving its possessors in trouble. The latest case is a suit for $180,000 for alleged breach of contract brought upon the Washingtonian who is said to have bought it, and the woman who intended to wear it as the most lustrous gem in the United States.

The facts developed through the filing in the supreme court of the District of Columbia of a suit against Edward B. and Evelyn W. McLean by Pierre Cartier, the New York jeweller, for the recovery of the sum named, which the plaintiff declares McLean agreed to pay.

The declaration sets forth that the diamond was to be paid for in installments and that the first payment of $40,000, which included also the turning in of certain jewels by Mrs. McLean, was not made.

It is understood that objections to the purchase, made by the parents of McLean, have brought about the litigation.

PRESIDENT GOES SOUTH

Will Study Morse and Walsh Pardon Pleas During Vacation

Washington, March 9.—President Taft left for the south today. He took with him for final consideration the appeal for pardon which has been made by John R. Walsh and Charles W. Morse.

The president will study the cases in the quiet of his short vacation, and before he returns to Washington both men probably will know whether they are to be free or to stay in federal penitentiaries.

Attorney General Wickersham, after several weeks of investigation of both cases, turned over all the papers to the president today with his recommendation.

Grafter Reuf Begins His Long-Contested Fourteen-Year Term

San Francisco, March 9.—Having exhausted every legal resource in a three-year struggle to escape the penitentiary, Abraham Reuf, former political leader of San Francisco, was taken to San Quentin prison to begin a fourteen-year term for the bribery of supervisors during the regime of Mayor Schmitz.

As a final concession, Reuf was removed from jail to the ferry boat in a taxicab, instead of in the regular van.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Blount caught at the word. In a flash the conversation with Gantry flicked into his mind.

"There is only one boss in this state," he said coolly, "and I am very sure he has not given you orders to kill me."

"What's that?" demanded the spokesman.

Blount repeated his bit of information, adding, "Perhaps you'd better ring for a better connection and ask your boss if he wants you to kill the son of his boss?"

At this the tall man came and stood over his prisoner.

"Say, comrade, it ain't my night for kiddin', and it hadn't ort to be yourn," he remarked grimly. "The boss didn't say you was to be rubbed out—they never do. But I reckon it would save a heap o' trouble if you was rubbed out. You don't git over into them woods on Upper Lost creek with no papers to serve on anybody. See?"

A great light dawned upon Blount, and with it came the discomforting chill of a conviction overthrown. As a theorist he had always scoffed at the idea that corporations, which are creatures of the law, could afford to be open lawbreakers. But here was a very striking refutation of the charitable assumption.

His smoking room companion of the Pullman car was doubtless one of the timber pillagers who had been cutting on the public domain. To such a man an agent of the national forest service was an enemy to be disposed of as expeditiously as possible, and Blount saw that he had only himself to blame, since he had allowed the man to believe that he was a government employee.

Having the clew to the mystery, however, his course was a little easier to steer.

"My name is Blount, and I am the son of ex-Senator David Blount of this state," he asserted. "Now, what are you going to do with me?"

"What's that you say?" grated the outlaw.

"You heard what I said. Go ahead and heave me into the canyon if you are willing to stand for it afterward."

The hard faced man turned on his heel without replying and went back to the other two at the fire. Blount caught only a word now and again of the low toned, wrangling argument that followed. But from the overheard word or two he gathered that there were still some leanings toward the sound old maxim which declares that "dead men tell no tales."

When the decision was reached he was left to guess what it was. Without any explanation the things were taken from his wrists and ankles, and he was helped upon his horse. When his captors were also mounted the new status was defined by the hard faced man in curt phrase.

"You go along quiet with us, and don't you make no bad breaks. I more'n half believe you been lyin' to me, but I'm goin' to give you a chance to prove up. If you don't prove up you pass out, that's all. Now git in line and hike out, and if ye're tempted to make a break jest recollect that a chunk o' lead out of a Winchester kin travel a heap faster than your cayuse."

For the first few miles the trail was so difficult that speed was out of the question, but later in crossing a high lying valley the horses were pushed, and ten or twelve miles were covered at a gallop.

When the canyon trail came out upon broad uplands and became a country road, with ranches on either hand, watered by irrigation canals into which the mountain torrent was diverted, there were no familiar landmarks to tell Blount whither his captors were leading him.

As he was able to determine by holding his watch face up to the moonlight, it was nearly midnight when the silent cavalcade of four turned aside from the main road into an avenue of huge cottonwood trees.

At its head the avenue became a circular driveway, and fronting the driveway a stately house, with a massive Georgian facade and colonnade portico, flung its black shadow across the white gravel of the carriage approach.

There were lights in one wing of the house, and another appeared behind the fanlight in the entrance hall when the leader of the three highbinders had tramped up the steps and touched the bell push.

Blount had a fleeting glimpse of a black head with a crown of snowy wool when the door was opened, but he did not hear what was said. Then the negro disappeared, and there was a little interval of waiting.

At the end of the interval the door was opened wider, and Blount had a gruff order to dismount.

What he saw when he stood on the doormat beside the hard faced man with the Winchester merely added mystery to mystery. Just within the luxuriously furnished hall, where the light of the hall lantern served to heighten the artistic effect of her dark red house gown, stood a woman, evidently the mistress of the Georgian mansion. She was rather small and dark, with brown eyes that were almost childlike in their winsomeness, a woman who might be twenty or thirty or any age between.

"What is it, Barto?" the little lady asked, turning to the man with the gun.

The reply was direct and to the purpose.

"Excuse me, but I jest wanted to ask if you know this young feller here. He allows he is"—

"Of course," she said quickly, coming forward without hesitation to give her hand to the dazed one. "Please come in. We have been expecting you." Then again to the man with the Winchester, "Thank you, Barto, for showing the gentleman the way to Wartrace Hall."

It was all done so quietly that Blount was still awkwardly holding the hand of welcoming when his late captors were riding away down the cottonwood shaded avenue. When he realized what he was doing he was as nearly embarrassed as Patricia Anners' lover could well be. But his impromptu hostess quickly set him at ease.

"You needn't make any explanations," she hastened to say, smiling up at him and gently disengaging the hand which he was still forgetting to relinquish. "Of course I saw that you were in trouble of some kind and that your safety depended in some sense upon my answer. What can I do for you?"

"I was on my way to the capital when these men held me up," he stammered. "They—they mistook me for some one else, I think, and for reasons best known to themselves they brought me here. If you could direct me to some place where I can get a night's lodging"—

"There is nothing like a tavern within twenty miles of here," she broke in, "nor is there any house within that radius which would refuse you a night's shelter, Mr."—

Blount made a quick dive for his cardcase, found it and hastened to introduce himself by name. She took the bit of pasteboard, and since she scarcely glanced at the engraved line on it he found himself wholly unable to interpret the smile she gave him in return.

"The card is hardly necessary," she said, and then, to his complete bewilderment, "You are very like your father, Mr. Blount."

"You know my father!" he exclaimed.

She laughed softly. "Every one knows the senator. And I can assure you that his son is very welcome under this roof. Uncle Barnabas"—to the ancient serving man, who was still hovering in the background—"have Mr. Blount's horse put up and the blue room made ready."

Blount followed the hostess, who was still unnamed to him, obediently when she led the way to the lighted library in the wing of the great house.

"Uncle Barnabas will come for you presently," she explained. "In the meantime let me make you a cup of tea. I am sure you must be needing it if you have ridden far. Take the easy chair, and we can talk while the kettle is boiling. Are you new to the west, Mr. Blount? Or is this only a return to your own? The senator is always talking about you, but he is so proud of you that he forgets to tell us the really interesting things that we want to know."

The serving man took his own time about coming back for the guest, so long a time that Blount forgot that it was past midnight, that he was a guest in a strange house and that he did not yet know the name of his entertainer.

For all this forgetfulness the little lady with the dark brown eyes was directly responsible. Almost before he knew it Blount found himself chatting companionably with her and finding her charmingly responsive in whatever field she felt happened to fall.

"Tremendous," replied Dr. Johnson. "Why, that man can remember things that never happened."

NOT AN HEIR OF LUCKY BALDWIN

Court Instructs Jury to Find Against Miss Turnbull

CLAIMED TO BE DAUGHTER

Ignorant of Paternal Parentage Until Death of "Man of Mystery" In 1909—Her Mother Bared Past Life In Sensational Contest to Secure One-Sixth Share of Estate Valued at $11,000,000—Will Probably Appeal

Los Angeles, Cal., March 9.—Beatrice A. Baldwin-Turnull, the 17-year-old Brookline, Mass., girl, failed to prove to the satisfaction of Judge Rives that she was a legal daughter of E. J. ("Lucky") Badiwin or to establish her right to inherit one-sixth of his $11,000,000 estate, and the court ordered a verdict for the defense.

The contest of Miss Turnbull, aided by her mother, Mrs. Lillian A. Turnbull of Brookline, to establish the former's right of inheritance has been one of the most sensational and bitterly fought cases ever to have come into the courts of California. The prominence of the late "Lucky" Baldwin, who was for years one of the most prominent turfmen in America, known as a man of mystery and many matrimonial encounters, added zest to the interest in the contest.

It is understood that the action of Rives will not terminate the litigation on behalf of Miss Turnbull, for the case will probably be taken to the supreme court on an appeal.

The story of the Brookline girl as brought out in the long court battle just closed reads like a romantic novel. It began, according to Mrs. Turnbull, when she was acting secretary for her father, William A. Ashley of Royalton, Vt., a horse breeder.

Since then people on both sides of the continent have been interested from time to time in controversies arising from the acquaintance and relations of the woman and the turfman.

During all this time Miss Beatrice Baldwin-Turnbull, who had been adopted by her mother's new husband, Dr. Turnbull, a Brookline chiropodist, was ignorant of her paternal parentage until the death of "Lucky" Baldwin in 1909.

It was in July, 1910, that the announcement was made that a number of prominent Boston lawyers had taken the contract to prove that Mrs. Turnbull was the wife of "Lucky" Baldwin, that Beatrice was their child, and that therefore she was entitled to a share of the Baldwin millions.

Mrs. Turnbull, her daughter and counsel soon thereafter came to this city, and things were put in readiness for the court trial, which resulted in Mrs. Turnbull's being obliged to take the stand for six sensation-developing days. During a gruelling cross examination she bared her past life to the gaze of the world.

Regardless of this sacrifice and humiliation to which she submitted herself for her daughter's sake, the court ruled that as the evidence adduced "fell far short of making out a case for the plaintiff," he would instruct the jury to return a verdict in favor of the defense.

Mrs. Turnbull in telling the story of her life with Baldwin said: "I have guarded the secret of my life in order that my child might be protected. I have gone among strangers using a strange name, working and slaving that my little one should have the necessities of life, pledging my relatives that they should never hint to her the tragedy of my younger days—and then to find in the end that it has all been useless, that she discovered the secret.

"When my child discovered the secret I told her that I had kept it from her for her sake, and she said that I had done right, in that her father had not cared for her."

BUTTER WORKERS WARNED

Law Regarding Water In Their Product Will Be Enforced

Washington, March 9.—Makers of butter who "accidentally" work more water into the product than the law allows will, after May 1, encounter the strong arm of the law.

Commissioner Cabell of the internal revenue bureau, with the approval of Secretary MacVeagh, has instructed all his internal revenue collectors to watch for such violations. Water weighs heavily in a pound of butter, but the law allows 16 percent.

Tie Vote on Reciprocity

Concord, N. H., March 9.—A vote in the senate on the resolution recently passed by the house endorsing the Canadian reciprocity agreement resulted in a tie, 10 to 10. The resolution was then made a special order for next Wednesday.

New Ocean Line to Providence

Providence, March 9.—A trans-Atlantic line has secured a terminal here and will berth its first ship about June 17. It is planned to inaugurate a direct service between this port and southern Europe.

KISS AND EMBRACE

Counts' Honor Satisfied After Duel In Which One Is Pinked

Florence, March 9.—Count F. di Bruno and Count Bastoni fought a duel with swords on the outskirts of the city. The encounter was the result of revelations made by Bastoni concerning Lieutenant Paterno, who recently murdered Countess Giulia Trigona di Sant' Elia, and who was a close friend of di Bruno.

At the second assault Bastoni was wounded in the scalp, whereupon the antagonists announced that their honor was appeased and the men kissed and embraced.

BAGARIA TAKES POISON

Anarchist In Plot to Kill King of Spain Dies In His Cell

Madrid, March 9.—Ventura Bagaria, the anarchist who plotted the life of King Alfonso at Alcazar de San Juan, was found dead in his cell, his second attempt at suicide having been successful. He swallowed poison, which was secreted in the lining of his coat.

A previous attempt at suicide was unsuccessful. The police have learned that he is an anarchist known to the police of half a dozen countries.

Society Slander Suit Delayed

London, March 9.—The slander suit of Baron De Forest against Lady Gerard, due for trial in the high court, has been postponed because of the absence of Lord Derby, a witness.

German Bank Bankrupt

Frankfort-on-the-Oder, Ger., March 9.—The Vereins bank, which suspended in November, has been declared bankrupt. The losses are estimated at $1,000,000.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

LAND COURT.

To Grace R. Badger of Newton, George L. Huntress, Trustee, of Winchester, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth; Emily C. Roberts of Medfield, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Sarah S. C. Pratt and Mrs. John Pratt of Boston, in the county of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth; Francis C. Welch and J. Henry Russell, Trustees under the will of John Bryant, late of Cohasset, in said County of Norfolk, deceased; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Thomas W. Thacher of Brookline, in said County of Norfolk, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Cohasset, bounded Westerly by Atlantic Avenue, Northwesterly and Westerly by land of Grace R. Badger, then by an irregular line by the sea, Easterly, Southeasterly, Southerly and again Southeasterly all by land of Francis C. Welch and J. Henry Russell, Trustees under the will of John Bryant to the point of beginning.

Petitioner also claims the land, thatch, beach and flats lying between the line of average high water mark of the sea adjoining the premises above described and low water mark of the sea, all the land within the limits of the flats appurtenant to the premises above described, and all riparian rights to the above described premises in any wise appertaining or belonging.

Petitioner claims as appurtenant to the above described land a right of way over a private way called the Old Whitehead Road over land of Francis C. Welch and J. Henry Russell, Trustees under the will of John Bryant, and over a way leading therefrom all as established by a certain agreement made by Elizabeth P. Lee with said Trustees dated June 10, 1908 recorded with Norfolk Deeds Book 1086 Page 506, and filed as Document No. 761 in Land Court Records, Norfolk District, also such right of way over a private way running westerly from said Atlantic Avenue as is established by decision of the Land Court filed April 23, 1908, in case No. 1924. See plans 1924A3 and 1924A4.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the twenty-seventh day of March A. D. 1911, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this first day of March in the year nineteen hundred and eleven.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

A MILLIONAIRE'S WILL

Tuskegee Gets Fortune and His Body Goes to Medical Students

New York, March 9.—Tuskegee Institute of Tuskegee, Ala., will eventually benefit to the extent of several hundred thousand dollars by the will of Emmet Densmore, a millionaire manufacturer of this city, filed in the surrogate's office. One paragraph of the will says:

"If my wife shall die first it is my wish that at my death my body be given to a medical school to be used for dissection. I have long perceived that it is necessary for the progress of science that these dissections should be made and also that such necessity in the present attitude of the public mind encourages body snatching. If enough reformers would join in a like disposition of their bodies body snatching would be done away with and at the same time anatomical material would be supplied."

BRIEFS

The Quincy fleet of submarines are operating in Chesapeake bay with Annapolis as their headquarters.

Tomorrow will be the 27th anniversary of the institution of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows in 1884.

Mr. and Mrs. William V. Hayward of Chestnut street quietly passed on Wednesday the 55th anniversary of their marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Baxter Crane entertained at whist Wednesday evening. Ices were served, souvenirs awarded and a pleasant evening enjoyed.

The recent bankruptcy petition of Baldwin & Moore at Barre, Vermont, has hit some of the Quincy granite manufacturers rather hard. Also the failure of the E. C. Willison Co.

What was announced recently as a federation meeting at West Quincy, is an entertainment by Division on Mar. 17, at St. Mary's hall, when Rev. T. P. McMannon will give a lecture, and a musical program will be presented.

There are two Quincy boys on the cruiser Des Moines which is under hurried orders to sail from the Charlestown navy yard. They are Guy Marden, a con of Court Officer Marden, and Charles Peters, a son of Mrs. Laura Peters of Quincy Point.

The members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Quincy Point church, who gave the play "A man's voice," in connection with the fair last week, have been asked to go to the Pilgrim church, North Weymouth, next week and give another performance.

A special parish meeting of the Washington Street Congregational church was held Wednesday evening. The meeting was called to change the wording of certain articles in the constitution to make them up-to-date. The annual church meeting will be held next Tuesday evening and the annual parish meeting will take place on Wednesday, March 22.

On account of illness Prof. Charles Bickford will be unable to read Hamlet on gentlemen's night at the club house, March 15th and a lecture on Art by the well known Boston artist, Mr. Darius Cobb, will be given instead. There will be songs by Mrs. H. T. Dryer of Dorchester, with Mrs. Mary Chandler West as pianist. The entertainment will be from 7.30 to 9 o'clock, followed by a social hour and refreshments.

The funeral of John Wallace of 48 Washington street, who died at the City Hospital on Monday, was held this morning from his late home, and was followed by services at St. John's church, mass being celebrated by Rev. John J. Coan. The services were largely attended by the Mohawk club of which he was a member. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery, where the body was escorted by the members of the club. There were very many beautiful flowers, including several set pieces.

Little Items of Interest in Towns About Quincy

Ray Spalding of Braintree was elected president of his c lass at a class meeting Wednesday. Spalding a non fraternity man won the position by defeating two "Frat" men in a close contest. The winning candidate has been in office in several college societies.

The will of Bushrod Morse late of Brookline was allowed at Dedham on Wednesday. The inventory shows real estate of $2000 and personal of $5000.

A Catholic girl who goes to Rhode Island or some other place to get married is "hitched" in about the same way as a horse is hitched to a wagon, according to Rev. John A. Daly of St. Mark's Catholic church, Ashmont, who preached the second of his Lenten sermons last night. He said couples married in this way, are not, according to the Catholic church, married at all.

Boston has been designated as the home port for the following ships; Georgia, Nebraska, New Jersey, Ohio, Rhode Island and Virginia battleships Birmingham, Chester and Salem, scouts; Chicago and Des Moines, cruisers; Ammen, Monoghan, Patterson, Walk and Trippe, destroyers; Bonita, Snapper, Singray and Tarpon, submarines; Constitution, Essex, Iwana, Nashville, Ranger, Scorpion, Sioux, Vesuvius, Wabash, Yantic and Celtic, supply, colliers and tenders.

Charles F. Tingley, engineer at the house of correction at Dedham for 22 years, died on Monday. He was born in Bellingham.

Hanover has issued a town history of 800 pages, compiled by Jedediah Dwelley.

The cottage at Brant Rock owned by Mrs. Emma Robinson of Whitman was destroyed by fire Monday evening and threatened a conflagration.

Representative Roger Wolcott addresses the Thursday Evening club at East Milton this evening on State House legislation.

A recount is wanted in Milton of the vote for selectmen and for auditor.

The funeral of Mrs. John F. Reagon of Braintree took place on Tuesday, the burial being in St. Mary's cemetery at West Quincy.

Mrs. Patrick Griffin of Weymouth died on Wednesday. The burial will be at West Quincy on Saturday.

Metropolitan Park Commissioners are after the moth nests along the Neponset river between Hyde Park and the sea.

—A New Jersey judge is not a believer in the equality of the sexes, for in a recent verdict by which a young woman was awarded $3000 for the loss of a finger in the factory where she was employed, he declared that a woman's finger is more valuable than a man's because it is not only useful, but a thing of beauty as well. Advocacy of equal rights for men would seem to be the logical sequence.—Milford Gazette.

EDUCATIONAL FIELD

WOODWARD INSTITUTE.

The annual Founder's Day exercises will be held in the Reception hall of the school Friday evening beginning at 8 o'clock. The first part of the program will be musical consisting of two selections by the chorus and a solo by one of the pupils. Part two will be a dainty little Japanese play entitled Princess Kiku. The girls have been trained by Miss Georgianna Lane and the play though simple promises to be very delightful.

Owing to the regulations issued by the State police department only 600 people will be admitted to the hall this year. In years past between seven and eight hundred tickets have been issued but that number had to be cut by nearly 200 this time.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The money for athletic expenses in the grammar schools of the city will be raised entirely by candy sales, entertainments, etc., this year. No scholar has any authority to collect money from the merchants and different families about town for the support of the baseball teams. If it should be found necessary to get outside help, Dr. Smith, the supervisor of physical training, will attend to it. The masters of the grammar schools will meet with Dr. J. Gardner Smith next Wednesday to make plans for the formation of the baseball league.

SPORTING NOTES.

Quincy High will play the return game of basketball with Rockland on the floor of the latter Friday afternoon. There should be little question about the result of the game since Quincy defeated the Rockland team overwhelmingly in the first game of the year.

The Q. R. A. announce another event for tonight.

Weymouth High won from Randolph High on Wednesday 43 to 12.

The St. John's Holy Name society is arranging for a field day the seventeenth of June.

Bonney has undertaken to manage the Makarias this season.

"Honey" Curtis is not expected to play baseball this year.

The South Hanover nine is holding a fair so as to have a "baseball" fund. Welcome Colonial A. C. every little bit helps to make it a hot game.

The Quincy council team won two out of three games in the Columbus league this week and led Jamaica Plain 1446 to 1387 on totals.

J. Gillis made the best score at 45 at the party of the Washington Social club this week.

Rockland High lost to Reading High at basket ball 19 to 13.

Newton Y. M. C. A. beat Brockton Y. M. C. A. 12 to 7.

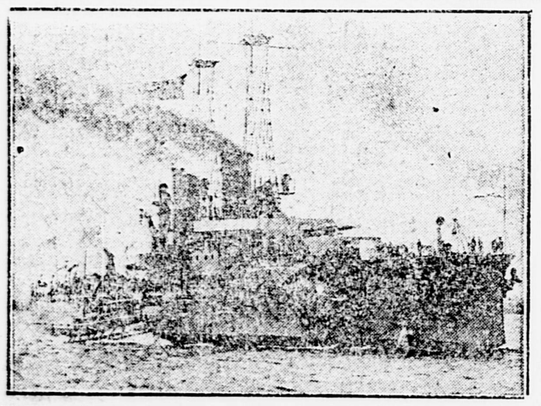

The annual gymnastic exhibition of the Junior class of the Y. M. C. A. will take place Friday evening. About 65 boys will participate in the different events. The program includes a calisthenic drill, maze running, apparatus work, potato relay races, Indian wrestling, group games, a basketball game, barrel boxing, chicken fight, Indian club race.

Quincy Y. M. C. A. will have a dual meet with the Malden Y. M. C. A. track team at Malden Friday evening. In addition to the Seniors a number of Employed Boys will be entered in the different events.

NORTH DAKOTA, UNCLE SAM'S SPEEDIEST DREADNOUGHT.

Although the North Dakota was launched only Nov. 10, 1908, she is now ready for business. She is modeled closely upon the British Dreadnought, although she is an improvement over that famous fighter. She has armor around her smokestacks and uptakes, which the Dreadnought has not. She is also provided with the new "spider" masts, from which the gun fire of the ship will be directed. A peculiarity of the North Dakota is that all ten of her big twelve inch guns can be trained on the enemy at the same time. Her speed is 22.25 knots. Her normal displacement is 20,000 tons.

CONCRETE HOUSE IS ATTRACTIVE

Substantial and Durable and Easily Built.

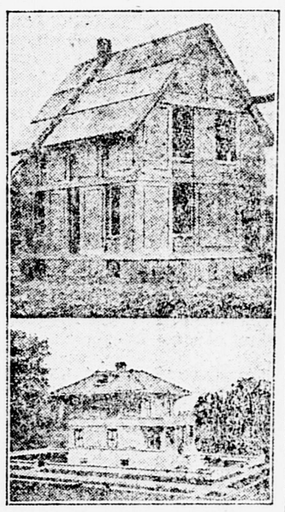

WILL "DRESS UP" YOUR TOWN

Modern Science Has Given Us a New Type of Home to Take Place of Modest Workingman's Abode and Preserve Our Depleting Timber Supply.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

Are we approaching the age of cement? Is concrete the answer to the decreasing timber supply? Are we to have ready made houses just as some of us now buy ready made clothes? By standardization the cement houses of the Edison and other patterns are assuming much the same relation to architecture and building as hand-me-down suits bear to tailoring. The standardizing process is that of making many houses from the same molds, thus materially reducing the cost.

The Edison method of building concrete houses is the one above described. To save time and to prevent too much sameness in type he recommends the use of half a dozen different molds by each construction company. To build an Edison house the mold is put in place, and the concrete, consisting of a mixture of sand, gravel and portland cement, is poured in. After the concrete hardens the mold is removed, and there is your house. During the hardening process a second mold can be set up and another house built while you wait. He estimates that one outfit consisting of thirty-seven men can thus erect 104 houses each year at an average cost of $1,200 per house of six rooms, with a slightly higher expense per additional room for those of larger size. For variations in pattern he does not depend alone on the different molds, but has changes of porches and other slight details in the same mold; also difference of color. Thus a house of a given pattern looks very different in green from one in purple, red or yellow. The paint is a mixture of cement and practically lasts forever, like the smile that won't come off.

Even the roofs are made of cement. Not only are these domiciles fireproof, flood proof and wind proof, but rat proof and mouse proof. The concrete is harder than granite, and a rat has about as much chance of getting through that a man would have of drilling a hole through a twelve inch steel plate with a wooden toothpick. The only thing that can injure a concrete house is an adult earthquake, and even it would have to be some shakes to make much of an impression. There are cement houses in Italy that have stood for a thousand years. The Mexican adobes are so ancient that nobody knows when their ugliness first took form.

The Edison type is not the only one. Another is the house built of immense concrete blocks or sections. These sections are so large that they have to be handled with a derrick, and it is proposed to make them larger still, including the whole side of a house in one block. The plan for these dwellings has been perfected by those connected with the Sage foundation, which is not the foundation of a house, by the way, but of a charity. These estimable people had designs to help the laboring man by giving him a cheap house to live in, but the labor union objected unless the concrete sections could be put in place by masons with mortar and trowel. This especial uplift had an especially rocky road.

As for beauty, we should not be discouraged by the Mexican dobes. The homeliness of these domiciles was due not to the material, but to the builders. The particular tribe of Indians that made the dobes would have put up ugly houses even if they had possessed unlimited quantities of mahogany and Circassian walnut. Those Indians did not run to the aesthetic.

Nowadays concrete houses can be made as attractive as one's taste, brains and pocketbook will permit.

The societies for beautifying cities and villages should look into this. Concrete houses in various tints and patterns could be made infinitely more picturesque than the wooden shacks that disgrace most of the towns. Also, they would retain their beauty.

McFARLAND RECEIVED $3, ALL IN NICKELS AND DIMES, FOR HIS FIRST BATTLE.

Packy McFarland, the Chicago lightweight, took up fighting because he didn't want to go to school.

"My mother would send me out in the morning," said he the other day, "but nothing doing in that line for me. I bummed my away along—yes, that's just the word, bummed my way—and naturally I bent my footsteps along the fight road.

"I got $3 for my first fight, and, say, it was all in nickels and dimes. I thought I had all the money in the world, but when my manager took $1.50 away from me I was not so rich. I got $6,000 afterward for fighting Jimmy Britt, the largest sum I ever earned with my dukes, but it did not seem as big to me as that $1.50 in the old days."

McFarland derived the nickname Packy from his little kid sister. When the stockyards wonder started fighting it was difficult for her to twist the infantile tongue to Patrick, McFarland's real given name, and in the insistence of lisping childhood she called her brother Packy. The name stuck.

HERRESHOFF TO GOLF ABROAD

Metropolitan Champion Will Try For English Amateur Title.

Many American golfers have been mentioned as likely to go abroad this year. Several mean to take the trip more for the sake of being present at the magnificent coronation spectacle in London, but incidentally will take their clubs with them. In this way America is likely to have a larger and better representation in the big tournaments held over the English links than ever before.

J. G. Anderson has been mentioned as likely to represent Boston in the amateur championship, while the name of W. C. Fownes, Jr., of the Oakland Country club of Pittsburg, the national champion, has also been mentioned in the same connection.

Now comes the authoritative information that Fred Herreshoff, the metropolitan champion, will also join forces with those going abroad. Her-reshoff, like many of the others, is to take the trip for the sake of the pleasure to be enjoyed at that gay time. He, however, will play golf and intends to follow in the footsteps of the other metropolitan stars, Walter J. Travis and Jerome Travers, in having a try for the blue ribbon of British amateur golf, which is to be played at Prestwick, Scotland, in June.

Than Herreshoff golfers of this country could wish for no better representative abroad. Travis and Travers have both sampled the leading courses of Britain and played against the cream of the British talent, with what result all who follow the game know. Travis is the only American who ever crossed the water and carried off the title.

SPORTS IN SMALL CHUNKS

A national motorcycle circuit is proposed.

The Broncho, 2:00¾, will be bred to Minor Heir, 1:58½.

Phillips-Andover academy students have raised $25,000 for a swimming pool.

The national horse show will be held in New York Nov. 18 to 25, both dates inclusive, making a seven day show devoted to the blooded horses of the world.

The professional golf tournament on the Rome (Italy) club's course, in which James Braid, J. H. Taylor, James Sjerlock and Arnaud Massy will take part, will occur April 6 to 8.

SICK.

Edwin L. Sabin.

When mother's sick, the house is all
So strangely hushed in room and hall!
But mother never will admit
She's suffering a single bit!
She won't let people do a thing—
There's nothing anyone can bring—
She just lies there, and tries to fix
Herself, by cunning little tricks!
And as for doctor—why, the word
She scouts as being most absurd.
And when he comes he has to guess
At symptoms that she won't confess;
And then he's apt to frown and say:
"You should have had me right away.
I'll come again this evening"— for
It's bed, you see, a week or more!

When father's sick—I tell you, now,
You ought to hear the dreadful row!
The talk of "dying" and the groans!
The orders in convulsive tones!
The hasty runnings to and fro—
To rearrange the pillow—so;
To fix hot-water bag and shade;
For mustard plaster, lemonade!
Appeals to get the doctor, quick—
And "Can't you see I'm awful sick?"
And then the doctor sits and hears
While father grunts his pains and fears
He leaves some drops and tells us:
"Hum!
Unless I'm needed I shan't come
Again. I think he'll do all right."
And father's up, perhaps, by night!

Teacher—"Why did you have your hair cut so short, Bobby?"

Bobby—"So that you couldn't pull it, ma'am."

COMMUNITY HOUSE HEARTILY ENDORSED

Ways and Means Committee Appointed to Investigate the Financial Phase

A Building to Cost About $40,000 Wanted at Wollaston

At the meeting of the Wollaston "community house" committee in Odd Fellows hall on Thursday evening the representative committee of seventy-two was resolved into a permanent organization to be known as the "Wollaston Community House Association" and the temporary offices of Frank A. Page as chairman and J. Harry Hooper as secretary were made permanent.

A ways and means committee of six, with powers of addition by the chair, was appointed to investigate the financial phase of the situation, consider initial and operating cost, probable income, location and nature of building desired and report at the next meeting. The committee will consist of Charles W. Bailey, Walter S. Pinkham, William M. Chase, Albert N. Murray, Charles E. Monroe and Percy L. Davidson.

The meeting was called to order by Percy L. Davidson, secretary of the recently appointed committee of three, who issued the call for the meeting. Frank A. Page and J. Harry Hooper were elected to the respective offices of temporary chairman and secretary.

Mr. Page outlined the policy of the meeting, saying that we wanted a creditable building centrally located on a large lot and containing a large main hall, banquet hall, quarters for the Masons and Odd Fellows, ladies and charitable societies. A structure in fact that will be in every way a "citizens' building," and give Wollaston a standing with its neighbors.

A parish house considered from an economic side is a waste of money, while a church is no place for plays, dances and socials. Such a community house as it is proposed to erect would cost at least $35,000, but would yield considerable income from the start, and would increase as the years went on.

Dr. E. R. Johnson declared himself to be interested in the idea, and believed it could be put through. It is desirable both on the part of the churches and the people, and is mainly a question of finance. Wollaston men should stand together for whatever is needed in the community.

ARGENTINA COLONY REJOICE

Son Welcomed by Lieut. and Senora Ferdnandez

There was great rejoicing among the Argentine naval officers who are in Quincy, during the building of the dreadnought for that republic, when a son and heir was born to Senior Lieut. Oswaldo Ferdnandez, who are making their home in the house of Councilman Branch on Putnam street.

Lieut. and Senora Ferdnandez were married in Argentina four months before sailing for the United States and Quincy in 1910 so that the trip was in the nature of a honeymoon.

They at first made their home at The Greenleaf, but some months ago began housekeeping in the Branch house. There is now quite a colony of Argentina people in Quincy, and the advent of the young lieutenant was hailed with delight. Lieut. and Senora Ferdnandez have been showered with congratulations not only from their own people, but from the many friends they have made since coming to the United States. Reports from the home are that mother and son are doing finely.

EXCITEMENT CAUSES DEATH OF WOMAN

Had at Her House Fire a Alarm Key Which Was Wanted at Midnight to Give Alarm

Fire Was Only a Slight One with Loss of $300

The firemen were called out twice Thursday night by alarms of fire. The first alarm was sounded from Box 136 at 7.55, and a quick run was made to the box, only to learn that the alarm was a false one, having been pulled in by some malicious person.

The second alarm was from Box 42 at 12.45, and resulted in the death of Mrs. Olive F. Clark from excitement. The fire was in a fruit store of Salvatore Purpura. The fruit store is situated in a little shanty, and was discovered by a man passing. One of the keys of the box is kept at the house of Mrs. Clark. The man ran to the house and pounding loudly on the door shouted "fire" at the top of his voice. The excitement was too much for Mrs. Clark, who had been suffering for a long time with heart trouble, and she fell over and died almost instantly. Medical Examiner Jones was called, but the woman was beyond help. Dr. Jones said that her death was due to the sudden awakening from sleep and excitement. Hearing the man shouting fire and pounding on her door doubtless led her to believe that it was her own house that was on fire. In the meantime the alarm had been sounded, and the department had arrived. Chief Williams says the loss by fire did not exceed $300. The cause of the fire is unknown.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Another mountain slide into the Panama canal. New Orleans, let us hope will be able to prove an alibi.

Wouldn't it be great if the country could have a rest from Congress from March until December.

The British House of Commons is in the position of a body that would like to do something about reciprocity but can't.

The British public always was a little slow in seeing the point of a joke; and in fact there are some jokes that have no point in them.

The board of archbishops in England which has under consideration a revision of the Ten Commandments would please some people better by abolishing them altogether.

The City Council has made unusually liberal appropriations this year for water extensions and the installation of meters and should not be expected to do more in 1911. The order introduced this week to appropriate another $2,000 for water meters should be promptly killed. There are improvements much more needed than water meters, and these will not be possible if the debt limit is to be exhausted in this way. Another year whatever is appropriated for water meters and construction should be inside the debt limit, because ten years is long enough for such loans to run.

SUPPRESSED AND CURBSTONE JOURNALISM

The newspaper is or should be so devotedly a servant of the public, that high minded newspaper men keenly regret the occasional friction between the two. The charge is frequently made against newspaper workers, that they are given to printing news on the authority of mere street rumor. Newspaper men of that type are frequently referred to as "curbstone journalists," or "Hessians" who without verification transfer the floating and irresponsible gossip of street loafers into the white light of the public prints.

On the other hand, many struggling young men, striving to make an honest living in the profoundly significant calling of newspaper work, are irritated beyond even Job's patience, by the morbid sensitiveness shown by many people to the use of their names in print. Many people announce their plans often suitable for publication, all over town to their personal friends. They take no offense when these friends tell other people far and wide. But when the newspaper man does essentially the same thing that these friends have been doing, only in a more reserved and accurate way, they fly into a passion about the invasion of privacy by the prying reporter. Keenly as the honest newspaper man desires accurate news, there is everywhere a tendency for the news suppresser to produce the curbstone journalist.

When Mr. Smith tells all his friends that he is going to Europe, it soon gets around to the newspaper reporter. He reflects on Smith's unwillingness on previous occasions to have perfectly legitimate news concerning himself get into print. Consequently the reporter thinks twice, yet thrice, before taking the chance that Smith will beg him, on grounds of personal friendship, to "keep it out of the paper." The result is that he seeks to verify it in other ways, hence more or less inaccuracy. If people will only tell the newspaper frankly the things they are willing their friends should tell by word of mouth, it would tend the promote accuracy, confidence, and reciprocity between the public and the newspapers.

REPUBLICANS ARE SCARCE

Bryan Says They Will Not Be In Evidence In 1912

Boston, March 10.—William J. Bryan, three times the Democratic candidate for President of the United States, was the guest at a luncheon at the Quincy house tendered by Governor Foss. Plates were laid for 115.

Mr. Bryan, speaking at the luncheon, said:

"The Democrats have been blazing away for reforms that have come. Men like me 100 years ago would have been hung, but all they have done with me was to defeat me for office and then follow my principles. In 1912, I am sure, we will elect a Democrat. It is hard work to find Republicans nowadays. They are either all Democrats or progressives."

Following luncheon, Foss took Bryan to the state house, where he was introduced to the senate and house and given a great reception. He spoke briefly to each branch. He spent the afternoon in a visit to Harvard college.

TO SUE PINCHOT

Ballinger May Also Carry Out Threat Against a Magazine

Washington, March 10.—Half a million dollars' damages will be demanded in a suit to be filed in Washington against Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester, by Richard A. Ballinger, who retired today from the cabinet position of secretary of the interior.

It was evident from remarks made by the retiring secretary supplemental to his resignation statement to the effect that he would prosecute those who had been "following him with the assassin's knife," that from private life he fully intends to seek such vindication as he believes the courts can render him.

It is understood that Ballinger intends to make good his threats of suing not only Pinchot, but a weekly magazine in New York.

STATE TREASURER'S REPORT CRITICIZED

Special Committee Says Maine Owes $1,554,708

Augusta, Me., March 10.—The special joint committee of the legislature which has been investigating the state finances will report that the state's net debt on Jan. 1, 1911, was $2,554,708.26. The committee finds "the table of liabilities in the state treasurer's report is wholly inaccurate and admittedly incorrect." It further says:

"It is imperative that some provision should be made by this legislature taking care of a large portion of the state's liabilities. These liabilities consist in part of current unpaid bills amounting to $348,247.58, and of unpaid warrants amounting to $384,644.75, a total in these two items of $732,892.33. These amounts are due now and should have been paid at once; in fact many of them ought to have been paid long ago."

Attorney's Argument For Heinze Lasts Over Fifty-Two Hours

Boston, March 10.—Walter I. Badger, attorney for F. A. Heinze, the copper magnate, ended his argument yesterday afternoon in the case of Heinze against A. D. F. Adams and several money lenders and brokers, in which he is trying to recover $300,000 in securities.

Heinze obtained a loan of $300,000 from Adams and gave him as security $600,000 worth of stocks, which he says Adams disposed of to several money lenders and brokers.

Badger's argument lasted 52½ hours and is the longest on record in New England. He spoke in that time nearly 700,000 words.

COMMUNITY HOUSE

Percy L. Davidson read letters of regret from Frederick H. Bishop, Frank Burgess, John L. Hamilton and C. A. Macfarland, all of whom expressed their interest in the proposition and hoped to be present at future meetings.

Dr. Charles E. Monroe voiced the sentiments of the Masons that they had outgrown their present quarters, and it would be necessary for them to procure new apartments.

Mr. Page expressed the wish that a stock company be formed and shares issued in order that people might not contribute voluntary subscriptions but should really get something in return for their money.

Felix Favorite mentioned buildings in other towns and thought the proposed plan a feasible one. He was in favor of a locality where stores and offices might be combined with the building. It would be an honor to Wollaston and a place where all might assemble for the benefit of Ward Five.

A. N. Murray recognized the need of such a building in Ward Five which had no public gathering place. He would like to see the project worked out more fully to demonstrate that the plan was feasible, and could be made to finance itself. He was heartily in favor of the idea.

Walter S. Pinkham believed it to be a question whether $40,000 could be raised on stock. Perhaps half could be secured and the remainder raised by a mortgage on the equity represented by the stock. He mentioned the $20,000 building contemplated by the Masonic lodge. Mr. Pinkham did not believe in the store proposition unless it was on Newport avenue between Beale and Brook streets and even then thought it would spoil the purposes of the community house.

Eugene H. Spragne said that he had failed to find an individual who did not think the plan a good one, and there were a very few who did not think it would be possible to attain. Almost everybody believed it could be carried through. He spoke of the need of the various organizations for quarters such as proposed.

Wollaston, said Mr. Spragne, is one of the ideal communities of greater Boston, and has a lot of fine young men and women who could use a building of this kind. We should have a little better than we can afford and build a little larger than we need, and as a community we will get a great deal of good out of it. There is enough enterprise and push in Wollaston to raise $20,000, and if we are to carry $40,000 we must raise $20,000. In regard to income, the proposition would bring business and would attract entertainments from other points. There is no question but what we will get the money.

Charles W. Bailey said that the project appealed to him, but he did not favor stores as the building would look better and be more of an object to be proud of without them. He took up conservatively the details of financing the proposition.

The first thing we must face is the enlisting of subscriptions, said William M. Chase. If we get $20,000 the success of the thing is assured, as rentals would maintain it. Moreover there will be an equity in the property that may in time be valuable. We should incorporate with a low par value for the stock.

Upon motion of Thomas Lacey a ways and means committee was elected, the members of which are mentioned above.

Mr. Pinkham stated that interest in the community house was not confined to Wollaston people, but that some individuals in the neighboring locality were willing to take hold.

Charles E. Barker spoke briefly on the subject under discussion.

Motions were offered, making the present committee permanent and adopting the name of the "Wollaston Community House Association. Both were seconded and carried unanimously.

George W. Stone thought the community house idea a good thing if properly financial and did not see why it couldn't be. People have made up their minds what they want.

Mr. Page was of the opinion that something tangible should be had to work on, and suggested that sketches be made.

Mr. Davidson brought up the plan that a social club be formed to occupy quarters in the new building. After discussion it was deemed that such a move would be unwise as several clubs along similar lines had been formed in Wollaston which had met with but passing favor, and had at the end been forced to desband.

Following further discussion, the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chair at a date not later than March 31.

BAN ON HAREM SKIRT

Limit to Hobbles Also Proposed In Bill Before Illinois Legislature

Springfield, Ills., March 10.—Harem and hobble skirts were the subject of a bill presented in the house by Representative Murphy of Chicago.

"Hobbles" measuring less than one and one-half yards and not not more than three yards at the bottom are prohibited. An absolute ban is placed on the "harem skirt" by the bill, which prohibits any woman appearing in public in the garb.

The penalty for violation of the proposed law is a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $50 for each and every offense.

EARTHQUAKE WAS FEARED

Chicago Rocked by an Explosion Several Miles Away

BIG POWDER PLANT BLOWS UP

Vibrations Felt Throughout Thirty Miles' Length of City, Windows Being Shattered and Houses Shaken—Cities Even Further From Scene of Disaster Are Affected—Wisconsin Town Said to Have Been Wiped Out

Chicago, March 10.—An explosion that wrecked the plant of the Laflin-Rand Powder company in Pleasant Prairie, Wis., last night, caused the loss of at least one life and destroyed the town in which it was situated. The property loss is estimated at $1,500,000.

Chicago was shaken from its most western suburb to the shore of Lake Michigan and from North End to South End.

Belief that an earthquake had been experienced was almost universal for a time. Windows were shattered and houses shaken throughout the thirty miles of Chicago's length.

Almost simultaneously a building at West Madison and Union streets was almost destoyed by an explosion. The cause of this explosion has not been learned, but is believed to have resulted in some way from the other explosion.

Although Pleasant Prairie is six miles west of Kenosha, which is sixty miles due north from Chicago, the concussion was heard and the vibrations were felt not only in all parts of this city but at Indiana Harbor and other points twenty miles south and southwest of here. Two shocks were felt.

The suburbs of Chicago along the lake shore all felt the quaking and to the north of Chicago many windows were shattered. Direct communication with Pleasant Prairie was cut off by the explosion and no particulars were available from there by wire.

It is known, however, that the town was almost demolished. There were alarming reports that the number of dead was large, but later it was reported from Kenosha that only seventeen men were at work in the plant at the time of the explosion and twelve of them had been accounted for.

CARRIED OUT SUICIDE PACT

Jury Says Wealthy Farmer Induced Wife to Hang With Him

Reading, Pa., March 10.—An unusual verdict was rendered here by a coroner's jury in the case of Samuel Adams, a rich farmer, and his wife, who were found hanging in their home, near here.

The jury decided that "Adams committed suicide and his wife was induced to submit to be hanged with her husband, by her husband, in a manner we do not clearly know."

Adams was 36 years old and his wife 29. They were found suspended by ropes from a rafter in an upper room of their home. After placing the two nooses around their necks the couple evidently jumped from a chair and were strangled. They left a rambling note which indicated a suicide agreement.

ADAMS SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

Committee Selected at Meeting of Parents Last Night

About 135 parents and teachers of Adams school children met in the school building Thursday evening to consider the formation of a permanent organization. Mr. Townsend, the master of the school, as chairman of the meeting, introduced Albert L. Barbour, superintendent of schools, who spoke on the "Value of an association in a district."

At the conclusion of his address, the master's suggestion, that a committee be appointed to draw up a constitution and nominate officers for the new association, was deemed wise. The committee appointed to report at the next meeting includes Edward Foy, Peter Cahill and Mrs. Lucy Page.

Following the adjournment of the business meeting, an informal reception was held in which parents and teachers were given an opportunity to meet each other and talk over matters of mutual interest. Refreshments were srrved by the teachers the latter part of the evening. The following teachers poured: Miss Mary Egan, Miss Katherine Coughlin, Miss Annie Miller and Miss Elizabeth Ross.

The need of a Parents and Teachers' association has been felt for some time. There is much dissatisfaction among the parents over the present condition of the school building.

RETURN PARTY.

Cochato Club Hall, Braintree was the scene of a brilliant gathering, Wednesday evening when Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Bird and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cozzens both of Wollaston, tendered their friends a return for many social favors in the form of a dancing party. The decorations arranged for the annual ball of the club, still remained and mingled with the handsome gowns of the ladies, made a scene of great beauty. By eight o'clock, the many guests had arrived and to the strains of the orchestra, were presented by the ushers to the hosts and hostesses, of the evening, after which, dancing was enjoyed until eleven o'clock. About one hundred and twenty-five guests were present to show their appreciation of the occasion, Braintree, Boston and all the surrounding suburbs being well represented.

The ushers were Harold Gage of Braintree, Henry Holden of Quincy, Russell Johannson of Allston, G. Herbert Brazer of Milton, F. Edgar Norris of Braintree and George B. Damon and Phillips Rogers of Wollaston.

Mrs. Bird was gowned in black lace and carried a huge bunch of bright pink tulips. Mrs. Cozzens, in blue, carried pale pink tulips; both ladies looked especially well. Delicious punch was served throughout the evening. The floor was in excellent condition and the music, Campbell's orchestra, of Neponset, proved especially fine and brought forth much favorable comment. Mr. Cozzens and Mr. Bird proved themselves admirable hosts, having the welfare and happiness of their guests ever in mind. No prettier party has taken place in Cochato Hall and the affair will long be pleasantly remembered.

MUSICALE "REVUE."

The seventh annual "Revue" and the "Last Word" in vaudeville of the Men's club of Christ church will be given in Music hall, Wednesday evening, April 26. The entire affair is to be produced under the personal supervision of Henry W. French. The opening chorus of fifty voices will be followed in turn by dances, sketches by well known amateur talent, a complete "revue" of the songs of the hour, the "Babbie" girls and many other amusing local hits.

Tickets are now on sale by members of the club and the following committee, Herbert J. Dickie, chairman, George M. Hanson, Edward J. Townsend, Walter E. Burke, Herbert G. Johnson, Arthur Newton, Joseph B. Grossman, Merton A. Turner, Henry W. French and Will S. Torrey.

CLERGYMEN AS GUESTS

At Installation of the Knights of Malta

John Adams commandery, Knights of Malta, began its seventh year Thursday evening with a public installation of the officers who have been elected for the ensuing year. The deputy grand commander had charge of the ceremonies and was assisted by a staff composed of members of the Grand Commandery. Among the invited guests were the Rev. Dr. Hardy, the Rev. J. A. Matheson and the Rev. C. P. Marshall. They expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the manner in which the installations were made.

On behalf of the commandery, J. D. Mackay presented the retiring commander, George H. Jacques, with a gold watch charm bearing upon it certain symbols of the order, as a token of appreciation of the zeal and earnestness with which he had served the commandery. Mr. Jacques responded fittingly.

There was a large attendance, and the occasion was thoroughly enjoyed. Refreshments were served.

The following are the officers installed:

Knight-Commander, William Walker.
Generalissimo, C. H. Tower.
Capt.-General, R. A. Falconer.
Prelate, Robert Grier.
Recorder, D. T. McLachlin.
Asst. Recorder, William Allison.
Sword-bearer, Alex. Sinclair.
Standard bearer, John Tait.
Sentinel, Robert Sinclair.
Warder, A. Coutts.
First Guard, William Young.
Second Guard, William Sinclair.
Treasurer, Oscar A. Barron.

QUINCY RETURNS FIRST.

City Auditor Henry O. Fairbanks has received a letter from Charles F. Gettemy, director of the bureau of statistics of the state, congratulating him on being the first auditor to make annual returns of financial transactions for the last fiscal year, as required by law. This is the second time in three years that City Auditor Fairbanks has been the first to make his returns.

LOUD—WILSON.

Mr. Herman St. John Loud, a well known Attleboro jeweler, and Miss Jeanette I. Wilson, daughter of the late Henry G. Wilson of Granite street, were married Thursday evening by Dr. Edwin N. Hardy. The wedding took place at the residence of Dr. Hardy and was very quiet owing to a recent death in the family of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of Boston University in the class of 1904 and received the degree master of arts in 1904. She taught school for a time in Quincy and then accepted a position as teacher in the public schools of Plainville. Mr. and Mrs. Loud will reside in Attleboro, in a new house recently purchased, where they will be at home after July 1.

TODAY'S COURT.

Peter Hendre was araigned for assault on Michael Joseph at Quincy. Case continued until Saturday for hearing.

ESCAPES OPERATION

Prince Adalbert's Attack of Appendicitis Is Not Serious

Kiel, March 10.—A bulletin issued by the attending physician on Prince Adalbert's condition says that the attack of appendicitis from which he is suffering is light, and that an operation will not be necessary.

The emperor and empress, who have been with the prince since Wednesday morning, started for Berlin last night.

TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENTS

Important Measures Before West Quincy Association

A well attended meeting of the West Quincy Improvement association was held Thursday evening with President Little presiding. There were discussions on several matters relating to the welfare of this section of the city.

It was reported that the Park Commissioners had asked the City Council for an appropriation to put the playground lot at the junction of Copeland, Common and West streets in repair, and Joseph McPherson was appointed a committee to confer with the Park Commissioners in relation to the same.

The matter of the missing railway link between East Milton and Adams street, Dorchester, was again discussed, after which a committee was appointed to take the matter up with the Boston Elevated to see if something could not be done. The committee appointed were, Rev. Henry T. Grady, Hon. William T. Shea, James H. Elcock, Joseph Walker, John Evans, W. F. Lakin, Robert Newcomb, and Stephen B. Little.

It was also voted to request Representatives Langelier and Thomas to take up the use of 12-ride books on the railroad with proper authorities, to see if it could not be arranged so that these books would be good on either the main or branch line. Under the present arrangement a 25 ride book ticket will be accepted for passage between Boston and West Quincy, or Boston and Quincy. The 12-ride books however are limited to the stations named on the ticket. This often works a hardship and what the association desires is that the 12 as well as the 25-ride tickets shall be good on either line.

There was some little discussion on the matter of the five-cent fare between West Quincy and Milton Lower Mills, mornings and nights, for the West Quincy people employed at Milton, and much dissatisfaction was expressed at the way the association were being used by the railway company.

STATE HOUSE LEGISLATION

Senator Barnes a Leader for Trust Company Tax

The Committee on Liquor Laws reported 7 to 4 against the repeal of the Bar and Bottle bill.

The Senate passed to be engrossed after a heated debate the bill to tax deposits in the savings departments of trust companies. Senator Barnes of this district led in debate in favor of the bill. He claimed there was wholesale tax evasion on the part of rich depositors in availing themselves of the tax exemption enjoyed by the trust companies in their savings departments. He claimed their business was not a real savings bank business in that the deposits of the rich and not the poor are there.

The committee on labor reported a bill to prohibit the employment of women in manufacturing or mercantile establishments for a period of two weeks preceding or four weeks after childbirth.

Ways and means reported ought to pass, on bill permitting the retirement of judges of the superior court, Representative Conway of Boston dissenting.

The same committee reported ought not to pass, on bill providing that towns of less than $1,000,000 valuation shall be reimbursed for high school expenses. Representative White of Newton dissenting.

Leave to withdraw was reported on several bills.

TO PRESENT JAPANESE PLAY.

Founder's day exercises will be held in the reception hall of Woodward Institute this evening. John D. Buckingham is in charge of the musical part of the program, which includes chorus work and a solo by Esther Dasha, '12.

Miss Georgianna C. Lane has charge of the second part which is to be a Japanese play entitled "Princess Kiku." The dainty costumes and pleasing lines promise to gain greater beauty through the instrumentality of the young ladies who have been working faithfully under the direction of Miss Lane in getting ready for the play.

THE OFFICIAL PLAYING RULES.

The 1911 Reach Official American League Guide contains that most important requisite to give it official stamp and public value, namely, the revised and correct new uniform Playing Rules Code for 1911, together with the 1911 championship schedules of American League, National League and various important minor leagues. The legislation and results of the annual meetings of the American League and National League are also set forth. In short, everything of interest or value either for record or reference will be found within the covers of this great book. The Reach American League Guide for 1911 is for sale by all newsdealers at 10 cents per copy.

SURPRISE AND PRESENTATION.

A very enjoyable surprise party was given to Miss Annie Lund of Mt. Ararat road, Thursday evening, in Electa hall. Miss Lund had a bad fall on the steps between Dixwell avenue and Glendale road in the winter, which resulted in a broken arm. This incapacitated, she has been unable to work since. A committee of four girls, with Gertrude Johnson as chairman, and Alice Loddengaard, Anna Carlson and Olga Lundquist as the other members, arranged for this surprise party, and their efforts were extremely successful. Schubert's orchestra gave its services free, and furnished excellent music for the dancing. In the latter part of the evening refreshments were served and the presentation was made. A sum of money amounting to almost $60 was given to the young woman, together with a fine bunch of carnation pinks.

ARRESTED FOR ASSAULT.

Peter Hendee was arrested by Officer Thorne on Thursday for assault on Michael Joseph in the Fore River district. Hendee recently lost his job at the shipyard and he claims that Joseph was the cause of it. The two men met Thursday and Hendee sought to avenge himself. A first class fight was in progress when the officer interfered.

THE PHILATHEAS.

At the meeting of the Philatheas in Bethany chapel Thursday evening a very interesting address was given by Mrs. Zaitses of Boston. The speaker is a Greek who has been in this country for over 30 years, and has for some years conducted mission work among Greek young women in Boston, and surrounding towns. Mrs. Zaitses spoke of the work she and her husband are doing and told of the life the Greek girls lived before they came to this country. After the address, Miss Ruth Murray played selections on the piano and then the gathering was placed in the hands of the refreshment committee, consisting of Mrs. Everett Wheeler and Miss Alicia Keene. A most enjoyable evening was spent by all who were present.

MASQUERADE

in fantastic costumes. Colored gentlemen, a Turk, Germans, Rubes, Clowns, and so on were among the costumes of the instrumentalists. Not a little amusement was furnished by one of the horn blowers who had a red searchlight on the end of a six-inch nose, which he illuminated on auspicious occasions. The same gentleman had a collapsible plug hat which was worked by a rope. At intervals he pulled the rope and pressed the button, causing the hat to collapse on his head and the sun to rise on the end of his nose. The band played very well and received much applause, as it circled about the room and finally halted in the centre forming a ring round the drum major.

The judges were confronted by a task worthy of Sherlocko, the monk, in picking out the best and the funniest costumes. After considerable discussion and many waggings of the head, the prizes were finally awarded to the following:

Best costume for women—Miss Minnie aBrnicoat, French court costume.

Best costume for men—F. B. Davis, brigadier.

Most comical for women—Miss Badger, Aunt Dinah.

Most comical for men—Fred Merrill, as chinaman.

The prizes were a Grecian vase and hatpins for the ladies, and a silk umbrella and a pipe rack for the men. The choice of the Chinamen for most comical was a good one. The wearer of the costume looked the part to perfection and his walk and talk and actions in general were very clever imitations of the real thing.

The Suffragette, or future woman, impersonated by Clifford Taylor, caused much amusement. The hat was of black straw trimmed with red poppies, cutaway coat and baggy trousers, with a wide lace ruffle meeting bright green stockings completed the costume.

Wilson's orchestra was at its best, which means that no other comments are necessary.

After the intermission the masqueraders began to feel their oats a little, and all entered into the spirit of the occasion with enthusiasm. After the unmasking took place about 75 more couple were admitted to the ball room and the floor was given a severe test to see how many people it could hold. The gallery was filled with interested spectators throughout the evening.

During the moonlight waltzes the man with the lightening bug on the end of his nose amused himself by going up to the gallery and flashing the light much to the wonderment of some of the ladies. As the clock was striking twelve, the last waltz was ended and the largest and most successful party ever given by the Encampment was all over.

BRIEFS

Whist party tonight of Gertrude A. Boyd auxiliary at G. A. R. hall.

Mrs. Frank Appleton and children are expected from Kansas City in a few days.

The Lady Associates at Houghs Neck will hold a dance at Brown's bungalow next Friday evening.

Charles W. Fosdick of Houghs Neck has accepted a position at Worcester and with Mrs. Fosdick has moved to that city.

Miss Annie Shaw contributed vocal solos at an entertainment at the Baptist church, Braintree, on Wednesday evening.

The body of Mrs. Robert Kent of Lowell was brought here for interment on Wednesday at St. Mary's cemetery. She formerly resided on Town hill.

Frederick Burgess, a Federal avenue boy, was run over at Dobles corner at noon on Thursday. No bones were broken, but he was badly bruised.

The house committee of the Cochato club, Braintree, has arranged for a dance in the club series of entertainments for this evening at the clubhouse. The annual pop concert comes on the twenty-fourth.

The many friends of Miss Abbie Sullivan of Eliot street, who returned from the Quincy Hospital this week much improved in health, are glad to see her about again. She will resume her duties at the Rice & Hutchins office next week.

It was announced at the communication of the Grand lodge of Masons on Wednesday that the Masonic home for Massachusetts would probably be dedicated May 25. Subscriptions of over $150,000 have been received. Rt. Wor. Hartley L. White, the deputy from this district was in attendance.

ST. PATRICKS SUPPER.

A St. Patricks Day supper was the feature of the monthly social held by the ladies in the vestries of the Wollaston Congregational church on Thursday evening. The salads and other delicacies of the repast were set off by decorations of Irish flags and shamrocks. Mrs. E. S. Tenney took those present on an interesting trip by stereopticon through A Sable Chasm. Composing the supper committee were: Mrs. George Fleming chairman, Mrs. George W. Stone, Mrs. Charles Aiden, Mrs. A. P. Thompson, Mrs. William Whitney, Mrs. Birce, Mrs. John Burke, Mrs. Waite, Mrs. Lysander W. Nash and Mrs. Herbert Marshall.

IS NOTHING TO EXCITE ALARM

Taft Reaffirms Official Story of Texas Maneuvers

THE FACTS POINT OTHERWISE

Orders of War and Navy Departments For Mobilization Being Rapidly Executed—Secret Leaking Out That Sending of Forces to Border Is Due to Spread of Revolution and Anti-American Feeling In Mexico

Washington, March 10.—President Taft has assured Mr. De la Barra, the Mexican ambassador to the United States, that the statement issued in Mexico City through the American embassy accurately presented the attitude of this government in sending 20,000 troops into Texas. He told De la Barra that troops were there for maneuvers, and that there was nothing in the movement that should excite alarm or unusual interest.

In spite of President Taft's declaration that there is nothing to excite unusual interest in the mobilization of our army and navy forces in close proximity to Mexico, all the preparations made point to the possibility of active service on the part of our troops.

They are supplied with ball cartridges, contrary to the invariable rule for peaceful maneuvers, and, moreover, the president, if there is nothing back of what he asserts, will be called strictly to account by the extra session of congress, soon to meet, a congress which would be only too glad to scrutinize the motives for spending the million or two of dollars which the maneuvers will cost.

The reports of the death or illness of President Diaz have now been effectually disposed of, and another reason than this must be sought for the action of the United States. Meantime the orders of the war and navy departments for the mobilization are being rapidly and smoothly executed.

Innumerable telegrams are being received by General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, reporting that all is going well. The staff officers, having set the machinery into motion, are enjoying a respite. The telegraphic advices indicate that all of the men ordered out are now moving rapidly southward with ample commissary and ammunition supplies.

The vessels of the armored cruiser division of the Atlantic fleet are ready at New York, and only waiting for the orders of the secretary of the navy. Already the first detachment of marines, 700 strong, are on the way from Philadelphia to Guantanamo. Another of equal strength will be ready to go today. The Pacific fleet, too, is preparing for action.

The real significance of the sudden mobilization of a quarter of the United States army and a formidable portion of the navy along the Mexican frontier and in the waters adjacent to the ends of the international boundary is gradually leaking out in Washington.

From various sources, yet without the possibility of official verification, credible admissions have been obtained, which, pieced together in the light of known facts, make up a whole that goes far to substantiate the interpretation placed by the public upon the great movement of military forces now in progress.

It is said that about the time of the return to Washington of Henry L. Wilson, ambassador of the United States to Mexico, the administration received advices indicating increasing unrest in Mexico and that the revolution, notwithstanding assertions of the Mexican government to the contrary, had extended in many directions. The whole country was said to be in a condition made the more serious by what was said to be a precarious state of the health of President Diaz.

There is known to be no little anti-American feeling among the Mexican people generally, and it was feared that developments at any moment might precipitate a chaotic condition with probable demonstrations against foreigners.

The designation of Major General Carter's staff was issued by the war department as follows:

Major General Carter, general staff, is assigned to the command of the division now being concentrated at San Antonio, Tex., and the following named officers are announced as his staff:

Colonel Mills, general staff, chief of staff; Captain Learnard, general staff, assistant to the chief of staff.

Captain Craig, general staff, assistant to the chief of staff. Lieutenant Colonel Ladd, adjutant general.

Major Bell, inspector general.

Major Winship, judge advocate.

Lieutenant Colonel McCarthy, deputy quartermaster general, chief quartermaster.

Lieutenant Colonel Birmingham, medical corps, chief surgeon.

TIED TO PONY'S TAIL

How a Young Papago Indian Was Condemned to Death

Yuma, Ariz., March 10.—With the wrist tied to the tail of a wild horse, the body of a Papago Indian was found yesterday by a detachment of the First United States cavalry on the edge of the Gila river, near Mesa. In order to secure the body it was necessary to shoot the horse.

It is believed that the young Indian had been condemned to die in this manner because of having violated some law of the tribe.

SHOOTS HER HUSBAND AND SON TO DEATH

Woman Then Attempts Own Life With a Revolver

Branford, Conn., March 10.—For a cause not yet determined, Mrs. Cora Wood, 47 years old, shot and killed her husband, Christopher, 50 years old, and her 11-year-old son, Valdemond, and then made what will probably be a successful attempt at suicide by shooting.

The murders weer discovered last night by an elder son, Walter, when he returned home from work. On going up to the second floor he first stumbled onto the body of his father lying fully dressed on the floor, with a bullet hole through the mouth.

His brother he found undressed and in bed, with a hole in the back of his head, and his mother unconscious, lying on the floor.

According to Walter his father and mother had had some slight difficulties over money matters. The mother and Valdemond were both seen around the house late in the afternoon.

Committee Votes Against Repeal of Massachusetts Liquor Law

Boston, March 10.—The legislative committee on liquor laws voted seven to four to report adversely on the bill providing for the repeal of the bar and bottle bill passed by the legislature last year.

The committee by the same vote turned down the bill to reclassify liquor licenses all over the state, which, in effect, would repeal the bar and bottle legislation. Debate will be held next week in the house and senate in an effort to override the committee's report.

The bill prohibits liquor being sold over the bar and in bottles in the same establishment.

FOUND IT EASY TO STEAL CASH

Bank Clerk Knew Too Much About Bookkeeping

MAKES A FRANK CONFESSION

Salary of Nine Dollars a Week Insufficient to Enable Him to Shine In Society, So He Helped Himself to Funds and Juggled Figures to Cover Up His Transactions—Neither Drank Nor Gambled

Pittsfield, Mass., March 10.—Trying "to keep his end up" and shine in good society was the cause of Arthur E. Feeley stealing $1500 to $2000 from the Third National bank, where he was up to recently employed as a clerk at $9 a week, the young man said in a frank confession to the authorities.

"I knew too much about bookkeeping," said Feeley. "I knew thoroughly the affairs of the bank and had a chance to take whatever I wanted. I worked at various times on all the books and had access to the cash. It was easy to juggle the figures on the profit and loss and other accounts of the general ledger and to take $100 whenever I needed it.

"When I got shy of cash I would juggle the figures, cover up my tracks completely and take the money. That was all there was to it. Some of my transactions were so completely covered up that it would take the bank a long time to discover them if I had not decided to help them out.

"After I was discharged from the bank I realized that I would be discovered, and simply had to make a confession. You don't know what a relief it was.

"It was hell while it lasted. I simply desired to live beyond my means, that was all there was to it. I have never played poker or the stock market and have never drunk intoxicating liquor. I had a good time going to the theatre, driving, and in these and other ways I liked to spend money."

Feeley was arraigned before United States Commissioner Wood. Bail was fixed at $2500 and the date for the hearing was set March 15.

The bank has been given by relatives and friends of Feeley a sum sufficient to cover the estimated amount of the shortage. The exact amount of the discrepancy has not yet been determined, but it is thought not to be greatly in excess of $2000. In the complaint against Feeley, Bank Examiner Smith places the amount at $2000.

Feeley, who is 26 years old, entered the employ of the bank six years ago, after having pursued a two year course of study at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Failed Boston Brokers Lost $2,400,457 by Their Own Investments

Boston, March 10.—The failed brokerage firm of Sederquist, Barry & Co. up to Feb. 15, 1909, had lost by its own investments in the stock market $2,400,457.16, it was admitted by a former bookkeeper of the firm. The admission came during the examination of the company's books at the trial of the four members of the firm for conspiracy and thefts before Judge Jenney and a jury.

The admission followed the discovery of an account under the name of W. I. Curtis. This represented the account of Sederquist & Barry's own investments, according to the testimony of E. E. George, the former bookkeeper, on the witness stand.

STATUE TO BE DESTROYED

Medical Students Object to Commemorating Sufferings of Dog

London, March 10.—The borough council of Battersea has decreed that the famous "brown dog" statue be destroyed. The statue was erected several years ago in Batersea park to commemorate the sufferings of a little dog used for months in vivisection experiments in a London hospital.

It was the cause of scores of demonstrations on the part of medical students, and finally was removed by order of the borough council. The donor of the statue, however, recently brought suit to compel the council to restore it.

SWINDLED OUT OF $52,000

American Falls Into the Hands of Card Sharpers In Paris

Paris, March 10.—Three men claiming to be Italian noblemen were arrested here, charged with fleecing Lelvin Hart, a young American, out of $52,000 in card games.

Hart says they took him to various gambling places and systematically swindled him with marked cards.

Open Switch Causes Wreck

Newcastle, N. B., March 10.—One passenger was killed and several others injured when the Maritime express, from Halifax for Montreal, crashed into a local train at Derby Junction. The accident was due to an open switch.

ASKS FOR TRADING STAMPS

Woman Cheerfully Pays Fine After Beating Her Rival

Muncie, Ind., March 10.—"Certainly, judge; do you give trading stamps?"

Mrs. Edna N. S. Steinbrook asked the question after being informed $1 and costs meant $11 to pay, and she reached into her pocketbook and offered a $10 bill and two silver half dollars. Judge Feely treated the question seriously.

During the day Mrs. Steinbrook appeared at police headquarters and asked to have her husband arrested for being with an unmarried woman, Violina Dewees. She departed without the warrant, treatening personal vengeance.

She found the pair together and sailed in. When she had finished, Violina was the worse for wear and tear. Several "rats" had been lifted from her hair and her curly marguerites were all awry.

GOOD HOUSEWIVES
Make This Cough Syrup.

To quickly cure the most stubborn cough and break up a cold in six to eight hours, there can be nothing better than the following simple remedy, for it has been tried in thousands of cases with wonderful success. Its popularity is increasing because of its cheapness and positive curative virtues.

Obtain of druggist a 2 1-2 oz. package of Essence Mentho-Laxene; empty into a pint bottle. Then make a syrup by pouring a half pint of boiling water over a pint of granulated sugar. Stir, cool and fill up the bottle with syrup. Full directions for use are enclosed in the package. This home-made syrup effects a saving too, of from two to three dollars as compared with labeled cough medicines.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The white haired old butler came at last to show him the way to his luxurious lodgings on the second floor of the mansion.

With a touch of hospitality which carried Blount back to his one winter in the south, the hostess went with him as far as the stair foot, and her "Good night" was still ringing musically in his ears when the old negro lighted the acetylene in the guest room, put another stick of wood on the small fire that was crackling and snapping cheerfully on the hearth and bobbed and bowed his way to the door.

Blount saw his last chance for better information vanishing for the night and once more broke with the traditions.

"Uncle Barnabas, suppose you tell me where I am before you go," he suggested. "Whose house is this?"

The old man stopped on the threshold, chuckling gleefully. "A-ain't you know dat, sah? A-ain't Mis' Honoria done tell you dat? You's at Wa'trace Hall, Mahsteh Majah's country house. Yes, sah, dat's whah you is—kee, hee!"

"And who is 'Master Major?'" pressed Blount, whose bewilderment grew with every fresh attempt to dispel it.

"A-ain't she tell you dat? Kee, hee! Ev'body knows Mahsteh Majah; yes, sah. Ef Mis' Honoria ain't tell you ole Barnabas ain't gwine to. No, sah. Ah'll bring yo' all's coffee in de mawnin'; yes, sah. Good night, sah. Kee, hee!" And the door closed silently upon the wrinkled old face and the bobbing head.

Having nothing else to do, Blount went to bed, but sleep came reluctantly.

Whither had a curiously tricky fate led him? Where was Wartrace Hall, and who was Mahsteh Majah? Who was the winsome little lady who looked as if she might be twenty and who had all the wit and wisdom of the ages at her tongue's end?

These and kindred speculations kept him awake for a long hour after the door had closed behind the ancient negro, and he was just dropping off into his first loss of consciousness when the familiar purring of a motorcar aroused him again.

There was a window at his bed's head, and he reached over and drew the curtain.

The view gave upon the avenue of cottonwoods and the circular carriage approach.

A touring car, with its powerful headlights paling the white radiance of the moon, was drawn up at the steps, and he had a fleeting glimpse of a big man, swathed from head to heel in a dust coat, descending from the tonneau.

"I suppose that is Mahsteh Majah," he mused sleepily. "That's why the little lady was sitting up so late and why she had the tea things out. She was waiting for him." Then to the thronging queries, threatening to return and keep him awake: "Scat! Go away! Call it a pipe dream and let me go to sleep!"

CHAPTER V.

AT WARTRACE HALL.

WHEN Evan Blount opened his eyes on the morning following the night of singular adventures the sun was shining brightly in at the bed's head window, a cheerful fire was crackling on the hearth, and his father, a little heavier, a little grayer, but with the same rugged face and kindly eyes, was standing at his bedside.

"Evan, boy!" and "Father!" were the only words of greeting, but the mighty hand grip that went with them was for Evan a renewal of his boyhood and a sufficient promise for the future.

Followed instantly a rush of mingled emotions; of astoundment that he had recognized no familiar landmark in the midnight faring through the hills or on the approach to the home of his childhood; of something like a keen regret that the old had given place so thoroughly and completely to the new; of something bordering on chagrin that he had been surprised into accepting the hospitable advances of a woman whom he had been intending to avoid and for whom he had cherished—and meant to cherish—a contemptuous disregard.

But at the hand gripping moment there was no time for a nice weighing of emotions. He was in his father's house, the homecoming, some phases of which he had vaguely dreaded, was a fact accomplished, and the new life—the life that was to be lived without Patricia—was fairly begun. Also there were arrears to be brought up.

"Did the little—er—did Mrs. Blount tell you that I was here?"

"She did, but she couldn't tell me much more. How on top of earth did you happen to blow in at midnight with Jack Barto for your herd leader?"

"It's a fairy tale, and you won't believe it—of a Blount," was the laughing reply. "I left Boston Monday and should have reached the capital last night. But my train was laid out behind a freight wreck at Aretas just before dark, and I left it and took to the hills—horseback. Don't ask me why. The smell of the sagebrush was in my nostrils, and I had to do it. I knew where I was, and I thought I could ride to Debbleby's, so I hired the broncho and pitched out. I think I kept the general direction all right until I got lost among the Lost river hogbacks, but after that I was pretty successfully lost."

"And Barto found you?" queried the senator.

"Who is this ubiquitous Barto who goes around playing the holdup one minute and the good angel the next?"

"He is a sort of general utility man for Hathaway, the head pusher of the Twin Buttes Lumber company. He is supposed to be a timber cruiser and log scaler, but I guess he doesn't work much at his trade. Down in the lower wards of New York they'd call him a heeler maybe. But you don't mean to tell me that Jack Barto robbed you, son?"

"No; he was merely discussing with his two fellow holdups the advisability of knocking me on the head and dropping me into Lost River canyon; that was all. Of course I knew they had fallen upon the wrong man, and after awhile I succeeded in making Barto accept that hypothesis. At least he accepted it sufficiently to bring me here for identification. Since he wouldn't talk and I didn't recognize the trail or the place I hadn't the slightest notion of my whereabouts—not the least in the world."

The big man was leaning against the foot rail of the bed and frowning thoughtfully. "Talked about dropping you into Lost river, did they? H'm! We'll have to look into that a little, I guess. Who set them on, son? Got any idea of that?"

"I have a very good idea—a man who came across in the Pullman with me from Omaha; tall and rather slim and with a hatchet face and owlish eyes. I didn't learn his name, but he said he was interested in mines and timber."

"That was Hathaway himself," was the instant decision. "His company has been cutting timber in the Lost river reserve, and he probably thought you were chasing him. You didn't know Honoria?"

"No; I wasn't expecting—I—you may remember that I had never met her," stammered the young man, who had risen to his elbow among the pillows.

The father walked away to the window and stood looking out upon the distant mountains for a full minute before he turned to say gently: "We may as well run the boundary lines on this one time as another, son. You don't like Honoria. You've made up your mind not to like her. I'm not going to make it hard for either of you if I can help it. This is her home, but it is also yours, my boy. Do you reckon you could"—

Evan Blount made haste to stop the half pathetic appeal.

"Don't let that trouble you," he interposed. "I—Mrs. Blount is a very different person from the woman I have been imagining, and if she were not I think we are both sufficiently civilized not to quarrel." Then: "Have you breakfasted yet—you and Mrs. Blount? But of course you have long ago."

"Breakfasted? Without you? Not much, son. And that reminds me I was to come up and see if you were awake, and if you were I was to send Barnabas up with your coffee."

"You may tell Barnabas that I haven't acquired the coffee in bed habit yet," laughed the lazy one, sitting up. "And you may make my apologies to Mrs. Blount and tell her I'll be down 'pronto.' There, doesn't that sound as if I were getting back to the good old sagebrush idiom? Great land! I haven't heard anybody say 'pronto' since I was knee high to a hoptoad!"

In all his forecastings Evan Blount had never pictured a homecoming like this. In each succeeding hour of the day the edges of the chasm of the years drew closer together, and when finally his father put him on a horse and rode with him to a corner of the vast home farm, a corner fenced off by sentinel cottonwoods and watered by the small irrigation ditch of his boyhood recollections, rode with him through the screening cottonwoods and showed him, lying beyond them, the old ranch buildings of the Circle Bar, untouched and undisturbed, his heart was full, and a sudden mist came before his eyes to dim the picture.

"I've kept it just as it used to be, Evan," his father said gently. "I thought maybe you'd come back some day and be sure enough disappointed if it were gone."

The younger man slipped from his saddle and went to look in at the open door of the old ranch house. Everything was precisely as he remembered it—the simple, old fashioned furniture, the crossed quirts over the high wooden mantel, his mother's rocking chair—that was the final touch. He sat down on the worn door log and put his face in his hands, for now the gaping chasm of the years was quite closed, and he was a boy again.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

White Railroad Firemen Object to the Promotion of Negroes

Cincinnati, March 10.—White firemen of the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas railroad struck last night because of a controversy over negro firemen.

The strike is due to a dispute as to the status of negro firemen. The union asserts that the working agreement with the road provides that negroes are ineligible to any work except on local and slow freight trains and on yard engines. The railroad disputes this and asserts that their negro employes are entitled to promotion on the same terms as the white men.

About 220 firemen are on the roster of the road.

Naval Commander Says Sailors Are Insulted In Portsmouth

Portsmouth, N. H., March 10.—In protest at alleged discrimination against United States sailors by amusement house proprietors, Commander Cooper of the U. S. S. Marietta has sent an open letter to Mayor Badger.

He threatens to urge strongly upon his men to leave Portsmouth when on shore leave and get other commanders to do the same thing unless the mayor can assure sailors in uniform that they could attend any moving picture show or dance without being insulted.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

COLONIAL THEATRE.

Commencing Monday night, Jos. M. Gaites' charming musical play "The Girl of My Dreams" enters on its third week at the Colonial Theatre. The play, the dances and the lines throughout are clean, wholesome and possessed of that delightful sparkle that recalls to the mind of the bon-vivant the mellow flow of rare old champagne when congenial souls gather of an innocent night "over the walnuts and wine." The co-stars of the play accept their honor gracefully and ably discharge the debt they owe the paying public. Miss McIntyre has a winning manner, a beautiful face, a sweet voice and two active feet to help her success and she does everything with a skill and charm that silences criticism. Mr. Hyams, a very good light comedian, makes a capital team-mate for Miss McIntyre. His dancing and his polite fooling greatly benefit the performance. "The Girl of My Dreams" will delight the children as well, for it has many features which will appeal to the young person. It is youthful in spirit,, a large proportion of its characters are school boys and girls, they romp and play games on the stage, one of the best being "Dear Little Games of Guessing" and finally children of a younger age are appealed to in the last song, when Leila McIntyre is nightly obliged to respond to encore after encore with "Dr. Tinkle Tinker of Old Toy Town." The final tableau disclosing the wonderful whirling Christmas tree, the dancing dolls, and Santa Claus himself, is all so redolent of the holiday, that the piece seems devised for that special period. In keeping with this atmosphere, beautiful toys will be presented to all children at the Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

JOHN HYAMS,
in The Girl of My Dreams, at the Colonial Theatre, Boston.

PARK THEATRE.

Possibly Representative Newton was indulging in a joke when he introduced into the lower house on Beacon Hill the other day Mrs. Charlotte Smith's bill to put a tax on bachelors. It would be ungallant to speculate for a moment upon the probability that Mrs. Smith herself was gently jibing at conditions in New England by mothering such a proposal. But many a joke intended as such has gathered force under a mask of ponderous solemnity and thus has precipitated situations disturbing to a nation. So, whatever Representative Newton's motive may have been in standing sponsor for a bachelor tax bill, it is fit that, before he goes further, his attention be called to a bachelor whose antics may be of value in determining whether the honorable representative shall cease his merry jest by repudiating the bill or be spurred onward to the imposition of tolls so onerous as to eliminate entirely the Massachusetts surplus of unwedded males. In James Forbes' comedy, "The Commuters," at the Park Theatre, there is a bachelor who needs to be studied by both friends and foes of his social status. Mr. Forbes has written a charming play, around this bachelor person, whose individuality and temperament baffle the feminine representation in the audience, first by arousing its ire and then its admiration. This footlight bachelor innocently draws the reprobation of the wives of all his friends, becomes unjustly the means of nearly disintegrating a happy hearthstone, and in the end is the chief instrument of reuniting the household of two. It is splendid bit of character drawing, as cleverly enacted, by the way, as it is conceived by the author. It might be a wise suggestion to the opponents of the Newton bill, if they fear for the consequences, to invite Mr. Forbes to argue before the committee. Or, better still why not have the committee—the whole Legislature for that matter—go down to see "The Commuters" and learn what great good can be accomplished by a bachelor. Many a Boston commuter has gone to Beacon Hill seeking relief and satisfaction. And didn't get either. But results would be reversed if Beacon Hill went to see "The Commuters."—Boston American.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Mr. Thomas E. Shea will return to the Boston Grand Opera house Monday evening, for a special spring engagement of two weeks in clean plays for the people. The opening play to be offered by this sterling American actor whose Boston popularity has been so firmly established for years, will be the massive and picturesque production of the thrilling religious drama "The Soldier of the Cross." Strange as it may seem the church and the drama were once closely allied. Our present day drama is an evolution, as far as the scenery, electrical effects and the thousand and one details that go to make up our modern drama, of the early Christian morality plays which were produced to inculcate good morals into the hearts and minds of the spectators. In "The Soldier of the Cross" the wonderful startling stage effect of an earthquake is vividly produced and also the wonderfully impressive eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, the most wonderful volcano in the world which at the time of this play buried with its ashes and lava, the city of Pompeii and which was only unearthed less than one hundred years ago. It is an inspiring play with a love interest deeply woven. The Prince in love with the slave girl, the father in search of his child, the fight of the gladiator to protect his daughter, and the destruction of the pagan god, culminating in the escape of the Christians in the midst of the terrible and awe-inspiring earthquake. "The Soldier of the Cross" will be presented Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday nights; also Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday matinees. On Wednesday and Saturday nights Mr. Shea will present "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The success of the Harvard Prize play, "The End of the Bridge," has been so immediate and emphatic, that John Craig has decided to continue it for a second week at the Castle Square, beginning next Monday. Ever since the opening performance, the audiences have filled the theatre to overflowing, and there has been no lack of praise both for the new play and its acting by Mr. Craig and members of his company. It is a decided triumph for Miss Florence Lincoln to have written a play that has succeeded from the outset, and a tribute to Mr. Craig's good judgment in offering the prize in open competition to college students, and in making his award to her. The cast will remain unchanged through the coming week.

Little Items of Interest in Towns About Quincy

Ex-Gov. Long addressed the Men's club of All Souls church, Braintree this week, on "Abraham Lincoln."

The Foxboro Board of Trade has declined to unite with the State Board of Trade.

Harvey H. Pratt of Cohasset addressed the Boston Law school on Thursday on "Federal procedure."

Miss F. Eleanor Vilet, '11, has been elected president of the Barnswallows at Wellesley college.

Mary Allan Thompson of Williams avenue, Hyde Park died on Wednesday in her 44th year.

Abington selectmen have organized with Winslow L. Jones as chairman and clerk.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth French, aged 83 years, was found dead this morning in a chair at the residence of her son, Walter French, at 184 Arlington street. Mrs. French had been suffering for the past few days with neuraliga pains. She retired Thursday night apparently as well as usual. It is supposed that she had an attach of neuraliga during the night and got up to see if it would not relieve the pain. She evidently seated herself in a chair, and it is thought that the neuraligia struck her heart causing death. When the family arose they went to call her, and found her dead in a chair. Mrs. French, whose maiden name was Adams, was born in Milton, Nov. 6, 1828. She married Sidney French who died some years ago. Of late she has been making her home with her son Walter in Wollaston.

ALLEGED SLAYER OF MOTHER AND SISTER

Vermont Youth Is Suspected of Committing Double Crime

Maidstone, Vt., March 10.—Mrs. Kate Bean, 56, and her 17-year-old daughter, Nina, wee killed yesterday afternoon, their heads being almost blown off by heavy calibre bullets fired at close range.

Arthur Bean, the 19-year-old son of Mrs. Bean, who ran to the railroad, a heavy calibre rifle in his hand, to tell some section hands that his mother and sister had been killed, has been placed in custody, locked up in a room in the same house in which are the dead bodies of his mother and sister.

In the house at the time of the murders was John Sweet. Mrs. Bean's father, a man said to be 103 years old, deaf and infirm. So upset was he by the tragedy that it was impossible to get him to talk coherently.

—Rabbi Charles Fleischer's successor at the Congregation Adath Israel in Boston is to be Rabbi Harry Levi of West Virginia, one of the leaders of the Jewish Chautauqua.

BRIEFS

Under the rules of the City Council no application for a license to collect junk or for a permit to transport liquor shall be received unless presented to the City Council on or before the first Monday in April.

The U. S. cruiser Des Moines built at Quincy has been ordered to sail from Boston Sunday morning for the gulf of Mexico. The torpedo boat Perkins also built at Quincy, will sail next Tuesday with torpedo supplies.

Mrs. Millard F. Baker of Walker street has returned from Cushing Hospital, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis. Many friends extend best wishes for a speedy recovery.

A regular meeting of the Wollaston club of the Y. M. C. A. was held in the Baptist church Thursday evening with a large attendance. The usual Bible study and Scout work held the attention of the boys throughout the evening.

The Bigelow street twins, Mary and Katharyn McDonald, are two years old today, and have been remembered with many gifts. These bright and healthy children, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John McDonald, attract lots of attention on the street daily in their twin carriage.

ALL AT WORK.

The adjusting committee of the Granite Manufacturers and Polishers met Thursday evening to try and traighten out the differences between the so-called high priced polishers and the manufacturers. Under the terms of settlement the men were to receive an increase of 25 cents per day. Some of the employers, however, had a side agreement of their own, not to pay the high price men, but a 15 cents increase. This caused several of the high price men to quit work. They were out only a few days, however, before they returned. Thursday night's meeting was without resut each side declaring it was right. As the men had returned to work the matter will probably be dropped.

His System of Self Defense.

"Have you ever studied the art of self defense?" said a young fellow to a man of magnificent physique and noble bearing.

The elder man looked at his questioner with a quiet smile and then answered thoughtfully:

"Yes, I have studied and practiced it."

"Ah!" said the other eagerly. "Whose system did you adopt?"

"Solomon's," was the reply.

Somewhat abashed, the youth stammered out: "Solomon's! What is the special point of his system of training?"

"Briefly this," replied the other: "'A soft answer turneth away wrath.'"

For the moment the young man felt an inclination to laugh and looked at his friend anxiously to see whether he was serious. But a glance at the accomplished athlete was enough, and soon a very different set of feelings came over the youth as his muscular companion added, with silent emphasis, "Try it."—Christian Endeavor World.

—Chief Charles E. Gettemy has done a most excellent work in calling attention to the gross abuses of municipal borrowing which have prevailed in some cities and towns in Massachusetts. In one case $1,000 was borrowed 60 years ago at 6 per cent. and the town gave a note which has been continually renewed. On that the town actually has paid nearly $4000 and still owes the face of the note. By reinvesting the interest when received and doubling every ten years, the holder of the note could have realized some $30,000 and still held his note—Waltham Free Press.

GIANTS DID THE TRICK

And the Red Sox Must Hustle to Keep Lead

The Red Sox will not find it easy to shake the Giants, for the latter also won by four straight this week, and are in the same position as a week ago, one point behind the Red Sox. The teams are now in three groups for the Pirates have nearly overtaken the Cubs, and the Athletics and Tigers are struggling to keep out of last place.

The standing to date in the Makaria league is:

	Won.	Lost
Red Sox	37	19
Giants	36	20
Cubs	28	28
Pirates	26	30
Tigers	22	34
Athletics	20	36

GIANTS—CUBS.

It looked like a close contest when the Cubs met the Giants on Thursday evening, and the latter won the first game by one pin. But they took the second also by 20 pins, and the third by 27 pins and led by 48 on totals.

R. Bates was high on singles and J. Dill on totals.

The summary:

GIANTS

Bonney	68	86	84	238
S. Bates	77	73	77	227
Collins	84	67	87	238
Dell	83	85	87	255

BILLY NIXON GOT DECISION

In a Ten Round Bout with Tommy Rawson

The attendance at the boxing matches at the Coliseum Thursday evening, held under the auspices of the Quincy Rowing Association was even larger than that of the opening night of a week ago. While the bouts were interesting ones, they were not quite as good as the first night, as the men were not so evenly matched. Only one of the three bouts went the full ten rounds. This was the last one and was very fast and clean.

The first bout was between Beano Breen of Boston, and Joe Nelson of Lawrence. This was called in the sixth round by Referee Clougherty, who gave the decision to Nelson. Green wanted to go on, but the referee would not allow him to do so.

The second bout was to have been between Bob LaFavour of Brockton and Joe Gary of Boston. LaFavour, however, had recently had an operation performed on his nose and did not appear. Young Sullivan of Brockton was put on in LaFavour's place. From the very first it was seen that he was outclassed, and the bout was stopped in the third round.

The bout of the evening was between Tommy Rawson of East Boston and Billy Nixon of Cambridge. This was a fine exhibition and was fast and clean from start to finish. As the bout proceeded Nixon seemed to hold his strength the better of the two and got the decision.

Although the audience was a large one it was perfectly orderly, and there was no disturbance of any sort. No one but members were admitted.

LOCAL SPORTS.

The two local football teams of the Boston Association league will meet on Saturday at the Water street grounds at 3.45 to decide the championship. That Quincy has the two best teams in the State in the Fore Rivers and McGregors has long been known, and this should be a great contest. The league pennant will be awarded to the victors.

A ten mile road race will be run on April 1 under the aupices of the Italian American A. C. The course designated is one mile in length with the start at the corner of Canal street, thence to Coddington by way of Washington, down Codington to Canal, and back to the start. Entries may be made with Frank Bruce up to Friday night, Mar. 31. It is probable that some relay races will be run in connection with the distance event. The Y. M. C. A. and St. Mary's C. T. A. and M. R. will probably meet in one of these races.

The Quincy Rowing association will run an athletic event on April 19. A ten mile race over the course used during Merchant's week last year will be open to all amateurs. The race will probably have the sanction of the A. A. U.

The Holy Name Society of St. John's church is planning a Field day for June 17. The society will support a baseball team this year. The committee chosen at a recent meeting consists of the following: George Fallon, Ralph Ford, Walter Ferguson and John Igo.

The Quincy High school baseball team should be of winning calibre this year. "Bill" Manning, manager of the team, has arranged 14 games, and still has 7 open dates.

The basketball season of the local teams will close Saturday evening. Makaria 1st and 2nd teams will have it out hot and heavy. The Y. M. C. A. first will play the M. D's. The lineup of the latter will be: Dr. Sargent and Dr. Maloney forwards, Dr. Hardwick centre. Dr. Monroe, Dr. F. E. Jones and Dr. Reardon backs. Substitutes Dick Jones, L. F. LaRose, E. G. Gay, Charles Parker, Dr. Lynch and Dr. Reynolds.

The second team will play the All Stars a team composed of Intermediates and Employed Boys.

Plymouth Cordage baseball team will not be represented on the diamond this season.

The first business meeting of the Ramblers will be held on March 28, at the Chapman boys home on Willow street, Wollaston. As there are a few vacancies on the team all are invited to attend this meeting at 7.30 that wish to get a try out.

The Atlantic nine will be out strong this year but does not expect to play many games at home.

The annual gymnastic exhibition of the Junior class of the Y. M. C. A., will take place this evening in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The regular setting up exercises will be folowed by apparatus work. A potato relay race between Harvard, Princeton and Carlilse, three of the groups of boys, will be of interest. A basketball game between the Y. M. C. A. Juniors and the Cranch school team wil practically degcide the Junior championship of the city. Barlel boxing, chicken fights, Indian wrestling and other features will furnish much amusement for the audience.

GIVES ADVICE TO NEGROES

Roosevelt Says Technical Education Will Lead to Their Salvation

Atlanta, Ga., March 10.—Tifeodore Roosevelt delivered the first speech of what he has announced as his last speech-making tour when he talked to negroes of this city.

The great need of technical education among the negroes as a step toward the solution of the race problem in the south was the keynote of his talk.

He cited figures to show that the vast majority of the population of Georgia was engaged in agricultural pursuits, but declared that between 250,000 and 300,000 of these were illiterate and unskilful laborers, and as such could not hope to better their condition or make themselves necessary to the white race.

"It is the common school, not the high university," he said, "which is the foundation of American citizenship."

Protest Against a Freight Yard on Washington Street

Editors Daily Ledger:

On behalf of those people who have been for many years striving for the improvements of our city, I most strenuously protest against a trolley freight depot being located on Washington street, one of our principal thoroughfares, in the heart of the city, near our finest public buildings, and when it would seriously interfere with the great amount of travel over Washington street.

Our public buildings ought not to have a freight yard in their immediate neighborhood. The famous old Unitarian church, the beautiful Thomas Crane public library and the handsome new post office are entitled to have their surroundings as harmonious as it is possible to get them.

The writer believes that the establishment of a trolley freight yard in this locality would so depreciate property round about that it would be fit neither for the better class of business nor for residential purposes, that it would have a tendency to so run down the neighborhood that it would become a sort of slum, and that too, where the thousands of strangers passing through Quincy to Nantasket would see it and where it would do our finest buildings the most harm.

There are other convenient locations especially on side streets where little if any injury too the property of the city would be done, and where the inconvenience to travel would be inconsiderable. Hundreds of pedestrians, drivers of vehicles of all kinds would necessarily be inconvenienced if a freight yard were established at the proposed site on Washington street. The danger of accidents would be greatly increased by congesting a street already too narrow for the great amount of travel now going over it, a street where serious accidents have already taken place; a street liable to accidents on account of certain cross streets.

Freight cars crossing the road, auto trucks and express wagons waiting in the street for an opportunity to get into the freight yard would hold up traffic even with every precaution taken, the danger of serious accident would be great. An auto truck running out of the freight yard from behind the depot would suddenly cut across the main thoroughfare, where hundreds of pleasure vehicles, coal carts, express wagons, electric cars and automobiles daily pass.

In the interest of the welfare and safety of the citizens, the convenience of the travelling public and the preservation of the beauties of our public buildings, let every public spirited citizen and organization appeal at once to our Mayor and Council and to the street railway officials to change the proposed site. R. We Easy.

HOW MANY TIMES
DOES YOUR WIFE
HAVE TO DARN
one pair of socks of the kind you are now wearing? Do YOU know? SHE does! You can do away with darning now by using the new hosiery for men, which will wear much longer than any you have ever used before. The marvelous wearing strength is due to the new with which every pair is equipped.

If you haven't tried them yet you get a pair and test them. You will be very much surprised to find a fine lisle sock that will really wear better than any you have worn, even those which are heavy in weight.

SCHOOLHOUSE BIDS OPENED

Cost of Montclair School in Excess of Appropriation

Bids were opened by the Commissioner of Public Works this morning for the erection of the proposed eight room school building to be erected at Montclair for which the City Council has appropriated the sum of $45,000. Also for the plumbing.

It is very evident however from the bids that this sum will not be sufficient, provided even if the contract should be awarded to the lowest bidder, as will readily be seen by the following summary:

Construction,	$37,375
Plumbing	3,106
Architects fees	2,250
Total	$42,731

To this must be added the cost for heating and ventilating, the bids for which will be opened next Monday. The estimated cost of this work is between $5,000 and $6,000. Taking the smaller sum it will be seen that the total will amount to at least $47,600.

The bids opened this morning were as follows:

FOR BUILDING.

Dennis F. Crowley	$37,375
W. F. Kearns Co.	37,985
John W. Duff	39,825
Dillon Bros.	41,187

GYMNASTIC EXHIBITION

Great Sport by Juniors of the Y. M. C. A.

The annual gymnastic exhibition of the Junior class of the Y. M. C. A. was held in the gymnasium Friday evening.

The opening number was a calesthenic drill by the whole class, followed by maze running led by Leslie Andrews.

Apparatus work on parallel bars, side horse, mat and buck, followed the preliminary work.

The potato relay race was won by the Carlisle team, Capt. Arenberg; Princeton, Captain Daniels was second; and Harvard, Captain Robertson was third.

The Indian wrestling championship was won by M. Arenberg.

Two group games were next on the program. Corn cutter was won by Arenberg and Indian club circle by Leslie Andrews.

A barrel boxing exhibition between "Pete" Williams and Guy Shaw was won by the former. The boys were stationed in barrels facing each other, an arm's length apart. The first man to topple over was vanquished.

A chicken fight between Kenneth Briggs and Joe Robinson was declared a tie. Dan Brundage defeated James Jenkins.

The Indian club race was won by the Brown team, Captain Roache. Tufts, Captain Sutermeister, was second; and Yale, Captain Andrews, third.

The basketball game between Cranch school and Y. M. C. A. Juniors was won by the former with a score of 16 to 8.

The annual banquet of Div. 5, A. O. H. and Auxiliary No. 10. will be held next Thursday evening in A. O. H. hall. A musical program of a high and refined order will be rendered by select talent. Mayor William T. Shea and other distinguished invited guests will be present. Addresses will be given by Congressman James M. Curley and ex-Congressman William S. McNary.

FOUNDERS' DAY AT THE WOODWARD

Excellent Musical Program Followed by a Very Clever Japanese Play

All Three Classes Represented in the Cast

Founder's day was observed at Woodward Institute on Friday in a manner somewhat similar to that of former years. The evening exercises comprised two selections by the school chorus, "The Maid and the Violet" and "Berceuse," a solo by Miss Estha Dasha, "Esmerelda" and a Japanese play "Princess Kiku," with a cast of seventeen girls.

The musical part of the program met with the heartiest approval of the audience. John D. Buckingham, the musical director of the school, played the accompaniments. The soprano and alto parts were well balanced, and all showed the results of careful training. A violin obligato played by Miss Ruth Keating, '10, added much to the effectiveness of the second selection by the chorus. The solo by Estha Dasha was greatly appreciated by the audience. The enunciation was good and the tones had the clearness and sweetness of a silver bell.

The play had all the daintiness and quaintness of the Japanese. One was given an opportunity to get a good, and probably a correct impression of the life and customs of unenlightened Japan before the barbarian English-speaking people had invaded her shores to any great extent. The superstitious belief in charms and curses was brought out very well.

When the curtains were drawn aside at the opening of the play, a scene of really great beauty was in evidence In the foreground on the right side was a huge bank of richly colored chrysanthemums. A terrace in the background was covered with wisteria in full bloom.

The dainty little ladies in waiting, wearing pretty kimonas and with chrysanthemums in their hair, completed the picture.

During the course of the play the audience was delighted by the touches of Japanese local color, the continual bowing, the pigeon-like method of walking and the quaint speech.

Several very pleasing little dances were introduced into the play which added not a little to the success of its production. O Mimosa San and O Yuki San danced in the first act, and O Totmai San and O Haru San contributed their dance near the end of the play. One of the prettiest features was a solo dance by O Yuki San.

The moonbeam fairies performed very ably and called forth much applause when they executed the various figures with garlands and torches.

The plot of the play was simple but of sufficient interest to hold the audience. The parts were well taken and the contribution of each was essential to the complete success of the play.

Beryl Turner as Princess Kiku was very good and the parts of the more active ladies in waiting received justice at the hands of Margaret Goodspeed, Sybil Marsh, Stella Brown and Helen Clark. The difficult part of Sakara was interpreted by Edith Mullen with marked ability and Eva Frazier as Ito made a perfect little Japanese boy. Rachel Hardwick as Lady Cavendish carried herself with all the assurance and sang froid of an English lady of means.

Perhaps the best bit of acting was done by Caroline Sprague who took the part of Miss Prendergast. Her voice and manner filled the requirements of the part perfectly and one

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

"Don't say 'politics is crooked,'" enjoins the Brooklyn Standard Union. No; say "politics are crooked." That's nearer the comprehensive truth.

The world is getting better. There were only two arrests las t year of presidents for looting banks, under their charge.

A woman who has been married eight times confesses that she knew not what love was until she read Laura Jean Libbey, Never mind! Some day she may meet Nat Goodwin.

If the excellent health of many of our great financiers has as much market value as their rumored indispositions, what a bull market we would have.

To be perfectly frank, isn't it rather risky to predict that Canada will not be annexed until we know whether Carnegie, Rockefeller or Morgan wants that section of this terrestrial ball?

It is good to see the increased interest of parents in the welfare of the schools attended by their children as indicated by the formation of Parents' clubs. Recent additions to these clubs are the Cranch and the Adams school associations. Anything bringing parents, teachers and pupils together is to be commended and is sure to have great influence on the school work. Most every school in the city now has such an organization.

There is a growing feeling among the merchants of the city that there should be more frequent postal connection between the sections of our city. It is easier to get a letter from Boston, Somerville, Cambridge or some other town miles away than from Wollaston or Atlantic or vice versa. There should be direct and frequent mails between all sections of our city. The service in some respects is not as good since we came into the Boston district, probably because now we are only a small part, a sub-station of a big office.

A CRISIS IN THE SOUTHWEST.

The spectacular assemblage of 20,000 United States troops and two fleets on the borders of Mexico startles our country with a critical diplomatic problem. American money has been poured into Mexican railroads, trolleys, and municipal improvements, from every sizable town in the country. Investors are keenly alive to the significance of the present disturbances. Ordinarily the securities of South American enterprises are no safer than the tenure of South American rulers, in a country where revolutions are a national game. Our investors have regarded Mexico in a different light, because the genius of President Diaz has produced for the time being comparative financial responsibility.

Mr. Diaz is 80 years old. The persistence of the revolutionary movement, which capitalist promoters in vain describe as consisting of mere irresponsible bands of robbers, indicates that if President Diaz's grip has not yet weakened, the hand of age will soon do what the power of man could not perform. What lies in the background when this great restraining force, operative for a generation, suddenly loses its power and cunning? To an extent Mexico must revert to type. Racially it is like Cuba, Venezuela, and other feverish South American communities.

The undercurrent of Mexican antagonism to Americans must make itself felt. The seizure of Mexican territory in 1847 is not forgotten. The reckless swagger of our tourists, who enter Mexican homes unbidden, and violate social customs, creates constant irritation. Already Mexicans have been attacking newspaper offices and buildings controlled by Americans. A proud, sensitive, and poverty stricken people will soon be threatening American business enterprises. One can imagine soon a wild appeal from our corporations for protection.

Shall we march our troops over Mexican soil to protect our stock and bond holders? Clearly our diplomacy faces a new problem.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

As showing the profit reaped by some of the loan societies that lend money on chattel mortgage and the burdens assumed by borrowers who seek loans from these bodies, public attention has just been directed to a Boston case. In 1903, a man and wife borrowed $405, giving a mortgage on their furniture. During the ensuing six years, with interest at the rate of 48 per cent. per annum, they paid $950 in interest and only $100 on the principal. Following litigation, the court of last resort in this commonwealth has sanded down a decision, in which the borrowers are allowed to redeem the mortgage upon the payment of $335 due on the principal, with interest at 18 per cent. "This is apparently a case of hardship for the plaintiffs," said the full bench, and every reader must coincide.

Individuals, firms and corporations which loan money on chattel property, charging three and four per cent. per month, are commonly classed as "mortgage sharks." The reader may determine, each for himself or herself, whether or not the name fits.—Salem News.

Today the Quincy triplets are four months old, and Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wentworth of Miller Stile road are receiving many congratulations that all are flourishing. All now weigh over ten pounds each with Barbara a few ounces heavier than William and Laura. They are now beginning to take notice of things and are more and more interesting. Several gifts have been received. An order has been placed for a special carriage for triplets which will be ready for delivery before April 1, so that the babies will soon be on the street. The Daily Ledger would suggest that the people of Quincy provide an automobile to take the babies out daily. It would be a good year for a baby show in Quincy with tickets at $1 each.

BRIDGE VETO BY TAFT

War Department Successful in Defeating Bridge Appropriation

It has just become known, says the Washington correspondent of the Boston Adevrtiser, that the President administered a pocket veto to the Weeks-Lodge Weymouth Back river bridge bill. This was passed in the last hours of the session last week and required considerable maneuvering on the part of Senator Lodge and Congressman Weeks and others in the Massachusetts delegation to put it through—only in the end to meet with the President's disapproval.

The bill authorized the appropriation of not more than $50,000 by the federal government as its share in the construction of a draw bridge over Weymouth Back river, after the Massachusetts legislature should have arranged the proportion which Quincy, Weymouth and Hingham were to contribute to the building of the bridge.

The war department has been opposed to this legislation, and when the bill came to the President at the capitol in the last hour the department interposed its objections and the President refused to sign the bill and, congress soon after adjourning, it became null and void.

Congressman Weeks will introduce a new bill when the new Congress assembles.

BRIEFS

LAW ON PRIZE FIGHTS.

Editor Daily Ledger:

In view of the fact that there exists a good deal of misunderstanding regarding the way in which mutual assault, prize-fighting and boxing matches are regarded by the law, I ask you to publish the following, so that your readers may be able to form intelligent opinions on the subject.

"A prize-fight, which is an assault and therefore contrary to the law, takes place in public, in order that it may be witnessed by spectators. The spectators by their presence lend themselves to the purpose of the combatants and countenance and encourage them in a violation of the law. They therefore aid and abet."—Heard's Criminal Law.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. Collberg, 119 Mass. 350, it was decided that where two persons fight by consent each is guilty of an assault, although there is no anger or mutual ill-will.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. Mack, 187 Mass. 441, the Supreme court, interpreting Sec. 12 of Chapter 207, Revised Laws, decided that it is a question for the jury whether the machinery of a club is a mere sham and fraudulent contrivance to evade the law. I append that section, and also sections 9 and 10 of the same chapter:

Section 12: Whoever engages in or gives or promotes a public boxing match or sparing exhibition, or whoever engages in a private boxing match or sparing exhibition for which the contestants have received or have been promised any pecuniary reward, remuneration or consideration whatsoever, directly or indirectly, shall be punished by a fine of not more than two hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Section 9: Whoever, by previous appointment or arrangement, engages in a fight with another person shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years or by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars.

Section 10: Whoever is present at such fight as an aid, second or surgeon, or advises, encourages or promotes such fight, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than five years, or by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars and by imprisonment in jail for not more than three years.

Why don't the police make a test case and if the court sustains their contention that the law is not violated, then all unkind things said heretofor concerning the operations of a certain club will be withdrawn, and all good citizens, will wish the club uninterrupted peace and continued prosperity. I don't suppose the club would object to having the question adjudicated.

Arthur B. Hultman.

SALEM AT GALVESTON.

The scout cruiser Salem, built at Quincy, which arrived off Galveston bar Thursday night after a fast run from Pensacola, remained at anchor outside the harbor all day Friday, says a dispatch to a Boston paper. Commander George R. Evans said he was awaiting further orders from the navy department. He declared himself ignorant as to the whereabouts of the Salem's sister ship, the Chester, which sailed from Pensacola at the same time. A report became current in Galveston that the Salem was to go to Tampico, Mex., to do blockade duty in furtherance of President Taft's plan to stop filibustering. There was no confirmation of this report, however.

ENGLISH NAVAL BILL.

The new naval bill reported in the English parliament provides for new construction amounting to $75,319,385. The program includes five Dreadnoughts, three protected cruisers, one unarmored cruiser, 20 destroyers, six submarines, and an increase in the personnel of the navy of 3,000.

VESPER SERVICE.

Another one of the popular vesper services will be held Sunday afternoon at 4.30 in the Wollaston Unitarian church. A fine musical program will be rendered by a double male quartet, assisted by Edward E. Bullock, the well known tenor. The musical numbers are:

Organ prelude.
Anthem, "Prayer of Thanksgiving"—Kremper.
Gloria.
Anthem, "Sanctus"—Osgood.
Response by quartet.
Hymn.
Solo, "Consider and hear me"—Edward E. Bullock, tenor.
Hymn.
Organ postlude.
The pastor will preach a sermonette.

STATE HOUSE LEGISLATION

Senator Barnes Put Through Trust Co. Tax Bill

Senator Barnes of the Quincy district, spoke in the Senate yesterday in opposition to the order of Senator Schoonmaker for a Supreme court opinion on the bill pending to tax deposits in savings department of Trust companies, and it was defeated 8 to 14. The bill then passed the Senate. It will come up in the House next week. Opponents are trying to delay it until after April 1.

The resolve to provide for commemorating the patriotic services of citizens of the commonwealth at the beginning of the Civil war, is not satisfactory to the G. A. R., and has been postponed to Wednesday.

The resolve to give the memorial to army nurses of the civil war, which is to be presented to the commonwealth, a place in the senate staircase hall was given its several readings under suspension of the rules.

The bill relative to sanitary cups and drinking water to be furnished by railroads went over to Tuesday next.

The "firearms" bill was ordered to a third reading without debate.

The senate by a vote of 118 to 88 will ask the opinion of the Supreme court on the bill to exclude young women from Chinese restaurants.

The committee on public service has voted to report against an increase for judges of the Superior court.

The stadium bridge bill will be reported Monday.

I. O. O. F. EXEMPLIFICATI ON.

The grand master, and board of grand officers of the grand lodge, of Massachusetts, I. O. O. F., will be the guests of Mt. Wollaston Lodge, No. 80, of Quincy. John Hancock Lodge, No. 224 of Wollaston and Longfellow Lodge, No. 202 of Roslindale. on Tuesday evening, March 21, in Alpha hall. "The first degree" is to be exemplified by the degree staff of Longfellow lodge, No. 202, of Roslindale.

CONSOLIDATION FAVORED.

A cabinet meeting of the Board of Trade was held last evening to consider plans for a consolidation of the business organizations of the city. The movement has met with much favor from the Granite Manufacturers Association, the Retail Merchants Association, the Civic League and the Citizens Association. Similar lines as the Boston Chamber of Commerce are favored, and it is the hope of many to secure an organization with upwards of 500 members with a paid secretary.

GRANITE FIRMS HIT.

A meeting of the Quincy creditors of E. C. Willison Co., the Boston granite firm that went into bankruptcy this week, was held last evening at the rooms of the Granite Manufacturers association. There were 15 to 20 Quincy firms represented, and the situation was discussed. Willison was what is known among the granite manufacturers as a middle man, and many Quincy firms did work for him and as a result some of the firms are said to have been pretty hard hit. No definite line of action was taken at the meeting as all that could be done was to discuss the situation.

WAS EASY FOR MALDEN

Took Quincy Y. M. C. A. into Camp 53 to 13

Malden Y. M. C. A. defeated Quincy Y. M. C. A. in a dual indoor track meet last evening by the score of 53 to 13. The contestants were divided into two classes, registered and unregistered. The Quincy unregistered athletes were defeated in every event. The registered men did not fare so badly, but got first place in two events and scored points in all events.

McArdle of Quincy won the three-standing broad jumps and the standing broad jump. Wilson and Trask took second and third places in the potato race, and Wood got third in the running high jump.

The summary:

BRIEFS

Judge James H. Flint left Wednesday evening for Southern Pines, N. C., where he will spend the next three weeks. Judge Chamberlain of Brockton will take his place on the bench of the Norfolk Probate court during his absence.

The annual roll call of Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F. will take place Tuesday evening, March 28, when every member is expected to respond in person or by letter. An entertainment and refreshments are on the program.

The committee on roads and bridges of the Legislature gave a hearing at the State House yesterday on the Fore river bridge bill. Representative Thomas was the principal speaker, and ably presented the needs of a wider draw and other improvements.

A well attended cake and candy sale was held last evening at the residence of Mr. B. G. Barnes on Faxon avenue, by the Dorcas society of the Universalist church. A large line of home made confections and cake was offered for sale and were readily purchased. In addition to the fact of the sale it was also an occasion for a social gathering of the members of the society and their friends.

FOUNDERS' DAY

felt that the character of the stiff old maid could not have been impersonated any better.

The hall was filled at a quarter of eight, but people continued to come and many were obliged to stand up in the back of the room. An incident which almost broke up the play occurred near the crisis. The princess had found out that she was accursed and was about to bid her friends goodbye. As she was speaking in a small sad voice, a tremendous sneeze reechoed through the room, and for a few moments the audience was in a paroxysm of laughter.

In addition to those who have been mentioned, Miss Georgianna Lane who coached the cast and directed the operations of the decorating committee, contributed much to the success of the play, Miss Burgess also assisted by playing the accompaniments to the dances and songs in the play.

The ushers were: Mabel Stewart '11, Elizabeth Torrey '11, Edith Kohlstad '12, Mary Beal '12, Margaret Read '13 and Edith Ames '13.

BRIEFS

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. has planned a fine entertainment for next Monday evening.

George W. Gragg and P. H. Holman visited the East Weymouth camp, Sons of Veterans, Thursday evening.

The Ladies Benevolent Society of the Memorial Congregational church, met Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons and made vestments for the boys choir. Interesting business was transacted. Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Wilson Marsh addressed the ladies in the interests of associated charities. Refreshments of sandwiches, cakes and coffee were served.

A number of the young ladies of Quincy Point will assist the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. in giving an Old Maids convention on Monday evening in the association hall, Mrs. E. I. Beal of Washington street is president of the Auxiliary.

Rev. Fannie E. Austin who so acceptably occupied the pulpit at the Universalist church last Sunday, will preach for them again tomorrow.

Rev. Richard E. Armstrong is to address the Galahad club of Christ church on Thursday evening on "The Mastery of Self."

The Sunday school of First church is rehearsing the operetta Cinderella in Flower Land to be given in the chapel on Friday evening, March 31.

The debate of the Men's club of Christ church scheduled for Wednesday night will be omitted that members may attend the Lenten service in the church.

The Boy Scouts had a fine meeting in the vestry of the Point church on Monday evening. Delegates to the State Y. M. C. A. conference in Worcester spoke on the value of the conference and told what it had done for them.

St. Chrysostom's Men's club has voted to attend the Thursday evening service in the church when Rev. Edward S. Drown, D. D., of the Episcopal Theological school of Cambridge will preach. The rector Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra has extended an invitation to the club to come to the rectory after the meeting and meet Dr. Drown informally.

The Wollaston Unitarian club will meet next Tuesday evening, to be addressed by Judge Loyed E. Chamberlain and Frank F. Crane on the Atlantic deeper waterways and the proposed intra costal canal.

Members of the Young People's Religious union of the Quincy and Wollaston Unitarian churches, are planning to attend the annual social gathering of the Boston Federation this evening to be held in the parish hall of the Third Religious society of Dorchester. Take the elevated car to Fields corner and transfer to any Ashmont or Milton car, getting off at Richmond street.

The 1910 entertainment committee of the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor gave Mrs. Fannie Wood, one of their committee a house warming Thursday evening at her new home on Presidents avenue. It was also Mrs. Wood's birthday, so that the celebration was a double one. Whist occupied the attention of the party for an hour or more, the prize for the best score being awarded to Mrs. Isabelle Pierce, while Mrs. Jennie Steinbrenner received the consolation prize. Mrs. Wood served an excellent supper, and while the festivities were at their zenith, Mrs. Margaret Gammon, president of the committee, presented Mrs. Wood with a handsome picture.

Beginning with Sunday evening service, a vested choir of twenty-three boys will sing at the Memorial church. They will be assisted by the men who sing at the morning service. This chorus has been practicing for several weeks under the direction of Mr. Briggs of Cambridge. The church people are anticipating their music with pleasure.

☞Be sure and hear the bible lecturer T. E. Barker of Boston, on the subject "The Two Salvations." Sunday at 3 P. M., in Colonial hall, Quincy Savings Bank building. This lecture will be illustrated by the Bible Chart of the Ages and will be of exceptional interest to all desiring a better and more comprehensive understanding of the bible. All are welcome, seats free and no collection.

FOOD INSPECTORS SEIZE CANDY EGGS

Quite a Shortage In the Boston Market as a Result

Boston, March 11.—There is going to be a shortage of Easter eggs in the candy market, according to the pure food inspectors, who seized 26,200 nice, shiny, colored Easter eggs yesterday that were intended to satisfy the "sweet tooth" of all the little girls and boys in Boston who could afford to spend a penny for them. Half a dozen other shipments of candy eggs have been seized by the inspectors within the last week or two and other seizures are threatened.

The threatening famine is due to the presence of talc on the outside of the eggs to give them the shine which makes them look so pretty to children. It is this shiny substance which gives the boys the "stummick ache" when the devour the eggs in any large quantity.

Talc being a mineral substance is forbidden under the pure food laws as an article of diet, as it is indigestible.

LEAVES STATE PRISON

Sophie Kritchmann Is Placed In Hospital For the Insane

Hartford, March 11.—Sophie Kritchmann, the young Union City music teacher here, confined in state prison for manslaughter, has been adjudged insane, and on order of Governor Baldwin transferred to the Connecticut hospital for the insane at Middletown.

She was tried jointly with Joseph Mitchell for the killing of Broislaw Kulvinskas near Union City in September, 1909, and was found guilty of manslaughter, the verdict against Mitchell being second degree murder. The latter's appeal for a new trial has just been denied by the supreme court of the state.

FOR CARRYING A GUN

Boston Woman Is Given Sentence of Twenty Days In Prison

Boston, March 11.—For the first time in the history of the municipal courts in Boston, a woman was arraigned on the charge of carrying a loaded revolver and discharging it in a public place. Her name is Alice Carter, 25 years old. She pleaded guilty and was given twenty days in the house of correction.

Witnesses told the court that she went into a saloon on Harrison avenue and pulled a gun from the folds of her dress and made a target of the ceiling.

No Faith Healing For Pay

Berlin, March 11.—The reichstag committee which has been preparing a bill to suppress medical quackery has decided to recommend one forbidding the practice of faith healing or spiritualistic or other mystic treatment of the sick for pay.

Woman Shooter a Suicide

Corey, Pa., March 11.—Harry Ziele, who shot and seriously wounded his wife and sister-in-law, Mrs. John Loveland, was found by the police in an ice house near here. He had fired a bullet into his head and was dead. His victims will recover.

NECESSITY OF INTERVENTION

Opinion That It Cannot Much Longer Be Delayed

BLOCKING REBELS IN MEXICO

Close Watch Being Kept on Border—Supplies and Arms From This Country to Be Cut Off—Many Mexicans Arrested In Arizona For Violation of Neutrality Laws—Japan Denies Arrangement With Mexico

Washington, March 11.—Although the United States government expressly refrains from any mention of the necessity of intervention in its announcement of its reasons for mobilizing our army and navy forces along the Mexican border, there is no doubt that preparations have been made for this eventually.

There is a widespread feeling in well-informed circles that intervention not only is coming, but coming soon, despite the emphatic statements on the part of Mexican government officials that the Diaz regime is able to cope with any situation which may arise.

Meanwhile the first step in the administration policy of enforcing absolutely the neutrality laws in an effort to block the Mexican rebels has already been taken. At Dougas, Ariz., United States troops have arrested 150 Mexicans alleged to have been on their way to join the insurgent force now threatening Agua Prieta. The action is directly in line with the semi-official explanation given for the mobilization of our army and navy forces on the Mexican border.

In brief, the United States intends to lend its aid in restoring order in Mexico by effectively shutting off the supply of arms and ammunition from this country which make outbreaks in the southern republic possible. Furthermore, this country will be in a position to intervene in Mexico instantly in case of the breaking out of a widespread revolt such as would very likely occur upon the death of Diaz.

As the troops gather at San Antonio, reports continue to come in of risings in various parts of Mexico, one from as far south as Yucatan, where the rebels are making temporary headway. It is expected that by Sunday, at the latest, the American troops will all be in camp in Texas. With them will be, later on, militia officers from nearly if not all of the states, invited, at the expense of the war department, to view the maneuvers.

The medical preparations made are designed to secure the health of troops, while the hospital ship Solace is to care for the bluejackets. Three of the cruiser division of the Atlantic fleet have already sailed, and the fourth vessel, now at Portsmouth, is expected to leave for the south early next week.

The most significant feature of the developments here is perhaps the general satisfaction in diplomatic circles over the manner in which the United States proposes to deal with the situation. Beneficial effects for all foreign interests in Mexico are looked for, and the sincerity of President Taft in wishing only peace and order is unquestioned. Some of the diplomats are saying that their governments would welcome it if the United States had taken this action long before.

General opinion is that the arrival of the American troops will sound the death knell to the Mexican revolution. Cutting off their sources of supply and their co-operation with their supporters on American territory will, it is believed, bring about rapid pacification of the troubled zone.

Mr. De la Barra, the Mexican ambassador, issued a statement calculated to offset reports that American troops were to invade Mexico or that his government had asked that this be done. He said:

"The constitution of Mexico forbids the government officials, whoever they be, to permit foreign troops entering Mexican territory without the consent of the senate. My government, patriotic and strong, has never and never will entertain such an idea or thought."

An interesting contribution to the situation as it stands is the official disclaimers of Japan that it has no arrangement with the Diaz government of any nature whatsoever, but relating in particular to the report that it had secured Magdalena bay for a coaling station. Speaking for Japan, Ambassador Uchida declared that not only was there no truth in the rumor, but that Japan had made no effort to secure such a station at any point on the Mexican coast.

Germany comes forward with a statement to the effect that she has not asked, nor does she intend to ask, any action on our part, but leaves it to be understood that she is perfectly content.

London, March 11.—General William Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, will be operated upon for cataract of the left eye.

NO INCREASE FOR JUDGES

Foss' Proposition to Increase Their Salaries Is Turned Down

Boston, March 11.—Governor Foss was turned down by the committee on public service on one of his pet propositions, a salary increase for judges of the superior and supreme courts. The committee voted "ought not to pass."

The governor recommended in his inaugural address that the salaries of the judges of the superior court be raised from $6000 to $8000 and the salaries of judges of the supreme court from $8000 a year to $10,000 a year.

ELECTIONS IN APRIL

Portuguese Will Then Cast Ballots as Citizens of a Republic

Washington, March 11.—Viscount de Alte, the Portuguese minister, announced receipt of a cablegram from his government at Lisbon to the effect that all indications favor the holding of the election about the end of April.

The date for the elections, which will be held throughout the republic simultaneously, has not yet been fixed.

Museum Robbed of Curios

Philadelphia, March 11.—Detectives are investigating the theft from the museum of the University of Pennsylvania by two men of fifteen Egyptian curios. They were from the collection of Eckley B. Coxe, and were in a glass case, the back of which had been unscrewed.

WHEN HER BACK ACHES.

A Woman Finds All Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away.

Quincy women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden Bachache, hip pains, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys and warn you of he stealthy approach of diabetes, dropsy and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills permanently cure all these disorders. Here's proof of it in a Quincy woman's words:

Mrs. Deborah Prouty, 39 Quincy avenue, Quincy, Mass., says: "I am in a position to speak in the highest terms of Doan's Kidney Pills. My back ached nearly all the time and caused me considerable trouble. Any sudden movement or an attempt to stoop, sent sharp pains through my loins. My health was much run down and I had but little strength or energy. I was very much alarmed about my condition. When Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me, I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store, as I knew of many other people who had used them with success. The contents of three boxes convinced me that they were the best kidney remedy to be had. I am now in good health."

LAND COURT.

To the City of Quincy, a municipal corporation located in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; the Quincy Co-operative Bank, a duly existing corporation having its usual place of business in said Quincy; Henry D. Federhen, Caroline A. Read, Frances S. Barry, Emma T. Hersey, Rachel E. Hersey, Nancy J. Hayden, Henry A. Bushnell, Edward H. Bushnell, Charles W. Bushnell, Nellie B. Cook, sometimes called Nellie L. Cook, and Ellen J. Bushnell of said Quincy; Rebecca L. Federhen, individually and as Trustee, of Boston in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth; Georgiana P. Federhen and Herbert M. Federhen of said Boston, individually and as Trustees under the will of Herbert M. Federhen, deceased; Dorothy L. Peterson and Clarence H. Federhen of Brooklyn, in the State of New York; Mrs. William B. Kibbey of Marshalltown, in the State of Iowa; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Jessie Scoular and Daniel Scoular, Jr., of said Quincy, to register and confirm their title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Quincy, bounded southwesterly by Washington Street ninety three and 24-100 (93.24) feet; southeasterly by land of Henry D. Federhen et al two hundred and eighty-four and 97-100 (284.97) feet; northeasterly by land of the City of Quincy, of Emma T. Hersey and of Nancy J. Hayden, ninety-eight and 8-100 (98.08) feet; and northwesterly by land of Ellen J. Bushnell et al and of Nellie B. Cook, sometimes called Nellie L. Cook, two hundred and ninety-six and 20-100 (296.20) feet. Containing 27,748 square feet of land.

Petitioners claim as appurtenant to the above described land rights of way in Washington Street (public highway) as now established in common with others entitled thereto.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the twenty-seventh day of March A. D. 1911, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this second day of March in the year nineteen hundred and eleven.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

Later in the day there were ambling gallops along the country roads, and the father explained how the transformation from cattle raising to agriculture and fruit growing had come about; how the great irrigation dam in Quaretaro canyon had put a thousand square miles of the fertile mesa under cultivation; how with the impouring of the new population had come new blood, new methods, good roads, the telephone, the rural mail route and other civilizing agencies.

Evan groaned. "I know," he said. "I've lost my birthland. It's as extinct as the megalosaurian lizards whose bones we used to find sticking in the gully banks on Table Mesa. By the way, that reminds me. Are there any of those giant fossils left? I was telling Professor Anners about them the other day, and he was immensely interested."

"We're all fossils, we older folks of the cattle raising times," laughed the man whom Richard Gantry had called the "super governor." "But there are some of the bones left, too, I guess, and if the professor is a friend of yours we'll get him a state permit to dig all he wants to."

"Yes, Professor Anners is a friend of mine," was the younger man's half absent admission, "as much of a friend as his daughter would ever allow him to be."

The qualifying clause was not thrown away upon the senator. "What has the daughter got against you, son?" he asked mildly.

"Nothing very serious," laughed Patricia's lover. "But I think she is jealous of any one who tries to share her father with her. Next to her career"—

"That's Boston, isn't it?" interrupted the ex-cattle king. Then he added, "I'm right glad it hasn't come in your way to tie yourself up to one of those 'careers,' Evan, my boy."

The young man felt better after he had told his father his love story. It was highly necessary that he should tell some one, and whom better?

David Blount listened with the far-away look in his eyes that the son had more than once marked as the greatest of the changes chargeable to the aging years.

"Think a heap of her, do you, son?" he said when the ambling saddle animals had covered another half mile of the homeward journey.

"So much that it went near to spoiling me when she finally made me realize that I couldn't hold my own against the 'career,'" he made answer. Then he added: "I want work, father. That is what I am out here for; the hardest kind of work and plenty of it; something that I can put my heart into. Can you find it for me?"

There was the wisdom of the centuries in the gentle smile provoked by this unashamed lover's appeal.

"I wouldn't take it too hard if I were you, son," said the wise man. "And as for the work, I guess we can satisfy you if your appetite isn't too big. How would a state office do?"

"Politics?" queried Blount, bringing his horse down to the walk for which his father had set the example. "I've thought a good bit about that, though I haven't had any special training that way. The schools of today are turning out business lawyers—men who know the law and are trained particularly in its application to the great business undertakings. That used to be my ambition—to be a business adviser and perhaps after awhile to climb to the top of the ladder and be somebody's corporation counsel."

"But now you have changed?"

"I don't know that I have. But there are other fields that are also attractive. No man can study the politics of America today without seeing the need for good men—men who will administer the affairs of the state or the nation without fear or favor; men who will hew to the line under any and all conditions."

A quaint smile was playing under the drooping mustache of the Hon. Senator Sagebrush.

"I reckon we do need a few men like that, Evan—need 'em mighty bad. Think you could fill the bill if you had a right good chance?"

The potential hewer of political chips smiled.

"I'm not likely to get the chance very soon," he returned. "Just at present I am still a legal resident of the good old commonwealth of Massachusetts and a member of its bar, eligible to office there and nowhere else."

"You'd be a citizen of this state by the time you could get elected to an office in it," suggested the senator.

"I know—the required term of residence here is ridiculously short. But you forget that I am as unknown in the sagebrush hills as you are well known. I couldn't get a nomination for the office of poundkeeper."

David Blount was chuckling softly. "Sounds right funny to hear you talk that way, son," he commented. "Mighty near everybody will tell you that the slate hangs up behind the door at Wartrace, and I don't know but some people would say that old Sagebrush Dave himself does most of the writing on it. Anyhow, there's one place on it that is still needing a name, and I guess yours would fit it as well as anybody's."

The young man, who was so lately out of the well considering east, gasped.

"Heavens!" he ejaculated. "You're not considering me as a possibility on the state ticket before I've been twenty-four hours on the ground, are you?"

"No, not exactly as a possibility, son. We'll call it a sure thing if you want to. It's this way: We're needing a political housecleaning pretty bad this year. We have good enough laws, I guess, but they're winked at any day in the week when somebody comes along with a barrel. The fight is up between the people of this state and the corporations. It was up two years ago, and the people got the laws all right, but forgot to elect men who would carry them out. This time I think the voters have got their knives sharpened. We've been a little slow catching step, but the marching orders have gone out. We're going to clean house this fall."

"Not if the slate hangs behind your door or any man's door, father," was the theorist's grave reminder. "Reform doesn't come in by that road."

"Hold on, son; steady go easy's the word. Reform comes in by any old trail it can find mostly and thanks its lucky stars if it doesn't run up against any bridges gone or any mudholes too deep to ford. We've got a good man for governor—not any too broad, maybe, but good—church good; he's a minister of the gospel and the president of a church university. No man has ever said he'd take a bribe, but he isn't heavy enough to sit on the lid and hold it down. Alec Gordon, the man who is going to succeed him next fall, is all the things that the present governor isn't, so that is fixed."

"How 'fixed?'" queried the young man, who, though he was not from Missouri, was beginning to fear that he would constantly have to be "shown."

"In the same way that everything has to be fixed, if we're going to get results," was the calm reply. "After the governor the man upon whom the most depends is the attorney general. The present incumbent, Dortscher, is one of the candidates, but we've crossed his name off. The next man we considered was Jim Rankin. In some ways he's fit; he's a hard fighter, and the man doesn't live who can bluff him. But he's poor, and he wants to be rich, and I guess that lets him out."

All this was directly subversive of Evan Blount's ideas of the conduct of affairs political in a free country, but he was willing to hear more. "Well?" he said.

"What we want this time is one of your 'hew to the line' men, son. Reckon you'd like to try it?"

(To be Continued.)

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

A Traitorous Blow is Dealt Boston Baked Beans—Women's Lefts Grow to Keep Pace with Growth of Women's Rights—Automaniacs Keep Hubbites Dodging—The Barry-Bok Propaganda Reaches Boston and Is Satirized by the Suffragists.

A New Englander actually dares to say that baked beans and pork are not even as valuable as a British physician has claimed them to be! To think that a Yankee should be so unpatriotic! As a result of Sir Hiram Maxim's statement that Boston baked beans and pork had proved very helpful to consumptives in the African colonies, Dr. Philip Bartlett, superintendent of the Rutland State Santitarium, gave a special two weeks' trial of this diet at the hospital. He failed to find the beneficial results indicated by the Englishman, but is not particularly surprising, since he believes that if as common articles as beans and pork were good they would have been discovered long before 1911. Our New York cousins would doubtless say that if Dr. Maxim's rule were true there would never have been a case of consumption in this section of the country. With all due regard to our New York cousins, the Boston girl knows at least one instance of a former Hubbite who was wont to trun up his nose contemptuously at the mention of beans, but since living in New York for a while he greets a plate of the Boston food with glee, and exclaims "My, but those are good—another helping, please!"

Pedestrians on Huntington Avenue and adjacent streets are distinctly detrop, and they soon tire of being rubbered at. With the Mechanics Building and Horticultural Hall filled with eager exhibitors of automobiles of every description from the heavy truck to the luxurious touring car, and a solid line of cars awaiting trial trips by prospective purchasers, there is mingled the continuous tooting of horns as the cars skim blithely by and down the avenue while the poor foot traveler dodges bewilderedly between them. The Auto Show is the thing, and perhaps one should not blame Mr. Suburban Family-man if he takes his wife and brood under his arm and saunters up to an expensive car with a request to be "shown." A chance to make others dodge for a few minutes as he has been dodging for several days is small enough compensation, and if the car "doesn't quite suit him" at the end of the ride no one is any the wiser.

What suffragist thinks of anti-suffragist is often not fit to print but an exceptional bit of cogitation on happenings among the enemy stands to the credit of Mrs. Mary Hutcheson Page. Mr. Richard Barry, he of Mr. Edward Bok's self constituted missionary expedition to benighted Colorado and useless Utah, has at last shown his face in progressive Boston. Before an association of the "antis" he described the wickedness of the great West and among his hearers, at one dollar per head, was the enthusiastic secretary of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association. In describing her experiences in a personal letter to Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, Mrs. Page observed that her total impression was one to be summed up in the word "funny," a term which she thus explains: "To see all those well dressed, well-to-do women in a handsome ball room listening to an almost juvenile and wholly unimpressive young man deliver his ultimatum on Woman was in itself a remarkable sight, and the days of such sights are numbered. We shall indeed not often look upon the like again. Neither the women nor the young man will find it possible, for the absurdity of the situation will not much longer permit it. As it was, last evening it was a dead speech made to a dead audience. There was no appeal to noble sentiments, no ideals invoked, no applause, no response. It was as dry as husks. Not even a question varied the monotony. Twice there was a titter of laughter when the speaker exposed some trivial venality on the part of a Colorado woman voter. I could not quite determine whether this laughter meant sympathy for the woman delinquent or just delight in the moral obliquity of any woman, provided only she was a voter. But, for the rest, as the speaker went on and on, the audience gave little evidence of interest. How could it indeed rise from its apathy when it was told that when Woman Suffrage comes, as it surely will, it means the end of the home, that where women vote juvenile crime is on the increase and that furniture is sold on the instalment plan? While we were judging that the Colorado women must be the last and the least on earth, the speaker astounded us by adding that the Colorado women were the noblest, the finest that could be found anywhere—were indeed second to none—and that the vote had had no effect on them whatever. For a moment I thought we had reached an impasse, but like a dream when the impossible happens and we wake up, so at this point the lecturer sat down," Mrs. Page concludes from this personal experience that the activities of the 'antis" are really helping the cause of equal suffrage.

Women's feet are again to the fore in Bostonese discussion. Manufacturers in the nearby shoe towns find that the demand for the larger sizes in shoes is constantly increasing, and that whereas a No. 4 was the average size a generation ago now Nos. 5 and 6 are popular, and one manufacturer admits that he turns out an astonishing number of eights, nines and even tens. The average width, has gone from B to C. Presumably the manufacturers know whereof they speak. Yet a walk down Boylston and Tremont Streets makes one doubt it. The famous "darling Clementine" to be sure, wore No. 9's, but the hobble skirted damsel of today certainly is not guilty of wearing any larger footwear than she has to. Her tiny suede shoe with its high curved heel, the bottom of which hits the ground about under the middle of the foot, gives one the impression that it has Cinderella's glass slipper completely outdone for smallness. Certainly the painful, mincing steps which the damsel takes do not convey an impression of size 8-D. A facetious shoeman maintains that the suffragists are the ones who are causing the increasing demand for larger shoes. It might seem that this evidence of common sense should be sufficient proof of their ability to worthily cast a ballot.

GAMBLING AT PALM BEACH

Mayor of Boston Says That It Is Carried on Extensively

Boston, March 11.—Remarkable statements to the effect that men and women in high society life at Palm Beach are gambling mad, and that in ballroom attire society "bucks the tiger" there nightly, at a feverish pace, were some of the contributions which Mayor Fitzgerald made to make his first day back on the job at city hall a notable one.

The mayor said that he saw men and women gambling side by side for stakes that would stagger the ordinary person.

UPHOLDS MIRACLES

Lodge Thinks Communication "Across the Chasm" Is Possible

London, March 11.—Sir Oliver Lodge, addressing the National Free Church council at Portsmouth on "Christian Revelation from the Scientific Point of View," declared that miracles were not more impossible than the interference of a human being would seem to a colony of ants or bees.

"I have become convinced," he added, "that an occasional communication across the chasm is possible."

BRIEFS

Mrs. Russell M. Keene of Washington street was called to Winthrop, Me., Friday by the serious illness of her nephew.

There will be a "camp reunion" in Y. M. C. A. assembly hall on Friday, March 17. The boys will sit down to a roast beef supper a la So. Hanover at 6.30. After supepr reminiscences and stories will be in order.

Latest reports from Mr. George W. Morton, who is ill at his home on Spear street, are that he passed a comfortable day yesterday, rested well last night and is feeling better today than for several days. Although seriously ill Mr. Morton's condition is somewhat improved and he hopes to sit up a little while today.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION.

Poland hall, Norfolk Downs was the scene of a very enthusiastic gathering Thursday evening, when the Park and Downs Improvement Association held their second meeting.

It was opened by Frank Burgess, president of the organization, who outlined briefly the proposed plans of the Association, as they had been discussed by the committee, which had been elected for that purpose at the last meeting. He showed the need of such an organization and told of the many duties which such an Association could take upon itself, such as improved sidewalks and streets, improve street lighting, provide a playground at Norfolk Downs, etc.

It was moved by John E. Poland that the name of organization be changed from Norfolk Downs Improvement Association to Park and Downs Improvement Association. Mr. Poland told of brotherly feeling which had always existed between Wollaston Park and Norfolk Downs.

The motion to change name was unanimously passed.

Resignation of temporary secretary Kessler was taken from table and accepted. Wilbur A. Snow was elected to fill vacancy.

John Poland moved that a committee of five, including president, be appointed by chair to draw up by-laws and constitution. Seconded, and passed. Chairman Burgess appointed John E. Poland, Walter L. Winlock, John Ross and George Colburn.

The election of officers to fill present vacancies was laid on table until next meeting.

Mr. Poland moved that a committee of three be appointed by chair to provide entertainment for next meeting. Mr. Burgess appointed E. A. Poland, Walter Winlock and George Colburn.

Adjourned to March 23.

After regular meeting the entertainment committee met and decided to make next meeting ladies' night at which a musical entertainment would be afforded.

Little Items of Interest in Towns About Quincy

In the district court at Dedham yesterday Joseph Sharkey, chauffeur for George E. Hall of Dedham, was fined $25, which he paid, for running through water in such a way as to throw it upon 40 to 50 persons.

The Citizens club of Weymouth and East Braintree will meet in Lincoln hall March 21, when Roger W. Babson of Wellesley will speak on "Forecasting business conditions."

Richard E. Oldham for ten years an assessor of Norwood was defeated for reelection. He also was defeated for selectman.

The engagement is announced of Miss Florence Monroe Wood, daughter of Mrs. Louise Monroe of Hyde Park, to Dr. Clarence Edmund Bryant, Dartmouth '01 and Harvard medical school '05, also of Hyde Park.

Rev. A. E. Wright of East Boston will speak at the Universalist church at North Weymouth Sunday evening on "The object of life."

The historical tablet for the First parish church at Needham will be ready for dedication Sunday, Mar. 19.

Norfolk Union lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Randolph, moved into new apartments this week in the new Masonic building. Dedication exercises will be held later.

A barn owned by George A. Nason at Holbrook was destroyed by fire Thursday morning.

Cornelius A. Faunce of North Abington, noted for extreme views on religion and politics died on Wednesday. He was a well known Mason, Knight Templar and Odd Fellow.

Twenty-seven of the prettiest girls in town will endeavor to make themselves look as much like "old maids" as possible in the Old Maid's Convention at Y. M. C. A. hall Monday evening. Six different church societies are represented in this cast, the members coming from all parts of the city under the supervision of Mrs. N. G. Nickerson and Mrs. Edwin I. Beal of the Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary. The play is very amusing and many local hits have been introduced to lend color to the production which promises to be a great success.

THE Q. Y. C. COMMITTEES

Season Will Open Five Weeks From Today

A meeting of the house committee of the Quincy Yacht club was held Friday evening at the office of F. F. Crane with Vice Commodore Harry S. Crane presiding.

DEFEAT WAS A SURPRISE

Quincy High Loses to Rockland High School

Quincy High lost to Rockland High school Friday afternoon in a closely contested game of basketball with the final score 23 to 20. Prout was missed from the lineup, as he was unable to play. Tirrell, who took his place played a good game however. The Quincy team showed the after effects of the game with Oliver Ames, and what would have been a victory ordinarily was turned to defeat. Manning played his usual fast game, shooting one basket from the floor and 8 fouls. H. Chapman and Harmon got two baskets apiece, and Tirrell shot one. Dunn, captain and right forward on the Rockland team was the star of the game, getting 6 baskets from the floor.

The summary:

ROCKLAND		QUINCY
Dunn, rf		lb, Harmon
Foley, lf		rb,M. Chapman
Hackett, c		c, Tirrell
Conway, rb		lf, Manning
Green, lb		rf, H. Chapman

Score—Rockland H. S. 23, Quincy H. S. 20. Goals from floor—Foley 2, Dunn 6, Hackett, Manning, H. Chapman 2, Tirrell, Harmon 2. Goals from fouls—Foley 5, Manning 8. Referee, Gammons. Umpire—Rice. Scorer—Mansfield. Timer — Gallagher. Time—20m halves. Attendance 250.

SPORTING NOTES.

The local basketball season is drawing to a close, but tonight there will be some good games in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Makaria 1st and 2nd teams will have it out hot and heavy and a good game is promised. Quincy Y. M. C. A. second will play the All Stars, a team of Intermediates and Employed Boys.

The Y. M. C. A. 1st team will play the Old Guard a team composed principally of doctors about town. The game should be of great interest because the old guard believe they can trim the regular team without very much difficulty. In case the latter should spring a surprise on them, Charley Parker and Mr. LoRose will step into the breach. Drs. Jones, Sargent, Maloney, Reardon, Lynch, Reynolds, Hardwick and Monroe will all appear, as well as Mr. Gay and Dick Jones.

TODAY'S COURT.

Peter Hender was fined $15 for assault on Michael Joseph at Quincy, and put under $200 to keep the peace for two months.

☞Complaint has been made that passengers using the trains between Boston and points covered by the Old Colony Division have been discommoded by being required to apply to the Superintendent's office at Taunton to recover articles left upon such trains. FIFTY YEARS A GROCER

E. H. Doble in Active Business at Ninety Years

Enoch H. Doble, the West Quincy grocer, became a nonagenarian today, but is actively interested in the firm of E. H. Doble & Co. About a week ago he had an attack of pneumonia which would have been fatal to many a younger man, but Mr. Doble has always been a man of good habits and is good for several years more. Because of his recent illness, however, the anniversary today will be quietly observed, but there was a family gathering. He has four sons, Herbert F. Doble, William H. Doble, Dr. Ernest E. Doble and Arthur H. Doble and there are thirteen grandchildren. His wife passed away a little over a year ago.

Mr. Doble never held town or city office, but is interested in the Hall Place Methodist church, and has been a trustee for several years. When he established himself in the grocery business at West Quincy in 1855 the town of Quincy had a population of only 5,921, but little more than the present population of Ward Four. The valuation of the town was then but $3,222,525, and the total tax levy but $28,746. The tax rate was $8.20 per $1000. The town debt was only $14,1 615.63.

It was in that year that the town built three schoolhouses, the Willard, the Coddington and the Adams. The former was burned, the second was razed when the new Coddington was built, and the latter has been enlarged and is still in use. The selectmen of Quincy in 1855 were Bryant B. Newcomb, Jacob F. Eaton and Ensign S. Fellow, all deceased, and the town clerk was George L. Gill.

The Daily Ledger extends congratulations to Mr. Doble, West Quincy's grand old man, who promises to become a centenarian. He was born in Lawrence, Maine, March 13, 1821.

ILL IN BALTIMORE.

Chief of Police Burrell was called to Baltimore Sunday evening by a telegram announcing the sudden illness of his brother Walter Burrell. Walter has been in the south this winter, and the middle of last week headed for home . A postal dated Savannah, Ga., last Thursday, was received on Saturday announcing that he was coming right home. Sunday morning a telegram was received stating that he had been taken to the Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore seriously ill. Upon receipt of this telegram Chief Burrell immediately started for Baltimore.

HOLD UP REPORTED.

It was reported at Quincy Point Sunday night that a young man had been held up shortly before 8 o'clock that evening near the Quincy Point bridge by two men who knocked him down and took $7 of his money. In addition to losing his money the young man is reported to have been badly bruised and received a cut on his lip that required several stitches. The affair has not been reported to the police and there seems to be some air of mystery about it. Dr. E. H. Bushnell says that he treated a young man Sunday evening who had a cut lip, but says as far as he knew there was no holdup. Dr. Bushnell refuses to say who the man was or what caused the cut.

ON TRIAL TRIP.

The steamer Sankaty built for the New Bedford, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket Steamboat Co., which was launched at the Fore River yard Feb. 2, left the yards this morning for a trial spin in the harbor.

The cruiser Des Moines, which was built in Quincy and which numbers among its crew of jackies two Quincy boys, sailed from the Boston navy yard at 6.15 Sunday morning. Today she will fill her magazines at Iona island and then proceed to Key West.

DR. HARDY ACCEPTS

Will Go to His New Pastorate in May

Rev. E. N. Hardy, Ph. D., pastor of Bethany Congregational church, has decided to accept the call from the First Congregational church at La-Grange, Ill., a suburb of Chicago. He desires to be released from his present pastorate that he may enter his new field about the middle of May.

Dr. Hardy when interviewed by the Daily Ledger was enthusiastic over his prospects in the middle west. He regrets very much to leave Quincy, where he has been pastor for fifteen years, but the LaGrange church is very progressive and growing rapidly. It has a new stone church, a high grade Sunday School, a stringed orchestra every Sunday, a vigorous men's club, and is conspicuous for its missionary work, having already raised $5000 this year for missions.

A corporate meeting of Bethany church has been called for Friday evening, when Dr. Hardy will forward a letter.

CITY SQUARE RUNAWAY.

There was a lively runaway in City Square early Saturday evening and for a time it looked as though someone would surely be run down, as the street was filled with Saturday night shoppers. The horse was one of John Berman, and was attached to a wagon loaded with goods, principally furniture. When opposite Saville street the bit broke, and the horse started to run up Hancock street. As the team dashed by the fountain in City Square it nearly struck a woman waiting to take a car. The woman was so frightened that she fainted. When near Granite street, the driver finding himself unable to control the horse jumped out, and fortunately escaped injury. Meanwhile the horse kept up Hancock street dodging trains and pedestrians crossing the street.

When opposite Cottage street, Michael O'Brien made a jump for the horses head, which caused the animal to swerve one side so that the team struck an electric car. O'Brien continued to run after the horse, however. When near the junction of Hancock street and Revere road, Theodore Johnson, a musician threw his cornet box at the animal. It struck the horse on the head and dazed him for a minute. This enabled Johnson and O'Brien to grab the horse by the head, and hold him until he had quieted somewhat. It is somewhat remarkable in view of the number of people in City Square at the time that no one was injured.

THOMSON—ROUBIN.

Saturday evening, two popular young people of this city were united in marriage by the Rev. Dr. Hardy, at his residence on Foster street. The groom being George A. Thomson, well known in musicale circles as pianist of Thomson's orchestra; the bride being Miss Nellie A. Roubin a registered nurse, who is also an accomplished pianist and a recent graduate of Charlesgate hospital, Cambridge. Mr. and Mrs. Thomson are receiving hearty congratulations of their many friends and will be at home to them at their residence 82 Glencoe place after April 1.

Gorgie, said the careful mother, don't eat those ornaments on the top of the cake, they are poisonous.

The ornaments remained for two days on the mantlepiece, when one disappeared.

Georgie. I am afraid you have eaten one of those ornaments.

No, mother| I haven't, but I have given one to Tommy, and if he is alive tomorrow I shall eat the other one myself!

RAIDED A SECOND TIME.

Inspector Goodhue with Officers Thorne, Phillips, Dinneen and Olson raided the premises of Alex Samrah at 158 Sumner street Sunday night and seized two jugs containing a small quantity of whiskey. Samrah was arrested and was arraigned in court. Samrah was in court last October on a similar complaint and was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $50, and serve three months in jail. He has but recently got out from jail.

TODAY'S COURT.

Jeremiah Cullinan and John P. Cahill were fined $10 each for mutual assault at Quincy.

Frank Kenigar of Milton was fined $15, James B. Mack of Holbrook $10, Charles Larson of Quincy $15, John McLeod and Cornelius Buckley of Quincy $5 each, for drunkenness.

Philip Sulkins was arraigned for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Milton. Case continued until March 22.

Alex. Samrah was arraigned for violation of the liquor law at Quincy. Case continued until Wednesday.

BRIEFS

Parish meeting of First church is to be held tonight in the chapel at eight o'clock and all attendants at the church are urged to attend.

Mrs. William S. Pattee, the widow of the historian, passed another milestone on Sunday at her home on Hancock court,—her 85th.

Auctioneer C. H. Johnson sold the Souther place on Foster street at auction on Saturday to Freeman W. Grant of Quincy, the price being $4,000.

At the weekly drive whist of Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, Saturday evening the first prize was captured by John J. Cunniff. Refreshments were served.

In Saturday's Ledger, the price of the iron and brass bed advertised by H. L. Kincaide & Co., was given as $9.48. It should have read Kincaide's price, $4.98. One of the best bargains ever offered.

Frederick H. Bishop of Summit avenue has gone on a business and pleasure trip to Vera Cruz, Mexico and his friends are looking forward to an interesting account of his trip on his return.

Spring is surely here for those bright harbingers, the crocus, are in blossom at the home of Mr. George W. Morton on Spear street. Each season his friends and neighbors look for these little flowers and are always pleased when they appear.

Mrs. Lucy A. Hall, wife of Frank A. Hall, the well known rubber manufacturer, passed away at her home 20 Muirhead street, Sunday morning aged 58 years. She leaves a husband, two sons and a daughter. One of her sons and her daughter reside in the west.

Charles Herbert of 23 Summer street is effecting some wonderful cures with his Indian oil. He was called by Angelo Bianchi of 179 Liberty street on Sunday to treat his daughter who was paralyzed from toe to hip. After treatment she was able to walk across the floor.

The funeral of Mrs. Olive F. Clark, who died from fright at the fire at Brewer's corner last week, was held Sunday afternoon from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Orris L. Beveridge at 24 Nixon street, Dorchester. Services were conducted by Rev. George F. Pratt. The burial was at St. George, Me.

The Quincy Women's club meets tomorrow afternoon at the club house. A fine program is to be given by Miss Pooler who will read the play Miss Hobbs. Wednesday evening a gentlemen's night is to be held at the clubhouse at half past seven when Mr. Darius Cobb will lecture on Art. There will be an informal reception and refreshments.

WOLLASTON'S NEW 12-ROOM SCHOOLHOUSE

Committee of Ward Five Citizens Continue to be Interested in All the Details

New Building Provides for a Large Hall

The Citizens committee of Wollaston to whose energetic work in a large measure is due to erection ofthe new twelve-room brick school building with assembly hall, the contract for the erection of which was awarded by the Mayor last week, are still taking an active interest in the proposed building. .

The committee has followed closely all stages of the subject, and as soon as the bids were opened made careful inquiry as to the reliability of the firm whose bid was the lowest. They found the firm to be a perfectly reliable one, and so reported to the Mayor, with the result the contract was awarded to C. S. Cunningham & Son of Lynn.

Mayor Shea has had frequent conferences with the committee and has extended an invitation to the committee to keep in close touch with the progress of the work and to keep him posted. That the committee will do this there is no question, and when completed Wollaston will doubtless have the best school building in the city.

The architects of the building are McLean & Wright, Mr. Wright being a resident of Quincy, and their plans are said to be the best set of drawings ever gotten out for a Quincy school building.

At the time the order appropriating $75,000 was passed by the City Council, the Daily Ledger published a description of the proposed building, but as many have doubtless forgotten the details a description is republished.

The building will have a frontage on Highland avenue of about 163 feet, and a depth of about 64 feet. It is to be two stories high with a semi-flat roof and will have twelve school rooms and an assembly hall. In the basement are two large playrooms which squared would be about 52 by 62. In addition to these there is a coal pocket and the boiler room and six fresh air rooms, and the usual toilet rooms. On the rear is an incline leading to the school grounds by which the janitor may easily wheel ashes from the basement.

On the first floor are eight class rooms each of which is about 23 by 30. The main entrance is on the centre front on Highland avenue, and leads into a vestibule from which a short flight of stairs lead to a landing which opens into a corridor 11 feet wide running lengthwise of the building.

Entrance to the several school rooms is had from this corridor. Between each school room are the wardrobe rooms. On either side of the main vestibule are rooms. On one side is the teachers room 12 by 23, and on the opposite side the master's private office 11 by 7, and a public waiting room 11 by 11.

There are also two entrances on the rear of the building, each of which lead into a vestibule in which are located stairways leading up and down.

On the second floor are four class rooms of the same size as those on the first floor. In addition to these there is an assembly hall whose dimensions are about 64 by 41. There is also a good sized stage on the rear, which has an opening of about 50 ft. and a depth of 13 feet. On either side of this stage are dressing rooms which lead from the stage. There are also on each side of the hall an anteroom 23 by 16, and between these ante-rooms and rear vestibules, in which are located the stairways, are two lobby rooms about 18 to 8.

There is also a corridor four feet wide in the rear of the platform or stage so that one may go from one dressing room to the other.

The building will be fitted with electric bells and lights, as well as speaking tubes connecting each room of the building with the master's room.

—It is estimated that the money sent home by Italian immigrants to this country during the past year amounted to $250,000,000. With the amount spent by American tourists in Italy, this country is contributing liberally to the prosperity of the Indian people who quite naturally look upon this as "a land flowing with milk and honey" or more literally, with an abundance of wealth.—Milford Gazette.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

NO ANNEXATION WANTED

The anti-American press of Germany seems to know all about Uncle Sam's intentions in Mexico, before the old gentleman has learned that he had any intentions. According to our Teutonic critics, it is proposed to reduce Mexico to a state of feeble vassalage like Panama.

It would cost the American people good money to give Mexico a stable government. As it is very doubtful if the Mexicans want a good government, with all the limitations on their individual freedom this means, they would never pay the taxes necessary to compensate us for giving it to them. If our troops should take the historic step of marching over into a sister state, the action would be taken in part for the protection of American residents and American property. There are sharp limits to the extent to which our people will pay taxes, to protect speculative investments in foreign lands.

People who have placed money in Mexican enterprises knew before they did so that they were taking risks on account of the unsettled state of the country. In return for their risks, they usually got a higher rate of interest. It was a gamble. They could not expect our government to assure them of security of their capital thus hazarded, when there is abundant apportunity to invest funds safely at home at a more moderate interest return. This does not mean that there may not arise situations where our government would be compelled to teach partly civilized people some elementary ideas of government. European nations are accustomed to collect coupons for their bond holders at the cannon's mouth. We might prefer to do the collecting ourselves, rather than have a European army permanently installed in our back yard.

The fundamental objection to Mexican annexation would be that our people want no Mexican representatives in our Congress to say how our home affairs shall be governed.

A Job For Cockrell

Washington, March 13.—Francis M. Cockrell, ex-senator from Missouri, was appointed to be the representative of New Mexico boundary dispute by the interior department.

A Misinterpreted Question.

A young Canadian visited Washington one winter to spend the holidays with a pretty cousin and her family. As he was motoring with his pretty cousin one afternoon she said to him:

"Do you have reindeer in Canada?"

"No, darling," he answered quickly. "At this season it always snows."

—One "Tech" graduate offers to furnish for nothing all the cement required to build the new buildings of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He makes cement. Some other graduate should offer free of cost all the brick or stone required. And so on. "Tech's" new departure is bound to be a tremendous success.—Springfield Republican.

TROLLEY FREIGHT FOR BOSTON.

For the third time within four years the Boston city council has under consideration the matter of granting the Boston Elevated Railway Company the right to carry freight and baggage over its lines inside the municipal limits. The principal questions that body must deal with in reaching its decision seem to be whether the proposed service would impair the road's passenger service, and whether a charge should be made for the privilege in case it is granted. Nowthat the remonstrants have narrowed the issue down to these two points, there should be no great difficulty, it would seem, in arriving at a just conclusion.

Probably ways exist in which the proposed service could become effective without hampering the regular passenger-carrying arrangements. Of course, the physical conditions prevailing in Boston are different from those in other large eastern cities, and some persons argue that further traffic congestion would inevitably develop from the inauguration of a trolley freight unless additional subways and tunnels were constructed immediately. But perhaps these people overlook the ease with which much of the freight could be handled at night, especially the large amount of farm produce that could be sent in from Plymouth, Essex and Worcester counties.

The question of calling upon the company to pay for the franchise may be regarded as at least partially answered by most of the outlying cities and towns in having granted free permits to street railway companies to carry express and freight within their respective municipal limits. These companies now bring freight right up to the doors of Boston, where an ordinance acts as a bar. Springfield, Worcester and Providence are profiting from what is denied the Massachusetts capital. Even the city of Brockton finds it convenient to deal largely with Providence because trolley freight connection with Boston has been lacking.

By granting the desired franchise, Boston would furnish the one link necessary to unify the trolley freight and express service in Massachusetts. Examples of possibilities worth noting may be found in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Indianapolis and other large cities. This matter is one which should be considered from the broad standpoint of public convenience. And it is evident that the proposed service would prove of widespread public benefit.—Christian Science Monitor.

WOMEN INTERESTED.

The women of all churches in Quincy will be interested in the announcement of Boston's Interdenominational Jubilee of Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies. All the large cities of America have been holding these Jubilees. The date for Boston is Wednesday March 15th. At noon luncheon will be served at Ford hall. In the evening at Tremont Temple the public mass meeting will be addressed by noted women, whose abilities have been consecrated to this form of woman's work for women.

One of the speakers is Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, author of the interdenominational missionary text book. "Western Women in Eastern Lands." Mrs. Montgomery is a woman of charming personality and rare gifts. Her presence and addresses will add a distinct pleasure to the Boston Jubilee.

At 10.30 Wednesday morning denominational rallies will be held at the following churches:

Episcopalian—St. Paul's church.

Methodist Episcopalian,—Bromfield Street Church.

Cangregationalists — Park Street church.

Baptist,—First Church, Commonwealth Avenue.

Universalist—Second church, Columbus Avenue and Clarendon Street.

LETTER FROM C. W. GUY

Visits Barbadoes, Mt. Pelee and St. Thomas

Charles W. Guy continues his Panama letters to the Daily Ledger today:

Feb. 14, 7 A. M., we arrived at the Barbadoes, 193 miles from the Port of Spain. Its area is 166 square miles and the population 180,000 people, or 1,200 to the square mile, and the most densely populated place in the world. We returned to the steamer at 4 P. M., rather impressed with the place. The people were all at work. Everyone had on clothes and dressed well. Of course the laborers were barefooted. There are a large number of good houses, hundreds of donkeys which weigh 350 pounds and can draw a load on the level hard road it is said of one thousand pounds.

There was a large lot of steamers and ships in the harbor. We called at the Y. M. C. A. and at the parliament building where the laws for the place are made. The laws are made somewhat independent for the place. Parliament was in session. Across every street around the building were chains during the session so tram cars and other teams could not get by. We took seats and stayed a short time. I was asked what my title was, and at another place was called captain on account of the boat I sailed in Butler's pond. The climate is healthful. It depends on sugar cane for its principal income. On the road to the outskirts of the city the cars are drawn by mules. Fare six cents for the first mile and four cents after. About the vessel were a lot of niggers without clothing who would dive for coins thrown overboard.

Feb. 15, arrived at Fort De France. This port we visited in the morning and was a great improvement on other places. It was here that the refugees from the eruption of Mt. Pelee came. We also saw the statue erected to Empress Josephine who was born here. It was a beautiful marble statue but not well taken care of.

I noticed an American flag on one of the streets. It was at the American consul. I stood opposite and when he came to the window I opened my coat and showed the small American flag I wore. He bowed and came down at once, and was pleased to see us. He belongs in Iowa and he and his wife stay here. He has been here three months and is homesick and wished he was going to United States with us. He receives $900 a year, out of which he pays rent. His wife said there was but one other woman she could speak to. This is the smallest place we have visited. The people speak French and some English. There are no very fine places and it is rather poor country.

Next we visited Mt. Pelee which was formerly one of the most prosperous towns but was destroyed in 1902. All but one man lost their lives. We walked up and down the deserted streets, from which all wood had disappeared leaving the stone work. I saw where the car tracks were. At 7.30 they were a prosperous people. Then heat and ashes came down and in a few minutes all were dead. Two or three shanties have been built by people who live there to sell souvenirs but we could get all we wanted to carry away.

Mt. Pelee is 6,000 and 7,000 feet high and clouds of smoke were coming from the top, showing that nature keeps a good fire going during the winter months.

From here we go to St. Thomas, 312 miles away, with its beautiful houses and trees and lovely views from behind Charlotte Amelia. St. Thomas is the heart of old Spanish Main which for 300 years was the home of pirates. During the last war with the south it was a great place for blockade runners. Our government wanted to make a trade for it for $7,500,000, but the trade was never carried out. I had money enough with me to pay all I considered it worth. This is the only disappointing place we have visited.

We have not had a storm since we left New York nor an accident, and but little sickness. As we draw near home we think much if we shall find all in good health. It has been a great voyage. I have tried to write each day of things that have been happening, but can only tell in a small way what we have seen. The experience has been so large, but we have missed the comforts of home. Will send but one more letter.

BIBLE FIGURES IN DIVORCE

Minister's Wife Presents Many Grievances Before the Court

St. Louis, March 13.—The Bible was quoted by the attorney for Mrs. Cora L. Korb in a brief filed in her suit for divorce from Rev. Arno B. Korb, a Methodist pastor, and for the custody of their 4-year-old son, Theodore.

The attorney insists that verses read by the minister to his little son are not such as can be understood by a child, and were read for the purpose of harassing a bereaved family. One verse, Mrs. Krob says, referred to her mother, who died in January. The quotation was "The Ungodly Shall Perish."

It was also urged that Korb made a servant of his wife by compelling her to shine his shoes 100 times a a year and to perform other menial duties. Mrs. Korb says her husband forced her to witness his twisting of chickens' necks, his method of killing them for the family meal.

WILL DON OVERALLS

Newburyport Ministers to Aid In Building Big Tabernacle

Newburyport, Mass., March 14.—Work on a mammoth tabernacle to house the attendants at the coming Ora Gray evangelistic services started this morning. A call has been sent out for volunteers, and it is said that nearly 100 workers wil give one, two or three days' time in helping along the work.

It is said that most of the clergymen in the local evangelical churches will don overalls and with hammer and nails assist in erecting the building.

WHIPS ARE WORN OUT ON WOMEN'S BACKS

Two Wicked Sisters Become Victims of Mob's Wrath

Lexington, Ky., March 13.—Garbed as "white caps" a score or more of women joined with about 100 men in administering a whipping to two women in Morgan county. The victims of the mob were sisters, Nannie and Mary Combs.

The beating was most severe as attested by the fact that two new buggy whips were worn out on the backs of the women. After that they were forced into a vehicle, sent to the nearest railroad station and put on a train for their former home in Breathitt county under orders never to return.

The Combs sisters were accused of maintaining an objectionable establishment in Morgan county. They had been warned frequently to leave.

COLLAPSES AT FUNERAL

George Bean Almost Falls Across Coffins of Mother and Sister

Stratford, N. H., March 13.—After looking for the last time into the faces of his mother, Mrs. George Bean, and his sister, Nina, victims of the shooting tragedy at Maidstone, Vt., last Thursday, during the funeral services here Sunday, Arthur Bean, the 18-year-old son and brother, who is under arrest charged with the murders, collapsed. He almost fell across the coffins and had to be supported by his guards.

When the services were over he was once more taken to the family home in Maidstone, where the shooting occurred, and was locked up for another night with his guards.

THE EDDY ESTATE

Concord, N. H., March 13.—The inventory of that portion of the estate of the late Mary Baker G. Eddy which lies within New Hampshire jurisdiction was filed at the office of the judge of probate for Merrimac county.

The inventory shows the total value of the estate to be $2,497,146.13. This includes the copyrights, which are valued at $1,400,000.

New Hampshire will receive from the estate under the inheritance tax law a sum considerably in excess of $100,000.

FIRST TAKEN AS A JOKE

Missouri House Passes Bill Prohibiting Treating In Saloons

Jefferson City, Mo., March 13.—The house passed a bill prohibiting treating in saloons. It was introduced by Representative Bodsworth of Calloway, a clergyman, who says it will solve the liquor problem.

It was looked upon as a joke, but members voted for it and sent it to the senate for action there. It received 83 votes to 17 against it.

Three Canal Workmen Killed

Colon, March 13.—A big slide of earth at the north end of the Gatun lock of the Panama canal caught a gang of workmen, killing three and injuring several others.

Utah Defeats Income Tax

Salt Lake, March 13.—A resolution to ratify the income tax amendment to the federal constitution was defeated in the Utah legislature.

FINANCIAL NEWS.

(Special)

The New York stock market appears beset with unfavorable influences. Following the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commision against the railroads came the call of President Taft for the special session of Congress, which will not only pass the Reciprocity Bill, but take up the question of tariff revision. Then came the Mexican difficulty and the reduction of New York Central's dividend, accompanied by rumors that dividend reductions by other roads may follow. Railroad managers freely expressed their disappointment at the rate decision, hence retrenchment is now the feature of the day among most of the great transportation companies. A still further disappointing feature was the continued increase of an already excessive copper supply, as shown in the official monthly statement.

It must be admitted that the market has withstood such adverse influences with surprising firmness. These successive shocks affected values but slightly, and any declines that occurred were quickly succeeded by almost equal recoveries. While there has been a lack of activity ,there has on the other hand been a steadily growing undertone of confidence, explained partly by the fact that weak spots have been thoroughly eliminated and that there is no weak speculative element in the market. The most important factor, however, in the support of values is the abundance of money at cheap rates. The outlook now is for easy money until the crop movements begin with the next harvest.

General business continues quiet and smaller in volume than a year ago. There is, however, a perceptibly better undertone. Some hesitation is caused by prospects of an attempt to revise the tariff at the special session intended for the reciprocity bill. That session should confine its attention strictly to the object for which it was called, the passing of the Canadian Reciprocity Bill, and any general stirring up of tariff agitation is to be thoroughly deprecated. Political conditions, however, are unfavorable to any real or radical changes at least until after another Presidential election. It is understood that the woolen and cotton schedules will be attacked and possibly steel during the special session, but it is doubtful if any very important changes will be affected. There is, therefore, no reason for undue anxiety on account of tariff changes. The same amount of food and clothing and shelter will be required whether there be tariff agitation or not, and such demands will ultimately have to be satisfied. Any postponement of contracts made on account of the tariff will simply have to be made up later on.

There is more or less hesitation arising out of the somewhat spectacular Mexican situation. At this writing there is no occasion for taking alarm. Should the Mexican Government show itself incapable of putting down the insurrection, it may be necessary to call upon American forces to restore order. Under such contingencies it is preeminently our duty to undertake that task. It is also our duty to prevent aid to the insurrection from the United States. Mexico is our near neighbor. American interests there are very important, estimated at a billion to a billion and a half of dollars. Our Monroe Doctrine imposes upon us certain obligations which it is fitting we should be prepared to carry out, especially as foreign countries might have to interfere if we did not. It follows that if we are unwilling to see foreign powers protect their interests in Mexico by force, we must assume that responsibility ourselves. It is evident that some difficulties have developed which are at present unknown to the public; or our Government would not have undertaken to make such an energetic display of force as it has done during the past week. In all probability this presentation of a firm front will tend to solve the problem more promptly, if only to stir the Mexican Government itself into more energetic methods of dealing with the insurgents.—Henry Clews, banker, New York, March 11,1911.

INDUSTRIAL SHOW.

An industrial exhibit under the auspices of the Brockton Merchants' Association is to be held next fall in the State armory. It was found that to have the exposition this winter or spring would interfere with Merchants' week plans. It was therefore voted to arrange for exhibit for some date in the fall. The meeting also voted to co-operate with the movement by merchants of greater Boston toward the passage of a law to prohibit the use of trading stamps. The local association has kept the trading stamp out of Brockton for several years until now and they will add their efforts to those of other merchants.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Parish Meeting of First Church This Evening

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. Charles B. Ames, assistant pastor at the First church, occupied the pulpit Sunday morning and preached an interesting sermon.

Sunday evening Miss Amelia Ayres of the Morgan Memorial spoke before the Young People's Religious Union.

Rev. Howard N. Brown of King's chapel, Boston, gave a talk on "The history of King's chapel" before the Alliance this afternoon.

The annual parish meeting of the church will be held tonight, and it is reported that at this meeting Rev. C. B. Ames, the assistant pastor, will tender his resignation.

The operetta Cinderella in flower land will be given by the children of the Sunday school March 31.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

Miss Fannie E. Austin, for several years pastor of the Universalist church at Leominister and a candidate for the pastorate of the Universalist church in Quincy, preached an interesting sermon at the church on Sunday before a large audiance. Music was by the regular quartette choir.

The Missionary society met this afternoon with Mrs. Lombard on Cottage street.

The Ladies Aid society meets with Mrs. Frank Hobart on Mill street Wednesday afternoon and will hold a whist party in the evening.

The officers of the Y. P. C. U. will be publicly installed Wednesday evening by Roger F. Etz of Tufts college.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

"The power of habit" was the subject of the morning sermon at the Wollaston Unitarian Church on Sunday, and Rev. Carl G. Horst took his text from Prov. 22-6.

Habit, asserted the preacher, is the most important factor we have to deal with in human nature for, always early acquired either for good or for bad, it strengthens rapidly until habit becomes second nature. In early life it is most important to cultivate the companionship of those who will elevate, and inspire to noble action so necessary to the best development, and the early formation of good habits, are good books in the hands of the young.

It is easy to drift into bad habits but good habits are to be consciously built up by a refusal to harbor what is weak and base, and the earlier we learn automatically to choose the best the more freedom will our powers of mind find to cultivate and aspire to the higher aspects of life.

During the discourse Prof. William James' "Psychology" was quoted at some length, and the reading of his fine chapter on habit was earnestly recommended.

The urgent need of discipline was the keynote of the sermon—good emotions to be productive of good results must be at once expressed, either by word or deed. Every vice leaves its mark; we may not count it or measure it by any standard we know, but science and nature record it and we must inevitably reap where we sow. We are not writing in shifting sand, but chiseling in marble, and it behooves us to work with care and precision and always with a high ideal.

Waldo F. Bates rendered very finely two vocal solos, "Jesus, Lover of my soul" preceeding the prayer, was especially well adapted to the occasion and the hour.

The vesper service at the Unitarian church at 4.30 P. M. was well attended, and a double male quartet rendered several selections. The minister gave a short address on "Heroes" dwelling on the magnificent service which is constantly being rendered to the world by those faithful and courageous persons who fulfil responsibilities in unknown walks in life. Great praise is due those heroes whose self-sacrifice is never lauded, and whose fidelity is often unrecognized because so commonplace. E. E. Bullock sang "Consider and hear me" and the congregation united in two vesper hymns.

Whatsoever circle of King's Daughters will meet with Mrs. E. Taylor, 10 Cushing street this evening at 8 o'clock.

The Junior Lend-a-hand Club will meet with Mrs. E. J. Cummings Tuesday, at 3.45 P. M.

The regular meeting of the Ladies Aid Alliance will be held in the vestry, Wednesday, at 2.30 P. M. The subject "What women can and are doing for the public good" will be considered by Mrs. Wilson Marsh of Quincy, Mrs. M. M. Sautelle of Readville and Miss Evelyn Cummings of Wollaston.

The second in the series of Lenten services will be held Wednesday, at 7.45 P. M. Rev. George Hale Reed of Belmont will preach, and Mrs. Royal L. Turner will be the soloist. She will sing by request "Just for Today."

The Sunday School resumed its regular sessions yesterday.

The Young People's Religious Union topic next Sunday evening will be "A person of influence," and the speaker the Rev. Charles W. Casson, the popular pastor in Dorchester.

The Earnest Workers Lend-a-Hand club will meet at the home of Louise Emery, Tuesday at 4 o'clock.

The Unitarian Ministers of greater Boston will have a meeting for worship and reconsecration in the beautiful Unitarian church of West Newton, Monday, March 20. There will be a communion service at 9.45 conducted by the Rev. James DeNormandie. D. D. At 11 o'clock there will be a devotional meeting conducted by the Rev. Julian C. Jaynes. The Rev. William W. Fenn, D. D., the dean of Harvard Divinity school will preach. An organ recital by Charles F. Johnson will be given at 3.30 concluding with prayer.

The Rev. A. Wyman of Unity church in North Easton will occupy the pulpit of the Wollaston Unitarian church next Sunday.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

The pastor delivered his Sunday morning sermon from the text II Tim. 2:19—"Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure."

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was led by Miss Susan Tytler.

In the evening the pastor preached from the text, Acts 27:13-14. "The South Wind" was the subject of the address. The pastor took his thought from the south wind which shipwrecked Paul on the island and pointed out the south winds that wreck the lives of men in modern times.

The "World in Boston" stewards will meet in the lecture room of the church on Tuesday evening.

The Ladies Aid society will hold their annual meeting and election of officers Wednesday evening at 7.30 in the ladies' parlor.

The regular young peoples and adult prayer meetings will be held Thursday evening.

The Bible school concert will be held on Wednesday evening, March 22. Each class will contribute a number to the program. Tableaux, songs, recitations etc will be included. A sale of fancy and useful articles, candy and grabs will be held in connection with the concert.

QUINCY POINT CHURCH.

Owing to the illness of the pastor, the special Lenten sermon had to be dispensed with at both morning and evening services. Instead of these, Mr. Marshall preached sermons he had given before. For the past few days he has been fighting against the grip and was in no condition to occupy the pulpit at all on Sunday. Both morning and evening services were well attended.

The annual church meeting will be held Tuesday evening at 7.30.

The cast of the play "A Man's Voice" will go to Pilgrim church, North Weymouth, Wednesday evening to repeat the play under the auspices of the Ladies Aid society of that church.

The Ladies Aid society will have an all day sew in the church vestry on Thursday. It will be a quilting bee.

ATLANTIC METHODIST.

The pastor spoke at the Sunday morning service from the text Luke 22: 31, 32—"Power through self conquest" was the subject of the address.

In the evening, Rev. R. T. Flewelling of Cambridge preached in exchange with the pastor. A communion service folowed the sermon.

The regular church prayer meeting will be held on Friday evening.

A special meeting of the official board will be held immediately after the prayer meeting.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

"Neglected Things" was the subject of Rev. Wesley Wiggin Sunday morning at the Wollaston M. E. church. It was a helpful sermon, showing how often we let opportunities go by of doing good because of the obstacles in the way.

At the Junior league meeting Sunday afternoon the subject was "The christian and his enemies." The leader was Miss Jennie Keith.

At the Epworth League meeting the subject was "Numerous and dangerous foes". The leader was W. A. Sutermeister.

At the evening preaching service the subject was "Channels of blessing." Miss Laura Douglas sang a soprano solo "A dream of paradise.

Tuesday evening the stewards study class will meet at 7.30 in the vestry.

The next meeting of the Pilgrim union will be held Wednesday at the Highland M. E. church on Washington street, corner of Dakota street, Dorchester. There will be a supper, social hour and speeches.

The annual meeting and supper, served free will be held Friday evening at 7 o'clock. The trustees will meet at 6.40 sharp in the auditorium.

Wednesday the interdenominational national W. F. M. S. jubilee with rally will be held in Boston.

A talent social will be held March 29. "Have you increased your talent twenty fold?" Everyone do something.

CALVARY BAPTIST.

The pastor spoke on a missionary theme at the Sunday morning service, "Behold I set before you an open door" was the text used in bringing out the thought.

The C. E. meeting was led by Miss Robina Skinner.

In the evening the pastor took for his theme "Is there no balm in Gilead?" The four sides of a man's nature, physical, social, intellectual and spiritual were explained, and the thought brought out was that the only real balm comes through the spiritual nature although we seek for it in the others more frequently.

Miss Ingram, the blind singer, was present again Sunday evening and contributed a fine solo "Why should I be discouraged?"

The Bible Study class will meet with Mrs. Renze, Quincy avenue, Tuesday evening

The mid-week prayer meeting will be held at the usual hour Thursday evening. Topic "How to use the Bible."

The Christian Endeavor society will hold a social in the church vestry on Friday evening.

SWEDISH METHODIST.

The pastor preached a missionary sermon at the Sunday forenoon service taking his text from I Cor. 15. "What we are and what we have by the grace of God." The missionary collection was taken and a goodly sum was realized.

Sunday School services were led by David Wollander, assistant superintendent of the school.

Mr. Wollander also took charge of the Epworth league meeting which was held at 6.30.

The sermon at the evening service carried out the thought of the morning. The texts were Mark 1 :32 and Luke 22:44. The scene in the aGrden of Gethsemane was brought out very forcibly. "What it has cost Jesus to make us what we are and to receive for us what we have" was the subject of the sermon. Harry Anderson sang a fine solo at this service.

The Ladies Aid society will meet in the church Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Refreshments will be served under the direction of one of the members.

CHRIST CHURCH.

The rector preached the second of the series of special Lenten sermons on the 'Beatitudes" at the 10.30 service Sunday morning. "Blessed are they that Mourn" was the subject.

The Corporate Communion service was held at 8.30 in the morning. The Woman's Guild and Reapers Circle attended.

At the evening service the rector preached the second in the series of sermons on 'The Excepts of the Gospel."

There will be a meeting of the Vestry this evening at 8 o'clock.

The Teachers Training class will meet in the parish house Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, Miss Briggs of Atlantic will conduct the class.

The Women's Guild will meet on Wednesday at 2.30.

The special preacher at the Wednesday evening meeting will be Rev. Edward Tillotson, church of the Holy Name, Swampscott. The Men's club meeting will be omitted and all members of the club are urged to attend the Lenten service.

The Galahad club will be addressed by the rector on the subject, "The mastery of self at the meeting, Thursday evening.

The stewards of "World in Boston" will meet in the rectory Thursday evening at 7.45.

The Lenten service for children will be held Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The mothers are urged to attend the services as well as the children.

A meeting of St. Margaret's Guild will be held Friday evening at 7.30.

SWEDISH LUTHERAN.

The pastor preached at the Sunday morning service taking for his theme "Christ defeating the power of sin by Forgiveness." The church choir sang a splendid anthem.

The Sunday School session was well attended.

In the evening the meeting was led by Jacob Bergvall, one of the deacons. The pastor preached in the church in Norwood which is without a pastor at the present time.

Mr. Bergvall gave a fine address and the meeting was well attended.

The Ladies' Aid society will meet with Mrs. Andrew Nelson, 211 Whitwell street, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

There will be a social for members of the Young People's society, Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Sophie Nelson, 253 Whitwell street.

The pastor will attend the conference of the Boston District of which he is secretary, to be held in Woburn, Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

SWEDISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The pastor preached at both morning and evening services taking themes in keeping with the Lenten season. The evening service was especially well attended. The pastor spoke on the subject: "Now is the time to become a Christian."

The program committee of the Young People's society will meet Tuesday evening to arrange for the meeting next Sunday.

The regular mid-week prayer meeting will be held on Thursday evening.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

The pastor preached the Sunday morning sermon from the text Ps. 31:12. "I am like a broken vessel."

The Sabbath school was well represented at the noonday exercises.

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6 o'clock had a good attendance. Mr. Malcolm McKenzie was the leader.

In the evening the pastor spoke on the topic: "Behold I have set before you an open door." Rev. 3:8, was the text.

A meeting of the stewards will take place this evening at 7.30 in the pastor's home 182 Glendale road.

A cottage prayer meeting will be held on Tuesday evening at the home of Samuel Murchison, 23 Albertina street.

The regular church meeting will be held on Thursday evening at 7.30.

A second meeting of the stewarts will be held at the pastor's home on Friday evening at 7.30.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Dr. Hardy's theme Sunday morning was, "the religion of Christ mindedness." At the outset he approved the observance of the Lenten period by the Christian churches. To be successful we must have the Christ mind. One thing we need today is new life; life of the soul. There were three evidences of the inner life: The desire to get nearer God; to clear away obstacles and get back to God. Second, interest in the other person—altruism. Third, Christ mindedness brings good cheer—optimism.

At the session of the Bible school the new girls' choir sang very acceptably.

In the evening a good sermon was preached by Rev. Sylvester P. Robertson. Five years ago Mr. Robertson, then a law student, was married in Bethany church to Miss Ethelyn L. Jameson. He has since given up the legal profession, and is now a divinity student. His sermon gave promise of success in his new field.

Friday a corporate meeting of the church will be held to act on letter of Rev. Dr. Hardy. There is some talk of electing an assistant pastor.

SWEDISH BAPTIST.

The Sunday morning sermon was one of the series on the Epistle to the Ephesians. The text of this sermon was Eph. 6:5-9. "The Relation between Laborer and Employe."

The pastor took the thought of his evening sermon from Gal. 4:24. The two types of covenants, Sinai and Agar were explained and formed the main thought of the address.

The choir will meet for a rehearsal on Tuesday evening.

The regular church prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening. Immediately following the prayer meeting a meeting o fthe Sunday School teachers will be held.

OTHER CHURCHES.

Reports from other churches will appear in the Daily Ledger of Tuesday.

Mrs. Grubb, wife of General Grubb, former United States minister to Spain, has received from the queen of Spain the decoration of the Order of the Noble Ladies of Maria Luisa. Mrs. Grubb is the only woman in America thus honored by the Spanish order.

A Stream of Water.

A high pressure jet of water will bowl over a man as easily as a box of matches and leave him half stunned. It will even turn a bullet from its path. Experiments have shown that a jet of water can be produced at such a high pressure that it becomes practically a bar of iron. Swords have been blunted in attempting to cut through these extra high pressure jets. Some years ago an armed thief attempted to hold up a high official of the Bank of England in his private office. The official managed to get out of the room unharmed and locked the door. A resourceful attendant brought the fire hose. He opened the door sufficiently to insert the nozzle. In a few minutes the would be thief was picked up senseless.—Pearson's Weekly.

He Wasn't Afraid.

When Bishop Phillips Brooks was "commanded," as the phrase goes, to speak before the queen some one asked if he was afraid. "No," he replied, smiling; "I have preached before my mother."

BRIEFS

No meeting of the City Council this week.

Do not miss the opening chorus at the Spring "Revue" of the Men's Club at Music hall, April 26.

The Payson Mitchell Co. are having a big trade, having advertised bargains in all departments.

The Washington school pupils were disappointed Saturday because they could not attend the Merchant of Venice at Jordan hall, but no show was given.

E. E. Williamson formerly of Wollaston will address the Historical Society at Hyde Park on March 20; subject, "Errors of so-called history relating to events and persons."

Quincy members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company will attend the smoke talk at the armory this evening in observance of the 273d anniversary of the granting of the charter.

The route of the proposed roadway across Merrymount park is from the park entrance at Fenno street, southerly across the causeway at Black's creek to Park lane, and thence to Valley street.

E. Burton Holmes, the traveller-lecturer, who is en route for South America, has sent souvenir postal cards with best wishes to Quincy friends, for letters of introduction in Argentina.

Saturday, March 11 was the anniversary of the burial of President John Quincy Adams at Quincy in 1848. He died in the capitol at Washington sixteen days earlier. It was an eventful day in Quincy.

The Norfolk county association of the G. A. R. will hold a quarterly meeting at Hyde Park on Wednesday. The W. R. C. association will meet the same day. Sessions will be held morning and afternoon.

The British Association of Quincy is issuing invitations to all men of British birth to a gathering at the Y. M. C. A. on Friday evening, March 24. A musical program will be presented, and the following question debated—"Can a society like this succeed, and how?" J. Carruthers is president.

Charlie Underhill can no longer claim to sport the only pompadour in the lower branch of the legislature. Langelier of Quincy has entered the list and claims that, being a brunette, the Somerville man's blonde hirsute adornment is in the hobble skirt class as compared with the harem skirt.—Hennessy in the Globe.

Charitable Tens Circle of King's Daughters meets Monday afternoon next, March 20, at the home of Mrs. Wilson Marsh, 61 Irving place. Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr., is to present an earnest plea in behalf of a paid secretary for the Conference of Charities as organized under the auspices of the Philanthropy committee of the Quincy Women's club.

At the monthly meeting of the Granite City club Saturday evening a committee was appointed to bring in a list of officers for the coming year to be voted for at the annual meeting in April. A special committee consisting of John H. Johnson, Thomas G. Smith and Mark L. Read, Jr., was appointed to arrange for the annual banquet of the club.

—A Denver clergyman has described dancing as "hugging set to music." That ought to increase the membership of dancing classes for "adult beginners," as the advertisements call them.—Revere Journal.

MORE SERIOUS THAN ADMITTED

Conditions Bordering on Panic Reign In Northern Mexico

MORE TROOPS FOR TEXAS

Twenty Thousand Being Gotten Ready For Emergency—Thirty-Five Killed or Wounded When Rebels and Federals Meet at Aqua Prieta—Mexico to Impose Summary Death For Acts of Violence—Rebels Answer They Will Give and Expect No Quarter

El Paso, Tex., March 13.—It became known here last night that the gigantic maneuver plans being carried out by the war department are of far greater scope than first believed.

Besides the 20,000 men actually sent to the Mexican border, a reserve force practically equal to this is being gotten in readiness for emergency.

The belief is that the situation is more serious than admitted, and that even 20,000 American troops are not sufficient to successfully accomplish what President Taft wishes to accomplish.

Arrangements for accommodating additional men are being taken with as much care and as much business-like dispatch as if the date of the departure had been set. Means of their transportation, methods of shifting them to the most advantageous points and caring for them when they get there have all been considered and worked out.

Conditions bordering on panic reign almost throughout northern Mexico. Stirred by the belief that the revolutionary movement has reached a critical stage, the insurrectos in Chihuahua and Sonora are reported to have renewed activity in tearing up railroads and telegraph wires.

Numerous towns, according to reports, are under siege by the insurrectos, and thousands of women and children, cut off from food supplies, are helpless.

Following the receipt of corrected details concerning the battle at Casas Grandes, a town of about 500 inhabitants, 150 miles southwest of El Paso, where eighty men were killed last Monday, news reached here of a fight at noon yesterday at Agua Prieta, on the border across the river from Douglass, Ariz. Five hundred insurrectos attacked 300 federal troops, but were repulsed with a loss of thirty-five dead and wounded on both sides.

The fighting was short and the insurrectos, armed only with rifles, soon scattered under the fire of a machine gun.

What is believed to be a reliable report of the casualties at Casas Grandes says that fifteen Americans were killed and seventeen Americans were taken prisoners.

The news from Mexico City that President Diaz has decided to take advantage of provisions of the constitution so that summary death may be imposed by the military authorities for any acts of violence, and that the Mexican government has decided to wage a sharp and decisive war of extermination speedily to end hostilities, has spread throughout the insurgent ranks.

The reply, through insurrecto sympathizers here, is that in retaliation the revolutionary forces hereafter will expect and give "no quarter."

Information from insurrecto sources is that the attitude of the Mexican government will intensify a situation already tense, and it will necessarily impose further hardships on non-combatants, including women and children, living in the small towns scattered throughout the "war zone."

WILL BE SUMMARILY SHOT

War of Extermination Against the Insurrectos to Be Begun

Mexico City, March 13.—Thoroughly aroused by the spread of brigandage and vandalism, incident to the revolution led by Francisco I. Madero, and determined to protect property, the Mexican government this week will begin to wage against the lawless element a pitiless war of extermination.

Reviving a provision of the Mexican constitution unused for fifteen years, and acting under its authorization, the government will set aside for six months certain personal guarantees. Those detected in the act of highway robbery, of raiding a village or farm, or train-wrecking, or cutting telegraph or telephone wires or even of removing a spike from a railroad track or throwing a stone at a train will be summarily shot by those making the arrest.

The bill providing for this drastic measure was sent to the permanent commission of the federal congress Saturday. It was signed by Miquel Macedo, sub-secretary of the department of the interior, and clearly states that its enactment is the wish of President Diaz.

That the measure did not immediately become a law is due solely to official form. The permanent commission is a body endowed with power to act when congress is not in session.

The decision to ask for the "suspension of personal guarantees" provided for by the constitution was reached by the president in conference with the members of his cabinet. This provision of the constitution is one calculated to permit the federal government to put into effect at times of extraordinary conditions a form of government approaching that of martial law. Under the constitution the government may go further and declare martial law. The provision invoked does not abrogate the powers of the civil authorities, but it does deny, in casees of certain crimes, the right of formal trial to the accused.

Possibly the nearest approach to this provision of the Mexican constitution found in the constitution of the United States is that which permits, under certain conditions, the suspension of habeas corpus.

FREE FIGHT AT GALVESTON

Soldier and Policeman Stabbed and Negroes Severely Beaten

Galveston, Tex., March 13:—A race riot was precipitated by the stabbing of Winfield Joel, a soldier from the camp at Fort Crocket, by an unidentified negro in a resort.

One Mexican and four negroes were severely beaten and the house in front of which the stabbing occurred was set on fire and burned to the ground. The entire police force of the city was called out to quell the disturbance.

Joel was seriously wounded, but will probably recover. The policeman patrolling the beat was stabbed in the back by a soldier during the melee immediately after the wounding of Joel. He was not seriously hurt.

A remark made by one of Joel's companions about the color of the occupants of the house caused the attack.

CHEAPER ORANGES COMING

Extension on Rate Reductions Granted California Shippers

Washington, March 13.—The interstate commerce commission has extended from April 1 to April 15 the terms of its recent order in the case of the Arlington Heights fruit exchange and other shippers of citrus fruit from California points to eastern destinations.

By the terms of the order the shippers, in order to be in position to avail themselves of the reduction on oranges from $30 a carload to $7.50 a car made by the commission, must not only precool the fruit, but also must pre-ice it.

Counsel For Arnold Family Now Thinks Dorothy Is Dead

New York, March 13.—For the first times since the disappearance of Miss Dorothy H. C. Arnold, ninety days ago, John S. Weith, chief counsel for the Arnold family, admits that he believes the missing heiress committed suicide. Here is Keith's statement:

"As the case goes on day by day and we hear nothing, and we receive no clews as to Miss Arnold's whereabouts, it looms up in my opinion as a case of suicide."

MYSTERIOUS NIGHT FLIGHTS

President of Aero Club No Longer Doubts That They Were Made by Worcester Man Over Massachusetts, Connecticut and Long Island Sound—Declares That Machines Are the Most Practical He Has Ever Seen

Boston, March 13.—Charles J. Glidden, president of the Aero Club of New England, is now a believer in Wallace E. Tillinghast, the Worcester business man who claims to have made almost fabulous flights in an aeroplane of his own. At the invitation of Tillinghast he went to Worcester, had a long talk with him and inspected his machines at the field of operation, the location of which is kept secret.

Mr. Glidden said, without qualification, that Tillinghast has the most remarkable machines he has yet seen, and that he now believes the stories of the wonderful flights at night which have been credited to Tillinghast.

"Tillinghast's machines are the most practical I have ever seen," said Glidden. "For stability they are wonders. There is now not the slightest doubt in my mind that the flights Tillinghast says he has made have actually been made, to a very great extent, as reported, and that the aeroplanes seen over Long Island sound, Connecticut and eastern Massachusetts by night during the last eighteen months were those of Tillinghast.

"The Tillinghast machines are different from any I have ever seen before," he continued. "They are on the monoplane type, but fully as light and much stronger than the Wright machines. Tillinghast is an engineer, has made all his machines himself, and says that he has spent whole months in getting just the right piece of wood or metal for a particular purpose. I don't know where he got the wood for his frames or what kind of timber it is, but you can take a rib of it and twist it three times round before it will break or give in the slightest degree.

"One feature of his best machine is that it will carry a passenger, and that the pasenger can move about the machine while it is in the air. Should the engine stop during a flight the machine can glide long enough to permit the passenger to go back and start the engine.

"The engine has four cylinders with a speed of 2700 shaft revolutions a minute. Tillinghast says he has found that he can carry sufficient gasolene to bear him in a continuous flight from Boston to Chicago.

"The machine which I saw the most of is the fourth which Tillingghast has constructed. He says that he has made several flights at night with it, sometimes with, sometimes without, a passenger. In one of these he says he went thirty-five miles at an altitude of 3000 feet, and the machine certainly seems capable of the feat. He carried a searchlight to enable him to select a landing place.

"I urged Tillinghast to put his machines on the market at once. Why he keeps himself and his craft enshrouded in mystery I don't know; but I suppose that he has some important patents still pending."

INDORSEMENTS FORGED

Boston Banks Said to Hold Notes Signed by Man Under Arrest

Boston, March 13.—Following the arrest in New York of Robert S. Brown on the charge of forgery, the police have received remarkable evidence, it is said, to the effect that at least four trust companies in the vicinity of Boston held among their negotiable securities thousands of dollars' worth of notes signed by Brown and indorsed by George O. Draper, the indorsements being forgeries.

It is further stated that the trust companies will lose nothing, as the alleged forged papers have been or will be taken up and other valid papers deposited in their place.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The young man who was less than a week away from the atmosphere of the law school and its theories was fairly aghast. That his father should be coolly proposing him for a high office in the state to which he was as new as the newest emigrant seemed blankly incredible. But when the incredibility began to subside the despotism of a machine which could propose and carry out such unheard of things loomed maleficent.

"I'm afraid we are a good many miles apart, father," he said, unconsciously using one of his father's favorite speech forms, when the proposal had been given time to sink in. "America is supposed to be a free country with a representative government. Do you mean to say that you and a few of your friends can set aside the will of the people so far that you can nominate and elect anybody you please to any office in the state?"

The farseeing eyes were twinkling again. "Oh, I don't know about our being so far apart," was the deprecatory protest. "You're just a little bit long on theory, that's all, son. When it comes down to the real thing somebody has to head the stampede and turn it, and if we don't do it the other bunch will."

"What other bunch?"

"In this case it's the corporations—the timber people, the irrigation companies and, most of all, the railroads."

"Gantry seems to think that the railroads are persecuted, or his railroad at least."

The senator pulled his horse down to a still slower walk. "Where did you see Dick Gantry?" he demanded.

Evan told of the meeting on the veranda of the club, adding the further fact of the college friendship.

"Just happened so, did it," queried the senator, "that getting together last Saturday night?"

"Why, yes; I suppose so. Dick knew I was in Boston, and he said he had meant to look me up."

"I reckon he did," was the quiet comment; "yes, I reckon he did. And he filled you up chock full of Hardwick McVickar's notions, of course. I guess that's about what he was told to do. But we won't fall apart on that, son. Tomorrow we'll go down to the city, and you can look the ground over for yourself. I want you to draw your own conclusions and then come and tell me what you'd like to do. Shall we leave it that way?"

Blount acquiesced, quite without prejudice to a firm conviction that his opinion when formed was going to be based on the merits of the case, upon a fair and judicial summing up of the pros and cons.

He felt that it would be striking at the very root of the tree of good government to allow himself to be the candidate of the machine. But, on the other hand, he saw instantly what a power a fearless public prosecutor could be in a misguided commonwealth where the lack was not of good laws, but of men strong enough and courageous enough to administer them.

He would see. If the good to be accomplished was great enough to overbalance the evil—it was a temptation to compromise, a sharp temptation, and he found himself longing for Patricia, for her clear sighted comment, which, he felt sure, would go straight to the heart of the tangle.

It was that thought of Patricia and his need for her that made him distrait and absentminded at the Wartrace Hall dinner table that evening, and the father, looking on, suspected that Evan's taciturnity was an expression of his prejudice against the woman who had taken his mother's place, and when the son, pleading weariness, retreated early to his room the suspicion was confirmed.

"You'll have to be patient with the boy, little woman," said the master of Wartrace when Evan had disappeared. "I shouldn't wonder if Boston had put some right queer notions into his head."

The little lady looked up from her embroidery frame with a whimsical smile wreathing itself at the corners of the sensitive mouth. "He is a dear boy," she said, "and he is trying awfully hard to hate me. But I shan't let him, David."

CHAPTER VI.

ON THE WING OF OCCASIONS.

FROM the time it was heralded in the mammoth New Year's edition of the Plainsman as "the newest, the finest and the most luxurious hostelry west of the Missouri" the Inter-Mountain hotel in the Sagebrush capital had been the gathering place of the political clans.

After the solid costliness of Wartrace Hall and the thirty mile spin in a high powered roadster, which was only one of the three high priced motor carriages in the Wartrace garage, Evan Blount was not surprised to find his father registered in permanence for one of the private dining room suits at the Inter-Mountain.

It was very evident that the simple life which had been the rule of the Circle Bar ranch household had become a thing of the past, and, though he charged the new and extravagant order of things to the ambition of his father's wife, he could not cavil at it, since he was himself a sharer in its comforts and luxuries.

For the first few days he was left almost wholly to his own devices. Beyond giving him a good many introductions as the opportunities for them came in the semipublic life of the hotel his father made few demands upon him, and they met only at luncheon and dinner, the first of which was usually served in their suit, while for the latter they went to the cafe. But Gantry was back, and he was always available.

Almost before he realized it Blount had been put in touch with the busy, breezy life of the city and was exchanging nods or handshakings with more people than he had ever known in Cambridge or Boston.

"Pretty good little old town, isn't it?" laughed Gantry one day when he had tolled Blount away from the Inter-Mountain luncheon to share a table with him in the Railway club. "Getting so you feel a little more at home with us?"

"If I'm not it isn't your fault, Dick, or the fault of your friends. Naturally I expected some sort of welcome as David Blount's son, but that doesn't seem to cut any figure at all."

Gantry's smile was inscrutable.

"The people with whom it cuts the largest figure will never let you know anything about it. Just the same, it's cutting a good bit of ice. I have met a dozen men, more or less, within the past day or so who have discovered that you are the brainiest thing that ever escaped from the law school."

"Tommyrot!" derided Blount.

"It's a fact. And they are prophesying all sorts of a future for you." And again Gantry's smile was broadly sly.

"Like what?" scoffed the listener.

"Well, for one thing, they are saying that you are pretty sure to run for attorney general this fall. It's all over town. Everybody's talking about it—talking a lot and guessing a good deal more."

Blount was balancing a spoon on the edge of his claret glass and frowning abstractedly. It was the first little discord in the filial harmony—almost a breach of confidence. Without consulting his wishes, without waiting for his decision, his father had committed him—"taken snap judgment upon him," was the way he phrased it.

"Dick, will you believe me if I say that I haven't authorized any such talk as this you've been hearing?" he asked.

This time Gantry's smile was a grin.

"The honorable senator took it out of your hands, did he? You'll understand that I don't mean any disrespect when I say it's just like him. If he has slated you, you are booked to run, and if he runs you you'll be elected. Those are two of the things that say themselves in the Sagebrush State."

Blount was indignant—"justly indignant," he called it.

"If that is the case, Dick, it is high time that some one should break the charm. I haven't said that I would accept the nomination, and I am not at all sure that I shall say so. And if I don't say so that settles it."

Gantry was plainly shocked. "You don't mean to say that you've got nerve enough to buck the old m—your father, I mean! Why, great cats, Evan, you don't know what that stands for in the greasewood hills!"

"And I don't care, Dick. Up to this present moment I am a free moral agent. I haven't surrendered any right of decision to any one so far as I am aware."

Gantry's eyes dropped to his plate, and his rejoinder was not altogether free from guile.

"Will you authorize me to contradict the talk as I can?" he asked quickly.

Blount was still warm enough to be peremptory. "Yes; you may contradict it. You may say that it is wholly unauthorized." Then he remembered the claims of friendship. "I'll be frank with you, Gantry. This thing has been mentioned to me once, but nothing was decided, absolutely nothing. I didn't even promise to take it under advisement."

Among those who knew him externally Mr. Richard Gantry had the reputation of owning a loose tongue. But none knew better than the real Richard Gantry when to make the loose tongue wag away from the subject which has reached its nicely adjusted climax.

Almost before he knew it Evan Blount was gossiping with his table companion over a social function two days old. A little later the waiter brought the cigars, and the danger point, if any there were, was safely past.

It was when the two young men were on their way to the club smoking room that some one stopped Gantry to talk business with him.

Blount strolled on by himself and, finding the smoking room, went to lounge in a lazy chair, whose chief attraction was that it stood half hidden in a little alcove lined with bookcases. He craved solitude and a chance to think things over fairly and without heat.

A few minutes later Gantry looked in and, apparently missing the half concealed easy chair and its occupant in the bookcase alcove, went his way.

IMMIGRANT FLUENT IN 21 LANGUAGES

He Lands "Broke," But Friends Come to His Rescue

Boston, March 13.—The most accomplished linguist ever held at the local immigrant station arrived here on the steamship Menominee, from Antwerp. He is Max Baruch, aged 30, a tailor and traveling salesman.

Baruch's liberality during the passage across was the reason he was held, for he spent all his money, something over $10, in tipping the stewards of the steamer.

When the passengers were examined Baruch was found to be penniless and he was taken to the immigrant station. He could not speak a word of English, but he amazed the corps of interpreters by conversing with them in about every other known language.

Baruch intends to take up his residence with friends in this city, and these friends secured his release from the immigrant station.

ALLEGED YEGG LEADER

Nineteen-Year-Old Youth Is Arrested For Postoffice Breaks

Portsmouth, N. H., March 13.—Frederick Gilbert, 19 years old, the alleged leader of a gang of yeggs, which has been rifling postoffices in northeastern Massachusetts and New Hampshire for the past six months, was arrested here by Postoffice Inspector Robinson.

The inspector said that this was the first move in an active campaign begun by the postoffice department in stamping out these yeggmen, and he expressed the opinion that the arrest of Gilbert was particularly important because, it is claimed, he was the leader of the gang.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

COMORRISTS' TRIAL BEGUN

Italy Begins Effort to Rid Land of Band of Assassins

DIFFICULT TO SECURE A JURY

Threats of Heavy Fines Prevent Service Dodging—Alleged Head of Organization Denies Being Connected With Murder of Petrosino, the New York Detective—Batch of Thirty-Six Accused of Many Serious Crimes

Viterbo, Italy, March 13.—Formal proceedings have begun in the trial of thirty-six members of the Neapolitan Camorra, including the alleged head of the organization, Enrico Alfano, also known as "Erricone," for the murder of Gennaro Cuoccolo and his wife, Marie Cutinelli Cuoccolo, "the Beautiful Sorrentina."

The prisoners are charged with the assassination of fellow members of the Camorra, as well as many other murders and robberies perpetrated by the most desperate criminal society of modern times.

Petrosino, the New York detective, first arrested "Erricone," the alleged head of the band. His death is supposed to have been the price paid for running down the criminal.

Three hundred and thirty witnesses for the state and 600 for the defense were offered. Only 360 of the latter, however, are to be heard. Twenty-four men comprise the jury, twelve for the jury proper and twelve for possible substitutes.

For the first time in Italy, two presidents of the court were appointed to direct the trial, so that if one should unavoidably be absent the other might take his place. Most of the day was given over to the selection of a jury, but notwithstanding the threats of the presiding judge to apply the severest fines against citizens offering pretexts for not serving on the jury, almost unsurmountable difficulties arose at the last moment and the trial was postponed until Tuesday.

The crown prosecutor strongly stigmatized such want of civic feeling. He declared, if persisted in, it would deprive the accused of their personal liberty and their right to be tried. The authorities intend to leave nothing undone, however, to bring the prisoners to justice and to keep out of the jury box any and all persons who may be thought susceptible to fear engendered by the Camorrist organization or influenced by threats on the part of the supporters of the accused.

"Erricone" protested strongly against the accusation that he inspired or directed or was in any way connected with the murder of the American detective, Lieutenant Joseph Petrosino, which occurred at Palermo in 1909 and which is one of the crimes the government authorities are most anxious to connect the Camorrists with.

All the prisoners appeared to be in good health with the exception of the priest, Citro Vitozzi, who seemed to be ill, and Maria Stendardo, who limped as she entered the place. "Erricone" maintained his usual calm demeanor. He is short and slender, insignificant and rather vulgar looking. The only outward sign of reputed ferociousness is a long scar extending from one ear to the mouth. His companions give the impress of having been gathered together as an exhibit of all types of degeneracy. The general pose of the prisoners is that of indifference. The priest, Vitozzi, alone shows evidence of breaking down, and in his case an effort to gain public pity is suggested.

Vitozzi, who once secured "Erricone's" freedom by telling the authorities that another man had confessed to the murders under the seal of the confessional, was allowed to sit outside the prisoners' cage.

A count of the prisoners during their examination developed that there were only thirty-six. It was explained that the defendants originally numbered forty-two. Of these three are fugitives, two have been released under surveillance and one, Ciro Alfano, a brother of "Erricone," died in prison.

Working Woman Unexpectedly Gets Inheritance of $100,000

Los Angeles, Cal., March 13.—Through the efforts of a San Francisco attorney Mrs. B. N. Porter, heiress to $100,000, was located in Ocean Park after a long search.

Mrs. Porter, who was working on one of the pleasure piers, was found with extreme difficulty because of a second marriage which had changed her name from Scott.

Her first husband's uncle, Alonzo Scott, a lumberman, died some months ago and left his fortune to nephews, nieces and other relatives. Mrs. Porter had not heard of the death nor did she expect a legacy, and the information was like a message from fairyland, she says. She will soon come into possession of the money.

HUB LOSES NOTED CITIZEN

Curtis Guild, Father of Former Governor, Passes Away

Boston, March 13.—Curtis Guild died at his home in this city late last night. He was the victim of a street accident in 1897 and at that time was obliged to retire permanently from active life.

His end was peaceful, the result of no particular disease, but of a general fading away of the vital functions. His family was with him.

Curtis Guild, founder, editor and proprietor of the Boston Commercial Bulletin, historian and club man, was born Jan. 13, 1827, in Boston. He was the father of former Governor Curtis Guild, Jr.

BRIEFS

A sunny Monday at last.

First church holds its annual parish meeting tonight in the chapel.

The joint committees on Public Buildings and Finance of the City Council meet tonight.

A beautiful day almost spring like although the air still has a chill in it.

William G. Spear of Pembroke, formerly of Quincy is in town today calling on friends.

The City Council Committee on Public Buildings was at Atlantic on Sunday looking at the Quincy School building relative to finishing the hall.

Mr. George W. Morton was reported to be resting confortably at noon time. His condition is about the same as for several days past.

The artistic cover of the programs for the concert Wednesday night of the Wollaston Glee club was designed for the club by Mr. Elisha Bird of Wollaston Park.

There is but little change in the condition of George W. Morton, who is seriously ill at his home on Spear street. It is reported however that he was able to sit up for a short time Sunday.

The torpedo boat destroyer Perkins built in Quincy leaves the navy yard tomorrow for a shaking down cruise along the Atlantic coast. She carries ammunition for her small rapid five guns and may also play a part in the Mexican affair.

The funeral of Mrs. Laura Wentworth Fowler a member of the New England Woman's Press association, a Daughter of the American Revolution and an active member of many clubs will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 from her late home. Several from Quincy have been her guests at Daisy farm in Dedham and will regret to learn of her sudden passing away.

A very pleasant time was enjoyed by the members of the Junior League of the Hall Place M. E. church at the social on Saturday afternoon. The children have been earning "experience" quarters and they came together and told the ways in which they had earned the money. The proceeds are to go towards the work of the church. During the afternoon various games were played. The meeting closed with Gospel songs and prayer. Twenty-two of the Juniors were present.

BASKET BALL AT Y. M. C. A.

Old Timers Alert—Makaria First Victor over Team Two

The Old Timers proved that they were still in the game in a contest with the Y. M. C. A. team in the local gymnasium Saturday evening. The regular team won by a score of 37 to 28. The game was well played, and the way some of the more robust M. D.'s got around was very surprising. Trask, Morris and Jenkins were the stars for the winners and "Doc" Monroe was the lone satellite for the losers, scoring 7 baskets.

The summary:

QUINCYS		OLD TIMERS
Trask rf		lb Hardwick
Morris lf		rb Maloney
		lb LaRose
Jenkins, c		c Gay
		cReardon
Parker rb		lf Monroe
Jones rb
		rf Jones
Rich lb		Parker

Score Quincy 37, Old Timers 28. Goals from floor, Trask 5; Morris 5, Jenkins 6; Parker 1; Rich 1; Monroe 7, Jones 2, Gay 1, Reardon 1, LaRose 2, Hardwick 1. Goals from fouls Jenkins 1. Referee Bates, Scorer Torrey. Time 20m halves. Umpire Childs. Timer Mrs. LaRose. Attendance 200.

ALL STARS DEFEATED.

The Y. M. C. A. second team won from the All Stars by a score of 23 to 13. The latter team was composed of Intermediates and Employed Boys of the association and rivalry was keen. Both Dineen and Childs played the best for the winners and Thomas excelled for the All Stars.

The summary:

QUINCY 2nd		ALL STARS
Dineen rf		lb Summers
		Kenn
Childs lf		rb Rebertson
Booth c		c Estey
		McDonald
Newcomb rb		lf Thomas
Melville lb		rf Prout
		Cranshaw

Score, Quincys 23; All Stars 13. Goals from floor, Dineen 3; Childs 2; Booth 4, Newcomb 1, Summers 1, Thomas 2, Prout 1, Cranshaw 1. Goals from fouls, Childs 3, McDonald 1. Referee LaRose. Scorer Torrey: Time 20m halves. Umpire Parker.

MAKARIA GAME.

The Makaria first and second teams had it out hot and heavy on the Y. M. C. A. floor Saturday evening. The former won the contest by a score of 27 to 17. Most of the High school players appeared in the lineup of the two teams, and their playing added zest to the occasion. Glover and Chapman were the stars for the first team and Finley, Manning and Harmon excelled for the losers.

The summary:

FIRST TEAM.		SECOND TEAM
Glover rf		lb Melville
		Nicoll
Bates lf		rb Manning
H. Chapman
Tupper c		c Tirrell
M. Chapman rb		lf Finley
McKenzie lb		rf Harmon

Score First Team 27; Second Team 17. Goals from floor Glover 5; Bates 1, Tupper 2, Chapman 3, McKenzie 2, Manning 2, Nicoll 1, Finley 4, Harmon 2. Goals from fouls, Tuper, Manning. Referee LaRose. Scorer Torrey. Time 20m. Timer Nicol.

The "Green Flash" at Sunset.

A correspondent writes that during the course of a voyage when midway between Marseilles and the strait of Bonifacio a "green flash" was seen at sunset. The sky was perfectly clear after a cloudless day, with little wind. As the sun approached the horizon the line 'twixt sea and sky for about forty-five degrees each side of the sun became suffused with a rich dull rose pink, and the waves reflected a marvelous ruby shade on their surfaces facing the sunset, while the other faces were an opalescent blue or green from the upper sky. The two colors flashed and changed in a marvelous way. Such intensity of coloring had never been seen by those on board. The sun set clean into the sea, and about ten (or less) seconds after it had disappeared a bright green single flash, just like a railway signal lamp, but brighter far, met our view and rewarded our watching for it.—Symons' Meteorological Magazine.

His Denomination.

A man was asked to what religious denomination he belonged.

He thought it over.

"Why," he presently replied, "I believe it is the Episcopal church I stay away from."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FORE RIVERS CHAMPIONS

But McGregors Push Them Hard And Scrore Was Close

Fore River defeated the McGregors 2 to 1 in a game of soccer football on Saturday to decide the city championship in the Boston District association football league. The game was fast and hard throughout, but the Fore River men proved themselves just a little better than the granite cutters, and won the victory. The Thomas Greve cup will thus become the property of the Fore River team for another year.

No scoring was done in the latter part of the game, although the McGregors made a valiant effort to tie their opponents. The line of the winners was superior to that of the South Quincy team, and despite the poor condition of the grounds the men showed considerable accuracy in passing and kicking. "Dan" McDonald and Ritchie did the scoring for Fore River and "Tom" Robertson booted the only goal for the McGregors.

The summary:

SPORTING NOTES.

The High school basketball team was unfortunate on Friday, in being obliged to play when the men were suffering from a reaction from the hard contest with Oliver Ames. Under ordinary conditions Quincy would have beaten Rockland dicisively.

Stanley Bates of Makaria fame has signed with the Lowells of the New England league.

Herman Wigren, B. U. '12, won first place in the second athletic meet for the faculty cup. Wigren won first in both the broad jumps and third place in the running high jump. Wigren who is a Quincy boy, has a good chance to win the cup as he has a big lead in points thus far. The final meet will be held in Boston University gymnasium next Friday afternoon.

The base ball season was opened by two school teams on Saturday, when the sixth grade of the Cranch defeated the seventh grade of the Coddington. C. Mattson, Isaacson and Arbuckle were the battery for the victors, and their rivals were Jones and Hartley.

Frank Hoyt of Norfolk Downs has signed with the Lynn base ball team of the New England league.

Weymouth High defeated the Clapp Memorial team at basket ball Saturday 18 to 13.

On Saturday the Milton intermediates defeated the Neponsets 19 to 6; the Milton juniors defeated the St. Marys 13 to 3; Hyde Park defeated the Silent Five of Milton 24 to 23. Milton five won from the Braintree quintet 31 to 28.

In the U. of P.—Amherst dual gymnastic exhibition held at Amherst on Saturday Allison Marsh, Amherst '13 showed up particularly well in tumbling.

Harold Gore of Wollaston was a point winner at the class athletic games of the Massachusetts Agricultural college Saturday afternoon. Gore also ran on the winning class relay team.

JOHN L.'S BELT USED FOR EXHIBITIONS.

Many years ago a number of fight game followers who loved John L. Sullivan as a champion pooled $11,000 and bought a beautiful gold and diamond championship belt. The belt, which weighed sixteen pounds, is solid gold inlaid with 350 diamonds, many of which are over the carat in size. At that time Sullivan was the greatest ever, and his friends swore by him on any and everything he said. Today John L. Sullivan is doing a stage stunt in order that he may live, and that $11,000 belt is being sent from city to city around the country, being exhibited in saloons and other public places. At the present time it is being exhibited in a cafe in Columbus, O., and it does not belong to old John L. It is the property of a corporation, which leases it for a consideration to enterprising managers of booze emporiums, and as a show window card it is said to be a money maker. It does not look to be worth $11,000.

Ryan to Take Boxers to England.

Former Middleweight Champion Tommy Ryan plans an invasion of England in April and will take Con O'Kelly, his heavyweight; Howard Morrow and Bobby Pittsley, lightweights, with him, having been assured of bouts across the water for the men.

Horse Show Prizes Amount to $60,000.

The prize money at the Olympia horse show, London, will amount to about $60,000, and Canada will be represented at the gathering, which takes place from June 12 to 24. The prizes for jumping competitions alone will amount to $25,000.

THE MERE MAN'S VIEWPOINT

WHEN LOVE IS KING

By BYRON WILLIAMS

IS it really true that the man of today, looking for a wife, is more apt to marry the butterfly girl than the useful little miller who stays at home and helps mother?

I had occasion some time ago to discuss this, and among the letters received was one from a Pennsylvania girl that is interesting. She says:

"I have lived in a number of towns, teaching school, and I know scores of young ladies in the middle class of whom any man could be proud—girls of stanch character, who know how to cook and keep house. They are good, pure, home loving girls, and yet it does seem that the present day man is not looking for that sort of wife.

"I have always lived a life that is clean and pure. My father said he never worried where I might be when night came, for he knew I would remain true to myself. Now, I think it is my privilege and right to expect in a man just as clean a character as I can offer him. I am not plain, and yet not a butterfly; hence no Lochinvar has ridden out of the west for me.

"So long as men are attracted by the fickle, happy-go-lucky type of women who are oftener on the street than in the kitchen just so long will they be harassed by fussy, dissatisfied wives, who fret at insufficient incomes and incompetent help.

"As a rule, I do not believe the girls that make the best wives care much about whether the man has money or not, provided he is clean and honest and willing to work to win success. I know I would be willing to get along on the average salary if my home life were happy. I would want a man I could respect as a husband and as the father of my children. But until such a man comes I shall be respectable—and single!"

Doesn't this appeal to you as a sensible sort of letter? And yet, because we must not expect too much wisdom from young men, the little miller girl should not forget now and then to be a butterfly. If marriageable men were as wise as benedicts the miller would be sought even at the kitchen sink, but it is too much to expect of the young man that he will not be attracted by the girl who looks the prettiest and acts the coyest.

A good mother who knows the value of a practical wife for her boy can do much to open the eyes of the lover, but she must do this adroitly, not by open and earnest argument, lest the boy think she is meddling in affairs that too many young people believe are strictly personal.

Young men do not go out deliberately to woo. They seek pleasure and companionship, and Eros, the knave, watching their social life, shoots a barb into their hearts while they are disporting themselves. Naturally a boy is attracted by a pretty face and becoming frocks, but the wise young man will analyze the owner before proposing. His future happiness and hers, too, depend upon his judgment. That old bit of advice about choosing the daughter of a good mother is still good.

Young man, don't make the mistake of marrying for money. The love of money is causing enough woe and broken lives in this world without adding your misery to the aggregate.

Remember that beauty fades, but a rich mind improves with age. The fact of your loving a pure, good girl, however, is no reason why you should determine to win her unless you are worthy of her; unless you, too, are clean in mind and body. The world may set up a standard of double morality, one for you and one for the girl, but nature never has recognized this misnomer.

There should be a clearance house for every engagement—at the family doctor's office. This was an advance thought ten years ago. Today any physician will tell you of the wisdom of such a safeguard.

If we, as a nation, would turn our attention to these subjects for a time, shut out false modesty and learn the truth, the percentage of one divorce for every eight marriages might be reduced in the United States. It is worth while when we consider, in addition, the thousands of miserable couples who are enduring unhappy marriage for the sake of their children or because of pride?

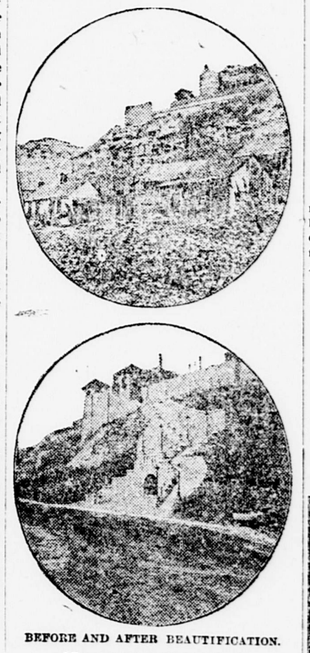

WOMEN TAKE PICTURES TO RID CITY OF SMOKE.

Unsightly Places In Your Town Can Be Removed by Camera.

Clubwomen, the wives and daughters of wealthy St. Louisans, armed with cameras, recently made pictures of chimneys that smoke in the campaign to rid the city of its murky atmosphere. All photographs will be presented to Smoke Inspector Parker. An army of 350 women participated.

It has been suggested that this method might be tried advantageously and effectively with the many eyesores to be found in nearly every town.

places, etc., then publicly exhibit them, showing what a disgrace to the town they are. Public feeling should soon become aroused, and the objectionable spots will be removed. In the illustrations one can see the possible good that can be accomplished in cleaning up your town. They show how an unclean, insanitary, unbeautiful spot was cleared of its debris and with a little masonry work was converted into a really handsome section.

PASTOR AND ASSISTANT RESIGN

Rev. Ellery Channing Butler of First Church Desires to Retire from Active Ministry

Rev. C. B. Ames to Go to Other Fields

The annual parish meeting of the First Congregational society was held Monday evening in the chapel and was one of the largest and most enthusiastic meetings held for several years.

FIRST CHURCH (UNITARIAN)
Under each of the central pillars is buried a president of the United States

J. Brooks Keyes, parish clerk read the warrant and called the meeting to order. John Q. A. Field was chosen moderator, a position he has filled for many years.

Reports were given by the parish assessors, treasurer, and collector, the treasurer's report showing receipts for the year of $14,528.34 and disbursement of $14,479.73.

During the year $5000 has been received from the estate of the late Elizabeth E. C. Williams, and duly invested. The Sarah Vinal fund now amounts to $613.56. The Adams fund, $20,000; Caroline Wood fund, $500; Anne Beale fund, $1000. The unexpended balance of the Organ fund is $700, and is invested for the care of the organ.

The outstanding notes of the society amount to $6,900. The collections for church purposes during the year have amounted to $1,165.86.

Appropriations for the coming year amount to $5,460.

Officers elected for the coming year are as follows:

Parish Assessors—Henry M. Faxon, James H. Stetson and Thomas Fenno.
Treasurer—Thomas Fenno.
Collector—George H. Field.
Clerk—J. Brooks Keyes.

The committees for the care and investment of the various funds of the church were reelected.

A letter was read from Rev. Charles B. Ames who has served the parish as assistant pastor for nearly three years, expressing his desire to have a parish of his own and tendering his resignation to take effect June 30th. The resignation was accepted with regret as Mr. Ames has been a most earnest worker, especially among the young of the parish who will miss him. The meeting voted to extend to Mr. Ames its good wishes for success in his new field of labor.

Another letter of resignation was read that came as a surprise, that of Rev. Ellery C. Butler, who has been pastor over the church for over seventeen years. Mr. Butler does not resign to assume another pastorate but as he said in his letter he believed the time had come for him to relinquish active ministerial work.

On motion of Brooks Adams action was not taken on accepting Mr. Butler's resignation but it was laid on table for further consideration and referred to the parish committee. It was voted to amend this motion by adding two members of the parish to act with the committee to represent the young people of the parish, the two selected being Miss Elizabeth Faxon and Charles H. Johnson.

New business discussed was the general condition of the church grounds, the broken chains between the posts and the regilding of the dome. This brought out quite a general discussion and a feeling that all should receive immediate consideration, the dome and chains being especially considered. A committee of ten was appointed to raise funds for the improvements as follows: Henry M. Faxon, George E. Pfaffmann, Mrs. E. B. Marsh, Fred B. Rice, Mrs. Wilson Marsh, Charles A. Price, Henry R. Holden, Miss Ada Nightingale, Perry Lawton and Harry L. Rice.

Two new committees were created that of hospitality and music. The five selected for the hospitality committee were: Mrs. William B. Nichols, Mrs. Edward B. Marsh, Mrs. Arthur W. Hall, Mrs. Albert W. Parker and E. B. Marsh, and the three on music: Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Mrs. Nathaniel S. Hunting and Mrs. John D. Buckingham.

The meeting was in session two hours and through it all there was a free discussion, often animated, but most harmonious, expressive of good feeling and a general interest in the welfare of the church.

A note of thanks was extended the parish committee and officers for their faithfulness and service after which the meeting adjourned.

BELOVED PASTOR.

Rev. E. C. Butler was called to the First church April 9, 1894, at a salary of $2,500 and was installed June 5, of that year. Thus his pastorate at the Quincy church has been nearly 17 years, and a year hence will be nearly 18 years, a longer pastorate than his predecessor Rev. D. M. Wilson or his predecessor Rev. John D. Wells, respectively 13 and 15 years. Mr. Butler is generally beloved by the people of the First church and in fact the people of the city. Quincy feels much as did Beverly when Mr. Butler resigned his pastorate there in 1894. At that time the Beverly Citizen said:

"Rev. Ellery C. Butler, pastor of First Parish church of Beverly for nearly a quarter of a century, has accepted a call from the Unitarian society in Quincy, and will leave here about the first of June. This information will be received with regret, not only by his parishioners, but by our people generally.

"Mr. Butler was born 50 years ago in the beautiful village of Cooperstown, N. Y., the scene of the famous Cooper novels. The early part of his life was spent in wandering over the hills and valleys of those famous Indian hunting grounds, and he is intimately acquainted with them and the head waters of the Susquehanna river, and therefrom comes his life long fondness for field sports.

"His early training was obtained in the schools of that place; he fitted for college in the academy there and then went to Antioch college in the southern part of Ohio near Cincinnati. On leaving college he taught school for some years, and afterwards entered the Theological school at Meadville, Pa., graduating therefrom in due course in June 1869.

"Immediately after graduating he accepted a call to Fairhaven, Mass., where he remained for three years.

"One day he met Prof. E. J. Young, then of Harvard college, who at that time was supplying the pulpit of the First Parish church in Beverly, and upon his invitation made his first visit to Beverly, to preach. He was at once called to the pastorate, and accepted in 1872, where he has remained ever since in a long and happy pastorate.

"During all these years the utmost harmony of relations has prevailed between himself and the parish, which has steadily prospered under his ministrations. The society has twice raised his salary since he came, of their own accord. The society is now strong and united, and is an ideal place for a bright young man, the society still think Mr. Butler is the man.

"Mr. Butler married soon after going to Fairhaven, a sister of President Carey of the Meadville Theological school and daughter of the late William H. Cary of Medway. She has been his worthy mate during the long years of his Beverly pastorate.

"Mr. Butler has received many calls since he has been in Beverly, several at a much larger salary than the one he has now accepted, but never before could he make up his mind to sever the tie that bound him to this parish. He only does so now because he feels that a younger man can better carry on the work that of late has worn heavily upon him, not from any desire to leave Beverly.

"The friendships of his life are here, his affections are made and cannot be unmade. There is, in his opinion, no place like Beverly; living he will be

BUSINESS MENS ASSOCIATION

Committee Appointed to Bring About Amalgamation

A meeting of representatives of the Board of Trade, Merchants' Association and Granite Manufacturers' association was held Monday evening to discuss the question of the amalgamating of the three organizations. George H. Brown presided and after some discussion it was voted that a committee of three, consisting of Eugene R. Stone, president of the Board of Trade; John C. Murray president of the Granite Manufacturers' association; and H. Everett Crane, president of the Merchants' association, be appointed to devise a plan for the amalgamation of the three organizations.

RESCUED BY HER MOTHER

Heroic Work by Mrs. Callahan When Child Was in Flames

Prompt action on the part of Mrs. John Callahan of Madison avenue, South Quincy, Monday afternoon saved her three-year-old daughter Margaret from being burned to death. As it was, the child was badly burned.

The child with others was playing about a bon fire that had been built by some boys when her clothing took fire. Her agonizing screams attracted the attention of her mother, who ran out and seizing the child tried to smother the flames by rolling her own dress about the child. Mr. Callahan's dress took fire, but she was able ty heroic work to beat this fire out, as well as to stifle the flames that were burning the clothing of her child

Dr. Reardon was called and found the child was badly burned about the stomach and abdomen, but said she had an even chance for recovery, as it is not thought she had enhaled any of the flames. The mother wore a dress of light material, but she never thought of her own danger. Had she hesitated a minute in going to the rescue of her child it would have been burned to death.

NEWS FROM W. F. BURRELL.

A telegram received from Chief Burrell at Baltimore Monday night stated that his brother Walter F. Burrell had been stricken with a shock, and that he had lost his speech and the use of his left arm.

"How's your town coming along, doctor?" was asked of the young physician who hails from a rural village. "Doing as well as could be expected," replied the doctor, who is assiduously cultivating a professional air. "It is beginning to show symptoms of a couple of new business blocks and a bigger schoolhouse."

OLD MAIDS CONVENTION

Climax Came When One Wanted to be a Man

Twenty-seven old maids convened in the Y. M. C. A. hall Monday for the consideration of the business of their club, with special reference to matrimonial matters. The Y. M. C. A. was chosen as the place of meeting, because it is a well known fact that many nice young men congregate there, and the chances for matrimony would be made much brighter when these maidenettes were allowed to bask in the sunshine of the Y. M. C. A. smiles and glances. Furthermore, the convention was run under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the Association.

The opinion was almost unanimous that a man was all that was necessary to perfect happiness. Prof. N. Gorham Nickerson, the speaker of the convention, was introduced, and after preliminary remarks brought up the subject of his great and wonderful invention which would change age to youth, plainness to beauty, and awkwardness to grace. When volunteers were called for to test the efficacy of the famous elixir, two of the spinsters stepped forward immediately.

The transform thier effected the most astonishing changes imaginable. A plain and somewhat robust woman became beautiful and graceful, another acquired a voice like a nightingale, and so on. One aspirant for grace and beauty was given too much of elixir number two, and came out with her face a dark shade of black, but a little number one fixed things up fine.

The climax came when one of them wished to become a man. The professor realized that here was the supreme test of his marvellous machine. Upon this experiment depended the future of the civilized world, for if he were able to change sex, the whole course of the race might be swerved to meet his desires, or its desires, provided the pocketbooks of the applicants were well lined. The elixir was poured into the expectant and excited woman, and she was hustled into the machine with all due celerity. A terrible grinding noise, the clanking of chains and an explosion told the sad tale of the failure. Wonderful as the results had been in changing age and temperament, "here was the lock to which he found no key," and the professor had to acknowledge defeat at last.

The assembly hall was crowded with appreciative spectators. The different performances by rejuvenated spinsters. The reading by Miss Simmons, songs by Miss Winnifred White and Miss Margaret Hall whistling solo by Miss Grace Parker and fancy dancing by Miss Ruth Bass were all well received by the audience.

The other young ladies who assisted in the convention were: Misses Miriam Rhodes, Dorothy Packard, Margaret Hunt, Esther Beckford, Eleanor Whittemore, Dorothy Lowe, Edith Stone, Lulu Moody, Esther Dasha, Gladys Hunt, Ella Packard, Helen Mitchell, Dorothy Taylor, Minnie Barnicoat, Helen Jones, Helen Seavey, Edith Chapman, Caroline Lewis, Marie Bass and Marion Bolster.

A violin solo by Everett Rhodes made a very acceptable opening number. Mrs. Jennie Hocking Hunt accompanied him and furnished accompaniment for the performers in the play.

After the adjournment of the convention, an opportunity was given the audience to fill its sweet tooth. The ladies in charge of the candy table were: Mrs. Carroll Bates, Mrs. L. F. LaRose, Mrs. Bean, Mrs. David H. Goodspeed and Mrs. Edwin Smith.

Mrs. N. G. Nickerson, general chairman, carried out her part of the program with her usual ability. Mrs. E. I. Beal, president of the Auxiliary assisted her very ably.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Aranato Abbonetti, a well known interior decorator, died Sunday at his home 36 Isabella street, South Quincy. He had not been in good health for some time but was about Sunday. Returning from a walk he lay down on a couch and died soon after. Mr. Abbonetti has been a resident of Quincy for the past sixteen years. He was an expert in interior decorative work making a specialty of churches. Among the churches he decorated were St. John's, St. Mary's and the Sacred Heart churches of Quincy, St. Leonard of Port Maurice of Boston, and St. Mary's of Randolph. He also did the interior decorating of J. P. Morgan's house at Newport, R. I. He leaves a widow and two sons one of whom is a well known boxer.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Following closely upon the resignation of Dr. Hardy of Bethany church comes the double resignation Monday night of Rev. E. C. Butler, pastor and Rev. C. B. Ames, assistant pastor of First church. The Universalist church is without a pastor also. It would seem almost like an epidemic of resignations among the pastors of Quincy centre.

It is with a feeling of general satisfaction that the public learns that members of the First Parish are to make an active canvass for funds with which to gild the dome of the church. Years ago this dome was a landmark visible for many miles especially from the water. Yachtsmen point to the dome of the capitol as being in Boston and years ago we also had an object to point to the dome of First church in Quincy.

As about a thousand dollars will be needed to do the work properly the money will probably have to be raised by popular subscription and it should be forthcoming without much urging as it is a civic improvement in which all should have a part. Who will be the first to subscribe?

TRYING WOMEN FOR MURDER.

A number of talesmen examined at Albany, N. Y., last week, for the jury that is to try Mrs. Edith Melber for the alleged murder of her five years old boy, said that a woman should not be put to death. Apparently this was not based on general objection to capital punishment, but to chivalry between sexes. To serve on a jury where a woman is to be tried for a capital offense, must indeed be a distressing experience. It is bad enough to see a robust man in the toils of angry society. To see a woman, presumably more frail, at bay with all the organized forces of law and government attacking her, indeed awakens one's deepest pity. But what would happen if the principle be admitted, that one's weaknesses and needs are to become a shelter from the fruit of crime?

If a man is hard up for money, needs it to support his family, he would thereby have his sentence commuted fo r highway robbery. Every person accepts the protection of law with the tacit understanding that he or she is willing to pay the penalty if these laws are broken. If such persons do not like these laws, do not propose to perform their share of the social agreement, they should go where these laws do not exist.

Our laws regarding women are gradually being changed so as to extend equal justice to both sexes. People who do not favor equal suffrage take this ground, not because they do not admit that equal justice should be given women, but because they believe in a specialization of function, by which women should care for home interests and men for business and civic interests. As the modern conception is to give women equal privileges, they must accept it with equal responsibility. Otherwise, the rights of other women to their lives and the lives of their dear ones, will be in danger of destruction from that devil that sometimes finds itself incarnate in the heart of a woman.

—The expenditure of $1,250,000 for advertising this year has been authorized by the Harriman railroads. It is planned to spend most of this money in exploiting the Union and Southern Pacific systems through newspapers and magazines, though illustrated pamphlets and lectures with demonstration cars and stereopticons are to be included as well as advertisements to be placed in publications in foreign countries. Both roads are to be double tracked at an expense of $75,000,000, and the costly advertising campaign is designed to promote the new business than can be handled when the second track is completed. Here is a striking illustration of how all large business interests are recognizing the value that lies in systematic publicity.—Milford Gazette.

QUERY FROM COUNCILMAN.

Editor Daily Ledger:

Are they prize fights or scientific boxing bouts? This question is in the minds of many of the people of our city today, and in view of the many objections it would seem fitting at this time to explain. Would suggest to the promoters of the affairs, in view of the Post report which gave many the impression that it was a prize fight that this reporter was in error regarding the strenuousness of the procedings. I for one would desire to hear their side of the story having at the solicitation of good citizens placed a resolve before the Quincy Board of Trade as follows:

Resolved—that it is the sense of the Quincy Board of Trade that the promoting of prize fights in the city is not conducive to the best interests of our city.

I was assured at the meeting that the affair was to be simply a scientific exhibition, so did not press the matter, and it was laid on the table for further information and action. In fairness to all concerned would suggest the matter be settled, that intellegent action may be taken, for I assume the Board of Trade should stand for both the moral and physical welfare of our city.

JOHN R. RICHARDS.

Quincy, Mar. 13, 1911.

NOTED LECTURER HERE

We are pleased to announce that the people of Quincy are to be favored with a Bible lecture by Mr. A. H. Macmillan of New York City. The lecture will be given in Colonial hall, Savings Bank building Wednesday evening at 7.30 under the auspices of the International Bible Students' Association. The purpose is to stimulate a deeper interest in Bible study, and to this end the lecture will be entirely free, not even a collection will be taken. The subject of the lecture will be "How Shall God Save the Heathen?"

Mr. Macmillan is associated with business men of New York who also have a deep interest in Bible study and religious work. They are not seeking money nor anyone to join a system, but their purpose is to stimulate among all Christian people a deeper interest in the study of the Bible. Mr. Macmillan is recognized as an able Bible lecturer, and has been heard with great interest by large audiences throughout the States and Canada. He presents his arguments in a clear and forceful manner, interposing the same with pathos and humor of which he has an inexhaustible supply. No one can listen to him without being deeply impressed with the wonderful things contained in the Bible and the great blessing God has in store for those who obey Him. He comes highly recommended, the press reports throughout the country being very complimentary to him and his lectures.

The Writers.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is reported as saying that he would "rather earn $500 by literature than $5,000 in any other way."

Professor Stanley Lane-Poole is the most eminent authority on Arabian history and oriental art. He is only fifty-six, but has written a score of books on his studies in the east. He was born in London, but makes his home in Wicklow.

The late Sir Theodore Martin when asked which he wrote of the famous "Bon Gaultier Ballads," among the wittiest poems in English literature, confessed that he had forgotten which were his and which were the work of his collaborator, Professor Aytoun.

Whims of Parrots.

"It is odd," said the bird store keeper, "but it is true, how people come into a bird store and expect to open up a conversation with a parrot offhand. They fail and then make up their mind that the parrot is worthless. This will apply to a majority of seekers after a talking parrot. They do not give the bird credit for the sense it actually possesses. There are parrots valued at anywhere from $50 to $500 that will not be coaxed into conversation with a stranger nor while he is present, although they are the very best of talkers. Parrots often refuse to perform when there are purchasers looking on, but once the store is clear of them they will chatter away through their whole vocabulary as if their very lives depended on their being heard. This obstinacy often spoils good sales. Most parrots will talk to a girl or woman much quicker and freer than to a boy or a man."—Browning's Monthly.

—Annexation, at first blush, sounds good, it holds forth the glamor of becoming part of a great city, and holds out inducements which make our municipality look small. But wait! There is a great deal to be said upon this subject before we make up our minds. —Chelsea Catholic Citizen.

UNREAL BOSTON SAYS NEWTON

Unanimously Opposed to Scheme of Chamber of Commerce

The Board of Aldermen of Newton are unanimous against the "Real Boston" movement. The following report was unanimously made by a sub committee and was adopted Saturday night:

"That the 'Real Boston' project originated within and is being promoted by the Chamber of Commerce.

"That is was not asked for and is not being promoted by the forty cities and towns interested.

"That the underlying aim is to secure a larger statistical rating for Boston, but the mere adding of area will naturally lead other large cities to the same course and thus make no appreciable change other than to create confusion in census figures.

"That in preparing statistics, suburban localities and their relation to the main cities should be considered, but that this should be finally determined by the census bureau, on a logical and scientific basis, taking into consideration the conditions surrounding all the large cities. And if equal publicity were given to the present figures of Industrial Boston that the real aim of the chamber will be accomplished without the need of any loose confederation.

"That the metropolitan needs of this territory are now cared for by a series of permanent metropolitan boards.

"That a political lay board of annually shifting personnel as proposed, cannot be expected to care for district matters in a satisfactory way and that confusion would result.

"That the proposed council means central control of matters of distinctly local government.

"That 15 per cent. of the population will have 70 per cent. of the entire vote of the council.

"That Industrial Boston, under the present system of local government, has grown more commercially in the last decade than any other industrial district, save one, in the United States.

"That hasty legislation of any sort is to be avoided."

AN HONEST MAN INDEED

Settles Bill For His Own Birth After Twenty-Five Years

Coudersport, Pa., March 14.—If Diogenes had been around with his antern looking for an honest man, he would certainly have doused his glim when he found Leroy Vergason of this place.

A physician here put some accounts of long standing in the hands of an attorney for collection. Among them was a note of $10 against Alphonso Vergason for professional service at the birth of his son, Leroy, twenty-five years ago.

The attorney conceived the idea of calling on the young man to see how he felt about paying the bill for being ushered into this world. Vergason, who is married, willingly paid the long standing account, and nothing was said about interest.

TWO BROKERS ARRESTED

One Charged With Larceny and One With Intent to Steal

Boston, March 14.—Two State street stock brokers were arrested yesterday afternoon on secret indictment warrants in connection with stock transactions.

Richard C. Jacobs, a broker at 60 State street, was arrested on a charge of larceny in fifteen counts to the amount of $4721.50 in cash, stock and notes from seven complainants.

Allan H. MacKenzie, member of a curb brokerage firm of 84 State street, was arrested on a charge of intent to steal on complaint of Wesley A. Gove, a broker. The transaction between them, it is alleged, involved $9432.

Both men were arraigned in the superior criminal court and gave cash bail, MacKenzie for $1500 and Jacobs for $4000. There is no connection between the cases.

BECAUSE OF JUDGE'S DEATH

Keliher and Other Cases Before Court of Appeals to Be Reargued

Boston, March 14.—The case of William J. Keliher, who is under eighteen years' sentence for aiding and abetting George W. Coleman in misapplying funds of the National City bank of Cambridge, will have to be reargued before the United States court of appeals, on account of the recent death of Judge Lowell.

All of the cases on which Judge Lowell sat, and in which no opinion was handed down, will be reargued. The Keliher case and the others will come before the court again, beginning with the week of April 11.

Keliher is in the Cambridge jail. He had been out on $50,000 bail, but his bondsmen gave him up.

Has Sixteen-Hour Seance With University Medical Students

Bloomington, Ind., March 14.—Raced and walked on a skating rink floor for sixteen hours, beaten with rough wet towels and rubbed with salt until his flesh was raw, Thomas Edson went through a harrowing experience to escape death from morphine. He took ten grains and then, full of repentance, hunted a doctor.

To keep him from going into a fatal sleep the physician summoned to his aid a score of university medical students. In relays they started a sixteen-hour Marathon. Edson was stripped to the waist. His legs were laid bare by cutting his trousers off at the knees. With students at each elbow he was walked and trotted by the hour.

A third student followed, beating him over the back and legs with a rough wet towel. When the flesh became raw salt was applied.

ON CHARGE OF FORGERY

Directors of Trust Companies In New York May Be Indicted

New York, March 14.—The grand jury has begun an investigation into the affairs of the Carnegie Trust company, which was closed by the superintendent of banks on Feb. 1. Three witnesses, including the vice president of the suspended institution, were examined.

At the conclusion of the sitting, District Attorney Whitman announced that directors of two other trust companies with which the Carnegie Trust company had business dealings would testify today. The investigation, it is said, may result in the indictment of two and possibly three directors on charges of forgery.

Girl Admits Shooting Man Who Made Love Against Her Will

Rutland, Vt., March 14.—Pending the report of Dr. Stone, who conducted an autopsy on the body of Lugius Vermillo, who died as the result of a bullet wound, Miss Camela Covina of South Poultney, who is alleged to have fired the fatal shot, was arrested yesterday and is held at the county jail.

Vermillo was 45 years old, while the girl is but 17. The shotoing took place at the girl's home in South Poultney. According to the girl's story he attempted to make love to her while they were alone in the house and she shot him in the back.

SUNDAY SERVICES

HALL PLACE M. E.

An excellent sermon was preached by the Rev. Carl H. Raupach, pastor, at the Hall Place M. E. church, Sunday morning. He took for his text Hosea 6:3—"Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord," and he showed that if we make the beginning in the Christian life by taking Jesus Christ, the Son of God, to be our personal Saviour, that though we do not understand all the mysteries concerning the birth of the Son of God, or the atonement by His death, neither can we understand all of God's plans, since "His ways are not our ways nor His thoughts our thoughts," yet, if having made the beginning we are faithful in following Him, we shall know and understand in Eternity.

Sunday School was held at the close of the morning service and the Junior League at 3 P. M. Miss Lillian Johnston lead the Epworth League devotional services at 6.15 on "Numerous and Dangerous Foes"

The pastor took for the subject of his evening sermon, "Love rather than liberty," and for his text I Cor. 8:13 "Wherefore if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." He applied the principle of Paul's thought to the question of amusements, especially and to some questionable habits in the lives of men, whereby we through our example, cause others to stumble and fall. He said that while perhaps we might derive no special harm from frequenting questionable places of amusement, the fact that others do derive harm should lead us to exercise love in trying to keep others away from these things rather than use the liberty that is ours to the detriment of the weaker brother or sister who may not be able to withstand the temptations which such places suggest.

The adult probationers are to meet in the vestry Monday evening.

A meeting of the official board of the church is called for Tuesday evening.

Wednesday evening the Pilgrim Union of Epworth Leagues will meet in the Highlands M. E. church, Dorchester. All, whether members of the Epworth League or not are invited to attend.

Prayer meeting Friday evening at 7.30.

DEPRESSION IN LYNN.

At a conference held in the office of Mayor Connery Saturday, between the citizens' committee and the Municipal Council on the question of raising or depressing the Boston and Maine railroad tracks through the business section of Lynn, the committee decided to have the tracks depressed at any cost. It is expected to cost the city over $1,000,000 and the railroad much more in having the original plans changed.

MAINE'S TURRET RAISED

Released From Havana Harbor Mud After Several Attempts

Havana, March 14.—The top of the forward turret of the battleship Maine was fished up near the bow of the wreck. Although it is twenty feet in diameter and weighs eighteen tons, it is unwarped, but the terrific force of the explosion is shown by the way the bolts are shorn off.

The turret top was deeply bedded in the harbor mud, and for the last two weeks has interrupted the pile driving operations to complete the coffer dam. Every previous effort to pull it up merely resulted in breaking the tackle.

Was Deserted by Fiance

Thomaston, Me., March 14.—A year ago, on the night set for her wedding, Miss Letha G. Feyler, aged 21, was startled to learn that her fiance had disappeared. His failure to return resulted in the disordering of her mind, and yesterday she committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid at her home here.

SLAVE GIRLS FOUND IN SECRET CHAMBER

Said to Have Been Bought In China For Sum of $25,000

San Francisco, March 14.—A spectacular raid in Chinatown resulted in the capture of six Chinese slave girls said to have been illegally imported and purchased for the sum of $25,000.

The girls were removed to the Angel island immigrant station and will be held to await the action of the government. It is believed that the girls were smuggled into this port within the last six months, and that they will be deported.

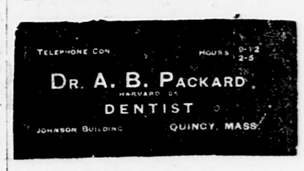

Before the hiding place of the girls was discovered the officers chopped through seven blind doors. The door of a secret chamber wherein the girls were huddled was an ingeniously contrived panel containing a portrait of the [illegible]

COLLEGES REBEL AGAINST RUSSIA

Crisis In Higher Education of Czar's Empire.

THOUSAND STUDENTS IN JAIL.

Lectures Abandoned or Held Under Military Protection In Attempt to Eliminate Political Instruction From Lectures—More Than One Hundred and Twenty Professors Are Out.

A curious state of affairs has existed in the educational world of Russia since the new year. Lectures have had to be abandoned in all the classes of the universities of St. Petersburg, Moscow, Kiev, Warsaw, Kharkov and even in faroff Tomsk, in Siberia. Over 120 professional chairs are vacant through resignations or dismissals.

Dr. Manneloff, the rector of Moscow university; Dr. Mensbier, the vice rector and Professor Minakoff, dean of the law faculty, who resigned their posts, have been deprived of their status as professors. Over 1,000 students are in jail awaiting trial for breaches of the peace of varying degrees of seriousness.

It announced officially that 398 students of St. Petersburg university have been expelled. That precludes their admission into any other university and practically bars them from any career in any learned profession. The whole situation is described as the tragedy of higher education.

The area of dispute between students, professors and the government covers very wide ground. Fundamentally the issue is really a trial of strength between the party of academic education as championed by the government and the liberal professors, backed by the bulk of the students.

Political Subjects Forbidden.

Minister of Education Kasso says that he will see to it that professors and students alike confine themselves when inside the universities strictly to their scientific and classical studies and that no time or accommodation shall be given for meetings on public questions within the university walls. The first sequel to this order was that the students attempted to hold a meeting to protest against the order itself.

They were dispersed by armed police, and since then armed police have been daily in attendance to protect those lecturers who were willing to continue their classes and the minority of students who were willing to listen to them. Teaching has been made impossible not only by rowdyism and assaults on the professors, but by the habitual use of ill smelling gases that made the air in the lecture rooms unbreathable.

Kasso, who was born in France and educated at Heidelberg, is a strong advocate of classical studies and maintains that the first purpose of a higher university is the cultivation of the mind and not the preparation of students for money making or varnishing them with a smattering of education in what he calls quack studies.

He has threatened to establish institutions in Paris, Berlin and Heidelberg for training Russians to be professors in Russian universities. He believes that they would absorb the true university tradition if in their preparatory years they were removed altogether from the atmosphere of the Russian universities.

Outside observers will understand best what this really serious situation means from a recent utterance of the prime minister when M. Stolypin was rebuking the calculated, systematic pessimism of many Russian newspapers. He said that the first hope of the parties that aimed at overthrowing the existing system of government in Russia was to create a revolutionary sentiment in the army. That had failed utterly from the first.

Universities Cradles of Unrest.

Then they tried to rouse the peasantry, but the Russian peasant had fastened determinedly upon the agrarian question and refused to be drawn into general revolutionary politics.

Failing with them, says M. Stolypin, the malcontents tried to keep agitation alive among the factory workers in St. Petersburg and in Moscow and the other great cities, but in the last two or three years employment has improved and wages are higher, and only a minority of extreme men hold to the revolutionary spirit. There remained the students whose institutions have always been cradles of unrest. This brought him to the university problem and to the conclusion that the professors as a class were mainly to blame for the unsatisfactory situation.

The situation has been made more acute by a declaration which the progressist league of students has posted for signature in the university. It is addressed to Prime Minister Stolypin and says that "the disorders in the universities will cease when (1) the students are allowed to hold a public meeting without interference and (2) the students now under arrest are set free." Near this document is a board on which is written in red chalk, "Greeting from 151 imprisoned comrades in Deryabin jail."

It is foreseen that the elimination of political agitation from the university life of the Russian students will be a long and difficult operation.

"It is with deep regret that his parish have been compelled to accept his resignation, and it has only been done after repeated attempts to have him reconsider his determination to leave.

"The best wishes of a host of friends will go with him to his new field. It was hoped that he would at least round out his 25 years pastorate, but this could not be done.

"Mr. Butler's letter of acceptance will be read in Quincy next Sunday, and the installation will take place Wednesday, June 5, it is expected."

REV. C. B. AMES.

The assistant pastor, Rev. Charles B. Ames, was called in July 1908, and began his duties here Oct. 1, 1908. He was graduated from Harvard University as well as the Harvard Divinity school, and later studied in Germany. He was born in Groton and belongs to one of the well known Unitarian families of that historic town.

A Good Creed.

To be able to look every man squarely in the eyes; to make friends and hold them; to keep clean of mind and body; to smile at ill fortune; to laugh at my mistakes; to frown when temptation comes avisiting; to be ready with a word of cheer when that word will help; to strive to develop to the utmost the heart, head and hand qualities endowed by the Ruler over all; to hold all women in respect and to love one; to weave the thread of eternal optimism into the lives of all with whom I may come in contact; to worship nature and the Great Spirit that conceived it all—in a word, to play the game of life with a steady hand and a qualmless conscience and a real desire to be of service—that is my religion. And, say, if I can live up to the mark, don't you think I've corralled about all the creed that is necessary?—Backbone Monthly.

The Name of Rio de Janeiro.

Rio de Janeiro owes her name to the accident of a date and the mistake of her discovery. When Alphonso de Souza, the Portuguese navigator, found himself in the spacious bay he imagined he had found the mouth of a noble river, and because the day happened to be the 1st of January, 1531, he named the supposed river after the first month of the year. The name was not applied to the city that grew up on the slopes of the hills till many years afterward, but San Sebastian, the original name, is now almost forgotten. Rio as a city purchases the beauty of her site at the cost of health, for the giant ridges that form the beautiful background to the town shut out the breezes that might blow tropical nuisances harmlessly to sea.—London Spectator.

What Interested All the World When Lincoln Became President

Age of Reform In Many Ways Had Begun In Germany, Italy, Russia and England, Already Threatening Napoleon III.

Great Eastern, White Elephant of the Seas, Soon to Be Doomed, Had Made Its Initial Trip From England to America.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

THE first inauguration of Abraham Lincoln as president occurred fifty years ago the 4th of March. We have had ten presidents since and not a Lincoln in the lot.

Fifty years ago there was not as much happening as now, or at least there was not the same revealing light of publicity on it, which made it seem less. The cable did not then suck Europe dry of the previous day's news and leave it on our front porches the next morning. Instead we had to wait two weeks or longer to find out what France, Germany or England was doing or thinking about. As for Asia, it was practically out of the reckoning, while Australia did not count at all, and Africa was known only as a big and vague darkness out of which slaves had originally come.

On March 3, 1861, the very day before Lincoln began his term, the czar of Russia, Alexander II., emancipated the serfs throughout his empire. The event, which would almost seem prophetic of what was to happen so soon in our own land, was not known in America until weeks later.

On Feb. 26, or six days before Lincoln's inauguration, Victor Emmanuel was crowned king of united Italy, succeeding a long struggle by Garibaldi and others to that end. The new Italian parliament, with Cavour as its dominant spirit, was then but getting under way, practically its first act being the elevation of the king.

Many Reform Struggles Then.

It is somewhat significant that the struggle for union, reform and constitutional government in several European countries was practically contemporaneous with our own civil war.

Two months before Lincoln went into office William I., who was afterward to become the first emperor of united Germany, was crowned king of Prussia. Bismarck was then minister to Russia, and it was not till nearly two years later that he was placed at the head of Prussian affairs and began his "blood and iron" policy of forming the north German confederation and whipping Austria.

As for the remainder of Europe, it was for the most part quiet. France was in the middle of the second empire under Napoleon the Little, and England was talking about reforms, but not working at them very much. The sunrise over the new Italy was still clouded by threats of interference from Austria and by the fact that Napoleon's soldiers were stationed in Rome and kept the Italian king and parliament out of the capital.

Now note how poetic justice sometimes works out in history. King William and Bismarck were seeking the same sort of union in Germany as had already been achieved among the Italian states. A working alliance between the two was made. By a smashing victory over the Austrians the Germans not only put that country out of their own way, but made her impotent to hurt Italy. Then Germany pricked the inflated bubble of Napoleon the Little and by winning the Franco-Prussian war accomplished three triumphs for progress and liberty.

First.—She completed her own work of uniting Germany.

Second.—She forced Napoleon to withdraw his soldiers from Rome and thus made it possible for Victor Emmanuel and the Italian parliament to carry out their cherished purpose of moving into the Eternal City.

Third.—She ended the Napoleonic fetish in France, with the immediate result that the empire was overthrown and the third and final French republic was established.

Culmination Was Slower.

All of this culminated after our own civil war, however, and is mentioned here only because the beginnings of this European transformation coincided in a general way with the start of our own great struggle for liberty and union. Reform also marched forward in England. It was in 1867 that the second reform bill was adopted.

In America on March 4, 1861, the impending conflict overshadowed all else. Six states had already left the Union and others were on the eve of doing so. Jefferson Davis had been elected president of the Confederate States of America and had been inaugurated at Montgomery on Feb. 18. People in both sections, while not yet expecting actual war or at least war of such magnitude as afterward occurred, were profoundly disquieted. Small wonder that the newspapers of that day contained little news except such as related to the coming struggle.

The population of 1860 was a trifle more than 31,000,000 and was mostly on the farms. The movement citywards had scarcely yet started. New York, the largest city, was under 1,000,000, as Brooklyn was then a separate municipality. Chicago was far down the list. Kansas and Nebraska were on the frontier, and even Illinois was far west. The Pacific coast had begun to develop, but was connected with the remainder of the nation by overland stage and pony express. Railroads went only to the Mississippi or, at farthest, to the Missouri river. Compared with the great trunk lines and network of feeders today these railroads were few, with rough roadbeds and slow trains. The steamboat had not yet been outclassed and crowded off the rivers. The telegraph was in its infancy, although it played an important part in the war. The subsequent industrial development of the land was in its raw beginning.

Period of Progress.

Viewed from this aspect, no other fifty year period in the world's history and no other nation has seen a degree of progress approaching that witnessed here since the inauguration of Abraham Lincoln. To this result the civil war and its outcome contributed in no small degree. Industrially as well as politically the induction of Mr. Lincoln into office marked the beginning of a new era in the nation's life.

From a financial and military standpoint the new president faced a desperate situation. The treasury had little money and no apparent means for raising the immense revenues soon to be needed. The ridiculously small army and navy had been still further depleted by desertions to the south and by the turning over of vessels, forts and military stores to the Confederate government. Taken all in all, few new rulers ever faced a darker prospect. The country was divided and surely drifting into war with no means at hand or in sight with which to conduct the struggle. The very seat of government itself was on the edge of the disaffected area.

European sentiment was for the most part against us. The north itself was paralyzed by division and doubt, one faction being openly or secretly hostile and a large section of Lincoln's own supporters crying for compromise or blindly asserting that there would be no war. It is now plain that Mr. Lincoln himself held no pleasant delusions of this sort. There were several gloomy notes in his speeches delivered on his way to Washington, and, while his inaugural address appealed for peace, there was a minor chord running through it prophetic of conflict. He was taking a solemn oath to preserve the Union, yet division had already appeared.

Lincoln Anticipated War.

The only thing left was an appeal to force. He knew this and yet in the precarious situation in which he found himself went about his work with a diplomacy and caution that have elicited the warm admiration of historians. Out of all the chaos he had the supreme task of organizing order and victory. The manner in which he succeeded is one of the triumphs of patient and farseeing statesmanship.

The first Lincoln inauguration took the largest crowd to Washington that had yet been seen at a like occasion, likewise the largest number of soldiers. Nor were the troops used for dress parade. They patrolled Pennsylvania avenue and other streets, were stationed about and in the capitol, and a squad was concealed under the temporary wooden platform from which the new president delivered his inaugural address. There were pickets guarding the wooden tunnel that led to the capitol, sharpshooters on the roofs of the houses and a squad of flying artillery with General Scott in a side street. There had been numerous threats that Lincoln would never be inaugurated. The military preparation seemed an omen of that which was to be.

The address began at about 1:30 in the afternoon. The day had cleared, and at the time the sun was shining brightly. Mr. Lincoln's voice carried well over the great assemblage. His references to maintaining the Union elicited cheers, which were redoubled at the close and again when he took the oath of office and the booming guns announced the beginning of a new administration, one that was to prove the most momentous in the nation's history.

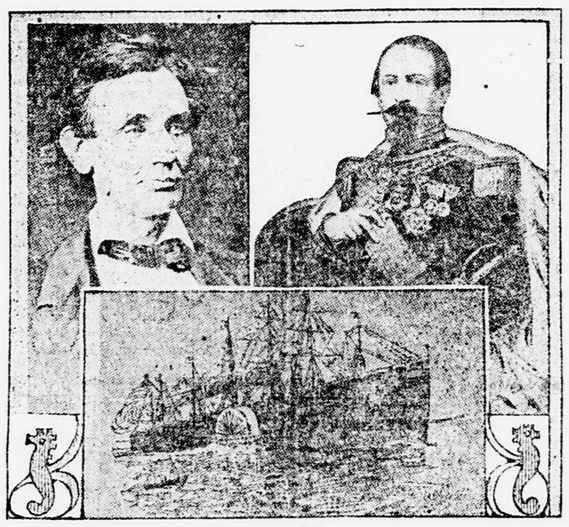

Address Generally Approved.

The inaugural address was received with varying comments. Despite its appeals for peace, the south accepted it as a challenge to war. The north and especially the west generally approved it. Greeley's Tribune said, "It is marked by no useless words and no feeble expression," and added, "To twenty millions of people it will carry the tidings, glad or not, as the case may be, that the federal government of the United States is still in existence, with a man at the head of it."

While thousands are yet living who remember the inauguration of Lincoln, it is well nigh impossible for the younger generation to form a mental concept of the nation at that time. There were thirty-six states, but our population was only one-third that of today. The telephone, electric light, trolley car, automobile, skyscraper, ocean cable, wireless, aeroplane, steel clad battleship and innumerable other devices and inventions were yet to come into being.

One comparison may serve to illustrate the contrast between Lincoln's era and ours. The Great Eastern had been launched a few years before, but various accidents delayed her first actual trip to New York till June, 1860. She came across in eleven days. Other trips followed, and in the winter of 1861 the British government employed the then giant of the deep to transport troops to Canada for possible use in our unpleasantness. The Great Eastern was then the wonder of the world and, in fact, was so big that she never paid and became a white elephant in her owners' hands, so that the other shipbuilders dropped back to the old scheme.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. NAPOLEON III.

THE GREAT EASTERN.

AMERICA'S FIRST MARTYR PRESIDENT, THE LAST OF FRANCE'S EMPERORS, AND AN OCEAN MARVEL CONTEMPORANEOUS WITH LINCOLN'S FIRST PRESIDENTIAL INAUGURATION.

Great Eastern Surpassed.

Yet she is now surpassed by other vessels. The Mauretania has a length of 790 feet as against the Great Eastern's 692, a width of 88 feet to the Great Eastern's 83 and a tonnage of 32,500 to the Great Eastern's 22,727. Better still, the modern vessel comes across in four days as compared with eleven for the Great Eastern. Vessels still larger than the Mauretania are now building.

There was general peace in the western hemisphere when Lincoln was inaugurated, except in Mexico. There Juarez was winning victories, overturning the old order and causing a crisis with Europe that speedily resulted in intervention, which in turn led to the ill starred reign of Maximilian.

Washington in Lincoln's day was not a thing of beauty and a joy for ever. The buildings were low and interspersed with vacant lots. Pennsylvania avenue was paved with cobblestones and most of the other streets with Potomac mud. The capitol was unfinished, with a great crane over the uncompleted dome. The natives for the most part were southern sympathizers.

Time is the great healer and adjuster. The old wounds are gone. The troubled and harassed Lincoln of that day has become "the gentlest memory of our world," precious to north and south alike. The world has moved onward toward democracy, enlightenment and peace. Our own land has gone fast and far. Perhaps all the advance has not been good—it hardly ever is—yet in the main it has been upward and certainly onward.

Fifty years hence will our children look back on an equal or greater progress? Will our day seem as strange to them as Lincoln's does to us? Are we about to go through a new crisis which will bring forth another like him to pilot the old ship through the storm to a yet fairer harbor? However these things may be, we can be certain of one thing—that Abraham Lincoln's memory will grow yet more precious with the passing of the years.

Ideals in Merchandise

THERE is character building in merchandise, just as there is in men. We learn to know and to appraise goods by much the same standards that we apply to people, although perhaps merchandise represents a double standard, for interwoven with its own character, good or bad, there is also the impress of the character of the maker.

We recognize the value of goods by appearance, quality of material, workmanship, finish and fitness; and frequently by something else—a trade mark, a name—representing in concrete form the character, quality, and fitness of the maker; and when this is present it establishes the value of the goods more definitely than all else.

This is especially the case in older communities, where generations have labored toward the perfection of a product, and where this process has gone hand in hand with a determination that the goods, as well as the manner of their marketing, shall bear the impress of their builders, and represent their highest ideals in manufacture and their truest conceptions of the integrity of traffic.

Generations continuing the same line of manufacture present striking instances of goods so perfectly developed, so thoroughly known and accepted, that they have become a standard of excellence and value everywhere. Competition has devised no force potent enough to crowd these goods out of a market to which they have proved a supreme right through unnumbered days of steadfastness to honest value and to honest dealing.

For nearly three centuries of manufacturing, New England has been developing to a high plane these ideals of merchandise. Not in her cities alone but in unexpected places among her hills and beside her swift-running streams are found factories and mills out of which come goods known throughout the world; and the trade mark and "New England Made" stamped upon them, and the character for which they stand, make these goods, like the king's seal, pass current wherever there are civilized men.

BRIEFS

James L. Edwards reports that he saw two bluebirds on Sunday.

The torpedo boat Sterret, built at Quincy arrived Monday a t Seawall Point.

W. E. Blanchard formerly of Quincy was elected deacon of the Pilgrim Congregational church, Sherborn, at a recent meeting.

The regular meeting of Maple lodge, K. of L. of H. will be held Wednesday night in Protection hall. Arrangements for the entertainment are in the hands of three of the brothers who are very secretive about them, evidently expecting to surprise the ladies, who are looking forward to a fine entertainment and a general good time. It is hoped a large attendance will be present.

A denominational rally for Presbyterians, United Presbyterians and friends will be held in the First Presbyterian church, Boston, corner of Berkeley street and Columbus avenue, Wednesday morning, at 10.30. This meeting is under the auspices of the Women's Foreign Missionary society which is holding its 50th anniversary this week. Men will be welcome to thi service, but not to the banquet which will be held at noon. The exhibition of literature will be on the fifth floor of Tremont Temple.

The Friday club of Everett, holds a conference Wednesday, at 2 P. M., of the Education department of the State Federation in the First Universalist Church, Broadway, Everett. The following subjects will be considered: "Home and school associations both from the parents' and teachers' point of view;" "What a woman's club can do for the public schools;" "The use of school buildings as social centres, especially in rural districts;" "Transportation to and from rural schools." George H. Martin of the State Board of Education will speak on rural schools. Education committees from various clubs are planning to attend the conference.

OPTIMISM IS FADING AWAY

Washington Is Alarmed Over Conditions In Mexico

NORTHERN PART BADLY UPSET

Widespread Anti-American Feeling Fostered and Promoted by Political Agitators—If Events Demand It Our Army Can Cross the Rio Grande and Restore Order—War Department Eagerly Preparing to Avail Itself of Volunteer Militia Officers

Washington, March 14.—No adequate explanation has yet been offered by the American government of the real purpose of its military demonstration on the Mexican border. The "general maneuver" sham lived three days; the "enforcement of neutrality" story, which contains the germ of the truth, is about four days old; "The Japanese-Mexican offensive and defensive alliance" proposition will not down, even though riddled by the application of logic.

It is quite probable that the real facts of the case will turn out to be something like these: The northern part of Mexico has for months been disturbed by a revolution which has threatened though so far it has not done much damage to American and other foreign capital invested there. Mexico has made little effort to suppress the revolt which has spread and involved Lower California. Indeed, it is stated on good authority that there are signs of trouble in twenty-one of the twenty-seven states and four territories comprising the republic.

Also the despotic rule of Diaz is of necessity nearing its end and Corral, the vice president, is scheduled to succeed him. Mexicans of the better class do not like, and in fact, fear Corral. Now capital is most sensitive to danger and it seems quite likely that appeal has been made to the American government by American or foreign capital or both, or foreign governments have called the attention of Mexico to the situation.

In answer to protests Mexico has probably said to Europe or America: How can we suppress a revolt on the Rio Grande when the rebels can cross and recross the frontier with practical immunity and smuggle arms and ammunition?

War Believed Imminent

Official statements to the contrary notwithstanding, there is a well defined belief in Washington that war in Mexico is imminent. Those who hold to this view point out that owing to the wide-spread anti-American feeling in Mexico, a feeling fostered and promoted by political agitators, it is doubtful whether the lives of Americans in the southern republic will be safe in case more serious disorders break out there.

So, having in mind the general situation in Mexico as well as the specific revolt on the border, President Taft has thrown an army of 20,000 men into Texas for the purpose of stirring Mexico to action by showing that we are ready to do our part. The announcement that the army will stay in Texas for many months indicates our determination to see the matter through. Mexico, too, by declaring virtual martial law shows that she at last has waked up to the seriousness of the situation.

If events demand it, the army, on authorization of congress, which soon will be in session, can cross the Rio Grande and restore order. An important phase of the mobilization to which attention has already been drawn is that it serves notice on the world that we will assume the burdens as well as the benefits of the Monroe Doctrine.

Work For Militia Officers

All the ninety Massachusetts militia officers who have volunteered their services for the Texas "maneuvers" are likely to be called upon by the government the moment arrangements can be made to care for them in the field. Some 1200 officers from twenty-one states have notified the war department of their willingness to go to the front and it is stated officially that eventually all will be used.

The department is waiting to learn from Major General Carter at San Antonio and General Mills at Galveston, how many militia officers can be accommodated in and about headquarters camp, and as soon as these details have been forwarded no doubt the volunteers will be accepted.

The eagerness with which the government is preparing to avail itself of the services of these trained commanders gives color to the belief that a call for militia regiments will be issued in due course.

Plans for a formation of a second military division of 15,000 men have been prepared in the war department. Reports from the south are so alarming as to justify the opinion that even 25,000 American regulars will not be enough to cope with conditions which may be found to exist in Mexico.

Americans In Danger

While it is not admitted officially, the government is seriously concerned as to the future safety of the thousands of Americans in the larger cities like Guandalajara where, notwithstanding the American colony may be numerous and wealthy, it easily can be overwhelmed in an uprising of the populace.

The intensity of the anti-American feeling among the lower classes can hardly be appreciated in this country, where the peculiar methods used by Spanish politicians to inflame the ignorant masses against foreigners are not appreciated. It is believed that Americans in Mexico City will be relatively safe in event of trouble, but the Mexican government has shown an unexpected weakness in dealing with conditions in the provinces.

No tangible word as to actual conditions in Mexico is available from any official source. The impression that war is imminent persists here, however, and the fact that supplies for the army are being purchased for delivery on trains instead of at the camp at San Antonio is noted as significant.

Mexico Is Nervous

Ambassador De La Barra's statement that the action of the United States in issuing orders for the withdrawal of all warships from Mexican harbors was highly satisfactory to his government, coupled with the remark made in New York by the Mexican minister of finance that the 20,000 or more men already mobilized on the border was quite enough, has injected into the situation a distinct feeling of nervousness on the part of Mexico.

Although the very first request for troops covered by the dispatch of 3500 cavalrymen came from Mr. Cassasus, the special Mexican ambassador, and the mobilization of the 20,000 troops so hurriedly dispatched last week is understood to have been at the request of or with the approval of the Mexican ambassador, fears have apparently already begun to play upon the Mexican officials and the Mexican people.

Relative to De La Barra's request that the American warships touch only at Mexican ports for coal, it is said at the navy department that there has never been any intention of a naval patrol along the Mexican coast. It is assumed in official circles that Mexico fears the presence of American warships in Mexican ports might lead to grave apprehension on the part of the Mexican people.

AS DICKINSON SEES IT

No Conditions Now Existent to Warrant Intervention In Mexico

New York, March 14.—J. M. Dickinson, secretary of war, who is here preparatory to sailing for Panama, said:

"I do not believe there will be any movement of our troops in Mexico. There can be no excuse for intervention, unless the Mexican government proves negligent in protecting the persons or property of foreign residents, and such negligence would have to be firmly established, in my opinion, before any such step could be taken. There are no conditions now existent to give us such warrant.

"In order to maintain the neutrality laws, it has been deemed advisable to send troops to the border, and on account of the immense length of the frontier, and the fact that the Rio Grande can be crossed at almost any point, a larger number of troops has been dispatched than would otherwise prove necessary."

Exploding Alcohol Causes Disaster

Buffalo, March 14.—William Clinton, a fireman, was killed in a fire which swept the plant of the American Wood Products company in this city. The explosion of a 15,000-gallon tank of alcohol started the fire. The loss is more than $100,000.

BROAD POWER OF TAXATION

Pointed Out In Important Decision by Supreme Court

CORPORATION TAX LAW UPHELD

Every Objection Presented by Its Foes Is Overruled—Measure Declared to Be Purely a Tax on Privilege of Doing Business—Not an Arbitrary Exercise of Power In Putting It In Payne-Aldrich Tariff

Washington, March 14.—The United States supreme court handed down a decision upholding the constitutionality of the corporation on tax law. The decision was read by Justice Day.

The decision, which is unanimous, is sweeping in detail, every objection being overruled. It holds that the corporation tax is not a direct tax on personal or real property of corporations, but that it is purely an excise tax, levied by authority of congress on the corporations for the right of doing business, the same as a revenue tax is levied on liquor dealers.

The tax is held not to be an income tax, but an excise tax and, the opinion states, falls clearly within the provisions and authority of congress. The opinion is also that the tax is not a direct tax on shareholders, thus overthrowing the chief claims of its foes.

The decision holds, as regards corporations doing business, that the United States has a right to levy the 1 percent tax on those, and can tax all business in a state except internal functions of the state government itself.

As regards the excise tax, said Justice Day, only one requirement is made by the constitution—that is geographic uniformity. As this 1 percent tax is levied on all corporations in the United States, it complies with this requirement, and is clearly constitutional.

"The constitution," said Day, "gives power to congress to select the subjects of all excise tax without any argument. That this is a tax on franchise rights, upon capitalization or upon stocks of a corporation is erroneous.

"It is purely a tax," declared Day, "on the privilege of doing business, not upon the property of the corporations. It is also claimed that this is simply another way of taxing nontaxable property, such as certain forms of bonds, but this is not true in any sense in regard to the corporation tax. The right of the government to establish an excise tax cannot be questioned.

"If it is once conceded that this tax is a rightful exercise of congressional power, the argument that it is an excessive exercise of this power can have no standing in this court. This court deals only with the constitutionality of the exercise of that power. As to public service corporations, it is claimed that they exercised official semi-governmental functions and that they should not be subject to this tax.

"No argument, however, can eliminate the fact that they are private corporations and that they are merged for the benefit of the stockholders and that they must come under the corporation tax."

It was as an adjunct to the Payne-Aldrich tariff law that the corporation tax came into existence. The standpatters and the high protectionists in congress were accused of flinging it as a sop to the people in the hope that the violent clamor against the new tariff might at least temporarily be halted. In this spirit it was enacted into law and Senator Aldrich frankly stated in the course of a debate in the senate that he expected it would be repealed inside of three years.

JURORS IN TEARS

Counsel For Mrs. Melber Asks That She Be Sent to an Asylum

Albany, March 14.—Mrs. Edith Melber, the young widow on trial for her life for the murder of her 4-year-old boy, sat for an hour in the courtroom scarcely moving a muscle while her attorney, John H. Dugan, told the jury why he thought she should be sent to an insane asylum for the rest of her days, rather than to the electric chair.

Several of the jurymen were brought to tears during the course of the lawyer's address. Juror No. 5 kept his handkerchief in almost continuous action. Evidences of emotion were also shown among the spectators—three-fourths of them women—who thronged the courtroom.

MRS. WOOD IS DEAD

Slayer of Husband and Son Succumbs to Self-Inflicted Wounds

New Haven, March 14.—The double murder in Branford was turned into a triple tragedy yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Christopher C. Wood died of wounds inflicted by shooting herself through the breast after she had shot and killed her husband and 3-year-old son last Friday.

Coroner Mix announced that her death disposed of the case. He refused to make public his report or details of the fatal quarrel between husband and wife and the visits to the woodhouse of a wealthy politician of Branford.

War on Mormonism

London, March 14.—A bill to drive Mormon missionaries out of England is being prepared by the government and will be passed without any opposition.

JUST IN TIME

Some Quincy People May Wait Till It's Too Late .

Don't wait until too late.
Be sure to be in time.
Just in time with kidney ills.
Means curing the back.
Before backache becomes chronic;
Before serious urinary troubles set in.

Doan's Kidney Pills will do his.
Here is Quincy testimony to prove it.

Nicholas Albanese, 16 Gilmore St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I was annoyed by attacks of backache for some time. Often while at work, sharp, shooting pains darted through my loins, causing me great misery. I also had dizzy spells and my sight seemed to be affected. I tried many remedies, but did not receive relief and as a last resort, I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store and in a short time after using them, I was helped. I have no hesitation in giving Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for my cure."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee. Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

He was scarcely gone before two men entered, coming down the corridor from the grill room.

Blount saw them, and he made sure that they saw him. But when they had taken chairs on the other side of the room he was suddenly assured that they had not seen him. They were talking quite freely of him and of his father.

"Well, the Honorable Sagebrush has got McVickar dead to rights this time," said the elder of the two, a full faced man, to whom Blount had been introduced on his first day in the capital, but whose name and station he could not recall. "This scheme of putting his son up for attorney general is the foxiest thing the senator has ever put across. You can bet the air was blue in the Transcontinental Chicago offices when the news got there."

"What do you suppose McVickar will do?" asked the other.

"He will do anything the senator wants him to do. Blount is land hungry, and I guess he'll take a few more sections of the railroad mesa land under the Clearwater ditch. That was what he did two years ago, when McVickar wanted the right of way for the branch through Carnadine county."

"Don't you believe he's going to take any little Christmas gift this time," was the rasping reply. "He'll sell the railroad something and take good hard money for it! It's a cinch. The railroad can't afford to have the courts against it, and McVickar will be made to sweat blood. You watch the wheels go round when McVickar comes out here."

Evan Blount found himself turning sick at heart. Could it be his father whom they were thus calmly accusing of graft and trickery and blackmailing methods?

His first impulse was to face the two men, to demand proofs, to do and say what a loyal son should. But the sickening conviction that they were discussing only well assured and well known facts crushed him back into his chair, and after that he was anxious for only one thing—that they might finish their cigars and go away without discovering him.

Fate was kind to him thus far. After a little further talk, in which the accepted point of view of the onlooker was made still more painfully evident, the younger of the two men spoke of an engagement, and they both went out together.

One clear thought, and only one, came to Evan out of the sorrowful confusion. Not for any inducement that could be offered would he now lend himself to the furtherance of his father's plans.

Beyond this he did not go in the miserable hour wrought out in the quiet of the club smoking room.

But when he rose to go another prompting was forcing its way to the front—a prompting to throw himself boldly into the scale against graft and chicanery, to redeem by whatsoever means might offer the good old name that had been so shamefully dragged in the mire.

He did not know just how it was to be done, but he would find a way. That it would be full of thorns he could not doubt, since every step in it would open and widen the breach between him and his father. But, though it should lead him to the bar of justice as that father's accuser, he must walk in it. He said to himself in a fresh access of determination that, though he might have to blush for his father, Patricia should not be made ashamed for her lover.

Upon leaving the club he hesitated long enough on the steps to remember that he was in no fit frame of mind to risk an immediate meeting with his father. To avoid the chance he crossed the street and, passing through the capitol grounds, strolled aimlessly out one of the residence streets until he came to the open country.

It was quite late in the afternoon when he re-entered the city by another street and boarded a trolley car for the downtown center. The long afternoon tramp and the conclusions it had bred made it imperative for him to see Gantry before the traffic manager should have left his office for the day.

His business with the railroad man was purely personal. He meant to ask Gantry a few pointed questions, requiring such answers as friendship may demand. If Gantry's answers were what he feared they would be he would seek his father and come at once to a plain understanding with him.

The trolley car dropped him within a square of the railway station, on the second floor of which Gantry had his office. The shortest way to the Sierra avenue end of the station building was through the great train shed.

Halfway up the block-long platform Blount met the incoming overland steaming in from the east. At the Sierra avenue crossing the yard crew was cutting off a private car. Blount saw the number on the medallion, "008," and noted half absently the rich window hangings and the polished brass platform railings.

A car inspector in greasy overalls and jumper was tapping the wheels with his long handled hammer.

"Whose car is this?" asked Blount.

"'Tis Misther McVickar's, sorr—the vice prisidint av the coompany," said the man.

Blount turned away, saying something which the hammer man mistook for a word of thanks. So the vice president had come, hastening upon the wing of occasions, it seemed, and in the light of the overheard conversation in the club smoking room it was only too easy to guess his errand in the Sagebrush capital. He had come to make such terms as he could with the man who was going to hold him up.

CHAPTER VII.

A BATTLE OF L'OUTRANCE.

BLOUNT had been halting between two opinions. The fighting blood in him prompted him to stay and set up the standard of honesty and fair dealing in the Blount name, to gather a few men of like convictions around him and to enter the political conflict at the head of a movement designed at once and forever to abolish machine dictatorship in his native state.

But, on the other hand, the claims of blood could not be altogether ignored. The campaign for political cleanliness would inevitably involve his father—would, if successful, defeat and disgrace him. Clearly it was the part of filial duty to hesitate before he should set his hand to this particular plow of reform. Would it not be better for him to drop out quietly, leaving the political housecleaning for some one who would not have to pay such a costly price for the leadership?

Thus the two promptings clamored each for its hearing. But, after all, it was chance and the swift current of the occasion that decided for him and swept him along into the vortex of action.

Before he had gone ten steps toward Gantry's office some one in the throng of debarking overland passengers called his name. When he turned he was facing a white haired old gentleman with a scholarly face and an irascible twist to his thin lips, a man and a straight figured maiden with level eyes and a face in which the inherited traits were softened into lines of thoughtful firmness and serenity.

"WHY, BLESS MY SOUL, OF ALL THE LUCKY THINGS!"

"Why, bless my soul, of all the lucky things!" ejaculated the young man, who but an instant before had been halting between two opinions. "You don't mean to tell me that this is the west to which you said you were coming, Patricia?"

"It is, and you're to blame, young man," snapped the father of the peerless maid. "If you've been telling me fibs about those megalosauridae which you said could be dug out of your sagebrush hills you'll pay our fare back home again—understand? Now show us to the best hotel in this mushroom city of yours, and do it quickly."

Having a definite thing to do, Blount forgot his problem and bestirred himself hospitably.

Though it was only three squares to the Inter-Mountain, he chartered the best looking auto he could find in the hack rank, put his charges into it and went with them to do the honors at the hotel, thereby missing two things which might have had an important bearing on the temporarily forgotten problem.

If he had gone directly to the office of the traffic manager on the second floor of the station building he could hardly have missed meeting a tall, full faced man coming out of Gantry's private room, and he might have overheard the visitor's parting word to Gantry: "Oh, yes; he fell for it all right. If you'd seen his face when Lackner and I came away you'd have said there were battle, murder and sudden death in it for somebody."

"But, see here, Bradbury," Gantry held his visitor to say, "it wasn't in the game that you were to fill him up with a lot of lies. I won't stand for that, you know. He is too good a fellow and too good a friend of mine."

It was at this conjuncture that Blount, if he had been present and invisible, would have seen a sour smile wrinkle upon the full face of the club gossip.

"It wasn't necessary. If he or the senator wanted to sue us for libel we could prove every word that was said. And it got him—got him right in the solar plexus. If you don't see some fireworks within the next few days I miss my guess and lose my ante."

On the other hand, if Evan had lingered a few minutes longer on the station platform he would have marked Vice President McVickar crossing to the carriage stand, followed by the private car porter bearing impedimenta. At the carriage rank the vice president climbed heavily into the senator's roadster, which seemed to have been arranged for in advance, and was whirled stormily up to the Inter-Mountain, where he traced his illegible name in the great guest book two minutes after Blount, still anxious for the comfort of Professor Anners and the serene eyed maid, had gone up in the elevator with them to see that the rooms to which they had been assigned were all that they should be.

Coming down a few minutes later to give the several luggage checks to the hotel porter, Blount missed another incident which might have sent him back suddenly to his problem and its unsettled condition. When Mr. McVickar turned away from the clerk's desk it was to shake hands perfunctorily with the owner of the fast roadster.

"Well, senator," he said, with a certain dogged emphasis, "I'm here. Let's find a place where we can flail it out." And together they entered an elevator, which, as chance would have it, passed, in ascending, the car in which the younger Blount was coming down.

Governor Foss Selects Three Experts to Probe State Finances

Boston, March 14.—Governor Foss announced last night that he had appointed Clinton H. Scovell, Harvey S. Chase and Charles L. Harpham as the experts to investigate the finances of the state.

The members of what is practically a state financial commission are all engaged in business in Boston as auditing experts. Foss spent most of yesterday discussing plans for the investigation with the experts.

In a letter of instruction to the experts, Foss made it plain that he did not want any criticism of existing methods, unless a remedy was suggested, and also that he would not tolerate any spirit of partisanship or prejudice in the investigation.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. MULLEN WINS BANGOR FIGHT

Democrat Wrests the Mayoralty From Republicans

NOYES ELECTED AT AUGUSTA

Hanson Chosen For Seventh Term at Belfast and Marcille Will Go Into Office For Second Time at Biddeford—Mutty Elected at Brewer—Democratic Mayors Chosen In Four of Five Cities Which Voted

Portland, Me., March 14.—Democratic success in Maine was continued at the city elections held Monday, candidates of that party winning the mayoralty contests in four of the five cities which voted.

The mayoralty in Bangor was wrested from the Republicans by State Senator Charles W. Mullen, although the city government there continues Republican. The only city electing a Republican mayor was Brewer, where the Democrats offered no opposition to Victor Mutty.

The Republican upset in the mayoralty contest in Bangor was the most notable of the day's results. Mullen, in the greatest vote ever polled in a city election, secured a majority of 261 votes over his Republican opponent, Charles F. Sweet, who sought to succeed to the office now held by Mayor Woodman, Republican. But the Democratic mayoralty success did not extend to the city government, the Republicans securing a majority in both boards.

Augusta, the state capital, will continue under the dominance of the Democrats, State Senator Ruel J. Noyes succeeding to the mayoralty vacated by Frederick W. Plaisted, the present Democratic governor. Noyes had a majority of 137 votes over Frank G. Farrington (Republican). The Democrats also added an alderman to their majority representation in the city government.

Mayor Edgar M. Hanson of Belfast, Democrat, was chosen for a seventh term by his largest plurality.

In Biddeford Mayor Albert O. Marcille, re-nominated by both Democrats and Independents, was elected to his second term, and in Brewer, Victor Mutty and ten aldermen were elected by the Republicans.

"BIG GUNS" TO MEET

Will Try to Straighten Out New York Senatorial Tangle

Albany, March 14.—Plans for a conference on the senatorial situation at the executive mansion last night between Governor Dix, Mayor Gaynor of New York and Charles F. Murphy, were upset by the failure of Murphy to reach Albany as he had planned, and as a result the three will not meet until today.

The absence of the Tammany leader, however, did not prevent a thorough discussion of the situation by Dix and Gaynor within the seclusion of the mansion last night, and it is not impossible that they may have some solution of the vexed problem to present to Murphy at today's conference.

CONSCIENCE TROUBLED HIM

Boy's Confession Averts the Wrecking of a Fast Train

Holt, Mo., March 14.—Two farmer boys, Rosce Townsend and Walter Carpenter, planned to wreck the Burlington fast train to Chicago as it went over a trestle a mile north of here, and then rob the passengers who were killed.

An hour before the train was due, Carpenter, brooding over the horror of the thing, went to Dr. E. H. Paddock and told their plan. City Marshal Holt and other residents ran to the trestle. They found Townsend fastening a crowbar to the rails with chains.

"Sure, I meant to wreck the train," Townsend said.

Prisoner Escapes and Hot-Foots For the Canadian Line

Houlton, Me., March 14.—Overpowering Turnkey Henry D. Smart with a blow over the head from an iron bar and evading Sheriff Bryson, a prisoner named Johnson escaped from the county jail here late yesterday and started for the Canadian line, about four mies away.

Sheriff Bryson, after making certain that other prisoners could not secure their liberty, started in pursuit. The prisoner wore the regulation striped uniform.

BRIEFS

Warm today but not as warm as a year ago today.

Edgar A. King is seriously ill at his home on Clay street.

Mrs. Ella Granger of Worcester was the week end guest of Mrs. Albert W. Fay of Newport avenue.

The annual banquet of Division 5, A. O. H., will be held at Hibernian hall Thursday evening.

The Winter club held one of its social gatherings Saturday evening and enjoyed dancing until midnight.

James B. Prouty of Hingham, a member of Post 88, G. A. R., of this city, passed away at his home this morning. Funeral services will be held at the Fort Hill chapel, Thursday at two o'clock.

Special services in observance of the Purim feast and holiday began at sundown Monday at the Synagogue of the Congregation Avath Achium on School street, and at the Hebrew school on Cyril street. Monday was fast day among the Hebrews and the exchanging of gifts was general.

Dr. James E. McTiernan, a Quincy boy who has been practicing in Brazil is in town with his wife visiting relatives. He is a son of John McTiernan of Common street and was graduated from the Willard school. He then entered Tufts Medical school. From Quincy he goes to New York after which he will return to Brazil where he is chief surgeon of a railroad construction company.

RENT RAISED FOR COLISEUM

And there may be No More Boxing Bouts There

It is an old saying that there is more than one way to kill a cat. There has been found another way to stop the boxing matches that have raised quite a cry of protest. The way now found has been to raise the rent of the Coliseum where the bouts have been held. On the occasion of the first bout the price paid for the use of the coliseum was $35. Last week the price for the evening was raised to $50. This week the Quincy Rowing Association was informed if the coliseum was desired this week the price would be $150. The result was that Monday the raised platform where the bouts took place was removed and this week at least there will be no exhibition boxing matches there.

OBJECTIONS TO CROWLEY

Petitions For and Against Him as Contractor

A petition is being circulated in Wollaston and Montclair and is being signed by many prominent citizens urging the Mayor not to award the contract for building the proposed school building to Dennis F. Crowley the lowest bidder.

It is also reported that there is another petition in circulation urging the Mayor to award the contract to Mr. Crowley.

As the bids for the building are in excess of the appropriation it is more than probable that some modifications will be made in the plans and new bids asked.

It is said by the contractors who figured on the building that there are several things that can be cut out which will reduce the cost and at the same time not materially change the building.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

By a close vote, 119 to 102 the Massachusetts House on Monday rejected the resolve for the appointment of a special commission to investigate causes for divorce.

The bill relative to confirmation of land titles was also rejected.

A bill was reported in the senate to readjust the salaries of clerks of courts, county commissioners and county treasurers to conform to the increase of population by the census of 1910.

Also a bill on petition of Chief J. H. Whitney that cities and towns of 15,000 population or more shall appoint inspectors of petroleum and its products, who shall issue licenses for its sale.

In the house the committee on banks and banking reported bills to provide for the establishment of school savings banks and to authorize savings banks to appoint agents to receive deposits from school children in order to encourage saving among children.

BRIEFS

Paul J. Revere, W. R. C., 103 is to have a public supper in G. A. R. hall tonight followed at 8 with whist.

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden and daughter of Everett are with their son Edwin C. Snowden of Safford street during Mrs. Snowden's visit at Jersey City, New Jersey.

The police auto was hastily summoned to the Quincy depot this morning to take care of a woman badly under the influence of liquor who was determined to journey to Boston to get an additional supply.

"Mrs. Haschroft keeps a good many boarders, doesn't she?" said Mrs. Snaggs to Mrs. Prunes, who manages a rival establishment.

"It's no wonder," was the spiteful reply. "After they have been there a few weeks they become too weak to get away.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

FOUR STRAIGHT FOR RED SOX

Had Big Lead Over the Tigers in Monday Bowling

The Red Sox handed the Tigers four straight jolts Monday evening in the Makaria league at the Y. M. C. A. alleys. The first string was won by 8 pins, the second by 76, and the third by 55, making the lead in totals 139. Eggleton was high man in single string with 178, and also in totals with 450. By winning this amtch the Red Sox have regained their substantial lead in the race. The Giants will fight hard for the supremacy when the two teams meet again.

COUNTY AND SOUTH SHORE

Little Items of In'erest in Towns About Quincy

James D. Grant has been elected for a third term as chairman of the board of selectmen of Hyde Park.

Four horses were burned in a fire at Hyde Park on Saturday night, three owned by Lappin & Schwartz and one by Jacob Miller.

Andrew J. Arnold of Cohasset, a veteran ticket collector of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. was arrested on Saturday for larceny of tickets. At the same time Mr. and Mrs. Moses A. Rosenthal of South Boston were arrested for receiving stolen property.

The Westwood Public Library has been presented with one hundred and fifty volumes from the library of the late Colonel James M. Ellis of that town.

Freeland H. Leslie, son of Dr. and Mrs. Freeland D. Leslie of Randolph avenue, Milton has again won the distinction of being the strongest man in Harvard University. His record for this year is 1313.1 points in the tests given under the direction of Dr. Sargent, which is 41 points better than his record of a year ago, when he also was high man. He leads the second strongest man 136 points.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

At a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Monday evening, a "Wireless Club" was formed with the following officers: President, Arthur Bowen; secretary, James Jenkins; treasurer, Peter Williams. Frank Evans, an expert in wireless telegraphy, will be the instructor. An apparatus will be set up and the club will have a special room. Meetings will be held Monday and Friday evenings.

The Atlantic club met Monday night in regular session. Baseball was discussed and a team will be formed in all probability.

The Quincy Point club meeting was held Monday evening in the Point church. After the regular Bible study and Scout work, baseball was discussed.

The Quincy Adams club will meet in the vestry of the First Presbyterian church this evening. The club will have a baseball nine, and the schedule will be made up tonight.

Quincy Y. M. C. A. will have 15 entries in the State meet which will be held at the Newton gymnaisum Saturday evening. The relay team will probably run against Malden. McArdle, Wilson, Phelan, Wood, Prout, Trask, Sutermeister, Estey, McInnes, Dineen, White and probably three or four others will represent the Quincy association.

A Rug From Mazandaran

Its Wonderful Powers Are Verified

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

As the steamer drew away from Constantinople and that fairy city and the Golden Horn faded from view the little group of tourists on the Neptune turned to one another with a cheerful sense of companionship born of many days spent on board the hospitable vessel and other days employed in pleasant excursions ashore.

The Neptune carried a party of several hundred travelers, and her charter covered every port of interest in the orient. Constantinople was the last stopping place, and now they were homeward bound.

Professor Trayle and his pretty daughter Madeline were joined by several others whom they had found congenial during the tour. At times they had been separated for a few days, as each party followed its own particular itinerary beyond the principal stopping places. Once more they gathered their steamer chairs into close proximity about the professor and fell to talking of the city they had just left.

There was Alexander Felton, tall and lean and clever looking and very glad to be with Madeline Trayle once more. There were James Hanford and his wife, seekers after health and recreation; Miss Emeline Gray, a middle aged spinster, whose fad was collecting odd rings from every country she visited, and lastly there was young Arthur Clayton, Miss Gray's nephew.

"I just hated to leave Constantinople," sighed Mrs. Hanford, "there were such heaps of things I wanted to buy, so many queer, smelly, oriental looking boxes and jars, such sweet silver filigree work, and some of it looked as if it might have been made centuries ago and worn by—who knows?"

"All that stuff is made right in the bazaars under your very noses," explained Arthur Clayton practically. "A fellow told me all about it—how they give 'em that aged look."

"Don't tell me about it," cautioned Miss Gray severely. "I don't want the romance knocked out of my adventures. Really, Arthur, you do turn things inside out in such a manner I wish I had left you at home! Can't you realize you've been in the land of enchantment? Did you never read your 'Arabian Nights?'"

Clayton joined in the laugh at his own expense and turned to Alexander Felton.

"I say, Mr. Felton, we haven't heard what you've been about for the last month or two. You dropped off at Constantinople on the outward trip."

"Yes," said Felton, "I made a little journey into Persia by way of the Black sea and Trebizond. I arrived in Constantinople just in time to catch my steamer."

"Persia!" exclaimed Madeline with a little catch of the breath. "You must have had a perfectly lovely time. Oh, dad, I wish we might have gone there!"

Professor Trayle exchanged a glance with Felton. "Sounds very romantic, my dear, but really the traveling is very rough—not fit for a woman, eh, Felton?"

The other nodded. "I rode horseback most of the way from Trebizond to Teheran."

"Did you find any treasures, Felton?" asked Hanford with interest. "You said you were after something especially nice."

Felton hesitated as he glanced about the little group of friendly faces. Then he smiled as the call for dinner emptied the decks. "After dinner, if you will meet me here, I will show you what I brought from Persia."

"Is there a story in it?" asked Madeline as they moved toward the companionway.

"A dozen," he said lightly. "You may choose to add another," he concluded in a lower tone.

Somewhat mystified and with a strange, sweet content in her heart, Madeline avoided his eyes and went below.

After dinner, when they had gathered about Felton on the moonlit deck, where they sat apart, they demanded that he show them his treasure from Persia. For answer he drew from his pocket a thick, square packet which unfolded into rather a large silky rug, which he threw on the deck between them.

"A Persian prayer rug!" cried Miss Gray eagerly. "How perfectly lovely! If we had known you were going you might have fetched one for each of us—if you would have been so kind."

"I would gladly have fulfilled such a commission," said Felton gravely. "But there happens to be no other in the world just like this one."

"Not in the world!" echoed Madeline dreamily. She leaned over and touched the silky surface, exclaiming at the silvery sheen melting into rose and pale blue and green. It almost seemed as if the rug palpitated with life, so changeable were its colors, so wonderful its intricate weaving and delicate harmony of pattern.

"Tell us about it, Felton, if you don't mind," suggested the professor after a little pause.

"It can be told in a few words. I heard of its presence in an obscure village in Mazandaran."

"Has it a history?" asked Mrs. Hanford.

"It is called 'the carpet of truth.' It is said to have belonged to one of the favorites of an ancient ruler, and its principal virtue is that whoever sits upon it is compelled to tell the truth while he sits thereon."

"That would prove invaluable when examining witnesses," observed Mr. Hanford, with twinkling eyes.

"I have thought of that," said Felton quietly. "Now that I have told you about my 'find' suppose some of the rest of you relate what is the greatest treasure you have discovered in your travels."

"And be sure to sit on the carpet of truth while you're telling it," advised Clayton, with a laugh.

"I'm willing to, for one," agreed his aunt. "I want to test the verity of Mr. Felton's tradition. May I?"

"Certainly, Miss Gray," returned Felton courteously, although apparently somewhat surprised by the request. "There; I will place this chair over the carpet, and you may sit there with your feet well within its border."

"No, no. I wish to sit directly on the carpet, just like an eastern story teller," cried Miss Gray, and so she disposed herself amid much merriment.

"Of course my story is about a ring," she began. "This is the one. I picked it up in Constantinople only yesterday, and it involved an adventure." She gave the ring to Mrs. Hanford, and that lady passed it around the group with an exclamation of delight.

When it came to Professor Trayle he studied it a long time with a peculiar smile on his kindly face.

"What is the inscription?" asked the professor quietly as he dropped it in Miss Gray's outstretched hand.

"Chaldean. So he told me," replied that lady, dreamily regarding the ring.

"He? Now for the adventure," teased Clayton.

"I had forgotten that I must tell it," said Miss Gray, slipping the ring on her finger. "Well, yesterday as I was strolling among the bazaars I came to the street of the silversmiths. I was looking at the wares of one merchant and trying to select a ring for my collection that might be very unique when a brown hand was thrust into my own and left behind it this turquoise ring."

"How romantic!" breathed Mrs. Hanford softly.

"You would have thought so if you could have seen the donor—a tall, very thin man dressed in a native costume. I confess I cannot place his nationality, for he wore the baggy trousers and loose garments of the Turk, the muffling burnoose of the Arab."

"Did he wear green slippers, Miss Gray?" asked Madeline Trayle, with sudden interruption of the narrative.

"Yes; I believe he did, for when he left me I looked after him, wondering what it could all mean and thinking there must be a mistake. All I noticed was his great height and his flying green slippers. And that is all."

"No, no!" exclaimed Professor Trayle. "What did your stranger say? Are we not to know the whole story?"

"It was nothing—only some silly rubbish you would not care to hear," evaded Miss Gray.

"Aunt Emeline, you are sitting on the carpet of truth," reminded her nephew. "What said your cavalier?"

"I have forgotten," faltered Miss Gray, her sweet face drooping.

"Oh, Aunt Emeline!" chided Clayton, then hastily, "What is the matter?"

Miss Gray was staring at them with frightened eyes and closely locked lips, to which she pointed with a hopeless gesture. "Can't you speak?" roared Clayton.

She shook her head despairingly.

Then Alexander Fenton's voice broke the silence. When he spoke he seemed to be quoting from some authority which no one recognized. "'He who speaketh the truth then shall his tongue be loosened,'" he said softly. Miss Gray seemed to hear, for a lovely smile broke over her face, and all at once she spoke:

"I will tell the truth. He said: 'Wear this for me. It is a Chaldean stone and came from the tomb of a high priest.' Then he ran away. Now that I have told the truth may I not leave this carpet?"

"Did it really happen? Could you not speak?" cried Mrs. Hanford nervously.

"Not a word until I spoke the truth," averred Miss Gray solemnly.

"Then please put it away for tonight," exclaimed Mrs. Hanford.

"It's growing late anyway," said Felton practically. "The moon has disappeared, and I believe it is blowing up a squall."

Hanford and his wife, followed by young Clayton, moved forward, while Professor Trayle walked quietly by Miss Gray's side. When they were in a quiet spot he halted, with her hand in his arm.

"Your cavalier—did you recognize him, Miss Gray?" he asked in a low tone.

"Yes, professor," she said softly. "You poor, shy, bashful man, where did you get those wonderful garments?"

"I always wear them on such occasions to better mingle with the people. Er—Emeline—how about the ring, eh?"

"I am wearing it. Is that not enough?" she whispered.

Back in the darkness Madeline Trayle was standing on the carpet of truth talking to Felton about the strange demonstration they had witnessed.

"I told you before dinner I would ask you to add another story to those connected with this prayer carpet," he said tenderly. "I want it to be the beautiful story of our love. Can you love me, Madeline? Will you love me?"

Madeline stretched out her hands to his, with a sighing little laugh. "I am standing here, Alex, and I must tell the truth. Yes, I can, and I will. You know the rest."

The "Tea Leafer."

A good deal of the tea consumed by the working classes in the days when Arthur Young complained of the addiction to this luxury had never seen either India or China. In one of John Ashton's works on England he cites a case in which a boy charged with gambling stated that the money found in his possession had been made by picking tea leaves. This led to the discovery that many persons made a living by picking sloe leaves and whitethorn leaves in the fields near Camberwell and selling them to a local cowkeeper for a penny a pound. One man said he picked from fifty to sixty pounds a day and always found a market for them. The leaves were subsequently sold to a wholesale merchant, who obtained as much as 8 shillings a pound for them under the guise of tea. The merchant was prosecuted and fined, not for adulteration, but for defrauding the revenue. And the "tea leafer" is still the slang name for the petty thief.—London Standard.

Benefits of Inlaid Waterways To'd by Messrs. Chamberlain and Crane

March Meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian Club

"Inland Waterways" was thesubject at the meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club on Tuesday evening, and was dealt with by two speakers: Judge Loyed E. Chamberlain of Brockton, vice president of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, and Frank Fessenden Crane the well known water front commissioner of Quincy.

At the head table were President Charles H. Brigham, Judge Chamberlain, Mr. Crane, Hon. Eugene C. Hultman, Rev. Carl G. Horst, Walter J. Wellington and Otho A. Hayward.

At the business meeting a nominating committee was appointed by the chair consisting of Edward J. Cummings, Walter E. Simmons and Charles T. Baker.

Upon motion of Eugene C. Hultman, it was unanimously voted to assess the members one dollar each for the renovation of the vestry. An invitation was read from the Men's club of St. Chrysostom's parish to their next meeting on March 20.

Judge Chamberlain, the first speaker referred to "Inland Waterways" as a subject of which we had heard a great deal and one of the most important problems before the American people today. To appreciate its significance and importance it is necessary to take a survey of the history of transportation, and find out where we stand today and what the whole plan means.

The problem in New England may be comprehended by a glance at the map and a superficial knowledge of its resources. The New England states are at the disadvantage of being far removed from the centre of population and with their barren soil and congested population cannot depend upon their own resources to feed, clothe and heat themselves. EMPLOYMENT DECEMBER 31

But Small Number Idle Although Quincy Work is Outdoors

According to a State report only five cities had a larger percentage of idleness in organized industries on Dec. 31, 1910, than Quincy. These were Holyoke, New Bedford, Lowell, Lawrence and Chelsea in the order named. While the percentage in the State was 10.21, the Quincy percentage was 12.07. Probably no other city has large industries like shipbuilding, granite quarrying and cutting which are affected by the winter weather. At any other season of the year Quincy would make a much better showing.

It was the quarterly report on the state of employment in the organized industries in Massachusetts, issued by Director Charles F. Gettemy of the bureau of statistics.

During the canvass complete reports were received from 862 organizations, representing an aggregate membership of 122,621 or approximately 70 per cent of all local labor organizations in the state. These reported 12,517 members, or 10.21 per cent, idle Dec. 31, 1910. This percentage is better than any recorded since March 31, 1909, and higher by 4.63 per cent than the corresponding percentage for the close of the preceding quarter, Sept. 30, 1910.

The average percentage of idleness in 1910, based upon returns received at the close of each quarter, was 7.46, while the corresponding average for 1909 was 7.98, and for 1908 it was 14.22. So far as the averages for successive years are comparable they represent improved conditions of employment each year over that which preceded, but the improvement in 1910 was small.

The principal cause of idleness on Sept. 30, 1910, was lack of work or material. The next important cause was sickness, accident or old age. The percentage idle on this account Dec. 31, 1910, was 1.23, against 1.27 on Sept. 30, 1910, and 1.19 on Dec. 31, 1909.

The percentage idle on account of strikes or lockouts Dec. 31, 1910, was 0.14, which is practically identical with the percentages for each of the other quarters compared. The number idle for this cause, however, included not only those out of work on account of strikes actually in effect, but those also who had not yet obtained employment on account of previous strikes. The percentage idle on account of other causes, vacations, temporary shutdowns for repairs and stock taking was .38 Dec. 31, 1910, against .13 Sept. 30, 1910, and .82 Dec. 31, 1909.

The following table shows membership and percentage of membership idle, by localities, Dec. 31, 1910:

	Unions.	Members.	Idle.
Boston	180	44,213	4,393
Brockton	42	11,235	473
Chelsea	10	1,655	201
Fall River	31	4,404	493
Fitchburg	17	1,157	26
Haverhill	18	3,323	98
Holyoke	19	1,480	331
Lawrence	25	2,611	368
Lowell	29	3,100	620
Lynn	44	7,696	621
New Bedford	23	5,108	1,033
Quincy	21	2,195	265
Salem	23	2,817	181
Springfield	41	4,732	308
Worcester	35	3,957	239
Other cities and towns (94)	304	22,938	2,867
109 cities and towns	862	122,621	12,517

It will be noticed that Chelsea, Fitchburg and Holyoke reported a smaller membership in unions. In fact only 11 cities have more members. Over one-third of the idle in the State are in Boston.

PROMINENT IN NEWS OF THE DAY

Navy Department Reports Fifteen of the Quincy Built Warships on the Move

Maiden Cruise of Perkins One of the Fastest Crafts Afloat

All the warships mentioned below were Quincy built. The Chester arrived on Tuesday at Tuspan and the Sterrett at Norfolk.

The North Dakota, Vermont and Rhode Island sailed with the Atlantic fleet from Guantamamo for Hampton Roads. The Des Moines sailed from New York for Guantamamo.

The submarines Grayling, Bonita, Narwhal, Salmon and Snapper left Annapolis for cruise in Chesapeake bay. The submarines Cuttlefish, Tarantula and Viper left Norfolk for Annapolis.

U. S. torpedo boat destroyer Perkins, Lieut. Commander J. R. P. Pringle, U. S. N., commanding, sailed from the Charlestown navy yard at noon Tuesday.

The Perkins goes to Newjort for additional torpedo equipment. The orders under which the Perkins sailed on her maiden cruise were issued Dec. 14 last, and have not been changed or referred to in any way in recent orders. The ship, which is one of the latest up-to-date torpedo boat destroyers of the turbine type, and said to be one of the fastest craft afloat in the world today, has been completing her outfitting at the Boston yard. The voyage is her first in the general service of the navy. The ship will proceed to Key West, by the inside route and join the 4th flotilla of torpedo boat destroyers, to which she has been assigned, which will make Boston their "home."

SUBMARINE BIDS OPENED

Electric Boat Company Quotes the Lowest Figure

Three firms were represented in the bidding at the navy department on Tuesday, says a Washington dispatch to the Herald, for the construction of four submarine torpedo boats and the Electric Boat Company recorded the lowest bid at the rate of $454,000 each. This company submitted 11 bids, conditioned upon different designs, ranging from 470 to 521 tons, and upon place of construction, there being a difference of about $36,000 against the Pacific coast yards.

This company's highest bid was $554,000. It was stipulated that each of the bids should be increased $30,000 in case the department followed the recent decision of the comptroller of the treasury and limited its payments to 90 per cent. of the work performed on the boats.

The Lake Torpedo Boat Company of Bridgeport, Ct., submitted five bids on boats, ranging from 495 to 600 tons, the prices varying from $490,000 to $575,000, according to the size of boat and the place of construction.

The American Laurent Company offered to build one boat at the Cramp yards at Philadelphia of 370 tons for $550,000, or one of 430 tons for $325,000. The bids will be taken under advisement.

SHIPMENT OF GRANITE

Is Seriously Delayed by Facilities at Freight Yard

The granite manufacturers are kicking vigorously over the facilities at the Quincy Adams station for handling granite. The service at this station has long been the cause of complaint. When the 20-ton power crane was erected however it was thought that a remedy had been found. On the contrary, however, conditions are fully as bad now as they were before this crane was put in operation.

It is no uncommon occurence even at this season to see half a dozen or more heavily loaded stone teams waiting in the freight yard waiting for their turn to be unloaded by the crane. While the crane works fairly quickly the process of unloading is slow, and it not unfrequently happens that teams are held there several hours waiting for their turn.

The result has been just what was expected. That is, the teamsters have notified the manufacturers, that owing to the many delays caused at the Quincy Adams station, they have been obliged to advance their price fifty cents a load. This of course comes upon the shipper and takes just so much from the small margin of profit that they now make on monumental work.

On the other hand the teamsters cannot be blamed much for their time is valuable, and the cost is going on just the same during the hours they are waiting their turn at the crane.

The teamsters say, however, that if the railroad will provide additional facilities for unloading at Quincy Adams, so that the long waits will be done away with, the increase of half a dollars a load will be taken off.

ASK REMOVAL OF CITY OFFICIAL

Merchants Say Sealer of Weights and Measures Has Neglected His Duty

Merchants Are Liable Because Weights Are Not Sealed

It has been known for a long time among the merchants of the city, that Quincy has been on the black list in the office of the State sealer of weights and measures, and the merchants have long been on the uneasy seat expecting at any time to be hailed into court on account of their measures not being sealed. The Merchants Association took up the matter some time ago, but up to the present time have not been able to accomplish anything.

Frequent protests have been made to Mr. Gatcomb, the local sealer of weights and measures, which have brought numerous promises which the merchants claim have not been carried out. Some weeks ago a committee of the association waited on Mayor Shea and Mr. Gatcomb was present at the conference. He was put on the carpet and it is reported that he promised that all of the weights and measures should be sealed by the first of March. That date has passed and but little has been done to remedy the evil.

Tuesday evening L. B. F. Marshal of the office of the state commissioner of Weights and Measures appeared before the Merchant's Association at their meeting and gave them a heart-to-heart talk. He stated many facts to the merchants of which they were not previously aware, some of which opened their eyes. Among other things he told them that Quincy was the worst place in the Commonwealth in this regard and that he had found scales that had not been sealed for four years, and had also found scales in use, whose use was forbidden by law.

The State commission had frequently threatened to take things into their own hands, and come to Quincy and prosecute all merchants whose weights and measurers had not been

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Texas is already celebrating onion day, in anticipation probably of those reciprocity beefsteaks from Canada.

Judging by the continuous immigration to Canada, it is the United States that may be annexed, if we don't watch out.

Champ Clark admits that he has his hand up, in case the Democratic party should happen to look his way 1912.

Col. Bryan, we hear, has spent a good deal of his time this winter supervising the planting of his citrus orchard in Texas. Is not citrus something like a lemon?

Moreover, ex-King Manuel ought not to kick as to the absent treatment accorded him by the Portuguese. $50,000 per annum to stay away from home is a good juicy plum all right.

The Quincy Women's club, which since its formation some six or seven years ago has from the beginning stood for civic improvement, at its meeting Tuesday afternoon entered a protest against locating a trolley freight depot on Washington street as proposed by the Old Colony Street Railway company. This club is made up of live energetic women who have the welfare of the city much at heart. They have not only talked civic beauty and having a civic centre to be proud of, but have helped in every way possible to get results. A few years ago the civic committee set out 200 trees on Coddington and Sea streets and have beautified the railroad stations.

It would seem as though a protest from the Quincy Women's club, a representative body of over 300 women, should receive recognition.

MRS. BELMONT'S "FARMERETS."

Twenty girls from New York factories are beginning to learn farming this week on Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's place at Mineola, L. I. In blue bloomers, broad brimmed hats, boys' shoes, the rubbernecks will find them of greater interest than the statue of liberty or the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

But 600 factory workers, realizing how such a life might relieve the sordid horror of their condition, applied for this opportunity. The anaemic garment worker in some stifling hole of a factory may regard these out door toilers with scorn, as doing work unsuited for the sex. But place this same chalk faced and emaciated factory worker beside the broad backed Polish woman just over from the Russian prairie. The nerves of the former are hysterical from the hurry of machinery and mastership of the boss. Fed on poisoned air in workshop and tenement all day and all night, she is but a shadow of normal physical development.

The woman from the East, on the contrary, brought up to hoe and dig with her brothers, is round faced, ruddy hued, a big full blooded robust animal. Slow of brain, she is fitted for motherhood and housewifery.

The recent strikes of garment workers have revealed the piteous slavery of modern industrialism, when an over supply of women workers is found in one locality and at a few trades. If thousands of these girl factory workers in the cities could but be diverted to farm life, how infinitely better off they would be. There will always be women enough to feed the machines in the workshop, and those who are left would then be in a better position to negotiate for a living wage.

But will the farmerets be content in a life minus the glitter of the Bowery? Will feeding the chickens compensate for the partings from Joey and Mickey? Did they stop to think that there are no picture shows at Mineola? Here is the heart of the problem.

DRIFT OF OPINION

Vice-President George B. Gallup, of the Pilgrim Publicity Asso. spoke at the luncheon of the Springfield Publicity Club on "The Man behind the Man who Aims the Ad"—referring to the banker who stands or should stand behind the manufacturer.

"In order that the manufacturer may so advertise his goods that the capacity of his plant should be doubled or quadrupled, he must not only have faith in advertising, but he must communicate this faith to the banker —'the man behind,' and the banker does not, as a rule, have faith in advertising. He does not know how to advertise his own business, and has little faith in advertising the business of others. He is conservative, but he will also be conservative in the right sense when he uses half and full-pages in his local newspapers to tell of the importance of putting every spare dollar into the local banks to be used for building up local manufacturers, thus giving employment to everyone who can work and bringing thousands of new people to the town. When he does this he is truly conserving the resources of his section and its institutions; but advertising must be the motive force of this conservation and growth, and further local advertising by the banker will instill a knowledge of local prosperity and pride in his town, which will make of each citizen a well-informed 'booster.' But without this faith in advertising on the part of the banker, no city can develop to the utmost of its possibilities, either in manufactures, population or wealth."

CHANGES ARE COSTLY

Railroad Now Asks City to Stand Expense in Lynn

A long conference regarding the proposed depression of the tracks of the Boston & Maine in the city of Lynn was held at railroad offices at North station Tuesday afternoon, says the Herald, between President Charles S. Mellen and Vice-President T. E. Byrnes of the company and Mayor W. P. Connery and a number of men representing the citizens' committee of Lynn. No definite action was taken.

At the conference President Mellen asked who should pay for the elevated structure already erected and its removal, in case depression is granted. The committee thought the city of Lynn should stand half the cost. President Mellen thought the city should stand all the cost, inasmuch as it should have decided on depression before the elevated structure was begun. It was estimated that it would cost $150,000 to pull down the section of elevated tracks already built.

President Mellen suggested that the city pay for the structure already built and the cost of tearing it down, and the company would then credit the city with $100,000—the cost of the proposed new street—and give the city the salvage from the destruction of the elevated structure. Mayor Connery said the matter would have to go before the city council.

THE COCHATO CLUB.

At the annual meeting of the members of the Cochato club Tuesday evening it was unanimously voted to make a slight increase in membership dues. Beginning with the next quarter June 1 the resident dues will be twenty dollars per year and the non-resident twelve dollars. The officers elected were:

Treasurer, William A. McKean.
Secretary, F. Edgar Norris.

Executive committee, Judge Albert E. Avery, Willard E. Dow, Col. A. C. Drinkwater, F. Eugene Dyer, Harold M. Gage, George H. Hamblett, Aubrey Hilliard, Atherton N. Hunt, Gordon M. Keating, Samuel H. Thayer, George O. Wales, Frank H. Waters, George H. Wetherbee, George E. Williams and George S. Young.

QUADRUPLE DROWNING

Fishermen Meet Death When Their Boat Collides With Schooner

Gloucester, Mass., March 15.—Four men were drowned in a collision between a gasolene fishing boat and a schooner off Ten Pound island in Gloucester harbor. All of the men were aboard of the gasolene boat Hope, which collided with the fishing schooner Hattie Heckman.

The drowned men are: Captain John Anderson, Ernest Anderson, John Chamberlain, George Wiggin.

The schooner was outward bound, the Hope was coming into the harbor. The schooner tacked. The Hope went under her bow. Before either had a chance to change its course they came together, nearly head-on. The Hope was overturned.

MAKES STOP AT BERMUDA

C. W. Guy Writes of His Trip Up the Coast

Editors Daily Ledger:

With this letter I will conclude my Panama trip, and I trust this narative has been of some interest to the readers of the Daily Ledger.

Feb. 17, Friday, we are en route for America. There is prospects of rain. We have now left the warm climate. At 10. 30 A. M. the squall is on. No land in sight and the wind sends out weird music. The steamer goes on with little shake or roll but what would it be with a small boat?

We are now in the gulf stream. The sea is a little calmer but such a sea as we have had. The steamer is so long and wide it is a good boat, but will pitch forward so that one of her long screws is out of water. This part of the gulf stream is not used by pirates. They could not have sailed in it. The winds have blown hard in this part of the world since Noah had his boat built.

Feb. 19. We are at Bermuda and we have to set our watches 25 minutes ahead. I don't know how many times we changed our watches. Sometimes slow and then fast. A person ought to take a low priced watch with him on this trip. I saw a man who nearly lost our steamer. He was obliged to get a steam tug to overtake the small steamer that took us to the land. It is Sunday, and the stores are all closed.

The sidewalks, fences and streets are built of limestone and of course are white. Some took trunks ashore, to remain, but could not find a boarding place. There are half a dozen big hotels made of limestone and they are covered with it so that the water may be clean for they have to use rain water from the roof for drinking.

Rich people come here from the north for the Winter, but the hotel bills as a rule are $5 a day. They have good churches, far different from any place visited. About everything that grows in the country grows here, but not in profusion. We could only stay three and a half hours, and could not buy anything, but a few postal cards. The temperature rarely goes below 60 in the winter, and is tempered by the gulf stream, and is a delightful place in winter for those that can afford to do nothing.

Feb. 20. Our trip will soon now be over. The hundreds we have met we may never see again. I never expct to tak the trip again; it is too long. A trip to Florida will do more good. I do not know as I have received any benefit to my health. There were no autos in Bermuda, they are forbidden by law.

The day is cold and cloudy. We went out of the gulf stream in the night and it is now too cold to go without coats. We are now going home never more to sail on the great ocean. When we arrived in New York, and looked over the hills of New Jersey covered with snow, they had a gloomy look. We dropped anchor at 4 o'clock and were ready to leave at 5. I was not over five minutes with the inspector. I opened my trunk and said there was nothing. No cigars? asked the Inspector. No. A man next to me had some cigars in his trunk and was put to a lot of trouble.

I have been asked about the cost of my trip, and I would say that it is not a good trip for anyone who has a weakness for playing games of chance; for when in the smoking room near the well appointed bar, and amid the smoke of Havana cigars, persons who are not very strong get to gambling, and the sharpers, of which there were no doubt some on our boat as there are on the Mississippi boats, would be likely to get all the money they had to spare. But as to the cost. The lowest price might be $140, if no excursions were made at ports where we stopped. I found it more important to have a well appointed stateroom in the hot climate. Mr. James Healey of Worcester, of whom we purchased our tickets, selected our rooms with that idea, so our expense was less than $220 including $20 laid out in excursions.

If I were to go south again, I would go to Rockledge, Florida, stay as long a time as I could spare, and return to St. Augustine, stop seven days, and then return direct home not stopping at any place unless it was Washington for a few days. If I were to go to the West Indies, I would go to Jamaica, stay as long as I could, and return home to Quincy. As for money I would take United States 25 cent pieces which pass for a shilling. United States has no money to take the place of a silver shilling which is often wanted. A dime would not do as it wants a sixpence. Five cents will not take the place of threepence. We have no pennies made in the United States. A penny is worth two cents, so when a paper calls itself penny paper it is not correct. When a Sunday School teacher tells the boys and girls to bring a penny she is telling them to do what they cannot do without they can pay two cents for one.

At Jamaica when going aboard the steamer a number of people wanted to exchange English money for some United States money. They would make quite a profit by the exchange. We found in every place we visited they preferred English to United States money.

And now, Mr. Editor, let me extend to you my thanks for the generous and correct manner in which you have treated my letters. Another paper tried hard to get them, but I knew your paper had a large circulation among my friends and the general public, so I concluded that it was the best medium. Had I sent fifty friends each seven letters during my voyage I would not have had time, but by your kindness I have reached several thousand readers, many of whom have sent me many kind words of appreciation of the letters. There have been some slight errors owing to the fact that I did not have time to read proof, but on the whole they have been very correct and very few mistakes.

Charles W. Guy.

BORN KICKERS.

Editors Daily Ledger:

Does it not ill become the sojourners of Houghs Neck to criticise the city schools, after the city has gone to the needless expense of $30,000 and erected a brick schoolhouse for about 100 children. Perhaps it is impossible to put brains into the heads of Houghs Neck children, but the city may not be to blame. Heritage is a big factor, and also surroundings and influences. Houghs Neck is getting as good teaching service as there is in the city, and has no reason to kick.

Low Tide.

LOCATION OBJECTIONABLE

To the Editor:

Being a resident in the vicinity of the proposed location of the trolley freight house, opposite Foster street, I desire to add my protest to the granting of such location by the city. Washington street is too narrow now and should be widened before any further building of any kind is permitted in this portion of the street.

The location of a freight depot on the site proposed would add to the danger of collision and congestion that now exist. A location so near the City Square, the Y. M. C. A. the Post office, the library and schoolbuilding is too valuable to the city to permit its disfigurement by the proposed freight shed.

It is bad enough to allow the freight cars to use our streets at all, but to allow them to locate the center of such freight service in the center of the city seems preposterous. The City Council rightly opposed this innovation of freight cars through our streets for a long time; and now, not only to agree to the company running their cars through the city, but to permit them to further make a convenience of us by locating their shed in our very midst, seems as if the city guardians were weakening. I hardly think they will do it.

If the trolley freight must come the Council should see to it that it is as little objectionable as possible. Let their freight shed be at some less conspicuous place, even if they have to lay a little track to get there.

PLANS OF ENDEAVORERS.

At a meeting of the East Norfolk C. E. Union executive committee held Monday evening plans were discussed for celebrating the 20th anniversary of the union. A banquet will be held in connection with the annual meeting, and an effort will be made to get the first president of the union, the county secretary, the State president, and Dr. Francis E. Clark, president of the World C. E. society as after-dinner speakers.

The April meeting of the Union will take the form of a Young People's good citizenship meeting. All denominational young people's societies will be invited to join with this Christian Endeavor Union. The meeting will be held in the First Presbyterian church on Water street.

Plans were discussed for publishing C. E. paper during the spring for the purpose of furthering the interests of the union work, and of arousing deeper interest in Sagamore Institute and the National convention in Atlantic City.

INVITE POSTER DESIGNS.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce has invited New England designers and artists to enter the competition for the poster to be used to advertise the industrial and educational exposition to be held in Mechanics' building during the entire month of next October. The conditions are as follows: Size of of poster, 22 inches high, 14 inches wide two or three colors; lettering. "Boston Chamber of Commerce, New England industrial and Educational Exposition at Mechanics' building, Boston. October 2-28, 1911."

GRANITE SHIPMENTS.

Returns from the two railroad terminals for the month of February show that the amount of rough and finished granite shipped by rail that month to have been 5,873,320 pounds, something like eleven million pounds less than forwarded during the month of January. The falling off in shipments in February was not unexpected, however for that month is always the quietest during the year. Shipments this month have been fairly brisk, and it is expected that the returns for March will be well up. The amount forwarded from each terminal was as follows: South Quincy 3,617,163 pounds, West Quincy, 2,256,157 pounds.

GOLDEN JUBILEE.

The name of John Wanamaker is indicative of big things, big ideas, big enterprises. At the very beginning of his business career he showed the big qualities of mind and heart which have made his business what it is today.

The first day's receipts of the little store which he opened in Philadelphia fifty years ago were $24.67. He "kept the 67 cents for making change next day," and immediately spent the $24 for newspaper advertising. That investment took courage, a bigger amount of courage than the expenditure of ten thousand times the amount would cost him now. It meant, too, a big confidence in his goods and a big knowledge of human nature.

This year Mr. Wanamaker completes a full half century of business life, and his associates have celebrated the occasion by publishing a volume called The Golden Book of the John Wanamaker Stores. It is interesting reading. It is the story of a pigmy which grew into a giant because it had a giant's heart. Although a tale of peaceful commerce, it is a record of exciting battles fought and won for a principle. It is the history of a great revolution in business methods; of interest to, and with an influence on, every person who either buys or sells anything in the civilized world today. He was the Apostle of Fair Play in business; from the beginning of his career he preached and practiced the doctrine that a bargain was not a bargain unless both parties to it benefited by the transaction.

Mr. Wanamaker's fifty years of business and his services as Postmaster-General made him a host of friends in public life, many of whom have shown in speeches and articles their appreciation of his qualities of mind and heart. It is especially fitting that the photographs of some of these men, with extracts from their expressions of confidence and esteem, should be included in the book of Mr. Wanamaker's Golden Jubilee.

The volume is library size, handsomely bound in cloth and gold, and contains over 400 pages with numerous illustrations. Price 50 cents, postpaid, from the Wanamaker Stores at New York or Philadelphia.

☞To get good results from your entertainment you should advertise it on the "Coming Events" page of the Daily Ledger. Special rates. An ad and a line in the Coming Events column brings good returns. Try it and see for yourself. tf

ROYAL Baking Powder
Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

Royal Baking Powder is made from pure grape cream of tartar, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is more economical at its price than any other leavening agent, because of the superlative quality and absolute wholesomeness of the food it makes.

Mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food. In England, France, Germany and some sections of the United States their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a dangerous mineral acid, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

The label of alum baking powders must show the ingredients.

TRADING STAMP HEARING.

Adolph Sandberg, secretary of the Merchants' Association, was one of the many that appeared before the Committee on Mercantile Affairs at the State House on Tuesday, in support of a bill which prohibits the use of trading stamps and gift enterprises. It was stated that the bill was practically the same as that upon which convictions had been secured in the District of Columbia, and which had been upheld by the Supreme court of the United States.

The hearing was largely attended the Boards of Trade and Merchants' associations in the principal cities and towns of the commonwealth being represented in favor of the bill. The speakers declared the trading stamp a humbug, that it aided land grafters and it was an incentive for dishonest retailing.

When the opposition was called several of the large trading stamp concerns were represented by attorneys who opposed the bill.

Pupils in the Wakefield schools have been scurrying about the snow covered school yards wondering where they would like to see shade trees this summer. An impromptu course in forestry has developed ever since Supt. Carfrey has been offered by a Boston nursery all the trees he can use. Not only trees be given to the schools, but to individual pupils, if they wish to plant them at home. Women's clubs are fostering this feeling of civic pride in their communities.

ADAMS CHAPTER D. R.

The adjourned annual meeting of Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution was held March 13 at the clubhouse of the Quincy Women's club, Presidents hill, the regent Annie L. Prescott presiding. After the council meeting routine business was transacted after which the annual reports were read showing good work for the year past and good financial condition.

The nominating committee presented nearly the same list for officers for the coming year the exceptions being for regent and vic regent Miss Prescott and Mrs. Frank Granger positively declining a reelection. The result of the ballot was: Regent Mrs. Nelson V. Titus; vice regent Mrs. Fannie A. Prescott; secretary Mrs. Walter E. Piper; treasurer Mrs. William Porter; Historian Mrs. E. Granville Pratt; councillors for two years, Mrs. Antoinette S. Paige, Mrs. Oakes A. Bridgham and Miss Annie L. Prescott. The three who remain over for another year on the council are: Mrs. F. Eugene Dyer, Mrs. Francis F. Brewer and Mrs. George T. Magee.

The regent and Mrs. E. G. Pratt were appointed delegates to the annual meeting of the National society in Baltimore in May and as alternates Miss Prescott and Mrs. Charles H. Sprague.

The April meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Piper 72 Centre street. In the meantime the old John Adams birthplace will be thoroughly renovated ready for the summer.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

Monday afternoon's meeting of Quincy Alliance was largely attended. Mrs. E. B. Marsh, president who was missed from the last meeting because of illness was welcomed back and presided at the devotional and business sessions.

Among the business was a report from Mrs. John W. Sanborn of a meeting held March 6 at the Unitarian building Boston, the subject of which was "Reverence."

A nominating committee consisting of Mrs. George G. Saville, Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann and Mrs. Edward Russell was appointed to prepare a list of officers for the coming two years.

The matter of helping toward a paid charity worker was laid upon the table until the next meeting, waiting further information.

Mrs. Nichols reported great activity in the Cheerful Letter work, and a generous response was made to her appeal for funds.

It was voted to have an all day Neighborhood meeting, with luncheon, the second week in April.

The speaker Rev. Howard N. Brown of King's Chapel gave his paper on "The History of King's Chapel." Beginning with the grant of a corner of the old burying ground for the original wooden church, the story was full of romance. The speaker told of its stormy career through the revolution and of its turning from the church of England to the liberal faith under the Rev. James Freeman. The first organ in the colonies was given to King's chapel, and the present pulpit enjoys the reputation of being the oldest in the country. Oliver Wendell Holmes was a parishioner also Charles Sumner. In later years ex-Gov. Wolcott and Gov. Draper have been among its members.

The hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. George T. Magee and Mrs. Manchester.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

As was anticipated there was a large attendance Tuesday afternoon at the meeting of the Quincy Women's club to greet Mrs. Elizabeth Pooler Rice, whose fame as an entertainer had preceded her.

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney president called the business session together promptly at 2.30 and the usual reports were given.

Mrs. E. B. Marsh for the Art and Literature committee again made announcement of the gentlemen's night of her committee. Mrs. E. S. Tenney for the Arts and Crafts committee called attention to the next lecture in the series being given by her committee. It would be held at the clubhouse Tuesday afternoon, March 21 at four o'clock and Mr. Frederick Whitney of Boston would speak on Color and Design. When Mr. Whitney addressed the club earlier in the season he was greeted with a large audience and it is hoped there will also be a good attendance Tuesday.

Mrs. Wilson Marsh for the Philanthropy committee reported that pledges were being received toward the salary of a paid secretary for charity conference work, also that services were being held at the Quincy Home on Sunday afternoons a committee having the matter in charge. Mrs. Robert E. Park of the Program committee announced that a children's party would be held Saturday afternoon April 1 at the club house for children of members. Members will be entitled to bring one child and are also asked to contribute toward the refreshments.

Mrs. Gurney for the Visiting Nurse committee announced that Dr. George L. Cady would speak on "The Golden Age" at the April 25th meeting. Also that Mrs. Welch, chairman of the committee would be pleased to receive subscriptions toward the Nurse's salary.

Mrs. W. G. Shaw of the Civic committee said her committee had appropriated $50 for children's books to be used in the branch libraries if agreeable to the trustees of the library, $10 to be used now and the rest later. She also spoke of the locating of a trolley freight depot on Washington street, near the Public Library and asked the club to send in a protest as a body. A motion to that effect was made and passed unanimously.

The proposed amendment to enlarge the club membership was again postponed, the sentiment being that there was so much to be said in favor of and against enlargement that it needed fuller discussion than was possible at the present meeting. Miss Annie L. Prescott who proposed the amendment is to present facts in favor, and Mrs. Frank S. Davis in opposition, at the April 11 meeting after which it is hoped there will be a free discussion.

An election committee to prepare a list of officers for the annual meeting in May when officers would be elected for two years, was chosen as follows: Mrs. George L. Badger, Mrs. Zenas S. Arnold, Mrs. Herbert L. Packard, Mrs. William F. Cummings and Mrs. Percy Holman.

A new inovation this year will be an election in April of chairmen of committees so that they may make up their committees and prepare their line of work before the summer vacation. The election committee to prepare this ballot was chosen as follows: Mrs. W. G. Shaw, Mrs. Herbert W. Pinkham, Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr., Mrs. George W. Hinkley and Mrs. Walter E. Piper.

Mrs. Gurney asked the club to cooperate in making a success, the play by Julia Ward Howe which was to be given in Boston March 31. This concluded the business and the club prepared to enjoy the delightful program arranged by the Program committee.

Mrs. Park first announced a musical program arranged by Miss Alice Gertrude Coe, the artist being Anna B. Eickheim, violinist of the Carolyn Belcher String quartet with Miss Marion Whiton at the piano. Miss Eichheim played Zigeunenweisen by Sarasate and Chopin's Nocturne arranged by Sarasate the latter being exquisitely rendered. The audience quickly perceived the artist in the skilful touch, the sweet strains, and pleasing rendering and was quick to show appreciation in hearty applause which was responded to. Miss Whiton at the piano is so perfect as an accompanist that one cannot fail to appreciate her artistic musical ability.

Mrs. Parks introduced Mrs. Elizabeth Pooler Rice who was given a most cordial greeting. Of pleasing personality in fact a most charming women her reading of Jerome K. Jerome's play "Miss Hobbs" was a delight from beginning to end. Mrs. Rice's ease of manner, clever intertation of the characters, entire lack of mannerisms and her own charming personality made a brightly written play most entertaining in its reading. It is one of the most thoroughly enjoyable programs of the season.

Tonight the Art and Literature committee is to have a gentlemen's night at the clubhouse beginning promptly at half past seven. Club members are invited to attend and bring a guest preferably a man. Mr. Darius Cobb the artist will be the speaker and there will be music. After the lecture there will be an informal reception and refreshments.

The annual dues are now due and the treasurer Miss M. Flora Underwood is kept quite busy taking in the money. Members may pay at any club meeting and receive their membership card or if by mail will receive their card by enclosing a self addressed stamped envelope. To retain membership in the club the dues must be paid during March or April. So many have already paid, some fees being received in February that it looks as though there would not be many drop out at the end of the year May 9th.

LECTURE TONIGHT.

A. H. Macmillan of New York is to lecture this evening in Colonial hall at 7.30 under the auspices of the International Bible Students' association, his subject being "How shall God save the heathen?" The purpose is to stimulate a deeper interest in Bible study, and to this end the lecture will be entirely free, not even a collection will be taken and the public is invited to hear this noted lecturer.

CHURCH IS PROSPERING

Deacons and Other Officers Elected by Point Church

The annual church meeting of the Quincy Point church was held Tuesday evening in the vestry. The attendance was encouraging as were also the reports of the different officers, all of which showed progress and a healthy growth.

The report of the pastor was especially good, and the church has cause to congratulate itself for securing so whole-hearted and industrious a leader.

The election of officers took place with the following results:

Deacon for three years—Charles H. Sherburne.

Deaconess for three years—Mrs. Lincoln A. Cook.

Clerk—Thomas B. Pollard.

Treasurer—Miss E. M. Freeman.

Superintendent of Sunday School—Charles H. Sherburne.

Assistant Superintendent — Harold W. Newcomb.

Secretary—Forest Hayden.

Treasurer—Miss Amy Newcomb.

Assistant Treasurer—Carleton Neal.

Superintendent of Primary department—Miss Margaret Thomas.

Secretary Primary department — Edwin Lee.

Secretary Home departmnt—Mrs. T. W. Lincoln, Jr.

Th only matter of special interest outside the regular routine of business was the passing of a motion to revise the by-laws of the church, to coordinate with those of the parish. A committee of two was appointed to make the revision, T. B. Pollard and J. W. Hendrie.

The annual meeting of the parish will be held next Wednesday, March 22.

ASK REMOVAL

sealed, but realizing that the merchants were doing all they could to remedy the condition of affairs the commission had held off. It did not propose to do so much longer, however, and unless something was done immediately the merchants would be prosecuted.

In addition to the statements of Deputy Marston many of the merchants told of their personal experiences in trying to have their weights sealed. Many had come to City Hall thinking that the sealer could be found in his office, but had been unable to find him. They had been frequently promised that their weights and measures would be sealed, but they had not been as yet.

During the evening some pretty rough things were said about the local sealer, for the merchants did not think they should be placed in a position where they were liable to a fine simply because an official did not do his duty. Several expressed themselves as having nothing personal against the sealer, but they did strenuously kick at the manner in which the work of his office was carried out.

After some further discussion it was unanimously voted to demand of the Mayor that the sealer of weights and measures be removed from office for neglect of duty.

Mayor Shea when informed of the vote of the association this morning said that he had nothing to say at the present time. He, however, did say that Mr. Gatcomb was a civil service man, and that up to the present time the merchants had not preferred any charges against him.

The discussion of the question of weights and measures took up a large part of the evening. It was, however, voted that the committee on consolidation with the Board of Trade and Granite Manufacturers Association be given full power.

The question of merchant's weeks was taken up and was referred to the joint committee of the three associations to decide what should be done.

Refreshments were served after the meting.

—Japan is not lagging behind in the fight against tuberculosis. The Japan Health Association has over 200,000 local members and carries on a campaign of lectures in the cities and towns of the country. Tuberculosis is increasing in Japan, due chiefly, Prof. S. Kitasato of Tokyo says, to the rapid development of the factory system of industry, the introduction of modern methods and manners of civilization, and the increasing acuteness of the struggle for existence.

NEW ENGLAND

must depend on grain and flour from the Middle West; fuel from Pennsylvania, Delaware and Virginia; iron and copper ore from Minnesota and Michigan. In fact we must act as the commercial and manufacturing portion of the country.

It is of great importance if we would maintain our prestige, that we take advantage of everything that lessens the cost of transporting goods. The freight rate is a tax. Transportation is considered as a part of the cost of production for which the ultimate consumer must pay. I have yet to find any underlying scientific method used by the transportation companies for placing the rate. It is more often what the commodity and the trac will bear. Thus we come at the outset to an appreciation of what waterways mean when we see the significance of transportation charges in New England.

Judge Chamberlain went into the history of the transportation problem in Massachusetts, telling of the difficulties encountered because of the long arm of Cape Cod, and the fact that all our river run in the wrong direction.

A description of the various canals contemplated in Massachusetts was given, one being ambitious enough to plan to connect Boston with the Hudson river by a canal of 900 locks over the Berkshires, the money to be raised by a state lottery.

Judge Chamberlain also spoke of the abuse of power by the great transportation and railroad corporations, and told what the relations between these and the people should be. The United States, said the speaker, has a system of waterways and rivers superior to that of any other country, and yet in no other are they so little developed and used as here. In this country are 25,000 miles of navigable waterways, with as many more that could be easily opened up. There are 2,500 miles of canals and 2,500 miles of bays and inlets, which could be increased by 1,000 miles simply by cuttings which would aggregate but 100 miles.

Carriage on water is one-sixth of that on land. On the water the steamboat is the unit. On land engines, cars, road bed, rights of way, terminals, all have to be taken into consideration. The canals should be developed to relieve the railroads of the bulky goods.

It is up to Boston whether transatlantic traffic shall stop at New York. There is no reason why barges should not continue to Boston and break bulk for the large liners. Boston is 180 miles nearer Liverpool and can furnish facilities in the way of docking space that is limited in New York. This trade may be captured if we develop the last link of inland waterways and furnish a protected passage from New York. This can and will be done if New England is alive to her opportunity.

By means of maps and an interesting address, Frank Fessenden Crane showed the route of the proposed Narragansett canal running from Boston to Narragansett bay. This plan is much in advance of the Cape Cod canal which does not cut off all the dangers of the voyage. Mr. Crane traced the system of inland waterways already in force from Florida to New York, giving a vast fund of instructive history and description of their development. His talk closed with a clever computation of the saving that would result from the establishment of the proposed canal.

Both speakers were accorded a hearty vote of thanks. The usual roast beef dinner was served the blessing being invoked by Rev. Carl G. Horst,

BRIEFS

Rainy this morning.

There was one very sharp flash of lighting during the heavy shower this morning.

Delcevare King of this city was one of the speakers at the annual banquet of the Salem No-License league on Tuesday evening.

The quarterly meeting of the Old Colony Association, Universalist, will be held in Brockton on Wednesday April 12. Rev. O. Howard Perkins president of the association and pastor of the Universalist society in Brockton is arranging an attractive program of which there will be an announcement later.

The Copeland Club are making arrangements for their annual minstrel show, which will be held this year in St. Mary's hall. From present indications the affair will be at least equal to the former ones of this nature conducted by this popular organization. The show is under the direction of Andrew J. Dinegan, the president of the club, who has done considerable of this work during the past few years, and who is able to arrange a very enjoyable entertainment.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

President Coleman of the Pilgrim Publicity association made a few remarks about yellow journals and others at the meeting of the Boston Boot and Shoe Club at its Newspaper Night recently. He compared the so-called yellow and the conservative journals by saying, "the yellow journal has its faults like the common people, and the so-called high-class papers have their faults as well as have the people they represent. We as a pople are no whit better than our papers, for the newspaper is and must be the mirror of the public—if a newspaper does not please the public, it will not live. The violent language of the yellow journal in denouncing the entrenched evils of our times is only exceeded by the vituperative epithets of some of our most cultured journals in their attacks on Roosevelt.

But it is the advertiser who can give his message in one day to the masses and the classes, to the readers of every kind of newspaper; and this message in the advertising columns is beginning to carry more and more a sort of editorial sanction, because a new era is dawning in journalism, the era of censorship over the advertising columns, an era the climax of which will be reached when it has become generally recognized that the conduct of a public journal is a public trust."

☞Advertise your entertainments in the Quincy Daily Ledger and get all the money that is coming to you. If people don't know you are giving an entertainment they stay at home and you lose the money they would like you to have. Get the Ledger prices for entertainments and also get into the "Coming Events" column and let the public know what you are doing.

SPRING IN NEW YORK.

New Modes Evolved from Winter Fashions—Fascinating Fabrics in Silk and Wool and Cotton—Satin Tailormades — New Shirts and Blouses.

It is not time to lay aside one's warmest furs yet, but no one can doubt that Spring has arrived for the shops have all blossomed out in fascinating arrays of all sorts of warm weather fixings that are eagerly bought by women who want the newest productions of looms and designers and first choice for selection while counters are full. Surely never before was the display so tempting to the eye or comforting to the pocket book of the clever dressor, for while "Hobbles" are dead, and nothing remains but the patches to show that they ever existed, all skirts are narrow and it takes little material for any up-to-date costume.

SILK TAILORMADES.

Tailormade suits of wool back satins, while not a novelty, are a leading feature of the modes shown by all the best designers. They are at once so smart, handsome and practical that they appeal to all sorts of women and go for almost any occasion. A large majority of these silk suits are made of silk and wool materials for women demand wear as well as elegance of appearance from such costumes, so the shamrock poplins with their silk surface and wool filling, and Lainsoie satins with their wool backs, are first, choice with high-class modistes. Braid is the favorite trimming, but stitched bands and other tailored devices are also much used.

SEPARATE WAISTS AND BLOUSES

Nine out of every ten smart waists for wear with coat and suit costumes have the sleeve cut in one with the body, and many of the most effective are made of flouncings or of bordered goods which lend themselves especially well to this type of waist. Cluny and square meshed filet laces are first favorites for trimmings and great use is made of crochet buttons and ornaments in both silk and cotton materials. While veiled effects are still prominent they have been a little overdone, and chiffon has not proved very satisfactory for the rather strenuous wear that a suit waist gets. Overblouses of marquisette beaded and braided and embroidered are a better choice, and cotton marquisettes are very smartly developed with similar trimmings for these indispensable garments. Cotton crepe waists with colored embroideries are very well shown, and for morning wear tailored shirt waists with colored stripes made of marquisette and madras, have matching turned down collars and linked cuffs. Some of the best styles are very plain, no fullnes about the upper part or sleeve, the side pocket is a prominent detail, and yoked backs are again to the fore. This is decidedly a color season and few all white waists or dresses are shown.

LACES GALORE.

All varieties of transparent and semi-transparent fabrics are in demand, and nets and laces of all sorts are increasingly worn. Anything in this class is fashionable though beaded silk marquisettes are the leaders. A coarse mesh net with the scattered design wrought in riveted metal after the fashion of Syrian scarfs, is new and effective for waists, trmmings, and draperies. Lace coats with satin hems and bindings are already seen at fashionable functions, and will be generally worn later. Many are of colored net to match the dress. Foulards especially the bordered styles make some of the prettiest of the new dresses. The only trouble with foulard is that it comes in so many qualities with great similarity of pattern that a handsome dress, looks too much like a cheap one to satisfy the wearer of the expensive gown.

NEW HATS.

Turban shapes are in the majority in the showing of straw hats, as is usual at this season, but so great is the variety of line and style in these that no one shape predominates. Very high narrow models are among the smartest of the small hats, and small shapes are very much to the fore. Coarse basket weaves in fashionable colors, both plain and mixed come in all the turban and high crowned shapes, and as these need only a touch of trimming, a feather, flower, quill or upstanding bow, they are an excellent choice for a first hat for general wear. Black hats with striking color contrasts for their narrow brims or other trimmings, often have the crown of lace, or transparent straw. Small flowers are much used in wreath and plaque effects, and hats with straw rims, and crowns made all of tiny blossoms are well shown. Wide brimmed shapes for dress wear have not lost a whit of their prestige but their greatest display will come later.

FRILLS AND FURBELOWS

Sashes of all sorts are relied upon to give a tuch of style or color toalmost any style of dress, and the "Dahlia" bow, is the latest finish succeeding the "Jap" "Windmill" and "Rose" bows that are all still in the running.

DIRE THREATS OF VENGEANCE

Make It Difficult to Secure Jurors In Camorra Trial

BROUGHT TO COURT IN IRONS

Secret Power of Assassins' Organization Realized by King's Counsel, Who Makes Ineffectual Effort to Have Trial Postponed and Sent to Some Court In Northern Italy—Camera Men Cursed by Alfano

Viterbo, March 15.—Another panel of forty men from which to select jurymen for the trial of the Neapolitan Camorrists was drawn Tuesday by Cavalieri Bianchi, judge of the assize court. This action was taken after twenty-two men who had fled from jury service were brought into court in irons and questioned as to their willingness to serve in the case.

While the thirty-nine defendants leered at the prospective jurors from their iron cage and shrieked threats of vengeance if they should decide to serve, practically every one informed the court that he dared not become a judge of the Camorra's fate.

Never has the secret power of the Camorra been more openly manifested than in this attempt to draw a jury. The situation has become so serious that Cavalieri Santoro, the king's counsel, and prosecuting attorney in the present trial, last evening wired to Minister of Justice Fani in Rome asking him for further instructions in the case.

He informed the minister that he had grave doubts of his ability to obtain a jury and asked for permission to postpone the trial and send it to some court in northern Italy. This request was denied by the minister of justice and Santoro was told to proceed to the best of his ability.

Uproar was caused in the court by Enrico Alfano, head of the Camorra, objecting to being photographed by the newspaper photographers. This followed a violent scene which had been enacted in the corridor when the Camorra leader screamed curses and threats against the men carrying cameras who were trying to get his picture.

Finding that his abuse availed him nothing, Alfano pulled a handkerchief from his pocket and held it before his face.

With the jury still incomplete the trial was adjourned until today.

DISLOCATES HER JAW

Woman Laughs Too Heartily at Joke Which Doesn't Amuse Hearers

Philadelphia, March 15.—Laughing too heartily at her own wit caused Miss Ella Haddes, 23 years old, to suffer a dislocated jaw.

Miss Haddes was acting as hostess to a number of relatives who had been invited to dinner when she attempted to enliven the affair by relating an original joke.

The witticism failed to elicit any signs of merriment except from its originator, whose peals of laughter were suddenly hushed when her jawbone slipped from its place.

She was hurried to a hospital in an automobile, but refused to repeat the joke for the physicians after they had repaired the damage it had created.

UNDER AUSPICES OF CITY

New York to Have Outdoor Dramas and Pageants During Summer

New York, March 15.—Park Commissioner Stover has accepted tentative plans proposed by Charles Frohman for the open air staging and presentation of dramas and pageants of an educational nature whose production had been cramped heretofore by the limitations enforced by the size of indoor stages.

It is the intention to give such plays in one of the city parks this summer or next summer, under the auspices of the city. Plans are in the making to seat 25,000 persons at each performance.

FOR THE FIRST TIME

Democrats Gain Control of City Government of Cambridge

Cambridge, Mass., March 15.—The Democrats swept Cambridge yesterday in the annual election, capturing control of every branch of the municipal government for the first time since its incorporation as a city.

J. E. Barry was elected mayor over Jeremiah F. Donovan, Non-Partisan, and Edward B. James, Independent, by a plurality of 929 votes.

Foss Names a New Judge

Boston, March 15.—Assistant Corporation Counsel John D. McLaughlin was named as judge of the superior court today by Governor Foss. His appointment was sent to the executive council and under the rules will lay over for a week.

To Vote on Woman Suffrage

Carson, Nev., March 15.—The senate passed the measure submitting the question of woman suffrage to a vote of the people. The assembly already had passed the bill.

BROWN IS REARRAIGNED

Boston Broker Is Placed In Custody of Prison Warden For Thirty Days

New York, March 15.—Robert S. Brown, the Boston banker, who is alleged to have forged the name of George O. Draper as an indorsement to a promissory note for $5000, was rearraigned before Magistrate Corrigan and was committed to the custody of the warden of the city prison for a period of thirty days to await the arrival of extradition papers from Boston.

His bail is to be fixed by a justice of the supreme court.

ASKS FOR RIGHT TO MERGE MANY ROADS

Boston and Maine Wants System Under Single Corporation

Boston, March 15.—William H. Coolidge, counsel for the Boston and Maine, argued before the railroad commission for approval of the purchase of the stock of the nine constituent companies which the road now leases.

These companies are the Boston and Lowell, Nashua and Lowell, Concord and Montreal, the Northern, the Lowell and Andover, Manchester and Lawrence, the Connecticut and Passumpsic river, and the Massawippi Valley companies. The Boston and Maine also wants to purchase and hold additional shares of the capital stock of the Maine Central railroad.

Mr. Coolidge said that the road wanted to purchase these companies for the ultimate purpose of making and welding together all these roads so that the entire system will be under a single corporation.

YOUNG BEAN IN JAIL

Formally Arrested on Charge of Killing Mother and Sister

Maidstone, Vt., March 15.—Arthur Bean, who since Thursday afternoon, when he reported that his mother, Mrs. George Bean, and his sister, Nina, had been shot to death by burglars, has been kept under guard at his home, is a prisoner in the county jail at Guildhall.

He was arrested last night and taken to the jail under cover of darkness, following the conclusion of the second day of the inquest on the deaths.

Young Bean was on the witness stand at the inquest the greater part of the day, but the officials declined to make any comment as to the nature of the testimony given by him.

A TARDY DISCOVERY

Greece Lost In Territory In Treaty Signed After War of 1897

Larissa, March 15.—A map of the boundary line between Turkey and Greece, as defined in the treaty signed by the ambassadors of the interested powers at Constantinople after the war of 1897, shows that the military commission did not perform its duty.

One excellent instance is furnished by the case of the boundary line at the village of Derell. Although the commission placed posts at the very gates of Derell, it is evident that they should have been placed four miles further back toward the east and the north. Greece lost in territory.

AS REID'S SUCCESSOR

Secretary Meyer Slated to Go to England as Ambassador

Washington, March 15.—Secretary of the Navy Meyer will succeed Whitelaw Reid as ambassador to Great Britain, according to a report at the state department.

No confirmation of the rumor can be obtained, as practically all the chief officials of the government are absent from the capital.

Farmers' Week at Amherst

Amherst, Mass., March 15.—Farmers and their wives from many parts of New England, to the number of several hundred, attended the opening here of the third annual farmers' week.

VALUE OF A COMMA

Appreciated by State Official Whose Salary Is Raised $1800

Indianapolis, March 15.—The omission of a comma in the Curtis fish and game act, passed by the last legislature in an amendment to an act of 1899, is discovered to have tacked a salary increase of $1800 to the pay of George W. Miles, state fish and game commissioner. The joker was not made known until Miles applied to the auditor of the state for a warrant to cover his back salary.

"He shall be paid the further sum of $1800 per annum payable also in monthly installments out of the funds in his hands for the protection or propagation of fish and game," reads one clause.

The lack of a comma after "hands" puts a different construction on the law than was intended by the legislature; which thought it was appropriating funds for the propagation and protection of fish.

Portugal Strikers Slain

Lisbon, March 15.—Strikers at Setubal attempted to capture a cartload of sardines. The civil guards, resisting the attack, fired and killed two strikers and wounded several others. Another strike has started at Lisbon, that of the chemical workers.

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

It was to the senator's suit that the two opposing field commanders made their way when their car reached the fourth floor. In the senator's sitting room McVickar dragged a chair over to one of the windows which commanded a view of the Lost River mountains and dropped into it massively.

"I suppose we may cut out the preliminaries and come to the point at once," he began. "Ackerton wired me that you had definitely announced your son as a candidate for the attorney generalship. Have you?"

The senator was opening a box of cigars, and his reply savored of good natured irony.

"The primaries do the nominating in this state, Hardwick. Didn't you know that?" he asked mildly.

"See here, Blount, I've come 3,000 miles to thrash this thing out with you, and I'm not in the humor to spar for an opening. Do you mean to run your son or not? That is a plain question, and I'd like a plain answer."

"I told you two weeks ago what I meant to do, McVickar, but you wouldn't believe me. I'll say it again if you want to hear it."

"And I told you two weeks ago that we couldn't stand for it; that you might name your own price for an alternative."

"Yes, and I told you my price, if you happen to remember."

"I know. You said you wanted us to turn everything over to the reformers and take our chances on a clean administration. Naturally we are not going to do any such utopian thing. What I want to know now is what it is going to cost us to get your consent to do the practical and possible thing."

"Want to buy me outright this time, do you?" said the boss, still smiling gently.

"We"—McVickar was going to say, "we bought you before," but he changed it to a less offensive form—"We have had no difficulty in arriving at some sensible and practical conclusions in the past, Blount, and we shouldn't have now. We can't let you have your son for attorney general. That's out of the question. If you put your son in as public prosecutor you can have but one object in view—you mean to squeeze us till the blood runs. We're willing to discount that object before the fact."

"So you have said before a number of times and in a number of different ways," was the mild counter suggestion.

"I shan't say it many more times, David. You're pushing me too far."

"What will you say then?"

"Just this—if you won't meet me halfway, if you insist upon a fight, I'll fight you with any weapons I can get hold of."

"You've said that in other campaigns, Hardwick, and in the end you've always been like the possum that offered to come down out of the tree if the man wouldn't shoot."

"I'll hand you another proverb to go with that one," snapped the man in the chair by the window. "The pitcher that goes often to the well is sure to be broken at last. You've got a joint in your armor now, Blount. You've always been able to laugh at publicity before. Can you stand it now?"

"I reckon I'll have to stand it if you buy up a few newspapers, as you usually do," was the half quizzical reply, then for an added flick of the whip, "You and your folks can't paint me much blacker than you have always painted me, Hardwick."

"Maybe not, but this time we're going to give you a chance to start a few libel suits—if you think you can afford to appear in the courts. We've got all the evidence in black and white. We might possibly make your own state too hot to hold you. Have you thought of that?"

"Go ahead and try it," was the laconic response.

"But that isn't all," the man in the window chair went on remorselessly. "Your fellow citizens here know you for exactly what you are, Blount. You rule them with a rod of iron, but that rule can be broken. When it is broken you'll be looked upon as a criminal. In our last talk together you had something to say to me about our not keeping up with the change in public sentiment. It has changed—changed so far that it is coming to demand the punishment of the great offenders as well as the jailing of the little ones. If we want to push this fight hard enough it is not impossible that you may find yourself a broken man at the end of it, David."

"I'm taking all the chances," was the even toned rejoinder.

"But there is one chance I am sure you haven't considered—this son of yours! I know as much about him as you do—more, perhaps, for I have taken more pains to keep tab on him for the past few years than you have. He is clean and straight, Blount—a son for any man to be proud of. If that is the real reason why we are afraid to have him instructing the grand juries of this state it is also your best reason for keeping the past decently under cover. What will you say to him when the newspapers open up on you? And what will he say to you? Had you thought of that?"

For the first time since the beginning of the one sided conference the senator laid his cigar aside and sat thoughtfully tugging at the drooping mustaches.

"You'd set the house afire over my head, would you, Hardwick?" he queried, with the gray eyes lighting threateningly; then: "The last time we talked you posted your defi; now I'll post mine. You go ahead and do your worst. The boy and I will try to see that you don't have all the fun. I won't say that you mightn't turn him if you went at it right. But you won't go at it right, and as matters stand now—well, blood is thicker than water, and if you hit me you hit him. And I reckon between us we'll manage to give you as good as you send. That's all," rising to lean heavily upon the table, "all but one thing. You fight fair, Hardwick. Say anything you like about me, but if that boy has anything in his past that I don't know about, that he wouldn't want to see published, you let it alone and keep your newspaper reporters off it."

"YOU'D SET THE HOUSE AFIRE OVER MY HEAD, WOULD YOU, HARDWICK?"

The vice president laughed. He was of those who regain equanimity in exact proportion as an opponent loses it.

"You needn't let the boy's record trouble you," he averred. "It's as clean as a hound's tooth. That is one of the things I'm banking on, David. I'm going to have that young fellow fighting on our side before we're through."

At this the gray eyes under the penthouse brows flamed fiercely, and the senator took the two strides needful to place him before the man in the chair.

"Don't you do that, McVickar. I give you fair warning!" he said, his deep toned voice rumbling like the bur of grinding wheels. "There's only one way you could do it"—

The vice president stood up and put on his hat. "And you'll take precious good care that I don't get a chance to try that way, you were going to say. All right, David. You tell me to do my worst, and I'll hand that back to you too. You do the same, and we'll see who comes out ahead."

It was some five minutes later when the vice president had made his leisurely way down to the lobby. The electric lights blazed out, and the great gathering place was beginning to take on its evening air of stir and activity. Mr. McVickar pushed his way to the desk, and a row of lately arrived guests waited when he asked his question.

"Where will I be most likely to find Mr. Evan Blount at this time of day?" was the question he wished to have answered, and the obliging clerk made the line wait still longer while he summoned a bellboy and sent him scurrying across to one of the writing tables.

"This is Mr. Evan Blount," he said to the railroad magnate, indicating the young man who came up with the bellboy. "Mr. Blount, this is Mr. Hardwick McVickar, first vice president of the Transcontinental Railway company."

There was no trace of the recent battle in Mr. McVickar's voice or manner when he turned and shook hands cordially with the son of the man who had defied him.

"Your father and I were just holding a little conference over your future prospects, Mr. Blount," he said, going straight to his point. "Suppose you come down to the car with me for a little private talk on the legal situation. I'm not sure but we shall wish to retain you in a cause that is coming up in September. Gantry tells me that you are pretty well up in corporation law. Can you spare me a half hour or so?"

Evan Blount glanced at his watch. Patricia had told him that she and her father would dine in the cafe at 7 and that there would be room at their table for him and for his father, if the ex-senator would so far honor a poor college professor. There was an hour to spare, and if the vice president of the Transcontinental company were not the king he was at least a great man whose invitation was in some sense a command.

It was at the precise moment when the butterfly doors of the lobby entrance were winging to their closing behind Mr. McVickar and his quarry that the house telephone called the registry clerk. A sad faced tourist who was waiting, pen in hand, for his room assignment heard only the answer to the question which came over the wires from one of the upper floors.

"No, senator," the clerk was saying; "he has just this moment gone out—with Mr. McVickar! Could I overtake him? I'll try. But I don't know where they were going. I'll send a boy right away, though."

HUB DEALERS ARE HARD HIT

All Foodstuffs Must Hereafter Be Kept Under Cover

ANTI-GERM ORDER IN EFFECT

Two Weeks' Leeway Given Meat, Fish and Prodice Dealers, Bakers and Pedlers to Make Such Changes as Are Necessary to Comply With Law —Outer Clothing of All Sellers Must Be Clean

Boston, March 15.—Boston's board of health issued a new "anti-germ" order that it proposes to enforce at once, and which it is figured will revolutionize some of the present methods of exposing foodstuffs for sale in this city.

It will also to a large extent revolutionize the methods largely in vogue at present in handling and transporting many foodstuffs from place to place in this city.

The order is a modification of an old order issued last year but never enforced, and over which many of the prominent meat, fruit and produce dealers of this city were wrought up.

It provides that meats, fish, berries, cut fruits, candies or bakers' products, etc., shall not be conveyed from place to place or kept in open windows, outside of stores, in doorways, etc., unless covered or placed so as to be protected from dust, flies, animals and all other contaminating influences.

This will do away with the practice of dealers in such articles of keeping their wares in the open uncovered and will particularly hit the market district.

It was announced by the health board that the board would give the dealers in the market district the privilege of continuing to sell their goods without compelling the latter to put the same under cover, on Saturday afternoons and nights for the next two weeks.

This, the board said, would give the dealers ample time to prepare for the enforcement of the order after that date.

The announcement of the adoption by the board of the new regulation was made yesterday afternoon after a hearing which the board gave a committee from the Fruit and Produce Exchange. This committee stated that the order would prove a hardship to the fruit and produce men, but the board would not recede from its stand other than to except from the order all fruits which have a natural covering that does not come in contact with the mouth.

This order, in addition to providing for the covering of the foodstuffs outside of stores, applies to pedlers' carts. It also compels pedlers to carry receptacles for waste on their teams.

In addition, it provides that the outer clothing of all persons handling foodstuffs must be clean and that the persons must be free from contagious or infectious diseases.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

REBEL FORCES GAIN STRENGTH

Said to Control Nearly All the State of Chihuahua

FEDERALS ARE NOW ISOLATED

All Food Supplies Cut Out of Capital —Taft Made No Mistake In Ordering Mobilization In Texas, Where Our Troops Are Likely to Remain For Months—No Modifications or Changes In Original Plans—Militia Officers Eager to Serve on Border—Naval Orders Unchanged

Washington, March 15.—Despite the attempts of the Mexican government to minimize the disturbances in Chihuahua, in the north, conditions there lead to the belief that the rebels control nearly the entire state.

If the reports coming by way of El Paso are to be trusted, the federal forces in the district are bottled up in various towns, the chief forces being in Juarez, right across the line from El Paso and Chihuahua, the capital.

By tearing up the railways and destroying the bridges, the insurgents have virtually isolated the federal forces at Chihuahua, and so close are the lines of investment drawn that all food supplies have been shut out of the city. Throughout the rest of the state the rebels are wandering, virtually unchecked.

Conditions, therefore, would seem to warrant the deduction that President Taft made no mistake when he ordered the mobilization in Texas, where our forces could, if necessary, make an immediate move across the line.

The various army units due at San Antonio are all in camp with the exception of two cavalry regiments, and the failure of these to arrive must be laid to the railroads.

This is apparent in an interview with General Wood, who says that the mobilization has been successful in every respect. Had the railroads had notice, he says, the concentration could have begun within two hours of the time the order was received.

"We have made no modifications or changes in our plans on which we started out," said Wood. "We shall maintain at San Antonio a force of almost 20,000 troops. They will be there for months. The senior officers will be changed probably every three months, to give all officers with high rank experience with large bodies of men. Some of them never have been in command of a large force, and this mobilization will give opportunity for service to many who would not have it otherwise.

"Up to this time 1910 militia officers have volunteered for service. These represent all but twelve states in the union. When the remaining twelve states are heard from, we shall make our assignments. These officers will be sent out in batches of 156 each, or 12 to a regiment. These detachments will be composed of 108 infantry officers, 36 cavalry and 12 field artillery. In addition there will be the commissaries and other staff troops.

"Each detachment will serve two weeks, going about with the command to which they are assigned and studying the actual field operations of the officers and troops of the regular army. The federal troops will not be disbursed, but will remain about San Antonio."

Among the army men at San Antonio there is a general feeling that they will see real service, in spite of General Carter's reiteration that maneuvers only are intended.

Rather significantly from the Taft headquarters at Augusta, in answer to reports of an increase in the number of troops at San Antonio, comes the intimation that nothing of this sort is intended—at the present time.

Secretary Meyer takes occasion to say, in connection with the statement of Ambassador De La Barra at New York, that the American naval vessels had been ordered to withdraw from the Mexican coast, that there have been no changes made in the fleet's disposition.

An important intimation is given by Mr. Limantour, Mexican minister of finance, that Americans who take the part of the insurgents in Mexico need expect no more favorable treatment than the Mexicans receive. This will mean, under a suspension of constitutional guaranties, that all Americans taken will be summarily executed.

"Intervention Means War"

New York, March 15.—Mr. Limantour, the Mexican minister of finance, makes the declaration that intervention by the United States in the Mexican situation means war.

F. V. Gomez, the insurrecto agent, goes further and says: "The moment there is intervention there will cease to be an insurrection. Both sides will make common cause against a common enemy."

The issue of intervention has been raised to bring about a settlement of the conditions of brigandage existing in Mexico, and the leaders of both federal and rebel forces have given prominence to the issue.

William S. Williams of South Quincy is reported seriously ill with pneumonia.

A camp reunion will be held in the Association hall of the Y. M. C. A. Friday evening.

Miss Cora Titus of Warren avenue has returned form a week's stay at Master hill farm, New Braintree.

The resignation of Dr. Healey as physician of the Foresters of America will necessitate the election of his successor, which will take place on Friday, March 24. Dr. Ash and Dr. Reynolds are the most prominent candidates.

Mrs. Frolund of Brewers corner is receiving the condolences of many friends for the unfortunate circumstances in which she is placed. Her four children have been sent to the Brighton hospital and the mother is quarantined in the home.

Prizes at the whist party of the Lady Associates at Houghs Neck this week were won by Mrs. W. H. Stuart, Hiram Darrow, Mrs. Benson, Mr. Tisdell, Mrs. Hutchins, Mrs. Arthur Dunham, Mrs. Manguson and Mr. Manguson.

A number of young women from Quincy attended the missionary jubilee in Tremont temple Tuesday evening. Tuesday was young people's day and today will be devoted to denominational meetings in various Boston churches, followed by a banquet at noon and a big closing mass meeting this evening.

George Bolster, councilman at large, has announced his intention of running for the State legislature at the next election from Wards One, Two and Three, now represented by William R. Thomas. Mr. Thomas is intending to run for speaker of the House next fall. The situation promises to be interesting when the time comes around.

Master Everett and Sydney McLaughlin entertained the Unity club at their home 20 Goddard street, Tuesday evening. The evening was spent in playing games and singing after which a very dainty collation was served. Miss Mildred Smith poured. All spent an enjoyable evening and departed for their homes to meet again at the home of some other young member in the near future.

FOUR DEATHS IN ONE FAMILY

Children of Peter J. Dillon Victims of Scarlet Fever

The family of Peter J. Dillon of Montclair have been sorely afflicted by scarlet fever which has been prevalant in Quincy for some time four of their children having died from the disease within a week. Two of the children have been attending the Quincy school, and all four of the children when taken ill were attended by a Neponset physician who ordered their removal to the hospital in Brighton. All four children were very sick from the first, and but little hope of their recovery was entertained. It was particularly hard for the mother, the father being away.

There are now in the Atlantic district five cases some of which date back to last December.

A few new cases have been reported to the Board of Health this week but Dr. Burke says that the disease is dying out.

Considerable difficulty has been experienced by the Board of Health in quantining families, in which the disease has made its appearance. In many cases the families are among the poorer classes, who cannot and will not keep other members of the family at home, although they have been put under quarantine by the Board of Health. This is particularly so in some parts of West Quincy where the Board of Health has been openly defied. It is only within a few days that the chairman of the Board of Health accompanied by a police officer, spent the greater part of the night going among the families where the disease had made its appearance to enforce the quarantine. But even then it is reported that the families have taken but little notice of the order. Unless the disease is checked the only way, is to do as is done in cases of small pox, that is place an officer on guard at the house and keep the occupants inside.

COMING EVENTS.

Under this heading The Ledger will print single line notices of future happenings of interest to Quincy people. Secretaries of clubs, societies and other organizations are requested to forward to The Ledger notices of their meetings, entertainments, etc.

LADIES' NIGHT RAND CLASS

Contest to be Started for Increase of Membership

The first ladies night of the Rand class was observed in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church on Tuesday evening. Readings by Miss Cordonnier of Boston were enjoyed, and an orchestra composed of Miss Dorothy Sayward, Max Pinkham, Charles Sayward and Ernest Pletsch furnished pleasing instrumental music. A quartette consisting of Harold Thomas Arthur Bullock, William Bullock and Charles Sayward contributed a number of vocal selections which were well received. By request William Bullock sang "Just for a girl." The program was in charge of Charles M. Roach. Last on the program, James L. Rand teacher of the class, was introduced, and told of the ideals toward which the class should strive.

Following a grame of barnyard, refreshments were served. Composing the social committee were: Max Pinkham, Chester Barlow and Aldwin Hatfield.

The Rand class has been recently organized and is a combination of the young men's classes of the Wollaston Baptist Sunday school under the leadership of James L. Rand. Meetings are held each Sunday noon to which all young men are invited. Beginning next Sunday a contest will be started whereby it is expected the class will be materially increased. Following are the officers of the class: Charles M. Roach, president; William Bullock, vice president; James Floyd, secretary; and Nathan Drew, treasurer.

BRIEFS

The next games in the Y. M. C. A. extension club league will be played Friday evening.

Mrs. Mary Zoller of Standish avenue left Tuesday for Washington, D. C., where she will be the guest of the Thomas Ryans for three weeks.

Lawrence H. Allen of Presidents hill attended the third annual dinner of the class of 1908 M. I. T. held in the American house, Boston, Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Anna P. Gould of Adams street, patriotic instructor of Paul J. Revere W. R. C., is to have a tea pouring at her home on Friday afternoon from two until five.

Miss Sadie Esau buyer for D. E. Wadsworth & Co., has gone over to New York for a week. She will attend the Easter openings and doubtless bring back many novelties to interest Quincy ladies.

A gentlemen's night complimentary to members and men friends of the Quincy Women's club is to be held tonight at the clubhouse under the auspices of the Art and Literature committee of the club.

The Managers of Public Burial Places met Tuesday evening and organized with Albert W. Fay as chairman, Wellington W. Mitchell as secretary, and James Nicol as superintendent of Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Mrs. Edward S. Wales of Clay street entertained out of town friends at Bridge on Tuesday afternoon. Good scores were made and pretty souvenirs were awarded. The dainty collation and charming hospitality of the hostess made it a most pleasant afternoon for the participants.

A party of over fifty friends and relatives from Dorchester, Bridgewater and Wollaston were present on Monday evening at a birthday celebration tendered George B. Damon by his wife at their home on Beach street. Mr. Damon was the recipient of a pleasing remembrance from his Bridgewater friends this being his early home.

The funeral of Mrs. Lucy A. Hall, wife of Frank E. Hall, was held from her late residence, 20 Muirhead street, on Tuesday afternoon. The services were in charge of Rev. George W. Wheeler of the New Jesusalem church, Bridgewater, an old friend of the family. Instrumental music was played by Mrs. Mary Chandler West. The body was placed in the receiving tomb at Mount Wollaston cemetery.

About 100 enjoyed the supper given Tuesday evening in G. A. R. hall by Paul J. Revere W. R. C. It was followed by whist fourteen tables being in play. The highest score was 58 points the next being 53. Those to carry home souvenirs were: Mrs. Sarah C. Williams, M. Lizzie Furnald, Mrs. Davidson W. A. Hayden, Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Annie Denton, Hugh McKinley and the consolation Miss Loretta Lowe.

$200 FINE AND SENTENCE

Judge Avery Found Alex Samrah Had Bad Record

What is probably the heaviest sentence ever given in the District court in Quincy was that imposd by Judge Avery this morning in the case of Alex. Samrah, who was found guilty of violation of the liquor law and sentenced to pay a lne of $200 and serve six months in the house of correction.

Samrah's place, at 158 Sumner street was raided Sunday by Inspector Goodhue, and asquad of officers. A small quantity of liquor was found and some empty whiskey jugs seized.

The defendant was represented by counsel and Inspector Goodhue tried the case for the government, and won a signal victory. He urged a heavy sentence, claiming that Samrah had a bad record.

In January 1910, Samrah was in court for beating his wife, who told the officer that he beat her with a club because she would not sell liquor. In October 1910, Samrah was brought into court for violations of the liquor law and was nned $50, and sentenced to three months in the house of correction, and he had but recently been released from jail. This lesson apparently did no good, for it is alleged that he immediately began to sell liquor again, and raid of Sunday was the outcome.

The sentence almost took the breath away from Samrah, and his counsel. An appeal was taken and a cash bail of $300 put up for his appearance before the Supedior court.

ST. PATRICKS WHIST.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Claflin entertained the "Jolly Sixteen" at their home on Upland road, Tuesday evening, at a St. Patrick's whist. Promptly at 8 o'clock the club members entered under an arch of green, with the word "Welcome" in large letters above. Each lady was given a badge inscribed with the Irish emblems, and the gentlemen, a handsome ornamental bottle in green. These were tied with ribbon to match the ladies' badges, for forming partners for whist. They passed under a green arch inscribed with the club's name to the dining room where the host gave each member a green pink, and the president's wife presented each lady a bunch of sweet peas. Cards were enjoyed for two hours. Prizes won by Mrs. Merritt, Mr. Gregge, Mrs. Howes and Mr. Smith. After whist, Mrs. Claflin assisted by her sister, Mrs. McKenzie of Nova Scotia, and Mr. Mercier, served a dainty collation of cakes, sandwiches, strawberry shortcake, fruits, nuts, candies, tea and coffee. A social hour was then spent and just as the midnight hour was sounding, the club members bade their host and hostess adieu.

BRIEFS

Wollaston Glee club concert tonight, the second one of the season.

Mrs. B. H. Bain of Prospect avenue went to the Cape Tuesday to visit her sister Mrs. William F. Hurd at Orleans and Mrs. H. H. Bain at Dennis for the rest of the week.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

At a meeting of the Quincy Adams Extension club held in the lecture room of the First Presyterian church Tuesday evening, the largest attendance on record turned out. It was decided to have a debate on March 28 upon the subject, Resolved that Quincy should be annexed to Boston. Speakers on the affirmative will be Thomas Veale, Charles Bishop and William Michael; on the negative, William Morrison, Alex. Robertson and Everett Clark. It was voted to send flowers to Angus Finlayson, a member of the club, now in City Hospital suffering from wounds received in a fall at the Fore River shipyard. The young boys elected Walter Imary as baseball captain. Boy Scout work was conducted under the direction of Mr. Hamil.

The Wollaston club of the Y. M. C. A. will meet in the Baptist church, Thursday evening.

The Y. M. C. A.College club is rehearsing two plays, "Dr. Baxters Invention" and "College Chums," which will be given next month. Erastus Osgood is the coach of the casts.

A meeting of the physical department of the Y. M. C. A. will be held Thursday evening to make arrangements for the annual banquet to the gymnasium teams and to decide on the annual championship in different events.

COUNTY AND SOUTH SHORE

Little Items of Interest in Towns About Quincy

The annual budget of the town of Weymouth was put through Monday night with the following appropriations:—Public schools, $61,000 together with one half dog tax and tuitions; highways, bridges and snow $15,150; support of poor $10,000; relief of disabled soldiers and seamen $3,500; fire department, $6700;• police service, $5800; Tufts library $2300; Fogg library $500; abatement and remittance of taxes, $2300; note due Nov. 1, 1911, $2000; interest, $3740; printing and advertising, $1500; miscellaneous $3000; town officers $6900; electric lighting $8700; James Humphrey schoolhouse bonds $200; survey and plotting of the town $2500.

Allan M. McCulla of Brant Rock, Marshfield, died on Sunday aged 50 years.

Samuel G. Bent of Dedham observed his 96th birthday on Monday when he called on several friends. He was born in Milton and was a farmer by occupation.

SPORTING NOTES.

According to current reports there will be eight of ten baseball teams representing as many different clubs in Quincy. Makaria Fraternity should have one of the best teams in its history this year, the Adams A. A. will have an almost new team which promises to be fast. The Holy Name Socitey will have a team, the Hardy A. A., Bryant A. C., the Ramblers, Cranch A. A., Atlantic A. A. and a number of others in various sections of the city. There would be great possibilities for forming a league if such a step were desirable. At all events Quincy will have a plenty if not a superfluity of baseball this year with its dozen amateur teams and probably two or three semi-professional organizations.

The annual meet of Thayer academy will be held Saturday evening March 25.

Quincy Y. M. C. A. entries for the State meet to be held in Newton on Saturday evening are as follows:

High jump—McArdle, Wood, Estey, R. Cranshaw.

Three broad jumps—McArdle, Wilson, Curtin.

20 yard dash—Wilson, Johnson, Phelan, Prout, Trask, W. Cranshaw.

Potato race—Dineen, Wilson, Trask, McInnes.

1000 yard run—Sutérmeister, Floyd, Dineen.

Relay race—Prout, Trask, Floyd, Phelan.

The potato race and 20-yard dash are scratch events and all the others will be handicap. Quincy should show up better than usual this year, although she does not expect to win the cup. Phelan, Wilson, McArdle, and Wood are sure point winners, and Trask, Dineen, Sutermeister, Prout, Estey, the Cranshaw brothers and Floyd are men who will make the next man "go some" before they are defeated.

Weymouth High school defeated Milton High on the Weymouth floor Tuesday afternoon by a score of 24 to 19. Wall starred for Weymouth and O'Connell for Milton.

Walter Lonergan, captain of last year's Quincy team in the Old Colony league, has signed up with Brockton in the New England league for the coming season. "Charley" Knight will be given a try out in the box with Brockton. If by any chance he should fail to make good he will appear on the slabs for the Adams A. A.

The Intermediates of the Y. M. C. A. have their baseball schedule completed, and candidates for the team are practicing in the rear of the association building daily.

The Fore River apprentices expect to put a strong baseball team on the field this year. Manager Neary is busy with the schedule and has it well under way already.

Wilson will represent the Y. M. C. A. in the 10-mile run under the auspices of the Italian American A. C. on April 1.

Quincy High will meet Newton High on the diamond June 15.

At an election of officers for the Massachusetts Fields school baseball team on Monday Henry Northrop was chosen captain and John Osberg manager.

TRIAL OF SANKATY.

The steamboat Sankaty built in Quincy for the New Bedford, Marthas Vineyard and Aantucket steamboat company, proved herself to be a much faster boat on her trial Monday than she was designed to be. Her fastest mile over a measured course was at the rate of 16.5 knots an hour which is one and a half knots more than the contract called for. On her four hour continuous run she maintained an average of 15 3-4 miles an hour.

The Fore River Company was represented on the trials by Assistant Manager F. O. Wellington and there were also on board twelve technology engineering students in charge of Prof. Peabody, who are studying the workings of machinery.

The new steamer returned to Quincy for her finishing touches. She will be completed so as to be able to go on her route between Marthas Vineyard, Nantucket and New Bedford meeting trains from Boston and New Bedford.

ST. PATRICKS BIRTHDAY.

C. W. Guy tells the following story in relation to the birth of St. Patrick. On the trip with him was an Irish-American who had served as a surgeon during the Civil war. He was a well educated man and a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln. He said he was asked one time when St. Patrick was born, and in reply said: "In Ireland, some said it was the eighth and some said the ninth. The dispute was finally referred to a bishop for settlement. The old bishop said nine and eight are seventeen, and seventeen is right, and seventeen it has been ever since."

GEORGE W. MORTON PASSES AWAY

President of Savings Bank and Prominent in Financial Institutions of City

Trustee of Public Library for Many Years

George W. Morton of Spear street passed away Wednesday at his residence, after an illness of several weeks from cancer in the throat.

Mr. Morton was one of Quincy's most prominent citizens, being for three years a member of the City Council, and at different times urged to accept a nomination for the Mayoralty. He was at the time of his death the president of the Quincy Savings Bank, a director of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance company and the Quincy Historical Society, and a trustee of the Thomas Crane Public Library. He was one of the charter members of the Quincy Yacht club and has served as commodore.

He was born in Quincy, May 2, 1842. He attended the public schools and the Pierce & Wesleyan academy where he was at the outbreak of the Civil war in 1861. Enlisting as a volunteer paymaster he was attached to the U. S. gunboat "R. B. Forbes" in the Dupont expedition at the taking of Port Royal, South Carolina; afterward temporarily attached to the frigate "Roanoke" during the engagement between the "Monitor" and the "Merrimac" at Hampton Roads, Virginia, and for nearly three years on board the "Hetzel" the flagship in the sounds of North Carolina.

At the close of the war he was ordered to the U. S. ship "Juniata" and visited the principal ports in Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, St. Helena, Africa, Portugal and Great Britain. He retired from the navy in 1867.

Then he took a great interest in yachting. He was the skipper of the Red Lion, famous in its day. He was one of the pioneer summer residents at Houghs Neck his cottage then stood under the hill off Manet avenue. He became a charter member of the Quincy Yacht club and later its commodore.

He became largely interested in real estate having charge of considerable property in Quincy and Milton, owned or bequeathed by relatives. He also became prominent in the financial affairs of the city being elected a director of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, the National Mount Woilaston bank and finally president of the Quincy Saving bank since April, 1907.

The original street railway between City Square and Houghs Neck was known as the Manet street railway and Mr. Morton was superintendent.

In 1890 Mr. Morton was elected a member of the City Council and in his second year, when James Thompson was president, he was appointed chairman of the Finance committee. In a sketch of the councilmen of 1891 a writer of the Daily Ledger said:

"Mr. Morton is entirely unlike any other member of the Council. His independence is of a very different stamp and original with himself. He impress one with the belief that he is thoroughly disgusted with the wrangles (debates?) and always votes for adjournment with apparent pleasure. He is generally with the majori-

DARIUS COBB ON HIGHER ART

Addresses the Women's Club at Clubhouse

The Art and Literature Committee of the Women's Club held a gentlemen's night at the club house Wednesday evening. Owing to the absence of the president Mrs. H. J. Gurney, Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, first vice president graciously welcomed the members and guests. She then placed the meeting in the hands of Mrs. Edward B. Marsh of the committee, who had charge of the program in the absence of Mrs. Charles Bickford, chairman, who was unable to be present on account of illness.

Mrs. Marsh introduced Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell, the soloist of the evening, who rendered her solos in her charming manner and voice, most acceptably accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Mary Chandler West.

Mr. Marsh then spoke of our disappointment in not having Professor Bickford's reading of Hamlet, as at first planned, but because of his illness he had sent to us his good friend the noted artist, art critic and lecturer, Darius Cobb of Boston. Those familiar with Mr. Cobb and his strong paintings knew what a treat it would be to hear this gifted gentleman.

Mr. Cobb who is 77 years old is like the late Julia Ward Howe, as many years young. He paid a tribute to Prof. Bickford, for whom he was glad to substitute. His subject, "The Higher art," was most instructive and highly entertaining, for he has a very strong vein of humor, and brought bursts of laughter from his audience, who paid the closest attention to every word, whether anecdotes of himself and his distinguished twin brother, the sculptor, the late Cyrus Cobb, or explaining his subject.

At the close of the lecture refreshments were served by the committee assisted by Mrs. Sheppard and Miss Lillian Newman. It was one of the most sociable gatherings of the year, and the lecture closing early, nine o'clock, none had to hurry, but stood about chatting with friends, who all agree they considered they would have missed a great deal if they had not heard Mr. Cobb in his very unique and happy manner of handling his subject.

At a meeting Wednesday of the Daughters of the American Revolution at Tremont Temple, Boston, it was voted to buy Darius Cobb's painting of "Washington on Dorchester Heights" to be placed in the Memorial Continental hall.

Elizabeth M. Staples, late of Weymouth, Fannie G. Sherman, executor.

WOLLASTON GLEE CLUB CONCERT

The Second of the Season and a Winner in Every Respect

Chorus Numbers Spirited and Inspiring as Usual

The Wollaston Congregational church was the mecca, on Tuesday evening, for scores who wended their way over Wollaston's several hills to the season's second concert given by the Wollaston Glee club.

Attractive costumes abounded and a gay audience filled the church to the doors, making extra seating arrangements necessary and testifying that the popularity of the club's concerts is still on the ascent.

While the absence on account of illness of Director John A. Crowley, who has brought the club to its high standard, was regretted by all, his influence was felt in the splendid precision and harmony with which all parts responded. The club was fortunate in procuring as substitute the services of William Lester Bates, organist and choir master of Union Congregational church of Boston, and an old friend of the club. His direction on Tuesday evening was worthy of commendation.

The chorus numbers of the club were as spirited and inspiring as usual. Especially pleasing were the closing pieces of each part, when in addition to the chorus and soloists the piano and organ were brought into play. "The Dawn," the closing piece of part one, was a recitative and the effect produced was one of pleasant harmony and strength. "Sanctus" which closed the evening's program was in Latin with a solo part by Edward E. Bullock.

The lighter chorus numbers of the program were most heartily received and included "The beautiful rose" and "The city choir" with its chorus "He'll take a pill, he'll take a pilgrim home."

Assisting the club were: Miss Catherine Cole, reader; Edward E. Bullock, tenor; A. L. Hayden baritone; William E. Weston accompanist and Llewellyn M. Evans organist.

Miss Cole proved herself to be a reader of wide versatility. Her delivery of a scene from "The melting

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The Western farmers think it's a poor reciprocity that doesn't work both ways.

Just about the time Dorothy Arnold gets off the first page here comes Duke of Abruzzi marching back.

Captain Hobson gives up only ten months in which to get our lives insured against Japanese bullets.

Our people have been alert in seeing the first blue bird and robin of the spring but what we want to know is has any Quincyite seen a Harem skirt?

One of the fifteen cent magazines that are most vigorously protesting against paying more postage on their advertising sections comes out for March so buried in advertising that you can't find the reading matter.

The recent agitation caused by the scarlet fever epidemic has called our attention to the Board of Health situation in Quincy. There is no one man who has the time and the power to do the sanitary work of our city. The secretary of the board is a busy physician and the sanitary inspector has very little power. Many of the larger towns in Massachusetts are realizing the need of an agent to take charge of the health work of the town. The agent is a man thoroughly educated along sanitary lines with power to act for the city on his own authority. Quincy claims progressiveness along many lines, but in this, one of the most fundamental, she is far outdistanced by towns one quarter her side.

With the large foreign population in our city there is a very great need of strict supervision of sanitary conditions. Many of the families which are quarantined, ignorant of its real significance, break their quarantine daily with impunity. There is need of a revolution in the Board of Health. The sanitary inspector should be given power to enforce the rules, and if necessary to make an example of the offenders. If one or two people were brought up in court for breaking quarantine there would not be many more offences of a like nature. There is enough sanitary work in Quincy to keep three experts busy all the time, but if the inspector could be made an authorized agent it would mend matters considerably.

GAMBLING AT SOUTHERN RESORT

Some highly colored tales are drifting North about the doings of social leaders at Palm Beach and other Florida resorts. The spectacle is reported of people losing $5000 bets in a minute, and dropping $15,000 on an evening's play. We should have no room on American soil for even the beginnings of a Monte Carlo, where a thin oil of art and music and social refinement veil the hideousness of ruin and suicide.

The average thrifty and hard working American is little dazzled by the fascinations of the gambling hells that have drawn victims from Europe for a century. When they begin to toss $1000 bills around the table, he looks at it with the disgust one feels when a drunken man begins to throw away money among his loafer comrades.

But some people are so swayed by illusory hope, that a hazardous chance of gain seems almost a certainty. To them the world is governed by luck. Fortunes are made by luck. Anyone who believes in luck, believes that luck must turn. Consequently if you only keep on playing long enough, you are sure to win.

No person who maintains a gambling house but has made long and patient calculations, by which he is certain of winning in the long run, provided only he has the cash to meet temporary reverses. It is the old game of the spider vs the fly, of science and arithmetic against guess work. The world of business has little use for people who play a game against such odds. It rightly assumes that they are too impatient of hard work to win in the game of ordinary business. And in this day of travel and newspapers, the way you spend your vacation usually travels to the home office before your train reaches the station.

A MARCH BLIZZARD

Little Snow, Low Temperature and High West Wind

A belated winter blizzard came as an unwelcome visitor late Wednesday night as a forcible reminder that old March is keeping up its reputation for high winds and that the time has not yet arrived when heavy coats and winter garments can be laid aside.

The storm started in shortly before midnight. At that time the wind had not greatly increased from what it had been during the day. There was a slight fall of damp snow and it looked as though the weather would be wild before morning.

Once started the storm began to take on fury. The wind increased in violence until it blew a gale. There was some snow but not enough to amount to a great deal. What there was in the line of snow was light and it was blown about.

At daylight a howling blizzard was in progress. The sun soon came out but the wind seemed to increase if anything and the snow was blown about in clouds that cut like a knife when it struck the face. At sunrise the themometers registered 8 above, but the wind made it seem colder than it actually was.

Taking everything into consideration this morning was one of the most disagreeable of the winter in which to be about. However the sky was clear and the sun bright.

CAMORRA JURY COMPLETE

Proceedings Against Italian Criminals Resumed at Viterbo

Viterbo, March 16.—After much difficulty a jury was secured for the trial of the thirty-six members of the Camorra who are charged, in various degrees, with the murders of their fellow thieves, Gennaro Cuccolo and the latter's wife.

The four seats left vacant when court adjourned Tuesday were filled yesterday and two jurors in addition to those required by law were also sworn in.

Carabineers, cavalry and government agents started a crusade against suspicious strangers. A score were driven from Viterbo. Among them were relatives of Enrico Alfano, head of the band.

MASSACHUSETTS LEADS

Far Ahead of Other States In Contribution of Sea Food

Washington, March 16.—The "sacred codfish," backed by the 599 other varieties of sea food, still maintains the supremacy of Massachusetts in the fishing industry of the country, according to a special report for 1908, issued by the department of commerce and labor.

There are thirty-seven other states engaged in salt and fresh water fishing, but Massachusetts easily leads her sister states and contributes 13 percent of the total in quantity and value of the fisheries of the entire country.

SCORES REPORTED DEAD

Tidal Wave Wrecks Harbor Front of an Italian Town

Rome, March 16.—Scores of persons are reported to have been killed in the destruction of a large section of the town of Viareggio, Tuscany, by a storm and tidal wave. According to reports reaching here, a cyclone struck the town, demolishing many buildings.

During the height of the tempest a tidal wave rolled in from the sea, devastating practically the entire harbor front. Nine bodies had been recovered at last accounts.

NEW BRIBE INQUIRY

Lorimer Case Is Taken Up by the Illinois State Legislature

Springfield, Ills., March 16.—United States Senator Lorimer is in for another investigation of his election to the senate. The Helm investigating committee of the state senate actively began its work yesterday afternoon.

Some new evidence that Lorrimer's seat was purchased is said to be in the committee's possession. They assert they have names of corporations and individuals who bribed assemblymen or influenced legislation.

LECTURE OF MR. MACMILLAN

"How Shall God Save the Heathen" His Subject

There was a good attendance at Colonial hall Wednesday at the lecture by A. H. Macmillan of New York. The subject of the lecture was "How shall God save the heathen?" and it was given under the auspices of the International Bible Students association. The purpose of the lecture was to stimulate a deeper interest in Bible study.

The speaker occupied the closest attention of his hearers for nearly two hours. Every statement he made was backed up by direct Bible proof, and in the course of his lecture he quoted many Scripture references, and so thoroughly well bible read was he that he gave book, chapter and verse and then quoted the same.

He spoke of the efforts put forth along missionary lines as evidence of the importance attached by all Christian bodies to the subject. He submitted statistics as evidence that we were making a losing fight as during the last 100 years the heathen population had doubled. Ninety thousand were dying daily without any knowledge of Christ.

With logic which was hard to be got away from he showed the Father's drawing now to be restricted to individuals who would gladly suffer misunderstanding, misrepresentation and ostracism now as a small price to pay for the divine approval, with the hope of sharing Christ's kingdom and nature future.

One feature of Adam's loss for himself and us was the privilege of obedience without sacrificing anything—simply obey and enjoy God's bounty. This privilege was purchased for the race—Christ came to "seek and to save that which was lost." To this end Satan will be bound for a thousand years not to show what God might have done long ago had he so desired, but for a rational purpose. The work of preparation completed, (the election of the Gospel Church) all of earth's billions who have gone down into death (as well as those who are living) under "restitution" processes, are to be blessed with opportunities for mental and physical health not miraculously or momentarily, but by slow, patient effort, during which it will be burned into their consciousness that "Whatsoever a man sows that shall he also reap." The lesson will be so thoroughly learned that it will need no repetition. As a final crucial test of character Satan shall be loosed a little season, God's unalterable law— the obedient may live, the disobedient must die, will then go into effect—the obedient shall have restored to them, the lost inheritance. It will be theirs to have, to hold and to keep. The disloyal forfeit everything in the "second death"—oblivion. "There shall be no more death, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things have passed away." (Rev. 21:4.)

A RECESS APPOINTMENT

President Makes Lewis Assistant Attorney General of United States

Washington, March 16.—President Taft has signed a recess appointment for W. H. Lewis, as assistant attorney general of the United States.

Lewis is the Boston negro, now assistant attorney at Boston, whose nomination for assistant attorney general went to the senate about ten days before adjournment of congress.

The senate failed to confirm his nomination, and it is considered certain that there will be a fight upon him when his name again goes to the upper house.

FOR PULLING HIS NOSE

City Marshal Puts Bullet Through Heart of Cattle Raiser

Globe, Ariz., March 16.—George Shanley, capitalist and cattle raiser, was shot and killed by City Marshal Anderson while they were at supper with friends in a Chinese restaurant. During a quarrel Shanley pulled Anderson's nose.

"Do that again and I'll kill you," Anderson is said to have yelled. Shanley repeated the nose-pulling, and the next second a bullet penetrated his heart. Anderson gave himself up.

Wins Suit Against Father

Boston, March 16.—For services rendered as housekeeper from 1903 to 1909, Sarah Schryver has been given a verdict of $3501 against her father, Solomon Schryver of Winthrop, by a jury in the superior court.

STATE HOUSE LEGISLATION

Bill to Fix Salary of Assistant Register of Probate

A new draft of the so-called Trades Union fines bill was reported in the Senate on Wednesday with several dissenters.

The Denny bill appropriating $15,000 for a commemoration of the patriotic services of the volunteers of 1861-65 was rejected, and the bill for $3,500 ordered to a third reading.

The Senate on Tuesday asked the committee on liquor laws to make separate reports on the bar and bottle and other bills instead of one report of leave to withdraw.

A bill was reported to establish the salary of the assistant register of probate of Norfolk at two-thirds that of the register.

Leave to withdraw to Frederick W. Peabody on his bill to prohibit Christian Science treatment of disease.

By a vote of 18 to 17 the Senate refused to substitute for an adverse report a bill to put instructors in prisons and reformatories in the classified civil service.

An order was adopted for an investigation by the Railroad Commissioners and State Board of Health of the need of pure water and sanitary drinking cups on cars.

By a vote of 116 to 100 the House substituted a bill to compel street railways to equip their cars with fenders.

The house refused to substitute, 38 to 47, for an adverse committee report the bill to provide an open season on black ducks, redheads and blue bills.

ty, and in conversation gives the best reasons for his opinion, but he never encroaches upon the valuable time of the Council with arguments. He generally holds quite an animated discussion with the members in his immediate vicinity, and is seldom interrupted by the President's gavel. Mr. Morton can be safely counted upon for all needed improvements, especially for sidewalks, and like other real estate men, he is especially desirous that all improvements go on as quickly as is consistent with the city's finances. His re-election as Councilman at large, having received the largest vote upon the ticket, is a compliment to his ability."

Mr. Morton has been one of the board of trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library for a long term of years. Probably to him more than any other member should credit be given for improvements which have been made in the memorial hall and grounds. He had the confidence of the family of the late Thomas Crane, and they were pleased to adopt many of his suggestions.

In April 1907 Mr. Morton was elected president of the Quincy Saving Bank, having served a number of years as a director. Never was the bank more prosperous than today.

Mr. Morton was one of the curators and most active members of the Quincy Historical Society, and did much to preserve the President John Quincy Adams birthplace and its antiques.

With Mrs. Morton who survives him, he travelled considerably in recent years, both in the United States, Mexico and Europe. In 1906 he was in a serious railroad accident in Arizona.

He was a son of William S. Morton, and a brother of Mrs. Fred H. Smith of Quincy Point. He married late in life, his wife being Mrs. Lydia Follett, a teacher for many years at the Coddington school, and recently president of the Quincy Women's Club. His aged mother is still living, but has been an invalid for ten years.

BEAN INQUEST ENDS

Grandfather, Aged 104, Is a Witness Against the Accused Boy

Maidstone, Vt., March 16.—After being in session three full days and hearing the testimony of nearly half a hundred witnesses, the inquest on the deaths of Mrs. George Bean and her daughter, Nina, was ended last night.

The two women were shot and killed in their home last Thursday, and Arthur Bean, a son and brother, is locked up on suspicion of having been responsible for the deaths.

Eight witnesses were called yesterday, the last one being John Sweet, the 104-year-old grandfather of the accused, who had previously stated that he was locked in a closet by young Bean just previous to the shooting.

Edward E. Bullock was in his usual good form, and the "Bandolero" a baritone solo by A. L. Hayden, was well rendered.

William E. Weston who to Quincy people at least needs no comment as accompanist, performed his part with the usual efficiency. Llewellyn M. Evans who presided at the organ was also good.

Many favorable comments were heard of the program cover which was designed for the club by Elisha B. Bird, a Wollaston resident, and printed by the George W. Prescott Publishing Co.

MRS. ELMS SENTENCED

Manslaughter Plea of Slayer of Infant Is Accepted

Plymouth, Mass., March 16.—Mrs. Sarah S. Elms, who has been confined in jail for eight months, awaiting a disposition of her case, was brought into court late yesterday and, pleading guilty to the charge of manslaughter, was sentenced to a term in Sherborn.

Mrs. Elms was charged with the murder of a new born child of her daughter, who was at that time a student at the Bridgewater normal school. Mrs. Elms is weak from a recent critical illness of pneumonia.

Danderine
GROWS HAIR
and we can
PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes:
"As a result of using Danderine, my hair is close to five feet in length."

Beautiful Hair at Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions.)

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply, as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

ASSAULT ON DOG.

Charles C. Hanley was summoned into court this morning for assault on a dog. The alleged assault took place last November. Mr. Hanley keeps hens at his home at Germantown, and one of his neighbors keeps a dog. The dog was in the habit of making life miserable for the hens, and on Nov. 2, Mr. Hanley took his gun and shot at the dog. Mr. Hanley claims that he had no intention to shoot the dog, but simply to frighten the animal so that he would stay away. The dog was so far away he declared that the shot could not have reached him. The owner however claimed that one shot hit the dog on the knee making a wound. Nothing was done at that time, and probably would not, but for a second affair last Monday. On that day the dog got into a fight with another dog, and a child was knocked down. Then Mr. Hanley got out his gun again and shot. Then the complaint for the November shooting was taken out. The court found that he was guilty and said that it would impose a fine of $25. The case was continued for sentence, however, until Friday morning that Mr. Hanley might procure bonds to protect his appeal.

—When men spend a dollar for food they want, by every right they should have, a dollar's worth. They may be forced by experience to admit that prices are unavoidably high, but they will never believe that measures are unavoidably short. The law is not merely for their obedience, not merely to collect taxes for them, but for their protection, and they have a right to look to their lawmakers to afford them such protection. There are such protective weights and measures bills now before Congress which, at this do nothing session, will probably not be acted; but there is no reason why the Indiana Legislature should not take the steps necessary to put trading between dealers and ultimate consumers on the true "value received" basis.—Indianapolis News.

LET YOUR LIGHTS BE BURNING

Text of Rev. G. H. Reed at Wollaston Unitarian

The second of the Lenten services was held in the Wollaston Unitarian church Wednesday evening, and was very well attended. Mrs. Royal L. Turner sang by request "Just for today," and the devotional service was conducted by the pastor and Rev. George Hale Reed of Belmont, the latter portions of Isaiah and of the Sermon on the Mount, as found in the book of Scripture selections called the soul of the Bible. He took his text from the 12th chapter of Luke—"Let your lights be burning." He referred to Lent as an opportunity for inward growth, and moral refreshment; a time for proving that the light which shines upon us from above has power to renew and strengthen us for the daily duty." The observance of the Lenten season in our modern churches," said Rev. Mr. Reed "is an indication of breadth, and of a growing away from the narrow idea, that because a church with which we do not agree makes special observance of Lent, it is a reason why we should not do so." No longer do we regard this as a season of gloom and melancholy, but rather as a season in which so to govern ourselves that we may raise life to a permanently higher plane.

A life must have reverence, righteousness and love to be a living power that shall carry man to the fulfilment of his highest ideals. Worship is the sign that the light of reverence is burning brightly; obedience that the light of righteousness is clear and strong; and service is the light sign that the greatest of all lights, love, is burning with a flame unquenchable.

And so Lent becomes an opportunity to test life, to see if the high purpose is throbbing full and free; but without care and watchfulness it is easy to lose this impelling power and to know not its loss until day of need come and we summon it in vain.

CHILDREN'S PARTY.

Frances Angier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Angier of Presidents hill, was the hostess at a dancing party held in Alpha hall Wednesday afternoon. About 60 little friends, accompanied by their mothers and in some cases by their grandmothers, were present.

Miss Agnes B. Hayward of Braintree assisted Mrs. Angier in directing the dances. In the latter part of the afternoon the guests marched down to Union hall, which was prettily decorated and contained daintily laid tables, around which the children gathered for the refreshments. Favors were given to all, Japanese lanterns for the boys and Japanese umbrellas for the girls. After the refreshments had disappeared they went upstairs again for more dancing. During the last dance, rolls of red, white and blue confetti were thrown into the air which in descending festooned themselves over the wires which were stretched overhead, forming a very pretty picture for the guests in the gallery to enjoy. At 5.30 the little folks started for home after two hours and a half of "good time," although as one little fellow said "it didn't seem as though they'd been there more'n fifteen minutes."

FORMER ASSESSOR DEAD

Also Prominent Member of Bethany Church

William S. Williams, a well known resident of South Quincy, passed away at his home on Pleasant street this morning, after a brief illness of pneumonia in his 76th year. Mr. Williams was born in Wales, but has been a resident of Quincy for many years.

During his active business life he was engaged in the contracting business, taking contracts for monumental work. Of late years, however, he has not been actively engaged in business. He accumulated considerable property and was a large real estate owner.

During the first year of the City government he was appointed by Mayor Porter as an assessor from Ward Three, at which time Benjamin F. Curtis was the principal assessor.

He has long been identified with the Bethany Congregational church, and some time ago caused to be placed a memorial window in the church in memory of his wife, who passed away some years ago.

He was a member of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows, Shalom encampment and Canton Shawmut. He frequently visited his native country, crossing the Atlantic many times. He leaves an adopted daughter.

BRIEFS

The aviation school at the Harvard Aviation field in Quincy will be opened about May 1.

Two of Quincy's leading musicians Miss Florence G. Olney and Mrs. Edith Cary Page are to present a program of great merit this evening in Colonial hall which all lovers of high class music will enjoy it.

Rev. T. P. McMarron will give a lecture in St. Mary's hall Friday evening under the auspices of Division 4, A. O. H. The subject of the lecture is Ireland, and Rev. Mr. McMarion will take his hearers on a trip from New York to Queenstown, and thence to the Emerald island. The lecture will be profusely illustrated with stereopticon views of incidents of the trip and of scenes in Ireland. One of the features of the evening will be the singing of numerous solos during the lecture illustrating the scenes by Miss Helen L. Galvin, the popular soprano soloist of Braintree. Miss Galvin has a remarkably sweet voice and her solos are always greatly enjoyed.

D. A. R.

The Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter D. A. R. were entertained at the home of Mrs. Edward Abbott Chase, Marion street, Monday afternoon the Regent Mrs. Walter F. Jones in the chair. Four new members were admitted. Six members are planning to attend the National Congress at Washington, April 17th to 24th. Mrs. Jones was made a member of the New England Historical Genealogical society.

In May the Chapter is planning to give a colonial tea at the home of Mrs. Jones under the chairmanship of Mrs. Seth Crocker. The musical part of the program will be in charge of Miss Ida Louise Poore.

The most important business of the afternoon was the presentation of a draft of constitution and by-laws for the chapter by Mrs. Ida F. Waterhouse for the committee which will be adopted after being approved by the State and National authorities.

Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. E. E. Jameson Mrs. E. S. Tenney and Mrs. Roger H. Wilde.

TAKEN IN TEXAS BY MEXICANS

State Department Demands Release of Americans

BRINGS UP A DIRECT ISSUE

Its Settlement Likely to Prove Irritating Under Present Circumstances—Rebels and Federals May Join Hands Against United States Should We Attempt to Intervene—Border Patrol to Be Increased by Several Troops of Cavalry—Meanwhile the Revolution In Mexico Is Spreading

Washington, March 16.—The American government, through the state department, made a formal demand of the Mexican government that Edwin Blatt and Lawrence Converse, locked up in the federal prison at Juarez, Mex., as prisoners of war, be released. It is the first direct issue between the two governments since the troops were ordered to the Mexican boundary.

This government asserts, after a long investigation, that the two young men, who had been with the insurrectos, were arrested on American soil—actually kidnapped—and taken into Mexican territory.

Enrique C. Creel, minister of foreign affairs, at Mexico City, after hearing that the United States had decided to demand the release of the two prisoners, said:

"This government is satisfied that the Americans were arrested on Mexican soil. This decision is based on the official report made to us."

The official report made to the United States government is just as emphatic the other way. P. D. Edwards, United States consul at Juarez, reported:

"After a thorough investigation I found that Lawrence Converse and Edwin Blatt were kidnapped by Mexican authorities on American soil at least 500 feet from the boundary."

Under the present circumstances, the settlement of this question is likely to prove irritating. It is an indication, moreover, that America is determined to protect the lives and property of her citizens in Mexico.

In the face of the official denials that more American forces were to be sent to the border, orders have been issued increasing the patrol by several troops of cavalry, at the request of General Duncan. This is taken to mean that the Washington officials themselves are none too sure of their ground.

The serious intimation that Mexicans, both rebels and federals, would draw together in their opposition to intervention by the United States is given by the representatives of both parties in the United States. Should this state of affairs come about the great American field of industry in Mexico might be restricted for years to come.

In his article on the Mexican situation in the current Independent, Ambassador De La Barra gives a hint of this feeling, while the revolutionary agent, Gomez, comes out flat-footed with the statement that in case of intervention the insurrection would cease and the insurgents would join hands with the government in repelling the invaders.

Meanwhile the fighting in Chihuahua continues. The reports with regard to the serious situation of the capital city persist, and it is further asserted that the revolution is spreading, and that large additions of armed forces to the rebels may be expected at any time. What effect such a condition will have on the movements of our troops cannot be stated at this time.

The opinion held by some in Washington is that President Taft, through secret reports from Mexico, became convinced that foreigners, and particularly Americans, were not secure, and that this was one motive for the mobilization of our troops.

A new view of our military movement is put forward by ex-Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte, who believes it is designed to show the American people the weakness of their military forcees.

Boston, March 16.—Boston's park commissioners make a strong plea for Sunday baseball and other forms of amusement on the Sabbath in their annual report filed with the mayor yesterday afternoon.

A GOOD BILL.

Among the many bills presented to the Legislature this year was a bill to regulate the practice of Optometry in this Commonwealth. In order to protect the public against incompetent practitioners, state boards of registration in Dentistry, Medicine, Pharmacy, Embalming, etc., have been created by the Massachusetts Legislature, and the average citizen is surprised when informed that no restriction is placed upon the man who examines eyes. Twenty-five states have enacted the Optometry law including our neighboring states of Rhode Island, Vermont, Maine and New York.

At the present time there are three classes of people examining eyes, namely: the Oculist, the Optometrist, and the Optician. An Oculist is an eye surgeon, a medical man skilled in eye diseases. The Optometrist is a man versed in refraction and competent to prescribe glasses. He does not treat diseases, simply diagnoses them, and refers to a physician for medical treatment. The true province of the Optician is to make the glasses prescribed by the Oculist or Optometrist, although in many cases the Optometrist fills his own prescriptions. The fitting of glasses to correct optical defects in the human eye is a question of physics hearing no relation whatever to medicine. A lense simply treats light before entering the eye, a purely external and physical process. To obtain proper vision rays of light entering the human eye must focus upon the Retina. If through any optical defect or defects such is not the case, proper fitting glasses bend the rays to fall upon the Retina. Contrary to general knowledge a medical course does not in any way embrace the science of fitting glasses indeed in a four year's medical course in many of our best schools only thirty-two hours in the entire four years is spent upon the eye. Yet, if a graduate of medicine sees fit to prescribe glasses he may do so without any more knowledge of the subject than an itinerant vender, and under the cloak of his "M. D." it is easy to establish himself in the confidence of the people.

This law is not experimental, having been written on the Statue books of twenty-five states and being in force in some states for ten years. The brightest men in the nation have signed similar bills as governors of their several states. Massachusetts requires the Lawyer, the Dentist, the Physician, the Plumber, the Embalmer, etc., to pass examinations and give evidence of their qualifications. Surely, the preservation of the eyesight of the living, their chief asset, is as important as the preservation of the bodies of the dead. Massachusetts is being made the dumping ground for the incompetents that cannot qualify in the twenty-five states having the law.

Reputable Optomerists who are building up lucrative practice by honorable methods deserve protection, and it is not fair that their standard should be so greatly lowered by this horde of incompetents, for the sake of toading to a few selfish interests who would hold the gates wide open. Does Massachusetts want to remain the catchbasin for the optical sewage from the twenty-five states with a law or should the public be protected from such deplorable conditions?

MISS WHITTIER WAS DROWNED

Mystery of Ipswich Schoolgirl Almost Wholly Solved

HER BODY FOUND IN RIVER

Opinion That She Committed Suicide on Jan. 13, Since Which Time Search Has Been Widespread—Not Definitely Known How Long Remans Had Been n Water—No Marks of Violence Are Found

Cambridge, Mass., March 16.—The body of Florence E. Whittier, the Ipswich girl, who has been missing since Jan. 13, and for whom the police of every city and town in New England have been searching, was found by a schoolboy, floating in the Charles river not far from the Cambridge end of the Harvard bridge, which connects this city with Boston.

With the discovery of the girl's body a mystery that has rivalled that of the disapeparance of Dorothy Arnold, the New York girl, has been almost wholly solved.

How long the body had been in the water the medical examiners, who performed an autopsy last night, were unable to state definitely. Whether it had been frozen in the river ice for two months or whether it had been in the water but three or four days, they could not determine. Why she left home, where she went subsequently, and how long she has been dead are yet matters to be ascertained, but it is believed that she committed suicide on the day she disappeared.

According to Medical Examiner Swan, who, with Medical Examiner Durrell, performed the autopsy, death was by drowning. "There were no marks on the body," said Swan, "and all the organs were in a normal condition."

Florence E. Whittier disappeared on Jan. 13 last, and despite the fact that her description was sent broadcast, no trace of her was discovered until her body was seen floating in the water.

Letters poured in to the Whittier family at Ipswich from all parts of the country, some containing what purported to be clues, and others offering to disclose her whereabouts for specified amounts.

The girl, who was 19 years of age, was a daughter of Maynard Whittier, a retired merchant of Ispwich, and at the time of her disappearance was attending the Bryant & Stratton business college in Boston. Her family is connected with that of the poet Whittier.

On the day on which she was last seen she left the business college shortly after 2 o'clock, presumably to go home. She was never seen alive again.

A New Back for an Old One. How It Can be Done in Quincy.

The back aches at times with a dull, indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so lame to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back in this condition You cannot reach the cause. Exchange the bad back for a new and stronger one. Quincy residents would do well to profit by the following example.

Richard Smith, South Central avenue, Wollaston, Mass., says: "I suffered from backache and kidney trouble for a long time. I had dull pains through the small of my back and on arising in the morning, I was so stiff and lame that I could hardly dress myself. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply and in a short time after beginning their use, I was relieved. After I had taken the contents of two boxes of this remedy, I was in good health and I have had no kidney trouble since. I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for this change in my condition and I gladly recommend them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

LAND COURT.

To Grace R. Badger of Newton, George L. Huntress, Trustee, of Winchester, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth; Emily C. Roberts of Medfield, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Sarah S. C. Pratt and Mrs. John Pratt of Boston, in the county of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth; Francis C. Welch and J. Henry Russell, Trustees under the will of John Bryant, late of Cohasset, in said County of Norfolk, deceased; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Thomas W. Thacher of Brookline, in said County of Norfolk, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Cohasset, bounded Westerly by Atlantic Avenue, Northwesterly and Westerly by land of Grace R. Badger, then by an irregular line by the sea, Easterly, Southeasterly, Southerly and again Southeasterly all by land of Francis C. Welch and J. Henry Russell, Trustees under the will of John Bryant to the point of beginning.

Petitioner also claims the land, thatch, beach and flats lying between the line of average high water mark of the sea adjoining the premises above described and low water mark of the sea, all the land within the limits of the flats appurtenant to the premises above described, and all riparian rights to the above described premises in any wise appertaining or belonging.

Petitioner claims as appurtenant to the above described land a right of way over a private way called the Old Whitehead Road over land of Francis C. Welch and J. Henry Russell, Trustees under the will of John Bryant, and over a way leading therefrom all as established by a certain agreement made by Elizabeth P. Lee with said Trustees dated June 10, 1908 recorded with Norfolk Deeds Book 1086 Page 606, and filed as Document No. 761 in Land Court Records, Norfolk District, also such right of way over a private way running westerly from said Atlantic Avenue as is established by decision of the Land Court filed April 23, 1908, in case No. 1924. See plans 1924A3 and 1924A4.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the twenty-seventh day of March A. D. 1911, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this first day of March in the year nineteen hundred and eleven.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE QUEEN'S GAMBIT.

WHEN the news went out to the dwellers in the sagebrush hills that Boss David's son had accepted a place on the railroad's legal staff the first wave of astoundment was followed by many guesses as to what young Blount's action portended.

The Plainsman, the principal daily and the leading organ of the reformers, was the first to find an ulterior motive in Evan Blount's appointment and its acceptance. The editor took a half column in which to point out in emphatic and vigorous phrase the danger that threatened the commonwealth in this very evident coalition of the railroad and the machine.

The Lost River Miner, on the other hand, was unwilling to believe that the younger Blount was acting altogether in his father's interest in taking the place provided for him by the railway. Hints there were in this editor's comment of a disagreement between father and son, of differences of opinion which might later on lead to a pitched battle.

The Daily Capital, however—the railroad organ—covertly insinuated that nothing for nothing was the accepted rule in politics; that if the railroad had made a place for the son it was only a justifiable deduction that the father was not as inimical to the railroad interest as the opposition press was willing to have the public believe.

Elsewhere in the state press comment was divided as the molders of public opinion happened to read party loss or gain in the appointment of the new legal department head. But on the whole the senator's son was given the benefit of the doubt and a chance to prove up. Time would tell.

Of the interview between the father and son, in which Evan had announced his intention of accepting a place under McVickar, nothing was said in the newspapers, for the very good reason that no reporter was present.

If the young man had been prepared for a storm of opposition he was disappointed. The interview took place in the evening of the day Mr. McVickar's private car was attached to eastbound train No. 102, and the place was the sitting room of the senator's private suit. Blount had meant to give some of the ethical reasons for taking the step which would put such a summary end to the attorney generalship scheme. But when the time came and he had brusquely declared his purpose of accepting the railroad appointment he did not find it entirely easy to say the other things.

"So McVickar talked you over?" was the father's gentle comment. "It's all right, son. You're a man grown, and I reckon you know best what you want to do. If it puts us on opposite sides of the political creek we won't let that roll the water any more than it has to, will we?"

To such a mild mannered surrender or apparent surrender the purely filial emotions could do no less than to respond heartily.

"We mustn't let it," was the quick reply, but after that he added: "I feel that I ought to make some explanations, though. I've been going about with my eyes and ears open, and I must confess that the political field has been made to appear most unattractive to me. From what I can learn the political situation in this state seems to be very frankly controlled upon the principle of bargain and sale. I couldn't go into anything like that and keep my self respect."

"No, of course you couldn't, son, so you just took a place where you could earn good clean money in your profession. I don't blame you."

Blount was vaguely perturbed. He could not help feeling that his father was keeping something back.

"You think there will be more or less political work in my job with the railroad?" he asked, determined to get at the submerged facts, if there were any.

"Oh, I don't know. McVickar has hired you to do a lawyer's work, and I guess that is what he will expect you to do, isn't it?"

Mr. McVickar had not defined the duties of the new assistant counselship very clearly. But there was a strong inference running through all that was said to the effect that the headship of the legal department would carry with it some political responsibilities.

At the moment Blount had been rather glad that such was the case. The vice president had convinced him very thoroughly of the justice of the railroad company's contention—that the laws of the state, if rigidly administered, amounted to a practical confiscation of the company's property.

While Mr. McVickar was talking Blount had rather hoped that his new position would give him opportunities to place the railroad's point of view fairly before the people of the state, and to do this he knew that he would have to enter the campaign as a political worker. Surely his father must know this, and he went boldly upon the assumption that his father did know it.

"I am to be chief of the legal department on this division, and as such it will, of course, be necessary for me to defend my client in court and out of court," he said finally. "And I mean to do it."

"Of course you do; you've got to be honest with yourself—and with McVickar. I don't mind telling you, son, that I am squarely on the other side this time, and I had hoped you were going to be. But if you're not, why, that's the end of it. We won't quarrel about it."

Now, this was not at all the paternal attitude which the young man had prefigured. But before anything more could be said Mrs. Blount came in to remind them both that they had a dinner appointment with Professor Anners and his daughter and that there was barely time to dress for it.

It was late that night, several hours after the informal little dinner for five in the Inter-Mountain cafe, when the senator had himself lifted from the lobby to the fourth floor and made his way to the door of his own apartments. As was her custom, his wife was waiting up for him.

"Did you find out anything more?" she asked without looking up from the tiny embroidery frame which seemed to be her constant companion at home or elsewhere.

"Not very much. McVickar has fixed things to suit himself. Evan's law office position is to be pretty largely nominal, I guess, and Gantry's crowd is to see to it that he doesn't get to know too much, which means that the bribery is not to be done by the legal department in this campaign."

"But they can't keep him from finding out about it," she protested.

"They are going to try mighty hard anyway. Evan wants to believe that everything is on the high moral plane, and when a man wants to believe a thing it's pretty easy to fool him. It'll be a winning card to them if they can send the boy out to talk convincingly about the cleanliness of the company's campaign. That sort of talk, handed out as Evan can do it, if he is convinced of the truth of what he is saying, will capture the honest ranchman every time."

"We must get him back," she said. "Have you thought of any plan?"

"No."

She smiled. "I have a plan. He may have to take a regular course of treatment, and it may make him very ill. Would you mind that?"

David Blount leaned back in his chair and regarded her through half closed eyelids.

"I don't want to see the boy suffer any more than he has to," he objected.

"Neither do I," was the quick agreement; then, with no apparent relevance, "What do you think of Miss Anners?"

The senator sat up, and the slow smile wrinkled humorously at the corners of his eyes. "I haven't thought much about her. She's the kind you can't get near enough to think about, isn't she?"

"She is a young woman with a very bright mind and a very high purpose," was the little lady's summing up of Patricia. "But she isn't altogether a Boston iceberg. She thinks she is in love with her career; but, really, I think she is very much in love with Evan. If we could win her over to our side"—

This time the senator's smile broadened into a laugh.

"You are away yonder out of my depth now, little woman," he chuckled. "Does your course of treatment for the boy include large doses of the young woman administered frequently?"

"Oh, no," was the instant reply. "I was only wondering if it wouldn't be well to enlist her sympathies."

"Why not—if you think best?"

"Will you give me carte blanche to do as I please?" asked the small intriguer.

"Why not?" said the senator again. "You can always outfigure me two to one when it comes to real politics. You have made a fine art of it, Honoria."

"You deal with people in the mass, David, and no one can do it better. I deal with the individual. That is all the difference. When do the Annerses go up to the fossil fields?"

"I don't know—any time when you will invite them to make Wartrace Hall their headquarters, I guess."

"Then I think it will be tomorrow," said the confident mistress of policies. "It won't do to let Evan see too much of the young woman until after his course of treatment has been begun. Shall we make it tomorrow? And will you telephone Dawkins to bring down the big car? I think Miss Patricia Anners will stand a little impressing. She is very democratic—in theory."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Feeley Charged With Abstracting Funds From National Bank

Pittsfield, Mass., March 16.—A plea of not guilty was entered by Arthur E. Feeley, former clerk of the Third National bank of Pittsfield, when he was taken before Commissioner Wood to answer to a charge of abstracting funds from a national banking association. Feeley was held for the next session of the United States grand jury at Boston. His bail was continued at $2500, which was furnished.

Feeley is charged with misappropriating $2000 of the bank's funds. The bank officials say that restitution has been made by relatives and friends of Feeley.

DE LESSEPS GIVEN THE LIBERTY PRIZE

Finished Last In the $10,000 Contest at New York

New York, March 16.—The $10,000 prize offered duriang the aviation meet last October for the fastest flight from Belmont park to the Statue of Liberty and return has been awarded to Count Jacques de Lesseps, the French aviator, by the governors of the Aero Club of America. The late John B. Moisant, who was first adjudged the winner, and Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, who contested the award, are both disqualified.

Count de Lesseps finished last in the race. Moisant made the race in 34 minutes and 38.84 seconds, but was ordered disqualified by the international body, because he had failed to fulfill the conditions by making a previous sustained flight of an hour's duration. Grahame-White's time was 35 minutes and 21.30 seconds, and de Lesseps' time 39 minutes 28.50 seconds. Grahame-White was disqualified for fouling pylon No. 5.

TRUSTS TO THEIR HONOR

How a Judge Deals With Strikers In an Injunction Case

Boston, March 16.—"I much prefer to trust to the honor of you men," said Judge Pierce in the superior court, in placing the striking operatives of the shoe factory of F. Brigham & Gregory company of Hudson upon their honor not to interfere with the business during the strike.

The case came up on a petition of the company for a temporary injunction against the strikers, consisting of lasters and cutters. It was alleged that they had assaulted strikebreakers.

Judge Pierce stated that he would decide the question of granting the injunction on Tuesday next.

NURSE PLEADS GUILTY

Miss Leonard Admits Stealing Two Rings Valued at $4C00

Boston, March 16.—Amelie M. Leonard, the nurse charged with larcenies aggregating about $8590 from patients whom she had attended, pleaded guilty when arraigned before Judge Stevens for trial in the superior criminal court.

Miss Leonard's plea covered two items in the indictment alleging larcenies from Miss Mary J. Lockwood, whom the defendant attended at the Hotel Brunswnck. The two items were two rings valued at $3000 and $1000 respectively.

Miss Leonard was sentenced to the woman's reformatory at Sherborn for an indefinite period. This generally means two years, but many of the prisoners are released on parole after serving eight months.

INHERITANCE TAX QUESTION

Figures In the Will of Mrs. Eddy In Massachusetts

STATE MAY OPPOSE PROBATE

Attorney General Considering Whether Christian Science Leader's Last Testament Is a Foreign Will—Directors of Mother Church Bring Friendly Suit Against Trustees of Estate In Relation to Property In Bay State

Boston, March 16.—When the bill in equity brought by the directors of the Christian Science church against the trustees of some of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy's property in Boston and Newton was called for argument before the full bench of the supreme court yesterday afternoon the case was postponed until the end of the list.

Samuel J. Elder, who appeared for the trustees, announced that the attorney general now has under advisement a question pertaining to the probate of Mrs. Eddy's will in Massachusetts. Thereupon Chief Justice Knowlton postponed arguments until the end of the list.

The commonwealth of Massachusetts wants to know first whether Mrs. Eddy was a legal resident of Massachusetts at the time of her death or of New Hampshire. It wants this question settled before anything further is done toward settling her will, in order to determine how much of an inheritance tax the state can collect from the estate.

Whether or not Mrs. Eddy was a resident of Massachusetts at the time of her death makes a vast difference in the inheritance tax to be levied by the state. If she were a resident of the state, a tax will be imposed on every legatee under the will. If she was a resident of New Hampshire taxes only on such property as is within the state could be levied on legatees.

The fact that the state had interfered in the Eddy case became known when the suit of the directors of the Christian Science church to have the Boston and Newton homes of Mrs. Eddy transferred to them was called for argument before the full bench of the supreme court.

The suit was a friendly one. Attorneys Elder and Whitman appeared for the directors of the church. Lawyer Choate appeared for the trustees under the will.

There is one obstacle in the way of the proposed transfer of the Eddy homes to the directors of the church. It is section 9 of chapter 37 of the revised laws of Massachusetts, which is as follows:

"The income of the gifts, grants, bequests and devises made to or for the use of any one church shall not exceed $2000 a year, exclusive of the income of any parsonage land granted to or for the use of the ministry."

Mrs. Eddy made a trust of her former residence in Boston and her Newton home, and provided that at her death the trust should terminate and the property be disposed of according to her will. The directors of the Christian Science church, which Mrs. Eddy founded, claim both properties under the residuary clause of her will.

The trustees of the property are willing to turn it over to the directors of the Christian Science church, but declare that they have been informed by counsel that the court may hold that the church cannot take the property because of the Massachusetts law. The income from the estate is a great deal more than $2000 a year.

SLAIN BY ARABS

State Department Asked to Look Into Murder of Archaeologist

Boston, March 16.—Gardiner M. Lane, president of the Boston museum of fine arts, has requested, through Senator Lodge, that the state department investigate the circumstances of the murder on the north coast of Africa of Herbert De Cou, archaeologist on the Boston expedition.

Arthur Fairbanks, director of the Boston museum of fine arts, says he has a dispatch stating that Mr. De Cou was the victim of a totally unexpected attack by Arabs.

Reporter Would Not "Peach"

Atlanta, March 16.—Because T. J. Hamilton, a reporter for the Augusta Herald, refused to give the police board the name of a policeman who gave him a "tip" on a murder story, he must serve a sentence of five days in jail, or pay a fine of $50 imposed for contempt, according to a decision of the supreme court.

BANDITS ATTEMPT TO HOLD UP JEWELER

Latter Is Shot, But Manages to Protect His Property

Boston, March 16.—A duel in which three men repeatedly fired in their attempts to kill marked the raid of two desperadoes on the jewelry store of Levi Blumberg, 1378 Washington street, last night. In defending his property from the marauders, Blumberg was shot in the breast. But his brave defense of his property, in which he gave bullet for bullet with the robbers, saved him from heavy loss.

One of the robbers, giving the name of Henry Shaw and also the name of Henry Harrison, was captured after being chased for several blocks by Harry T. Cowell, who followed the fleeing man in an automobile, and attracted the attention of Patrolman Reed, who effected the capture.

The second robber separated from Shaw as the two ran from the store, making a clear getaway. The police think that the pair are New York crooks, who came to this city looking for loot.

WEDDED FORTY YEARS

Mrs. Lauterbach Gets a Divorce From Her Noted Husband

New York, March 16.—On a report of a referee, an interlocutory decree of divorce was granted to Amanda F. Lauterbach from Edward Lauterbach, one of New York's best known lawyers, prominent in Republican politics and for several years chairman of the Republican county committee.

They were married more than forty years ago, and he is 67 years old. The decree provides that he may not marry again during the life of the plaintiff.

The suit was brought on statutory grounds, and the testimony was sealed.

MISSION CIRCLE.

The Woman's Mission circle of the Universalist church met this week with Mrs. Harriet A. Lombard at her home on Cottage street. After the devotional and business session, selections from different papers were read by Mrs. Harriet A. Lombard, Mrs. Emily A. Blake and Mrs. Clara S. Brown in regard to the World in Boston, America's first great missionary exposition, (home and foreign.) Mrs. Lombard read a paper on Quincy comparing the city as it is now, with the earlier dates, touching on the Charitable society, the King's Daughters and mission work. It was one of the most interesting meetings of the year and closed with a social tea, Mrs. Emily A. Blake presiding at the table.

WHY IT IS BEST.

The Daily Ledger has three times as much news as any other Quincy daily and is therefore worth two cents. FIVE times the circulation of any other Quincy daily, and is therefore the best advertising medium. This is not an idle, or reckless, or irresponsible claim, but is made advisedly.

SPORTING NOTES.

The much mooted game between Quincy High and the Y. M. C. A. will be played next week, either Tuesday or Thursday, in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The athletic association of the school has given its consent, and the members of the two teams are all willing to play. A record crowd will be present to see the contest since the rivalry is so keen and the supporters of each team are sure their representatives will win.

LOVE OF MANKIND.

The true sage is not he who sees, but he who, seeing farthest, has the deepest love for mankind. He who sees without loving is only showing his eyes in the dark.—Maurice Maeterlinck.

WIND IS DIMINISHING

Maximum at 9 A. M. Was 52 Miles Per Hour

At the Blue Hills observatory this noon the observer reported the maximum velocity of the wind today as 52 miles an hour at 9 A. M. At 1.30 P. M. it was 48 miles an hour, showing that the wind is diminishing.

THE G. A. R. AND W. R. C.

Held County Convention at Hyde Park on Wednesday

Henry A. Monk of Post 87, Braintree, presided on Wednesday at the Norfolk County convention of the Grand Army at Hyde Park. William B. Gould of Dedham read the necrology roll. Reynold Post of Weymouth reported that the town had given it a schoolhouse for headquarters. The Medfield Post has received a gift of $2,500.

The W. R. C. also held a county convention on Wednesday at Hyde Park. The two organizations extended greetings to each other, and later held a joint social gathering which was public in the High school hall. Gen. Henry B. Carrington, Department Commander Fiske, Senior Vice Commander Hosley, Assistant Adjutant General Wetherbee, Chaplain Lovejoy and others spoke, and there were readings and music. The June meeting will be held in Norwood.

BAD EGG MEN HEAVILY FINED

One Pays $25, and the Other Two Appealed

Fines of $25, $50, and $100 were imposed by Judge Avery this morning in the cases of William W. Weld, William J. Mead and Charles F. Bent, the three "bad egg men" who were arrested by Special Officer George A. McKay, Feb. 21.

At the time of the arrest the men were going from house to house selling eggs at 30 cents a dozen, claiming them to be strictly fresh eggs. Several complaints reached the police from parties who made purchases of eggs from the parties, only to find that they were far from being fresh. When arrested the men had about ten dozen eggs left in the team, all of which also proved to be bad.

The men were brought into court and the cases continued from time to time until today when they came up for disposition. The complaints against Weld and Mead were for peddling without a license, and that against Bent for larceny. The court imposed a fine of $25 on Weld which he paid. Mead was assessed $50 and Bent $100. Mead and Bent appealed.

PLAY REPEATED.

The play, "A Man's Voice," given by members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Point churc,h assisted by P. H. Holman, was repeated in Pilgrim church, North Weymouth, Wednesday evening with even greater success than when it was given in the vestry of the Point church. The cast included, Mrs. Rollo H. Newcomb, Mrs. P. H. Holman, Miss Elizabeth Schouler, Miss Cora Barnes, Miss Helen Lincoln, Mrs. George Baily and P. H. Holman. Music was furnished by a zobo band and by instrumental and vocal soloists. At the conclusion of the play the cast was given an informal reception with refreshments. The audience was large and appreciative, and the cast enjoyed itself thoroughly.

PALMS FOR PALM SUNDAY

Henry P. Kittredge Writes from Saint Augustine

Editor Daily Ledger:

It would be interesting to many people of this country to know where the young palm leaf that is so extensively used in the many churches of this country and Canada on Palm Sunday comes from.

It is a paying business by itself, the same as the procuring of the Christmas tree at Christmas time. This industry is fostered and made possible by the gathering early in the season of the scrub or cabbage palmetto palm tree. They are cut, packed and shipped to all parts of the country. Many carloads go forward from this section daily to the steamship docks to the several firms in the large cities to be there distributed to their customers.

The Palmetto palms in this country are found in great quantities in the jungles, swamps and everglades of Florida. It was the writer's pleasure while hunting in this section to come across a camp where the cutting and preparing for the market was going on. Many people are employed. The young swaying palm that is cut, is known as a three-year old. It is four to six feet in height and cut close to the ground.

The folding bright green swaying leaves are brought close together, tied with string and a covering of burlap is sewed about it, making a neat shipping package. They are later tagged to the firm at destination at distant city.

The Palmetto tree grows to the height of fifty to seventy-five feet; it has no limbs at all, no branches out from the butt of the tree. In the place of branches are leaves or boots the same to the tree as bark. It grows one each month, or twelve each year. As a new one appears, the old drys and falls off. This process exposes the butt which retains its straight shape to the top, where the spreading leaves make a pretty finish to the tree.

It is very befitting that this section of our country should provide the palms for Palm Sunday. For history says that in this very section was the first cross planted. The first church established by the Christians. Among the early ones, three to four hundred years ago. Ponce de Leon landing from Spain in the year 1512. Later Pedro Menendez landed August 28, 1565. It was on Saint Augustine day which gave the town its name.

In one of the old church yards is the remains of an ancient palm tree said to be 300 years old. It is recorded in the archives of this church that this house was occupied by the monks of Saint Francis in 1565 to 1590. The chapel can still be seen, and while visiting it I learned much of its early history. In 1590 this house passed into the hands of the Spanish government. The street on which it is located is today called Saint Francis street, same as given by the monks in 1565.

Ancient history and the Palmetto palms are closely indentified, as all the early forts were built of this tree. The fiber is very tough and resistence very great.

The tree is used for many purposes other than decorations. The best use is for piling for bridges, wharves, fence posts, etc. The substance resists the effect in the salt as well as fresh water, much furniture, ornamental wood work, scrubbing brushes, etc. It is used as a food as the head or heart is very white and tender. When cut up it is eaten as a cabbage slaw. It is cooked and served same as the cabbage, the flavor the same. The berries as they are gathered and dried are shipped to be made as extract, tonics, and medicine of many kinds.

There are many kinds of palms found in all tropical counties and South America.

H. P. Kittredge.

—The question of the high cost of living is again before the Legislature. Somebody wants another investigation, not being satisfied with the last, which cost $15,000 and added just that much to the cost of living in this state without reducing it a penny. So great seems to be the passion in this state for commissions and investigations that we may yet hear advocacy of referring the high cost of living problem to a permanent grand commission costing in salaries and otherwise several million dollars a year.—Springfield Republican.

Little Items of Interest in Towns About Quincy

Personalities almost broke up the adjourned town meeting at Hingham on Tuesday evening in an attempt to reconsider adverse action on a new schoolhouse. Voted 169 to 146 not to reconsider.

United States attorney Asa P. French of Randolph is mentioned for the vacancy on the United States circuit court bench caused by the death of Judge Lowell.

Mrs. John Leary of South Weymouth died at her residence on Tuesday.

Mrs. Enoch S. Weston of Hyde Park passed away on Monday in her 58th year.

The town treasurer of Wellesley has just borrowed $20,000 on a temporary loan at the low rate of 3.04 per cent plus 75 cents premium.

The funeral of Mrs. William E. Humphrey, who died at Dansville, N. Y., on Sunday, was held at the Old North church, Weymouth Heights, Wednesday. She was the daughter of the late Asa Webb of Weymouth.

The Hyde Park Co-operative bank retired 26 shares in series 26 last week, and the 50th series issued this month is unlimited.

James Leonard Plimpton died at Walpole on Monday in his 83d year.

Brookline made an appropriation this week for a soldiers monument.

A. W. Donovan of Rockland was on Wednesday reelected president of the Boston Boot and Shoe club.

John Everett of Canton, prominent in Norfolk county politics, was on Wednesday disbarred by Chief Justice John A. Aiken as a practising attorney. He had been a member of the bar for 32 years.

Future meetings of the Old Colony Driving club will be held in Pythian hall, Braintree, instead of Clapp's hall, Weymouth.

Visitors from 30 lodges witnessed the M. M. degree at Union lodge A. F. & A. M., at Dorchester on Tuesday evening.

Camp Bumbus, Army of the Philippines, mustered in 14 men on Tuesday evening.

Wellesley college has been appealed to, it was announced yesterday, to send a substitute worker to the mission field in India for a term of service of three years, beginning within a few weeks, if possible. It is expected here that some member of the student volunteer organization will be selected for the appointment. Besides providing for traveling expenses to and from India, the position will cary a salary of $500 in addition to furnishing a home for the missionary. Within a few weeks two Wellesley college girls have gone to China as missionaries.

Remains of Woman Who Died In Germany Are Buried In Tacoma

Tacoma, Wash., March 16.—Coming by mail from Germany, the ashes of Mrs. George Martin, wife of the proprietor of the Standard Steam Laundry, were buried here in a crypt in the new Tacoma mausoleum.

Mrs. McMartin died in Berlin last month. Her body was cremated and the ashes sent by registered mail to Tacoma.

STARVATION STALKS THROUGH LABRADOR

People In Need of Food and Clothing For Many Months

North Sydney, C. B., March 16.—That the rigorous winter just closing has caused extreme suffering and probably many deaths among the hardy inhabitants of the barren Labrador peninsula, who have been cut off for months from the possibility of securing food and clothing by great icefields, is the fear felt here and in Newfoundland.

The last reports from the bleak country on the north, which were received late last fall, said that the food supplies were almost exhausted and that hundreds of the natives, mainly fisher-folk and their families, were on the verge of starvation.

Months have passed since that time and the stricken Labrador people have secured no help, nor has word come to the outside world as to how they are faring in their extremity.

BIG BOWLING CONTEST

Forty Members of the K. & L. of H. Participate

One of the most enjoyable evenings for many moons was that of Wednesday night in Protection hall, the regular meeting of Maple lodge, K. and L. of H. After the business of the meeting all sat down to a clam chowder supper, with coffee, doughnuts, crackers and cheese. A bowling contest followed in which every one present to the number of 40 participated. The highest score for six balls was 18, the lowest 3. At the conclusion all formed in line, commencing with the holder of the lowest score, and marched around the hall, passing one of the committee, who handed each a package containing a useful souvenir, which on being opened caused a great deal of merriment and were more than pleasing to all.

It was a complete surprise to the ladies of the lodge, as the men had kept all the arrangements secret. The committee in charge, E. B. Langley, Charles Crane and A. H. Taber, as well as the other brothers who assisted, are deserving of great credit, and the thanks of every member for the pleasant evening and the splendid manner in which everything was conducted. It is hoped by all that the brothers will again serve at some future meeting.

GRANITE CITY WHIST.

Wellington W. Mitchell and Horace E. Spear secured the high scores at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club Wednesday evening. Mr. Mitchell's score was 35 won and 15 lost, which gave him 70 percent, while Mr. Spear's score was 34 won and 16 lost, which gave him 68 per cent. Refreshments were served after the play and then came bid whist in which seven tables participated. The Wednesday night whist tournaments which have continued through the winter will close the first of April.

Tales of Cities.

There are 500 hotels and apartment houses in Los Angeles.

London has nearly 9,000 public houses. Four hundred and thirty-seven public houses have been extinguished under the 1904 act.

New York is using five times as much milk as it did twenty-four years ago, when the dairy law took effect. The consumption now is 2,300,000 quarts a day.

Berlin's comparative freedom from smoke is due partly to the use of fuel briquettes. Thirty per cent of the coal fuel consumed in the city and suburbs is brown coal briquettes.

Graveyard Marriages.

A strange custom prevails among a certain tribe in the Caucasus. When a single young man dies some one calls upon a bereaved parent who has carried to the grave a marriageable daughter in the course of a year and says: "Your son is sure to want a wife. I'll give you my daughter, and you shall deliver to me the marriage portion in return." A friendly offer of this description is never rejected, and the two parties soon come to terms as to the amount of the dowry, which varies according to the advantages possessed by the girl in her lifetime. Cases have been known where the young man's father has given as much as thirty cows to secure a dead wife for his dead son.

Lightning Rods.

There were no lightning rods in ancient times. The first one that the world ever saw was set up by our own illustrious countryman Benjamin Franklin shortly after the year 1752. He had just had his celebrated experiment with the kite, in which he demonstrated the identity of lightning with electricity, and was therefore prepared for the construction of the rods for which the world had waited so long. It is not generally known that Franklin was as distinguished in science as he was in statesmanship and diplomacy.—Exchange.

CONTRACTOR CRITICISED

Protest Against Low Bidder for Montclair Schoolhouse

At the monthly social of the Walther Men's class on Thursday evening in the Wollaston Baptist church petitions to the Mayor were circulated protesting against the award of the new schoolhouse at Montclair to the contractor who built the Houghs Neck school.

Councilman Bailey was present with photographs showing the faulty construction of the building at Houghs Neck. He stated his opinion of the job in an emphatic manner, that left no doubt in the minds of those present what he thought of it.

John L. Miller, chairman of the School Committee, was present and also spoke. He told of other work done in Quincy by the same man. The Coddington school was built very well, but there were some instances where the specifications were not followed. In the addition to the Lincoln school, the cases that varied were more numerous than those which agreed with the specifications. Mr. Miller spoke of the concrete used in the Houghs Neck building, and of the kind of bricklaying that was done there.

At this meeting the annual election of officers took place, and Eben Hardy was elected as president. Secretary Wilson read a report of the year's work, during which 43 meetings have been held on Sunday noon.

PLEASING JOINT RECITAL

Given by Edith Cary Page and Florence Gertrude Olney

The joint recital given in Colonial hall Thursday evening by Edith Cary Page and Florence Gertrude Olney proved to be quite a society event, for the hall was well filled with an audience versed in things musical and no one went away from the recital feeling other than greatly pleased with the splendid work of the artists. Mrs. Page rendered the songs of Shubert and Shumann in a manner calculated to bring forth all the sweetness given them by the authors. In the English songs as well as in the Italian Aria by Verdi, the same sympathetic interpretation was evident, and all were delighted with the ease with which the singer mastered the difficult modulations and trills. Miss Olney played with such skill, and showed a perfection in technique and expression, that left little to be desired by the hall full of music lovers who were present.

The patronesses were: Mrs. Thomas A. Addison, Mrs. Alice Bainbridge, Mrs. John L. Barbour, Mrs. Harry Bates, Mrs. Ernest Bent, Mrs. Rupert Blackmur, Mrs. William Bradford, Mrs. Florence Cutter, Mrs. E. E. Davis Mrs. William Doble, Mrs. E. V. Fitts, Mrs. Charles E. Goodspeed, Mrs. Frank Graves, Mrs. Herbert Gurney, Mrs. Charles D. Hall, Mrs. Albert L. Hayden, Mrs. Carl G. Horst, Mrs. Theophilus King, Mrs. Thomas B. Pollard, Mrs. Wallace Pratt, Mrs. Walter Rice, Mrs. George Ryder, Mrs. Chas. R. Safford, Mrs. Fred Smith, Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell, Miss Susie P. Tuckerman and Mrs. Clifton Hoodsum.

The ushers were: Miss Florence Bent, Miss Mary Brown, Miss Norma Lowe, Miss Isabelle Murphy and Miss Eva Weymouth.,

A GREAT DEAL OF ARGUMENT NECESSARY

Says Mayor Shea, to Make Him Stay in Mayoralty Chair Four Years More

Among the Speakers at Grand Banquet of Division 5

The annual banquet of Division 5, A. O. H., was held Thursday evening at Hibernian hall, on Franklin street, and was the occasion for a large gathering of the members, friends and ladies, there were a number of guests who included Mayor Shea, City Solicitor McAnarney, Dr. John H. Ash, James F. Burke, State President John H. Dillon, and County President Dennis J. Slattery.

H. J. Seiler of Boston furnished the banquet, during which there was music by Wilson's orchestra. The menu included hot turkey, cold ham, salads, escalloped oysters, banana fritters, coffee, rolls, ice cream and cake.

There was one table across the head of the hall where the guests were seated, and five long tables running lengthwise of the hall. All of the seats at these tables were occupied, so that the attendance was upwards of 200.

The banquet over President Thomas J. Welch introduced State Secretary P. J. Ferguson, a member of Division 5, who in turn introduced City Colicitor McAnarney as toastmaster.

Mr. McAnarney said that it was an unexpected honor that had been conferred upon him, and he was very glad to be so selected, as he would not have to make a speech. He always had a feeling of sympathy forthe men called upon to address an audience made up largely of men and women of Irish blood. He knew that all were familiar with Ireland's sorrows, and were thrilled by the heroic and tragic life of its martyrs. He was not here however to debate on Ireland and the Irish race. He then introduced Thomas M. Murray, who sang "Ireland, I love you," and for an encore "Minstrel Boy."

Before introducing the first speaker, Mr. McAnarney read a letter from Henry L. Kincaide & Co., which had accompanied a box of silk shamrocks, one of which had been presented each person as they entered the hall.

In introducing Mayor Shea, as the first speaker, the toastmaster alluded to the administration of Mayor Shea which had been one of credit to himself and to the Irish race.

MAYOR SHEA.

Mayor Shea received a royal welcome when he arose. He said he was

"If It's a Ralston It's Correct"

It is knowledge rather than "knack" which enables a man to dress both correctly and becomingly.

No part of a man's apparel changes in style more often or more radically than does his shoes. That is the reason why men who care to be correctly shod and who are particular about their personal appearance insist on getting "Ralston Authority Styles." We carry a sufficient variety of correct styles to enable you to express your own individuality in your selection.

The new shoe fashions are almost always first shown in Ralston Shoes. Come in and see the season's latest.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Every time a war appears on the carpet somebody inappropriately calls The Hague conference into action.

The Czar of Russia has bought a new paper. Now he will get acquainted with real trouble.

A jury of women in Washington fined a man for swearing. If he had only thought to let loose a mouse in the jury room.

That talk about permissible explosives may be all right in its place. What we want is an explosive that will refuse to blow up at the wrong time.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you; weep and your nose is red;" says the Milwaukee Journal. Since when did it become necessary in Milwaukee to weep in order to get a red nose? Milwaukee has a surer way than that.

PRACTICAL THEATRE REFORM.

The "New theatre" project in New York has been watched with keen interest all over the country, as an effort to substitute dramatic virility for what is tawdry and vicious, so that keen interest attaches to the report from this institution made public Friday. Many coarse hearted theatre managers like horse play and dirt themselves. Therefore they judge that the public must like it too. They must feel the foundations of their business shaken, on learning that the New Theatre has been better patronized than any other play house in New York devoted wholly to dramatic productions.

This outcome should be an encouragement to every theatre manager who personally prefers sun-light and red blood to sewage and dishwater. Of course there will always be some demand for mere buffoonery. Certain people find their highest ideal of humor realized, when the players buffet each other and tumble over each other with the greatest freedom.

But the great mass of people can distinguish the keen penetration of real wit from the gabmols of the logging camp or the cattle range. They can tell when an actor acts like the men and women one meets in real life, or like a school boy who strives to overcome his bashfulness by the loudness of his shoutings.

In the smaller cities and about the country circuits, there is profound weariness of the barnstormer type of actors. People decide that nothing good can come their way, and omit theatre going, save an occasional visits to great cities. To win the interest of substantial real folks, costly scenery is not needed. Nor are high priced stars necessary. What is wanted is capable companies of bright people who have social experience and brains and power of mimcry enough to make their scenes look like real life.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

"If a young man aims to be a do-nothing, or hopes by some hook or chance to land after graduation in an easy berth at a large salary, Boston or any other city offers him no opportunity; but if the young man estimates rightly the dignity of labor, anticipates the real joy and satisfaction that come with hard work, and slow but steady progress to the goal of success, relative though that term may be, Boston of the present has as great promise as any city in the United States."—President George S. Smith, Boston Chamber of Commerce.

GAS RECEIPTS HOLD UP

Although Price Was Reduced on February 1

Although the price of gas was reduced in Quincy on February 1, the net receipts of the month of February just closed were only $12 less than in February 1910. The company has declared a quarterly dividend of one per cent payable March 31 to stock of record March 29. This makes three per cent in dividends for the last six months.

For February 1909 the company reported a deficit of $573. In February 1910 the net receipts were $1,129 and in February 1911, $1,117.

While the Quincy net receipts were $12 less, the net receipts of the Boston Gas Company were $5,539 less.

SLIGHT FIRES.

The alarm from Box at 3.23 Thursday afternoon was for a slight fire on the roof of one of Charles H. Spear's houses on Franklin place caused by sparks from a passing locomotive alighting on the shingles. The loss was slight.

The alarm from Box 72 at 5.27 Thursday evening was for a slight fine in a house on Cleverly court owned by Miss Ella M. Freeman, and occupied by Thomas Grant. The fire was caused by an overheated furnace setting fire to the woodwork. The loss was slight.

Thursday evening about 8 o'clock Andrew Issacson discovered that the chimney on the house of Andrew Johnson at the corner of Gothland and Deldorf streets was on fire and telephoned the Central fire station. The combination ladder truck responded and extinguished the fire with chemical streams.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

L. H. Clee, the boys' work director, will take about 35 juniors to Harvard university Saturday afternoon for sightseeing. G. H. Balch, the crack oarsman, will show them about the college and will take them to the Weld boat club. The boys will leave on the 1.14 train and will be back by 6.30.

The extension club basketball games will be played this evening.

A camp reunion banquet will be held in the association hall this evening at 6.30.

There will be a meeting of the Wireless club in the association building this evening.

The Junior bible study classes meet this afternoon. A rehearsal of the play "College Chums" will be held under the direction of Mr. Osgood, in the latter part of the afternoon.

The Wollaston club met in the Baptist church Thursday evening with a good attendance. Bible study and Scout work occupied all the time.

Mr. Clee will be official scorer at the State Y. M. C. A. meet in Newton Saturday evening. Mr. LaRose will act as one of the judges.

STATE BOARD OF TRADE.

Col. Frederick V. Abbot, U. S. A. addressed the council of the State Board of Trade on Thursday on the proposed intracoastal waterways between Boston harbor and Narragansett bay. Col. Abbot said he wished the business men of the state to give him statistics tending to show how such a waterway would benefit them. Others who spoke in favor of intracoastal waterways were Capt. Samuel E. Perry of Atlantic City and Water Front Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane of Quincy.

After a debate showing opposition, the council refused to go on record on the "Real Boston" bill which was laid on the table.

A Confidential Chat
To Intending Piano Purchasers

There are so many makes of Pianos, you are quite confused when you become personally interested.

Some you have heard of, others are of obscure pedigree.

Let us help you make a selection. You want an artistic piano as well as a musical one. From an economical standpoint, do not buy an unknown make because it has a pretty case, but select one that has the best material, that is put together with scientific knowledge and artistic skill.

Our instruments have passed through the experimental stage and cannot be surpassed in tone qualities or perfection in construction. You'll be contented with one—what more can be desired?

Come in and talk it over. Personal inspection will convice you.

A. O. H. BANQUET

glad to be present and congratulated the division on the large gathering. It was no joke when he said he did not expect to be called upon. He would extend to the audience the freedom of the city. He had been talking a great deal during the day, for there was quite an epidemic of protests. Protests on the grade crossings. Protests on the Montclair schoolhouse. Protests on the trolley freight, and about other things. This question of being Mayor is getting to be a serious one, and it will take a great deal of argument to make him stay four years more. In closing he wished the division all success and that future banquets would be as successful as this.

In introducing State President Dillon, the toastmaster said he was one who had worked for the cause of the Hibernians for years.

PRESIDENT DILLON.

President Dillon said that when men travel through the country trying to conciliate the Irish people, they tell them three things. First, that they are born soldiers; second, they are born poets; and third, that they are born orators. He did not lay claim to any of these distinctions, however. It was not his intention to talk on this subject for he fully realized that all were as conversant with the history of St. Patrick as he was. On this very evening 1776 in Boston, one of our race planted a gun on Dorchester Heights. General Sullivan was the man, and he compelled the evacuation of the British from Boston never to return, except in a peaceful manner. The Ancient Order of Hibernians has risen from the ashes of obscurity, until today it is one of the great educators in the United States. Everyone who studies the history of the United States will find none more trustworthy and sincere than the poor unfortunate exiles from the land of the Gale.

In our office is a large medal awarded at Paris for the most charitable organization in the entire Christian world. I want you men and women to realize that above all we as exiles from the Gale have made Columbia our adopted home and that we have proved we love its Stars and Stripes. He spoke of the adverse criticism of the Irish race, that had once been made by James Russell Lowell, and said that from the first green at Concord and Lexington until the Cubans had been freed, the Irish exile had proved his loyalty to the Stars and Stripes. in closing he wished the division all prosperity. May you continue as in the past, so that we may reflect credit to our race as good ,true and faithful American citizens.

The toastmaster in introducing Edward J. Donovan, the soloist, said: In the home of America it makes no difference whether he is American or has Irish blood. All men are free and equal and no one surpasses the other. Mr. Donovan's song was: "Find me a sweetheart from the Emerald isle."

Mr. Murray by request sang "Where the river Shannon flows," and "The boys of Wexford."

COUNTY PRESIDENT.

County President Slattery, when introduced, said no one who knows me expects me to make a speech. Simply a few rambling remarks. He was glad to be here and assist in honoring the memory of the patron saint of Ireland. Our thoughts turn to St. Patrick, what he was and what he accomplished for the Irish race. He taught the words of Christianity tothe Irish. Proved it a beautiful life to love, and a beautiful thing to die by. So the Ancient Order of Hibernians was an important factor in preserving the church of our race. We all know the heroic struggle and devotion of the order in the early days when the mission was to protect the priests under the name of "Defenders of the Faith" and from these defenders have come the A. O. H. He briefly outlined the history of the A. O. H., and how today they are helping the priests to carry the faith to the uttermost parts of the earth. He then touched upon the needs of the order in Norfolk County, and hoped that Division 5 would do its share in recruiting new members. We expect great things from you in this large field in which you have to work.

"THE NEXT MAYOR."

In introducing the next speaker, James F. Burke, Mr. McAnarney alluded to the Mayor's statement of four more years as Mayor which would bring it to 1915, and by that time he expected to see a Burke as Mayor. Mr. Burke, said the toastmaster, is one whom he regarded as a good Catholic. A loyal Hibernian and the highest type of our American citizen.

Mr. Burke in responding thanked the toastmaster for his kind words. He said that Division 4 of West Quincy were to hold a grand lecture Friday evening and he extended an invitation to all to attend. It may be an old story, but old stories and old songs are the sweetest. He congratulated Division 5 on the grand way in which it was emulating the great saint of Ireland. Ireland has stamped its impression on this grand republic and we wish to take our place on an equal footing. When the citizens of Quincy seleteed Mayor Shea for a fourth term it showed that they were thoroughly satisfied with all his public acts and fairness. He congratulated Division 5 on this grand monument to the order. You have got something here to hold out to him who should join our order. There are 500 young men in Quincy who ought to be enrolled. In closing he urged Division 5 to try and increase its membership.

DR. ASH.

Dr. John H. Ash was the last speaker. He congratulated Division 5 on the success ofthis banquet, and on the good work it was doing. It should be our duty whether in private or otherwise to emulate our predecessors by being correct.

Mr. McAnarney in closing the exercises, said: In conclusion, I want to say, be always proud of the fact that you are Hibernians, and have Irish blood in you, and equally proud you are American citizens.

CONSTIPATION

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are unlike all other laxative or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken, but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition, and corrects constipation. In my opinion, constipation is responsible for most ailments. There are 26 feet of human bowels, which is really a sewer pipe. When this pipe becomes clogged the whole system becomes poisoned, causing biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produce rheumatism and kidney ailments. No woman who suffers with constipation or any liver ailment can expect to have a clear complexion or enjoy good health. If I had my way I would prohibit the sale of nine-tenths of the cathartics that are now being sold, for the reason that they soon destroy the lining of the stomach, setting up serious forms of indigestion, and so paralyze the bowels that they refuse to act unless forced by strong purgatives.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverish it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope; they are soothing, healing and stimulating. They school the bowels to act without physic.

Mayor Receives Resignation and Makes Appointment

The office of Sealer of Weights and Measures, which has been bothering the merchants of Quincy for some time, has been cleared by the resignation of Maurice I. Gatcomb, and the provisionary appointment of ex-Councilman James M. Cantfill to the position.

Mr. Gatcomb resigned his office Tuesday the correspondence in the matter being as follows:

Quincy, March 14, 1911.

Hon. Wm. T. Shea, Mayor City of Quincy.

Dear Sir:—Owing to other business interests, which require my entire time, and recognizing the fact that I shall not be able to spare the time necessary to fill the position of Sealer of Weights and Measures, I would respectfully request that you accept my resignation from that office.

Respectfully yours,
Maurice I. Gatcomb.

Quincy, March 14, 1911.

Mr. Maurice I. Gatcomb, Seal of Weights and Measures, City of Quincy.

Dear Sir:—I am in receipt of your letter of this date, in which you state that owing to increased demand on your time by your private business you find it necessary to resign the office of Sealer of Weights and Measures.

It is with reluctance that I hereby accept the same, and wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the services you have given the city, and extend my wishes for your future success.

Your very truly,
William T. Shea, Mayor.

Thursday Mayor Shea made a requisition on the Civil Service Commission for names of eligibles, but as there was no eligible test, he was authorized to make a provisional appointment. This he did this morning, naming ex-Councilman James M. Cantfill.

In the appointment of Mr. Cantfill Mayor Shea has made a good selection. Mr. Cantfill has served Ward Three two years in the City Council, and is a man well spoken of by all who know him. That he will faithfully perform the duties of the office there is no question.

MAMMOTH BOARDING HOUSE.

There is a rumor afloat that the Fore River Ship and Engine Co., will erect a big lodging house on the old Hayden place, which is situated near the head o fthe creek on the bank opposite the shipyard. Work will commence the first of April. The building will be five stories high and will be able to accommodate 500 men. The ship company bought the property the first of the year.

Here are a few Vital Points to Remember about the

"E. M. F. 30"

REMEMBER: THE NAME—E-M-F "30."

REMEMBER: THE PRICE—$1,000 f. o. b. Detroit, fully equipped with magneto, five lamps, acetylene generator and tube horn.

REMEMBER: THE GUARANTEE—For one year against breakage "from any cause whatsoever."

REMEMBER: THE RECORD—Over 20,000 E-M-F "30" cars today in hands of owners and every owner boosting—ask them.

REMEMBER: THE SAVING—E-M-F "30" at $1,000 saves you $500 as compared with the same size and power and quality others ask $1,500 for; and $250 from price of "assembled cars" that list at $1,250 and cannot sell for less because of having to pay the extra parts maker's profits.

REMEMBER: That the $250 difference pay $20 per month toward your rent; or it is savings bank interest on $6,250, while $500 that you save on a car of equal quality is interest on $12,500 dollars for a year.

REMEMBER: That the difference between price of E-M-F "30" and would be competing cars at $1,250 will pay, twice over, your year's maintenance account—gasoline, oil, tires, repairs and an annual overhauling—twice over, no matter how hard you drive your E-M-F "30."

REMEMBER: That no other thirty or thirty-five horsepower car is made of such excellent materials, and is therefore as light,therefore as economical in operation and maintenance.

REMEMBER: That the E-M-F Company has over $7,000,000 invested in plants and that, not only is every part after the Pig Iron and the Raw Steel bars made in our own factories, but that every pound of steel or brass or other metal that enters into these cars is first made from our own formula; then analyzed to prove its quality and finally tested to prove its efficiency.

REMEMBER: That cars for which you must pay more are "assembled" product—that while their makers may prate loudly about quality, they don't know what material actually goes into their cars, but must take the word of others who are making the parts for profit and who have no interest in the ultimate user of the car.

AND FINALLY REMEMBER the record of the E-M-F Company—never repudiated a guarantee or a promise, written, verbal or otherwise. Remember that when we guarantee our cars for a full year we know whereof we speak, for we have made every part and we know absolutely the strength and quality of every piece of steel in it. Remember, that we are the largest automobile manufacturers in the world—that we now have thousands of delighted owners recommending our product and that, in view of our tremendous output, we need a lot more of such friends. Remember that we have always said, "a satisfied owner is the best salesman"—and that we have always kept in mind and seen that every owner was satisfied.

At the Sons of Veterans meeting this evening in G. A. R. hall, three new members will be initiated.

Robert M. Gunning of Roslindale, a member of Quincy lodge of Elks died on Thursday.

The advertisements will interest you today and call for a careful reading.

The Washington social club held its regular weekly whist in the clubrooms Thursday evening.

Thomas McKenney, the popular clerk at H. H. I. Smith's is still confined to his home with erisypelas.

P. H. Holman and Alexander Shirley attended the surprise party at the East Weymouth lodge, I. O. O. F., Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. James P. A. Purcell, who spent the winter at Jamaica Plain, are among the earliest arrivals at Houghs Neck.

Barnard's shoe shop has been moved from Chubbuck street to the corner of Chubbuck and Washington streets under Hotel Des Moines.

The trustees of the Savings bank met Thursday evening and passed resolutions on the death of George W. Morton, and voted to attend the funeral services.

The Thomas Crane Public Library and reading room at West Quincy will close Saturday afternoon in respect to the late George W. Morton of the board of trustees.

The annual parish meeting of the Washington Street Congregational church will be held next Wednesday evening. The Ladies Aid society will furnish a supper in connection with the meeting.

Quite a change for the better is the weather today from what it was Thursday. While the air is cool and frosty the wind has died down considerable, so that the day is almost an ideal one.

The Finance Committtee of the City Council held a late session Thursday night and so much progress was made on the budget that the annual appropriation order will probably be reported at Monday nights meeting of the City Council.

The wage scale committee of Painters local 773 reconsidered the demand of $20 for 44 hours work; and decided that 41 cents per hour, or $3.28 for an eight-hour day was about right, with a Saturday half holiday the year round to take effect April 1.

The annual supper of the Houghs Neck Catholic Lyceum will occur this evening. Frank J. Hagan is in charge of the program. First comes a supper, then vocal and instrumental music, and an address by Charles L. Shea, on "Confessions of St. Patrick."

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Boutilier opened the Cohasset cotage on Rock Island road today and will give a "green supper" this evening.

Mrs. William A. Hayden celebrated her birthday anniversary on Thursday by entertaining members of the Jolly Twelve whist club at her home, 40 River street. The interior of the house was prettily decorated in honor of the occasion. Whist was in order from 2 to 4, prizes being awarded to Mrs. Joseph Dorley, Mrs. Morrison, and Mrs. Annie Grignon. Mrs. Hayden was the recipient of many handsome gifts. A dainty collation was served the guests.

ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT.

A number of contemporaries are beginning to talk about a "sane and safe" Fourth of July celebration this year. As the holiday is only a little more than four months away, the talk is neither premature nor forced. The point is worth bearing in mind, happily for many interests, that under the conditions which generally prevailed in Massachusetts last year, there was a most gratifying falling off as well in the volume of fatalities as of casualties growing out of the resort to fireworks as a feature of popular celebration. The children were in a host of instances protected against themselves, thanks to the adoption of conservatively-framed ordinances, but there is yet room for improvement.—Salem News.

A MODEL FOR REPORTERS.

For style in writing we would recommend that the reporter read Dickens' works and copy in handwriting interesting portions of, say, "Oliver Twist," "A Tale of Two Cities" and "David Copperfield." By so doing Dickens' method of relating incidents—and he was one of the greatest of all reporters—can be the better fixed in the mind. The telling of the human side of life in simple grammatical language and the keen observation of every point to a story—these are the secrets of reportorial success.—(American Press.)

WHY IT IS BEST.

The Daily Ledger has three times as much news as any other Quincy daily and is therefore worth two cents. FIVE times the circulation of any other Quincy daily, and is therefore the best advertising medium. This is not an idle, or reckless, or irresponsible claim, but is made advisedly.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

SITUATION IS NEAR ANARCHY

Unrest From End to End of the Republic of Mexico

GOVERNMENT UNDER A TEST

If It Fails to Exert Authority to Restore Order the United States Must Step In—Prolonged Contest In Northern Part of Country Can Hardly Be Avoided—Diaz Plans Dividing Big Estates Among Common People as Measure of Reform—Boundary Dispute Arises

Washington, March 17.—Advices from many sources report a condition bordering on anarchy in some of the Mexican states and that the situation in the north is growing worse.

The destruction of some forty miles of railroad by a band under Creighton, the American, is pointed out as showing how easy it is for a very few outlaws to stop traffic in any part of the republic where they may choose to operate.

One of the tests to which the Mexican government will be put by the United States is its ability to afford protection to the repair gangs who must be sent out to mend tracks and bridges and restore rail communications.

It is the purpose of the United States government to allow the Diaz government full opportunity to exert its authority throughout Mexico to restore order, but it is an open secret in Washington that if conditions continue as they are now decisive measures may be thought necessary to prevent immense loss to property and life.

The widespread nature of the unrest which fills Mexico may be gauged from the various points wherein bands of rebels are operating. The movement is strongest in the north. Chihuahua may be said to be controlled by the insurgents, while Coahuila to the east, and Sonora to the west, are scenes of great rebel activities.

Still farther west is lower California, where the independent Socialist-republic "army" is operating. Dispatches also mention action by insurrectos at Zacatecas, halfway down to Mexico City, Guerrero on the Pacific cocast, lying to the south of the capital, and Yucatan, at the opposite end of the republic from Chihuahua.

It will be seen, therefore, that the trouble spreads from one end of Mexico to the other and this state of affairs doubtless accounts for the unwillingness of the Mexican government to send the bulk of its troops to the extreme north.

There seems to be little prospect that the Mexican forces now in the northern states will suffice to subdue the revolt, so that a prolonged contest can hardly be avoided. This means that our troops will make a long stay on the border.

The reports of the serious situation in which the city of Chihuahua finds itself are borne out in a report to the American board of commissioners for foreign mission, which says that communications have been cut off since March 1, and that since that date no train has entered or left the city. It is further said that rioting is feared.

Some intimations are given that President Diaz is making tentative advances to his rebellious people. This is to be inferred from the report from the City of Mexico that the president is planning to divide some of the huge estates held by wealthy men among the common people.

Senor Limantour's admission that Mexico has asked an explanation of our mobilization is regarded as showing that Mexico was considerably roused, more so than was at first believed.

A boundary dispute over the territory where the Americans, Blatt and Converse, now in a Mexican prison, were taken, may delay their release indefinitely. Mexico claims that the tract is in Mexico, while the United States claims it is part of Texas.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Special Grand Jury to Consider the Case of Arthur Bean

Maidstone, Vt., March 17.—At the conclusion of a special inquiry late yesterday into the deaths of Mrs. George Bean and her daughter, Nina, who were found dead from bullet wounds in their home here on March 9, Arthur Bean, the 18-year-old son and brother, who was taken into custody on the day of the crime, was held without bonds for a special grand jury, to be convened here on the fourth Tuesday in April.

The proceedings were before Trial Justice Adams. The chief witness was young Bean himself, who appeared entirely composed and asserted his innocence.

QUINCY STATESMAN

cis Adams minister to Great Britain. It was to prove a momentous choice.

The present generation, looking back over 50 years at the careers of Lincoln and his great war minister, sees something of "the divinity that shapes our ends" in the selection of Adams for this important post. No man of his time could have discharged with greater firmness the duties of this post, carrying with it the greatest responsibilities of any in the diplomatic service throughout the war. war.

Yet the actual circumstances attending Mr. Adams' appointment and acceptance of the post seem remarkably commonplace when examined closely. They show, perhaps, as well as any incidents in Lincoln's career the simplicity of the President, and the curious, almost fateful fortune that brought him the men he needed to help him in the nation's greatest hour of peril.

SEWARD'S CHOICE.

Mr. Lincoln when allotting the important posts in his gift had not thought of Mr. Adams for the British mission. His method in making up his cabinet had been to weigh geographical as well as political considerations, and he had thought of Mr. Adams as a possibility for secretary of the navy. Ex-Gov. N. P. Banks of Massachusetts and Gideon Welles of Connecticut were also considered. The choice was left to Hannibal Hamlin, vice president, and he named Mr. Welles.

Meanwhile Mr. Lincoln had thought of William L. Dayton of New Jersey for the British mission and had submitted his name to the consideration of William H. Seward, secretary of state.

Mr. Seward made a counter proposal, naming Mr. Adams. Personally he believed Mr. Adams was the man for the place, while polically his loyalty to the administration was to be depended on. Mr. Lincoln did not assent at once to Mr. Seward's proposal, but he was prepared to yield the point, saying, 'Really, Seward has asked for so little."

This remark has been quoted to show how lightly Lincoln held Mr. Adams as a factor in the situation; but in Lincoln's papers of the period is a note to Seward, showing that with his wide knowledge of men and affairs he was entirely familiar with Mr. Adams' career and qualities.

"Mr. Adams I take," Lincoln wrote to Seward 50 years ago today, "because you suggested him, coupled with his eminent fitness for the place."

ADAMS AND LINCOLN.

As to Mr. Adams, he was doomed never to understand his chief. To him Lincoln was never to be other than a rough and careless western lawyer.

This view was due to the circumstances of their only meeting, which was when Mr. Adams called at the White House to express formally his thanks for the honor of his appointment and to receive his parting instructions from the President.

Mr. Adams' experience on this occasion is thus described by his son, Charles Francis Adams in the standard life of the war minister:

"He had been summoned to Washington by the secretary of state to receive his verbal instructions. The country was in the midst of the most dangerous crisis in its history; a crisis in which action of foreign governments, especially of England, might well be decisive of results.

"The policy to be pursued was under consideration. It was a grave topic, worthy of thoughtful consideration.

"Deeply impressed with the responsibility devolved upon him, Mr. Adams went with the new secretary (Mr. Seward) to the state department, whence, at the suggestion of the latter, they presently walked over to the White House and were ushered into the room which more than 30 years before Mr. Adams associated most closely with his father, John Quincy Adams (sixth President), and his father's trained bearing and methodical habits.

"Presently a door opened and a tall, large-featured shabbily dressed man of uncouth appearance slouched into the room. His much-kneed, ill-fitting trousers, coarse stockings and worn slippers at once caught the eye. He seemed generally ill at ease—in manner, constrained and shy.

MR. ADAMS DISMAYED.

"The secretary introduced the minister to the President and the appointee of the last proceeded to make the usual conventional remarks, expressive of obligation and his hope that the confidence implied in the appointment he had received might not prove to have been misplaced.

"They had all by this time taken chairs, and the tall man listened in silent abstraction. When Mr. Adams had finished—and he did not take long—the tall man remarked in an indifferent, careless way that the appointment in question had not been his, but was due to the secretary of state, and that it was to 'Gov. Seward' rather than to himself that Mr. Adams should express any sense of obligation he might feel; then, stretching out his legs before him, he said, with an air of great relief, as he swung his long arms to his head: 'Well, governor I've this morning decided that Chicago postoffice appointment.'

"Mr. Adams and the nation's foreign policy were dismissed together! Not another reference was made to them. Mr. Lincoln seemed to think that the occasion called for nothing further; as to Mr. Adams, it was a good while before he recovered from his dismay—he never recovered from his astonishment, nor did the impression then made ever wholly fade from his mind."

LINCOLN'S MODESTY.

That Mr. Adams could not understand Lincoln's ways was a most natural thing, in view of the difference in their temperaments and training, but there were some things in the situation that escaped even Mr. Adams' trained observation. One was Mr. Lincoln's modesty; another was his deep, intuitive knowledge of men; the last was his democracy.

"An Adams was no more to Mr. Lincoln than any other son of Adam," writes James Morgan in his "Lincoln the Boy and the Man." "In his native, unaffected democracy he could not feel an awe or a reverence for any human being, however high his station or however long his lineage. It was not his habit to look up at one man and look down upon another. He saw all men, the honored and the unhonored, the rich and the poor, on a common level with himself.

"As for attempting to instruct the minister to England in his duties as a diplomat, or discussing the possible future relations between this country and Great Britain, he would not cross the Atlantic ocean until he came to it.

"Adams therefore, went out from his presence, for the last time, to carry with him through all his trials at the British capital and even to his grave, the impression of an ill-dressed, ignorant chief, without a soul above office seekers."

Yet despite this now historical misconception on Mr. Adams' part, he was to prove one of Lincoln's strongest captains in the great struggle soon to come; while Lincoln's true purpose in not presuming to give him instructions may now be construed as a compliment to the abilities of Mr. Adams.

MUCH WEEPING IN COURTROOM

Sympathy For Mrs. Melber as Sentence Is Pronounced

TWENTY YEARS AT HARD LABOR

Woman Who Killed Her Son Is Undisturbed When Verdict Is Announced, but Breaks Down When She Meets Her Sister—Counsel Makes Eloquent and Pathetic Plea In Her Behalf

Albany, March 17.—A minimum sentence of twenty years at hard labor in Auburn prison and a maximum of incarceration for the period of her natural life, was the sentence imposed by Justice Howard on Mrs. Edith Melber, the young widow who killed her only child by forcing a deadly acid down his throat in a desolate Albany suburb on the night of Jan. 6 last.

The verdict was rendered a little more than two hours after the jury retired. Mrs. Melber's attorneys, John H. Dugan and George M. Palmer, are unprepared to say whether they will take an appeal. Few exceptions were taken by the defense during the progress of the trial, and most of them on apparently minor points.

The shrivelled little woman who is to spend at least twenty years of her life in prison exhibited not the slightest sign of appreciation of her position as the verdict was rendered and the sentence pronounced. Later, when her weeping sister, Mrs. Linda Simmons, flung her arms around her, the tears came and she writhed in agony.

"Why didn't they kill me?" she wailed softly. "I only wish they had taken my life. I'm ready to die."

Women and men were weeping throughout the crowded courtroom. Tears were streaming from the eyes of several of the jurymen and the faces of the others were white and strained.

But when Sheriff Platt gently escorted the woman from the room and her eyes fell upon Howard Kirk, her love for whom, according to the theory of the prosecution, instigated the crime, a flash of anger lighted her usually impassive features and she said:

"I'll have you in Auburn with me before long."

Kirk was standing at the time in front of the pay clerk's desk, awaiting his wages for testifying against the woman, but he said nothing.

A Good Cough Syrup.

Made at home easily by any woman or child. Simply take a pint of granulated sugar; pour over it a half pint of boiling water; stir and cool. Then obtain at drug store 2 1-2 ozs. of Essence Mentho-Laxene, a concentrated, laxative, curative fluid and empty it into a pint bottle. Then fill up the bottle with syrup, shake well and take a teaspoonful every hour or two. This immediately checks a cough or cold and soon cures it. Even mental healers have to admit the great value of this simple remedy for every day home use of children and adults.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

McVickar defies Senator Blount to nominate Evan. Patricia and her geologist father arrive at the Sagebrush capital.

CHAPTER IX.

THE RANK AND FILE.

CONSIDERABLY to his surprise and no less to his satisfaction, the newly appointed "division counsel," as his title ran, was not required to take over the old legal department offices in the second story of the station building, where all the other offices of the company were located. Instead he was directed to fit up a suit of rooms in Temple court, the capital's most pretentious uptown skyscraper, and there was something more than a hint that the item of first cost need not be too closely considered.

It was the vice president himself, writing from Chicago, who authorized the new departure and loosened the purse strings. He wrote:

Don't be afraid of spending a little money. Make your uptown office as attractive as may be and arrange matters with Ackerton so that you will not be burdened with too much of the routine legal work. A successful legal representative will be a good mixer, as I am sure you are, and will extend the circle of his acquaintance as rapidly and as widely as possible. Your appointment will be fully justified when you shall have made your uptown office a place where the good citizens of the capital and the state can drop in for a cordial word with the company's spokesman and for a better mutual understanding of the facts.

Acting upon this suggestion, Blount opened the Temple court headquarters and threw himself energetically into the indicated field. Ackerton, a technical expert with a needle-like mind and the state code at his fingers' ends, was left in charge of the working offices in the railroad building, with instructions to apply to his chief only when he needed specific advice.

At the uptown headquarters Blount gave himself wholly to the pleasant task of making friends. With a good store of introductions upon which to make a beginning and with the open handed, whole souled camaraderie of the west to help along, the list of acquaintances grew with amazing rapidity.

For the three or four weeks after Mrs. Blount had whisked the Anneres away to Wartrace Hall and the habitat of the megalosauridae, the newly appointed "social secretary" for the railroad, as Honoria had dubbed him, refused no invitations, never inquiring whether they were extended to his father's son, to the railroad company's legal chief or to Evan Blount in his proper person.

During this social interval he saw little of his father, though he still occupied his share of the private dining room suit at the Inter-Mountain. Part of the time, as he knew, the senator was at Wartrace Hall, looking after his huge landed estate and helping to entertain the visitors from Massachusetts. But now and again the father came and went, and occasionally there was a dinner for two in the hotel cafe, with a little good natured raillery from the senator's side of the table.

"Got you chasing your feet right lively in the social merry-go-round these days, haven't they, son? Like it as far as you've gone?" asked the ex-cattle king one evening.

"It's all in the day's work," laughed the younger man. "I'll need all the 'pull' I can get a little later on, won't I?"

"I shouldn't wonder if you did, son; I shouldn't wonder if you did. And I reckon you're doing pretty good work. Was it McVickar's idea or your own—this sudden splash into the social water hole?"

"I don't mind telling you that it is a part of the new policy," returned the social splasher, still smiling. "We are out to make friends this time, friends who will know just what we are doing and why we are doing it."

"H'm!" mused the senator. "So publicity's the word, is it?"

"Yes, publicity is the word. The Gordon people say they are going to show us up. There won't be anything to show up when the time comes. We are going to beat them to the billboards."

"You can't do the circus act—ride two horses at once and do the same stunt on both, son," the senator remarked gravely. "If you're really going to put the saddle and bridle on the publicity nag you've got to turn the other one out of the corral."

"It is already turned out," averred the young man, not affecting to misunderstand. "We buy no votes in this campaign."

The stout assertion was good as far as it went. The new division counsel made it and believed it. But a little later he could not help wondering if he had been altogether candid in making it.

The offices in the uptown skyscraper were not exclusively a railroad social center where the disinterested voter could come and have the facts ladled out to him without fear or favor on the part of the ladler. They had come to be also a rallying point for a heterogeneous crowd of ward workers, wirepullers and small politicians, most of whom were anxious to be employed or retained as henchmen.

Some of these "stretcher men," as Blount contemptuously called them, had been employed in past campaigns; others were still the beneficiaries of the railroad, holding payroll places which Blount acutely suspected were chiefly sinecures.

Latterly this contingent of strikers and heelers had been greatly augmented, and it was beginning to make its demands more emphatic. A dozen times a day Blount had the worn phrase "nothing for nothing" dinned into his ears, and he was shrewdly suspecting that his office had been made a dumping ground for the other departments.

Seeing Gantry, Blount took an early opportunity of saying:

"See here, Dick; you fellows downtown are making my office a cesspool, and I won't stand for it. Garrigan, that saloon keeper in the Second ward, came up today to ask for a free ticket to Worthington and return, and when I pinned him down he admitted that you sent him to me."

"I did," said Gantry, grinning. "Why otherwise have we got a postgraduate, double certificated political manager, I'd like to know?"

"I guess we may as well fight this out right here and now, Dick," said Blount coolly. "I'm not chief vote buyer for the Transcontinental company."

"Who said you were?" retorted the traffic manager.

"It says itself if I am to cut the pie and hand out pieces of it to these grubstakers that you and Carson and Bentley and Kittredge are sending to me."

This time Gantry's grin was playful, but behind it there was a shrewd flash of the Irish blue eyes that Blount did not see.

"I guess the company will be willing to furnish a few small pies if you think you need them to go along with your Temple court office fittings," he said.

"Ah!" said Blount calmly, giving the exclamation the true Boston inflection.

"I'M GOING TO FIRE THEM OUT NECK AND CROP."

"You are either too shrewd or not quite shrewd enough, Dick. You covered that up with a laugh so that I might take it as a joke if I happened to be too thin skinned to take it in disreputable earnest. Let us understand each other. We are fighting in the open in this campaign. Publicity is the word. I have Mr. McVickar for my authority. Anybody who wants to know anything about the railroad company's business in this state can learn it for the asking and at first hand. Secrecy and all the various brands of political skulduddery that have been admitted in the past are to be shown the door. This is the intimation that was made to me. Wasn't it made to you?"

Gantry did not reply directly to the direct demand. On the other hand, he very carefully refrained from answering it in any degree whatsoever.

"You have your job to hold down and I have mine," he returned. "What you say goes as it lies, of course, but I shouldn't be too hard on the little brothers if I were you."

"If by the 'little brothers' you mean the pie eaters I'm going to fire them out neck and crop, Richard. They make me excessively weary."

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

TREMONT THEATRE.

Margaret Anglin and her merry comedy "Green Stockings" seem to have caught on hugely in Boston where at the Tremont Theatre crowded houses are prevailing. On Friday afternoon, March 24, the distinguished actress will give an exposition of her wonderful versatility by creating the role of Phaedra in a posthumous blank verse drama called "Hippolytus" that was written by the late Julia Ward Howe over 50 years ago for Edwin Booth and Charlotte Cushman. The proceeds of this special performance which is under the distinguished patronage of the Governor of Massachusetts and ex-Governor Draper, the Mayor of Boston, and a large number of leaders in literature, fine arts and society, will be devoted to the Julia Ward Howe Memorial. A tremendous amount of public attention has been aroused throughout Massachusetts in this interesting event and it is evident that a large and brilliant gathering will assemble at the Tremont Theatre for the occasion. The late Mrs. Howe's interest in the stage was always of the keenest and both Mr. Booth and Miss Cushman were among her warmest friends as was Miss Margaret Anglin, who last year when she was in Boston, being premitted by Mrs. Howe to read the manuscript of "Hippolytus" expressed a great wish to appear in the role of Phaedra. The drama is a retelling of the tragic tale of Phaedra's attachment to her stepson Hippolytus, best known to the modern stage by translations of Euripides tragedy of the same name and by Racine's tragedy Phedre as acted by Sarah Bernhardt. Last summer in California Margaret Anglin appeared in a production of the Antigone of Sophocles and her reading and acting in the great tragedy are said to have created a sensation on the Pacific slope. Consequently the curiosity of Boston has been set on edge and Miss Anglin is sparing no pains to give Mrs. Howe's play a meritorious presentation.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

David Belasco will present Frances Starr at the Hollis Street Theatre Monday, for a limited engagement in "The Easiest Way" Eugene Walter's greatest play. She will have the support of the New York cast, including Joseph Kilgour, Edward H. Robins, John P. Brawn, Louise Randolph and Violet Rand, and the scenic equipment will be identical with that provided by David Belasco for the two years' run of the play at the Belasco Theatre in New York. In direct and convincing manner "The Easiest Way" depicts that aspect of New York life which is concerned with the tragedy of those women who are so wedded to luxury that they will pay almost any price for its enjoyment. The theme is handled in a serious and telling manner. Inasmuch as "The Easiest Way" is produced under the personal direction of David Belasco there is no necessity to dwell upon the perfection of its setting. The first act discloses a scene of exquisite beauty amid the rolling foothills of the Rockies, radiant in the golden light of the afternoon sun. Not less faithful is the theatrical boarding house interior shown in the second act which is followed by a superb setting of the interior of an apartment in an expensive hotel in New York. No play in years has created such a profound sensation as "The Easiest Way." Its record has been phenomenal. It was played to crowded house at Mr. Belasco's theatre in New York and since then has established records for attendance in the many principal theatres throughout the country. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees during Miss Starr's engagement.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Madam Adelaide Norwood, for six years prima donna with the Henry W. Savage grand opera company and creator of the title roles in Puccini's "Madam Butterfly," "La Boheme," and "La Tosca," will next week head one of the strongest bills offered at B. F. Keith's Theatre this season. Mme. Norwood will be heard in one of the best programmes ever offered in vaudeville by a grand opera star, her selections ranging from Wagner's "Ride of DeWalkure,"" to such popular favorites as "Come Back to Erin." The surrounding bill is intended for laughing purposes only. Harry Tighe and his collegians will appear in a new comedy sketch written especially for him by Ralph D. Paine, the well-known author of boys' books. It is called "The Careless Sophomore," and abounds in clean, wholesome humor from start to finish. Morton and Moore, who starred last season in Gordon and Norths' "Merry Whirl" will appear in an original singing and dancing act, introducing some of their famous eccentric dances. Mack and Orth are another new team, who have a splendid musical sketch called "The Wrong Hero," and other big features will be Brown. Harris and Brown, in "Just to Laugh;" the Sensational Boises, called "The Human Arrowplanes" in their sensational casting act Leon Rogee, the mimic and entertainer: and Strength Brothers in extraordinary feats of equilibrism.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

The second week of Cyril Scott in "The Lottery Man" at the Majestic Theatre began Monday evening with a continuance of those crowded attendances which characterized the first week of the engagement of this genuine comedy success. It is seldom that theatre-goers have an opportunity to laugh so continuously and so heartily during an evening or afternoon at the theatre. The humor of "The Lottery Man" is simply irresistible. There must have been something strongly attractive about it to keep it playing to crowded houses night after night on Broadway, and Boston is finding out just what that was. Cyril Scott in the title role plays with a deft touch of comedy which carries the piece a long way toward its wonderful success. He has the part of a reporter who offers himself as a prize in a lottery which is conducted by his paper for the purpose of gaining circulation. Although in love with the girl whom he has met since the inauguration of the lottery the reporter loses himself to another but happily a means is found of wrestling the winning number from the haggard but hopeful dame, she receiving in return a money settlement. The engagement will be for one week more, with usual matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Another extension of the run of the "End of the Bridge" will bring it to its third and final week at the Castle Square. Beginning Monday, Miss Lincoln's Harvard prize play will enter upon its last performances, with every sign of audiences that will fill the theatre to the doors. Its success has been tremendous and unexpected, and its combination of humor and emotion is in no small degree responsible for its popularity. The story that it has to tell is lucid, wholesome and entertaining, and its characters and scenes are taken directly from the life of today. The acting by Mr. Craig and his company is in every way heartily commendable, Miss Young's impersonation of Joan Mannering, and Miss McDannel's portrayal of the little boy Peter being the features of the performance. Mr. Craig's Dr. Garret is a physician to the life, and good work is also done by Mr. Hassell and Miss Colcord.

Kendall F. Harriman reported for the social committee and George H. Critchley for the devotional committee.

Rev. Joseph Walther, pastor of the church and teacher of the class spoke briefly of the work of the class, and the higher ideals he intended to work for. President J. Arthur Sparrow also spoke.

For the evenings program the class was fortunate in securing one of the best entertainers it has had this season. For nearly an hour Frank Collier, cartoonist of the Boston Globe, kept those present interested with a series of rapid sketches depicting caricatures of characters famous and otherwise.

Mr. Collier was not introduced, but stepping to the stand with a few rapid touches of the crayon, presented a striking likeness of "Frank Collier, cartoonist" for the hearty, approval of those present.

Next came pictures contrasting the cartoonist as he sees himself and as the public see him. Expressions of faces were caricatured showing fear, laughter, knowledge and others.

An array of famous personages followed including Roosevelt, Taft, Bryan, Draper, Foss, and concluding with a lifelike sketch of "Kendall F. Harriman beating it on an assignment."

Transformation sketches were then taken up, the clever cartoonist changing a motor car into a motorist, an attractive damsel into a donkey, and the name Cohn into a Jew.

Many attractive stunts were worked with numerals, numbers being given by the audience which with a few lines the artist changed into faces.

Concluding the program was an interesting experiment participated in by several of those present. Each was requested to draw a zig zag line on the paper. Faces were quickly made to appear out of these by Mr. Collier. The last line drawn was most eccentric, containing many curves. This puzzled Collier for a moment, but then stepping to the board he evolved a most lifelike picture of "Martin Lomasney of Ward Eight."

Refreshments of a most pretentious nature followed the program, including ices in moulds and individual frozen delicacies in the form of strawberries, peaches, apples and the like. Cake and coffee were also served.

Following is a list of officers and committees elected for the coming year:

President—Eben Hardy.
Vice President—John L. Miller.
Secretary—P. S. Dresser.
Treasurer—J. E. Leavitt.
Social Committee—Kendall F. Harriman, J. Arthur Jewell, William Waring and W. F. Chase.
Membership Committee—Charles W. Bailey, Harvey Black, Frank Burgess.
Visiting Committee—H. L. Wilson, Seldon Nickerson, James C. Porter.
Devotional Committee—J. Arthur Sparrow, J. H. Marceau, George H. Critchley.

ONE RESULT OF RECENT RECALL

Seattle Is to Have a Municipal Street Car Line

OF GREAT BENEFIT TO CITY

Large Area That Is Now Sparsely Settled Will Be Opened Up—Boston-Owned Corporation Will Have Strong Competitor—Tracks Alongside of Those of Interurban Line If Latter Refuses to Come to Terms

Seattle, Wash., March 17.—One of the first acts of the new city administration, which goes into office next week, will be to advertise for sale $800,000 in bonds for the construction of a municipal street car line.

With the $800,000 the city purposes to construct and operate a thirteen-mile trunk line from Ballard, one of its northernmost wards, to the Rainier valley in the south end, crossing the central business district and intersecting lines of the Seattle Electric company, a Boston-owned corporation.

Instead of building a track through the three miles in the center of the city the government line will use a section of the Seattle Electric company's tracks by virtue of a "common user" clause in its franchise. From the northern end of this section to Rainier valley the city will parallel the tracks of the Seattle, Benton and Southern, an independent interurban line that has given patrons and city officials much trouble for several years. Through much of the distance the city will lay its tracks on the same streets used by the interurban, placing them outside of the existing tracks if that company refuses to sell or make agreement for joint use.

From the southern end of the joint track to Ballard the city will build an entirely new line through territory not now enjoying good street car service. It will follow around a hillside for three miles and will draw all the patronage of those living above the line, for now those people have to climb several blocks of a typical Seattle hillside to reach an existing line. It is expected that this three miles of line will open up to settlement a large area, comparatively close in, that is now sparsely settled.

This elaborate experiment in municipally owned car systems was made possible for Seattle by a series of apparently unrelated events.

The completion of the Cedar river power plant gave the municipality 14,000 electric horsepower, much more than it will need for its lighting system for years to come, and the output to increase the quantity to 20,000 horsepower by the installation of additional generators.

Then came women's suffrage. A month ago the women voters joined with their husbands in a recall election, retired Mayor Gill and his open town policy and substituted George W. Dilling, pledged to a clean town and a businesslike administration.

A week or two later some new charter provisions went into effect, under which a modified commission form of government with nine councilmen-at-large is provided for.

A week ago the legislature passed a public utilities bill under which the Seattle Electric company can be forced to exchange transfers with the proposed city line and make other concessions.

The fares for this new line will be 4 cents and 5 cents, and the profits used for the extension of the system. Later it is probable the fares will be reduced.

PENNANT TO RED SOX

But They Led the Giants by One Point Only

The race for the bowling pennant in the Makaria league was ended Thursday evening at the Granite street alleys, and although the Giants won four straight points they were unable to overcome the lead of the Red Sox. The latter thus landed the pennant with the Giants a close second. Among the season's records were these:

Single string, candlepins, Melville 116.

Single string, bottlepins, M. Nicoll 198.

The final standing is as follows:

	Won.	Lost
Red Sox, T. King	41	19
Giants, Dell	40	20
Cubs, Morris	31	29
Pirates, M. Nicoll	27	33
Tigers, Jones	22	38
Athletics, Troupe	20	40

GIANTS—ATHLETICS.

The matches rolled off did not change the standing order of the teams. The Giants took four points from the Athletics. All the strings were close, the first going to the Giants by 13 pins, the second by 3 and third by 8, giving them a lead of 24 in totals. "Stan" Bates was high man on both single string and three strings with 104 and 276.

The summary:

GIANTS

Melville	73	84	85	242
Bonney	71	80	79	230
S. Bates	104	89	83	276
Collins	82	80	81	243
Dummy	72	76	69	217
	402	409	397	1208

ATHLETICS

Giles	87	88	76	251
W. Nicoll	73	83	78	234
Robertson	72	76	69	217
Curtis	83	79	80	242
Troupe	74	80	86	240
	389	406	389	1184

CUBS—PIRATES.

The Cubs and Pirates bowling with three men on a team, rolled over and over, but the Cubs finally came out on top. The Swashbucklers took the first string by 14 pins, but in the second and third they were smothered by the Bruins. R. Bates, with a 96, was high man on single string, and Jones led in three strings with 264.

Thes ummary:

CUBS.

R. Bates	74	83	96	253
Morris	81	84	74	239
Jones	79	93	92	264
	234	260	262	756

SPORTING NOTES.

Boxing seems to have been transferred from Quincy to Brockton. The Globe says: Although Mayor Howard instructed the police a few weeks ago to enforce the law relative to boxing exhibitions and two clubs then in existence disbanded, the sport was revived tonight and the Shoe City A. C. gave the best program in years at the Palace rink. Four slashing bouts took place before 800 people.

At a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. physical directors held at Chelsea Thursday, 21 out of 24 voted to abolish outside basket ball playing for the season of 1911-12. The associations which voted to eliminate the games were Boston, Lawrence, Lowell, Malden, Salem, Quincy, North Abington, Methuen, Fall River, Cambridge, Somerville, Melrose, Newburyport, Fitchburg, New Bedford, Providence, Hyde Park, Chelsea, Wakefield, Springfield, and Clapp Memorial association of Weymouth. Newton, Lynn and Brockton voted with the other asociations to abolish the game, but could not take official action until the matter was laid before their respective physical department committees.

Over 121 athlets are entered in the various events for the Y. M. C. A. State championships at Newton on Saturday night. The Quincy team of 16 men will leave on the 6.12, and South station at 7.05 for Newton.

The Silent Five of Milton defeated Boston of Y. M. C. A., second Thursday evening by a score of 37 to 32. Flynn, Doucette and Ward excelled for the Milton team and McMillan and Beaton were the stars for Boston.

ANOTHER CHURCH FREE OF DEBT

Unique Toasts at Annual Meeting of Wollaston Church

At the annual meeting and supper of the Wollaston Methodist church last evening the morigage on the church building was publicly burned by Mrs. George Crothers to the congregational singing of "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

The meeting was called a "sufficiency meeting," instead of a "deficiency meeting" as has been the case some years, for the reason that all bills for the fiscal year just ended have been paid. To the splendid work of the Ladies' Aid society, of which Mrs. Crothers is president, is due in no small measure the success of these two attainments in the past year.

At 7 o'clock those present sat down to an appetizing supper consisting of meat loaf, escalloped potato, tomato, cabbage salad, pies and coffee. The blessing was asked by the pastor Rev. Wesley Wiggin, an unusually large number attending the meeting. On the tables were lighted green candles, a reminder of the day.

Eric H. Ewertz acted as master of ceremonies at the after-dinner exercises and called upon the pastor to speak upon the subject "My third year in Wollaston."

Rev. Mr. Wiggin recalled the past two years that he had been with the church. In this time nine had moved away and four had died. During the two years the church had made a net gain in its membership of 36, and now stands with 175 members on its books. The pastor promised to work faithfully for the church and the Master in the future, as he had in the past, and saw every reason for encouragement in the outlook for the coming year. Let each one feel an individual responsibility and exert a hustle and push that would be felt, he said. There were three words he wanted to emphasize—agitation, concentration and cooperation. Talk up the church. Sunday school, teachers and superintendent. Concentrate your energies, ambitions and actions in making the church the strongest possible.

"Enlarging my nursery" was responded to by J. A. Sedgwick superintendent of the Sunday school. He told how by strenuous efforts the registration of the Sunday school had reached the 200 mark, and now they were looking forward to better things and hoping to make it 250.

There are two things in the curriculum of West Point that are worthy of imitation. The first is love of country. The second obedience to orders. The Sunday school not only stands for love of country and obedience to orders, but something way beyond this, namely, obedience to God's commands and love of His truth. The speaker continued by comparing the Sunday school to an army with the superintendent as commander-inchief, and so on through the other departments, ending with the cradle roll as the recruiting station.

"My organization" was treated in a self satisfied manner by George Taylor, president of the Men's club. He told of the big things he had accomplished the past year, doing most of the work and leaving the little that remained to the other officers and committees.

S. N. Belcher read a bright number of the "Wollaston Herald" the organ of the Methodist club. The issue contained humorous poetry and many good jokes and hits. A witty article entitled "Who's who in the Methodist club" was exceedingly clever and redounded credit upon its author.

"Where it comes from and where it goes to" covered the report of A. B. Cassidy, treasurer of the society. This consisted, as the speaker said, of stern facts, and showed the society to be on a firm and enviable basis.

"I never like to begin another job before I have finished the present one" said Mrs. George Crothers, president of the Ladies' Aid, as she responded to the sentiment." "The ambitions of my aggregation." Acting upon this she touched a match to the mortgage and soon only a black memory of the church debt was left with those present. Mrs. Crothers outlined an aggressive campaign for her society the coming year, in which with the usual help of the men she hopes not only to see the current expenses and benevolences fully met, but the church repaired and beautified.

Frank G. Bennett, president of the Epworth League spoke briefly on "Me and my young people," while Mrs. W. Leroy Pease superintendent of the Junior League spoke interestingly of her work among the younger children.

Owing to the lateness of the hour, Mrs. Wesley Wiggin, who was to have spoken on "Our missionary work" said but a few words.

Miss Florence Beanett, president of the Queen Esther Circle gave an interesting account of its benevolences, and told of its place as the banner circle in the Boston district.

Closing the evening was a resume of next year's budget by A. N. Murray of the finance committee. Mr. Ewertz was most happily placed as toast master, and the inexhaustible fund of dry wit and humor with which he introduced the speakers was very amusing.

BETHANY CHURCH MEETING.

At a corporate meeting of Bethany church last evening it was voted to change the day of prayermeeting from Friday to Thursday evening at 7.45. Probably the change will take effect next week.

Dr. Hardy announced that he would leave Quincy on May 15. It was voted to continue his salary as pastor through July 1 thus giving him the usual six weeks vacation.

The question of calling an assistant pastor or Bible school superintendent remained unsettled after considerable discussion. The meeting was adjourned at 9.45.

MASQUERADE OF TENNIS CLUB

Thirty to Forty Couples at Party in Wollaston Hall

Fact and fancy trod on each other's heels at Wollaston hall last evening where the masquerade of the Wollaston Tennis club took place. Beneath dainty decorations of paper parasols, streamers and Japanese lanterns the mismated gyrating couples formed a scene only equalled in the pages of the Arabian Nights.

Turk and clown, Chinaman and Colonial Dame, Spaniard and Dutch girl, all mingled in conglomerate array. Even Uncle Sam and the Goddess of Liberty graced the assembly. Flitting her and there as a ballet girl of no mean pretentions, Charles E. Barker was one of the hits of the evening. As mother and baby with the help of a baby carriage H. S. Child and Jesse L. Litchfield created no end of fun.

Over three score enjoyed the most successful social function that this popular club has held this season. Composing the committee of arrangements were: Charles E. Barker, A. B. Hillman, C. H. Baker, Dr. F. S. Andrews and Roy C. Baker.

Following is a list of the costumes and their wearers:

CONCERT OF IRISH MUSIC

Pleasing Program at St. John's in Memory of St. Patrick

A most pleasing concert of Irish music was given last evening in the hall of St. John's parochial school before a large and appreciative audience. The stage was prettily decorated, the American and Irish flags being prominently displayed.

The program opened with Irish selections by St. John's orchestra, and was followed by readings of Irish selections and the singing of Irish songs, the rendering of which caused the blood to tingle in the veins of the hearers.

Readings were contributed by Miss Bertha McDonough. Miss Annie Ott gave a singing and dancing number, Dennie Sweeney a tenor solo, Edward McGonagle a baritone solo, Miss Angela McCarthy, Miss Josephine McCarthy, D. J. Seward McCurdy and John A. McGowan several quartet selections. Thomas Murphy a tenor solo, Miss Elsie Hauley Cooper a soprano solo, the Misses McDonald fancy step dancing with Thomas McNally as violinist. Miss Eva Rice a contralto solo and De Neill brothers a piano and violin duet.

The program concluded with a chorus by St. John's choir. John Mahan was the accompanist. All of the numbers were finely rendered and each was well encored, the artists graciously responding.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

The trade unions' fine bill was passed to be engrossed in the Senate yesterday without debate.

The committee on labor reported a bill to permit peaceful communications with applicants for positions during lockouts and strikes, house 303. Senator Mellen, Representatives Ellis Howe, Bagg and Sargent dissent.

Ways and Means reported ought to pass, in new draft resolve to expend $3,500 for the dedication of the Massachusetts memorials at Valley Forge and before Petersburg.

In the House without debate the Boston & Northern-Old Colony street railway consolidation bill was ordered to a third reading.

Leave to withdraw was reported on bill to prohibit the drawing of lobster pots between 7 at night and 5 in the morning.

Ought not to pass on bills to increase the salaries of judges of probate and insolvency in the counties of Middlesex and Norfolk. Leave to withdraw on bill to increase the salaries of officers of inferior courts outside of Boston.

SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Congratulations to Ex-President of Council and His Wife

Ex-Councilman Walter E. Piper and Mrs. Piper, who was Miss Alice E. Brooks, both well known South Quincy residents, passed the silver milestone in their happy wedded life on Friday. The evening was made the occasion of an informal gathering at their home on Centre street in honor of the event. The entire lack of formality served to make the affair all the more enjoyable to the neighbors and friends from out of town who extended their heartiest congratulations upon their having reached their silver wedding anniversary, wishing them a continuance of the unalloyed happiness that has been theirs since they entered upon life's journey together.

The guests did not come empty handed, for in the dining room there was displayed a handsome array of gifts in silver and cut glass that told in a way of the high regard in which they are held.

Bridge was the main diversion of the evening, although as the hands oft he clock crept along near the midnight hour, cards gave way to music and many of the popular airs were sung by the guests, whose accomplishments in this line were a revelation.

Of course there were refreshments, Mr. and Mrs. Piper being assisted in serving by their two sons, Hartwell and Walter, Miss Marjorie Brooks and Miss Frances Burke. It was with reluctance that it was seen that the flight of time had been all too rapid and that the time to say good morning was near at hand, so "see you again soon" was said, and the still night air resounded with laughter as the guests wended their way homeward.

CARRIED BACK TO IRELAND

Illustrated Lecture Interspersed With Music

St Mary's hall was filled to overflowing last evening with the sons and daughters of Erin to do honor to St. Patrick, Ireland's patron saint. The affair was held under the auspices of Division 4, A. O. H., and is said to have been one of the most entertaining ever held in West Quincy.

The program was a lecture by Rev. T. P. McManmon which was profusely illustrated by stereopticon views and songs. It opened with an overture, a melody of Irish airs, followed by a chorus "Hail glorius apostle" by the choir of St. Mary's church, a solo by Miss Alice O'Neil, and a chorus by the choir.

Rev. Mr. McManmon starting from New York took his hearers by steamer to Queenstown, telling many interesting incidents of the voyage across the Atlantic. Arriving at Queenstown he took his hearers from London to Kingstown landing, Dublin, Wicklow, Limerick, Tipperary Clare, Galway, Roscommon, Mayo, Cork, Blarney, Glen Gariff, Killarney, Queenstown and back to New York arriving at 11 o'clock.

At Queenstown Leo P. Noonan gave a recitation, "Ireland I bid ye top of the morning." At London, Mrs. J. L. Fennessey sang a solo "Come back to Erin" with chorus by the choir. The other solos during the lecture were by Miss Helen L. Galvin, who added new laurels to her fame as a soprano soloist. Miss Galvin was at her best and her rendering of the songs so dear to those of Irish blood was such as to call forth unbounded applause, at times the audience rising in their seats in proclaiming their appreciation of her solos. Miss Galvin's solos included "Meeting of the Waters," "The pretty maid milking her cow," Won't you come back to Connemara" "By Killarney's lakes and dells," and "Ireland."

The speaker of the evening was introduced by Mayor Shea in a few words, during which he extended a welcome to those present for the division. Rev. Mr. McManmon proved an unusually interesting speaker his address being interspersed with many amusing incidents of his trip. His description of the places visited was most graphic, and it needed but a little stretch of imagination on the part of his hearers to imagine that they were accompanying him.

As a whole it was one of the most interesting and instructive lectures ever given in this hall, and served to give those who had never visited the shores where the shamrock grows an insight into this beautiful country such as they never had before. As noted above, mush of the effectiveness was added to the lecture by the solos of Miss Galvin.

Alex Watson was arrested at the corner of Hancock street and Billings road Friday afternoon for creating a disturbance on a street car. Watson who works at the Fore River shipyard, lives in Jamica Plain and was a passenger on one of the Fore River special cars. He wanted to smoke, and smoke he would, no matter what happened. The conductor asked him to stop but it did no good. When Norfolk Downs was reached the conductor called Officer Larkin. The man gave the officer the laugh and then smashed a window. Officer Duffy who was near by also ran to the car. Watson put up quite a fight but was placed under arrest and locked up. He was fined $15.

A LA GETTYSBURG.

A two-horse team of Warren Munroe ran away on Quarry street this morning, but fortunately Councilman Sandberg was near at hand and prevented much damage being done. The horse started from Fallon's quarry and ran down Quarry street. One of the horses was thrown and the other was making things lively when Councilman Sandberg grabbed the horse a la Gettysburg and prevented a serious runaway.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

In looking over the school notes in Thursday's Ledger we were especially pleased to see one item, the one referring to a spelling match at the Willard school. There is nothing like spelling bees and plenty of them to help the pupils to spell correctly Notwithstanding the oft repeated statement that good spellers have to be born spellers we believe practice and plenty of it will help those not born with the art.

SHOOTING WAS ACCIDENTAL

Bank Clerk Who Wounded Chum Will Not Be Arrested

Boston, March 18.—Judge Murray would not grant a warrant for the arrest of William D. Stevens, who was arrested for shooting Girard Jones in the rooms of the Merchants' Co-operative bank, the shooting having been found to have been entirely accidental.

The two young men were scuffling and Stevens picked up a loaded revolver which was on a desk. He did not realize that his finger was on the trigger and he fired the weapon, shooting his comrade in the back. Jones' condition is improving, but he will have to stay in the hospital for a few days.

INTELLIGENCE OFFICE INVESTIGATORS.

Want More Time—Are Making a Thorough Study of the Problem of Connecting the Man and the Job—Question of Farm Labor Is Also under Consideration.

The proposed extension of the time allowed for investigation of the condition and management of employment agencies of the state means that Massachusetts is undertaking a thorough study of the problem of economically connecting the man and the job. The subject has been found by the unpaid commission of three appointed by Governor Draper in 1910 to require a more detailed survey than could be presented at this session. Consequently legislative permission is asked to extend the time of filing the commission's report to the second Wednesday of January, 1912.

The original appointment of this commission was due to the initiative of Rep. Norman H. White of Brookline, House chairman of the Ways and Means committee, who had already gathered preliminary evidence indicatin gthat in many instances laboring people were being exploited by unscrupulous and grasping employment agencies. To clean up abuses of this sort appeared to be just as important as to protect Massachusetts citizens from certain other forms of extortion for the accomplishment of which the Brookline representative, now an avowed candidate for the governorship, has devoted a great deal of his time, strength and private means since he entered the legislature five years ago—such measures as the savings insurance act which, fathered by Louis D. Brandeis, he nursed through legislature, and which has resulted in a saving to Massachusetts wage earners of more than a million dollars a year in the cost of industrial life insurance; the optometrist bill which aimed to prevent ignorant practitioners from tampering with the eyesight of the needy; the industrial education and vocational training movement which Rep. White furthered by bringing about a consolidation of the two state boards of education into a single efficient body; the better regulation of the business of the loan sharks which he has favored during the present session. Investigation of these and other matters has frequently brought to this legislator's attention the difficulties which both employer and employee often have in getting fair treatment at the intelligence office. The result was the passage of Chap. 146 of the resolves of 1910 providing for the appointment of a commission of three persons, serving without compensation, to "investigate and study the condition and management of employment agencies and intelligence offices of all kinds in the commonwealth and the efficiency of the laws relating thereto." The commission is also to investigate in regard to the advisability of extending the services of the state free employment offices of the bureau of statistics with a view to providing farm labor throughout the commonwealth. The commission has authority to summon witnesses and enforce their attendance to order the production of books, papers, agreements and documents and to administer oaths

Their final report, if the extension of time is allowed, will be likely to contain surprising facts.

HOPE IN HAREM SKIRT

Step Toward Women Adopting Men's Attire, Says Dr. Walker

Albany, March 18.—Dr. Mary Walker, who for years has worn the garb of man, expressed her delight at the appearance of the harem skirt.

"I am delighted at the appearance of the harem skirt," she said. "It is the most hopeful sign of the eventual adoption of men's attire by women that I have yet noted and I welcome any attempt to get rid of the disease-producing corsets and skirts."

SENSATIONAL ALLEGATIONS

In House Insular Committee's Minority Report

GRAFT IN THE FRIAR LANDS

Laws Said to Have Been Evaded In Most Shameless Manner by Americans Holding High Offices In the Philippines—Lands Wrongfully Acquired by Corporations Composed of Government Officials and Employes

Washington, March 18.—The minority of the house committee on insular affairs relating to the committee's investigation of the sale of friar lands in the Philippines, just made public, contains sensational allegations concerning sales and leases to United States government officials and employes.

E. L. Worcester, nephew of Dean C. Worcester, secretary of the interior of the Philippine government, the solicitor general of the Philippines, and other officials, it is plainly stated in the report, are beneficiaries of deals in the friar lands.

"Considering these astounding facts, it is difficult to escape the conclusion that the land laws of the Philippines are being evaded in the most shameless manner," says the report.

"The testimony shows that the practice obtains of selling and leasing public and friar lands to officials of the Philippine government. Practically all the executive members and many other government employes own tracts of land in Baguio, the summer capital of the Philippines.

"The assistant director of public lands has pending an application for the lease of 250,000 acres of public lands. A large number of corporations composed of government officials and employes have acquired public lands or portions of the friar estates.

"The solicitor general of the Philippine Islands," the report further says, "who rendered an opinion holding that the limitations contained in section 15 of the act of congress did not apply to the friar lands, is president of one of these concerns, and numerous other officials are at the head of land companies."

CAPRON PASSES ON

Represented Rhode Island In Congress For Fourteen Years

Providence, March 18.—Adin B. Capron, congressman from Rhode Island for seven successive terms, died at his home at Smithfield, almost two weeks to a day from the completion of his fourteen years' service in the national house of representatives. He was 70 years old and had been in ill health for about a year from heart and kidney trouble. His widow, two sons and two daughters survive him.

Capron was born in Mendon, Mass., Jan. 9, 1841. He enlisted when the Civil war broke out and for his gallantry in the war was promoted to the rank of captain and brevet major.

CAUGHT IN SEATTLE

Alleged Embezzler Tracked From Boston by an Irate Husband

Boston, March 18.—Edward F. Hollis, formerly employed as a clerk in the office of the clerk of the United States circuit court, where he is accused of having embezzled $75, has been arrested in Seattle and is being held by United States Commissioner Totten for removal to Boston.

A woman who is said to have deserted her husband in Boston was the cause of his arrest. The irate husband traced his missing wife to the Pacific coast and found her there in the company of Hollis.

TRY TO PROVE ALIBI

Camorrists Charged With Murder Make Strenuous Denial

Viterbo, Italy, March 18.—The entire session of the trial of the thirty-six Camorrists was taken up yesterday by the cross examination of Corrado Sortino and Nicola Morra, both of whom are accused of the actual murder of Gennaro Cuccolo.

Both men strenuously denied the charge an din an endeavor to prove an alibi testified that at the time Cuccolo was killed they were under police surveillance and could not possibly have left Naples for Torre del Greco, where the murder was committed.

GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

Nebraska Woman Killed Man Who Had Promised to Wed Her

Hartington, Neb., March 18.—A verdict of murder in the first degree, with imprisonment for life, was returned by the jury in the case of Mrs. Maggie Davis, slayer of Ira Churchill.

It was alleged that Churchill had promised to marry Mrs. Davis, but on the eve of the wedding married another woman.

DELIGHTFULLY ENTERTAINED.

Mrs. George Blaisdell entertained the True Blue Whist club on Thursday afternoon at her home on Minot street, Neponset. Whist was enjoyed for an hour after which all adjourned to the dining room where a turkey dinner was served.

The room was beautifully decorated in green and white and quantities of little flags. A basket of green and white hung from the chandelier over the table attached to which was a ribbon with shamrock, on the end being a small doll dressed in green which extended to each place. The doll held a card, designating the place for each guest. The ices were white decorated with small green pipes which were given each lady as a souvenir. A bouquet of green and white pinks graced the centre of the festive board. It was a most happy and delightful meeting of the True Blues.

PATRIOTIC TEA POURING

Musical Exercises With Salute to the Flag

A most enjoyable tea pouring was held at the home of Mrs. Anna J. Gould, 87 Adams street, Patriotic Instructor of Paul J. Revere, W. R. C. 103, on Fiday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock, about forty being in attendance. The house, which was prettily decorated with the flags of Erin and America and bunting, made a very attractive appearance.

The guests were each cordially received by the hostess and then introduced to Mrs. Annie T. Morrison, patriotic aid, who had charge of the register in which each one was requested to sign her name, and then was presented with two silk flags the American and the Green.

Mrs. Elizabeth Farrell and Mrs. Cylinder Richardson, also patriotic aids, were the tea pourers and much mirth and merriment was heard as each guest was served.

The musical exercises were in charge of Miss Ella Hayden, pianist of Corps 103, and consisted of a piano solo by Miss Annie Dorley, violin and piano solos by Comrade Francis P. Loud and wife. Little Miss Lillian Dorley gave a very pleasing solo entitled "A bad boy." Miss Althia Gould sang "Salute to the flag." There was also a solo by Mrs. E. Nason. The exercises closed by the children giving their flag salute and the older ones giving theirs, which was slightly different, and the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" and "My Country 'tis of Thee."

During the afternoon patriotic pieces were sung by those present, and the most enjoyable afternoon was spent by all who were fortunate enough to be able to be present.

A silk flag of both nations was sent to all the sick members of the corps.

FUNERAL OF G. W. MORTON

On Anniversary of Bank of Which He Was President

Today on the 66th anniversary of the incorporation of the Quincy Saving Bank, its tenth president, George W. Morton was laid at rest. Flags were displayed at half mast on City Hall and other buildings, and there was a lull in business from 2.30 to 3.30 during the funeral services which were held at his late home on Spear street, at the corner of the Coddington boulevard.

The services were conducted by Rev. Ellery C. Butler of the First church assisted by Rev. Daniel M. Wilson, a former pastor of the church. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

There was a large attendance of many of the business associates of the deceased, including Mayor Shea, and other members of the present and past City governments as well as the trustees of the Quincy Savings bank, and the directors of the Mt. Wollaston bank, and Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance company and the trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Many of these organizations sent flowers and there was a profusion of beautiful floral tributes. The burial was private.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE ACT.

A special meeting of the School committee was held Friday afternoon at which time a resolution relative to the building of the Montclair school was unanimously passed . Just what the wording of resolution is has not been made public, the School Committee saying that it prefers if it is to be made public it shall be done by the Mayor.

The resolution was forwarded to the Mayor this morning. When asked if he intended to give the public the benefit of the resolution, Mayor Shea said that he should not give it out at present, as he wanted time to think it over.

While the resolution is not made public it was intimated by a member of the committee that the committee was opposed to the contract being awarded to Mr. Crowley.

Basket Ball, Wirless Club, Camp Reunion, etc.

In the Extension club basketball league on Friday- Quincy Point defeated Wollaston 26 to 4, and Quincy Adams defeated Atlantic 35 to 12. In the first game McDonald and O'Brien were the stars for the winners and Fowler did all the scoring for the Wollaston team. For Quincy Adams, Kemp and Bishop starred, getting 5 baskets apiece, and McClure played the best for the losers, securing 3 baskets. Tirrell was referee of both contests.

Quincy should do well in the State meet this evening provided her men come up to the mark and work hard. She cannot expect to take the cup, but her athletes should place the name of the Granite City well up on the list.

The Wireless club met last evening in the clubroom to listen to a lecture on "Aerials" by Frank Evans. The membership was completed by the addition of two members, John McNeal and Charles Johnson. There are now fifteen members in the club.

At the camp reunion Friday evening a roast beef supper, prepared by "Sturgie" Hunt, occupied the attention of the boys for the first hour. The after-dinner exercises included songs and camp stories. "Bill" Torrey made the hit of the evening in his toast to "Everybody."" Each of the campers came in for a knock. "Willie" Michael responded to a toast, "the fair sex." Announcement was made that the 1911 camp would be held the first two weeks in July.

The College club play, "College chums" will be given in Alpha hall on the evening of April 18.

A dual meet between the Employed Boys and the Intermediates will be held on Monday, March 27.

The annual championship contests will be held Saturday evening, April 1, in the following events; 15 yards dash, three broad jumps, 12 pound shot put, potato race and 1000 yards run. The 440 yards run and the running broad jump will be held out of doors on Patriot's day April 19.

The annual banquet for gymnasium members wil lbe held on Apirl 6. Regular attendants at the Intermediate, Employed Boys, Senior and Business Men's classes will be admitted. The principal after-dinner speakers will be John I. Taylor of the Boston American baseball club, R. J. Roberts the veteran physical director of the Boston Y. M. C. A., and T. H. Russell of theY. M. C. A. athletic league. The medals, trophies and honor emblems will be awarded at that time.

LECTURE AT CITY HALL.

Public docks and a belt line railway are two subjects in which the public are generally interested, and they will be glad of the opportunity that is to be afforded them in the near future to hear these subjects discussed by one entirely familiar with the subject, for Mayor Shea has arranged for a free lecture on these important subjects to be given in Quincy. He has secured Henry C. Long, a well known Boston attorney, who has made a study of these subjects, and will present them to the public in a lecture to be given at City Hall, Friday evening, March 24. The lecture is one that he has given several times of late, and everywhere it has met with popular favor. It will be illustrated by numerous stereopticon views. Ladies as well as gentlemen are invited to attend the lecture and the subject is one that should insure Mr. Long an audience limited only to the capacity of the hall.

Plight of Woman Who Has Lived Here Twenty-Eight Years

New York, March 18.—Immigration authorities face an unusual problem in the case of Mrs. Emma Houkher of St. Louis, 56 years old. Recently she returned from a visit to her old home in England, but is without money for fare to Missouri.

Her husband, who is 74 years old, has sent word that he cannot supply the money, and since he has not been naturalized, notwithstanding his twenty-eight years' residence in St. Louis, the immigration officials may have to send the wife back to England.

"If It's a Ralston It's Correct"

It is knowledge rather than "knack" which enables a man to dress both correctly and becomingly.

No part of a man's apparel changes in style more often or more radically than does his shoes. That is the reason why men who care to be correctly shod and who are particular about their personal appearance insist on getting "Ralston Authority Styles." We carry a sufficient variety of correct styles to enable you to express your own individuality in your selection.

The new shoe fashions are almost always first shown in Ralston Shoes. Come in and see the season's latest.

FOUR KILLED IN FIRE

Disastrous Early Morning Blaze In a Boston Apartment House

Boston, March 18.—Four people are known to have perished in a fire in the four-story apartment house at 12 Truro street, early this morning. The list of victims is believed to be considerably larger.

The bodies of Mrs. Warden, her 4-year-old child, and of two unidentified persons have been found in the ruins.

One woman and a man were injured by jumping from upper story windows to escape the flames that cut off all other chance of escape.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Limantour's Peace Move Viewed With Some Distrust

IS MADE KNOWN TO MADERO

Insurrecto Secretary of State Says Diaz Must Retire Before Overture For Peace Can Be Considered—Outlines Demands of His Chief—No Secret as to Cabinet Changes by Diaz to Win Over Rebels

Washington, March 18.—Despite assurances that Senor Limantour, Mexican minister of finance, has started plans for the termination of the Mexican revolution, the revolutionary leaders, in reports from El Paso, declare the fighting will continue.

"There will be no pause in hostilities," said Gonzales Garza, insurrecto secretary of state. "With the threat of the Mexican government hanging over us that we will be shot without a trial, our fight for liberty and for the setting up permanently of the Madero government will continue. No overture for peace will be considered official by us until it has come from Mexico City, with a promise that Diaz will retire on the ground that his election was irregular."

The report of Limantour's exertion in behalf of peace, however, has created a profound impression in the insurgent ranks. It is known that a courier has been dispatched to the field to inform Francisco I. Madero, the revolutionary president, of the latest phase. Madero has already been made acquainted with the preliminaries. The terms must be such that if peace plans fail the insurrectos will not have lost any strength by the effort.

Garza, who acted here with Braulio Hermandez, insurrecto secretary of state of Chihuahua, outlined the demands of Madero, which he said were as follows:

"Abolition of the re-election of president.

"Election of the governors in a state instead of by federal appointment.

"Curtailment of the powers of mayors of cities and provision for their selection by popular vote instead of by appointment by the governors of states.

"Reform of the land laws, so that plantations, now as extensive as from one million to ten million acres, may be divided and distributed, or sold in small lots to the people.

"Free ballot in all elections and preservation of individual rights under the constitution.

"Extension of the school system."

Garza also made a statement which is taken to indicate that the insurrectos would not consent to the resumption of telegraph service and the repairing of railroads in Chihuahua and Sonora during the proceedings.

Mexicans in Washington in sympathy with the revolutionary movement in their country as well as the supporters of the federal government display intense interest in the movements of Limantour, whose return to Mexico City, it is expected, means not only important changes in the cabinet of President Diaz, but a possible solution of the political disorders of the land.

The importance of Limantour's return to the capital of Mexico, it is said, lies in the fact that coincident with certain changes in the cabinet of President Diaz, other reforms will be instituted in the local administration of various states calculated to appease the revolutionists. The fact that changes are to be made in the Mexican cabinet is no longer a secret in Mexico or in Washington, where the state department unofficially has been so informed.

EASTER CANDY SEIZED

Eggs, Peaches and Pears Made In Violation of Pure Food Law

Boston, March 18.—Thirty-six thousand Easter eggs made of candy, and 7000 peaches and pears made of the same sweet material, were seized by United States Deputy Marshal James Waters yesterday on complaint of the pure food inspectors, Drs. Adams and Raynor.

Both the eggs and the candy fruit, it is charged, were all coated with talc, which is made from ground soapstone, and gives the candy a shiny exterior.

TWO MILLION IRISH IN UNITED STATES

Massachusetts Is the Second State With 249,916

Washington, March 18.—Two million, in round numbers, is the approximate Irish-born population at present living in the United States. While these are not the official figures of the thirteenth census, it is a close estimate, based upon the 1900 census and the immigration and emigration of Irish-born immigrants during the ten years following.

There were exactly 1,619,449 Irish-born in the United States in 1900. New York had the most, there being 425,553 in the Empire State; Massachusetts came second with 249,916; Pennsylvania third, with 205,909; Illinois fourth, with 114,565, and New Jersey fifth, with 94,844.

Immigration from Ireland for the past ten years has been uniformly steady, averaging about 37,000 yearly. The population of Ireland estimated for 1909 was 4,374,158.

SYMPATHETIC STRIKE CALLED

Thirty-Five Hundred Man Join Adams Express Drivers

MAYOR GAYNOR IS ASTOUNDED

Says Action of Men Who Have Overridden Peace Proposals Is Criminal and Brutal—Turn of Events Not Pleasing to Older Employes of Big Express Companies—Teamsters May Be Called Out

New York, March 18.—Thirty-five hundred employes of the United States and Wells-Fargo express companies have thrown in their fortunes with the 1500 striking drivers of the Adams Express company.

This total was increased by the drivers of several smaller concerns, but the employes of the American and National companies stuck to their wagons, despite entreaties to join the movement and a threat by a union official that he would declare a "strike of everything on wheels" in the metropolitan district if the trouble was not adjusted by Monday night.

Mayor Gaynor was astounded when he learned that his peace proposals, accepted by the men, had been overridden by the Jersey City men at a midnight conference.

"This strike, is absolutely inexcusable," he told a delegation of the National and American drivers who appealed to him for protection. "Further than that," he added, "it is criminal and brutal. Do not be drawn into it. I shall have three policemen, if necessary, detailed to every one of your wagons."

Many drivers ordered out by the sympathetic strike were largely dissatisfied with the turn of events and a meeting has been called to discuss the matter. The older men complain that the sympathetic strike was called by boys.

The Adams, the United States and the Wells-Fargo companies moved their wagons under heavy police protection. Two hundred and fifty bluecoats blazed the way for the strike breakers in Jersey City. There was little disorder. One shot was fired during the day, and the number of drivers assaulted and beaten was half the usual number.

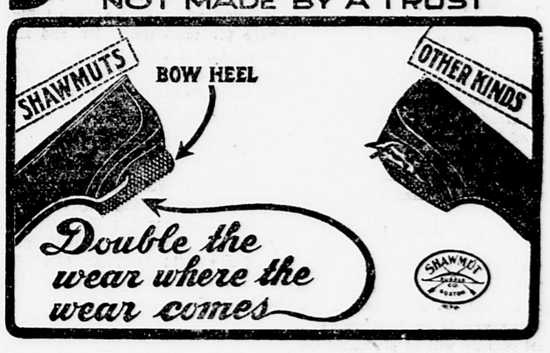

William H. Ashton, general organizer for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, said last night:

"If the strike is not ended within the next two or three days I will call a convention of the executive boards of Manhattan, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark and Yonkers to consider the question of a general teamsters' strike.

Endorsed at Home

Such Proof as This Should Convince Any Quincy Citizen.

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experience when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Quincy adds one more to the many cases of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

John R. Duffy, 14 Copeland St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I am so favorably impressed with Doan's Kidney Pills that it gives me pleasure to recommend them to anyone suffering from kidney complaint. I am fully convinced that this remedy will do all that it is claimed to do. If anyone would like to obtain further details regarding my case, I will be glad to answer any questions."

LAND COURT.

To the City of Quincy, a municipal corporation located in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; the Quincy Co-operative Bank, a duly existing corporation having its usual place of business in said Quincy; Henry D. Federhen, Caroline A. Read, Frances S. Barry, Emma T. Hersey, Rachel E. Hersey, Nancy J. Hayden, Henry A. Bushnell, Edward H. Bushnell, Charles W. Bushnell, Nellie B. Cook, sometimes called Nellie L. Cook, and Ellen J. Bushnell of said Quincy; Rebecca L. Federhen, individually and as Trustee, of Boston in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth; Georgiana P. Federhen and Herbert M. Federhen of said Boston, individually and as Trustees under the will of Herbert M. Federhen, deceased; Dorothy L. Peterson and Clarence H. Federhen of Brooklyn, in the State of New York; Mrs. William B. Kibbey of Marshalltown, in the State of Iowa; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Jessie Scoular and Daniel Scoular, Jr., of said Quincy, to register and confirm their title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Quincy, bounded southwesterly by Washington Street ninety three and 24-100 (93.24) feet; southeasterly by land of Henry D. Federhen et al two hundred and eighty-four and 97-100 (284.97) feet; northeasterly by land of the City of Quincy, of Emma T. Hersey and of Nancy J. Hayden, ninety-eight and 8-100 (98.08) feet; and northwesterly by land of Ellen J. Bushnell et al and of Nellie B. Cook, sometimes called Nellie L. Cook, two hundred and ninety-six and 20-100 (296.20) feet. Containing 27,748 square feet of land.

Petitioners claim as appurtenant to the above described land rights of way in Washington Street (public highway) as now established in common with others entitled thereto.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the twenty-seventh day of March A. D. 1911, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this second day of March in the year nineteen hundred and eleven.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics, but finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Gantry's playful mood fell away from him like a castoff garment.

"I don't quite believe I'd do that if I were you, Evan. There are pie eaters on both sides in every political contest, and, while they can't do any cause any great amount of good, they can often do a good bit of harm. I wouldn't be too hard on them if I were you."

"What would you do, or, rather, what did you do when you were managing the state campaign two years ago?" inquired Blount pointedly.

"I cut the pie," said the traffic manager simply.

"In other words, you let this riffraff blackmail you and incidentally put a big black mark against the company's good name."

"Oh, no; I wouldn't put it quite that strong. Not many of these little fellows ask or expect money. A free ride now and then on the railroad is about all they look for."

"But you can't give them that under the interstate commerce law," protested the purist.

"Not outside of the state, of course. But inside of the state boundaries it's our own business."

"You mean it was our own business previous to the passage of the state rate law two years ago," corrected Blount.

"It is our own business to this good day—in effect. That part of the law has been a complete dead letter from the day the governor signed it. Why, bless your innocent heart, Evan, the very men who argued the loudest and voted the most spitefully for it came to me for their return tickets home at the end of the session. Of course we kept the letter of the law. It says that no 'free passes' shall be given. We didn't issue passes. We merely gave them tickets out of the case and charged them up to 'expense.'"

"Faugh!" said Blount. "You make me sick. Gantry, it's that same childish whipping of the devil around the stump by the corporation, an expedient that wouldn't deceive the most ignorant voter that ever cast a ballot—it's that very thing that has stirred the whole nation up to this unreasonable fight against corporate capital. Don't you see it?"

Gantry shrugged his shoulders.

"I guess I take the line of the least resistance—like the majority of them," was the colorless reply. "When it comes to practical politics"—

"Don't say 'practical politics' to me, Dick," rasped the reformer. "We've got the strongest argument in the world in the fact that the present law is an unfair one, needing modification or repeal. We mustn't spoil that argument by becoming lawbreakers ourselves and descending to the methods of the grafters and the machine politicians the country over. If you have been sending these pie eaters to me, don't do it any more. I have no use for them, and they won't have any use for me after I open up on them."

"I don't believe I'd do anything rash," said Gantry.

Dating from this little heart to heart talk with the traffic manager, Blount began to carry out the new policy—"the starvation policy," as it soon came to be known among the would be henchmen. The result was not altogether reassuring.

Many of the small grafters were on the payrolls of the railroad company, and Blount was soon definitely assured of what he had before only suspected—that they were merely nominal employees, given a payroll standing so that there might be an excuse for giving them free transportation and a retainer in the form of wages, if needful.

In many cases the ramifications of the petty graft were exasperatingly intricate. For example, one Thomas Gryson, who was on the payrolls as a machinist's helper in the repair shops, demanded free transportation across the state for eight members of his "family." Questioned closely, he admitted that the "family" was his only by a figure of speech; that the relationship was entirely political.

Blount promptly refused to recommend the issuing of employees' passes for the eight, and the result was an immediate call from Bentley, the division master mechanic.

"About that fellow Gryson," Bentley began. "Can't you manage some way to get him transportation for his Jonesboro crowd? He is going to make trouble for us if you don't."

Blount was justly indignant. "Gryson is on your payroll," he retorted. "Why don't you recommend the passes on account of the motive power department, if he is entitled to them?"

"I can't," admitted the master mechanic. "I am held down to the issuing of passes to employees traveling on company business only. We can stretch it a little sometimes, of course, but we can't make it cover the whole earth."

"Neither can I," Blount exploded. "Let it be understood, once for all, Mr. Bentley, that I am not the scapegoat for all the other departments. I have cut it off short. I am not recommending passes for anybody."

"But, suffering Scott, Mr. Blount, we've simply got to take care of Tom Gryson! He's the boss of his ward, and he has influence enough to turn even our own employees against us!"

"Influence!" scoffed the young man from the east. "How does he acquire his influence? It is merely another illustration of the vicious circle. You put into his hands the price of the club with which he proceeds to knock you down. Let me tell you what I'm telling everybody. If we want a square deal we've got to set the example by being square."

The master mechanic went away, silenced, but not convinced. A week later Gryson, who in appearance was a typical tough and in reality was a postgraduate of the lawless mining camps of the Carnadine hills, sauntered into Blount's office with an insolent taunt in his mouth.

"Well, pardner, we got them dickey birds over to Jonesboro after so long a time, and no thanks to you, neither. I just blew in to tell you that I'm going to hit you again about day after tomorrow, and if you don't come across there's going to be something doing—see?"

Blount sprang from his chair and forgot to be politic.

"You needn't come to me the day after tomorrow or any other time," he raged. "I'm through with you and your tribe. Get out!"

After Gryson had gone, muttering threats and curses, the young campaign manager had an attack of moral nausea. It seemed such a huge waste of time and energy to traffic and chaffer with these petty scoundrels. Thus far every phase of the actual political problem seemed to be meanly degrading, and he was beginning to long keenly for an opportunity to do some really worthy thing.

Notwithstanding his ideals were still unshaken. He still clung to the belief that the corporation, which was created by the law and could exist only under the protection of the law, must of necessity be a law abiding entity. It was unfair to hold it responsible for the disreputable political methods of those whom it could never completely control.

It was on the day of Gryson's visit, as it chanced, that Blount was given his first opportunity of entering the wider field. A letter from one of the party chairmen in a distant mining town brought an invitation of the kind he had been waiting for. He was asked to participate in a joint debate at the campaign opening in the town in question, and he was so glad of the chance that he instantly wired his acceptance.

That evening at the cafe dinner at the Inter-Mountain he found his father waiting for him and in a burst of confidence told him of the invitation.

"That's good," was the senator's even toned comment. "Gives you a little chance to shine the way you can shine best, doesn't it?" Then, "That was one of the things McVickar wanted you for, wasn't it?"

"Why, yes. He intimated that there might be some public speaking," admitted the younger man.

"Well, what all are you going to tell these Ophir fellows when you get over there, son?" asked the veteran quizzically. "Going to offer 'em all free passes anywhere they want to go if they'll promise to vote for the railroad candidates?"

"Not this year," was the laughing reply. "As I told you a week or so ago we've stopped all that."

"McVickar has told you it was stopped?"

The newly fledged political manager tried to be strictly truthful.

"I have had but one interview with Mr. McVickar, but in that he gave me to understand that my recommendations would be given due consideration, and I have said my say pretty emphatically."

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

New England Folks said to be Apathetic Concerning the Preservation of Louisa Alcott's Home—A great National Flower Show Coming to the Hub — John the Orangeman's Donkey Loses Best Friend— March Gusts and Tittering Crowds Too Much for Man with Straw Hat—Unwomanly Smoking Room at Boston Woman's club May be no Pipe Dream.

The man with the straw hat is already here. He was a young man. It was a young hat, brand new, and the young man looked perfectly sane. By the time he had been accosted by about twenty people he decided he would postpone the rest of the trip, and ducked into a nearby doorway until the crowd dispersed. It takes a pretty courageous man to start the season, but the Boston girl has seen at least a dozen shiny new "straws" on the heads of her fair sisters for some days past.

Hubbites are looking forward to a great National Flower Show which will occur during the week of March 25 to Aprial 1. Boston will be the mecca of florists, horticulturists and flower lovers, who will crowd the Mechanics building in connection with the conventions of seven distinct societies of florists and ornamental horticulturists. Scotland, Holland, Belgium, Mexico, China, Japan, and India, as well as various parts of South America will contribute to the gorgeous display of flowers and plants. Prizes of more than $12,000 are offered to the most beautiful and artistic exhibitions. This is an event which brings people from all parts of New England on account of its marvellous beauty and the remarkable exhibits of unusual formations and products of experimentation.

The unfortunate Harvard mascot has lost another friend. "John the Orangeman's" donkey is mourning for John L. Sullivan, son-in-law of Harvard's famous pop-corn and candy and fruit peddler, who died a few days ago. Ever since "Old John" died a few years ago John's daughter and her husband, Mr. Sullivan, have taken good care of John's little old donkey, in memory of the much-beloved old man. "John the Orangeman," with his tall silk hat bound with a crimson sash, driving his donkey and two wheeled cart at all college baseball and football games, was famous at Harvard for over half a century. His name was John Lovett, and he had the sole privilege of peddling fruit on the college grounds and buildings. He knew hundreds of Harvard men, and always remembered their names when they hunted him up at class reunions and Commencement Day gatherings. The bereaved donkey, however, is assured of a home and loving care as long as he lives, for Mrs. Sullivan regards him as a member of the family.

Never mind where St. Patrick was born. The great double anniversary of the Americans driving the British out of Boston and St. Patrick driving the wiggly "varmint" out of Ireland has had all greater Boston looking to its southern member for some days. The Evacuation Day celebration in South Boston on March 17 has been planned to be the greatest ever known on the peninsula where General George Washington planted the cannon which scared Lord Howe and the British army out of Boston one hundred and thirty-five years ago. For many years Charlestown has celebrated Bunker Hill day as the greatest local event of the war of the Revolution, and it has been a holiday for all Boston. It is only of recent years, however, that much attention has been paid, even in South Boston, to Evacuation Day. Historically it is the more important event of the two, for when the Continental Army occupied Dorchester Heights the British ran away. They did not want to try to take the South Boston redoubt after their Bunker Hill experience. Banquets, a military parade, patriotic exercises in the schools, an illumination of the Dorchester Heights Monument, and many other festivities, including "open house" throughout the district, marked the occasion. Business was suspended entirely, and everybody had a royal good time.

One of the women foremost in the work of saving the famous Louisa Alcott homestead in Concord laments that while keen interest is expressed by readers of the "Little Women" series throughout the Middle West and other parts of this country the New England public is strangely apathetic. Shall New Englanders sit back and watch outsiders come in and take the honor of preserving to coming generations the beloved old Orchard House where "Amy's" little paintings and sketches may still be seen on the walls and woodwork, and where the little attic room became the scene of "Jo's" feverish endeavors to save the family from poverty by the use of her fertile brain and skilful pen? An incident which points the finger of shame upon our entire bookloving public occurred when an Englishman, recently visiting this country, made a special pilgrimage to Concord to visit the home of Louisa Alcott, whose books he said were widely read throughout his country. On arriving there he was confronted by boarded doors and was refused admittance because of the dangerous condition of the floorings and general decay of the fine old place. He was bitterly disappointed and plainly thought it no credit to Americans that such a literary landmark should have been allowed to go to ruin. The Concord Woman's Club is making a determined effort to raise money to buy the house and land in order that it may be placed in repair and maintained as an Alcott Memorial. And only to think that if every child who has read "Little Women" would give one cent the money would be at hand in the flick of an eyelash!

A smoking room for women in Boston! The Hub is all stirred up and the exclusive Back Bay social circles are turned into tangents by a proposed new venture just announced. The Women's Club on Boylston Street has organized an Assembly Tea Room Club of which the present British Tea Table will be the nucleus, and at which ladies may smoke their cigarettes while they sip tea and compare dress goods samples. The strange thing is that some of the most respected women in Boston are among the sponsors, though they deny any intention of participating in the smoking privileges. The old Puritans must turn in their graves beneath the Common to see what is going on across the ancient Frog Lane.

Ethel Angler.

FARMERS FORMING POTATO COMBINE

Boston "Speculators" Alarmed at the News From Maine

Boston, March 18.—Boston, the greatest potato center in the United States, is in danger of being gripped by the potato trust. Word was received here from Aroostook county, Me., that farmers in the Pine Tree State are planning the formation of a gigantic combine to control the potato business.

The potato growers look upon the "speculators" as the bane of their existence. But Maine ships to Boston annually many millions of bushels of potatoes, their value aggregating over $5,000,000.

The news of the new combine strikes Boston with peculiar force, for this city is the largest buyer and seller of potatoes in the world. Most of the potatoes handled here come from Maine.

Record Cow Is Butchered and Dressed at Brighton Abattoir

Boston, March 18.—The largest beef ever dressed for market in the east was slaughtered yesterday by the Brighton Dressed Meat company at the Brighton abattoir. The animal weighed more than 2100 pounds live weight, and dressed 1185 pounds, the hindquarters weighing 629 pounds, and the forequarters 556 pounds. The hide weighed 122 pounds.

The cow was received from the Chicago stock yards and its record size opened the eyes of the oldest marketman. As a rule, cows dressing from 800 to 900 pounds are a rarity, while steers seldom reach the 1100 mark.

SUNNY MONDAY

There is not an ounce of rosin in Sunny Monday Laundry Soap. Rosin is used in all other laundry soaps—because it is cheaper than the fats and oils used in Sunny Monday. Sunny Monday costs more to manufacture than any other laundry soap of which we know. It is kind to clothes—will not shrink flannels or woolens, or turn clothes yellow.

Sunny Monday is just as pure as its whiteness indicates; it is the safest and most economical laundry soap you can use.

The Catholic Lyceum at Houghs Neck observed St. Patricks day with a banquet in the clubhouse. James P. A. Purcell was the toastmaster and the speakers included Dennis D. Driscoll, Charles L. Shea, Daniel J. Maloney, James E. Wall and L. P. Noonan.

The C. E. society of the Calvary Baptist church held a very enjoyable social in the church vestry Friday evening with an attendance of nearly fifty. The committee had the room prettily decorated in red with C. E. monograhms cut out of white cardboard appearing in contrast. Games of all descriptions were enjoyed during the first part of the evening, after which refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served. The committee was Miss Blodwen Walters and Miss Abbie Livingston.

Actor Friend (inquiring at boarding-house): "Has Mr. Comedy taken his departure yet?"

"Yes," snapped the landlady, "but that's all he did take. I've got his wardrobe."

BASKET BALL AT WOODWARD

Sophomores May Now Challenge the Seniors

The Woodward freshmen were eliminated in the basketball series for the cup, by a defeat at the hands of the Sophomores on Friday, by a score of 12 to 3. Lillian Ekstrand was the star of the game, with a record of five baskets. Helen Bishop shot the only basket from the floor for the freshmen. Blanche Hayden shot a goal from a free try.

The summary:

WOODWARD '13		WOODWARD '14
C. Shand, rf	lb	M. McPherson
L. Ekstrand, lf	rb	K. Adams
M. Peterson, c	c,	Alice Beal
D. Lavery, cg	cg	L. McDonnell
M. O'Neil rb	lf	Helen Bishop
M. Callahan lb	rf	Blanche Hayden

As a result of this game the Sophomores have a right to challenge the seniors for the championship of the school. The winner of the final series will have its numerals inscribed on the cup and will hold it until next year.

DARLING MEMORIAL.

At the meeting of the Massachusetts Daughters of the Revolution yesterday Mrs. Nelson V. Titus offered a suggestion that when the subject of new work comes up at the convention of the general society, the recommendation be made by the state society of Massachusetts for a memorial to the founder and first president general of the Daughters of the Revolution—Mrs. Flora Adams Darling who was a member of Adams chapter. She suggested that this memorial take the form of a scholarship in the Williams and Mary College of Virginia. This matter was referred to the committee on appeals.

"Have you read that article on how to tell a bad egg?"

"No, I haven't, but my advice would be, if you have anything important to tell a bad egg, why break it gently."

HUNT BOYS PLEAD GUILTY

Wayward Career of Boston Lads Checked by Arm of Law

Boston, March 18.—Rarely have two such youthful prisoners appeared in a local court to plead to such serious charges as did Harry E. and Fred Hunt in the superior court before Judge Stevens. Charged with having committed many breaks in downtown buildings, they each pleaded guilty, and will be sentenced Monday.

Harry, only 20 years of age, his brother 15, confessed to having broken into dozens of buildings. Not only did they gather a great amount of loot, but they seemed possessed of the spirit of destruction, smashing woodwork and furniture in addition to carrying away whatever struck their fancy.

Annie J. Wunder, who was arrested on the charge of having received the goods which they stole, was sentenced to the woman's reformatory at Sherborn.

BALL PARK BURNED

Washington Grounds May Not Be Ready When Season Opens

Washington, March 18.—The American league baseball park was destroyed by fire. Flames, starting from a plumber's blowpipe, spread rapidly over the grandstands and bleachers, and practically all of them were burned.

The damage is estimated at $50,000. Two old hospital structures nearby were also burned to the ground.

The Bostons are scheduled to open the season with the Senators on the Washington grounds on April 12. If the Washington club is unable to get its new stands up by that date, it is quite likely that the opening series will be transferred and played at Boston.

RICH WOMAN AND HER DAUGHTER SEARCHED

Undergo Humiliating Experience on the Lusitania

New York, March 18.—Mrs. Joseph Hull, wife of the president of the Merchants' National bank in Savannah, Ga., and the head of many big concerns, and her daughter, Elizabeth L. Hull, were the victims on their arrival on the steamship Lusitania of one of the most remarkable hunts for a diamond necklace by treasury agents in the history of the customs department.

Under the decision of Special Treasury Agent Wilson, Mrs. Hull and her daughter were taken back on the steamship and forced to disrobe. Their shoes and stockings, and even their hair were searched for the gems which the treasury agents believed the family had purchased on the other side and were trying to smuggle into this country.

A few trinkets that had been undervalued to the extent of a few hundred dollars were found in their trunks, but there was no sign of the necklace. Mrs. Hull and her daughter were in tears when the search was ended.

HUNTING DE COU'S SLAYERS

Three Squads of Soldiers Are Sent After Two Arab Murderers

Constantinople, March 18.—The British consul at Bengazi, a town of Africa, in Barca, who is looking after the American interests, telegraphs that the motive for the murder of H. F. De Cou, a prominent American archaeologist, by Arabs at Cyrene, is not known.

The governor has dispatched forty soldiers from Dorna, thirty from Bengazi and a small number from Bersis, with orders to arrest the two Arab murderers, who are known to the authorities.

TO MAKE HIM "MANLY MAN"

Judge Sentences Incorrigible Boy to Enlist In the Navy

Chicago, March 18.—Leo Niewerowski, 16 years old, an incorrigible, was sentenced to enlist in the United States navy by Judge Pinkney in the juvenile court.

"The navy will make a manly man of him," the judge told the boy's father. "When he completes his service you will be proud of him. I don't want to send him to a reform school."

Evacuation Day Celebration

Boston, March 18.—Six thousand men, over whom waved the Stars and Stripes and Erin's banner, marched through South Boston's streets yesterday afternoon. Thousands of citizens thronged the line of march to celebrate the day when 12,000 British troops fled before the attack of 2000 Americans, and the day which is sacred to Ireland's patron saint.

Steamer Burns In the Thames

London, March 18.—The Furniss line freight steamer North Point, for Philadelphia, was destroyed by fire in the Thames two hours after she left her wharf. The crew of forty were taken off in safety after the vessel had been beached.

China Raises Liquor Duties

Hong Kong, March 18.—The government has increased the duties on foreign liquors 60 cents a gallon on the average and doubled the duties on native wines.

KILLS GIRL AND SELF

Double Crime of Young Spaniard Who Was Disappointed In Love

Orange, N. J., March 18.—Jose Boveda, a Spaniard, 26 years old, shot and killed Miss Iva Reed, aged 20 years, in the offices of the Edison National Phonograph company, and then killed himself.

Miss Reed was a stenographer for the company and had spurned the attentions of Boveda, who had been a clerk in the same office until six weeks ago, when he was discharged because Miss Reed had complained of his unwelcome attentions.

Boveda called at the offices yesterday afternoon. When Miss Reed saw him she ran, screaming, from the room. Boveda followed and overtook her and fired one shot. The bullet entered the brain and she fell dead. Boveda fired a bullet into his own head and dropped dead on the body of Miss Reed.

THE PERRY AN ICEBERG

Halifax-Boston Steamer Had a Most Trying Time In Gale

Boston, March 18.—The Plant line steamship A. W. Perry, ice coated and eighteen and one-half hours overdue from Halifax, arrived here yesterday. She brought twenty-eight passengers and a crew of forty, few of whom slept during the seventy-mile gale the Perry encountered. For twenty-four hours waves broke over the deck and even over the funnel.

Captain Hawes had not slept since his ship sailed out of Halifax. Most of the passengers looked haggard from seasickness.

The pilot house was encased in ice a foot thick. Every part of her rigging was caked with a crystal covering. Axes were used to chop this away. A gangway had to be cut so that the passengers could come ashore.

WOLGAST WHIPS MEMSIC

Referee Stops Lightweight Bout In the Ninth Round

Los Angeles, Cal., March 18.—Ad Wolgast retained his title of lightweight champion in his scheduled twenty-round fight with George Memsic of Los Angeles at the Vernon arena. He virtually knocked Memsic out and caused the referee to stop the fight in the ninth round.

Wolgast outclassed Memsic from start to finish, and the result was never in doubt. The Los Angeles man was helpless.

Last evening Wolgast, Memsic, Referee Eyton and Promoter McCarey were placed under arrest, charged with engaging in and aiding and abetting a prize fight.

FIRE DEPARTMENT WAS HELPLESS

Unable to Get Water and Large Barn on Mill Street Is Destroyed

Heavy Rain Only Prevented a Much Greater Loss

Thanks to the heavy rain of Sunday evening, Quincy escaped a serious conflagration. It is not often that Quincy gets caught that way, but for some reason the fire department was unable to get a fire stream either from the hydrant at the junction of Mill and Pond streets, or the one nearer the lumber yard. After the doomed building was flat the steamer did move to a hydrant on Pond street toward Washington street and obtained some water to put out the embers.

The scene of the fire was a good-sized barn on the Sweeney estate on Mill street, at the corner of Vine street, the occupants of the estate being John Hynes. The barn was only ten feet from the house, and about 25 feet away was the kiln dried shed of the Johnson Lumber Company, and only fifty feet away a huge pile of new shingles. The fire started from an incabator in the barn.

Mr. Hynes was away at the time, and his mother, a woman of 70 years, had difficulty in arousing and rescueing two grandchildren of 10 and 8 years who were asleep. The house at the time was filled with smoke.

Only the barn was burned, but nothing is left of that. The most effective stream played on the roof of the house was a chemical stream from Combination 1. Assistant Engineer Packard was in charge. While the fire department came in for considerable censure from the large number of men and women who stood in the rain, they were helpless and did the best possible under the circumstances. Three lines of hose were laid.

The barn was practically unoccupied but hens and chickens lost their lives, and some tools were destroyed. Loss $1,000.

Commissioner Bainbridge when asked this morning in regard to the lack of water pressure on Mill street at the fire Sunday night said that it was probably due to the small main that is laid on that street. The main that runs through this street is a four inch main. It comes from a ten inch main on Washington street and comes to a dead end near the lumber wharf.

While if two lines of hose was attached to the hydrant it would be impossible to get any amount of water, Commissioner Bainbridge said that the hydrant would furnish enough water to supply a steamer which could give it the desired pressure.

If at the fire Sunday night a line of hose was attached to the hydrant in addition to the steamer he would not be surprised at the lack of pressure. Commissioner Bainbridge also said that if a line of hose was attached to the hydrant at the end of the line but very little pressure would be obtained and that but a very short stream of water could be obtained unless the steamer was used.

Commissioner Bainbridge visited the scene this morning and says that he found the hydrants all right and that the only trouble was the smallness of the main. He further said that a larger main would be laid in Mill street immediately.

District Chief Packard, when interviewed by the Daily Ledger this noon, said at no time was there water enough at either of the two hydrants nearest the fire to play one fire stream. Neither was there enough to supply the steamer alone. The little water that came was very muddy.

THE NEW SEALER.

James M. Cantfill, the newly appointed sealer of weights and measures, went onto his job this morning, and will immediately begin to make a round of the city to seal all weights and measures. Today he is in consultation with the State sealer getting points, and says that tomorrow morning he will start in and keep at it until everything is sealed.

CITY COUNCIL TONIGT.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held tonight, at which meeting the Finance Committee will probably report the annual appropriation order. The debate of the evening will probably be on the order relative to a half holiday, during June, July and August, for City laborers and mechanics. This order was taken from the Finance committee at the last meeting, and a substitute order offered. This order is now in the calendar and will come up for its second reading tonight. It is also understood that the School Committee will send a communication to the Council recommending the purchase of a lot of land on Water street for a new Adams school building.

BORROWING CAPACITY SMALL

Total Debt of the City Now Over Two Million

City Auditor Henry O. Fairbanks was recently called upon in connection with the new water loan to prepare a financial statement of the valuation, borrowing capacity and debt of the city on March 1, 1911.

This statement showed a very very small borrowing capacity (only $82,031) on March 1. It shows also that the total debt of the city has passed the two million dollar mark.

Inasmuch as the city should always have a leeway of $50,000 in its borrowing capacity, the City Council of 1911 will find it necessary to check all appropriation orders which call for loans.

Here are the figures of the City Auditor:

1908 Net Valuation	$28,014,034
1909 Net Valuation	31,118,635
1910 Net Valuation	32,319,555
Total three years	$91,452,224
Average three years	$30,484,075
Two and one-half per cent limit	$762,101
Debt January 2, 1911	571,570
Borrowing capacity January 2, 1911	$190,531

STRICKEN DOWN.

John S. Krocher, collector for the Johnson Lumber Company passed away this noon at 38 Revere road. He sustained a shock Sunday afternoon while on Foster street and fell, immediately becoming unconscious. He was taken to the Elks club and a physician summoned, and later taken to his home. He remained unconscious all night and was still unconscious this morning. The physician called said he had brust a blood vessel in the head which had caused the shock.

He continued unconscious all the morning and passed away shortly after 12 o'colck.

Mr. Krocher has been a resident of Quincy for a number of years. He was for some years employed by the New York and Boston Dispatch Express Co., as agent at their Quincy office, later taking charge of the Quincy Point office of the Gallagher Express Co. For some time past, however, he has been employed by the Johnson Lumber Company as collector. He was about 50 years of age and a member of Quincy lodge of Elks. He leaves a widow.

—Somerville's tuberculosis hospital is ready for use, the building is completed, the beds are made up, and this city is prepared to scientifically care for its people who have fallen under the ban of the great white plague. The public-spirited men and women who educated public sentiment, and the city government which acted on this question, will obtain their reward in the results which medical authorities confidently anticipate. Tuberculosis thrives and spreads under certain conditions, and yields and frequently totally succumbs to others. The new hospital not only gives a chance for recovery to the patients, but rescues from dangerous exposure many well persons. It is a civic improvement of a most practical nature, for human life is the most important asset of a municipality or nation.—Somerville Journal.

GAMES OF ALL KINDS.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Sargent of Elm street entertained about twenty friends Saturday evening in a most original and delightful manner. Games of many kinds were indulged in and the various victors were awarded prizes. The gentleman scoring the largest number of total points in all the contests, was given a prize for his wife. Mrs. I. M. Whittemore was the grand prize winner of the evening. The guests were in a constant state of laughter from the time the first victory was won till the witching hour of twelve, when all voted the evening to be one of the most enjoyable spent for many moons. A delightful chafing dish supper ended the festivities.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE PROTEST.

The resolution adopted at the special meeting of the School Committee read as follows:

"Inasmuch as the authority of the School Committee in the construction of school buildings ceases with the adoption of the plans and in view of the past unsatisfactory experiences of the city with the contractor, who is at present the lowest bidder for the construction of the Montclair School,

"Resolved, that the School Committee desires to register an emphatic protest against the contract for the Montclair building being awarded to said contractor and recommends that it be not so awarded."

NEIGHBORHOOD MEETING.

A neighborhood meeting was held in the Wollaston Unitarian church by the Young People's Religious Union on Sunday evening. Unions from Braintree, Quincy, Neponset and Dorchester being invited. The evening opened with a devotional service in charge of the president J. Harry Hooper, Rev. Charles W. Casson of Dorchester delivered the address of the evening, his subject being "A person of influence."

The speaker called attention to the vast heritage the individuals of the present day have received from past generations. We are also dictators of the future and factors of the present. As a minute bolt or screw is necessary to a massive machine, so everyone of us, no matter how unimportant he feels has his part to play in the world. He urged everyone to use his life for the best that was in it.

Vocal solos by Miss Capwell of Boston, accompanied on the organ by William E. Weston were enjoyed. Following the service those present met informally in the vestry where refreshments were served by a hospitality committee consisting of Miss Almira E. Simmons, J. Harry Hooper, Louise B. Weston, Miss Marion Browne, Miss Helen Browne, Miss Margaret Hall, Leon D. Browne, Winslow Weston, Raymond Hall, Miss Bertha Polk, Miss Mildred Polk and Kenneth Wood.

NEW MILTON PASTOR.

Rev. J. Hamilton Woodsum who has been called to and accepted the pastorate of the First Baptist church of East Milton will take up his work there on Saturday, March 25.

Mr. Woodsum was born in Roxbury, where he received his early education. He was graduated from the Newton theological institution in 1900, receiving gthe degree of BD. Previous to his course at Newton Mr. Woodsum was assistant pastor of the Second Baptist church in Rochester, N. Y.

Since completing his studies at Newton he has had two pastorates, the first at Hyannis and the second in Boston, at the Harvard street Baptist church during 1908-1910. This church disbanded about a year ago, the change in population in the vicinity making a readjustment of the work necessary.

For some time Mr. Woodsum has been active in Sunday school work, especially in the adult departments and in the men's Bible class movement. He is the secretary of the parade, which is to be the opening feature of "The World in Boston," the missionary exposition to be held in Mechanics building April 23 to May 20.

PNEUMONIA FATAL.

Enoch H. Doble, West Quincy's oldest business man, died Sunday morning at his home, 52 Cross street from the after effects of pneumonia, which seized him two weeks ago. Last Monday Mr. Doble passed his 90th milestone, the event being marked by a family gathering at his home.

Mr. Doble at that time was recovering from an attack of pneumonia and indications pointed to his recovery. The disease left a weak heart, however, and he failed gradually until the end.

Mr. Doble was born in Lawrence, Me., March 13, 1821. He came to West Quincy in 1855 and opened a general grocery store, which he has since carried on. He continued to add to his business until at the time of his death he had the largest store in West Quincy, carrying provisions, dry goods, boots and shoes as well as groceries.

For many years Mr. Doble was a trustee and one of the prominent workers in the Hall Place Methodist Episcopal church. Although often pressed to hold public office Mr. Doble consistently refused.

He leaves four sons, Herbert F. Doble, William H. Doble, Dr. Ernest E. Doble and Arthur H. Doble. Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon from his late home.

TODAY'S COURT.

Oliver A. Sullivan of Holbrook was fined $15, Bernard Carney of Randolph $15, Daniel J. Callahan of Weymouth $10, and Joseph O. Gaillardt of Weymouth $10, for drunkenness.

John P. Brady was arraigned for drunkenness at Randolph. Case continued until May 1.

Robert Q. Dean was arraigned for loitering at the Quincy depot, and was fined $10.

—A bill has been favorably reported to the house, which provides for the establishment of school savings banks and authorizes savings banks to appoint agents to receive deposits from school children. The bill is intended to encourage thrift among the children and to safeguard its results. The bill was presented upon recommendation of Bank Commissioner Chapin.—Chelsea Record.

ODD FELLOWS SERVICE.

The funeral of William S. Williams, one of South Quincy's prominent citizens, was held Saturday afternoon from his late residence on Pleasant street, and was very largely attended. Large delegations from Mt. Wollaston lodge, Shalom encampment and Canton Shawmut were present.

The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy of the Bethany church. During the services John Jones sang, "O spirit freed from earth," and "Abide with Me." A double quartette composed of Welch people sang a selection in their native tongue, entitled "Bydd Mydd of ryfeddodea," which in English means "The dawn of the morning." After the regular services the Odd Fellows burial service was read by Noble Grand William H. Walker and Chaplain Richard Bishop.

The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery the bearers being William H. Walker, Arthur H. Dunstan, Newman A. Savage, Frank L. Carlton, A. R. Smith and William Paterson. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

IN A PREDICAMENT.

It was reported to the police Saturdayday night that a horse and cab driven by a man named Kebal had been lost at Squantum. Kebal drove some parties from Boston to Squantum, and was asked into the house to warm up. When he came out to return to Boston he found the outfit gone. He spent a good part of the night looking for it, but could not find it. Early Sunday morning the horse was found tied to a tree near the end of the street car line. Word was sent to the police station, and Officer Larkin went down and brought the rig to Quincy, when it was later claimed by the owner.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Is Diaz also a "Lame duck?"

Of primary importance,—remember April 4th.

A sad, sad summer for the Chautauquas, with Champ Clark, so busy.

The Government has ordered 500 mules to the front; it looks like business for Missouri.

We could not approve of any war, lightly undertaken, just at the advent of the fishing season.

Mr. Woodrow Wilson having dined with Mr. Bryan may expect to be under suspicion of having borrowed ideas which he may hereafter promulgate.

The new Maxim explosive is doubtless presented to give peace advocates new hope in the theory that war can be made too terrible to be attempted.

In an indirect way the Daily Ledger has learned that a hearing will be given at the State House on Wednesday at 10.30 on the bill authorizing an appropriation for the Old Colony boulevard from South Station, Boston to Quincy and the South Shore. The location favored by the Metropolitan Park Commission and the "Big Four" commission calls for the rebuilding of the present Neponset bridge, between Neponset and Atlantic. The City Council and Quincy Board of Trade have appointed committees to appear in favor of a relocation of the proposed boulevard wholly on the east side of the railroad. The route from Boston to Pope's Hill station is now on the east, and for many reasons it is desirable that the boulevard should not cross the railroad, but shall continue almost straight to the Neponset river and cross by a new bridge and intersect the Quincy Shore reservation near Squantum street Quincy. We understand this avenue is not designed as a restricted parkway, but for a new direct route for travel between Boston and the South Shore.

The only objection raised is against cutting off the railroad from the water front, but nothing of that sort is desired. On the other hand the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. own all the Quincy side of the Neponset river, and do not intend that docks shall be established except by themselves. Only one location has been proposed between Boston and Harrison Square and that is along Calf Pasture on the EAST side of the railroad.

GOVERNMENT AND CORPORATIONS

The Supreme Court decision sustaining the corporation tax law permits the government to tighten its grip on those slippery octopuses which have so many times wriggled out of the hands of the law. The $27,650,000 revenue so far collected is clean money. Its first result is not to adulterate the poor man's sugar or weaken his coffee, but it draws first and foremost upon the golden coffers of wealth.

Much has been said of the unfair treatment given the smaller corporations, by making public their accounts to the possible inspection of competitors. But small corporations that feel this handicap, have the alternative of returning to the partnership from under which their competitors are working.

Small corporations, made up of a few individuals, have no doubt so handled their returns, that they are paying but a trifling tax. Such concerns, with a net income of but $236,000,000, report a total capital of $6,088,000,000. That is they claim to be paying less than four per cent. Who believes the average small corporation is doing business at less than savings bank rate?

The majority of these returns may be fair enough, as a small group of them probably increase their salary charge and diminish their dividend returns, a mere matter of book-keeping. Even at that the salaries paid may not be large.

Such juggling of figures would be stopped in the bigger corporations by a growing sentiment against fancy salaries. The fact that the big financial corporations showed a net income of $395,000,000 on a capital of $2,723,000,000, or over 14 per cent, suggests that this is as fair a tax as the national government ever devised.

The government has spent millions in measuring the height of every little hill and the depth of every stream, while vast industrial forces have been allowed to burn, ravish, and pillage at will. The time has come when they must walk up to the office regularly and similingly and give account of themselves like the railroads.

OLD COLONY BOULEVARD.

Brockton is opposed to the Old Colony boulevard from Boston to the South Shore. The Enterprise says:

"Brockton is directly concerned in some of the legislative hearings scheduled for this week. Chief among these is the so-called Neponset bridge hearing Wednesday forenoon at 10.30. City Solicitor Winfield M. Wilbar and City Engineer C. R. Felton will attend, also as many as possible of the Plymouth county members of the House and Senate, all of whom will oppose the plan to assess Plymouth county for a part of the cost of the bridge.

Mr. Wilbar will reply to the recent letter issued by Harvey H. Pratt, describing Brockton as "parsimonious."

Mr. Felton will present plans showing that the nearest Plymouth county town is more than 10 miles from the bridge and that the direct route from Brockton to Boston and the one used for practically all traffic, is by way of Randolph and Mattapan.

HOBSON'S HOBBY

Says Yellow Men Will Get America Unless We Keep on Guard

Portland, Me, March 20.—"Here in America we are making the last stand of the white race. Eight hundred thousand yellow men in the Far East want America, and if this generation is robbed of its virility the next generation will hear the hoof beats of the yellow man's horse and the nation will perish," declared Congressman Hobson in an address delivered here.

"So long as the men of this country maintain their manhood we are safe from the yellow peril, and I believe that the verdict of the people will be that the 'great destroyer' of manhood, the liquor traffic, must itself be destroyed," he said.

The meeting at which Hobson was a speaker was held under the auspices of the Women's Christian Temperance union.

Bath Proves Fatal to Man Long Afflicted With Rheumatism

Philadelphia, March 20.—Isaac Schnieder took his first real both in two years yesterday and it killed him.

For many years he had been a sufferer from rheumatism and friends had warned him against letting water touch his skin. He kept clean by constantly rubing his body with powder.

He met another friend who informed him that water was a splendid rheumatism cure. Schnieder immediately went to a Walnut street Turkish bath, where he proceeded to plunge into the pool. Friends assisted him to the edge, and before a physician could be summoned he was dead.

HELD FOR KILLING FATHER AND MOTHER

Connecticut Man Admits Slaying His Paternal Parent

Ansonia, Conn., March 20.—Thomas Fitzgibbons and his wife, Nora, were found in their home on Division street with their skulls crushed in with an axe and the house on fire.

Their son, Thomas, Jr., is being held by the police, charged with the double murder, though according to the story told by him to the police, his father killed his mother and he in turn killed his father.

The son has two slight scalp wounds which he said he received when he took the axe away from his father, but according to the medical examiner the wounds were probably self-inflicted.

Young Fitzgibbons, who was released from the state asylup for the insane a year ago and since that time had been working in Schenectady, N. Y., says he returned home a week ago.

Buffalo, March 20.—Two persons were killed and four were injured when a Lackawanna passenger train running at high speed dashed into a street car at a grade crossing on Clinton streeet. The trolley car was cut in two.

AMERICA NAMED IN FRENCH TOWN

Little Town of St. Die to Celebrate Fact.

WESTERN WORLD GODMOTHER

Learned Followers of Gutenberg Honored Amerigo Vespucci In 1507 by Using His Name as Title For Recently Discovered Continent For First Time In History of Earth.

The little town of St. Die, in the Vosges department of France, is preparing to celebrate the fact that in a book printed there the name America was first given to the western world. M. Pichon, minister of foreign affairs, is to preside at the celebration and to represent the French government.

In the fifteenth century there existed at St. Die a college of learned canons who formed the Gymnase Vosgien, which became famous and attracted many scholars to the town. About 1507, or some thirty-five years after the death of Gutenberg, this society determined to set up a printing machine, the first or possibly the second installed in the province of Lorraine.

Two learned strangers who had recently arrived in the country encouraged the canons in their undertaking, furnishing some of the money needed and supervising the work. These strangers were Martin Waldseemuller of Fribourg-en-Brisgau, a noted geographer, and Mathias Ringmann, born at Val d'Orbey, a schoolmaster from Strasburg, aged twenty-five.

Lorraine Assists In Work.

The printing shop was established in a house on the Place Pierre Hardie, now called the Place Jules Ferry. The Duke of Lorraine, Rene II., looked with favor on the undertaking, and having received from Italy a description in French entitled "Quatre Navigations d'Americ Vespuce" he passed it over to Canon Jean Basin de Sandancourt for translation into Latin.

At this time Waldseemuller and Ringmann were at work on a reproduction of Ptolemy's treatise on geography, to which they were adding a preface entitled "Cosmographiae Introductio." They determined to incorporate the story of Amerigo Vespucci's voyages into this work, and Ringmann, who was acting as editor, wrote an introduction beginning:

"There is a fourth quarter of the world which Amerigo Vespucci has discovered and which for this reason we can call 'America,' or the land of Americo."

Further on he wrote:

"We do not see why the name of the man of genius, Amerigo, who has discovered them, should not be given to these lands, as Europe and Asia have adopted the names of women."

Books Bring High Prices.

The work appeared on April 25, 1507, under the title "Cosmographiae Introductio." It went through three editions, and copies nowadays bring high prices, over $600. Something like a dozen are known to exist, but the library of St. Die, though rich in rare black letters, does not possess a copy.

The town of St. Die has often been recognized as the godmother of America. In July, 1875, Henri Bardy, president of the Vosgian Philomathic society, was invited to the international congress of Americanists as the representative of the little town.

In 1891 Frank Mason, now consul general at Paris, published a work on "The Baptismal Font of America," and in 1892 a special hall was reserved at the Chicago universal exhibition for St. Die, where with many views of the town a copy of the celebrated work was shown, open at page 30, where the name "America" first made its appearance.

JUDGE IN MASQUERADE GARB.

Hears Verdict While Costumed, and Lawyers Will Appeal.

The fact that Judge Charles Henderson appeared in a masquerade costume impersonating George Washington while he was receiving a verdict of guilty in the murder case of Charles Burton at Bloomfield, Ind., will be used by Burton's attorneys as the basis of a petition for a new trial. Burton was convicted of manslaughter.

It happened that when Judge Henderson was called to hear the verdict he was attending a masquerade party. He was costumed in silk knickerbockers, white stockings, fancy slippers with silver buckles, laces and ruffs, swallowtail coat and a powdered wig. Removing only his wig, he hastened to the courtroom and heard the verdict.

The question has been brought up, May a judge appear on the bench in "disguise?" Burton's attorneys believe that the verdict can be set aside because Judge Henderson, who is a Republican leader in Indiana, appeared while impersonating George Washington.

Rice Not Chinese National Diet.

Many persons fancy that the entire Chinese people depend on rice as the main article of diet, but there are millions in central and north China that have never tasted rice, and to other millions it is more of a luxury than wheat.

HAMMOND SUED FOR $1.500,000

Sully Charges Conspiracy to Defame His Character

SIX CO-DEFENDANTS NAMED

Sale of Newly Invented Cotton Gin to Englishmen Said to Have Been Prevented, Being Followed by Similar Action With Southern Syndicate—"Cotton King" Claims That His Reputation Has Been Damaged

Washington, March 20.—Daniel J. Sully, once famous as the "cotton king," filed suit in the supreme court of the District of Columbia against John H. Hammond, seeking $1,500,000 damages for alleged conspiracy to defame his character in connection with the exploiting of the Doremus cotton gin, a recent improvement.

Hammond has just been appointed special ambassasdor of this country at the coronation of George V. He resides in Gloucester, Mass.

Sully was in Washington endeavoring to serve subpoenas upon Hammond and his co-defendants, including Harris Hammond, F. S. Bright, D. B. Atherton, J. H. Miller and W. W. Baldwin, all of New York, and G. S. Dalgleish, agent for the Hirsch syndicate of London.

Efforts to sell the Doremus cotton gin, invented by Willard Doremus of Washington and said by Sully and experts to insure a revolution of the cotton industry, are back of the suit. Sully declares he had sold the European and the American rights to British capitalists, when Hammond and his associates, by representations to the Englishmen, caused them to break off negotiations. Sully asserts that afterward he was closing contracts with a southern syndicate for the American patent rights when Hammond again spoiled his deal.

Hammond and his faction are now dealing with the Hirsch syndicate, with prospects of success in a "freeze out" of Sully and the Doremus interests, Sully charges. By representations of Hammond to the English capitalists and later to the American syndicate that Sully had no authority to sell the patent, although he was syndicate manager, Sully says, his reputation has been damaged to the extent of $1,500,000.

How he and Hammond formed the gigantic corporation, the General Cotton Securties company, known as the "cotton trust," to promote the Doremus gin, was recited by Sully.

COAL MINERS QUIT WORK

Ten Thousand In Ohio Go Out In a Sympathetic Strike

Columbus, O., March 20.—Ten thousand coal miners in eastern Ohio mines went on strike by order of the international executive board of the United Mine Workers of America. The strike is called in sympathy with the 2000 miners of the Tuscarawas field district who have been on strike since last May.

President Lewis, it is said, will take personal charge of the strike when he returns from Indianapolis. The miners say they are well prepared for a strike, having a fund of $500,000 which will be expended if necessary in order to win.

TAFT'S SPECIAL MESSAGE

It Will Be Confined to Reciprocity and Tariff Commission

Washington, March 20.—President Taft, according to present plans, will confine his message to the extra session of Congress to be convened on April 4 to Canadian reciprocity and to the establishment of a permanent tariff board.

The president is convinced that the country desires and ought to desire a further revision of the schedules of the Payne-Aldrich act. He feels that the woolen schedule, schedule K, is particularly indefensible.

It is said that he is anxious that it shall be revised at an early date.

"HOW TO BE HAPPY"

Dispenser of Good Advice Tries to Kill Himself With Poison

Los Angeles, Cal., March 20.—L. R. Andrews, author of "How to Be Happy," took a large dose of arsenic and is on the verge of death. He left a farewell message to his five children, giving as the principal reason for his act the fact that he had not been able to "make good."

By the irony of fate the only piece of paper at hand on which to pen his last note was a handbill advertising his optimistic book.

Pension For Railroad Employes

Portsmouth, N. H., March 20.—At a meeting of the directors of the Boston and Maine railroad the board acted favorably on twenty-five applicants who asked retirement with a pension.

Paterson Theatre Burned

Paterson, N. J., March 20.—The Folly theatre, a burlesque house, was destroyed by fire. The loss is $30,000.

FLEET CAPTAIN HIBBARD

And His Big Task at Constantinople, Turkey

The fame of the Quincy Yacht club is becoming more and more widely extended and has now reached that far away country of Constantinople. Visitors to that country may soon see the pointed burgee with a white field and red pointed star floating from a launch snorting round the shores of Turkey.

The owner of the launch which will fly the Quincy Yacht club pennant is W. S. Hibbard who last season flew the fleet captain's pennant from the masthead of the Yacht Mardeen III in the waters of Quincy bay.

Mr. Hibbard is now in Turkey superintending the construction of the American college for girls near Constantinople. He went over last August and letters received from him report encouraging progress. The responsibility is heavy for the buildings are to cost $500,000.

Jessie E. Henderson in a special letter in the Herald last Sunday says in part of Mr. Hibbards work:

A short, fair-haired, unassuming man, Mr. Hibbard is not the sort of person one would expect to find domineering 125 laborers of all nationalities. But he has any amount of cleverness and energy, and is not launted by Montenegrin quarrymen, Greek carpenters, Armenians, Moslem Turks or Kurds. He admits, however, that some of his gang are as villainous looking a set as one would meet in a lay's ramble through Turkey. The American superintendent doesn't understand the language of his subordinates, so he must interpret and command this slice of Babel chiefly by signs. He pays his laborers from 30 to 45 cents a day and hasn't had a strike so far.

He can't help wishing he knew enough Kurdish to be able to converse with his cook. Mr. Hibbard is living in a delightful suite of rooms in a house of distinctly American architecture. Everything is convenient, except that the cook doesn't understand English and Mr. Hibbard can't talk Kurdish. When the chef brings on a Kurdle ragout and Mr. Hibbard explains that he doesn't care for it, the chef grins, departs and returns with a second helping. If Mr. Hibbard praises a new recipe, the chef looks hurt and never uses it again. In course of time, however, Mr. Hibbard hopes to be able to eat in Kurdish or to make the cook able to cook in English. As matters stand now, if he discharged the cook that worthy would probably interpret the words of dismissal as an assurance of higher wages.

What the laborers, including the cook, think of him and of his work, Mr. Hibbard, of course, does not know. But from those Turks roundabout who speak a little English he has learned that Turkey in general thinks he is mildly insane.

"Put up those three buildings in a year or a year and a half?" they repeat incredulously; "it will take 10 years at the least!"

As the Turks reckon it, work can be done on only one building at a time, and they allow the generous period of two years as a minimum for the erection of each. Houses don't grow so rapidly in Turkey as they do in some other places.

Popular opinion in and about Constantinople has begun to veer a bit.

"If It's a Ralston It's Correct"

It is knowledge rather than "knack" which enables a man to dress both correctly and becomingly.

No part of a man's apparel changes in style more often or more radically than does his shoes. That is the reason why men who care to be correctly shod and who are particular about their personal appearance insist on getting "Ralston Authority Styles." We carry a sufficient variety of correct styles to enable you to express your own individuality in your selection.

The new shoe fashions are almost always first shown in Ralston Shoes. Come in and see the season's latest.

Saving Valuable Time

THE telephone saves the painter a great deal of valuable time. He don't have to run around for every little thing he wants. He gets it quicker by 'phone than on foot.

In the same way if you want a painter to do some work the quickest way to place the order is by telephone. He gets started without delay.

It's the universal Bell service that makes it invaluable to both. It is always a convenience and often a necessity. There are 5,000,000 telephones in the Bell system.

It will pay you to have a telephone. The Local Manager will be glad to tell you about the low cost.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Fully One Hundred Religious Gatherings in City Yesterday

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

"The consciousness of a personal destiny" was the theme of Rev. Dr. Hardy, the pastor of Bethany church Sunday morning, and his text was from Philippines 3:12. At the outset he was reminded, what could not the church accomplish if it realized its possibilities. But of our personal destiny, each should realize his own. Paul was a living sacrifice, doing what he deemed best regardless of consequences. In Pauls writings the consciousness of personal destiny is seen and felt. He felt God had given him a definite work to do. No man, woman or child is inconspicuous. Everyone has some place to fill in advancing the Kingdom of God in the world. Those called accomplished the most. The most worthless in Quincy are those who do not place much dignity on life; who do not feel that they are called upon to do a special work; who make little contribution to town or church. Be faithful just where you are, and you will get peace and joy. As we come to realization we have courage.

There was a large attendance at the Bible school and C. E. meetings.

Sunday evening an instructive talk on India was given by Dr. Hardy. It was written by Mr. Parker, a missionary, and was finely illustrated by colored views.

The Senior C. E. society will give a reception Tuesday evening to the Intermediate society.

Dr. and Mrs. Hardy find that they will be unable to call on all worshippers at the church before their departure, and therefore announce an informal reception on Wednesday evening.

This week and next the weekly prayer meetings will be held as usual on Friday evenings, but beginning April 6 will be held on Thursday evenings.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

The pastor delivered the Sunday morning sermon upon the subject: "Moses, his virtues and failings."

The Sunday School services at noon were very well attended.

At 6 o'clock the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was held with a good attendance.

The evening sermon by the pastor was on the subject: "Christ's influence." Mr. Patterson, Sr., sang a solo very acceptably. A large audience attended the service.

A cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Neil McLeod, 29 Brooks avenue, Tuesday evening at 7.45.

On Thursday evening James Duncan, secertary-treasurer of the International Granite Cutters' Union, and vice president of the American Federation of Labor, will speak at the 7.30 service. His subject will deal with the relation of labor to the church. Secretary Duncan has a wide knowledge of the labor problems of the country, and is considered an excellent speaker. His presence should call out a large audience.

The World-in-Boston Stewards will meet at the home of the pastor, 182 Glendale road, Friday evening at 7.30.

WOLLASTON M. E.

A very helpful sermon was preached by the pastor Sunday morning on the theme "Jesus resources of Strength." The text was from John 4:34.

The attendance at the Sunday School is on the increase.

George W. Wilbur was the leader of the Epworth League; subject, "The equipment."

At the evening service the pastor's theme was "The real and the possible man."

The Wollaston W. C. T. U. will meet Tuesday at 3 with Mrs. Albert Teed, 219 Farrington street.

The Stewards study class will meet Tuesday at 7.30 P. M.

Wednesday evening the Queen Esther circle will be entertained by Miss Newell, 81 Brook street.

The "Talent social" will be held Wednesday, March 29.

The financial year closes March 31, and the finance committee desire all pledges paid up by that date.

Vespers will be held on Sunday at the Methodist church with Miss Ethel Hague Rea of Dorchester as the soprano soloist.

The annual meeting of the church was reported at length in the Daily Ledger of Saturday.

QUINCY POINT CHURCH.

The Sunday morning sermon delivered by Rev. C. P. Marshall was unusually strong and inspiring. The theme was "Uplifting faith." In the evening the pastor spoke again using for his topic the question "Who is your Master?" This also was an excellent sermon which did not fail to make its effect upon the audience.

A special meeting of the church will be held Tuesday evening at 7.30, to vote upon the amendments to the constitution.

On Wednesday evening the annual parish supper will be held at 6.30, followed by the annual meeting at 7.30.

The regular church prayer meeting will be held Friday evening at 7.45.

SWEDISH LUTHERAN.

The pastor took for his Sunday morning theme the question——"Do you know God?"

In the evening the topic was "Gethsemane." Both services were well attended, and the sermons held the undivided attention of the audiences.

On Tuesday evening the Dorcas society will meet with Mrs. Nyberg, 156 Granite street.

The mid-week Lenten service will be held in the church Thursday evening at 7.45.

The building committee has chosen Jacob Bergvall as architect for the new building. Plans and specifications will be submitted in the near future.

SWEDISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The Sunday School session began at 9.30 as usual. The attendance has not been as large as usual during the last month owing to the scarlet fever epidemic.

The Sunday morning sermon was an exposition of the text Luke 11:14-26.

In the afternoon at 4.30 a young people's society meeting was held. Excellent music was furnished by a mixed quartet and a duet. The principal part of the time was devoted to a discussion of the subject: "What does it mean to be a Christian?"

In the evening the pastor took for his text: John 7:24. "The superficial and intolerant judgment of man" was the subject of the sermon.

A quarterly church meeting will be held Tuesday evening at 7.30.

The regular mid-week prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening at 7.30.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

At the morning service of the Wollaston Unitarian church, Rev. A. Wyman of Unity church, North Easton, preached in exchange with Rev. Carl G. Horst. He took no text, but spoke of unappreciated lives and persons, saying that it is almost as common an experience to find one's self estimated so highly in the minds of admiring friends that one cannot fulfil their expectations; so the reverse condition of being so under-estimated as to find one's efforts for good fruitless. Most of us are so constituted as to find the constant presence of beautiful things and worthy persons a means of dulling our finer perceptions, so that it is only by their removal from us that we appreciate their significance. Perspective is as essential to the appreciation of a personality as of a painting, seen too closely it is confused and meaningless; the beauty stands out clearly as it is withdrawn.

Waldo F. Bates, the young man who has given such general satisfaction as soloist for the past few weeks, sang "Consider and hear me" and "God is love" at the morning service.

The third in the series of special Lenten services will be held in the Wollaston Unitarian church, Wednesday evening at 7.45. The Rev. Julian C. Jaynes of West Newton, one of the ablest of preachers in greater Boston, will preach the sermon, and Carl D. Hopkins, the well known singer of Norfolk Downs, will be the soloist.

Rev. Carl G. Horst observer today with other Unitarian clergymen of New England in the West Newton church a "quiet day." The day, which began with the communion service, was devoted to worship and reconsecration.

The Unitarian Church-Helpers will hold their regular semi-monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Edmund S. Taylor, 10 Cushing street, Thursday at 2 o'clock.

The regular meeting of the Young People's Social club will be held in the vestry, Tuesday, at 8 P. M.

The next Church social will be held Thursday evening, March 30.

Friday evening, March 31, in the vestry the Dramatic club of the Third Religious society of Dorchester, will give an entertainment for the benefit of our Young People's Religious Union.

Mrs. C. A. Jameson and Mrs. A. W. Rohn have charge of the floral decorations of the altar this month. A beautiful custom in our church is the giving of flowers for the altar by members in the parish in memory of departed dear ones. Such flowers after the service of worship are presented to the sick.

New members will be received into the church Easter Sunday.

We greatly regret losing from Quincy such men as Dr. Hardy, Rev. Charles B. Ames and Rev. Ellery Channing Butler, who will have served the historic First church eighteen years when his fruitful pastorate closes. Messrs. Ames and Butler are among the exchanges whom we are always glad to hear in our church.

CHRIST CHURCH.

A corporate communion service was held at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. Members of the Vestry and the Men's club attended in goodly numbers.

The rector's sermon at the 10.30 service was upon the subject: "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." This was the third of the series on the beatitudes.

At the 7 o'clock service in the evening the rector gave the third of the series of sermons on the "Excepts of the gospel"—"Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." The condition of continuance in the kingdom" was the topic of the sermon.

A rehearsal for the Spring show will be held in the parish house this evening at 8 o'clock.

The Junior Auxiliary will meet at 3.45 Tuesday afternoon.

A meeting of the Galahad, Brotherhood will be held in the parish house Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Boy's club will meet on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock.

A meeting of the World-in-Boston stewards will be held in the rectory Thursday evening at 7.45.

On Friday the Reaper's circle will meet with Mrs. Osborne at 7.45.

St. Margaret's Guild will meet Friday evening at 7.30.

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. Ellery C. Butler occupied the pulpit at the First church Sunday morning and preached an interesting sermon.

Tonight Rev. D. Roy Freeman gives a talk before the junior laymen.

The junior laymen are arranging to present two plays in the chapel Friday evening. The title of the plays are "The two burglars" and "A little tiff."

An operetta "Cinderella in flower land" will be given by the children of the Sunday School in the chapel Friday evening, March 31.

The Charitable Ten circle of King's Daughters meets with Mrs. Wilson Marsh this afternoon. Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr., will present an earnest plea in behalf of a paid secretary for the conference of charities as organized under the auspices of the Philanthropy committee of the Women's club.

CALVARY BAPTIST.

The pastor delivered an able sermon at the Sunday morning service, taking for his subject, "The ready and waiting harvest." The sermon dealt with home mission work among the Indians, Negroes and foreign population, and people in the west and northwest.

The Sunday School had a large attendance; over 100 children were present.

The Christian Endeavor meeting was led by Mrs. Katherine Goulburn.

In the evening the pastor took for his theme "Privilege and condition of choice," Joshua 24,15 was the text. True religion consists in serving God. Man is responsible for this service, but it is not compulsory. He has the privilege of choosing. God desires a decision as to this service. Condition "choose today."

The Bible Study class will meet at the pastor's home Tuesday evening at 7.30.

A missionary rally will be held Thursday evening. Rev. Walter Bullen of Japan will speak.

The Ladies' Circle will meet with Mrs. Lewis, 344 Granite street, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

HALL PLACE M. E.

Rev. Carl H. Raupach, pastor of the Hall Place M. E. church, presented the benevolences of the church at the Sunday morning service, speaking briefly on each organization. During the service he baptized one young lady, and received nine persons into full membership, three being by letters from other churches, and six probationers.

Sunday school was held at 12 M. and Junior League at 3 P. M. Miss Ada Williams lead the Epworth League devotional services at 6.15 P. M. on "The equipment."

The pastor preached a strong sermon at the evening service on the subject—"First things first," taking his text from II Kings 18:4—"And he called it Nehushtau." He interestingly told the story of the brazen serpent used by Moses, in direct obedience to the commands of God, as a "means of grace" to save all of the Israelites, who should look upon it, from death induced by the bites of the fiery serpents which infested the camps of the Israelites when they sinned against God; and then told of the destroying of the brazen serpent by Hezekiah when he came to the throne of Judah, for while it had ceased to be "a means of grace" yet the people of this nation still worshipped it in the burning of incense to it. He applied the thought of the lesson to modern times, and the attitude taken by people toward the church and its services, its revivals and its pastor, allowing their attitude and labors to be governed by these things rather than by their relations to Jesus Christ and their duty toward God for the church ceases to be "a means of "grace," and the revival campaign and the pastor fail in their work when they are made the aim and object of all our labors, for these can only be made "a means of grace" to us when we put Christ first in the life.

The church was favored both morning and evening by the services of a visiting brother who presided at the organ and helped greatly in the music.

A joint meeting of the Epworth league and Ladies Aid is called for this evening, in the vestry.

On Saturday the Busy Workers class of the Sunday school will hold a candy sale in Mr. Mayo's vacant store on Copeland street.

FINNISH CONGREGATIONAL.

In the absence of the pastor the Sunday morning service was conducted by the deacons of the church. The Young Peoples' meeting at 5.30 was addressed by Rev. Charles Makinen of New York city. Mr. Makinen also spoke at the evening service.

The pastor will return from Gardiner today and will conduct the regular church prayer meeting on Thursday. Mr. Lillback went to Gardiner on Friday to take charge of a series of services among the Finnish people of that locality.

ATLANTIC METHODIST.

The pastor preached his Sunday morning sermon from the text Dan. 3:18. "The power of a great conviction" was the subject.

In the evening, the pastor preached on the theme "Lot's wife." Emphasis was laid on the lesson of a divided heart.

Special collections were taken at both services and a sufficient sum was raised in money and pledges to free the church of its current debt at the time of the conference on April 5.

The Epworth league will have a unique social next Thursday evening. The admission fee will be in proportion to the height. People will be charged one cent for every full foot and one cent for each inch over. A person five feet tall would pay five cents, one four feet eleven inches would pay fifteen cents. A great time is promised all who attend.

Special services will be held next Sunday both morning and evening. Announcement will be made later regarding the nature of these services.

SWEDISH METHODIST.

At the Sunday forenoon service, the pastor spoke from the text Matt. 7.7-12. "The Golden rule" was the topic of his sermon.

The Sunday School services were in charge of the superintendent, William Gelotte.

Mrs. Alida Lagergren was the leader of the Epworth league meeting.

In the evening the pastor spoke from I Tim. 1:15—"This is a faithful saying and worthy of acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief."

The mixed choir will meet for a rehearsal of Easter music on Wednesday evening.

The regular mid-week prayer service will be held Thursday evening.

The male choir will rehearse the Easter music on Friday evening.

PUSSY WILLOWS.

Arthur Guiterman.

Cold and gray the marshes quiver,
Touched by dawn the hilltops glow:
Tinkling runs the vagrant river
Where the pussy willows grow.

Wands of russet, lightly bending,
Flecked with catkins soft as down,
Ye have word of winter's ending—
Come! We'll take the news to town!

Pussy willows! Pussy willows!
See their tiny velvet pillows.
Freed of ice, in laughing billows
Leaps the stream where late they grew.

Breezes playing set them swaying;
Hear their whispered voices saying:
"Bid us welcome! Hither straying,
We have brought the spring to you!"

COMMON PEOPLE.

Although some do not agree with me, the common people are very useful to this country and should be treated with more consideration now than ever. The time is coming when the common people will become a great factor in this country, and if the country does not give them more recognition they will make the country give it to them.—William G. McAdoo

KNOTTY LEGAL PROBLEM

Suit Against One of "Siamese Twins" Results In Complications

Berlin, March 20.—The hardest problem legal authorities have had to solve in years has resulted from the brief imprisonment of the "Sisters Blazek," who are joined like the famous Siamese twins.

A warrant for alleged breach of contract was issued for one of the sisters. The court officer wasted no time in the embarrassing situation that confronted him, but took both girls to jail.

Now the sister against whom there was no warrant is suing for illegal imprisonment. Legal experts agree that unless the court decides that the two girls are really one, somebody will have to pay dearly.

THE LATEST IN SCIENCE

Growth of Various Parts of the Human Body May Be Regulated

London, March 20.—Professor Keith, conservator of the Hunterian collection at the royal college of surgeons, in a lecture intimated that as a consequence of recent discoveries bearing on the relation between the pituitary gland at the base of the skull and the growth of the body, science might soon be able to regulate human growth.

Not only, he said, might increased stature be obtained, but the growth of various parts of the body might be regulated, and the time might come when doctors would be able, for instance, to cause the nose to grow to any desired shape.

CHILD WORTH MORE THAN MILLIONAIRES

"Platform" of Judge of Chicago Domestic Relations Court

Chicago, March 20.—The child is the thing that makes the home the unit and the child is the thing about which everything revolves.

The child makes the true home; its influence is incalculable.

The child is the greatest treasure in this world. It is worth all of the wealth of Rockefeller, of Carnegie and of other multi-millionaires rolled into one.

The child's interests are sacred; they must be safeguarded and protected.

In the child of today is the hope of the country tomorrow. Good children make good men and women, and good men and women make for a better country.

These are some of the sentiments expressed by Municipal Judge Goodnow, who has been chosen to preside over the new court of domestic relations—the second court of its kind to be established in the United States. The new court will be opened April 3.

REPORTS WIFE A "SUICIDE"

Policeman Held For Murder After an Investigation

New York, March 20.—Following an investigation conducted by inspectors, Policeman Charles Weiss of the Hamburg avenue, Brooklyn, station, was arrested, charged with the murder of his wife, and arraigned before Magistrate Wagner.

He was held without bail for a further examination next Saturday. Mrs. Weiss was found dead in her home with a bullet hole in her head. Her two children, aged 5 and 2 years, were playing in the room. Weiss reported the case to the police as one of suicide.

LED A DOUBLE LIFE

Cincinnati "Philanthropist" Turns Out to Be Crook With a Record

Cincinnati, March 20.—Anthony Gahl, confessed thief, who posed as a philanthropist by day and robbed his neighbors by night, pleaded guilty to two charges of house-breaking and one of petit larceny in the police court and wept throughout the proceedings. He received sentences that will keep him in the workhouse for four years.

Gahl has been identified by a picture in the rogues' gallery as a former prisoner in the Kentucky penitentiary.

SUBWAY IS HUSHED

Not a Wheel Moves For Two Minutes In Builder's Memory

New York, March 20.—Every light was extinguished and every wheel came to a standstill for two minutes in the subway this morning, beginning at the moment funeral services started for the late John B. McDonald, its builder.

The Interborough company directors so ordered after directing that the sixty-one subway stations be draped in black today.

BRIEFS

City Council this evening.

The sun rises before 6, and on Friday will set at 6.

It is reported that the late William S. Williams left an estate of $100,000.

Mrs. Harry Snowden was the guest last week of Mrs. Ella Hall of Whitman.

The Old Farmer's Almanac predicts "high strenuous winds for this week.

The many friends of Mrs. C. G. Fletcher will be sorry to learn that she is confined to her home by sickness.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Fitton of Wollaston were guests over the week end of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Ryder of North Easton.

The S. Agnes Parker Sewing Circle of Paul J. Revere, W. R. C., meets at the home of Mrs. Isabelle Souther tomorrow afternoon.

After the heavy rain of Sunday evening the bright sunshine of today was almost a surprise, but welcomed by the washer-women.

The cat-boat Hustler of the Quincy Yacht Club fleet, has recently been sold to New York parties. She was formerly owned by Mr. Carpenter.

Dr. and Mrs. Richards of Pawtucket, R. I., and Mrs. W. E. Wentworth of Rochester, N. H., were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wentworth of Miller Stile road, coming frequently to note the progress of the triplets.

At the Saturday evening whist parties held in Clan McGregor hall, the souvenirs were awarded to Mrs. Williams, D. McLennan, Mrs. Higgs, J. Birnie, Mrs. Denton and T. E. Hayden. The consolations were awarded to Mrs. O'Neil and William McIntosh. The next party will be held Friday, March 31.

One of the most interesting of the series of lectures under the auspices of the Arts and Crafts committee of the Quincy Women's club will be given tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock at the club house. Mr. Frederick Whitney, the lecturer, is not a stranger to club members having given a lecture early in the club year which was very enjoyable. His subject tomorrow will be Color and Design.

Narrow Escapes In Lynn Fire

Lynn, Mass., March 20.—Fire in the elevator well of the Bellcastle chambers and the annex at 138 South Common street spread so rapidly that the seventy-five occupants had barely time to escape with their lives and lost all their household furnishings. The loss is estimated at $15,000.

Weavers Seeking New Fields

New York, March 20.—Of the 380 second cabin passengers arriving here on the Laurentic from Liverpool, it is said a majority are weavers on their way to the woolen mills of Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Canada. The weavers come from Yorkshire, Eng.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BILL OF THE OPTICIANS

Allows Anyone to Practice as an Optometrist

Editor of the Ledger:

The utterance of some half truths and of many gross exaggerations and misrepresentations renders it impossible for me to allow to pass unchallenged an article in a recent issue of the Ledger regarding the proposed optometry bill.

It is stated that the optometrist does not treat disease of the eye, but that he simply diagnoses it, which function itself belongs solely to the medical practitioner, who alone has qualified under the State law as the only person competent not only to treat disease but to diagnose it. By this statement the optometrist is in one breath taking to himself a medical function and with the next breath disclaiming it.

It is argued that the bending of a ray of light before it enters the eye is a purely physical process which is true; but this does not describe the entire process. What will be the effect of this light after it has fallen upon the retina? A pair of spectacles carried in the pocket possesses identically the same physical properties as the same pair of spectacles saddling the nose. Dare anyone deny that in the latter case ultra-physical effects are produced? Furthermore, the Massachusetts Supreme Court holds the practice of medicine to embrace the use of any means whatsoever for the relief of human ailments.

Being myself a teacher in diseases of the eye renders me competent to deny the accuracy of the statement that only thirty-two hours in an entire four years' medical course is spent upon the eye. Does that statement take account simply of the lectures or of the lectures combined with the hours of study in private and the hours spent in observation and teaching in our large eye clinics and the courses in physiology and dissection? Does the writer further admit that a statement made recently before the Committee on Public Health, to the effect that a large proportion of the so-called optometrists had not even received an ordinary high school education was allowed to pass unchallenged? Does he deny the fact that in spite of the length of time during which his pseudo-profession has been legally recognized in some of our western states, there is not even now an officially recognized school of optometry? And yet we do have schools of plumbing and of embalming.

It is impracticable to give in detail the bill as offered but it is to be noted that although the caption of the article is "A Good Bill" nothing is said further than that the bill is a good bill. One point that should be emphasized, is the fact that the proposed legislation allows anyone to practice as an optometrist who has been in any way connected with the optical business even one twenty-four hours before such bill takes effect. Those who pass the examination are given a State license while the others with the flimsiest restrictions are registered and allowed to practice unmolested—this in order that none may fail to be cared for under the bill.

The intent and the result are obvious: the bill aims solely to give State sanction to the raising of a trade to the dignity of a profession. Why do they wish to register as optometrists and not as opticians? Is it that by their new high-sounding name they wish to befuddle the public into the idea that it is not the same old optician? Furthermore, why should they demand that all the members of the Board of Registration be practicing optometrists? Does this not savor of a close corporation?

One word in regard to legislation already passed in other states. It is a noteworthy fact that a bill regulating this form of practice among opticians was passed in Minnesota, and that the name "optometry" seems to have been unknown to the optometrists themselves until 1904, when it was first suggested to them by the then president of the National Association of Opticians, and that at the time of its adoption there was much argument over the pronunciation of the word. Optometry is indeed a venerable science!

Inasmuch as there is upon the statutes of this State sufficient law to cover every exigency of fraud in a so-called travelling optician, the main reason for which the proponents of this bill urge its passage falls to the ground.

If the proper fitting of lenses to the eyes is a purely physical process why should it be that Dean Sabine of the Harvard School of Applied Sciences, for thirteen years professor of light and sound in the department of physics, should have disclaimed before the Committee on Public Health recently that even the thought of his competence to fit glasses had ever entered his mind?

FINANCIAL NEWS.

A much better undertone has developed on the Stock Exchange. Nothing contributed more to this improvement than the worldwide ease of money. Loanable funds are abundant everywhere, especially at this center, and at exceptionally low rates. Some slight hardening may be anticipated previous to the April settlements, but this will be purely temporary and low rates are to be expected until the approach of our next harvest. Along with this plethora of money goes a material easing of the credit situation. Good borrowers have no difficulty in finding all necessary accommodation.

A favorable feature is the steady improvement of the bank situation as shown by the last bank call from the Comptroller at Washington. In New York deposits have gained over $200,000,000 since the call two months ago, while the Chicago banks reported a gain of over $70,000,000 during the same period. The loans at New York increased during this period $124,000,000 and at Chicago $30,000,000.

Technically the stock market is in strong position. Weak spots have been eliminated, and all unfavorable contingencies appear to have been thoroughly discounted. Tariff agitation will be reopened with the beginning of the extra session in April, but no serious changes need be expected, if for no other reason than that the Government cannot afford any curtailment of income from customs. Barring temporary uncertainty, no serious disturbance need be anticipated from actual tariff legislation. The Supreme Court oil and tobacco decisions, about which there has been so much hesitancy, now seem likely to be deferred until a late date. The court includes two new members, not as familiar with the arguments of both sides as the older members of the court. It is to be supposed that the new judges will require ample time to read and digest the enormous amount of testimony in these cases before reaching a decision. This means the consumption of much more time than at first anticipated. Less anxiety is now felt over the Mexican situation; the vigorous display of force by the United States and the stimulus it afforded to the Mexican Government having the result of effectually discouraging the insurrectionist movement. A good many prominent operators are now returning fromt heir winter vacations, invigorated and more disposed to take sanguine views of the future. The approach of spring, rightly or wrongly, is also usually considered a stimulating factor, mainly for the reason that it permits the resumption of activities prevented by winter.

General business is quiet and still presents unsatisfactory features. Liquidation and rest, however, are producing beneficent results; and later on we ought to see a fair resumption of activity, at least where declines to the lower level have made made new enterprise safer and more profitable. The railroad situation has its perplexities, retrenchment and efficiency being the watchwords among managers. In all probability the railroads have experienced the worst effects of recent adversities. In brief, the outlook is favorable to the purchase of good securities, which in spite of occasional reactions, are likely to establish themselves upon a higher level.—Henry Clews, Banker, New York.

NOW SIMPLY MRS. NORRIS

Countess Drops Title Upon Marrying Rubber Trust Secretary

Newport, R. I., March 20.—Simplicity marked the wedding of Countess Margot von Beroldingen to Samuel Norris, secretary of the rubber trust, here. The affair was a quiet one, only a few friends being invited to the ceremony at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Joseph F. Stone. Rev. George Lock of St. Michael's church of Bristol officiated.

The bride was beautifully gowned in pale blue and chiffon. She was unattended. As a result of the marriage the countess will forever drop her title and from now on will be known simply as Mrs. Norris.

CONSCIENCE SMITES HIM

Joining the Church Leads a Thief to Confess His Crime

Reading, Pa., March 20.—"Chief, on Sept. 1, 1909, with Walter Bush, I robbed Edward Kemmerer's store, at Williamsport, of a lot of clothing. I have joined a church and my conscience worries me. I want to give myself up."

So declared Howard Reider when he entered the office of Chief of Police Levan here. The chief called up the Williamsport police, found that the robbery had been committed at the time stated, and Reider was locked up.

RIGID INQUIRY IS PROMISED

Startling Charges Against Institutions In Massachusetts

TREATMENT OF THE INSANE

All Kinds of Cruelties and Inhumanities Alleged to Have Been Practiced—Personal Feelings of Governor Aroused After Conference With Leading Alienist—Said to Have Evidence of Brutality

Boston, March 20.—It was given out by Governor Foss that he had received so many complaints of brutal treatment of insane patients confined in state institutions that he had made up his mind to make a thorough investigation of the whole matter.

The most astounding charges have been made. They comprise the whole gamut of brutalities, including murder. Another serious charge is that these unfortunate wards of the state have been at the mercy of men of disreputable character, who, after securing employment as keepers and custodians, have used their offices to perpetrate all kinds of cruelties and inhumanities.

Among the governor's closest advisers and informants on the treatment of the insane has been Dr. L. V. Briggs, a leading alienist. He is the petitioner for a bill "To prohibit certain forms of restraint on inmates of penal institutions and of patients in public and private hospitals or sanitariums."

There will be a hearing on this bill next Wednesday, and at this hearing all these charges and allegations of brutality will be heard.

It is known that at the conference with Briggs the governor came into possession of facts and details of such a character that he was astounded.

The personal feelings of the governor were aroused, and it is said that he expressed himself as being determined to find out for himself the real conditions, and if they were as represented he announced there would be a cleaning out of the insane institutions of the state.

Dr. Briggs has been investigating the conditions at the insane hospitals for many years. He has many insane patients under treatment at the present time, and knows by actual experience the conditions that exist.

It was stated at the state house that he has letters from sources that offer indisputable evidence that brutality rules in some of the insane hospitals, and he thinks the state board of health is more responsible for existing conditions than the superintendents of the hospitals. He claims that the state board of health does not allow enough money to secure proper attendants.

SECOND DEGREE MURDER

Fernald Convicted of Killing Helleur With a Billiard Cue

Plymouth, Mass., March 20.—Guilty of murder in the second degree with the verdict returned against Charles P. Fernald of Wareham, charged with killing Joseph H. Helleur of the same town. It was announced that Fernald's attorneys would carry the case to the supreme court on exceptions.

Helleur was killed in Fernald's pool room in March of last year. Fernald was arrested on March 19, 1910, charged with having hit Helleur over the head with a billiard cue, following a dispute. His trial occupied ten days.

SCHOOLMATES ENGAGED

Youngest Daughter of Bryan Is to Become Mrs. Hargreaves

Lincoln, Neb., March 20.—The engagement of Grace Bryan, the youngest daughter of William J. Bryan, to Richard L. Hargreaves, a young business man of this city, is announced.

Miss Bryan and Hargreaves were born in Lincoln and were schoolmates. Hargreaves' father was a pioneer business man of Lincoln, who died last October. Miss Bryan's fiance is 22 years old, and the treasurer of the Hargreaves Mercantile company. Miss Bryan is 20 years old.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS

Man Wrongly Convicted of Murder Is Released From Prison

Pittsburg, March 20.—Andrew Toth was released from the penitentiary here after serving twenty years for a crime he did not commit. Toth was accused of murdering a fellow-workman at the Braddock furnaces, and sentenced to prison for life.

Recently it was discovered he was half a mile away from the scene of the crime. Governor Tener promptly signed the pardon.

Outlook For Income Tax

New York, March 20.—Nine more states must ratify the proposed federal income tax amendment before it can become a part of the constitution. Reports received here from the capitols of the forty-six states show that the amendment has received favorable action in the joint legislature of twenty-six.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father, McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics, but finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Evan has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's mixing in politics. His father pulls wires unknown to him to have him invited to speak in a distant mining town. Hathaway, who has been trying to do business with the road and with Senator Blount, is to have a talk with Mrs. Blount.

The senator's smile was not derisive. It was merely lenient.

"Sat on 'em good and hard, did you? That's right, son. Never be afraid to say what you mean and to say it straight. Don't forget that when you're making your appeal to the horny handed sons of toil over at Ophir. Give 'em straight facts and back up the facts with figures—if you happen to have the figures. When do you pull out for the camp?"

"Tonight at 9:30. I can't get there in time if I wait for the morning train." Then, dismissing the political topic abruptly, "What do you hear from Professor Anners?"

"Oh, he's having the time of his life. I got him a state permit and scrapped him up a bunch of pick and shovel men, and he is digging out those fossil skeletons by the wagon load."

"And Miss Anners?" pursued Patricia's lover.

"I shouldn't wonder if she was having the time of her life too. I've given her the little four seated car to call her own while she is out here, and she and Honoria go careering around the country, breaking the speed limit every minute in the day, I suppose."

"I'm glad you are giving her a good time," said Evan, and he looked glad. Then he added regretfully: "I wish I could get a chance to chase around a little with them. I have seen almost nothing of them since they came west. I should think Mrs. Blount might bring Patricia down to the city once in awhile."

"Perhaps the young woman doesn't want to come," laughed the senator. "You told me you hadn't got her tag, son, and I'm beginning to believe it. What has she got against you, anyway?"

"Nothing, save that I don't fit into her scheme for her life work.

"It's too bad you're going out of town tonight, son. Honoria phoned me a little spell ago that she and Patricia would be driving down after dinner to take in the Weatherford reception. You'll miss 'em, won't you?"

"Isn't that just my infernal luck!" lamented Evan; then, "Give them my love and tell them I hope they will stay until I get back."

The senator rose and gripped the hand of leavetaking. "Shall I say that to both of 'em?" he asked, with the quizzical smile which Evan was learning to expect.

"Yes, to both of them, if you like, only I suppose Mrs. Blount will hold it against me. Good night and goodby. I'll be back day after tomorrow if the Ophir miners don't mob me."

It was only a few minutes after Evan Blount's train had steamed Ophirward out of the Sierra avenue station that a dust covered touring car drew up at the curb in front of the Inter-Mountain and the porter who had put Blount's hand bag into the taxicab opened the tonneau door for two ladies in muffling dust coats and heavy veils.

The senator met the two late travelers in the vestibule, and while the three were waiting for an elevator a rapid fire of low toned question and answer passed between husband and wife.

"You got Evan out of the way?"

The husband nodded. "That was easy. I passed the word to Stenchfield, and he helped out on that—invited Evan to come to Ophir to speak in a joint debate. He left on the night mail."

"And Hathaway—will he be here?"

"He is here. Gantry has turned him down, according to instructions, and he is clawing about in the air, trying to get a fresh hold. I bluffed him—told him he'd have to make his peace with you for something, I didn't know what, before I could talk to him."

Miss Anners was watching the elevator lights glow and darken as the car descended, and the wife's voice sank to a whisper.

"He will be at the Weatherfords'?" she inquired eagerly.

"He is sure to be. I told him you would be there."

The small plotter nodded approval.

"Give us half an hour to dress and have the car ready," she directed, and then the senator put the two into the elevator and turned away to finish his cigar.

CHAPTER X.

IN THE HERBARIUM.

THE Weatherfords, millionaire mine people and so newly rich that the crisp bank notes fairly crackled when Mrs. Weatherford spent them, kept their lackeyed and liveried state in a castle-like house in Mesa circle, the most expensive if not the most aristocratic no thoroughfare of the capital city.

Weatherford, the father, egged on by Mrs. Weatherford, had political aspirations pointing toward a United States senatorship, the election to which would fall within the duty of the next legislature.

The mine owner himself would willingly have dodged, but the ambitious wife was inexorable. There were two grown daughters and a growing son, and it was for these that Mrs. Weatherford was socially ambitious.

The reception, for which the senator's wife had driven her guest thirty miles through the dust of the sagebrush hills, was one of the moves in Mrs. Weatherford's private campaign.

From room to room in the vast house a curiously assorted throng of the hidden ones worked its way as the jam and crush permitted.

It was a mark of the newness of the Weatherford riches that the glass and iron greenhouse, built out as an extension of one of the drawing rooms, was called "the herbarium." It was a reproduction on a generous scale of a tropical garden.

The senator's party of three was fashionably late at the function in Mesa circle, but in the crush filling the spacious drawing rooms the hostess and her long line of receiving assistants were still on duty.

Having successfully passed the line with her husband and Patricia, little Mrs. Blount looked about her, saw Mr. Richard Gantry, signaled to him with her eyes and, with the traffic manager for her center rush to wedge a way through the crowded rooms, was presently lost to sight—at least from Miss Anners' point of view.

Whether she knew it or not, from the moment of her appearance at the hostess' end of the long receiving line the senator's wife had been marked and followed in her slow progress through the crowded rooms by a prosperous looking gentleman, whose hawk-like eyes never lost sight of her.

When his quarry stopped, as she did frequently, to chat with one or another of the guests the man with the eager eyes circled nervously and once or twice seemed about to make the opportunity which was so slow in making itself.

But it was not until the little lady in the claret colored party gown had drifted, still with a hand on Gantry's arm, in among the palm and banana trees that the bird of prey person made his swoop. A moment later Gantry had taken his commands and was disappearing in the direction of the refreshment tables, and the little lady was saying, "Dear me, Mr. Hathaway, you almost startled me!"

"Did I?" said the lumber king rather grimly, as if he meant the query to be apologetic. "I am sorry. I didn't mean to, but Mrs. Gordon said I would find you here, and so I took the liberty of—er—following you. I'm needing a little straightening out, you know, and—er—would you mind letting me talk business with you for a minute or two, Mrs. Blount?"

"Certainly not, if you can talk business in such a place as this," she said, making room for him on the rustic settee.

"Perhaps it isn't business; perhaps it's only politics," he resumed. "First, I wish you'd tell me what I've been doing to get myself into your bad books."

She laughed easily. "Who said you had been doing anything?" she asked.

"The senator," he answered shortly. "He said I would have to make my peace with you. I want to be put next in this pigs in clover railroad puzzle. Our contract with the Transcontinental is about to expire, and I'd like to get it renewed on the same terms as before."

"Well," she said ingenuously, "why don't you do it?"

"I can't," he blustered. "Everybody has suddenly grown mysterious. Kittredge, the general superintendent, doesn't seem to remember that we ever had any contract, and Gantry is just as bad. And when I go to the senator he tells me I must make my peace with you. I can't understand what everybody is driving at. I've got something to sell that the railroad company needs. Where's the hitch? You can put me next. Why can't I get my contract renewed?"

The little lady was opening and shutting her fan slowly. "What was your contract?" she asked innocently.

"If I thought you didn't know I wouldn't tell you," he said bluntly. "It's a rebate rate east and west from all of our sawmills, and it was given us two years ago, a few days before election."

"And the consideration?" she asked, looking up quickly.

"You know that, too, Mrs. Blount. It was the swinging of the solid employees' vote of the Twin Buttes Lumber company over to the railroad ticket."

"And you wish to make the same arrangement again?" she asked.

"Exactly. We've got to have that preferential rate or go out of business."

"With whom did you make the contract two years ago?"

"With Mr. McVickar, verbally. Of course there was nothing put down in black or white, but the railroad folks did their part, and we did ours."

"A gentlemen's agreement," she murmured. "You have tried Mr. McVickar again?"

"Yes. He referred me to Gantry."

"And what did Mr. Gantry say?"

"I couldn't get him to say anything with any sense in it. The most I could get out of him was that I would have to see the boss."

"And instead of doing that you went to see the senator?" she asked.

"Who else would Gantry mean by 'the boss?'" demanded the befogged one.

"Possibly he meant the senator's son," she ventured, tapping a very pretty cheek with the folded fan. "Have you been leaving Evan Blount out in all of this?"

"I didn't know where to put him in. That's what brings me here tonight. The senator or Mr. McVickar or both of them together have set the whole state to running around in circles with this appointment of young Blount. Some say it's a deal between the senator and McVickar, and some say it's a fight. Half of the professional spellbinders are walking in their sleep over it right now. I thought maybe you could tell me, Mrs. Blount."

"I can't tell you anything that would help the people who are walking in their sleep," she returned, "but I might offer a suggestion in your personal affair. Mr. Blount is your man."

Hathaway pursed his thin lips and frowned. "How big a block of Twin Buttes stock shall I offer him?"

Her laugh was a silvery peal of derision. "You always figure in dollars and cents, don't you, Mr. Simon Peter Hathaway?" she mocked.

"I have always found it the cheapest in the end."

"Listen," she said, with the folded fan held up like a monitory finger. "Mr. Gantry may be back any minute, and I can give you only the tiniest hint. You must go to Mr. Evan Blount and appeal to him frankly as one business man to another."

"But I have heard—they say he's all kinds of a crank."

"Never mind what you have heard. Tell him all the facts and ask him to help you, and, for mercy's sake, don't offer him a block of your stock. Put it where it will do the most good. Put it in the name of Professor William J. Anners of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and show Mr. Blount how dreadfully disastrous the loss of the preferential freight rate would be to all the poor people in your list of stockholders, including Professor Anners."

Hathaway drew down his cuff and made a rapid pencil memorandum of the name and address of the new beneficiary.

"You will take notice that I'm not asking who this Professor Anners is or why I should be making him a present of a block of stock, but what you say goes as it lies. Anything else?"

"Yes. Be perfectly frank with Mr. Blount and don't let him put you off. He may pretend to be very angry at first, but you won't mind that."

"I won't mind anything if I can bring this business down to the everyday, commonplace earth once more. You and the senator and Gantry and McVickar are playing some sort of game, and you haven't shown me more than the back of the cards. That's all right. I'll play my hand blindfolded, if that's what you want, just so we win the odd trick. When and where can I find Mr. Evan Blount?"

"The day after tomorrow at his office in Temple court. He is out of the city now, but"—

Here Gantry's coming put an end to the private conference, and the president of the Twin Buttes company went his way.

It was not until they had served out their full sentence at Mrs. Weatherford's crush and were back in the private dining room suit at the Inter-Mountain, with Miss Anners safely behind the closed door of her own apartment, that the small conspirator passed the word of good hope on to her husband.

"It is working beautifully," she exulted. "He will go to see Evan day after tomorrow—and after that the deluge."

Terrible Ravage by Plague

London, March 20.—During the month of February the deaths from the plague in India reached the enormous total of 88,498.

GATHERING IN THE WAR ZONE

Madero Providing Forces With Food and Ammunition

INSURGENTS ENTER EL PASO

Small Cannon Which Adorned Public Square Disappears With Them—Army In Texas Prepared to Move to Mexican Line on Short Notice—Tracks Cleared For Quick Loading of Trains on Emergency Call

El Paso, Tex., March 20.—Wherever Madero and his 1000 insurgents are encamped, his movements and designs are causing unconcealed speculation among the federal troops in Juarez, which is guarded by only 500 men. In Casas Grandes, 125 miles south, Garcia Cuellar of President Diaz' personal staff is still nursing a wounded arm, preparatory to a march northward with his 700 federal troops, which form the main strength of the Mexican army in the north.

Between Cuellar and General Navarro in Juarez, Madero is drawing toward him all the insurgents who heretofore have been scattered, with a view to preventing a juncture of the federal forces.

That Madero will again attempt to take Casas Grandes and establish it as a base of supplies, and by keeping down the bridges along the Mexican National and Mexican Northwestern railroads will endeavor to prevent any addition to the federal strength in Juarez, is given out by the junta here as a fact based on messages from Madero himself.

For ten days Madero is reported to have been busy equipping his men. Herds of cattle have been driven into the "war zone" held by the insurrectos and the insurgent leader is reported to have been able to give each of his men 200 rounds of ammunition.

Reports that insurgents entered El Paso and were reinforced by more Americans received partial confirmation when it was found a cannon, which had adorned the public square, had disappeared.

North from Chihuahua to the Texas border the people living in small towns are reported to be enduring great suffering because of the stoppage of the trains.

All approaches to the bridges leading from the American side to Juarez are guarded by three times the usual force of United States troops.

An American who returned from the insurrecto territory said Captain Oscar G. Creighton, the American insurrecto leader, who, with a small force has been destroying bridges along the Mexican National railroad, is still encamped in the hill a few miles south of Juarez.

Excitement In San Antonio

San Antonio, Tex., March 20.—The air is electrical with rumors of important developments in Mexico and in the movements in the maneuver division to the border. The return of Jose Y. Limantour to Mexico in part accounts for this.

In the maneuver camp nearly every preparation is a denial of the story of mere drill and tactics. Eight tracks have been cleared in the Southern Pacific yards and "skids" and runways have been constructed so that the loading of eight troop trains can be effected simultaneously. The entire yard has been cleaned of junk so that nothing will hinder the regular army in the event of any emergency call.

A train said to be destined to carry troops to Nogales, Ariz., on the Mexican border, was made up in the army yards here. It is manned and under orders to remain in readiness to pull out at any hour.

So far as can be learned no orders have been received for the embarkation of troops, but it is said among railroad men that the destination of the train is Nogales. Probably it will carry the Eleventh cavalry.

Interest is added to the news by the fact that in the plans pigeonholed in Washington for the movements of the troops ready for an eventuality an invasion of Mexico includes the use of Nogales as a gateway.

Troops Bound For Honolulu

San Francisco, March 20.—Having taken a roundabout course through San Antonio, Tex., as if headed for the army maneuvers, the Second United States infantry, under Colonel Mansfield, arrived in San Francisco. The men will embark immediately for Honolulu. It is understood this will be an additional force for the Hawaiian islands and not to relieve other troops.

The men are discussing a rumor that within the next three months a force of 12,000, including infantry, cavalry, field and mountain artillery, will occupy the Hawaiian and Philippine islands.

Dove of Peace Hovers Near

Washington, March 20.—Peace is assured in the republic of Mexico within the present week if certain influences now at work toward that end prove effective.

With the arrival in Mexico City of Jose Y. Limantour, minister of finance, President Diaz will begin a series of conferences which it is expected will result in the announcement within three or four days of a reorganized cabinet.

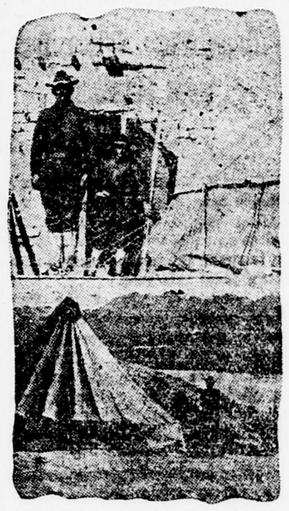

Limantour will present an explanation of the demands of the revolutionists and the changes in the official family of Diaz, as well as the institution of certain reforms which are expected to appease the insurgents.

In the meantime President Taft will confer with Ambassador De La Barra, and there is good ground for the assumption that the troops now concentrated in Texas will immediately begin a series of maneuvers and return shortly to their posts.

In addition to this, when conditions are normal in Mexico, a complete statement of things which actuated the mobilization of the troops will be issued by the White House.

CROWD MAKES A MAD RUSH FOR THE EXITS

State Officers In Raid on an Alleged Gambling Joint

New Bedford, Mass., March 20.—State Officers Hedges, Scott and Keating, assisted by Assistant Secretary Parker and Inspectors Taylor and Carboni of the Watch and Ward society, made a raid on an alleged gambling house at 31 Cove road, Dartmouth, on the outskirts of this city.

The officers entered the house armed with warrants sworn out by the Watch and Ward society. When they entered the building with revolvers drawn there was a panic in the crowd, which made a mad rush for the exits.

The doorkeeper, Patrick Stanton, and Clarence Spink were arrested, and a mass of furniture, including a mahogany roulette wheel valued at $700, was seized.

Spink is alleged by the police to be the proprietor of the place.

IN MEMORY OF CLEVELAND

Great Memorial Tower to Be Erected on Princeton Battlefield

Princeton, N. J., March 20.—It is announced by the committee in charge that the remainder of the $100,000 for the Grover Cleveland memorial tower has been raised. Saturday marked the 74th anniversary of the birth of Cleveland, and it had been set as the time limit for subscribing to the fund.

The tower, which is to be erected at the southeast corner of the graduate school of Princeton university, will rise 165 feet above the plain on which the battle of Princeton was fought.

PUSSY UNEARTHS $875

Was Looking For Mouse Which Had Taken Refuge In Footstool

Fort Plain, N. Y., March 20.—A cat chased a mouse under a footstool in the home of Henry Karg. The cat squeezed part way under the stool, then thrust its paw up into a hole in the bottom of the stool.

Presently down came the paw without the mouse, but with a $50 bill sticking to one of its claws.

In all, $875 was found stowed away in the stool, which had been there ever since the death of Grannie Karg on Feb. 25 last.

CITY SQUARE, QUINCY

For Mr. Hibbard is using the very first stone crusher, the first concrete mixer, the first steam drills and the first derrick that have ever been used in Turkey. As the natives watch the work getting on under the management of Mr. Hibbard and his seven American foremen, with "hamels," as they call the laborers, employing in rather gingerly fashion the modern American machinery, the rumor spreads that maybe the queer American will actually complete his task before the end of the 10 years prophesied. But to make three great edifices rise from nothingness in the space of two years.

The Turks are good Missourians whenever that possibility is suggested.

Mr. Hibbard discovered that the torch of learning must be lighted at a kerosene engine. The site of the college is on the shores of the Bosphorus, and it is much easier to get supplies by water than by land. This fact he communicated to the Boston architects, Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge, to whom thecontract for the school had been awarded. No long ago a 15-horsepower engine, which will use kerosene for fuel, was shipped to him from Boston. Very soon the American will have a water launch snorting round the shores of Turkey.

Upon this launch he intends to fly the flag of the Quincy Yacht Club—rather a novel pennant to be displayed along the Bosphorus. Mr. Hibbard was fleet captain of the club last year, and one of its most enthusiastic members. His Mardeen III. was a speed boat well known to yachtsmen in this vicinity, as was his 45-footer, the Woggie, which he bought shortly before receiving his call to Contantinople.

At present little is being done on the college because Constantinople is experiencing almost the only winter weather it has ever known. The thermometer went down to 18, an unprecedented occurrence. But the bad weather lasts not more than five weeks, and at the end of that season the steam drilling and concrete mixing will start up merrily again.

Because the bluestone found on the site is not very good and because granite is rather expensive, the buildings are to be made of concrete. For the past 30 years the college has been at Scutari, on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus. Mrs. Henry Woods of Boston had given this college $50,000 for a building which was designed and about to be started when Barton Hall burned to the ground.

It was decided after the fire not to build the Henry Woods Hall, but to get a site on the European side of the Bosphorus and erect a new group of buildings. The school bought a beautiful tract of 50 acres seven miles north of Constantinople. The sea washes one edge of the territory and a lofty hill walls it in back. Midway between hill and shore is a broad plateau, some 150 feet high. Upon thisplateau the new college is to be erected. At present the buildings in process of construction are the Administration Hall, for which $150,000 was given by Helen Gould; the science building, called Henry Woods Hall, which will cost $75,000, and the dormitory, for which Mr. Rockefeller gave $50,000. Mr. Rockefeller has also given $100,000 for a heating and lighting plant, which is to include a reservoir. The college now lacks about $100,000 for the erection of a dining hall.

Upon the new site there is a large "Yali," containing 35 rooms. The trustees have rented the Murous Palace close by, and these two houses are occupied by the preparatory school. Later the preparatory school means to have new quarters of its own among the group of college halls. A house of 26 rooms that has been occupied by the British consul is to be made into a music building.

When Mr. Hibbard finishes his work there will be a broad flight of steps leading down from the administration building to a bridge that is to span the highway by which the college grounds are bisected. From the bridge a broad path will lead to the quay at the end of which now floats an American launch with the Quincy Yacht Club pennant at her stern.

BRIEFS

The Copeland club will hold a whist party this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Madison of Quincy avenue observed the tenth wedding anniversary on Mar. 17.

Councilman William J. Leslie of Ward Five is in New York for a few days on a busines trip.

The Atlantic Extension club of the Y. M. C. A., will meet in the Memorial Congregational church this evening.

The Quincy Rowing Association has three bouts scheduled for Thursday evening.

Mrs. S. I. Wood returned from New York on Saturday after spending a week among the fashionable millinery establishments of that city.

James C. Michael, formerly of this city but now of Syracuse, N. Y., was the week end guest at his home in South Quincy.

The annual visitation of the board of grand officers to Mt. Wollaston, John Hancock and Roslindale lodges of Odd Fellows will be held at Alpha hall Tuesday evening at 7.45. A meeting of Mt. Wollaston lodge will be held at 6.30 after which they will proceed to Alpha hall where the visitation and exemplification will be held. The first degree will be exemplified on a number of candidates by Roslindale lodge.

The game between Quincy Y. M. C. A. and Quincy High school has been called off after much haggling. The High school boys were not allowed to play as representatives of the school and the Y. M. C. A. management was unwilling to share the gate receipts with the five men on the team. It seems unfortunate that the mercenary question must needs be brought into the question of deciding the championship of the city. There are a great number of people who are very anxious to see the game played, and it would seem that it is up to one or the other of the organizations should show a little sportsmanship.

—The old-fashioned winter, which the aged are wont to talk about, will have to give place in the "hall of fame" to the winter which is just drawing to a close. In some sections of the state there have already been 105 days of continuous sleighing, and the Swanton Courier avers that here have been 65 days of zero weather or lower. Doubtless, the winter of 1910-1911 has not been marked by such low descents of the mercury as we have experienced, but for sustained "cold spells" it easily takes rank with the old-fashioned winters. Vermont is ready for the spring.—Barre, Vt., Times.

SECOND TEAM.

Makaria second defeated the Silent Five at Milton on Saturday in one of the fastest games of the season, at Cunningham gym by the score 27 to 26. Billy Manning was the star of the game, shooting 5 baskets from the floor and 5 from free throws, while Capt. Tirrell was there with a basket with one minute to play that put his team in the lead. Finlay played, well getting 2 baskets. The defensive work of Melville and B. Chapman was fine. Doucette and Bent played well for Silent Five.

LOCAL SPORTS.

At the annual meeting of the Quincy Tennis club held Saturday evening in Colonial hall, the following officers were elected—President, Delcevare King, vice-president, Tyler Brigham, treasurer, John S. Pfaffman, secretary, J. H. Slade. The season will open on July 4, an open doubles tournament.

The Union A. C., of South Weymouth defeated Clapp Memorial Saturday evening in one of the most exciting games of basketball seen this year. The final score was 24 to 23.

Abington Y. M. C. A. defeated the Braintree Quintet in a basketball game at Abington Saturday evening. Scollard excelled for the losers shooting 3 baskets from the floor and 9 on free tries. Wales was the star for Abington with a total of 12 baskets.

The Oliver Ames high school girls defeated the Quincy Independent girls' team Saturday afternoon in a hard fought game of basket ball.

Oliver Ames defeated Revere in the third game of the series played on the North Easton floor Saturday evening. Each team had defeated the other overwhelmingly on its home floor and the third contest should have been in a neutral gymnasium. The score of the game was 34 to 12.

H. Sutermeister was the only point winner for Quincy at the State Y. M. C. A. meet held Saturday evening in Newton. "Sutie" finished a good second in the 1,000 yard run. Fitchburg defeated Quincy in the relay race, each association running three men. Floyd, Cranshaw and Dineen ran for Quincy. L. F. LaRose, physical director of the local association was clerk of the meet.

English high school won the Boston high school track and field league indoor meet for the eighth year at the South Armory gymnasium Saturday evening. High school of Commerce was second and the Latin school third.

The Fore River soccer team defeated the Brockton team by default Saturday afternoon at Brockton. The Fore River team all showed up but only five of the other aggregation put in an appearance and after waiting for some time the Quincy men returned home.

Among the important dates of the Massachusetts Golf association are May 3 to 6, spring meeting at the Wollaston club links at Montclair, and Oct. 4 and 5, autumn meeting at the Wollaston links. It also seems likely that the open championship in July will be held at the Wollaston links.

WHY IT IS BEST.

The Daily Ledger has three times as much news as any other Quincy daily and is therefore worth two cents. FIVE times the circulation of any other Quincy daily, and is therefore the best advertising medium. This is not an idle, or reckless, or irresponsible claim, but is made advisedly.

LOOKING TO HACKETT

To Bring Home Prizes from London Marathon

William J. Hackett, the Quincy long distance runner, expects to sail for England April 1, to become acclimated so as to be in the pink of conditiin to run in the famous London marathorn races this year.

Hackett is a product of the Fore River apprentice school. He is recognized as one of the foremost distance runners in the country. Although he has only been running two years he has proved that he possesses rare judgment and keen foresight.

He was first in the race of 23 miles to the Brockton fair grounds in 1909, and again last October duplicated the performance. It was soon after winning the first Brockton race that Hackett who in that race represented the Fore River Apprentices, became a member of the Brookline gymnasium association. Since then he has competed in a number of distance races and has never failed to finish except when he was pulled off the track at a five-mile invitation race in the Mechanics building in January last year. His first race was at North Dorchester in 1909. May 1, 1909 he won the Lynn race, and was second in a 15-mile race at Newburyport. At the Fore River field day in June 1909, he won first place in the half-mile, mile and 17-mile race. He won the three-mile race at the City of Quincy Fourth of July races last year, and the same day finished second in a five-mile run at Norwood. Other races in which he has run are: 15 mile at Weymouth, mile handicap at the Weymouth fair, New England championship and others.

NO MORE IN BROCKTON.

Boxing bouts in Brockton must cease, according to City Marshal M. B. Allen. Cease they will, he asserts, even if it is necessary to have the police mix in at the ringside. Thursday night's bouts at the Palace rink marked the end of boxing clubs of this nature, under the present administration at least, City Marshal Allen being satisfied that the bouts did not keep within the law.

At no time since Mayor Howard issued his first edict against boxing several weeks ago has Marshal Allen given voice to anything that could be construed as changing his attitude toward boxing.

Mayor Howard will back up the marshal, says the Enterprise, and quotes him as follows:

"I have left the matter wholly in the hands of the city marshal. If anyone is breaking the law he will be arrested. It is for the marshal to determine whether these people are within the law or not and if he finds that they are not then it is up to him to act. I shall back him in whatever he does. These people claim that they are running a bona-fide club. The city marshal looked into the matter last night to determine for his own satisfaction whether this is true or not. If he has ordered them stopped he has probably satisfied himself that they are not running according to law, and if they try it on again there will be something doing."

MAKARIA SEASON.

The Makaria basket ball teams closed a very strenuous season on Saturday. Not having a hall in town to play in, Manager Eggleton was obliged to arrange all games out of town. Taking everything in consideration the season was a very successful one. Eighteen games were played by the first team, while the second team played eight games. The following is a complete list of players and the number of baskets each one shot during the entire season:

Glover 57, McKenzie 42, Tupper 35, Finlay 26, Manning 20, B. Chapman 11, Tirrell 10, R. Bates 6, Mundie 5, Marden 5, Harmon 5, M. Chapman 5, Bonney 3, Nicoll 2, Hogan 2, Frohwein 2, Burbage 2, Melville 1, Bates 1, Coffin 1.

—Consumptives in Syria are treated today much in the same way as the lepers have been for the last 2000 years. Tuberculosis is a comparatively recent disease among the Arabs and Syrians, but so rapidly has it spread that the natives are in great fear of it. Consequently when a member of a family is known to have the disease, he is frequently cast out and compelled to die of exposure and want. A small hospital for consumptives has been opened at Beyrout under the direction of Dr. Mary P. Eddy.

THE VILLAGE JACKASS

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

The village jackass was the real thing—an animal instead of a man. He entered the village of Sandy Hill one night at 10 o'clock, and no resident has ever discovered where he came from. There were various theories put forth, but they were theories only. There weren't any theories, however, as to what happened when that jackass struck the town. There was a public square, and he stood on that square and made public proclamation of his arrival. He brayed a haw-haw-haw that woke every sleeper in the village. Men, women and children tumbled out of bed and into the street in fear and trembling.

There was little sleep in the town the remainder of that night. At regular intervals of ten minutes that jackass brayed.

That haw-haw-haw was not a mournful bray. On the contrary, it had a jovial ring. It seemed to the people of Sandy Hill to be saying:

"Hurrah for me! I've struck it at last! We won't go home till morning and mebbe not then!"

When morning came the question was what to do with that animal. It was not easily answered. Drive him on toward Lansingburg and let that town welcome or reject him. The job was given to a gang of boys. The jackass protested, but the gang was too many for him. He was clubbed down the road for a mile and warned to keep moving on. One hour later he was back on the public square braying his joy at being home again. He was escorted toward Fishburg, but he returned again. He was escorted toward Edwardsville and toward Cranford, but he never reached those places. He put in the day at it and then returned to say how glad he was that he was in the hands of his friends once more.

That night the town cooper took charge of the animal and by tying a butter firkin to his tail prevented any braying. No jackass can bray with head and tail down. Next morning he was driven within a mile of three different towns and told that the inhabitants were waiting to welcome him, but before the last citizen of Sandy Hill had gone to bed that bray sounded in his ears. The rejected was back on the job.

Thousands of public meetings have been held for this or that reason, but it is doubtful if one was ever held before or since on account of a lone jackass. Sandy Hill held one, and the debate was spirited. A stray jackass had forced itself upon them. What was to be done in the case? All efforts to unload him on other towns had proved futile. No one had ever heard of a jackass without an owner. This beast must have one. He must call and pay damages and take his property. He must be advertised for. If he didn't show up in the legal time then the jack would be sold to the highest bidder.

That was the course pursued, but no owner came to make his claim.

The day came when the jackass was to be sold for his keep. He was to go to the highest bidder without reservation. That meant that his bray was to be thrown in. The auctioneer hollered in vain. Not a bid was made. No one offered even a dollar.

How much pounding can a jackass take and keep up with the procession? This one had more clubs, broom handles, hoe handles, ax helves and pitchforks broken over his back than would fill a freight car, but he came up to the scratch smiling. He was hit with clods, stones, brickbats, old cans and bottles and picket fences, but he didn't grow weary of well doing. One night when he broke up a prayer meeting with his bray a good deacon rushed out and knocked him unconscious with a blow from a crowbar. It was believed that he was dead, but next morning saw him wandering about as gayly as ever.

Again, a young man was courting a girl. He was interrupted by that haw-haw-haw just as he was about to ask the girl to be his'n. He ran out and fired a dose of bird shot into the disturber. No use. The jack was frisking next day.

Nevertheless there must be a limit to all things. Even an ownerless jackass must draw the dead line somewhere. This one held on for two years before he drew. Then he decided that he hadn't been used square in that Christian community. It had sent cash to the heathen of Africa and left him to eat moldy straw. It had been kind to dogs and horses, but had bruised and battered him on various occasions. He would shake the dust of the town off his hoofs, but in going he would leave a memory behind.

A railroad was being run to the village. The grading contractor was doing much blasting, and half a mile from the village limits he had 500 pounds of dynamite in a shed. The jackass took his departure at night. His way lay past that shed. He stopped and backed up to the door and kicked it in, and kicked at the boxes piled up. Then Sandy Hill had an earthquake that tore things to pieces and created damages to the amount of $25,000. That was ten years ago, but it still shows the scars and still talks of that explosion. When you ask what became of the jackass the man will shake his head and drop his voice as he replies:

"That's what we have never found out, and we shouldn't be a bit surprised to see him come back any day. If he does we shall have to abandon the town!"

ATLANTIC MEMORIAL.

The pastor preached at the Sunday morning service using for his theme "The Age of Bible neglect." The senior chorus furnished excellent music.

The Sunday School session at noon was well attended by the children.

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was held at 6 o'clock with a good attendance.

In the evening the pastor spoke upon the subject: "Tares and wheat," the second of the parables of Jesus. The boys' and men's vested choir rendered two excellent anthems. There were large audiences at both morning and evening services.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

The pastor delivered the Sunday morning sermon using for his topic "Tillers of the soil."

At four in the afternoon a musical vesper service was held. The girls' vested choir was assisted by Adelaide Thomas Sutherland, violinst; F. Lyman Hemenway, tenor; Ida L. Poore, alto, Ada F. Hinckley, organist; and Lucy A. Chase, pianist.

The Christian Endeavor society had a fine meeting from 6 to 7 in the evening.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

Prof. A. F. McGarrah of New York, the general assembly representative of this Presbytery, spoke to a large audience at the Sunday morning service.

The prayer circle met at 5.45 preceding the regular Y. P. S. C. E. meeting.

The pastor conducted the evening praise and preaching service.

The World-in-Boston stewards meet on Tuesday at 7.45.

An entertainment and tableaux by the Bible school will take place Wednesday evening beginning at 7.30.

The regular prayer meetings will be held Thursday evening, that for the young people at 7 and the church prayer meeting at 7.30.

MAYOR SHEA RECOMMENDS HANCOCK ST. WIDENING

School Committee Ask for New School Lot in the Adams School District

Considerable New Business Before City Council

Monday evening's meeting of the City Council was a busy one from beginning to end. President Bryant held the members strictly to the rules and not unfrequently did the gavel go down with a bang, which caused some member engaged in conversation to sit up and take notice.

There was also a few sky rockets, particularly with the City Solicitor, who refused to answer questions other than in his seat. The explosion came during the debate on the order giving laborers and mechanics a half holiday. Councilman Cherrington asked for the opinion of the City Solicitor if a man worked Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of a week. Then loafed two days, and went to work Saturday morning, if he would be entitled to the half holiday.

The City Solicitor asked to see the order. President Bryant called upon the City Solicitor to come forward to the desk.

Mr. McAnarney refused. He said that he was occupying the seat provided for him by the City Council, and that his voice was good and strong and could be readily heard.

President Bryant replied that as the City Solicitor had refused to come forward he did not see how the question could be answered. The question can be put in the question book however.

Councilman Cherrington said he should put the question in the question book.

A motion to lay the order on the table then prevailed, and the Council adjourned.

After the meeting there were also a few fireworks between Councilmen Smith and Nowland.

Councilmen Campbell, Craig and Leslie were absent.

GRAND JUROR.

A venire was received for the drawing of one grand juror. The Mayor, City Clerk and Councilman Bolster drew the name of Edward F. Rines.

NEW SCHOOL LOT.

A communication was received from the School Committee recommending the purchase of a lot of land for the Adams School building. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Bolster offered an order appropriating $8,000 for the purchase of 100,000 feet of land of Henry M. Faxon on Water street for a school lot. Referred to joint Committee on Public Buildings and Finance.

BETTERMENTS.

The Commissioner forwarded a schedule of the cost of building streets under the betterment act authorized by the Council of 1909. Referred to Finance Committee.

HANCOCK STREET WIDENING.

A communication was received from Mayor Shea forwarding a plan and recommending the taking of land for the widening of Hancock street between Granite and School streets. The plan proposes to widen the street so that at no point shall it be less than 65 feet., Starting at nothing in front of the Sanborn & Damon building it takes a strip of land from Col. Packard estate 13 1-2 feet at the widest point. The maximum width taken from the other estates is as follows: —Emerson property, 12 feet; Jones property, 14 feet; Wilde property, 10 feet; Green property, 6 feet; Tanney property, 8 feet; Rice property, 9 feet; Hancock hall property, 10 feet; Murphy property, 12 feet; Tarbox property, 10 feet; Berry property, 7 feet; Welch property, 4 feet to 11 1-2 feet at the corner of Elm and Hancock streets. The plan also proposes to take about 2 feet from in front of the property on the West side of the street occupied by John Hall and H. L. Kincaide & Co., so as to straighten the line. The communication was referred to the Committee on Streets.

AUTO CHEMICAL.

A communication was received from the Mayor stating that the order for the purchase of the auto chemical engine did not include equipment and recommending an appropriation of $850 for the purchase of 100 feet of hose. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Ross offered an order appropriating that amount. Referred to joint Committee on Finance and Fire Department.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL LOT.

A communication was received from the Mayor requesting authority to sell the house on the Wollaston school lot. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Parlee offered an order authorizing the Mayor to sell the same at public auction. Adopted.

A communication was received from the Mayor with inclosure from the Assessors recommending the abatement of tax amounting to $51.50 on estate of Charles H. Hardwick.

Laid on the table until later when Councilman Branch offered an order refunding that amount. Referred to Finance Committee.

NEW SPRAYER.

A communication was received from the Commissioner of Public Works recommending the purchase of an additional sprayer for gypsy moth work. Referred to Finance Committee.

PETITIONS.

A petition was received for a granolithic sidewalk on the westerly side of Winthrop avenue. Referred to Committee on Streets.

The Telephone Co. petitioned for a location for poles and attachments. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Petitions were received from the Electric Light Co. for a location for poles on Prospect avenue, Hall place, Taylor street, and Warren avenue. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received for the acceptance of Kemper street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received to have the sewer laid on Channing street. Referred to Executive.

Many applications for minor licenses were received and referred.

An application was received from F. F. Crane for an auctioneer's license. Laid on the table until later, when Councilman Bailey offered an order granting the license. Adopted.

A public hearing was held at 7.45 on petition of the street railway for a location for one pole on Elm avenue. Order recommitted.

QUINCY SCHOOL HALL.

The Committee on Public Buildings who were ordered to report on the order to finish the hall in the Quincy school building, reported progress and asked for further time. Granted.

MEMORIAL HALL.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported ought not to pass on the order of 1910 for an appropriation of $5,500 to purchase the present Grand Army hall as a memorial hall. Report accepted.

PLAYGROUND EQUIPMENT.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported an order for $750 to equip and maintain a playground, the sum to be expended under the direction of the School Committee. Referred to Finance Committee.

PARK REPAIRS.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported an order for $500 to put the park at the junction of Copeland, Common and West streets in repair. Referred to Finance Committee.

SOLDIERS' RELIEF.

The Committee on Soldiers' Relief reported an order granting Soldiers Relief. Order adopted.

ANNUAL APPROPRIATIONS.

The Finance Committee reported the annual appropriation order in print, and it was given one reading. It is published in full in another column of the Daily Ledger with comments.

SPITTING SIGNS.

The Finance Committee reported reference to the Executive on the order appropriating $200 for non-spitting signs.

ORDINANCE AMENDED.

The Committee on Ordinances reported ought to pass on the order amending the ordinance concerning licenses, so as to fix the fee for a common victuallers license at $5. Order passed.

The Committee on Licenses reported an order for a public hearing April 3, on the application of R. J. Teasdale for a license to store fuses. Adopted.

ADDING MACHINE.

The Finance Committee reported an amendment to the order for $360 for an adding machine for the assessors. The amendment charged the amount to the Excess and Deficiency Fund. Order passed.

SEWER LOAN.

The joint Committee on Sewers and Finance reported a substitute order for the order appropriating $30,000 for sewers. The substitute order added the borrowing clause which provided that the loan should extend over thirty years $1,000 being paid each year.

Councilman Branch offered a minority report which substituted an order which provided two bonds of $1,000 should be paid each year.

He moved the substitution of the minority for the majority report.

In support of his motion he said that the only difference in the orders was the length of the loan. Half of the amount is assessed on the abutters and would be returned within ten years. All the money paid on the assessments should be used to liquidate the principal and not be kept to help out the tax rate.

Councilman Smith opposed. The theory advanced is a good one, but not practical. This is almost a permanent work and the cost should be equitably divided over the length of time the work will be of value. It was unfair to taxpayers to be called upon to pay the entire cost for improvements that will be performing their function after fifteen years.

Councilman Bailey favored the minority report. Fifteen years was ample time. We should not continue to pile up a lot of debt for our children to pay. Extension of loans leads toward extravagance.

Councilman Richards favored the minority. He believed much of the

FATALITY TO CONDUCTOR

Was Caught Between Two Cars Near the Shipyard

George M. Winters, a conductor on the street railway, died at the City Hospital Monday night as the result of injuries received a short time before by being jammed between two cars near the shipyard. Winters ran one of the extra cars for Fore River workmen. Monday night when his car arrived at the Fore River works, there was a car on each side of his car. He started to shift his trolley, and in doing so stepped in between his car, and the car back of it. As he did so another car came up in charge of Motorman Kelley. Kelley did not have full control of his car, and it banged into the car ahead, forcing that car onto Winters, who was crushed between the two cars causing a rupture. The police ambulance was called and he was removed to the City Hospital where he died.

Conductor Winters lives in East Weymouth, and was about 34 years of age. He has been particularly unfortunate, having met with several accidents during the time he has been employed on the street railway. He leaves a widow and several children.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Representatives Langelier and Thomas were recorded on Monday against Sunday base ball and were in the majority as the Mahoney amendment was defeated 89 to 131. He proposed a bill permitting the playing of base ball between 2 and 6 in the afternoon of Sundays.

By a vote of 17 to 17 the peaceful picketing bill was defeated in the Senate, Senator Barnes voting in the negative.

The Fore River bridge bill has passed the House, and will be reported in the Senate today. Representative Langelier appeared before the Senate committee yesterday in favor.

LADIES' NIGHT UNION CLUB

Better Police Protection Desired at Park and Downs

Nearly 200 attended the ladies' night of the Park and Downs Union club held in the Congregational church on Monday evening.

A business meeting in charge of the president, Frank Burgess, opened the program, during which the question of better night police protection for Wollaston Park was taken up and thoroughly discussed. Action was deferred until the next club meeting. A round dozen new members was added to the club's lists.

In charge of the evening's entertainment was a committee consisting of R. J. E. Cox, George L. Colburn, J. A. Macdonald, W. A. Cochran, H. A. Matchner, T. C. Hay and Louis S. Cleaves.

Readings both humorous and pathetic were given winning the approval of all by Miss Hutchinson of Boston. An orchestra composed of Elmer Noyes, Charles Richardson, George Critchley, Charles McDonald, and Edward Mansfield accompanied on the piano by Miss Noyes rendered many pleasing instrumental selections. A cornet solo by George Critchley accompanied by his daughter Miss May Critchley was enjoyed while the Men's club quartet of which Charles Chase, A. H. Bishop, C. A. Boynton and A. F. Capen are members furnished several vocal numbers.

A social hour followed the evening's program, during which refreshments were served by this committee: N. S. Sanford, A. W. Dingwell, H. N. Newell, Louis S. Cleaves.

Notice was given of the meeting to be held on Thursday evening at Poland hall of the Park and Downs Improvement Association of which Mr. Burgess is also president.

STRUGGLE FOR FINANCE COMMITTEE

To Keep Annual Appropriations Within $12 Limit of $420,000

Increase However Is Favored for School Teachers

The annual appropriation order was reported to the City Council Monday evening by the Finance Committee, which includes Messrs. Branch, Smith, Richards, Gardner, Bolster, Ericson and Histen. The total inside the $12 limit is $422,676.25, against $404,738.00 last year, an increase of $17,938.25, which is all if not more than the law allows. The amount that can be raised by taxation for current expenses in only $387,834.

In addition to this are items for debt and interest, water and sewers, which compare as follows:

	1910.	1911,
Maturing debt	$112.675	$126,270
Interest	38,666	42,902
Water department	81,500	86,218
Sewer department	45,780	49,934
	$278,621	$305,325
Increase		$26,704

Making the total increase of 1911 over 1910 just $44,641.88. On the same assessed valuation as in 1910, viz $32,458,055, the tax rate would be increased over $1.40.

It will take an increase of over $2,000,000 in valuation to prevent an increase in tax rate.

The total appropriations are less than estimated by the Mayor, City Treasurer and School Committee.

The Assessors get $204 more than last year, and $48 above the estimate.

The Board of Health with the maintenance of the scavenger work extra, get an increase of $952, over $2000 below the estimates.

The Managers of Public Burial Places get the estimate which is a slight increase, and the same is true of full below:

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Be patient with the weather. We'll soon be eating early peas.

Congressman Hobson is getting ready his tremendous "I Told you so."

Is the President trying to teach the whole army the Mexican fandango?

Reciprocity is demonstrating that the standpatter is not so firm on his legs as formerly.

The president of Vassar declares that women students are more clever than men.

There may be hope of depleting the Japanese forces by getting that country interested in aviation.

Senator La Follette looks across the border line into Mexico and wonders whether it may not become proper for "us insurgents" to stand together even in war.

It would be interesting to know whether Dr. Aked has any reason for believing California would be led to righteousness more easily than New York.

That was a move in the right direction this week when the City Council decided that fifteen years instead of thirty years was long enough for sewer loans to run. Ten years would have been better still.

Wonder if Mayor Shea had in mind a birthday party when he extended a general invitation to the public to meet with him on his birthday on Friday evening at City Hall. He has arranged for entertainment a talk by Henry C. Long on "Public dock and a belt line railway around the Hub." Quincy is much interested in the establishment of public docks on its water front and ladies and gentlemen should be present to congratulate Mayor Shea, and to hear the illustrated lecture which has been given in other cities and has met with so much favor. It is one of the times to cooperate.

BUSINESS ACTIVE OR PASSIVE?

In deciding upon the amount of money he will spend on advertising, the modern merchant must determine whether his attitude will be active or passive.

The manufacturing world long ago settled the choice by eliminating those who decided to remain passive. Some of our older men can perhaps go back to a day when it was customary for buyers of manufactured goods to visit the factories in order to make their purchases.

Of course business was then more concentrated in the East. But retail distributors would make very difficult journeys to go the rounds of the factories, and pick out what they wanted after an inspection of the stocks at headquarters.

An old time manufacturer would have laughed at the idea that he should pay down his good money to a salesman who should go on a junketing trip around to a lot of retailers. He was sure of a certain amount of trade by simply setting in his tracks and waiting for it to come.

In the same way a remnant of retail dealers still think they are sure of a minimum of trade from people that pass their store windows. But they are really as much out of the game as the manufacturer who does not send out a salesman.

The manufacturer who should decline to adopt the modern method of reaching his public might make the very best goods in the market. Yet he would give the impression that he was dead. It is impressions, favorable and unfavorable, that bring or repel trade. The customer has no time for thorough investigation. If he sees that a manufacturer is not adopting the means of selling goods which the most of his rivals find profitable and essential, he concludes that he is no longer a factor in the competition, and that it is a foolish waste of time to consider his offers.

This is precisely the attitude of the general public toward the retailer who fails to advertise.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

There are thirteen newspaper men in the state legislature this year and Boston Common says of them: "The reporters, both Republican and Democratic, all appear to be progressive, the publishers are all standpatters, and those who are both owners and editors are trying to select soft seats upon the fence." In other words, exactly as in other business, the newspaper men with the greatest responsibilities are the most inclined to conservatism.—Brockton Times.

The proposition for a "real" Boston that is now being urged hardly meets with an enthusiastic response from all the cities and towns that comprise the district it is proposed to control in the interest of Boston, Newton, for instance, is far from unanimous in support of House bill 715, presented by the Chamber of Commerce. It is claimed that the bill was not asked for, and is not being promoted by the 40 cities and towns interested. A committee of representative citizens have unanimously recommended that the mayor and city solicitor be requested to take all proper means in opposition to the propostion.

The Somerville Journal, discussing annexation of that city of Boston, says "In general, the trend of the best thought on the subject is away from great municipal consolidations, and in particular Somerville has every reason to desire to retain her identity and self government unimpaired. We believe that a great majority of Somerville citizens are so convinced."

To have Boston expand and secure a population equal to that of other cities in the country would be of great advantage to the Hub, and the Chamber of Commerce is earnestly pursuing a course which it believes will accomplish the desired result. But the subject is looked at from various points of view. A great mass of individuals do business in Boston and make their homes in the suburbs. It would not benefit the suburbs as much as it would help Boston, and it would increase the taxes of the suburbanite without giving him a compensatory benefit.

A great deal of work will have to be done before the cities like Newton and Somerville will be able to surrender their identity and cast in their lot with Boston. The city desires an extension. What will she give in return for territory? It is a business proposition, and neither party to a trade willingly surrenders an advantage. As yet Boston bids are not high enough.—Lynn Item.

KILLED HIS PARENTS

Young Fitzgibbons Then Attempted to Burn Their Bodies

Ansonia, Conn., March 21.—Thomas Fitzgibbons, Jr., has confessed to the double murder of his father and mother here, in which, during a fit of insanity, he killed his father with an axe and his mother when she interfered, and attempted to burn the bodies by firing their home.

Before the bodies could be removed that of the elder Fitzgibbons was badly burned. A neighbor, Edward Fogarty, secured the son and held him until the arrival of the police.

Coroner Mix secured the confession from young Fitzgibbons during an inquest. Fitzgibbons was recently discharged from an insane retreat, and is declared to be insane.

WOMEN WEEP AT VERDICT

Girl Who Killed a Man to Save Her Honor Is Acquitted

Rutland, Vt., March 21.—Camila Covino, a 17-year-old Italian girl of Poultney, was freed of the charge of murdering Luigi Vermillo after a hearing lasting five and one-half hours in the Rutland district court. The girl pleaded justification.

She testified she shot Vermillo because he had made improper advances to her. The case was the first in which the "unwritten law" enters ever heard in Rutland county.

The girl took her discharge with the utmost coolness. Many of the women in the courtroom wept after Justice Swinnerton, who had presided through the hearing, had told Miss Covino she was free.

Coal Miners' Yearly Toll

Harrisburg, March 21.—It cost the lives of 1125 men to mine 231,966,070 tons of coal in Pennsylvania last year, according to the annual report of the chief of the state department of mines, just issued.

BRINGS SUIT FOR ALIMONY

Amelie Rives Says Former Husband Promised Her $3600 a Year

New York, March 21.—Supreme Court Justice Guy appointed George M. Mackeller as referee to take testimony on the application of Princess Troubetskoy for $3600 annual income which she says was promised her in lieu of alimony by her former husband, John A. Chaloner. The princess was Amelie Rives, the novelist, and divorced Chaloner, then known as Chanler, in 1895.

The application was not opposed by Chaloner nor any of his relatives. Chaloner, under the laws of this state, is an incompetent, but has been declared sane by the courts of Virginia, where he now resides.

NO SUNDAY BASEBALL

Bay State Solons Change Minds When Second Vote Is Taken

Boston, March 21.—Sunday baseball, amateur as well as professional, was defeated in the house after a warm debate in which the body once went on record as favoring the proposition that boys be allowed to play. But when the chamber had gone on record as favoring boys' baseball on Sunday it turned about and killed the entire proposition.

HAS NO TERMS FROM REBELS

No Peace While Men Are Armed, Says Limantour

REFORMS WILL BE GRANTED

Government Cannot, However, on Pain of Extinguishing Itself, Accede to Armed Pressure—Says Insurrection Constitutes Treason and Appeals to Patriotism to Save the Country From Danger From Outside

Mexico City, March 21.—Jose Limantour, minister of finance, arrived here safely after his trip through the rebel-infested section of Mexico. He was given an enthusiastic greeting by waiting diplomats and other officials when he stepped from the private car Hidalgo. As Minister Limantour passed through the streets to his home he was hailed as "The saviour of his country."

With a warning to all Mexicans that every day the rebellion continues the danger of international complications increases, a plea to them to rally to the support of President Diaz, and a declaration that the government never can enter into peace negotiations with individuals in arms, Limantour has begun a task of pacification.

Limantour said the statement that he was the bearer of conditions for the establishment of peace, placed in his hands by the Maderos in New York, was an absurdity. He continued:

"With bad grace could I be a bearer of such a paper, when publicly I have declared that the government could never enter into negotiations with individuals in arms.

"A government should do that which a reasonable public opinion demands, but it should not and cannot, on pain of extinguishing itself, accede to the armed pressure of a group of misguided sons of the country. They must lay down their arms, if they wish to bring about the reforms that may be necessary."

Of the insurrection Limantour had nothing to add, he said, to what he has previously said, namely, that it constitutes treason.

"It is a crime of 'lese patria' that those Mexicans who are fighting in the ranks of the insurrectos are committing, because every day the danger of international complications increases. I hope earnestly that those misguided citizens who have taken part in this movement will soon open their eyes to the light of reason and not remain longer deaf to the persuasive voice of patriotism."

NEGROES ARE NOT WANTED

But One Black Man In Southern City of 5000 Inhabitants

Birmingham, Ala., March 21.—Cullman, Ala., a prosperous city of 5000 inhabitants, is a curiosity in southern towns. Only one negro is permitted to live there, and the exception is countenanced only because of the popularity of the man in whose home the negro is a servant.

The population is largely dominated by thrifty German-Americans. All other southern towns and cities have a negro population of from 40 to 60 percent of the whole.

Many negroes have attempted to become residents of Cullman, but were soon convinced that they had better go elsewhere.

MANIAC IN A BANK

Demands $1,000,000 and Gives Captors a Hard Battle

New York, March 21.—A maniac armed with a long knife terrorized scores of people in the National City bank, one of the Rockefeller institutions, by demanding $1,000,000, and then threatening the lives of President Vanderlip and Cashier Keegan.

The man was George Shangorre, a Syrian lace salesman. He is 25 years old and is powerfully built. Before he was subdued he fought eight men, and it was finally necessary to give a hyperdemic injection of a drug in order to handle him and get him to the Old Slip station.

BOLD WORK OF ROBBERS

Heavy Safe Taken From Chicago Barber Shop In Broad Daylight

Chicago, March 21.—A safe, weighing 480 pounds, was taken out through a rear door of the barber shop of Maurice Carroll in broad daylight and then all doors were carefully locked again, leaving only scratches on the woodwork to show how the theft was committed.

The three thieves were opening the strong box several blocks away in an alley when discovered. They escaped.

Had a Rough Voyage

Providence, March 21.—The schooner Warner Moore, laden with 330,000 feet of yellow pine, from Fernandina, arrived here after a twenty-one days' voyage, during which she was four times nearly sent to the bottom by successive gales all the way from Cape Hatteras to Point Judith.

CONTRACT IS REJECTED

Boston Councilman Sees Corruption In Disposal of Garbage

Boston, March 21.—The $3,000,000 refuse contract with the Boston Disposal company was rejected yesterday by the city council, and an order issued for the advertising again for bids.

James M. Curley led the attack on the contract, charging that the Boston Disposal company's contract "reeked with graft and corruption, and carried with it a gigantic scheme to 'milk' the city as it had never been attempted before."

Commissioner Rourke's plan to prevent the city garbage collectors taking garbage from stores and business houses, he claimed, was part of the plan to further the success of the garbage contract.

OUR GREATEST DANGERS

Declared to Be Restless Life, Modern Literature and the Drama

Chicago, March 21.—The restless, moving life we lead will drive us all to neurasthenia. Leading the pace that kills, not so much as regards vice, but the desire to be always on the move, has attacked the mental and moral fibre of the American brain.

These are some of the signals of danger set up in the roadway of American life by Rev. John Cavanaugh, president of Notre Dame university.

Modern literature and the drama of today were attacked by the university head as narcotics to the will and morals and declared to be the greatest developers of a tribe of maudlin weaklings.

SEARCHING INQUIRY MAY BE NECESSARY

Foss Looks Into Charges of Brutality In Insane Asylums

Boston, March 21.—Governor Foss spent practically an entire day investigating the charges of extreme brutality in the state insane hospitals, being in conference with Vernon L. Briggs, the noted alienist, and a number of others.

Governor Foss stated last night that if the charges made by Briggs concerning the treatment of the insane in the institutions of the state were true they certainly demanded an investigation, and that a searching inquiry into the methods of the institutions would probably become a necessity.

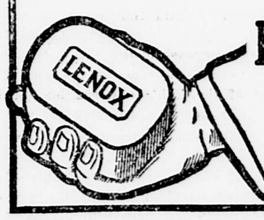

Asked as to the method to be pursued in the investigation, he said that he believed that it was up to the legislature to determine this.

THE WATCH ILLUSTRATED

Instructive Talk by H. E. Duncan at Wollaston

At an open meeting of the Men's club of St. Chrysostom's parish on Monday evening, to which the other men's organizations of Wollaston and vicinity were invited. H. E. Duncan of the Waltham Watch company delivered a stereopticon lecture upon "The mechanism and manufacture of a pocket watch."

The lecture was of added interest because of the incorporation with the views of shadowgraphs of the various working parts of the watch which the speaker was able to have set in motion and perform their alloted duty in the work of the watch.

The first American watches were manufactured in Boston by P. S. Bartlett and were made as a novelty to run eight days. Up to the present day the Waltham Watch company has turned out 19,000,000 watches.

It used to cost 94 cents for the labor and materials in a watch, and $2.50 to make it run and keep time. Through the inventions of Mr. Church the company were enabled to install automatic machinery that lessened materially this second cost of the watch.

There are 161 pieces to a watch and in their manufacture these are handled 16,000 times. Watches to the amount of 3,000 daily are turned out. Six months are taken in the process of their manufacture, and there are a million and a half in different stages of completion at one time in the factory. A minute description of the different parts of a watch and their working relation to one another were shown. The working models in motion cast upon the screen caused an unusual interest.

Mr. Duncan explained the balance wheel which adjusts the watch to heat and cold, and enables the company to manufacture a watch that varies but 30 seconds in a month.

Views of the exterior and interior of the factory at Waltham were shown after which the speaker closed with slides and a description of the private observatory and clock room by which the company is able to secure the true and exact time.

Following a rising vote of thanks those present adjourned for a social hour, and refreshments after which the usual business meeting took place.

RAID AT QUINCY POINT.

Inspector Goodhue and Officer Johnson raided the premises of Peter Delory on Broadway, Monday afternoon, and seized a small quantity of Jamaica ginger. Delory was arraigned in court for violation of the liquor law and case continued until March 30.

PREACHER FOR MAYOR

Baptist Who Thinks Prohibition a Farce Heads "Wet" Ticket

Colorado City, Col., March 21.—A Baptist preacher for the head of a wet ticket is the anomalous situation here.

At a convention of the so-called Non-Partisan party, which is more generally referred to as the Liberal ticket, Rev. Duncan Lamont, former pastor of the Baptist church, was nominated for mayor.

He was one of the drafters of a platform which declared for high license as against prohibition, and declares that prohibition is a farce.

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY CHICAGO

present municipal debt was occasioned by long loans. There was no question but a man doing business would like to get by and extend his liabilities over a long term of years. He hoped long term loans would be shut off.

On a rising vote the minority report was accepted 11 voting yes and 8 no.

The question was then on substitution.

Councilman Smith raised a point of order that under the rules there could be no substitution unless in the form of an amendment.

President Bryant ruled that the City Council had been substituting orders for years, and it was perfectly legal. The original order was of no account as it did not have any borrowing clause.

The substitute was then accepted and the order ordered to a second reading.

NEW ORDERS.

Councilman Gardner offered an order for a granolithic sidewalk on the southerly side of Beach street from Hancock to Kemper street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Bailey offered an order granting permission to Mary Harris to have children under fifteen years of age appear on the stage at the First church. Adopted.

Councilman Bailey offered an order granting an auctioneer's license to Frank Fessenden Crane. Adopted. His bond was approved.

Councilman Bailey offered an order granting Marguerite L. Holbrook permission to have children appear on the stage at Music hall, Atlantic. Adopted.

Councilman Cherrington offered an order for a cinder sidewalk on the east side of Hancock street from Neponset bridge to Billings road, and on the west side from Billings road to Linden street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

LIGHT ORDERS.

Councilman Smith offered an order for a light on Conant street and moved reference to the Executive.

Councilman Branch moved reference to the Committee on Streets.

Commissioner Bainbridge in answer to questions said that one light had been put in this year. In reply as to how the increase in the bills for lighting occurred each month he said that some of the lights ordered last year were not put in until this year.

Councilman Branch said that by sending these orders to the Executive the Council lost all control of amount to be expended for street lighting. It as up to the City Council to say how much should be appropriated for lights.

Councilman Smith claimed that the Council did not lose control over street lights for the amount was provided in the budget. If the Council saw fit it could reduce the amount appropriated for that purpose and thus cut off lights.

The order was referred to the Executive, the motion of Councilman Branch being voted down.

Councilman Richards offered an order for a light on Verchild street. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Cherrington offered an order for a light on Newbury avenue. Referred to Executive.

CONGRESSMEN THANKED.

Councilman Gardner offered a resolve thanking the Senators, Representatives and members of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce in behalf of an act of Congress to grant an appropriation toward the construction of the Weymouth Back river bridge. Adopted.

CALENDAR.

The orders granting the Telephone Co. attachments, location for poles and underground conduits took their second reading and were passed to be ordained under suspension of the rules.

The order granting the Gas Co. permission to lay mains took its second reading and was passed under suspension of the rules.

The order granting the Angier Mills permission to build an industrial track and bridge over Old Colony avenue took its second reading and was passed under suspension of the rules.

On motion of Councilman Branch it was voted when the Council adjourn it be until Monday, March 27.

HALF HOLIDAY.

The order granting city laborers and mechanics a half holiday took its second reading and the rules were suspended.

Councilman Smith spoke at length in favor of the order. He said the spirit of a half holiday was becoming general in all business. The legislature gives the Council a right to do this. It means but three hours a week. Quincy is not a pioneer in this movement. Out of 32 cities, ten get the half holiday. In justice to the employees they should get this. All other classes of city employees get a holiday. In the fire department it cost the city $78 a man for vacations and holidays. In the fire department $160.25 a man, and among the clerks at City Hall an average of $96. Had this order passed last year it would have cost but $2,700.

Councilman Sanberg asked if it was not better to give the men more pay, and what the Councilman would do if he was Mayor.

Councilman Smith replied, that what he would do if Mayor had no bearing on the question.

Councilman Richards favored the order, although there were some features of it with which he did not agree. It was hard to tell how many days a man must work in order to get the three hours. The average street employe is entitled to some consideration. No matter if men are laborers, they are human beings, and he could sympathize with the men who worked in the trenches.

Councilman Nowland opposed. Eight hours is the most that any work. The police and firemen were different as they work more hours. If holiday was granted they should make up the time.

Councilman Branch said in view of the financial condition of the city we are warranted in watching the expenditures closely. It will reduce the efficiency of the City Council. The appropriation for streets is too small now. He regretted that the city was not in proper financial condition to grant the holiday. A readjustment of hours would accomplish what was needed until the city can afford to give the holiday.

Councilman Bailey could not see how we could spend the people's money for holidays. If the city was a paying corporation it would be different.

Councilman Boyd asked the Commissioner about work done overtime, and the Commissioner said they were asked to do so sometimes. In the Water department certain men were kept. Others were on duty in the winter to run snow ploughs. These men got out as soon after 5 o'clock as possible.

Councilman Gardner asked if in his judgment a half holiday should be granted these men.

Commissioner Bainbridge tried to evade a direct answer, but President Bryant said he should answer the question by yes or no, or he could refuse to answer. The Commissioner being pressed finally answered no.

Councilman Smith tried to help the Commissioner out by raising a point of order that the question was one for the Executive to answer, but President Bryant rules that the Commissioner should answer.

Councilman Richards asked if it was not a fact that men were shifted from one part ofthe city to another and that it occasioned some hardship on the men. The Commissioner replied yes. Continuing the Commissioner said that he believed every man should be paid what he is worth.

Councilman Cherrington asked of the City Solicitor if a man worked Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and there was nothing to do on Thursday and Friday if he was entitled to a half holiday.

President Bryant asked the City Solicitor to come forward to answer.

City Solicitor McAnarney replied that he had a good voice and that he was occupying the seat provided by the Council.

President Bryant then said, as the City Solicitor refuses to come forward I do not see how he can answer the question. If the City Solicitor fails to answer the question it can be put in the question book.

Councilman Nowland moved to lay on the table. Voted.

Vote doubted. On a rising vote the motion prevailed 11 voting yes and 8 no.

Ajourned at 9.58 until March 27.

DIED IN CALIFORNIA.

Mrs. Chester R. Saffell, who was Miss Masie Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hill, has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the death of her husband, which occurred at Los Angelos, California, Saturday. Shortly after Mr. and Mrs. Saffell's marriage a year ago they removed to Montreal, where Mr. Saffell was employed as an electrician. While on a visit to her parents in Quincy she was summoned home by the illness of her husband. The attending physicians said he must remove to a milder climate if he wished to recover, and he went to California where his parents resided. His health did not seem to improve and an operation was performed. He failed to rally, however, and passed away Saturday. He was about 24 years of age.

BRAINTREE TOWN MEETING

$60,000 Recommended for a New Brick Schoolhouse

The adjourned town meeting of Braintree was called to order Monday evening at 7.45 with Moderator Benjamin H. Woodsum in the chair. The meeting proceeded at once to business and most of the remaining articles were finally disposed of as recorded.

Article 44 which by previous vote had been indefintely postponed was taken up for reconsideration and finally carried, the sum of $680 being appropriated for raising the maximum salary of grade teachers. There was a considerable flow of oratory by Mr. Kelley and Mr. Abercrombie, some rather plain talk was delivered concerning the School board and R. L. Wiggin, superintendent of schools, was called upon for some information. This appropriation is only for about four months and means a much larger sum for the whole year. The vote to appropriate the sum was greeted with great applause, especially by the ladies in the gallery.

Under articles 45 and 46, the sum of $80 was appropriated for building a fence between the Monatiquot school grounds and the land of John T. Conway, and the sum of $200 was voted for finishing (satisfactory to State requirements) the stairways to hall in Penniman school building.

Article 47 was to see if the town will vote to purchase land in Precinct 2 and erect a new school building thereon, and arise and appropriate money for the same.

Under this head, the committee appointed last year to investigate the matter reported that there was needed a two-story brick building having ten rooms, an assembly hall, etc., up to date in all respects, the cost to be approximately $60,000. The report was placed on file and the committee given a vote of thanks.

The members of the aforesaid committee are as follows: George O. Wales, Paul Monaghan, Elmer E. Abercromble, George R. Dobson, Otis B. Oakman, Albert E. Avery and Herbert A. Bryant.

A new committee to report further on the proposed school will be appointed by the Moderator.

Article 48, appropriations for Thayer public library, was disposed of thus: For general expenses, $1,200; for distribution of books (East Braintree) $150; for janitor, $250.

Under articles 49 and 50, $100 was appropriated to be expended on the town lands, and $200 for assisting Post 87, G. A. R., in defraying the expenses for Memorial day.

Under articles 51 and 52 the sum of $2,500 was raised for miscellaneous expenses, $500 of this to be expended for a new machine for repairing stone roads, and the sum of $1,500 for the abatement of taxes.

Relative to article 53 it was voted that the town devote the income from private consumers of electric light for operating expenses, repairs and renewals.

Concerning article 54, it was the sense of the meeting that there be appropriated from the unexpended balance of the appropriations of 1910, the sum of $2,500 to restore to the town treasury the amount of the "Caleb Stetson" note so-called, and that there be confirmed the payment in 1899 of two notes amounting to $2,500 and that such payment should be declared a liquidation of that much of the indebtedness of the Electric Light department.

Under article 55, the sum of $2,237 was voted for extension of lines, connecting new consumers, repairs and renewals.

—In Denmark, the campaign against tuberculosis has been carried on systematically since 1895. The reporting of living cases of tuberculosis in Denmark has been more successful than in almost any other country of the world. The death rate from pulmonary tuberculosis has fallen from 19.32 to 13.33 per 10,000 from 1895 to 1908. There is now one sanatorium for every 1244 inhabitants and every tuberculosis patient is assured of treatment at a cost within reach of anyone. The state pays three-fourths of the expense of treatment and the patient or his community the remaining fourth.

MADAM:— This is why our prices are Lower than Boston:

Our rent, advertising, delivery, incidental and fixed running expenses, are smaller than Boston stores. Seventy per cent of our business is cash and requires no book-keeping.

If Kincaide's building was in the Boston retail district, it would rent for $80,000 a year. Boston advertisers pay from $4 to $6 an inch in Boston papers, and a firm's advertising will often amount to $300 a day. Long distance cartage, street blockades, heavier wear and tear of the wagons increase delivery costs. A big office force, high salaried buyers, buyers' expenses, department managers, private fire and police protection, all increase expenses of Boston stores.

KINCAIDE has low rent, small advertising expense, lower delivery costs, no buyers' or managers' salaries or expenses, no private fire or police protection, fewer incidental expenses. KINCAIDE'S profit would be a loss for the big city stores. KINCAIDE has a more complete stock at popular prices than Boston stores.

Come in, look around, note prices, compare them with other stores, then think it over.

QUINCY MAN ON COMMITTEE

In Charge of Agitation in "Real Boston" Campaign

"The idea indorsed by the Boston chamber of commerce, of a metropolitan council consisting of representatives from each city and town with merely advisory powers, would accomplish no real good. In fact, it is an absurd proposition in view of the seriousness of the metropolitan problem. No body of men, vested with such infinitesimal power as this idea suggests, could accomplish much that would be worth while."

The above views were expressed by Walter A. Webster, Esq., in the Sunday Globe, who advocated at length a "Borough System" for governing Metropolitan Boston. His reasons will be given more at length in a future issue of the Daily Ledger.

On Monday the Boston News Bureau issued the following bulletin which will be of special interest as a Quincy man is appointed on the committee:

The "Real Boston" campaign of the Boston Chamber of Commerce has been placed in charge of a special committee consisting of Hugh Bancroft, chairman, March G. Bennett, Henry L. Kincaide, Franklin W. Canse and Willard Welsh.

With the submission of the report accepted at the last meeting of the Chamber, the term of the former "Real Boston" committee expired. This committee was appointed to work out a plan for securing census recognition of "Real Boston," and provide a means whereby the 40 cities and towns in the Metropolitan district could work together on matters of common interest without sacrificing their indivdualty or political independence. The new committee will have in charge the agitation in favor of the "Real Boston" measure.

In entering upon his new duties, Chairman Bancroft says:

"The simplest way to get together is to get together. The Chamber of Commerce has 4500 representative men as members. Almost all of them live in 'Real Boston,' and by far the greater proportion in the suburbs. Of these men 99 44-100 are optimists, and believe in their neighbors and themselves. They know that it is only lack of faith and lack of unity that has checked the development of our real city to its full measure. They are satisfied that the sceptic and the knocker have had their innings long enough.

"We need a single body representing the numerous parts of the real city to pass upon the big questions of progress that affect us all. Such a Metropolitan council as is now advocated, consisting of one member from each of the cities and towns, with advisory powers, was proposed as far back as 1891. For 20 years we have been discussing every aspect of the proposition. We are told that nothing ought to be done this year because it would be hasty legislation!"

The official weekly publication of the Chamber this morning, says:

What would be the effect if other cities, jealous of the increased showing made by "Real Boston," were to extend their boundaries to include an equivalent area?

Take St. Louis, generally considered as bigger than Boston give it St. Louis City and St. Louis counties, then reach over into Illinois and throw in St. Clair and Madison counties. The result is 1972 square miles, nearly five times as great as "Real Boston" And the total population is only 979,163!

Out in San Francisco they have started a campaign for a "real" city, and have themselves selected an area of 700 square miles. By this they hope to secure an adequate rating, according to their own estimate of 775,000 population

Pittsburg is a center of a thriving community. Let us base our calculations upon all of Allegheny county, which, with the city itself, has an area of 758 square miles. Here the population is only 1,018,463.

To do no injustice in comparing Baltimore with "Real Boston" add in all of the three surounding counties, giving an area of 1351 square miles—over three times Boston's—736,543 live there.

Cincinnati is on the border line, so it may be better to include in addition to Hamilton county, Ohio, three contiguous counties in Kentucky. The city plus the whole of these four counties has an aera of 969 square miles (twice Boston's) but the population included would be no greater than 609,876.

Cleveland and all the rest of Cuyahoga county cover 472 square miles, populated by 637,425 people.

Detroit furnishes about the best example. Add to it the three neighboring counties and you have the tremendous area of 1983 square miles, but only 613,772 inhabitants.

If Buffalo should count in all of Erie county she would have an area of 1040 miles, but the population gain would be slight— the total being only 528,985.

Group Minneapolis and St. Paul together and add all of the five surrounding counties. This time the "real" city would thus obtain a grand total area of 2128 miles, but it would have only 620,832 people.

Providence, with an area of 605 square miles round it, would include Bristol, Kent and Providence counties, Rhode Island and a portion of Bristol county, Mass. Estimating the population, this portion of Bristol county, the community would be rated at 535,000.

What if other cities should follow Boston's example? If any of them are as inaccurately represented in census reports, they are entitled to a readjustment of census ratings regarding them, but the results would not endanger in the least degree "Real Boston's supremacy."

BRIEFS

A bright morning.

The moon will set at midnight.

Womens club notes are a feature of the Wednesday Daily Ledger.

Odd Fellows exemplification this evening.

The funeral of Enoch H. Doble will be held tomorrow at 2.30 from his late residence on Cross street.

A contract has been signed for another full-page "ad" in the Daily Ledger at an early date.

The household furniture and piano of Mary Pinardi of West street will be sold at public auction Friday afternoon.

The many friends of Frank Avery of Mill street will be sorry to hear that he is about to undergo a serious operation at the Quincy Hospital.

The Daily Ledger circulation is increasing every day, for the Daily Ledger is now printing from 15 to 20 columns of local news each issue.

Thomas F. Mitchell of Methuen formerly of Wollaston spent the week end with his brother's family the Edward F. Mitchell's of Brook street.

The annual meeting of the Wollaston Park Tennis club will take place on Wednesday evening, March 29, at the residence of G. M. Campbell, Merrymount avenue.

Are you interested in the movement for the rebuilding of the present Neponset bridge? A hearing will be given at the State House tomorrow at 10.30 A. M. The bill is practically the same as last year.

The Junior Laymen of First church are having final rehearsals in two farces which they are to give Friday evening in Unitarian chapel under the direction of Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis. "A Little Tiff" and "A Pair of Burglars" are the plays. Both of these are screamingly funny farces which have always met with great success wherever produced.

SIMPLE ESSENCE MAKES BEST HOME COUGH SYRUP.

Many families in this community have found a wonderful blessing in the shape of a home-made laxative cough syrup which is the most effective cough and cold cure obtainable anywhere at any price. A whole pint can be made for less than eighty cents so that it is 8 or 10 times cheaper than labeled mixtures. Buy of the druggist 2 1-2 ozs. Essence Mentho-Laxene and empty it into a pint bottle. Pour over a pint of granulated sugar a half-pint of boiling water, stir, cool and then fill up the pint bottle with syrup. Full directions accompany the package for usage of children and adults. Nothing breaks up a cold so quickly and a cough is immediately relieved.

BOY BURGLARS SENTENCED

Harold Hunt Goes to Reformatory and Brother to Reform School

Boston, March 21.—Harold Hunt, 20, was yesterday afternoon sent to the reformatory at Concord for a term of five years and one month, and Fred E. Hunt, who is only 15 years of age, was sent to the Suffolk school.

Both boys were arrested in connection with about fifteen breaks into stores and offices.

Annie J. Wunder, who was arrested at the time the raid was made on the boys' rooms in the South End, was sentenced last week to Sherborn.

Millionaire Going on Stage

Boston, March 21.—Robert M. Middlemas, a graduate of Harvard in the class of 1909, a millionaire, has decided to give up the insurance business and become an actor. He will make his initial appearance within two weeks at the Castle Square theatre, playing a minor role in "The Merchant of Venice." He is 27 years old.

HARSH POLICY TOWARD CHINA

Leads to the Resignation of Russian Cabinet

STOLYPIN LONG IN OFFICE

His First Crisis With Czar, the Country or His Administrative Machinery —Advisers Divided on Chinese Proposition—Minister of Foreign Affairs Proves a Disturbing Factor by Forcing the Pace

St. Petersburg, March 21.—The cabinet of Premier Stolypin has resigned. Emperor Nicholas accepted the resignations.

It was announced from a trustworthy source that the emporer has signed the appointment of Minister of Finance Kokovsoff to be the new premier. Kokovsoff has been one of the ministry opposed to the militant tone assumed by Russia in its negotiations with China.

Dissensions in the Russian cabinet over the measure adopted to compel China to adhere more strictly to the provisions of the treaty of 1881, particularly as they affected Russian trade in Mongolia, have been reported recently. It has been stated that M. Zazonoff, the minister of foreign affairs, dealt more vigorously with the Chinese government than was justified under the circumstances, in the opinion of Kokovsoff, who was not enthusiastic over the prospect of a heavy expenditure necessitated by military demonstration against China.

At the same time the cabinet as a whole has been sharply criticized in the douma for failing to maintain Russian prestige abroad. The Stolypin ministry was formed on July 22, 1906. There have been frequent changes and Kokovsoff is one of the few who entered the government with Stolypin.

Stolypin has held office longer than the prime minister of any other government in Europe. Up to the present time he has had no serious crisis with his sovereign, his supporters, the country, or his administrative machinery. His record is the more remarkable, as Russia is just emerging from a condition of absolute rule, and is just beginning to feel its way along the path of constitutionalism.

Throughout this period Stolypin has conducted the government firmly, and yet progressively. Although Stolypin has had difficult problems to face, none has been quite so serious as that of the Chinese proposition, in which, as mentioned above, he has found a difference of opinion among his advisors.

Kokovsoff, who is said to be in line for the premiership, has not beeen in sympathy with the militant tone taken by Russia in the Chinese negotiations.

Gloomy comparisons with the cross purposes which landed Russia in the war with Japan have been frequently heard in relation to the handling of the present Russo-Chinese situation.

As Viceroy Alexieff and his supporters at the court dominated Russia's policy in the Far East a decade ago in defiance of M. Lamsdorff's peaceful diplomacy, so M. Sazonoff, the minister of foreign affairs, has been forcing the pace in defiance of both the Russian treasury and war departments.

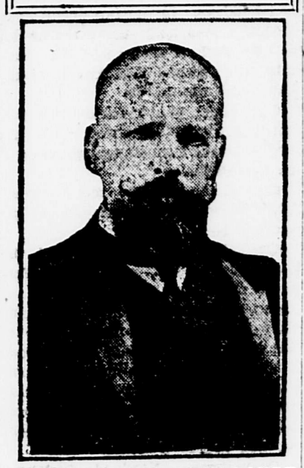

The peremptory tone of M. Sazonoff's first note to China can never be explained on other than temperamental grounds as notifying China that he was a man not to be trifled with. But some weeks earlier Kakavsoff emphasized the necessity for dealing circumspectly with China. When appealed to for an appropriation for Russian military occupation and the isolation of the worst plague spots beyond Harbin he declared that apart from its doubtful efficacy in exterminating the plague, such a course would further embitter the Chinese, who were already on very unsatisfactory terms with Russia.

Kokovsoff has enjoyed a considerable reputation in the international relations of Russia. It was he, it will be remembered, who travelled to the Far East to meet Prince Ito when the latter was assassinated at Harbin. The nnance minister held the same post in the cabinet of Count Witte, and has always been regarded as extremely broad and liberal in his views. He is about 58 years of age, renowned both at home and abroad for his integrity and sterling honesty, and has possessed in an altogether exceptional degree the confidence and favor of three successive emperors of Russia—namely, Alexander II., Alexander III. and the present occupant of the throne.

"PALMED" DIAMOND LOCKET

Prestidigitator Practices His Profession In Department Store

New York, March 21.—Chester Hograss, said to be a theatrical man and professional prestidigitator, was found guilty in general sessions court of stealing a diamond studded locket from a department store.

According to the evidence, Hograss "palmed" the locket while fumbling in a tray of jewelry and then, holding his palm downward, drew on his glove. Sentence was deferred.

BAY STATE SENATE KILLS PICKET BILL

Its Fate Is Decided by Vote of President Treadway

Boston, March 21.—The peaceful picketing bill was killed in the senate by President Treadway. He killed it by casting his own vote against to tie the vote on the bill.

The vote was 17 to 16 in favor of ordering the bill to a third reading. Treadway directed the senate clerk to call his name. He voted "No." This made the vote a tie and killed the bill, as a majority was necessary to pass it.

This bill, one of the most important organized labor measures, would have allowed "peaceful persuasion" with strike breakers by workingmen who are on strike.

It was reported upon favorably this year for the first time by the committee on labor. It was filed in the senate.

ISSUE OF DICKENS STAMPS

Proposed as Testimonial to Descendants of Noted Author

London, March 21.—The fact that there are twenty living descendants of Charles Dickens—three children and seventeen grandchildren—"who are by no means placed in the world as descendants of Dickens ought to be," was made known to the public by Lord Rosebery in a meeting attended by many prominent men.

Now that the centenary of the birth of Dickens is about to be celebrated throughout Great Britain it is proposed to raise a testimonial by the issuance and sale of 1,000,000 penny stamps bearing the portrait of the great novelist.

HELD IN $5000 BAIL

Brown Pleads Not Guilty to Forging Draper's Name on Note

Boston, March 21.—Robert S. Brown, who was brought to Boston from New York on an indictment warrant charging him with forging and uttering a check for $5000, with George O. Draper's indorsement, pleaded not guilty when arraigned in the superior criminal court, and was held in $5000 bail.

Brown is a member of the firm of Robert S. Brown & Co. of Boston. It is alleged that he gave a note for $5000 to Charles H. Worster and forged Draper's indorsement on the back.

"If It's a Ralston It's Correct"

It is knowledge rather than "knack" which enables a man to dress both correctly and becomingly.

No part of a man's apparel changes in style more often or more radically than does his shoes. That is the reason why men who care to be correctly shod and who are particular about their personal appearance insist on getting "Ralston Authority Styles." We carry a sufficient variety of correct styles to enable you to express your own individuality in your selection.

The new shoe fashions are almost always first shown in Ralston Shoes. Come in and see the season's latest.

The Yankee Knack

THE story of American industrial development has no more fascinating or impressive chapter than that devoted to the discoveries and improvements resulting from the extraordinary inventive genius of the New England workman. He is never content with things as they are. He is forever experimenting—and successfully. He searches until he finds the soul of the machine, and from this intimate acquaintance he begins to eliminate and improve. He accomplishes the paradox of perfecting a perfect article. If there is a practicable way to make one part do the work of two, if some added device will simplify a process or improve a product, he will not rest till he has worked out the problem.

This passion for invention has been from the first a vigorous characteristic of the New England mind. The early settlers were artisans rather than tillers of the soil; and when by a bitter struggle with an undeveloped country they had supplied their immediate wants, they naturally turned again to manufacturing; and this mechanical bent, stimulated to alertness by a vigorous climate, resulted in course of time in an almost incredible mechanical ingenuity—the "Yankee Knack."

This genius for simplification of processes, this wonderful knack of devising machinery which will do the work of the human hand, has multiplied the output of our factories: and this in turn has increased wages and decreased the hours of labor, and so brought a great uplift into the lives of our workmen; given them the power to provide better homes for their families, better education for their children, and greater leisure in which to work out a broader destiny for themselves.

As in the past, so in the present and the future. The "Yankee Knack," which long since turned New England into a vast workshop, is still at its age-long task—simplifying, improving; lowering cost of production, ever raising quality of product—and all to the end that the average American family shall enjoy today what were luxuries but yesterday, and gratify in their turn the yet undiscovered desires of tomorrow.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics, but finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Evan has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's mixing in politics. His father pulls wires unknown to him to have him invited to speak in a distant mining town. Hathaway, who has been trying to do business with the road and with Senator Blount, is to have a talk with Mrs. Blount.

CHAPTER XI.

THE GAME.

IF Evan Blount had been anticipating an unfriendly reception at the great mining camp in the Carnadine hills he was agreeably disappointed. A committee of prominent citizens, headed by Jasper Steuchfield, the reform chairman for Carnadine county, met him at the train, escorted him to the hotel and during the afternoon, which was at his disposal, gave him joyously and hilariously the freedom of the camp.

The political meeting, which was held in the Carnadine Mining company's electric lighted ore shed, was packed with an enthusiastic audience, and there were prolonged cheers and handclappings when the railroad representative took his seat on the improvised platform as the guest of the committee.

Later, when Judge Crowley, the reform candidate for the state senate, had opened the joint debate with a sharp arraignment of the railroad's methods, not only in its dealings with its patrons as a common carrier, but also in the pertinacity with which it invaded the political field, there was tumultuous applause. But it was no heartier than that which greeted Blount when he rose to present the railroad's side of the argument.

During the journey from the capital, which had consumed the night and the greater portion of the forenoon, he had prepared his speech. His argument—the one unanswerable argument, as it seemed to him—was the existence of a law which presumed to limit the earnings of a private or at most a quasi public corporation, without making a corresponding regulation limiting the cost of such a corporation's service. Upon this foundation he was able, to build a very fair structure of oratory.

The judge, his opponent, was a rather turgid man, whose speech abounded in flights of spread eagle eloquence and whose appeal was to the emotions and the impulses of his audience.

Blount, on the other hand, made a typical lawyer's speech, calmly delivered, logical in every syllogism and appealing frankly to the intelligence of his hearers. In every period of it he was greeted with generous applause, and at the close of the meeting he had what the editor of the local paper called in his issue of the following day "an ovation."

Steuchfield and his fellow committeemen escorted him to the midnight train, and no one in the crowd of congratulators was more enthusiastic than the opposition chairman.

"That was a great speech, Mr. Blount," he said at parting. "If you can go all over the state making as good talks as you have made here tonight you'll tie us all up in a hard knot. But McVickar won't let you do it, not by a long shot."

Blount laughed. "There are no strings tied to me, Mr. Steuchfield," he declared. "This is a new deal, and I am the dealer. Come down to the capital and let me convince you that we are out for open publicity and a square deal for every man, including the railroad man."

"All right," was the cordial reply. "I'll be down along some of these days, and if you can show me that McVickar isn't going into politics any further than you have gone here tonight I'll promise you to come back here and tell the boys that the jig is up."

Five minutes later the branch train pulled out, and the chairman and his fellow committeemen gave the departing joint debater three cheers and another. When the red tail lights of the train had disappeared around the first curve Steuchfield turned to his fellow conspirators.

"Well, boys," he said, with a grin that went from ear to ear, "I guess we did it up all right and according to orders. I don't know what sort of game the Hon. Dave Sagebrush is playing this time, but whatever he says goes, and I reckon we gave the young man a right pleasant time. Anyway, he seemed to think so."

Blount did not reach his office in the capital until the afternoon of the second day. His first care was to call up the Inter-Mountain, and when the clerk disappointed him by telling him that his father, Mrs. Blount and their guest had gone out to Wartrace Hall he counted it as one more opportunity missed and settled down to business.

First in the memoranda on his desk was a stenographer's note asking him to make an appointment with one S. P. Hathaway, whose address was the Inter-Mountain hotel. Since the note was marked "important" he told the clerk to call up the hotel at once, and in due time the gentleman, who, the stenographer said, had called several times during the day, made his appearance at the door of the private office.

It was a mutual shock. Blount recognized instantly his companion of the Omaha-Aretas Pullman smoking compartment and the man who had doubtless sent the three highbinders after him on the night of mysteries and who had been the prime mover in the series of singular incidents ending in the midnight homecoming to Wartrace Hall.

On the other hand, the president saw before him the supposed agent of the forestry service.

"Well, I'll be hanged!" he ejaculated, dropping into the nearest chair.

"You needn't be," laughed Blount easily. "I'll admit that it was partly my fault, Mr. Hathaway. What can I do for you today?"

By this time the lumber king had recovered his breath and some measure of his composure.

"Great Scott!" he said. "If you had given me half a hint that you were Dave Blount's son, but you didn't, you know, and now I am handicapped just at the time when I oughtn't to be. I have come to talk business with you today, Mr. Blount, and you've got me going when I ought to be coming. I've been given to understand that you are handling the political end for the railroad company in this campaign, Mr. Blount. Is that right?"

"It is and it isn't," was the quick reply. "The railroad company is not in politics in this campaign—as a political factor, I mean. What we are trying to do—what we mean to do—is to lay the entire matter plainly and fairly before the people with a plea for a square deal."

"H'm, yes," said the trust president, who was evidently suffering from a fresh attack of embarrassment. "But there are certain little business matters which have to enter into every campaign, and your company, like my own, is obliged to take cognizance of them. Two years ago the railroad people found it advisable and profitable to—er—make a little arrangement with us which was to our mutual advantage, and I called to see if it could not be made again."

Blount sat back in his chair, and the conciliatory smile disappeared. "State the facts, if you please, Mr. Hathaway," he said curtly.

"Well, it was like this. As you know, we have a great many sawmills scattered around in different places in the state, and we employ a good many men. While our employees are residents of the state, they are not citizens in the sense that they take any active interest in state politics. They may be here this year and up among the Oregon redwoods next year and somewhere else the year following. That being the case, when they vote at all they naturally ask us how we would like to have them vote."

"Go on," said Blount.

"Well, as I say, such being the case, we are able to control at least four and probably five of the legislative districts in this state. The control is worth something to your people, and in the last election that fact was recognized. Since the Twin Buttes Lumber company is practically the only heavy lumber shipper in this region, it was given a preferential rate on its products, not at all as a quid pro quo, you understand, but merely in friendly recognition of our help in the last election.

"Really, it was not such a great thing that was done for us, Mr. Blount. If you are familiar with lumber rates in this territory you will know that the special tariff made for us is all that enables us to live. Without it we would go into bankruptcy inside of a year."

Blount had opened his penknife and was absently sharpening a pencil. "This special rate you speak of, Mr. Hathaway," he said, speaking slowly—"I imagine it is not confined to this state."

"Well—er—no," was the hesitating reply. "To meet competition it has been made to apply also on through shipments."

"And it is covered by rebates, I suppose?"

"N-not exactly," was the reluctant admission. "The Transcontinental company is a heavy purchaser of lumber, and the greater part of the difference between the preferential and the regular tariff rate is taken up in our bills for stock sold to the railroad."

"Let me be quite clear upon that point, Mr. Hathaway. You mean that you are allowed to charge the railroad company more than the market price on the lumber it buys?"

The president of the lumber trust nodded. "Yes; that's practically the way of it," he admitted. Then he once more pressed the time worn argument: "It's the only way we can live and do business nowadays, Mr. Blount. Like every other large corporation, we have a small army of little shareholders—widows, orphans, charitable institutions and trustees' accounts. I have brought a list of our stockholders, and I'd like to have you look it over."

Blount took the paper mechanically and quite as mechanically ran his eye down the list of names. At the bottom of it, written in with a pen, was the name of Patricia's father, with his residence and occupation filled out in full.

(To be Continued.)

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MANY STITCHES IN HIS SCALP

LATTER HELD IN $1500 BAIL

Wife Had Complained of Negro Who Met Her In Hall of Her Home—Assailant Says He Saw Him Peering Through Keyhole Later—Educator Says He Was Innocent Victim of Atrocious Assault

New York, March 21.—Dr. Booker T. Washington was not able to appear in court because of the injuries he received Sunday night, according to the statement of his attorney, and the hearing of the charge against Albert Ulrich, a carpenter, arrested on his complaint of felonious assault, was postponed until today. Ulrich was held in $1500 bail. Ulrich, a white man, maintains that he was acting within his rights when he pursued the negro educator for several blocks before a policeman appeared.

Ignorant of the negro's identity he declared that his wife had complained to him of a negro she had met in the hallway of their flat house in West Sixty-third street. Mr. Washington, who was sent to Flower hospital, where sixteen stitches were taken in his scalp, asserted that his mission to that neighborhood was perfectly legitimate and that he had been made the innocent victim of a most atrocious assault.

Attorney Smith, who represented Washington, told Magistrate Cornell that his client had eleven wounds and that one of the wounds had caused a serious hemorrhage of the ear. A short affidavit was then made by Policeman Tierney, who brought Ulrich to court, and on this the prisoner was held in $1500 bail. A bond was furnished for Ulrich's appearence in court by Charles Ludwig, and he was then released.

Washington, who went to his apartments at the Hotel Manhattan, after having his wounds dressed, told the police that he had received a letter from his secretary saying that D. C. Smith, the auditor of Tuskegee college, of which he is the head, was in New York city and desired to see him. "This letter said Smith was stopping with a cousin, giving the name and address," said Washington. "On Sunday I attended church services twice and after speaking at one church in the evening, recalled the letter concerning Smith and decided to look him up.

"But I discovered that I had left the letter in other clothes at the hotel, but I thought I could recall the name as something like Moore and the address as being in West Sixty-third street. I went there and commenced to look at the name plates on the letter boxes in the halls of the different houses, seeking the name of Mr. Smith's cousin. It was while thus engaged that I was attacked."

Ulrich in an interview with his lawyers and others in court said: "About 9 o'clock last night my wife took one of our dogs out into the street. We live on the ground floor of the house No. 11½ West Sixty-third street. When she returned she said that she had seen a negro in the hall and that he spoke to her.

"Mr. and Mrs. Ravette and Mrs. Knowles, friends of ours, were in the house at the time. I went out and saw a man in the hall. He went out of the vestibule door ahead of me when I came out." Ulrich said he saw the negro re-enter the hallway and later saw him "bending down, peering through the keyhole." Ulrich said that the negro swung a blow at his jaw when he asked him what he was doing and that he then went after the negro

IS DOUBTFUL ABOUT HIS NEW POSITION

Lewis May Not Become Assistant Attorney General

Boston, March 21.—William H. Lewis, the Boston negro, assistant to District Attorney French, who has received a recess appointment as assistant attorney general, is so much in doubt about accepting the appointment that he will go to Washington to consult the attorney general.

The belief is that Lewis does not want to give up what he now has in Boston for an uncertainty in Washington. While he may accept the recess appointment and become assistant attorney general, he can draw no pay until the senate ratifies his appointment.

Opposition to the appointment has been indicated. Lewis does not want to give up his Boston position until he is reasonably sure of being confirmed by the senate.

SIX MONTHS' CASUALTIES

Hundred Vessels and About 125 Lives Lost Close to Our Shores

Boston, March 21.—Fully 125 persons perished in accidents which befell New England, Canadian and Newfoundland vessels or other craft which met with disaster in western upper North Atlantic waters during the fall and winter.

In all, 100 vessels were ashore, sunk, abandoned, burned or in collision during the past six months. Sixty-five of the 1000 were total wrecks, the majority hailing from New England ports. The loss of life on stranded vessels was greatest on the Massachusetts and Newfoundland coasts. The combined financial loss is estimated at nearly $1,000,000.

AFFIDAVIT IS DISMISSED

Cox Fails to Secure Removal of Judge Gorman From Bench

Cincinnati, March 21.—The affidavit of George B. Cox, Republican boss of Cincinnati, alleging prejudice and asking that his trial be heard before some other judge than Frank Gorman, was dismissed in common pleas court.

Judge Hunt's decision was that the statute provided for the filing of prejudice affidavits to swear judges off the bench is so framed that it applies to other counties of Ohio, but not to Hamilton county. He therefofre refused to act on the Cox affidavit.

MRS. COREY LOSES

Is Not Entitled to Share of the Gilman $3,000,000 Estate

San Francisco, March 21.—Mrs. Mabelle Gilman Corey, wife of the ex-president of the United States Steel corporation, has lost her suit for her share in the $3,000,000 estate left by the late Charles Gilman.

Judge Graham dissipated all Mrs. Corey's claim to the estate by annulling her suit and also the suit brought jointly with her brother, Monroe Gilman of Oakland, and his other sisters, who also claim to have been heirs of Charles Gilman.

The Play Square club o fthe Universalist church is arranging for a dance in Colonial hall on March 31.

A regular meeting of the Quincy Adams extension club will be held this evening in the First Presbyterian church, Water street.

The body of Robert Gunning, who died at Roslindale, was brought to Quincy on Monday for burial at St. Mary's cemetery.

Harold M. Sweet, his mother and sister a family from Vermont, are moving into the house at 23 Prospect avenue, owned by Mrs. Lee.

The battleships North Dakota, Vermont and Rhode Island, built at Quincy, arrived on Monday at Tangier sound.

The new schoolhouse at Wollaston will face on Beale street instead of Highland avenue, since it was voted to enlarge the lot.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert T. Whitman of Grand View avenue who are at Havana, Cuba, are not returning this week, but are prolonging their stay for a fortnight longer.

Representatives from Quincy will attend the annual meeting of the Boston district Sunday school associations Wednesday at the Walnut avenue Congregational church, Roxbury.

Carl Christiansen of Irving place is preparing for a trip through the middle west. He will visit Chicago, Akron, Toledo, Cleveland and St. Louis, and possibly other large cities. He is expecting to start the first of April.

The body of George Ayers, aged 67 years, who was drowned in Cambridge last November and which was recovered Saturday was brought to Quincy for burial in Mr. Wollaston cemetery. Funera l services were held today. Mr. Ayers formerly lived in Quincy.

At a meeting of the Atlantic Extension club, held in the Memorial Congregational church Monday evening, Ryder Gay was elected captain of the baseball team, and Harry Burr was chosen for manager. It was voted to have a banquet on April 3, with a Harvard baseball man as the principal after dinner speaker.

The Copeland club has elected these officers: President, Andrew J. Dinegan; Vice President, T. Willard Burke; Financial secretary, George S. Hebert; Recording secretary, Edward J. B. Desmond; Treasurer, L. George McLeod; Entertainment committee, John D. Smith, Alphonse LeClair, Walter Ogle, Maurice F. Cohen, and Bernard W. Riley; Executive committee, William G. Lorandeau, Frank I. Desmond, Richard Williams and John B. Rizzi.

FLUSHING THE HYDRANTS.

Editors Daily Ledger:

On reading the account of Sunday nights fire telling of the lack of water and also of its being muddy I wondered if the hydrans of our city are flushed out and tested at regular intervals, same as in the town I came from.

Although living here several years I do not rememebr to have ever seen a hydrant flushed out. In our town it was done regularly and was found to be good policy especially where the pipe came to a dead end as at the one at Johnson's lumber wharf. It clears the pipes of mud and sediment and the water wasted is of small matter compared with the benefit derived from the operation.

Supposing it had been the lumber wharf Sunday night instead of the barn? It would have been pretty bad business, and was bad enough as it was. Lay a bigger main by all means but also see to it that the mains and hydrants are in the best working order possible. An Observer.

RUNAWAY.

There was a lively runaway on Hancock street this morning, and when the team finally brought up against a telephone pole, the street was covered with broken glass and milk. The team was the milk wagon of James Moorhead. The horse started near Music hall, and when near the corner of Revere road collided with a telephone pole causing the team to be upset and many jars of milk to be smashed. The horse was captured before further damage was done.

Little Items of Interest in Towns About Quincy

The town treasurer of Weymouth has just secured a temporary loan of $90,000 maturing Oct. 17 at 3 per cent discount less $25.

The new St. Francis church at South Braintree will be dedicated on the Sunday after Easter.

Fifteen granges reported at roll call Saturday at the Old Colony pomona Grange meeting at Stoughton. Dinner was served at noon and at the afternoon session several papers were read and there was a pleasing entertainment.

Brookline is to try out the referendum clause, adopted by the town in 1902. The case in which the referendum is to be tried is on the vote passed at the town meeting last week increasing the fire department appropriation so that the members may get one day off in five. A petition that the vote be referred to the voters for ratification has been filed with the selectmen.

Hyde Park town politics were brought into court on Monday when Lester P. Winchenbaugh and George Jeffers were arraigned in the Dedham district court charged with publishing and circulating unsigned political posters and hand bills. The reading of the complaint against the two Hyde Park citizens was waived, and the case continued until March 29 for hearing.

Chief Fitzgerald keeps steadily after violators of the liquor law in Weymouth and there is scarcely a week but some one is brought into court. This week Edward F. Swain was summoned to court for violation of the liquor law. His case will be heard March 30.

The Milton High base ball schedule is out, and there are two games with Quincy High,—May 16 and June 16. The season opens April 15.

JUNIOR LAYMEN.

At the meeting of the Junior Laymen in the Unitarian chapel Monday evenig Rev. D. Roy Freeman of All Souls church, Braintree, gave a splendid address on "Overcoming Giants." He pointed out to the boys the necessity of overcoming if one wished to amount to anything. Using such examples as Abraham Lincoln and other great men who have come up from the ranks or have made the most of themselves in their own station, he showed quite conclusively that the better control a man had over himself, the greater man he was and the more power he could wield.

At a business meeting immediately following the address it was voted to appoint a committee to arrange for an interchange of courtesies with the Boy's Civic club of All Souls church, Braintree. Arrangements will be made whereby the two organizations will have an opportunity to get in close touch with one another by means joint meetings, picnics, athletic contests and so on.

Announcements regarding the plays were made by the president. Mrs. Florence Sturtevant will sing during the intermission and a candy sale will be held in connection with the show.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The average daily attendance at the public schools was very low for the month of February because of scarlet fever, only 4,925 out of a total enrollment of 5,547. The percentage was below 89, and at Wollaston below 76. Supt. Barbour's report follows:

LOCAL SPORTS.

At a meeting of the Wollaston Yacht club at the club house on Thursday evening, James F. Paige of Dorchester, will deliver a lecture on "Modern Japan." At this meeting the presentation of prizes to the club's winning boats of last season will be made. During the winter the club house has only been open evenings, but beginning this week a janitor has been engaged and from now on the club house will be open all the time.

The Y. M. C. A. basket ball teams will end the season Wednesday evening when they meet the Cunningham gymnasium teams, the Milton Five and the Silent Five, in East Milton. Both the local teams were victorious when they met the quintets from the neighboring town in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, and all ten men will strive valiantly to end the season, as it began, with victory.

There is a possibility that the basket ball game between High school and the Y. M. C. A. may be played next Saturday evening.. Although no definite action has been taken yet, it is not improbable that the athletic committee of the Y. M. C. A. will vote to have the game without charging any admission. In this case the doors will be thrown open and those interested will be admitted to the extent of the capacity of the gallery. Then the doors will be closed and the game will be allowed to progress uninterrupted. It is to be hoped that satisfactory arrangements may be made by the Y. M. C. A. committee and that the High school authorities will allow the boys to play as representatives of the school.

The dual meet between the Employed Boys and Intermediates of the Y. M. C. A. will take place next Monday evening. Although at first thought it would look like an easy victory for the latter, when one looks into the details it does not appear to be such a sure thing. R. Cranshaw has now joined the Employed Boys, and that will swing a number of points over to their side. The first places will go to the Intermediates but seconds thirds and fourths will count heavily in deciding the victory. Estey, Trask, White and Sutermeister will be the heaviest scores for the Intermediates and Kemp, Bergfors, Yates and Cranshaw should do well for the Intermediates.

WOULD DEPRESS TRACKS.

The building trades council has adopted the following resolutions relative to the proposed plans for abolishing the grade crossing at Water street.

"Resolved, That the plans submitted to the citizens of this city by the railroad commission, to abolish grade crossings at Water street are not for the best interests of the city, and this organization is opposed to the plans offered, as they favor the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad company, to the disadvantage of the people of Quincy.

"Therefore the building trades' council request and urge upon the city solicitor to oppose any or all plans to abolish grade crossings except those which depress the railroad tracks through this city, and not carrying the streets above the railroad tracks."

As It Really Was.

On the morning after his first appearance on the stage the confident but untalented youth met a friend who had witnessed his first performance. "What do you think of my acting?" asked the would be Hamlet.

"That wasn't acting," replied the friend. "That was misbehavior."

ODD FELLOWS EXEMPLIFICATION

Grand Work by Longfellow Degree Staff at a District Meeting in Quincy

Grand Master Sargent and Other Officials Present

It is the plan of Grand Master Horace M. Sargent of Haverhill to visit every lodge in his jurisdiction during his term of office. This would be impossible if each of the 250 lodges were visited individually so he has hit upon the plan of district meetings of three or more lodges, which are proving of great interest to the fraternity.

In pursuance of this plan the grand master and suite came to Quincy on Tuesday evening, and a joint meeting was held by Mt. Wollaston lodge of Quincy, John Hancock lodge of Wollaston and Longfellow lodge of Roslindale at Alpha hall which proved none too large. On the suite were George L. Marshall, the deputy grand master; George H. Fuller, the grand secretary; William H. Webber, the grand instructor, and others. It was also the occasion of an official visit from District Deputy Grand Master Henry A. Collett and suite. Not only was there a large attendance of the members of the three lodges named, but also from the lodges at Weymouth, Braintree, Neponset, Boston and vicinity. It was a notable gathering including many who have been members of the city government and State legislature, and active in the work of Odd Fellowship.

The work of the evening was the first degree which was exemplified by the degree staff of Longfellow lodge, of which David Patch is degree master, and prominent parts are taken by Howard Forbes, Fred Leavitt and others. But few of the Odd Fellows of Quincy had seen the work of this lodge, and they were very glad of the opportunity offered, for it was a treat to all, and gave local Odd Fellows many pointers.

Remarks were made in commendation of the work by the grand officers. Grand Master Sargent spoke specially of the four principles upon which Odd Fellowship was founded and has flourished, viz:—The fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man, the sanctity of the home, and the immortality of the human soul. He claimed Odd Fellowship had led the world in brotherhood. He impressed upon Odd Fellows, however, that their first duty was to their home. He would revive the degree of humanity.

Grand Instructor Webber spoke in high praise of the work of the evening, and at the same time told how it might in a few details be improved. No better work is done than in Massachusetts, yet great improvements are being made each year. The high standard should be maintained.

The three lodges united in furnishing refreshments in Union hall at the close of the work, which were served by sisters of the George L. Gill Rebekah lodge, and included sandwiches, ice cream and cake and cigars. Music closed the festivities.

A DEPUTY'S LODGE.

District Deputy Grand Master Hartley L. White of the twenty-sixth Masonic district announces a deputy's lodge to be held in the Masonic apartments at Quincy, Saturday, April 8, commencing at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The lodges in the twenty-sixth district comprise Rural of Quincy, Norfolk Union of Randolph, Orphans Hope of East Weymouth, Delta of Braintree, and Wollaston of Wollaston.

The exemplification of the work will be under the supervision of Wor. Frederic L. Putnam, Grand Lecturer. The opening will be by Delta lodge, who will have a part of the first degree; and will be followed by Orphans Hope and Norfolk Union lodges who will complete the first and second degrees.

A supper will be served at 6 o'clock and the evening session will convene at 7.30. The work of the evening will be by Wollaston and Rural lodges. The third degree will be exemplified. The lodges are noted for the excellence of their work and brethren attending will be well repaid. Wor. Bro. White is a past master of Rural lodge, and is exceedingly popular throughout the district, and a large attendance is looked for at both the afternoon and evening sessions.

—President Taft said recently that he never reads the magazines, and Ex-President Roosevelt said this week that he doesn't find much time for reading newspapers. Still, both these prominent citizens manage to keep tolerably well informed as to what is going on.—Somerville Journal

RECEPTION OF ENDEAVORERS

Play Presented—"On Account of the Lobster"

The Senior Y. P. S. C. E. of Bethany church gave a reception to the Intermediate society in Bethany chapel Tuesday evening. The first part of the evening was devoted to playing games under the direction of Miss Margaret Gardner.

At 8.30 the guests were seated in the front vestry to witness a play entitled "On account of the lobster." It was a one act farce motivated by an amusing mix-up. Langton had eaten too much lobster the night before and had an abominable headache. His wife blamed lobster and Langton blamed her for it because she insisted on getting a new hat. Fiddler, the driver for a department store, is in love with Serina the maid in the Langton household and wishes to see her as often as possible. First he brings in six bandboxes, then takes them out and lugs in six chairs. While this performance is going on Langton is becoming convinced that he "has 'em." First he sees six bandboxes, then he comes in and finds none. The same operation is repeated on the chairs and Langton is well night delirious when he comes face to face with Fiddler who has the bandboxes. Things are finally cleared up to the satisfaction of all, Serina and Fiddler announce their engagement and Langton confesses that "it was the lobster."

Esther Wetherell as Serina was all that could be desired for a lady's maid and Mabel Lovejoy made an excellent kind and devoted Mrs. Langton. Roy L. Sidelinger took the part of Fiddler with ease and ability and excelled as a persistent and "flustering" lover.

The cast:

Albert Langton, who attends the dinner — Alden H. Blanchard
Grace, his wife who demonstrates its effects, — Mabel Lovejoy
Fiddler, who delivers for a department store, — Roy Sidelinger
Serina, the maid who delivers him from a predicament, — Esther Wetherell

After the play, speeches were made by Howard W. Pratt, president of the Senior society, Melville P. Hayward, superintendent of the Intermediate department of the Sunday school for a number of years, and Dr. Edwin N. Hardy, pastor of the church. All three sounded the key note by urging unity of purpose and more active work in both societies.

Refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served under the direction of Henry Prescott with Mary Stewart, Marion Bill and Jessie Pratt serving.

About fifty young people were present at the reception.

BRAINTREE TOWN MEETING.

The report of the adjourned town meeting at Braintree on Monday evening is continued below, the first instalment appearing in yesterday's Ledger.

On motion of Henry M. Storm, Article 8 was again brought up and it was voted to appropriate the sum of $1,000 for renovating the interior of the upper Town Hall painting the outside of the building and making other necessary repairs to the structure. Under Articles 56 and 57 the following amounts were appropriated:

For salaries Municipal Light board, $300.

For depreciation fund $4,539.11.

The sum of $56,376.96 shown in the accounts of the Electric Light Department under the name of "Overdraft for construction" to be appropriated so that the account can be closed into Profit and Loss. The matter of extending the street lights on West street to the Five Corners, spoken of in Article 58 was referred to the Electric Light Department and if they judged that the same should be done by the Town, the expenses therefor were to be taken from the income of the Electric Light Department.

Article 59 referring to the placing of electric lights on the Common was indefinitely postponed also Article 60 which provides for extending the electric lights through Division street to the corner of Liberty street.

Article 61 which calls for the extension of street lights on Pearl street from the corner of Liberty and Middle streets to the corner of Pearl and Fountain streets was postponed indefinitely.

Article 62 relative to the "Caleb Stetson" note was disposed of under Article 54.

Article 63 is a very important Article and is concerned with installing new machinery for the water works and the connecting of the waters of Little and Great ponds.

This Article was laid upon the table until the next meeting when it is expected that the committee appointed will report on the matter.

Concerning Article 64 the sum of $1,000 was raised and appropriated for the extension of mains.

In disposing of Article 65 it was voted to extend the water mains through Division streets and down Liberty street to a point near the residence of Samuel T. Hawes providing the Water Board could see a return of 5 per cent on the money expended.

Under Article 66 the sum of $150 was appropriated to be expended on the Plain Street cemetery.

Under Article 67 the following sums were appropriated:

For payment of interest:

One year's interest to Aug. 1, 1911, on Note held by Hunt Trust, $400.

One year's interest to Aug. 1, 1911 on Note held by Thayer Library, $400.

One year's interest to Sept. 22, 1911, on Note held by Thayer Library, $100.

Six months' interest to June 1, 1911, on Notes held by State Treas. Torrey School, $271.88.

Interest 6 months to March 1, 1911, Lincoln School Special Loan, $120.

Interest 6 months to Sept. 1, 1911, Lincoln School Special Loan, $80.

Coupons 1 year to Oct. 5, 1911, Municipal Light Loan, $660.

Discount on Notes in anticipation of Taxes, $1,800.

Payment on Notes, Torrey School, June 1, 1911, $5,000.

Payment on Notes, Lincoln School, June 1, 1911, $3,000.

Payment on Notes, Lincoln School, Sept. 1, 1911, Special, $2,000.

Payment on Notes, Mayflower Park Water, July 15, 1911, $1,000.

The following amounts were raised and appropriated under Article 68:

For water sinking fund, $5,120.

For electric light sinking fund, $430.

In disposing of Article 69 it was voted to charge interest on all unpaid taxes after a certain date, said date to be Dec. 1, 1911.

Under Article 70 it ws voted that an approval by a majority of the auditors of the report of any financial department of the town should be a justification of such report.

Article 71 referring to tenement house laws and the choosing of a committee to report on same was laid on the table.

Article 72 relative to the acceptance by the town of the legacy given to it in the will of Ann M. Penniman was laid on the table.

Under Article 73, the sum of $2,000 was appropriated to purchase the lot of land at the east of the Noah Torrey school building.

The meeting was adjourned at 10 o'clock until Monday evening April 10 at 7.45 o'clock.

MISTAKEN FOR POLICEMAN

Woman Faints at Sight of Church Organist

While the lecture was in progress at the Buckley street church Tuesday evening an unusual occurrence took place. A number of boys were banging the outside doors of the church in such a manner as to disturb the people and Mr. Oksanen, the organist came out to remonstrate with them. One of the boys was Wilfred Carlson who lived in the house next to the church. Mr. Oksanen was dressed in such a manner that he resembled a policeman in appearance and as he was talking with the boys, Mrs. Carlson came rushing out of the house to prevent what she supposed was the arrest of her son. She has had trouble with her heart for some time and in the excitement it went back on her and she fell in a faint. Mr. Oksanen called the pastor and when he came out the woman had become delirious. Mr. Lillback had to hold her to prevent violence and Dr. Grovenlund was sent for immediately. He was unable to get there until half an hour later. In the meantime Mrs. Carlson was carried into the church and was made as comfortable as possible by means of overcoats. When the doctor arrived she was taken to her home and restoratives were applied. The delirium was due to over excitement which had an ill effect upon her weak heart. This morning Mrs. Carlson's brain and heart were restored to normal but she was very weak owing to her struggles while she was delirious.

BRIEFS

The executive committee of St. John's bazaar meet Thursday evening at the rectory.

The office of the public burial places department at City Hall is to be connected by telephone.

Lobster at 65 cents a pound causes some people to remark that they never cared much for lobster anyway.

Mrs. Agnes G. Fletcher is to hold another enjoyable matinee whist at her home on Garfield street tomorrow afternoon.

There is likely to be some discussion on the annual appropriation order when it comes up next Monday night on its second reading.

No action will be taken by the Savings bank or the Mt. Wollaston bank to fill the vacancy caused by the death of George W. Morton until next month.

The installation of officers of the Y. P. C. U., will be held in the Universalist church, corner Washington and Elm streets, this evening. Roger T. Etz of Boston, will conduct the services. A social will follow the installation.

Rev. J. E. Lillback, pastor of the Finnish Congregational church gave the first of a series of lectures on "United States government and the Constitution." Tuesday evening in the Buckley street church. Six more lectures along the same line will be given, the second one to be delivered this evening. Mr. Lillback is very anxious for his countrymen to be naturalized as soon as possible.

PLYMOUTH AGAINST

County Objects to Any Assessment for Neponset Bridge

The bills for the rebuilding of the present Neponset river bridge at a cost of $250,000 or $350,000 attracting but a limited number to the State house today, not over 25. The bill did not have the sanction of either the city of Boston or the city or Quincy, or apparently any one else.

Bill 272 was taken from the files of last year, and Bill 413 is a new one introduced by Representative T. P. Curtin of Dorchester.

The hearing was before the Committee on Roads and Bridges of which Representative Langelier is a member, and he asked several pertinent questions as did also Representative Thomas.

Mr. Curtin appeared in favor of a new bridge, he did not care under which bill, and the apportionment was immaterial to him.

Representative Thomas and Mayor Shea presented the situation as it related to Quincy. The Mayor said it had not been before the city government, and he did not appear in favor or against. If it was decided a new bridge was necessary Quincy should not be assessed over 15 per cent of the cost.

The county commisioners and representatives from Plymouth county, cities and towns, especially Brockton, appeared in opposition to any assessment upon the county.

The only ones to speak in favor were representatives and Senator Murray from the Dorchester district, who tried to explain the absence of people interested.

From Quincy were the following, but they did not speak: Ex-Mayor John O. Hall, Frank Fessenden Crane, ex-Councilman R. W. Hobbs, W. H. Teasdale and Frank F. Prescott.

—Free Masonry is very strong in and around Washington and has been since George Washington's day. He himself was a Mason and the lodge of which he was a member and for a time master still meets in the old building in Alexandria, Va., across the Potomac. The building is in pretty bad shape and the Masons of the country purpose replacing it with a structure creditable to themselves and a worthy memorial of the first President. The Masonic order is rich and liberal enough to build a magnificent temple and Washington or its immediate neighborhood is the ideal location for such a monumental creation.—Lowell Courier Citizen.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Senator Bailey adds something to the sayings of Jefferson as to officials —"none resign" but those that do withdraw their resignations.

Having been driven to the necessity of calling an extra session Mr. Taft is entitled to the sympathy of the nation.

A Liverpool authority predicts the end of Dreadnoughts. It will have to come pretty soon, or else there will not be any money left.

President Taft's letter on the occasion of Mr. Ballinger's resignation should warn foreign disturbers that the administration is not in a mood to be trifled with.

Just as Mr. Hobson was breathing forth his fear of war, five thousand Japanese joined in a mammoth celebration of Washington's birthday at Honolulu.

It took nearly nine columns of the Daily Ledger on Tuesday to report the meeting of the City Council. The Daily Ledger is the only paper to print complete reports and they are free from comments. Accurate accounts of the real happenings.

It makes considerable difference to Quincy and Brookline whether the "Real Boston" assessments are upon water consumption, population or valuation. In valuation in the district Brookline is third, but in population it is 11th and in water consumption exempt.

WOMEN SMOKERS.

A social scrimmage in Boston over the question whether women should smoke at a proposed club for women, is one of many incidents that has reanimated discussion on the propriety of this habit for the female sex.

According to the highly colored reporters of the society newspapers, the habit of smoking by women has become common among the high lights of aristocracy. However, the intense curiosity shown at the sight of a woman smoking is such as to indicate that the habit is still quite infrequent. On the ocean steamers, where their social mightinesses are compelled to jostle elbows with the middle class the plebeian curiosity seekers gather about the knots of smoking women as if it were a dog fight.

It is one of the curious anomalies of public sentiment that it is so hostile to an act in one sex that meets with such slight condemnation in the case of the other. It is not commonly expected that women will teach their sons not to smoke.

Our social customs are largely an ape like copy of the manners of European capitals. As society women have smoked for ages in London and Paris, it might naturally be expected that our imitative habits would establish the same custom here. Against this view there seems to stand the probability that sentiment against smoking for either sex will grow somewhat stronger rather than weaker. It will not again be urged by sensible people that the habit is necessarily wrong for everyone, both for those whom it hurts and for those whom it does not injure.

But the passion for success in athletics the need of the fittest possible physique for business success, will tend to increase sentiment against tobacco, as a habit that tends to lower average human efficiency. It must be an underlying feeling of this kind that makes the prejudice against women smokers so very strong.

DRIFT OF OPINION

For the equipment which our Board of Trade has to work with, they are doing as much as could be expected and the merchants should be well pleased with the activities that are characterizing the newly vitilized institution. There is an effort being made, however, that all progressive business men will unquestionably approve. The board needs a permanent secretary to carry out not only the details of the office, but to be able to give his full time to them. The present secretary gives his time and his ability free, but he is a busy man without this. There is no possibility of competing with other towns and cities where live boards of trade are having their work done by a paid secretary who is an expert in this particular line. No city that wishes to maintain its prestage and to progress has a board of trade that does not employ a secretary to look after the work and do nothing else. What is worth doing at all is worth doing well and, from the experience in their own lines, business men in this city know how easily some advantage may be lost, simply because the details were not carefully examined and worked up.—Northampton Daily Herald.

Much in little is said by the Boston Herald, in this summary reference to a subject that is now being threshed out on Beacon Hill: "So long as men and women are easily persuaded that they are getting something for nothing, trading stamps will flourish.

Any amount of ink and paper have been used in trying to bring home to one proportion of the purchasing public a befitting realization of this fact. Despite revelations, however, people enough are favorable to the trading stamp to render its use higly profitable to the interests which stand back of the principle, and fatten upon the profits consequent upon the patronage of the retailers. Predictions are made that trading stamps will be interdicted by the present legislature; but if these are no better based than similar forecasts have been, the business will continue to flourish.—Salem News.

SUMMER HOME EDITION.

Nowadays almost everyone is interested in Summer Homes either at the seashore, mountains or country. They will enjoy reading the specially written articles on this subject which will be published in addition to the popular regular features in the Boston Evening Transcript of Saturday, April 1.

"How the Automobile Has Helped Country Properties" is one of the points to be covered and will prove an engaging topic. "Restoring Old Houses in the Country Towns" will doubtless please many readers too. There will be several articles which will surely have a real value to investors and others concerned in the welfare of Boston and its suburbs, particularly those on "Industrial Advantage of Boston," "Inquiry for Business Sites" and "Realty in the Suburbs."

Real estate men and individuals who have properties to dispose of or to rent should take advantage of this unusual opportunity and immediately secure place to properly space their holdings before so many interested persons as will be reached by the April 1 edition of the Transcript which will have a much larger circulation than any previous issue.

Faith Healer Charged With Unlawful Practice of Medicine

New York, March 22.—Willis V. Cole, a faith healer, was indicted by the grand jury on four counts, including charges of unlawful practice of medicine and violation of the public health laws.

The indictment follows Cole's arrest on evidence gathered by two police matrons, who represented that Cole charged them $2 a visit for treatment, which the prosecution claims could only be given legally by a practicing physician.

WIDOW A QUINCY LADY

Nathaniel Thayer, the Millionare Passes Away

Nathaniel Thayer, widely known in railroad, financial, business and club circles, whose wife was a Quincy lady, died on Tuesday at his Boston residence, after illness which had been prolonged through several months. He was ill throughout the summer season, when he and his family were at their place in Newport, from which he was brought late in the fall to his Boston residence. He was the head of a family which long has been prominent.

Mr. Thayer was twice married, first on Feb. 1, 1881, in Baltimore, to Miss Cornelia Street Barroll, who died on Feb. 18, 1885. The second marriage was on June 11, 1887, when he made Miss Pauline Revere his wife. She is the daughter of the late Colonel Paul J. and Lucretia K. Revere of Quincy. Mrs. Thayer survives her husband, as three daughters by his first marriage They are Cornelia V. R., now the wife of Count Moltke, the Swedish minister to Washington, D. C.; Anna Morton, now Mrs. William S. Patten of New York city, and Miss Sally Barroll Thayer, who lives at the family residence in Boston, except when the family spends the summer season in Newport, where a cottage is maintained, and the spring and fall seasons in old Lancaster.

Two brothers of Mr. Thayer, John Eliot and Bayard Thayer, who are twins, also survive him. The late Eugene V. R. Thayer was his brother, and the late Mrs. J. Hampden Robb of New York (Cornelia Thayer) and the late Mrs. John F. Andrew, who before her marriage was Miss Harriet Thayer, were sisters of Mr. Thayer.

The widow, Mrs. Pauline Revere Thayer is one of the leaders in the exclusive circles of Boston, New York, Bar Harbor and Newport. She is greatly interested in charitable institutions and has been more than generous in her benefactions. Mr. Thayer heartily seconded his wife whenever she expressed the wish to assist the less fortunate, and she has never lacked the means to carry out her charitable projects, no matter how extensive they have been.

Perhaps the finest of the many Thayer benefactions is the "Good Rest" vacation home for working girls, situated in Lancaster. This retreat was established more than 20 years ago by Mrs. Thayer for the purpose of giving recreation and pleasure to as many working girls as can be accommodated during the heated term, who, probably, but for her forethought and kindness, would not get an opportunity to absent themselves from Boston's hot and dusty streets. The house is near the old common in a well-shaded spot. Each group of girls remains at the home for two weeks, and during the season Mrs. Thayer makes it a point to visit them frequently.

Another institution in which the Thayers have been greatly interested is the industrial school for crippled and deformed children in Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Thayer have frequently given substantial aid to the school and its work. While the charitable interests of the Thayers are many, their benfactions have been carried through in the quietest possible way and without publicity when possible.

THERE ARE OTHERS.

A little girl, whose parents I know are very poor, was in a grocery store last Saturday evening and bought five cents worth each of tea, coffee, butter, bread and cheese. She then asked for a pound of candy costing 60 cents. The clerk told me that the child did the family buying and never bought in larger amounts than a nickel's worth unless it be meat. "But," said the clerk, "the family has no money to squander on food or clothes, but always includes a pound of the best chocolates in the Saturday order." To my surprise an hour later I saw that same girl, her two brothers, her two sisters and her father and mother going in the moving picture theatre. The father and mother, in my opinion, show mighty poor judgment, for it wasn't many months ago that a local benevolent society gave his family food and clothing."—Ex.

In one of our villages a short time ago, a mother had made some purchases for the family and in counting up found her finances were coming short and after scaning the little articles, said, "Well, you will have to take out the little stockings for———, we want to go to the moving pictures."—Weymouth Gazette.

THE FIGHTING CROWD AGAIN

Bouts Will Not Occur if Authorities Want to Prevent

Editors of Daily Ledger:

The carefully prepared article of Mr. Hultman in the Ledger a few days ago served an excellent purpose in showing the legal status of the fighting game. It also seemed to put a quietus on the business for the time being; but now come rumors of another infliction impending, and the situation seems to call for a few pretty plain words.

The law as quoted leaves no doubt that public boxing exhibitions are illegal, except under bona fide club conditions. I am not a lawyer, and I have no records of court decisions, but I have a pretty clear recollection that the thin subterfuge of using sham membership cards instead of admission tickets to a wide-open demoralizing show has not been allowed to succeed elsewhere if the authorities and the police really wanted to prevent it.

Does anybody doubt that the Quincy Rowing Association is a joke? If such is not the case the people would really like to see a published list of their officers and leading patrons, copy of charter, conditions of membership and annual membership fees, location of club house or place of holding stated meetings of their 1200 members (other than boxing shows), location of wharf and boat houses and number of boats, and proportion of members who know which way to face in a boat and which end of an oar to take hold of!

Surely the large fraternity of genuine Quincy watermen ought to protest vigorously against the noble sports of yachting and rowing being allied even in name with the constituency of the Q. R. A. (Queer River Athletes).

I am far from condemning boxing in general terms: it is unexcelled as an exercise, and is a desirable accomplishment when taught and practiced in private; but long experience has abundantly proved that public boxing exhibitions are undesirable because they invariably draw together the worst elements of the community; perhaps a few others incidentally, but the worst always, and inevitably. Hence the law.

A show which appeals primarily to the lawless members of the community and draws then together as naturally as carrion draws flies is not for the best moral health of the city. It goes without saying that every rowdy and tough in the city was present at the Q. R. A. show if he had the price of a "membership" ticket. And does that kind of a crowd care particularly for scientific boxing? Well, hardly! What they want to see is a fight!

Now the fighting spirit, stimulated as it constantly is by the absurdly prominent fighting talk and pictures of the Boston yellow papers, is unquestionably responsible for a good deal of general lawlessness. When a crowd of young chaps get the notion that they can "lick" everybody, including the police, they are pretty well primed for any sort of deviltry.

Just a couple of samples, which, of course, anybody can multiply by the hundred. One Sunday afternoon I saw a gang of young hoodlums deliberately wrecking the dancing pavilion in Merrymount Park, damaging it so that the next hard storm blew it down, necessitating rebuilding at no small expense to the city.

Another Sunday afternoon I came across a crew of young toughs in knickerbockers stoning electric wire insulators. When they saw me watching them they assailed me with insults and long-range stone-throwing. Worthy members of the fighting crowd, undoubtedly!

I have seen a couple of baby citizens playing in the street, too young to speak plainly, but threatening each other fiercely with a "punch in de nose" and a "smash on de jaw!" How sweet the current talk of the bruisers in infant mouths!

The case is beyond argument. The fight show is a school of rowdyism and disorder, and nothing else, and it is no use for the "gents" promoting it to attempt any gloss of pseudo respectability. The serious question is whether the people of Quincy are going to allow any more such degrading spectacles.

Why not arrest the promoters offhand the next time they show up, and make them prove in court whether a flimsy trick is able to defeat the plain intent of a State law, and defy the overwhelming adverse public sentiment of the community.

With our neighboring well-governed cities and towns frowning on the fighting game, it is hardly desirable that Quincy should gain a bad eminence in such a business. There would seem to be a loud call for investigation and determined action on the part of the police.

NEW CLAIMANT TO MRS. EDDY'S ESTATE

One More Legal Twist Given to Complicated Litigation

Concord, N. H., March 22.—Another claimant to the estate of the late Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy has appeared in the person of John B. Baker, who says he is a grandnephew of the woman who founded the Christian Science church.

Baker lives in this city and is a poor man. He is represented by Lawyer Giles, who filed a motion in the Concord court asking permission to intervene in the matter of settling up Mrs. Eddy's estate.

There are now four claimants to Mrs. Eddy's fortune of nearly $3,000,000. They are her son, George W. Glover; Dr. Foster Eddy, her adopted son; George W. Barker, a nephew, of this city, and the new claimant.

CALLED "BACK NUMBERS"

Country Preachers Advised to Attend Agricultural College

Decatur, Ills., March 22.—"The most conspicuous 'back numbers' in the country now are rural preachers," declared Dean Skinner of Purdue university, before the inter-church conservation congress here.

"While farmers and the rest of the world have improved, preaching has remained on the same quality," continued the speaker. "Country preachers should go to college and learn agriculture.

"I can see no immediate hope for improvement, however, for any agricultural graduate can get $1000 to $1500 yearly and would scorn a $600 preaching job."

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

The official Government tests show Royal Baking Powder to be an absolutely pure and healthful grape cream of tartar baking powder, and care should be taken to prevent the substitution of any other brand in its place.

With no other agent can biscuit, cake and hot-breads be made so pure, healthful and delicious.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price per pound, and is cheaper and better at its price than any other baking powder in the world. It makes pure, clean, healthful food.

STAND ON HIND LEGS

Well Learned Lesson of Fire Horses Prevents Serious Accident

Boston, March 22.—What would have been a serious accident was averted by a novel trick taught to the horses attached to Ladder 15.

When the great truck, driven by Charles A. Glennon, turned into Copley square from Boylston street while responding to an alarm, the animals dashed towards a pile of debris and derricks used for construction purposes.

Just when it seemed that the horses would dash wildly among the workmen and overturn the truck, Glennon exerted all his strength in pulling the horses and yelled "Up, up, up." He had taught the horses to stand on their hind legs at this command.

The horses fell back on their haunches instantly and the momentum of the truck pushed them along a few feet, but they were uninjured. The fire was insignificant.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

The play "Pygmaleon and Galatea" which was so successfully given by the Quincy Women's club a few weeks ago is to be given this evening by the Whitman Woman's club. It is to be given in the town hall and is not restricted to club members. There has been a large sale of tickets and a fine performance is anticipated.

• • •

Mrs. Emily A. Fifield of Dorchester a well known Alliance worker and active Unitarian is to address the Quincy Alliance at its meeting on Monday afternoon in First Church parlor. Her subject "The Alliance and the Club" should prove an interesting one. On April 10 the Alliance holds its annual neighborhood meeting which will be an all day session. There will be an array of speakers on the subject "Social Service" and an interesting and profitable day is anticipated.

JUNIOR FRIDAY CLUB.

Miss Abigail Baxter Wood entertained the Junior Friday club at her home on School street on Monday afternoon. There was a longer business session than usual conducted by the president Mrs. A. P. Thompson.

Mrs. Perry Lawton, Mrs. Arthur W. Hall and Miss Abigail B. Wood were elected as the program committee for the coming year when famous people of the eighteenth century will be taken up for the season's study.

A party was made up to attend the exhibition of the Copley society in Boston next Monday afternoon. Members will take the 1.14 train and will be "personally conducted" by Miss Georgiana Lane a member of the Copley society.

The program of the afternoon was arranged by Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, the study of France being continued, the special topics being the Third Republic, M. Thiers, Daudet, Rachel, and the Drama of France, which proved very interesting.

Refreshments were daintily served by the hostess and as it was near the date of St. Patrick's anniversary there was a touch of green that added to the festiveness of the occasion. Little American and Irish flags adorned the chandelier; and there were green candies in the form of pipes and shamrock, and souvenir shamrock ornaments were given each guest. Miss Randall brought a bright message from St. Patrick which was appreciated by the Junior Fridays.

BROCKTON WOMAN'S CLUB.

Mrs. C. S. Millet has declined to be again a candidate for the presidency of the Brockton Woman's club because the majority of the members apparently desire merely to be entertained instead of being interested in things of an instructive nature or which might tend toward development and improvement of the community. Mrs. Millet is rather severe when she makes the following statement in the Brockton papers: "I consider it a disgrace to the city that the club cannot be induced to take an interest in certain sociological matters in which other clubs of similar size and prominence in the State are doing most active work."

Other club presidents have made the same mistake as Mrs. Millet to the detriment of their clubs for the time being. A president can lead and set an example but when she tries to coerce she forgets that she was elected to her position by the whole club and not to carry out her own personal ideas as to what is good or bad for the club. A president who insists on all work and no play or one all for play and no work would not be a broad leader for a large body of women. In every club or society, men or women, there are some who do the work and some who play, some serious some gay, but each has its part in the whole and generally the results are good.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

There is much activity at the Women's clubhouse these days with club and committee meetings and extra sessions and lectures under the auspices of the various departments. Some days there are gatherings in several rooms but the house is so large neither incommodes the other. The two election committees are busily at work getting names to present for the elections in April and May. Chairmen of the department committees will be elected in April that they may select their committees and plan their work before the summer vacation. The officers of the club will be elected as usual at the May meeting.

The third lecture in the course under the auspices of the Arts and Crafts committee was held Tuesday afternoon and was most successful in every way. There was a large attendance and the talk on Color and Design by Frederick Whitney of the Salem Normal school was delightful. He illustrated his talk by water color sketches, the quick strokes of his brush bringing forth almost magical results in pictures and colors that delighted the artistic sense of his audience. The pleasure of the lecture was added to by a social tea served by the Arts and Crafts committee, the pourers being Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield and Miss Bates of Wollaston, during which every one had an opportunity to meet Mr. Whitney informally. There were many teachers present as well as club members, the hour four to five being most convenient. The last lecture will be on April 4 when Mr. Jennings will speak on Interior Decorations.

The next regular meeting of the club will be on Tuesday, March 28 and will be Federation day or what has been known in former years as reciprocity day, the day when the club entertains State Federation officers and presidents of neighboring clubs. Miss Georgia A. Bacon of Worcester, president of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's clubs is to be a guest and also one of the speakers. There will be good music and an informal reception and tea.

On Saturday April first a children's party is to be held at the clubhouse for the children of members or the child friend of a member who has none of her own to bring. A good time is being planned for the little ones.

NEW PREMIER PROGRESSIVE

Russian Reactionaries Not Helped by Their Defeat of Stolypin

St. Petersburg, March 22.—V. N. Kokovsoff, who has been minister of finance, was formally offered and has accepted the premiership in succession to P. A. Stolypin, whose resignation was announced Monday.

The resignation of the Stolypin cabinet, which came as a direct result of the rejection by the council of empire of the government proposals for the self-government of the nine western provinces, is monopolizing attention here. The reactionary groups who brought about Premier Stolypin's downfall, however, will have little opportunity to exult in their victory, for the new premier is fully as progressive as his predecessor.

Art Thief Captured

London, March 22.—An employe of Lord Joicey attempted to steal six pictures valued at $60,000 from Joicey's Montgomeryshire seat. The butler caught the man.

LADIES PRESENT.

The Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church had a somewhat pleasant surprise after the close of its business session Tuesday evening. All business being transacted and the proceeds from the last social showing a balance to the good put each member of the organization in a mood for mirth that could not be restrained. So the round table was loaded with refreshments and as each was about to be seated they discovered to their amazement that there were other occupants of the building besides themselves. This being contrary to law it was deemed inperative that such a breach be investigated with promptness, and a speedy remedy applied. Two members were chosen to invade the other meeting and find out who they were and the cause of their meeting. The brave knights returning reported that it was a Sunday school Teachers meeting composed largely of ladies.

It was then decided to throw the meting open and invite the teachers to partake of the good things prepared by the refresment committee.

The evening was a great success, long to be remembered. It was the first time in the history of the Galahad Brotherhood that the ladies have been welcomed at the close of a business session.

THE WHITE PLAGUE.

A well-known University professor of economics in a recently published article says:—"We look with horror on the black plague of the Middle Ages. That was but a passing cloud compared with the white plague waste visitation of today." He further states that eight millions of the people living today in the United States are doomed to die of tuberculosis, and that a like number from pneumonia, unless this destructive waste of human life and happiness is vigorously combatted by public and private safeguards. Individual neglect of the early symptoms of these and other pulmonary disorders, is in a large measure responsible for ravages of these, in many cases preventable disease. The timely use of Sirolin, the famous Swiss prescription, now being widely introduced in this country, will prove a household blessing in warding off the serious consequences of a sudden cold, or other acute congestions of the throat and lungs. Sirolin is a natural healing and antiseptic agent, the active principle of which is recognized by the highest medical authorities, and by this Swiss formula rendered agreeable to the taste, safe and absolutely free from any admixture of harmful or habit-forming drugs.

It is a handy home remedy for coughs and colds and invaluable as a preventive of consumption.

CUMMINS HELD IN $50,000

Carnegie Trust Director Charged With Larceny of $335,000

New York, March 22.—Out of the tangle of financial transactions which were first made known by the collapse of Joseph G. Robin's chain of banks, which were ruined by skyrocket financiering, the grand jury has drawn the indictment of William J. Cummins, directing head of the Carnegie Trust company, for the alleged larceny of $335,000 from the institution a year ago.

Cummins pleaded not guilty, with leave to withdraw the plea. Bail in $50,000 was furnished.

Through Cummins' solicitation it is alleged that huge city deposits were obtained for the Carnegie Trust company shortly after the date of the alleged larcenies with which he is charged in yesterday's indictments.

HUNT FOR "SACRED RIVER"

"Revived Spiritualists" Expect to Find It In Southern California

Findlay, O., March 22.—Seeking a sacred stream in southern California, in which a "spirit" commanded them to bathe in order that they may become chosen people of the Lord and reach the new Jerusalem, a band of twenty-six "Revived Spiritualists" left this city in a special car. The party is made up of ten families.

The trip was financed by several members, who sold valuable property at a sacrifice. Several gave up good positions to follow the spirit.

According to the members the "spirit" appears to them in the form of a mist and speaks so that all may hear. They say the sacred stream is near Los Angeles.

JAIL AND $1000 FINE

Sentence Imposed Upon Fake Sports Who Admit Their Guilt

Council Bluffs, Ia., March 22.—Six of the defendants in the so-called Mabray swindling cases who had pleaded guilty to the charge of using the United States mails in promoting fake sporting events were sentenced in the federal district court.

L. T. Hindman, R. L. Thielman, George Ryan, Tom Davries, C. T. Philipot and W. I. Cramer were sentenced to five months' imprisonment in jail and to pay a fine of $1000 each.

TROOPS PATROL MINING TOWN

Peace Is Restored In Illinois by State Militia

ALL SALOONS ARE CLOSED

Result of Armed Demonstration by Thousand Foreign Speaking Strikers Who Attempted to Awe Men Who Wished to Remain at Work—Strike Was Declared In Defiance of Orders of Officials of United Mine Workers

Gillespie, Ills., March 22.—Detachments of ten companies of the Illinois national guard are patrolling the mining town of Benld. The presence of troops has had a salutary effect on the striking miners, who for several days and even yesterday, joined in a demonstration to awe their brethren who wanted to return to work.

Operations in mine No 1 at Gillespie, and in one of the three shafts owned by the Superior Coal company at Benld will be resumed today. Wholesale arrests are to follow, according to the state attorney and the sheriff. Warants will be issued for all who carried arms or had any other part in the riotous demonstration.

The twenty-three saloons were finally closed by order of Colonel Lang, who is in command of the militia.

All remained quiet after the patrols were placed, the men seemingly having no desire to match their shotguns and knives against the soldiers' rifles and bayonets.

One thousand strong, armed with a varied assortment of firearms, old rifles, muskets, shotguns and revolvers, and marching to the music of a band, the foreign-speaking miners conducted a demonstration against their English-speaking brethren yesterday, yelling to those who stood upon the sidewalks to get in line. The procession came from Benld, visited the mines, passed through the main street of Gillespie and then returned to Benld.

Throughout the night a vigilance committee of citizens patrolled the street on receipt of the news that the Benid miners had started for Gillespie. For half an hour the excitement was intense, but the procession passed through the town without a shot being fired.

The Superior Coal company owns three mines here with a daily output of about 10,000 tons of coal. These mines employ about 1800 men. Three months ago John P. Reese came to Gillespie from Iowa to take the superintendency of the properties, succeeding J. W. Miller, who was killed in a traction wreck in Benld. Reese made several reforms that were not favorably received by the foreign miners. The climax was reached ten days ago, when ninety men were discharged from the mines for improperly loading cars. A strike followed.

Last week the state officers of the United Mine Workers of Illinois ruled against the strike and ordered the men back to work. The foreign miners broke up the meeting which was called to act upon the decision of the state officials, and when the whistle blew for work Monday the miners were prevented from going to work by a force of 500 miners who marched from Benld and defied the authorities.

A THOUSAND-MILE RACE

Aviators of Any Nationality May Compete For $50,000 Prize

London, March 22.—The Daily Mail announces the conditions of a 1000-mile aeroplane race around Great Britain for a prize of $50,000, the contest to commence on July 22 and to finish at the latest on Aug. 5.

The race is open to competitors of any nationality holding an aviator's certificate from the International Aeronautical federation.

CORK LEG SAVES LIFE

Keeps a Man Afloat When He Tumbles From Bridge Into River

Boston, March 22.—Hugh Doherty's cork leg saved him from a watery grave when he tumbled into the Charles river at the Warren bridge. He had climbed up on the railing, it is said, and fell into the water.

He began to call for help as soon as he struck the water, and when the attendants at the bridge reached his side the cork leg was holding him up and would not have let him stay under the water if he wanted to. He was sent to the Relief hospital.

State Income Tax, If Any

INDICTED ON CHARGE OF EMBEZZLEMENT

Other Troubles Are Confronting a Judge In Ohio

Napoleon, O., March 22.—Michael Donnelly, presiding judge of the third circuit, who faces six indictments in Lucas county courts, was indicted by the Henry county grand jury, following an inquiry into the alleged wrecking of the Citizens' State bank of Napoleon by the failure of the Anchor Insurance company, of which Donnolly was president.

The new indictment charges Donnelly with the embezzlement of $29,000 of the insurance company's funds on Dec. 15, 1904. Donnelly was a director of the Citizens' bank and owned a quarter interest.

At Toledo a new indictment charging Donnelly with perjury was returned by the grand jury.

THE PROBLEM

Of combining two pairs of glasses in one has been solved in Kryptok Bifocal lenses.

THE SOLUTION

Does away with the objectionable "line" between the distance and the near vision parts of the lens.

THE ADVANTAGE

No separate pasted-on segment to become cloudy and scale off.

Looks like a single lens, is thin and light.

Can be worn with comfort when the ordinary bi-focal cannot be tolerated.

We have worked out a complete and result-giving system of testing the eyes for glasses.

BRIEFS

Harry Barnes has been elected manager of the Atlantic boys ball team and Ryder Gay as Captain.

John H. Westfall of Brighton has been granted a divorce from his wife who was formerly a resident of Quincy.

Last year at this time, open cars were in service on the street railway. They would be a little out of place today.

Quincy lodge of Elks attended the funeral services of John S. Krocher at his late home on Revere road this afternoon and performed their burial service.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman F. McIntire who have been in the south during the winter months have returned. They report an enjoyable winter on their house boat.

James M. Cantfill, the new sealer of weights and measures, began his work in earnest Tuesday morning. He will visit every business place in the city as soon as possible.

Several changes have been made in the arrangement of the store of George W. Jones, the principal of which is to elevate the office which was formerly located in the centre of the store.

Quincy Shriners were in attendance Monday evening at the first ceremonial session of the year of Aleppo Temple, at the Mechanics Building, Boston. Fifty were escorted across the hot sands of the desert.

There will be a special meeting of the Board of Trade on Friday evening, at 7.30 o'clock, for the purpose of acting on resolutions on the "Real Boston" movement. Also to take action on the proposed trolley freight station on Washington street.

Manuel Perry, who went to Japan some months ago to assist in setting up turbine engines in the Japan cruiser and battleship, gave an interesting talk Tuesday evening on "Modern Japan" before the Knights of Columbus club of Quincy council.

The 45th annual encampment of the Massachusetts deparement of the Grand Army will be held at Faneuil hall, April 5. The annual banquet which closes the encampment will be held at the American house April 6. The Grand Army are also making plans to observe the 50th anniversary of the commencement of the Civil war April 19.

IN FASHION'S REALM

Eton Jackets and Bolero in Fashion This Spring.

Hats Are Large and Small and Brilliant in Coloring.

It is rather amazing how quickly the new Spring styles were settled this year. There has been less debate about them than for some years past. this does not mean that gossip and talk were not rife; the designers in Paris, shops in America, saw to it that some sensation like the trouser skirt would be projected in order to keep the air full of the subject of clothes.

It is possibly a surprise to the dressmakers themselves that this exploited sensation—the trouser skirt—became a reality and was accepted by so many people. Modifications of the original eccentric idea were quickly made, and even such houses as Drecoll and Worth, in Paris, and double that number of powerful New York houses, saw in the idea the charm of a rational and a sensible skirt.

The creators of the eccentric garment wished to draw attention to the subject of clothes during the critical week which includes the 15th of February, when the sartorial season changes. The conservatives, who care little for sensation, who are the real designers of acceptable styles, took up the idea not for what it was worth in its original state but for what they could make out of it.

Thus it was that the supposed caricature became a feature in the salons of the dignified dressmaking houses, and it has been told before in this column how successful the conservative trouser skirt now is. It has more dignity and grace than the tight garment that women have worn since October, because a wide panel or box plait of cloth drops over the knee-high division of the underskirt.

As it stands now the skirt would not draw the ridicule of a public which has been trained to cast a satirical eye on every fashionably dressed woman that walks the thoroughfares.

The repetition may grow tiresome that short, scanty skirts will remain in style, as well as short, scanty coats. The former fact is rather too well established, to the delight of some and the disaproval of many, to need further comment. It is true that there are deviations from the utterly plain models that we have had with us all Winter, but these changes are not so much in cut as in what might be called new patchwork effects.

The French are doing this more than we will, for they do not like strictly mannish effects. Somehow even their men's clothes do not look mannish. One often thinks that all men look as though their clothes were made by women dressmakers. They would put patches of material or scrolls of braid or cut-out seams on these trousers and coats if they only dared.

The rest of the world talks a great deal about French simplicity, but the American woman who is used to her "business suit" for the every-day hours, with its wash blouses and heavy, polished boots as accessories, can never be quite convinced that the French really know simplicity as the Anglo-Saxons do.

Once they might have been credited with this admirable trait in the making of their evening clothes, but under the influence of the peasant and Byzantine pressure their evening clothes have taken on a mass of trimming. It is true that as a nation they never make the mistake that the Anglo-Saxons do of choosing and placing grotesque and unfit trimming for a costume. In fact, we are leagues behind them ;and our salvation is the adoption of the mannish coat and skirt for nearly all purposes from 9 A. M. until 6 P. M.

Probably we know our limitations, and, therefore, go along the line of greatest safety. Whatever the reason, we certainly have arrived, in the masses and the classes, at a severity of style on the street that is worth imitation anywhere.

The short coat, which is also a settled fashion, as well as the scanty skirt, is made on various lines. In it one sees a wide divergence of models. The designer has turned out the full measure of accepted styles and thrown in a few odd ones for lagniappe.

The American tailors have chosen an extra simple model, which has straight under-arm seams and wide back that is heavily weighted at the hem to keep it straight from the shoulders, and single-breasted front which is finished at the top with extra wide revers and turn-over collar. The sleeve is small, long and put into the armhole without fullness. It is cut and adjusted in imitation of the sleeve in a man's coat. It has a small turnover cuff, which is quite flat and snug, and is often finished at the back with two buttons.

This coat is rather short for the American figure and decidedly short for one who has not conquered her large hips, yet it is the accepted model. Only the individualists are departing from it.

It is much the same kind of coat that was made here last Summer. The only change is the introduction, now and then, of a double-breasted effect at and below the waist. This is advocated by Drecoll, who is making a straight short coat that laps well over at the waist line and fastens with three loops of satin cord and rather large buttons. The collar is unusually large and round, and is attached to wide revers that smack somewhat of the Directoire style. He made up this model as his best coat in plain foulard lined with Chinese pongee. The foundation was blue, and the trimmings were of satin, while the collar and cuffs were of heavy ecru Point de Venise.

The periodical rumor of the return of the Eton jacket is like the one concerning the sea serpent. Many hear, but few see. This season the jacket is on hand. It may remain merely a rumor to the majority, for the tailors and dressmakers will not give their opinion yet as to whether it will be popular or not. It probably will. Women have reduced the curve of their hips so successfully by the aid of modern corsets that they will not be as afraid of the Eton jacket as they would otherwise have to be. The woman whose hips are still in the uncontrollable state should avoid anything cut off at the waist line. She should insist upon having her coats long enough and straight enough to hide any untoward difference in measurement between her waist and the point of her hips.

She can achieve this effect with ease and grace by remaining true to the present coat model, with its straight seams at the side and its heavy leads at the hem to keep these seams from breaking at the waist line and disclosing her defect. But there are thousands of women whose hips have become so flattened they can wear the short jacket with a good deal of distinction.

The new model is not tight in the waist, which helps a good deal toward keeping the straight under-arm line. It is modeled after the original form, and is also weighted at its seams and its front pieces to keep it straight from the shoulders. Some of the French models have a turnover cuff at the hem, which enlarges the waist line, or a band of fur or velvet or corduroy is used. It seems that we will not get far away from the heavy materials until well into the hot weather, for fur is plentifully used, even on such fabrics as mousseline, marquisette, and satin foulard.

Among the models of this schoolboy's jacket, which has reappeared in cloth instead of theory, is one model which shows a strong Directoire influence. It is double-breasted and fastened with two ostentatious buttons and buttonholes, which are heavily corded.

The revers are double and pointed, and made of wide striped silk. The high turnover collar has long, weighted points that touch the revers, in the front of which shows a high collar of white net with a large plaited bow of lace at the top of a double-side frill of net and lace, which drops to the buttons at the waist line. The sleeves are long, and cut to a point over the knuckles.

This model is of violet foulard with the trimming in black and ecru silk, and the long, scanty skirt is of thin violet cloth.

The question of millinery is so closely allied to the one of gowns that few women would think of choosing one without including the other in the plan for the costume. We have gone far from the days when we wore any hat with any gown; so far, indeed, that we find it difficult to believe we ever did it; but we did. It is yet done by women who care little about dress and less about color effect. It was once often considered correct to wear a black hat with any kind of gown, and we have gone far from that idea.

We know enough about effective color combinations to refuse to wear a black hat with certain clothes. We have also learned enough to know that it is more effective at times not to match our gowns and hat exactly, but to present a harmonious contrast between them.

It is evident that the same choice in the size of our hats will prevail this Spring, as it did during the Winter. Some of the models are immensely large; in the initial days of the so-called Merry Widow shape they would have caused every cartoonist to go to work on some joke concerning them, but the public has seen so much in freakish fashions that it no longer cavils at anything so settled as the huge hat.

On the other hand, small sats have a larger place in the public affection. Women are sensible in periods, and they have learned the admirable advantages of the lightweight, pinless hat, which hides the coiffure, resists the wind, is easy to adjust, and does not need a veil. It is the successful use of the small turban which has done so much to lessen the fashion for veils.

There have been few seasons when the veil was considered as unnecessary to the costume as now. The Shetland wool variety in white and black, is steadily used for cold days, for motoring, and for traveling; its serviceability has weakened the hold of the more perishable net veil, which tears and does not wash.

The new woolen ones wash perfectly and shake out free of wrinkles. They were invented for motoring, but they have become fashionable for all open-air purposes because of their protection to the skin and their durability.

The new turbans are essentially like those that preceded them. They have no bandeau, they are worn well down over the head, they do not allow of a coiffure that has any projections, and they are variously trimmed with bows of ribbon, with rosettes of velvet, with bands of imitation fur made of shirred net.

The shape that has a tam-o'-shanter crown and deep sloping brim made of finely plaited silk is at the front again. It is a most delightful hat for every hour, as it does not need a veil nor pins, and can be pulled down over the hair without puffs or braids added to keep the latter in place. There is really no reason for wearing artificial hair with any of the modern hats. A puff or two, or a fringe in front, may be needed by the average woman when she is dressed for the house or for evening, but she should take advantage of the comforts of modern millinery and give her hair a long-needed rest whenever she is in the open.

The only disadvantage that these comfort-bringing hats have is that women are too apt to keep them on all day when they are out of their own homes, because the hair is not arranged well enough to take them off. For this reason the scalp and the hair are more apt to be harmed than by the addition of a little artificial hair.

Flowers will again be worn on hats, but only on those which serve for indoor purposes or dressy hours. Satin and silk flowers will not be barred from every-day hats; they are useful and pretty, but huge bows of thin velvet of supple straw, and of soft silk will take first place.

The thin straw, which resembles horse-hair or crin, as the French call it, has come back into favor. It will probably be widely popular, because of its light weight and its freedom from crushing. Some of the new turbans can be folded easily and put into a small traveling bag; when they emerge they are dressy enough to wear to a luncheon or a matinee. They have no stiffening, they are kept in place by their own adjustment and they fit so well down over the head that they do not have to be held in place.

The straw is supple enough to be made into the four and five looped bow which is so much in fashion, and two brilliant hatpins give the touch of ornament.

It really looks as though we were again facing a season of sensible clothes. This may sound like like an extravagant statement in view of the freakishness that has been offered, but those who deal in the subject of hygiene and health for women are in favor of the clothes of today.

The short, narrow skirts, with their freedom from weight, the high waist, with its freedom from lacing, the long coutil corsets which protect the vital organs, the elastics which do not bind the limbs, the sensible boots with their sturdy soles and high uppers, the turnover collar, which does not press upon the thyroid gland and puncture the skin with its sharp bones; the lack of petticoats and belts about the waist, which tighten and stop circulation; the simple coiffure which replaces the large artificial one, and the lightweight, pinless hats which cannot produce headache or fatigue, all make for health.

It looks as though the summing up of the distinct advantages of modern dress prove that we have the balance of sense and comfort on fashion's side.—Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

MOBILIZATION ON DIAZ' PLEA

Brother of General Madero Gives His Views of Situation

INSURRECTOS HOLDING BACK

Purpose Said to Be to Permit Peace Negotiations and Prevent Further Bloodshed—Arms Will Be Laid Down If Diaz Will Retire From the Presidency—Prediction That Trouble Will Be Settled In Three Months

New York, March 22.—That President Taft mobilized United States troops in Texas as a result of a plea from President Diaz of Mexico was the direct charge made here by Augustus Madero, brother of the insurrecto leader.

He declared that Diaz is tottering to his fall and that General Madero with 15,000 men was restraining his forces only to permit peace negotiations and to prevent fufrther bloodshed. He predicted the end of the insurrection within three months.

"The Mexican senate meets on April 2 and a truce may then be declared under certain conditions," said Madero. "In the senate the insurrecto leaders will aim a rebuke at Diaz, and it is probable that a truce will be declared.

"If nothing is done at the senate meeting my brother's 15,000 troops stand ready to capture Chihuahua, Hermosillo and Saltillo.

"Under what terms would the insurrectos consent to a settlement of the present trouble?" he was asked.

"The only proposition my brother would agree to would be the retirement of Diaz as president. Then a new election could be held and the people could choose another president.

"We believe that a majority of the Mexican people are tired of Diaz and his policies. They want a new president. The insurrectos are willing to lay down their arms if Diaz will retire and a new election is held. Diaz is unable to cope with the present situation. I have received word that Mr. Taft communicated with Diaz and suggested that he send troops to the frontier. Diaz replied, requesting that United States troops be sent to patrol the border instead.

"The United States has done too much now in this matter. We are trying to have your government withdraw some of its troops. Mexico is able to take care of herself. The insurrectos are not a pack of bandits. They are men who respect good government, who have wives and children."

INVASION NOT INTENDED

Our Troops Sent to Texas to Be Prepared For Emergencies

Washington, March 22.—The so-called Mexican situation has cleared considerably here. The attitude of the United States government has been made plain, and there need no longer be any doubt, it is stated by administration officials, as to what policy the president has in view.

Mr. Taft has announced that he will do everything possible to maintain the friendly relations that so long have existed between this country and Mexico. Any rupture of these relations must come as the result of some overt act on Mexican soil.

The United States has no desire to interfere in the internal affairs of the southern republic, and President Tatt will not recommend any such interference to congress unless the circumstances become such as to permit no other possible course.

The American troops were sent to Texas and prepared for any emergency on the strength of reports which indicated that conditions in Mexico were approaching such chaos as at any time might threaten American lives and property in that country.

So long as Americans engaged in lawful pursuits are not molested, and so long as American property rights are protected, Mexico need not be alarmed by the reports of an American invasion which have been spread in various quarters by irresponsible persons.

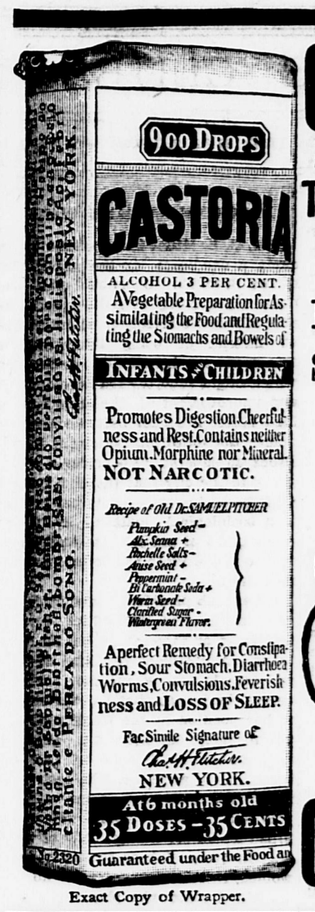

Disappointment In Mexico

Mexico City, March 22.—The national situation as affected by the rebellion is not regarded in a particularly optimistic light in view of the declaration of Finance Minister Limantour upon his return to the capital.

There is disappointment that he did not prove to be the bearer of proposals from the rebels, and his assertion that the latter must lay down their arms in the face of their repeated declaration that they will do nothing of the kind, is considered as pointing to a deadlock.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics, but finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Evan has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's mixing in politics. His father pulls wires unknown to him to have him invited to speak in a distant mining town. Hathaway, who has been trying to do business with the road and with Senator Blount, is to have a talk with Mrs. Blount.

Hathaway wants a rebate from the road in consideration of political favors. He is referred to Evan and is advised by Mrs. Blount to put Professor Anners' name on his list of stockholders.

While Evan was staring at the pen written name Hathaway went on eloquently emphasizing the disastrous results that would fall upon the people for whom he was in the largest sense the trustee, the disaster hanging upon the withdrawal of the preferential rate.

Blount broke him in the midst of the special pleadings. "I see you have recently added one new name to this list, that of Professor Anners."

"Yes," interrupted the Twin Buttes president, "and he is a good example of our stockholders. Those like Anners—college professors, preachers and the like—buy stocks when they buy 'em at all for an investment and pay for 'em out of their hard earned savings."

"I know," said Blount, frowning. The fact that Patricia's father was involved added a fresh and exasperating complication, but he must come to some decision. "Let us get down to the present fact," he went on brusquely. "What is it that you want me to do, Mr. Hathaway?"

"I want you to set the machinery in motion so that we can have our rate continued for another two years on the same terms as before. You are going to need every vote you can get this year, Mr. Blount, and you can't afford to turn us down."

Blount returned the printed list of stockholders and fell back upon the pencil sharpening. "Is it possible that you don't recognize the bald criminality of such a transaction, Mr. Hathaway?" he asked quietly.

"Of course I don't," was the ready reply. "It is the universal rule of the business world everywhere. You do something for me and I do something for you. You make it possible for us to live and do business in lumber, and we will do what we can to make it possible for you to get your square deal from the people of this state. That's the whole thing in a nutshell, Mr. Blount."

"One question," snapped Blount, trying to fix the roving gaze of the hawklike eyes. "With whom did you make this arrangement two years ago?"

"With Mr. McVickar himself."

"And you think you can do it again?"

"I know I can, but I don't want to go over your head. They all tell me that you are handling this end of it for the railroad company, and I'm not going around hunting a chance to make enemies. There's no hurry. Take your own time to think it over and to communicate with Mr. McVickar if you want to. When you get things fixed you can wire me just one word to Aretas. Just say 'Yes' and sign your name to it, and that will be enough."

For a full half hour after the president of the lumber trust had closed the door of the private office in the Temple court building behind him Blount sat rocking gently in his pivot chair, fighting once more with the soul nausea which was threatening to overwhelm him.

So Vice President McVickar had deceived him after all, and he was merely a fence put up to screen the chicanery and trickery which were going on just the same as before. More, the vice president had let him stultify himself in a thousand ways. All his brave talk about openness and fair dealing would be set down as mere dust throwing to conceal the workings of a corrupt and criminal machine, grinding away in the background.

And his father—how did he figure in this despicable business? Had he plotted with McVickar to bring his own son to shame merely because that son had refused to be a tool in the hands of the great machine? It was grossly incredible, and yet— Evan Blount remembered that thus far his father had said no word opposing the course he had taken. Could it be possible that a father could become so much the boss as to forget the common ties of kindred?

Blount's mind—but more than his mind, his heart—went groping out in vain reachings for a confidant and an adviser. There was no one to whom he could turn, no one whose conscience was not seared and distorted in the fires of political partisanship. No one, did he say? Yes; there was one. Patricia would know and understand. He must find her and tell her. But in the interval—

He got up and shut his desk with a slam. The stenographer heard and came to the door of the anteroom, notebook and pencil in hand. "Anything to give me before you go away, Mr. Blount?" he asked.

"No!" said Blount almost savagely. Then he reconsidered. "Yes, there is. You may take a message to Mr. McVickar. Are you ready?"

The stenographer nodded.

"All right; take this:

"Pending another interview with you, I shall close my offices in Temple court and confine myself strictly to the routine legal business of the company. In the meantime my resignation is in your hands if you wish to appoint a new division counsel.

"Write that out and send it at once," he said to the clerk. "I shall be at the hotel if you want to reach me between now and closing time."

CHAPTER XII.

A WELLSPRING IN THE DESERT.

In the telephone station at the hotel Blount tried several times, and always ineffectually, to get a long distance connection with Wartrace Hall. Failing in this, he called up Gantry to ask if the traffic manager knew anything about the purposes and movements of his father. Gantry did not know, but he knew something else—a thing which proved the leakiness of the telegraph department.

"Come down here and tell me what you mean by sending incendiary telegrams to the vice president," he commanded, with jesting severity, over the phone.

Gantry was busy with the stenographer when Evan entered, but the traffic manager immediately postponed the business of the moment and dismissed the clerk.

"There is nothing to tell—more than you seem already to know," said Blount morosely in answer to Gantry's quest. "I have wired my resignation; that is all."

"But why?" persisted Gantry.

"Because I am not going to be an accessory either before or after the fact—not if I know it," was the prompt rejoinder.

"An accessory to what?"

"To a criminal disregard for the laws of this state and of the nation. Gantry, if you and some others had your just deserts you would be breaking stone in the penitentiary this blessed minute."

"Suffering jehu," laughed the traffic manager, "somebody must have been hitting you pretty hard! Who was it, Evan?"

At another time Blount might have been less angry and more discreet.

"It was Mr. Simon P. Hathaway, president of the Twin Buttes Lumber company," he said.

Gantry drew a long breath, which ended in a low whistle.

"So that's what you were let in for, was it?" he exclaimed. And then he checked himself abruptly and went back to the principal contention: "But you're not going to quit, Evan. You can't afford to do that."

"Why can't I?"

"Because you have committed yourself right and left. No man can walk out of the ranks on the eve of a battle. You don't stop to consider the construction that will be put upon such hasty action on your part."

"I don't stop to consider anything, Dick, except the fact that I was evidently expected to connive at a criminal contempt for the law of the land, the law which, as a member of the bar, I have sworn to uphold. That was enough for me."

"But it won't be enough for Mr. McVickar," Gantry interposed. "If you can afford to drop out he can't afford to let you." Then, with sudden gravity, "Hadn't you better let me hold up that telegram of yours for a few hours, Evan, until you've had time to think it over?"

Blount sprang from his chair in a white heat.

"Do you mean to tell me that you are already holding it up?" he demanded.

"I took the liberty temporarily," said the traffic man coolly. "There is no harm done. Mr. McVickar is on his way west now, and he will be here in a day or two. Why not kill the message and have it out with him in person when he comes?"

But Blount was not to be appeased.

"I won't have my communications tampered with," he raged. "If you have given an order to have that telegram held out you can give another to have it sent immediately."

"All right," said Gantry, "just as you say." And he made no effort to detain the enraged one when Blount turned his back and strode away. But after the self discharged political manager was gone the traffic man chuckled quietly and turned up a faced down paper which had been lying on his desk during the short and belligerent interview.

"Humph!" he mused, reading the typewritten lines over again. "The little lady was too fly for you this time, Evan, my boy. She was just prophetess enough to guess where and how you would go off the handle. Great little woman that. I believe she figures out more than half of the fine moves in the honorable senator's game."

(To be Continued.)

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

HARRY DRAKE ON SHOE SCHOOLS

Tells of the Work Among the Germans

A feature of the meeting at Brockton on Sunday in the interest of a school for shoemaking, was the description of the German shoe trade school given by Harry Drake of Quincy, brother of General Supt. H. T. Drake of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., who spent one and one-half years studying at this school. He was present by invitation of Judge Reed. The stereopticon was operated by George S. Paine.

Mr. Drake described the work of the German shoe school as the pictures were thrown on the screen. He said he went there and spent one and one-half years in the school for the purpose of gaining technical and practical knowledge of the business which could not be secured in this country.

In the cutting department the skins are laid out and patterns placed upon them and the pupils taught to place patterns advantageously and to calculate the number of pieces cut from each skin, these calculations to match those made by the director. There is an entire course in last making, from the rough block to the finished last.

Five or six months is devoted to pattern-making, which is very complete and thorough. In the sole leather department the cutting of leather to exact figures is taught, the running of machines in the stitching and making rooms, the number of stitches to an inch and all the minute details.

There is also a course in leather tanning. The pupil before securing a diploma must also be wholly proficient in the operation of the engine which runs the factory, so that he can figure the exact horsepower necessary to run a factory or so many machines. In addition to this there is instruction in calculating the cost of factory operation, the cutting of leather in the cutting and sole leather room and all the technical knowledge to fit one for conducting a factory of his own.

Judge Reed said the purpose is to provide an industrial school where young men who do not care to go to High school but want to learn the shoe business can get such instruction. Second, where a young man at work who wants to perfect himself in the industry will find opportunity to do so. Third, where a man can work in the factory a part of the time and meanwhile attend the school to learn more. Here are three separate propositions.

Mr. Drake has accepted a good position with a shoe manufacturing firm at Nashua, N. H.

"LAID OUT" FOR GOOD

Motion to Reconsider Picket Bill Is Defeated by Treadway

Boston, March 22.—President Treadway of the senate defeated a reconsideration on the peaceful picketing bill. His vote Monday killed the bill, and yesterday afternoon it decided the defeat of a motion to reconsider Monday's defeat.

The vote yesterday was 19 to 18, when President Treadway directed the clerk to call his name. He answered: "No." This made the vote a tie. A majority was needed to carry the reconsideration.

The bill is now dead for this session of the legislature, not going down to the house.

Stole Money From Masons

Boston, March 22.—William O. Wiley, a former secretary of the Henry Price lodge of Masons of Charlestown, pleaded guilty to the larceny of $2000 from that lodge, and was placed on probation by Judge Stevens. Full restitution has been made.

"If It's a Ralston It's Correct"

It is knowledge rather than "knack" which enables a man to dress both correctly and becomingly.

No part of a man's apparel changes in style more often or more radically than does his shoes. That is the reason why men who care to be correctly shod and who are particular about their personal appearance insist on getting "Ralston Authority Styles." We carry a sufficient variety of correct styles to enable you to express your own individuality in your selection.

The new shoe fashions are almost always first shown in Ralston Shoes. Come in and see the season's latest.

The weather this noon was a little more like spring.

Whist tournament at the rooms of the Granite City club tonight.

At the meeting next Sunday evening of Y. P. C. U. at Universalist church Lester H. Clee will speak on the topic "Public Playgrounds." An unusually good service is anticipated.

Mr. Stone of Butte, Montana is visiting Rev. J. E. Lillback and Dr. W. A. Groenlund of Granite street this week. Mr. Stone is a representative of the "Kalevan Ritarit" which corresponds to the Odd Fellows.

A ladies night of the Park and Downs Improvement Association will be held tomorrow evening at Poland hall. The program includes an entertainment, and the invitation is general.

Rev. Charles Nakinen of New York city who has charge of the Finnish and Swedish Mission for sailors had charge of the services in the Buckley street church on Sunday. A special collection was taken for the Mission work and a goodly sum was realized.

The Civil Service Commission announces a special examination for the office of sealer of weights and measures to be held in Quincy, April 13. The examination will consist of the following subjects: Training and experience, arithmetic, letter-writing, handwriting, spelling, and knowledge of the laws governing the inspection of weights and measures.

The choir of the Finnish Congregational church gave Mr. Lillback a surprise party at his home on Granite street Monday evening upon his return from Fitchburg and Gardiner. The evening was spent in songs and speeches, eating refreshments which the choir brought with them and last but not least in giving a present to the pastor.

Quincy Chapter No. 88, Order of the Eastern Star, held its regular meeting Monday evening. Among the guests present from other Chapters were Past Grand Matron, Miriam Watts and Past Grand Patron, Charles A. Watts. At the close of the business meeting Past GrandPatron Watts gave a very interesting talk on the "Trip to the Thirteenth Triennial Assembly of the General Grand Chapter, held at Jacksonville, Fla., by the New England Delegates." Refreshments were served and a very pleasant evening enjoyed.

BRIEFS

Old Colony boulevard hearing tomorrow at State House.

The South Quincy club will hold a debate next Tuesday evening on the following resolve "That Quincy should be annexed to Boston."

Michael E. Shea, superintendent of the street department who has been confined to his home for several weeks by rheumatism is able to be out again.

BOULEVARD HEARING.

The Committee on Metropolitan Affairs of the Legislature will give a hearing at 10.30 tomorrow on the bill for the Old Colony avenue from Dorchester avenue, South Boston, to Quincy and the South Shore. The proposed location is mostly on the shore side of the railroad.

OVER THE WIRE.

This the Ledger Office?
Yes.
I put a want ad in your paper yesterday for three times. Will you cancel the remaining two insertions as I am deluged with applicants and good ones too.
All right, glad your want was filled so quickly. The Ledger generally gets results.

ON WAY TO GALLOWS

Murderer Sings Hymn of His Childhood In Strong Voice

Pittsburg, March 22.—Singing the hymn of his childhood as he walked between two guards through the corridors of the Alleghany county jail, Steve Rusio, a Russian, was hanged for the murder of Mrs. Beta Dombsky, whom he shot as she lay beside her sleeping husband and babe, because she refused to accept his attentions.

The strong, full notes of the song continued during the march to the gallows and while the noose was being adjusted, and were stopped when the trap was sprung.

"Yes" Gains at Lynnfield

Lynnfield, Mass., March 22.—Despite the hopes of the Lynnfield Centre people that the recount of the vote for license would show a change to the "no" column the result was for "yes" by a majority of 88 to 84, a gain of 4.

Mayor Hatfield of Newton is reported to have received two letters threatening death by shooting. The contents of the letters have not been made public.

HEARING TOMORROW AT STATE HOUSE ON OLD COLONY BOULEVARD EAST OF THE RAILROAD.

EXCITING BASE BALL

Red and Blue Contest Open Season at Wollaston

At the monthly meeting of the Wollaston Social club on Tuesday evening an exciting baseball game between the Reds and the Blues took place. Assisted by a bunch of heavy hitters, the unfairness and prejuduce of Umpire Shaw and the weakness of the Red battery the Blues administered to their opponents a stinging defeat to the tune of 12 to 3.

The decisions of the "Ump" were raw, to say the least, and several times he was nearly mobbed by the crowd from the bleachers, only being saved by timely defense by players of the victorious Blue team.

The grandstand was packed with young ladies and the large audience present were enabled to keep tabs on the game with printed score cards provided.

Following is the batting order of the teams:

REDS		BLUES
A. W. Rohn	P	G. Ernest Carr
C. E. Barker	1	Miss Goodnow
Mrs. G. E. Carr	3	Mrs. Bates
R. W. Oldham	C	Axel Nelson
Miss Bishop	2	Mrs. Oldham
Louis B. Weston	ss	Mrs. Brodbeck
Mrs. Andrews	CF	Clifton Baker
Miss M. L. Simmons	RF	Dr. Andrews
Mrs. Hamilton	LF	Miss Iva Briggs

Umpire—Irving L. Shaw. Scorer—Frank Bishop

The evening opened with a guessing contest which consisted of an art gallery containing photographs of the club members in their infancy. Refreshments were served by the committee for this month, which consisted of Roy C. Baker, Louis B. Weston, Mrs. R. W. Oldham, Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield and Miss Helen Foster.

SPORTING NOTES.

Entries are coming in fast for the 10-mile race to be run April 1 under the auspices of the Italian American A. C. The course is a circuit including Canal street and parts of Coddington and Washington streets.

Clapp Memorial of East Weymouth and Union A. C. of South Weymouth will meet in Quincy Y. M. C. A. early in April to play the rubber game of basketball which will decide the championship of Weymouth.

Jim King of Center street, Quincy, the popular trainer of the North Dorchester A. A. took his team of distance runners to Worcester last week and carried away first honors. Lilly and Catilano were the runners, each man going five miles. King's men won from a large field.

Considerable interest has been aroused in the 10-mile open amateur race to be held under the auspices of the Quincy Rowing association on April 19. The course mapped out for Merchant's week last year will be used. "Tootie" Dineen will represent Quincy Y. M. C. A.

DOCTORS SAY COFFIN IS DEAD FOR SURE

Boston Man Had Revived After Being Laid Out

Boston, March 22.—George Coffin of this city, who arose alive after being pronounced dead a week ago, died yesterday afternoon, according to three physicians. They declared him dead positively and unmistakably after applying all tests of death. Then Medical Examiner Magrath was called, and said Coffin was dead without question.

The body was taken to the North Grove street morgue last night for an autopsy. This morning it was delivered into the charge of Richard C. Kirby, the same undertaker who was about to embalm Coffin a week ago when the latter awoke as from a sleep and refused to allow himself to be buried.

Coffin, who was suffering from general physical exhaustion, was calling on his old friends and assuring them he was very much alive for the few days preceding last Saturday. On that night he took an overdose of medicine and was confined to his bed Sunday. He then failed rapidly up to the time of his death. He was unmarried.

PREDICTIONS OF "SEERESS"

Strike Terror to Hearts of Jury In Camorra Trial

DEATH AWAITS ONE MEMBER

Authorities Say Prophecy Is Another Ruse of Secret Organization to Prevent Conviction of Its Members—Cringing Little Defendant Denies Taking Part In Murders—Morra Defends Himself In a Brief

Viterbo, Italy, March 22.—The secret, mysterious connivances of the dreaded Camorra have succeeded in striking terror to the jurors who have in their hands the fate of the forty-one prisoners charged with the Cuoccolos' murder.

Haunted by the dire prophecy of the Paris spiritualistic medium. Blanche Bacu, who declared that one juror would die before the trial ends, one of them, a patriarchal man with a snow-white beard, complained of being very ill yesterday and insisted that the trial be adjourned.

This episode caused the greatest excitement. Previous to this several others had become alarmed and wanted to quit at once. Another prediction by the "seeress" was that the real murderers would be discovered outside of the steel cage in the assize court.

The authorities declare that the medium's prophecy is only another ruse of the secret organization, in the hope that the jury will not dare to convict its members through fear of death.

The carbineers are keeping close watch upon her in the belief that she may prove to be the tool of the Camorra, having been sent here by Neapolitan Camorrists who are still at large.

President Blanchi of the assize court interrogated Guiseppe Salvi, a weak and insignificant little man of cringing appearance. Salvi was apparently fear-stricken as he rubbed his hands and gazed imploringly at the court. He is one of the six men, according to the indictment, who stabbed Cuoccolo to death and one of the two who afterwards murdered Signora Cuoccolo.

"Would the strong and terrible men like the Camorrists ask a crippled man such as I am to take part in a deed of murder where strength was needed?" he asked. "I can prove that I did not leave my home on the day the Cuoccolos were killed."

Salvi is proprietor of an inn on the road leading to Torre del Greco, where Cuoccolo was stabbed to death.

Following the interrogation of Salvi, Nicola Morra was allowed to read to the court a brief in his own behalf. He said that, regarding the accusation of the court that he had forged passports to take women to the United States for illegal purposes, that he had been convicted by prejudice because the carabineers wanted to hold him in custody until the present trial started. He further said that false testimony had been given in another case when he was arrested for safe robbery and that the motive was the same.

"The evidence against me in this case has been concocted from falsehoods by the carabineers," he explained. Then he scornfully denied that there was a criminal organization in the Camorra.

NEW FACE BY SURGERY

Fine Work on Man Who Was Badly Mangled by Cog Wheels

New York, March 22.—By means of plastic surgery a new face is being furnished to Timothy Martin. Martin's new nose is being made out of the little finger of his left hand. Martin is 43 years old. On May 16, 1910, he fell face foremost into a set of revolving cogs in the Sunnyside railroad yard in Long Island City.

Only his eyeballs, said the doctors, escaped mutilation. By means of plastic surgery they kneaded and moulded the flesh as it healed into a chin. Then they gave Martin a mouth and lips.

KILLS SELF AND BABY

Woman In Poor Circumstances Resorts to Carbolic Acid

Amsterdam, N. Y., March 22.—Minnie Youst, aged 28, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid after she had killed her 1-month-old baby, by pouring some of the poison down its throat.

The woman, who was a mill operator, sought aid from the poor department last December, saying that she was suffering from rheumatism, and was sent to the county house.

Italy's New Premier

Rome, March 22.—Former Premier Giolitti has accepted the post made vacant by Premier Luzatti and was commissioned by King Victor Emmanuel to form a new cabinet.

Men's Clothes.

Since 1825 the clothing of men has grown simpler and simpler, and if the course of evolution has taken away from the picturesqueness of the crowd it has added to the dignity of the man. —Men's Wear.

ULRICH HELD FOR TRIAL

Washington Again Denies That He Insulted Mrs. Ulrich

New York, March 22.—Booker T. Washington appeared in police court yesterday afternoon to press a charge of assault against Albert A. Ulrich, a white man, by whom the negro was badly beaten Sunday night.

Ulrich was accompanied to court by his wife, who charges that Washington insulted her and that it was for this reason he was beaten by her husband.

Ulrich waived examination and was held in $500 bail for trial in the court of special sessions.

Complete denial of the allegations against him by Mr. and Mrs. Ulrich was made by Washington in a statement which he issued at the Manhattan hotel.

SEEKS TO ENJOIN THE CITY TREASURER

From Paying Out Money on Account of New Wollaston School House Plans

Dennis F. Crowley Claims Ordinances were Violated as Bids Were Not Asked for as Required by Law

A new phase in the Wollaston schoolhouse question is likely to arise before night which may dampen somewhat the celebration planned by the Wollaston school committee over the award of the contract for the new twelve-room school building is that section.

It is understood from good authority that before night an injunction will be served on the City Treasurer to prevent him paying any funds of the city for the plans of the new school building at Wollaston.

There have been rumors for the past few days that something of this kind might happen although up to noon no papers had been served.

Dennis J. Crowley who rumor says is to place the injunction, informed the Daily Ledger this morning that such was the fact. He further said that he was then on his way to Boston to make application before the supreme court in equity for the injunction. Mr. Crowley has retained Harvey H. Pratt as counsel.

Mr. Crowleys ground in applying for the injunction is that there was no competition among the architects in submitting plans for the building.

In the case of the Montclair school plans were advertised for by the School Committee but not so with the Wollaston plans. Mr, Crowley says that he has seen the records of the School Committee and that these show that Mr. ——— moved and it was voted that Messrs. McLean & Wright be invited to submit sketches for a twelve room brick school building at Wollaston.

While a dozen sets of plans were submitted for the Montclair school when plans were advertised for but one set was submitted on the Wollaston proposition

In other words the claim is that the securing of plans was contrary to Ordinance No. 30, which reads as follows:

"All officers and boards in charge of departments when authorized to purchase material for the city of Quincy.

Shall, when the estimated cost is five hundred dollars or more, invite sealed proposals therefor.

Shall, advertise such invitation for proposals in not more than two newspapers published in said city:

Shall reserve the right to reject any or all proposals and state the time and place for opening the proposals.

Shall, when conditions are equal, give preference to citizens of Quincy.

Shall, keep all such proposals open for public inspection after they have been accepted or rejected.

In the case of the Wollaston school plans it is claimed they involved an expenditure of over $1000.

The raising of this point involves an entirely new proposition and if the injunction is granted by the Supreme Court in equity it will delay for a time at least work on the building.

OPPOSITION ORGANIZED

Mayors and Selectmen Against Real Boston

About 25 men, representing nearly as many communities in the Metropolitan district, met at the Exchange club on Wednesday afternoon and formed a special committee to complete an organization in opposition to the "Real Boston" movement, to fight the project at the legislative hearing next Monday says the Globe.

The committee consists of Mayor Walker of Waltham chairmen, Mayor C. S. Taylor of Medford, Mayor Charles E. Hatfield of Newton, Selectman P. Sarsfield Cunniff of Watertown, A. A. Galiano of Hull, S. C. Bennett of Weston and B. T. Keenan of Winthrop.

Representatives from several cities and towns recorded by the chamber of commerce as in favor of the project declared that such indorsements were secured in slimly attended meetings, in which there had been no presentation of the "other side."

Those who spoke in emphatic opposition to the movement were Mayor Walker of Waltham, Mayor Taylor of Medford, Selectman Keenan of Winthrop, Samuel C. Bennett of Weston, Philip S. Parker of Brookline, Selectman Galiano of Hull, City Solicitor Winfield S. Slocum of Newton, Selectman W. W. Hersey of Hingham, Selectman J. P. Boutwell of Winchester and Preston Pond of the latter town.

THE ADVOCATES.

A strong indorsement of the proposed "real Boston" measure was made by an organization of city and town officials, representatives of commercial organizations and other citizens of the Metropolitan district, who have formed a metropolitan federation committee, in a meeting at the City club on Wednesday. A report in support of the plan was adopted and sent to the chamber of commerce. F. W. Dallinger of Cambridge was chairman of the meeting. Others taking active part were Hugh Bancroft of Boston, A. L. Cutting of Weston, Rev. Harold Marshall of Melrose, H. L. Kincaide of Quincy, W. D. Richards of Winchester, Franklin W. Ganse and Frederick G. Melcher of Newton, A. B. Worthen of Weymouth, Leslie C. Weed and W. S. Bucklin of Brookline, Willard Welsh of Malden, George F. Bean of Woburn, S. R. Cutler of Revere, A. E. Locke of Lexington, C. M. Abbott of Watertown and C. B. Kinsley of Stoneham. The list does not appear to include any mayors or selectmen.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

The Ways and Means committee of the Senate has reported favorable on an additional appropriation of $20,000 for the Court House at Quincy. This will make the total appropriation $100,000.

A vote on the repeal of the bar and bottle act is expected today at 4 P. M.

ANNUAL PARISH MEETING

Quincy Point Church in Prosperous Condition

The annual parish supper and business meeting of the Washington Street Congregational church was held Wednesday evening. At 6.30 about 100 people sat down to a very substantial supper served by the Ladies' Aid society. Baked beans, cold ham, potato salad, rolls, coffee, pies and cake were consumed with alarming rapidity but the ladies had lived up to their reputation and had a plenty and some to spare.

At the business meeting, W. E. Lee was chosen moderator. Dr. E. H. Bushnell was elected clerk for the tenth consecutive year.

The following new members were voted into the parish: Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Perry, Charles French, Miss Helen hSerburne, Willis Hayden, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McKenney and Robert Hendrie.

The pastor's report showed an average of three sermons a day. An average of about 150 different people attended church each Sunday. The church he found in good shape spiritually but there was a need of more faith, more fellowship and more prayer.

The report of the treasurer Marcus E. White, showed the church to be in good financial condition.

Receipts—balance on hand March 1910, $117.99; pledged offerings, $624.76; unpledged offerings, $177.60; Sailor's Snug harbor, $200; Ladies' Aid society, $340; special collections and miscellaneous $179.26. Total $2,089.65.

Disbursements $2,121.31. Debt $31.66. Before the treasurer's report was accepted a sum of $36.66 was raised by voluntary contributions from different members, five at $5, three at $2, five at $1 and one at 66 cents.

Charles H. Sherburne as auditor reported the treasurer's accounts correct.

The report of the Prudential committee was read by W. E. Lee and was accepted by the parish.

T. B. Pollard reported for the music committee and urged definite arrangements for an organist Friday evenings and a pianist for Sunday evening. He also urged better congregational singing and called for more sopranos in the choir. Special mention was made of the good work of Mr. Bonney in putting the organ in fine repair.

Mrs. P. H. Holman reported for the Ladies' Aid society. The ladies had had the usual sales and supper and two unusual features, a husking bee and a midwinter picnic.

The Men's club report was given by J. W. Hendrie. The club was organized last October and had continued in a flourishing condition. Over 80

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

At last there is a Watson in the United States Senate, but he is not from Georgia.

If Mexico is annexed, it can get in as one of the counties of Texas without creating a disturbance.

According to the present status of affairs, Senator "Joe" Bailey doesn't know whether he is a-comin' or a-goin'.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon says he will go to war if Champ Clark will, and our opinion is that Clark would go to war in a minute.

It isn't the biggest news of the day that Abe Ruef the millionaire grafter has actually gone to prison, but it shows that the relentless force of reform is steadily pressing forward.

AMERICANS IN TROUBLE.

Edwin Blatt of Pittsburg and Lawrence Converse of Los Angeles have become involved in a little scrape down in Mexico. Our government asks for their release, saying they were taken on our territory. These are but two of many cases where Americans are charged with too great interest in Mexican politics. Some of them will not be able to put up the defense that will probably set these two men free.

To our citizens, most of them young and adventurous, who go to Southern countries for business and speculation, the revolutions seem about as serious as a boy's game of leap frog. As the turn of the game may mean fortune or bankruptcy for them, they naturally take a hand themselves.

As shown in Richard Harding Davis's stories, many South American enterprises have their departments for the promotion of revolutions. Hundreds of Americans have lined up with the Mexican Insurrectos in the present trouble, often commanding armed bands. But the play shifts rapidly from farce to tragedy, from detail of big business to the secret tangles of diplomacy, when one gets caught.

The fact that a Central American Republic may look about as serious as a theatrical king with paste board crown and glass jewels, is one that our state department can take no cognizance of. It must go through all the formal motions required by the most august sovereign of Europe. Red tape must be even more carefully unwound, else sensitive diplomatic puppets of the tropics will imagine slights that would not be dreamed of in Europe.

Our citizens who meddle in tropical politics can therefore expect no more protection than if they played the game of anarchy in a European capital. Wherefore they should spend nine hours a day in the office, play bridge whist evenings in the boarding house parlor, sleep nightly in their own little beds, pass out the cigars equally to all factions. Thus they will prosper under any regime.

THE LUMBER MONOPOLY.

"Forty years ago three fourths of the standing timber was publicly owned. Now about four fifths of it is privately owned."

This startling contrast is quoted from the recent report of Corporation Commissioner H. K. Smith. It is one calculated to stir melancholy reflections.

Our older men well recall the popular words of an old song, to the effect that "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give them all a farm." Of course up to a certain point it added to public wealth to give away land. If the settler had to plant his own crop and raise it, his contribution of his own or hired labor to the development of the country was such that he made a return for what had been given him.

But when the government gave away timber land to railroads and others, the owners had nothing to do but to let the forces of soil and sunshine develop a rich forest growth, wholly apart from any contribution of labor on their part.

A general increase in the cost of building materials has occurred during the past few years. It is a common testimony that it costs a third more to put up a given type of house than fifteen years ago. The change has led to a rapid increase in the use of cement and other substitutes for wood. Had the government given away timber resources less lavishly, it would not have been possible for these vast reserves to be so closely controlled by a few hands.

Much of the southern pine which sold for $1.25 per acre, is now worth $60 an acre, is one of Mr. Smith's cheerful remarks. One often sees men under the influence of liquor, who will haul a roll of bills out of the pocket, and seek to show their good fellowship by distributing them among their friends. Uncle Sam's land policy has been much like this. Just what intoxicant led him to this state ofgenerous exhilaration we never found out. But it must have been something pretty warm in the high ball line.

DRIFT OF OPINION

In the New Jersey legislature a member has been found who wants laws presented in such a clearly worded and sensible fashion that everybody of sanity could readily understand them. It may be that his dream will come true presently. It is not beyond hope that some day we may have laws that will tell their own story. At present in most States the lawyers and the courts are kept busy trying to straighten out involved and clouded statutes that mean one thing to one man and something directly opposite to another reader. Even courts disagree sometimes on the exact meaning of laws, a minor court giving one reading and meaning and being reversed when the matter gets to the court above. It would be a great thing if legislators would try, for one thing, to express themselves in short sentences in their lawmaking. Instead many of them write such long, involved and painful screeds that from one period to the reaching of another the reader of the law gets oftentimes hopelessly lost. The result is litigation, crowded civil courts, confusion and losses of money; and largely because legislators, supposed to be wise and picked men, oftentimes can't use the English language without abusing it.—Brockton Enterprise.

Down in Toccoa, Ga., the First Baptist church is attracting attention because it has gone into the advertising business. It uses the columns of the press to advertise its services, just as a theatre or a grocery store or a plumbing shop advertises its wares. "The Church on the Square"—this is the motto that hits the reader in the face in big headlines as he opens his morning paper. Then the advertisement goes on, just like the ad of a soap merchant, to urge the reader to "give us a trial." Special appeals are made now and then to the children. All special services are "played up" in big type. The church has found that "it pays to advertise." The idea is one of far-reaching possibilities. Sooner or later some other church will begin to advertise. Then there will be competition. One church will advertise the shortest sermons, and the other will come back and guarantee the best music. Each will try to outdo the other. And as they advertise they will try more and more to live up to their advertisements. And finally, perhaps, one of them will be advertising that its sewing society is absolutely free from gossip. And so it will go until all the churches in the town are about as perfect as an erring human institution can be. The idea has much to commend it.—Haverhill Gazette.

SHIP A MYSTERY.

Germany's first turbine battleship was launched Wednesday, the birthday of Emperor William I., and was christened Kaiser by Empress Auguste Victoria. Emperor William looked on says a cable from Kiel to the Herald.

In a christening speech Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg described the Kaiser, as a ship of mystery, the admiralty, in accordance with its custom withholding all details of construction and equipment even to the matter of tonnage and the number of guns to be carried. It is thought that the vessel will have a displacement of between 21,000 and 24,000 tons and there is a possibility that she will be armed with new 14-inch guns.

The Kaiser, known while building as the Hildebrand, because she replaces the older Hilderbrand, was laid down on July 1, 1909 provision for her construction having been made in the German naval program for that year.

MISSIONARY EXPOSITION

Time Approaching for Opening at Mechanics Building

No doubt a great multitude of people, both around Boston and throughout America have never known of missionary expositions. They are familiar with food fairs, day shows, motor boat exhibits, of course, but an exhibition devoted entirely to missions is decidedly out of the ordinary that it is hard to conceive how one could be gotten up that would arouse interest and cause people to attend. Yet, since "Africa and the East" were in London about three years ago attended by thousands and thousands of spectators, besides a vast army of volunteer workers, the interest has spread to America.

About a year ago over forty missionary organizations in Boston came together and incorporated "The World-in-Boston" with a guarantee fund of $60,000. The London Missionary Society granted the petition for the services of the Rev. A. M. Gardner, and he landed in Boston and began operations about one year ago. He fired all with his exuberant enthusiasm, and soon began to show his wonderful genius for organization in the large and his wonderful ability to drop details in the small. Although amazed at the first sight by the vastness of our Mechanics Building as compared with the Horticultural Hall where the Exposition was held in London he has planned to use every bit of space in the huge building.

That the undertaking will be a great success is shown from the fact that it has from the start been amply financed. Nothing has been spared in energy or expense, and yet it has been most economically administered. A glance at the budget outlined by the trustees shows only modest assignments in view of a great enterprise: office expense, $18,000; construction, $16,000; rent, $15,000; publicity, $10,000; pageant, $25,000 and other items, such as printing, foreign goods, etc., about $15,000. The expense of construction has been greatly lessened by the formation of a company of New York business men to provide the materials for the World-in-Boston. The corporation with its capital of nearly $60,000 will build the parts needed, purchase the costumes, and in other ways take over the material so that it may be available for other expositions.

We of this vicinity are glad that Boston is the pioneer in such a great undertaking, but we must not think for a moment that the exposition idea will be confined to Boston and New England. Already Toronto, Cleveland, Kansas City, have persuaded the Rev. Gardner to put them tentatively on his list, and a series of great missionary expositions may be confidently expected. This speaks well for the ability of the man, who is not afraid to undertake great things, which might appall some of us less experienced. He is not staggered in the least even though it will not be possible for the exhibit to be moved into the building until about April 17, which is only one week before the scheduled time for opening the Exposition on April 24.

Two important methods are being used to give "The World in Boston" proper publicity. One is the Exposition Herald, which is published monthly from November to April. A certain number is sent to every church in greater Boston. It gives each month descriptions of the various departments of the Exposition with halftone pictures of scenes and objects, which will be presented, and publishes full directions for the stewards and other workers. It is a very interesting magazine and probably is read by more people in Greater Boston than any other periodical. If you can not get it in your church, send to the office, 4 Ashburton Place, Boston.

Another method is the use of Exposition stamps, the exact size of which is shown in the cut, which also gives some of the details on the stamp or sticker. These are now in use in large numbers, but it is desired to have them generally used by all friends of our great enterprise. These advertising stickers are distinctive and attractive. It is printed in three colors and represents a Moslem, with face and hands uplifted, and a cross in the background. The cross presents a picture of Boston Harbor showing Bunker Hill monument and the State House. These stamps are issued in sheets of one hundred and may be obtained at a slight expense. They may be used on the back of an envelope like the now well known Red Cross stamps. It is suggested that they be used on all packages, and mail matter of all kinds.

There is a vast army of workers consisting of nearly 20,000 people about one-third to one-fourth of whom are men. Over 500 churches in Greater Boston are represented, and this will extend to a wider area than this, for Providence and other nearby cities will add their contributing workers, coming by special train, and the Dartmouth boys are training a college division.

We must not forget to emphasize the spiritual side of the exposition. This has been made prominent by Mr. Gardner. A daily noon prayer meeting is held at which stewards and other workers are urged to be present as often as possible. I believe that the idea of the Exposition is well expressed by the words of Mr. Guild, an ardent worker for the cause, when he said "The object is not to give a great show, but to show a great work."

ELKS AND ODD FELLOWS.

The funeral of John S. Krocher was held Wednesday afternoon from his late residenece on Revere road, and was largely attended. Quincy lodge of Elks attended in a body, and there was a delegation from Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows, representing the Waterbury, Conn., lodge of which he was a member. The services were conducted by Rev. Richard E. Armstrong of Christ church, following which the burial service of the Elks was read by Exalted Ruler Elmer L. Paine and Chaplain John D. Smith. During this service the Bethoven quartet sang, "Nearer My God to Thee," "Crossing the Bar," and "The Vacant Chair." There was a profusion of beautiful flowers. The body was taken to Waterbury, where it was met by the Elks and Odd Fellow lodges of that place.

BULLETS FOR ALTMAN

Chicago Labor Leader Not Expected to Recover From Wounds

Chicago, March 23.—Vincent Altman, who was arrested several years ago in connection with bomb throwing in Chicago, but was acquitted of the charge, and who is out on bail on charges of shooting a laborer several weeks ago, was shot and probably mortally wounded yesterday afternoon.

Altman was drinking in the Briggs house buffet when his assailant fired the shots. He was taken to a hospital, where it was said he would die. The assailant escaped. Altman has been a labor leader for several years.

Five Women and a Man Are Held In a Boston Court

Boston, March 23.—Eight women and one man were arrested and arraigned in court here, five of the women and the man being held as the result of the story told to the police of the East Dedham street station by Beatrice Green, 16, who lived with relatives.

The arrests, which were made during raids under the direction of Captain Driscoll, are believed to be the first which are to be made in an endeavor to stamp out the so-called "telephone houses."

Taft and Cabinet Satisfied With Mexican Situation

HOPING FOR SPEEDY PEACE

Not Pleased at Limantour's Action In Holding Up United States as Bugaboo In Efforts to Reach Agreement With Rebels—Forces In Texas For Long Stay—Non-Combatants In Northern Mexico Suffer

Washington, March 23.—President Taft and his cabinet met yesterday for the first time in over two weeks. The Mexican situation was discussed briefly. The president and his cabinet advisers are very well satisfied with the situation and matters will remain at a standstill, so far as this government is concerned.

A strong hope is expressed in administration circles that conditions in Mexico will improve speedily. The Washington government is anxious that the two factions in Mexico shall get together.

Intense disappointment is expressed here, however, over the fact that Finance Minister Limantour has seen fit to seek a peace agreement by holding the United States up as a sort of bugaboo, and making statements to the effect that this government is waiting an opportunity to get into Mexico. Such statements are entirely unwarranted and are regarded here as not calculated to bring about good feeling.

There is every reason to believe that the troops will remain in Texas for at least four months. Meantime they will not be idle. The mobilization of the army will be taken advantage of to impart invaluable training to the officers and men of the regular establishment and to many officers of the state militia organizations, who will be sent to Texas from time to time during the maneuvers.

In a way the sending of the troops to Texas will give to the army the same valuable instruction and experience that came to the navy as a result of the cruise of the battleship fleet around the world.

President Taft hopes that the sending of the army to Texas will prove a peace move. He declared to several callers at the White House that he ought to be the last person in the world to be suspected of jingoism—that nothing was further from his mind. Political considerations, the president declared, had not entered into the operations from any possible angle.

Mr. Taft is fully aware that an attack is to be made upon him in congress by some of the Republican insurgents and possibly by some of the Democrats, but he is said to be prepared to defend his course from every point of view.

Rebels Stop Food Supply

El Paso, Tex., March 23.—News from the interior of the "war zone" states that the Mexican insurrectos have surrounded many small towns and have notified the inhabitants that they will allow no provisions to reach them from the surrounding country.

The insurrectos have determined that the supply of provisions shall remain in their own hands, and it is feared that non-combatants will be subjected to still greater hardships by the blockade. Hundreds of refugees are reported to be fleeing toward the borders, many of them attempting to make the journey on foot.

NOT AIMED AT JAPAN

Taft Sets at Rest Jingo Stories In Regard to Mobilization

Washington, March 23.—Responding to a request from President Taft, Baron Uchida, the Japanese ambassador, called at the White House. Mr. Taft sent for the ambassador to say personally that there was absolutely no warrant or excuse for stories that have been printed to the effect that the United States in sending troops to the Mexican border had done so in expectation of a treacherous move by Japan.

The president said the reports were scarcely worth denying, but he desired to set them at rest for all time. The president asked Uchida to communicate these views directly to the Emperor of Japan.

The pupils have entered into them with zest and interest and even in the opening year much has been accomplished. In domestic science the girls are taught how to cook and also how to serve. All who were present at the lunch given in the domestic science room last week in honor of Col. Anderson were agreed that things could not have been done nicer, each course was so well prepared and was served so daintily. Now that the new machinery has arrived the boys who are taking manual training can do much that was impossible before. The circular saw and grinder arrived with the motor and the lathe will be here before long. The boys are going to put their time to good use by making the desks for mechanical drawing at a great saving to the city. At wholesale these desks cost from $30 to $32 apiece. With the boys doing the work the cost of material will be the only expense aside from the extra electricity used in running the motor.

TALK ON CIVIL WAR

Address of Col. Anderson at High School

Seldom has a body of high school pupils been given an opportunity to attend as inspiring a patriotic meeting as that held in High school hall last Thursday noon. The pupils themselves contributed a part by singing with great fervor and earnestness some of the old songs so dear to us all. "The Star Spangled Banner," "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," "Battle Hymn of the Iepublic" and "America."

When Mr. Howlett introduced the speaker, Col Edward Anderson, the pupils rose in a body and applauded long and loud, but the demonstration which followed the address was still greater and gave positive proof that the event was one which had so impressed itself upon the minds of the scholars that it would be many a day before it would be forgotten. The Colonel was a soldier and has a depth of patriotic spirit, he is a scholar and could enrich his address with history and results of much reading, and he is an orator which enabled him to present his plea for patriotism with a forcefulness that must needs call forth a response from his hearers. The address in part follows:

You don't know how it breaks up an old soldier to hear those songs sung this morning as you have sung them. I have heard them sung a great many times and I have heard them sung on the battle field by men who were preparing for battle. I have heard them sung since in a dead way.

The Battle Hymn of the Republic was written here in Boston. One day Mrs. Julia Ward Howe was down in Washington and she met a clergyman of Boston and he asked her what she could do to set some sacred words to the tune. She went to bed one night and as she lay there, the words came to her. It seemed as though God had put the words in her mouth. She got up and wrote them down as they came to her.

One Sunday July4th, I had charge of four different regiments and we sang those words for the first time on the battle field, in a mass of five thousand voices.

And as we sang those words "as he died to make men holy, let us live to make men free" it seemed to us that we could say: "We have died to make men holy, we have died to make men free."

Our war was the result of slavery. People can say what they please about it but that was the truth.

Way back in the early days of Washington, deep thinking men thought slavery would be done away with.

If you have been reading the Declaration of Independence (which every boy and girl here knows) you will realize that one of the statements brought against the King applies to this country, not only in keeping slaves but allowing slave trade.

It was a matter of indifference to the slave traders until some little time after the Revolution.

In 1793 Eli Whitney invented the Cotton Gin. What did that mean? Before the invention they produced one pound a day and it did not seem to be very profitable. With this invention and the improvements that came, three hundred pounds of cotton a day were produced. The cotton trade grew and grew and it became the king of the south. Slavery became a necessity to the southern people.

The slave people elected the president, made up their cabinets, controlled their legislatures, controlled the House of Representatives controlled the President and the people of the north.

Today the whole thing is revolutionized and the north is becoming the richest part of our country.

Stephen A. Dougles of Illinois who brought in the Kansas-Nebraska bill was a northern man. The northern people got Douglas to introduce the bill which was simply that any territory might reside by itself as a free or slave state as it was received into the Union.

The dred Scott decision was raised in Kansas, and this was the beginning of my personal interest in slavery. Col. Higginson said we want to send a lot of men from Boston to Kansas to kill the bill. I was then a young man a little over 21 years. We went out to Kansas to see if we could do anything for the saving of the country. There was no railway and we had to buy our horses and provisions and start in that sort of style. Sunday morning I put on a clean shirt, I mean another shirt and went to look for a church, when we arrived in Missouri. In Iowa, right in the middle of the square I met a tall man, smooth shaven and he said "Who are you where are you from, what are you here for?" I said, we are going down into Kansas to report to Captain John Brown and to try kill the Kansas Nebraska Bill. Then I said who are you? He said, "I am John Brown" I could have got down on my knees before him. That man was doing all that he could to make the people understand what slavery meant. He said this to me, among other things "Young man, the Apostle John tells us that from the side of Jesus Christ there came forth blood and water, and there can never be any greater redemption." This is going to happen before slavery is wiped out. The water will be the tears of those you left at home, the blood, the lives of the soldiers who have gone down fighting for freedom."

Now I doubt if you can have any idea what that Kansas trouble meant. It was the prophecy of freedom. It was the opening of the way to freedom and it was John Brown that brought it about. It went throughout the world and the whole country began to understand it. That man was downed by so many people and yet after all he went through execution almost a Christ, for the redemption of the country by giving his own blood. Kansas was populated only sparsely by a few free states men. Missouri sent down from Clay and Jackson, men to erect a Legislature and a government and to put themselves at the head of the movement which we made. Imagine twenty-five hundred men dashing into a town, wearing only their pantaloons and boots, armed with pistols and revolvers, shouting and yelling. There came four hundred men on horseback, drunk and profane and shooting everybody that appeared and in four hours they had shot down one hundred and eighty men, with no other cause than that they were free statesmen. There was a good deal said about John Brown murdering the people. Well, I know something about that too. Four or five men Dutch Henry who stood six feet four inches tall and Dutch Bill who was mighty in his build and two others, one of them was a member of the legislature and they sent word to his son and to John Brown and his son that on the night after the next they would come down upon them and murder everyone of them.

After we got through with that great siege in Kansas, I came back to Boston. I didn't intend to stay out there anyhow. I just went out there to get into a little fight. I don't know whether you young people feel just as we did in those days, but with all this that was hovering over us we couldn't help having the desire to fight. We knew it had got to come.

John Brown brought out the thought that we had got to fight, and so we wanted to have a part in it. It was a sort of preparation for that great war.

It was my privilege while I was in the west at that time, to be sent to Springfield in Illinois, that was way back in the fifties, and there we met Abraham Lincoln, but it was before we ever dreamed of his being president of the United States. He talked to us about his boyhood days. His father and mother were before the fireplace where they were burning pine knots to read by. He learned how to read and his mother taught him to make letters in the floor with a bit of stick. He told us of thetime when he was 18 that he studied all the books he could get. The first book he had was the Bible, which he said was the richest literature he had. When he was nineteen years old they decided to build a cabin and float it down the river. There he saw slaves sold. I have seen those slaves sold myself. They were placed upon a platform about as long as from here to the door, with a block placed upon it. The slaves are placed on this block and sold at auction. There was a girl, almost white put up for auction. The people came up to her and looked her all over, and looked at her teeth as if she were a horse.

Lincoln said "I hope in the Providence of God that the time will come to hit that institution and when I hit it, I will hit it hard."

The first basketball game in the school championship series between the Sophomores and Seniors will be played Friday afternoon in the school gymnasium. The Seniors will probably win but the under class girls declare that they are going to make them hustle.

Signs of spring are evident during recess periods. A number of girls are getting their arms in shape for the baseball season and not a few show considerable proficiency in throwing the ball.

Although regular training has not been started yet, the girls are talking about the annual athletic meet which takes place in the middle of May. Rachael Hardwick who broke the world's record for girls in the high jump last year will endeavor to recover the laurels which she lost shortly afterwards to a Vassar girl. A number of the first year girls have some little reputation as athletes and each of the other classes has its coterie of athletes. The meet promises to be unusually interesting this year.

Here's Something New

No more ashes to lug. No clumsy pan to spill dust and dirt on the kitchen floor.

The Glenwood Ash Chute

solves the problem. It is located just beneath the grate and connected by a sheet iron pipe straight down through the kitchen floor to ash barrel in cellar. No part is in sight. Not a particle of dust can escape. Just slide the damper once each day and drop the ashes directly into the ash barrel.

The Dust Tight Cover

to barrel is another entirely new Glenwood Idea and is very ingenious. The Ash Chute is sold complete with barrel and all connections, as illustrated, at a moderate price to fit any cabinet style Glenwood. This is only one of the splendid improvements of the Plain Cabinet Glenwood the Range without ornamentation or fancy nickel, "The Mission Style" Glenwood. Every essential refined and improved upon.

Up-To-Date Gas Attachments

This Range can be had with the latest and most improved Elevated or End Gas Range attachments. It has a powerful hot water front or for country use a Large Copper Reservoir on the end opposite fire box. It can be furnished with fire box at either right or left of oven as ordered. NEPONSET BRIDGE COST

City of Quincy to Pay Fifteen Per Cent

At the Neponset bridge hearing on Wednesday the principal argument seemed to be over the apportionment of cost, the petitioners taking it for granted a bill would be reported. But there does not seem to be any great demand for a new bridge just now.

BILL NO. 272.

Under the 1910 bill known as No. 272, the apportionment would be:

Section 7. When said bridge and its approaches are completed, and the full cost thereof ascertained, the following parties shall each contribute and be assessed the following percentage of the amount paid by the commonwealth therefor, including any interest paid on any money borrowed under the provisions of this act, viz.:

City of Boston, fifty per centum thereof.

City of Quincy, fifteen per centum thereof.

County of Norfolk ,ten per centum thereof.

The Old Colony Street Railway Company, operating tracks on said bridge, ten per centum thereof, but not to exceed twenty-five thousand dollars.

The cities and towns constituting the metropolitan park district, fifteen per centum thereof.

The amount due from each of said parties upon certification of the same by the state treasurer shall be paid into the treasury of the commonwealth at such times as the treasurer of the commonwealth shall designate.

BILL NO. 413.

The Curtin bill of 1911 apportions it as follows:

Section 7. When said bridge and its approaches are completed and the full cost thereof ascertained, the following parties shall each contribute and be assessed the following percentage of the amount paid by the commonwealth therefor including any interest paid on any money borrowed under the provsions of this act, viz:—

City of Boston, thirty per centum thereof.

City of Quincy, fifteen per centum thereof.

County of Norfolk, ten per centum thereof.

County of Plymouth, ten per centum thereof.

Any street railway company or companies operating tracks on said bridge, fifteen per centum thereof.

The cities and towns constituting the metropolitan park district, ten centum thereof.

The commonwealth shall contribute and assume ten per centum of said total cost and interest.

The amount due from each of said parties upon certification of the same by the state treasurer shall be paid into the treasury of the commonwealth at such times as the treasurer of the commonwealth shall designate. The cities and towns of said metropolitan park district shall each contribute to the ten per centum to be paid by said district in the same proportions as they now are assessed for any other indebtedness of said metropolitan park district.

The amount due from each of said parties upon certification of the same by the state treasurer shall be paid into the treasury of the commonwealth at such times as the treasurer of the commonwealth shall designate.

The cities and towns of said metropolitan park district shall each contribute ten per centum to be paid by said district in the same proportions as they now are assessed for any other indebtedness of said metropolitan park district.

BRIEFS

Quite a difference in the temperature this morning from what it was yesterday afternoon

The Torpedo boat destroyer Walke which was launched at the Fore River, Nov. 3, will leave the yard Friday morning on her trial trip.

City Treasurer Curtis has awarded $51,000 4 percent water bonds, dated March 1, 1911, maturing $3000 in 1912 to 1928, inclusive, to Curtis & Sanger at 102.061.

Miss Mary Fletcher has resigned her position at the National Granite Bank and will shortly sail for a trip to Europe. Her place has been taken by Miss Evans of Popes Hill.

M. J. L. Kennedy, manager of the Joyce Brothers stores on Granite street has gone to Atlantic City for a few days' vacation. John Joyce, Jr., is filling his place at the stores.

Frank L. Avery of Mill street who it was reported was to go to the Hospital for a serious operation says he does not know how the rumor started for he never felt better in his life and doesn't look a bit like a candidate for the Hospital.

Mrs. Louis Diamond was badly burned at her home 73 Franklin street, Wednesday, by the explosion of gasoline, which she was using for cleaning purposes. Her clothing took fire and burned through to the flesh. Her cries brought her husband who extinguished the blaze with his bare hands.

ANOTHER LAUNCHING.

The steam trawler Crest, a sister ship of the Ripple and Foam, will be launched at the Fore River shipyard, Wednesday, March 29.

AN AGREEMENT.

The striking quarrymen at Rockport have reached an agreement with the manufacturers, and have signed a five year agreement. The paving cutters and stone workers have not as yet reached an agreement but expect to soon.

UNDERWOOD'S REPLY TO TAFT

Tariff Revision to Be Taken Up as Rapidly as Possible

WILL REDUCE WOOLEN DUTIES

Democrats Have Not Been Idle and Have More Valuable Evidence, They Claim, Than Tariff Board Can Furnish—Discoveries In Treasury Department Give Congress Enough to Travel For Practical Purposes

Washington, March 23.—Oscar W. Underwood, chairman of the Democratic ways and means committee, has made his answer to the intimation of President Taft that the congress in the extra session should only pass the Canadian reciprocity bill and then await the tariff board reports before taking up general tariff revision.

The program does not appeal to Underwood, who is determined that the woolen duties shall be reduced forthwith. He believes there is evidence enough at hand to warrant congress in paring down the duties on general principles, and he says that although the committee will welcome any information that the president may send over from the tariff board, he says congress need not wait for it.

"We will not have any difficulty in framing a wool schedule," said Underwood, "even if the tariff board withholds the information now in its possession. There are other departments of the government in which the ways and means committee and the public can find a most illuminating array of facts and figures. We have not been idle, and in addition to the evidence taken by the committee which framed the Payne-Aldrich bill, we have the much more valuable evidence to be found in the treasury department and in the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor.

"At the treasury department we discovered, for instance, that the average ad valorem duty collected on the woolen schedule during last year was 90 percent. At the bureau of statistics we discover the interesting fact that the total average labor cost in the woolen industry during the same period was 25 percent.

It is apparent, therefore, that under the guise of the Republican tariff representing the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, or in other words, under the guise of protecting American workmen, the woolen manufacturer gets a rake-off of 65 percent after the American workman has been taken care of.

With these official figures before us it will not be a difficult matter for the ways and means committee to frame a woolen schedule, and there is every indication that the country is ready for a revision of that schedule at the earliest possible date."

The conservative members of the committee do not favor tacking the woolen schedule on the reciprocity bill, as do the radicals. This is one of the points of difference in the committee.

Not more than a dozen dissatisfied Democrats will be found at the Democratic caucus, April 1, and in the new Democratic house when it begins its work, April 4, is the opinion of Underwood. He said that he did not expect anything short of perfect harmony at the caucus and that those Republicans and a few Democrats who expect a big row to terminate the existence of the new committee-on-committees system will be mistaken.

LOSE IMMUNITY PLEA

Court Refuses to Quash Indictments Against Meat Packers

Chicago, March 23.—Judge Carpenter, in the United States district court, in refusing to quash indictments against ten Chicago meat packers, placed a limit on the freedom from liability granted the packers by the "immunity bath" given by Judge Humphreys in 1906.

He also ruled that the "immunity bath" did not prohibit the facts and evidence on which it was granted from being used as evidence to establish proof of a conspiracy existing at a date after the immunity was given.

Alleged Murderer Slips From Grasp of Would-Be Avenger

New London, March 23.—After a search in which the greater part of Europe and this country was covered, and extending over a period of eight years, for the man who he says killed his uncle in Italy eight years ago, Giuseppe Mascia found his man at the Union station here, only to lose trace of him almost immediately.

Mascia spoke to the man, who ran away, and the police have been unable to find him. The search will be continued.

QUARRYMEN WIN STRIKE

Four Hundred Men Get the Increase They Asked For

Gloucester, Mass., March 23.—The quarrymen's strike, which had been on since March 1, has been declared off. The employing interests have agreed to pay the increase in wages asked for by the men's union, and 400 men returned to work this morning.

Under the terms of settlement it is understood that the quarrymen are to get 23 and 25 cents an hour, as against the old rate of 18 and 22 cents.

ABOLISH RESTRAINT IN INSANE ASYLUMS

Alienist's Proposition Is Endorsed by Clergymen

Boston, March 23.—That death in an electric chair is a fate preferable to life in a Massachusetts insane asylum was the statement made by Representative Quinn of Swampscott at a hearing held before the committee on prisons at the state house on several bills intended to prohibit the use of restraint, which were offered by Dr. L. V. Briggs.

Representatives of the leading religious denominations spoke in support of the legislation petitioned for by the alienist, several clergymen being among the speakers.

The hearing was cut short by the contention that the petition properly belonged before the committee on public charitable institutions. As a result of this point of order having been sustained the whole matter will be threshed out in this committee rather than in the committee on prisons.

REGRET PUBLICITY

Treasury Officials Otherwise Approve the Searching of Women

Washington, March 23.—The public criticism following the search of the baggage and persons of Mrs. Joseph W. Hull and her daughter of Savannah, Ga., on board the Lusitania by customs officials at New York, brought out this official statement from the treasury department:

"This examination disclosed the fact that there had been omitted from their declarations over $600 worth of dutiable merchandise. It has no comment to make upon the searching of the persons by the inspectors except to regret that the facts were made public."

Lunatic Snared and Taken to Asylum After Mother Dies

Chicago, March 23.—George Odette, for thirty years bereft of reason and cared for in a steel cage in the garret of his mother's home near Waukegan until the mother died last week, was snared with ropes yesterday and taken to an insane asylum.

A shock from a galvanic battery at a county fair robbed Odette of his reason and he was sent to an asylum. When Mrs. Odette learned that her son had refused food and was dying of starvation she obtained his release on a promise to guard him.

HARTFORD TAILORS STRIKE

Objected to Discharge of Woman In a Department Store

Hartford, March 23.—All of the tailors employed in the department and cloak stores here to the number of 150 went out on a strike. The strike was the outcome of the discharge of a woman employed by one of the department stores.

The employers refuse to treat with the strikers and say that a fight will be made for open shop conditions.

The Sirolin Sentinel

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

QUINCY, THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1911

Coughs

Coughing is produced by an inflammation and irritation of the membrane lining the respiratory passages.

This irritation is usually provoked by cold, dust or dampness.

It is this irritated membrane to which the tubercle bacillus readily pays its addresses.

As the tubercle bacillus is the cause of consumption (tuberculosis) it is desirable to relieve the irritation at once, or the disease may supervene.

Sirolin accomplishes this perfectly, and should be used whenever there is any cough due to the irritation of the respiratory passages.

If consumption has already developed, and is in its early stages, let the same treatment prevail, as coughing ruptures the delicate lung cells and strains the tissues and the little blood vessels. It is the effort to clear the sponge-like air cells of the lungs of the masses of mucus (phlegm) which settles in them, which causes the violent coughing spells.

After a few days' use of Sirolin the tendency to cough diminishes, and the fearful wear and tear of the pulmonary tissues naturally ceases.

Are You Troubled By Coughing at Night?

Every one who has suffered from a deep-seated cold knows how annoying and exhausting the night coughs are.

Sirolin—a dose taken at bed-time—relieves the tickling and irritation that cause the coughing fits.

Sirolin not only alleviates the coughing, but it dispels the worst cold in a few days. The action is invigorating and tonic in character.

Sirolin

is a specific remedy for all affections of the respiratory tract where coughs and colds are the leading symptoms, and which lead to pulmonary consumption.

It is composed of the true therapeutic agent of creosote, which is so often used for such disorders, but has none of the undesirable effects of that drug on the digestion.

It should be used when there are symptoms of any disease of the respiratory organs—bronchitis, influenza, laryngitis, pharyngitis, catarrh, asthma, whooping cough—and so on up the list to consumption.

The timely use of Sirolin will be a factor in the saving of thousands of lives.

Ask your physician about Sirolin. He knows of its world-wide reputation.

All leading druggists have it.

FIGHT OVER WOMAN AT COUNTRY DANCE

Assailant of Old Man Who Is Dead Is a Fugitive

Burlington, Vt., March 23.—After lingering between life and death for four days, Cyrus Moffat, 60, a farmer, died in the mountain village of Beartown, where he was stricken down in a wild fight at a kitchen dance.

The man accused of the murder is Fred Depluis, 30, employed as a lumberman at one of the camps. He has disappeared and is roaming the mountain somewhere. His three brothers, who are charged with implication, are now under arrest.

The fight, it is reported, was caused by rivalry between a son of Moffat and Depluis over a young woman violinist, who furnished music for the dance.

CANNOT SHOW IN BOSTON

"The Easiest Way" Placed Under the Ban by Order of Mayor

Boston, March 23.—"The Easiest Way," a play being presented at the Hollis Street theatre, was ordered stopped by Mayor Fitzgerald yesterday during the matinee performance, but, after a conference, last night's advertised presentation was its swan song.

The play is one of David Belasco's and has been presented in the larger cities for the last three years. The peremptory order to stop the presentation in Boston was "in the interests of public morals," the mayor stated in his letter, and compliance was the only way.

DROPS INTO MUD PUDDLE

Means of Saving Life of Youth When He Falls From Trapeze

Pittsburg, March 23.—While making an ascension in S. F. Perkins' aerial kites at the automobile exhibition, Paul Berry of Boston, aged 19, who occupied a seat in the trapeze, was hurled to the ground, a fall of fifty feet.

The guy ropes were struck by a freight train, the ropes cut, and the kites demolished. The crowd witnessing the exhibition was horror-stricken, as they expected the boy to be dashed to death.

Instead, Berry fell in a puddle of mud and, while bruised, it saved his life.

PRISONERS CURSE AND SOB

Clash Between Counsel Results In Commotion at Camorrists' Trial

Viterbo, Italy, March 23.—Angry exchanges between opposing counsel at Wednesday's sessions of the trial of the Camorrists provoked a demonstration from the prisoners' cage beyond the control of the court officials that necessitated a suspension of the proceedings.

The accused men alternately cursed in a rage and s obbed hysterically, while their women friends in the audience screamed and fainted, the wife of one of the prisoners being seized with convulsions.

Canadian Flies Over Havana

Havana, March 23.—St. Croix Johnstone, the Canadian aviator, made the first aeroplane flight over Havana. He circled over the city about half an hour.

DANGER IN DELAY

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous for Quincy People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which has cured people right here in Quincy.

P. J. Garrity, 367 Granite St., Quincy, Mass., says: "Some time ago I suffered so severely from kidney disease that I could hardly get about. I was restless at night and could not find any position that was comfortable. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and contained a heavy sediment. I was rapidly growing worse and was at a loss to know what to do, as the many remedies I tried failed to help me. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. After I had taken the contents of four boxes, I was in good health. I highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other kidney sufferers."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

McVickar defies Senator Blount to nominate Evan. Patricia and her geologist father arrive at the Sagebrush capital.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics, but finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Evan has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's mixing in politics. His father pulls wires unknown to him to have him invited to speak in a distant mining town. Hathaway, who has been trying to do business with the road and with Senator Blount, is to have a talk with Mrs. Blount.

Hathaway wants a rebate from the road in consideration of political favors. He is referred to Evan and is advised by Mrs. Blount to put Professor Anners' name on his list of stockholders.

Evan Blount walked a half dozen blocks beyond the Inter-Mountain hotel before he had cooled down sufficiently to determine what to do next. As it chanced, the cooling down moment found him at the entrance of the public garage patronized by his father.

"I WON'T HAVE MY COMMUNICATIONS TAMPERED WITH."

Acting upon the impulse of the moment, he went in and asked if any of Senator Blount's cars were in the city. The garage manager replied that the big roadster was in, and Blount's decision was taken upon the spur of the moment.

A few minutes later he was behind the steering wheel of the fast machine, picking his way out of town.

Blount reached the entrance to the cottonwood shaded avenue at Wartrace just before the dinner hour, and he was so far recovered from the attack of righteous indignation that he was able to meet his father and the others with a fair degree of equanimity.

In the back part of his mind, however, he held the fighting ultimatum in suspense.

At the dinner table the professor held forth dictatorially upon matters pertaining solely to the pliocene age and never once suffered the table conversation to come within several millions of years of the twentieth century, and at the dispersal—only there was no dispersal—it was his father who led the way to the drawing room and persuaded Patricia to go to the piano.

The young man with the fighting determination in the back part of his brain was willing enough to listen to Grieg and Brahms as interpreted by Patricia, but the greater matter was still outweighing the lesser. Later, when Miss Anners had played herself out, the talk went back to the dinosaurs and the pterodactyls, and when Evan Blount finally went away to smoke he did it alone.

The Wartrace den was an annex to the dining room, and through the looped back portieres he could hear the animated hum of the prehistoric conversation, in which Patricia had now joined, as a loyal daughter should.

Hoping against hope that the professor would some time go to bed and that his father would come to the den for his bedtime whiff at the long stemmed pipe, Blount smoked and waited. When his patience was finally rewarded it was not the honorable senator who drew the portieres aside and entered the cozy smoking room. It was Patricia, and she was alone.

"I thought perhaps I should find you here," she said calmly, taking the easy chair at the opposite corner of the hearth. "Did we bore you to extinction?"

"Not quite," he laughed. "But since I hadn't got myself born 6,000,000 years ago I can't somehow seem to galvanize a very active interest in the dead and buried periods."

"Nor I," she confessed frankly, "though for papa's sake I do try to. But for us who are living today there are so many problems of really vital importance, problems that the pterodactyls never knew anything about."

"I know," said the young man, half absently. "I am up against one of them right now, and I don't know how to meet it."

"Will it bear telling?" she asked. And he hoped that the sympathy in her tone was personal rather than conventional.

"It will not only bear telling; it demands to be told to some one whose sense of right and wrong has not been drawn and quartered and flayed alive until it has no longer life or breath left with which to protest."

Thereupon he told her all that had happened to him since the evening he had left the sleeping car at Aretas, concluding almost shamefacedly with the story of the lumber magnate's attempt at corruption, of which he suppressed nothing but the fact that the professor's name appeared in Mr. Hathaway's list of shareholders.

When he made an end her eyes were shining, either with quickened sympathy or indignation—he could not determine which.

"What did you do?" she asked, referring to the incident of the afternoon.

"I didn't do half enough," he fumed. "I am afraid I let Hathaway get away without my telling him plainly enough what a hopelessly irreclaimable scoundrel he is. I made a mistake in not throwing him out bodily."

"You made your greatest mistake in the very beginning, Evan," she said decisively. "You should have made a confidant of your father."

"I did try to at first," he protested. "But the game is everything, and everybody plays it—my father, his wife, the railroad officials and the politicians. Surely you wouldn't say that I should have let my father put me on the state ticket as a candidate?"

"Certainly not," was the quick reply, "not unless you were convinced of the purity of his motive. But if you have been telling me the truth and all the truth it would seem that you didn't stop to inquire what that motive might be."

"What was the use of inquiring? He is the boss of the machine. He would have used the machine to put me into office as attorney general. In other words, I should have owed my election not to the will of the people, but the will of one man, and that man my nearest kinsman. Under such circumstances would it have been possible for me to administer the office without fear or favor?"

"I don't know why not," she returned. "Your 'nearest kinsman,' as you call him, would have been the last man to interfere. Wasn't that the very reason he gave for wanting to put you on the ticket?"

"I know," said Blount, whose mind was beginning to cloud again. "But there are so many other mysteries. I am not sure at this blessed moment that my father hasn't conspired with Mr. McVickar to put me just where I am."

Her smile was gently reproachful. "It is my poor opinion, Evan, that you don't half appreciate your father," she said. "Worse than that, you don't know him. But that is beside the present mark, at all events. What are you going to do?"

"I have already done it. I have wired my resignation to Mr. McVickar, and he will doubtless accept it."

She was looking him fairly in the eyes. "That is the second unwise thing you have done, Evan, you are sadly in need of a balance wheel."

"I knew that a good while ago," he rejoined. "I applied for one, and it was refused when you said 'No.'"

She blushed very prettily. "I can help you now," she said, half hesitatingly, "if only you won't try to drag me over into the field of sentiment. It was just a bit of boyish rage—your sending that telegram to Mr. McVickar. Can't you recall it?"

"Not now; no."

"Then you must do the next best thing—tell him you have reconsidered."

"But I can't strike hands with the corruption that is going on all around me," he objected indignantly.

"Of course you can't, and you mustn't. But the true reformer is not made out of the man who drops things and runs away. You must stay in and fight—fight harder than you ever have before, Evan, if not for the sake of the larger right, then for your own sake. Can't you see the wide door that is open before you?"

"I can see and hear and feel when the door is slammed in my face," he qualified. "How can I go on preaching the gospel of cleanliness and fair dealing when I know that all this corruption and trickery are going on behind my back? What will the people of this state say to me and about me when the corruption is exposed?"

"Ah," she said, "that is just where you begin to grow one sided. You must go on preaching the gospel, but that is only half of your duty. The other half is to try to make the thing itself agree with the gospel. I fully and firmly believe that you lost your best helper when you refused to join hands with your father. But that is over and done, and now you must make the best of the opportunities you have chosen."

"Patricia, you are an inspiration. If I could only have you beside me to give me my battle word I shouldn't mind the odds against me."

"Now you are tempting me," she said slowly, "and it isn't fair. You know my weakness and passion to help. You mustn't tempt me, Evan."

What he would have said, with what passionate pleadings he would have pressed the advantage gained by his appeal for the larger help, she was not to know, for at that moment the portieres were drawn aside, and the small house mistress appeared in the doorway of the smoking den.

"You two!" she scolded, with light hearted austerity, and then to Evan: "Don't you know that we keep country hours here at Wartrace? The professor will be up and calling for the car at 6 o'clock, and it's past midnight. Shame on you! Run away and get your beauty sleep, both of you!"

(To be Continued.)

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

TEXAS IS SENT TO THE BOTTOM

Cat Lives Through Bombardment of Old Battleship

WONDERFUL SHOTS ARE MADE

Frightful Havoc Wrought by New Shells, Although Fired From Guns Not Considered Up to Standard—Holes Clear Through Hull From One Side to the Other—Dummy Sailors In Fighting Top Unscathed

Fort Monroe, Va., March 23.—Though the heavy shells from the guns of the New Hampshire crippled and pounded the old battleship Texas, renamed the San Marcos, into a tangled mass of junk, one passenger aboard her lived through the storm.

When the observation party boarded the wreck, a cat walked out through a jagged hole in the forward conning tower unhurt by the tons of steel that had been showered on the ship.

Wednesday's shooting saw the same remarkable precision that marked the shooting Tuesday by the New Hampshire's gunners which resulted in the sinking of the ship.

During the night tugs worked on the ruins of the vessel. Collision mats covered many gaping holes and after much hauling and pulling the tugs succeeded in sending her around into the mud on which the keel was resting, so as to present a broadside as a target. The range yesterday, like that during Tuesday, averaged six miles.

Ordnance officers avoided advancing any opinions, but there was apparently general surprise at both the remarkable gunnery of the New Hampshire's men and the frightful havoc wrought by the new shells. The New Hampshire was selected for the test because her guns, which are not considered up to the standard, are to be replaced.

These are some of the things that Secretary Meyer saw when he boarded the San Marcos between volleys:

The dummies representing sailors in the fighting top of the ship unscathed, notwithstanding the great number of volleys fired at the ship. This was a tribute to the excellence of the gunners' work, for they were ordered to confine their fire to the hull and turrets.

A raging fire inside the ship, caused by the explosive shells which penetrated her sides, and made it impossible for the observers to go below the main deck to ascertain the damage. A shell somewhat broken inside of the conning tower, whose nine-inch steel wall it had pierced on one side. This was not an explosive shell.

A number of holes clear through the hull from one side to the other, the greatest damage being done on the further side of the ship. None of these holes, however, were through the eleven-inch armor belt.

No effort will be made to raise the San Marcos. It would cost several hundred thousand dollars to float the ship and restore her to her original condition and she is not worth it.

Woman Killed by Auto

Boston, March 23.—Mrs. Cynthia H. Belcher, aged 82, was killed by an automobile last night while crossing Massachusetts avenue. Frederick T. Morse, aged 37, chauffeur, employed by Henry Upham of Malden, was taken in charge by the police.

Famine Prices For Lobsters

Rockland, Me., March 23.—A lobster famine is responsible for the record-breaking price of 55 cents a pound paid for lobsters shipped from this city to New York.

DUTY OF A FATHER

Should Wash and Dress Infant When His Wife Is Busy

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 23.—It is the duty of a father to wash and dress his little baby if his wife is too much occupied with other necessary household duties to attend to the youngster, declared Alderman Donohue of this city in laying down the law to Arthur Gouldson.

The fact that Gouldson was occasionally required to wash the infant when his wife was busy was one of the reasons why he left his wife and child and went to live with his mother.

He was in court because his mother had been arrested, charged with assaulting his wife when she demanded that he return home.

Donohue did not mince words in explaining his duties to Gouldson and advised him to go home to his wife.

SOME ARE REJECTED

Negroes From Southland Want to Settle In Manitoba

Winnipeg, Man., March 23.—A party of 170 negroes with seven carloads of goods from the southern states arrived at Emerson yesterday afternoon and passed an examination as to their fitness for becoming residents of Canada. The proceedings were closely watched by United States officials.

Those in the party appeared to be in good physical condition except the men in charge of the cars of household goods. These were rejected. The men of the party declared that unless all were passed the entire party would return to the United States.

WOULD ENCOURAGE VISITS OF STORK

Bill Asking Illinois to Pay $100 For Each New Baby

Springfield, Ills., March 23.—Prevention of race suicide, the encouragement of increase in population and the taxation of bachelors are the features of two bills fathered in the senate by Senator Beall, otherwise known as the "stork mayor of Alton."

The first, or anti-race suicide bill, provides for the payment of $100 to the mother of each child born within two years after her marriage, and for each additional child born every two years.

The premium on twins is fixed at $200 and on triplets $300.

The other bill places a tax of $10 a year on bachelors over 35 years of age, the amount to be set aside for the payment of premiums to mothers.

TO BRING BACK DAVIE

Boston Police Inspectors Have Arrived In Rio Janeiro

Boston, March 23.—Deputy Superintendent of Police Watts received a cable message from Inspectors Burt and Pelton announcing their arrival in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, where they went to bring back Robert E. Davie, the broker accused here of stealing his customers' money.

Davie will be arraigned at once in Rio in the extradition proceedings, and the inspectors will start back with their prisoner, as the court action is formal and Davie is willing to return for trial. In case the young fugitive fought extradition the Brazilian government would surrender him, as Secretary of State Knox came to an agreement with that government before the inspectors sailed.

AGGREGATING $500,000

Broker Committed Forgery In Connection With Customs Frauds

New York, March 23.—Alexander Hollander, a member of the firm of Alexander Hollander & Co., customs brokers, pleaded guilty in the United States circuit court to a charge of forgery in connection with customs frauds aggregating $500,000.

He was arrested in Naples, brought back to this city and indicted by a federal grand jury. Judge Martin announced that he would impose sentence later.

WHOLESALE EXECUTIONS

Paraguay Adopts Drastic Methods to Check the Revolution

Buenos Ayres, March 23.—The revolution in Paraguay has been effectively put down, according to advices received from Asuncion.

Detachments of rebel prisoners are being executed daily. Among those shot by federal soldiers was Dr. Riquelme, chief of the revolutionists. There are 100 wounded federal soldiers in the military hospital here.

Serious Rioting In Wales

Cardiff, March 23.—Rioting broke out between striking coal miners and strike-breakers in the Clydach Vale coal fields, and many were wounded. The pit head structures were fired by the strikers.

Priest Drops Dead

Dalton, Mass., March 23.—Rev. Daniel F. Cronin, pastor of St. Agnes' Roman Catholic church, dropped dead of heart disease at the parsonage here last night, aged 63 years.

New Cells Taking Place of Man's Stomach Which Was Removed

Philadelphia, March 23.—An unprecedented reproduction of gastric or epithelial cells in the upper part of the small intestine has been discovered by Dr. Swayne of the staff of the American stomach hospital, in an X-ray examination of B. J. Sykes of Canada, the man whose stomach was removed a year ago, and who paid a visit to his stomach the other day in the hospital.

The epithelial cells are those which ordinarily grow in the walls of the stomach and furnish the gastric juices which digest food. All that remains of Sykes' stomach is a tube which was attached by the doctors to the pylorus, or connecting link between the stomach and the intestines.

FOR BUST OF JOHNSON

Sculptor Says He Is Unable to Collect Bill From Pugilist

New York, March 23.—Jack Johnson of Reno fame is again a defendant in an action at law. This time he is asked to come across with a mere $1000 and remove from the rooms of Sculptor Cartaino Sciarrino a bust of himself which the sculptor passed many trying days to fashion into a likeness of the conqueror of Jeffries.

"He said he would pay tomorrow, but when tomorrow came he said 'tomorrow,' and then when tomorrow came he did not come, for he had gone away," sorrowfully says the sculptor.

BIG FOUR ROUTE FOR BOULEVARD

To Enter Quincy Over Present Neponset Bridge

Mayor Shea and a committee of the Board of Trade were at the State House today at a hearing given by the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs on the proposed Old Colony boulevard from Columbia road at Calf Pasture to Quincy.

The "Big Four" commission which recommended the route to the present Neponset avenue bridge was not represented, but Mr. Las Casas of the Metropolitan Park Commission explained it.

In a hearing at the same hour on the Somerville boulevard, City Solicitor Babson of Boston said the Old Colony Boulevard was more urgent.

President E. R. Stone of the Board of Trade told of the action of the board, and the appointment of a committee.

Senator Murray of Dorchester spoke in favor and introduced Mr. Cummings and other Dorchester men who favored.

Frank F. Prescott of the Board of Trade committee favored a relocation of the boulevard between Popes Hill and Quincy, crossing the river by a new bridge to the east of the railroad. Unless Quincy had a new avenue to Boston it should not be assessed.

Others from Quincy to speak were T. L. Williams, W. H. Teasdale and A. W. Stetson. They preferred a location to the east of the railroad but thought the layout as reported very good.

Mr. Riley, Mr. Oakman and others of Neponset spoke in favor.

There was no opposition and the hearing closed.

ANNUAL MEETING

paid members had signed the constitution.

The nominating committee appointed by the chair consisted of three men: Eugene R. Stone, C. W. Newcomb and J. W. Hendrie.

The report of the committee was as follows: For moderator, W. E. Lee; auditor, Charles H. Sherburne, prudential committee, W. E. Lee, H. E. Bonney, R. H. Newcomb.

The following were chosen on the Music committee: Harold W. Newcomb, W. F. Perry, John W. Hendrie, Mrs. C. P. Marshall, T. B. Pollard, chorister.

The Budget for the ensuing year called for a sum of $1,640. The only differences from last years were the raising of the janitor's salary to $144 and the organist's salary to $90.

Mrs. P. H. Holman reported that the fund for the new piano was increasing rapidly. A recent contribution by the Priscillas had helped very materially.

Considerable discussion concerning the pastor's salary followed but it was not deemed expedient to raise it this year. Votes of thanks were extended to the Ladies' Aid society, to T. B. Pollard for work in church and choir and to the pastor for his splendid work done during the year.

FUNERAL OF E. H. DOBLE

Eulogy Offered by the Rev. Carl H. Raupach

The funeral services for Enoch H. Doble, who died at his home 52 Cross street Sunday morning from pneumonia, were held at his late home Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 P. M. Rev. Carl H. Raupach pastor of the Hall Place M. E. church of which the deceased has been a trustee for a number of years, officiated.

He spoke of the fact that human experience is after all but a sequence of changes; today we live in the midst of the activities of life, tomorrow finds us in the presence of the silence of death. It is both natural and legitimate to cling to life. This is God's world. Life is a gift from His bountiful hand. We look upon life that now is as of highest value because of the opportunities it affords for building character, serving God and helping our fellow men. It is also natural and honest to cling to life long for the multiplying of days and years means the multiplying of opportunities for deeper thoughtfulness and extended preparation for better things. He then said that the danger is in our presuming on old age as a time of extended opportunities and hence the earnest words of the preacher, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth."

He offered a short eulogy in well chosen words and spoke of him as having lived a long and active life, of his refusal to accept public office yet his offering freely of his peculiar wisdom and sound judgment and fatherly council to those who did hold places of responsibility, hence being ever an important factor in the best interests of the community. He also spoke of him as being a man of highest ideals for the community life and a man of strong character and a man of thought also of the attitude he had always taken toward the work of the church and of the years he has been a trustee.

The Temple quartet of Boston sang "We shall meet," "Lead Kindly Light," and "Fathers' House."

The funeral was largely attended. The flowers were many and beautiful. Interment was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

CIVIL WAR STORY

The list of the soldiers that took part in the war made in the beginning of 1910, is as follows:

2,778,304 enlistments in our northern army.
2,159,728—21 years of age.
1,151,438 under 18 years of age.
844,891 under 17 years of age.
231,051 under 16 years of age.
104,987 under 15 years of age.
1,523 under 14 years of age.
300 under 13 years of age.
225 under 12 years of age.
38 under 11 years of age.
25 under 10 years of age.
12 drummer boys.
Only 618,511 were over 22.
Only 46,626 were over 25.
Only 16,971 were over 44.

It was an army of boys. There was a boy came to my headquarters one day and wanted to enlist in my regiment in the Southern Indiana Cavalry. I said "My boy you are too young, are you over 18?"

"Yes sir, I am."

An officer came in and said "what are you doing robbing the cradles? You better go home and have your mother feed you with milk, spank you and put you to bed."

I said to him no my boy you can't get in if you want to. You are not old enough.

The head officer asked him if he was eighteen, put a few other questions to him and made him swear to them. After he went out I asked the boy how old he was and why he said he was over eighteen. He showed me his foot and on the bottom of it he had the figure 18. After one of my heavy fights in Alabama, the bugler had been sounding the call for half a day and all at once I found there was a false note in his call. He was a perfect bugler. I said "are you sic?"

"Don't think I am sick." "What is the trouble?" I found shot through the foot, and had been sounding the bugle for half an hour. His foot was all blood.

That flag, do you realize what it means. Some people says it is just a handsome piece of bunting.

One thing that makes me shake is to go into Boston State House and see the old war flags hung up with signs all about telling men to remove their hats in the presence of the flags.

In closing my address I want to leave with you the words of that beautiful song, "The Star Spangled Banner."

"Oh! thus be it ever when freemen shall stand
Between their loved home and the war's desolation.
Blest with vict'ry and peace may the heav'n rescued land.
Praise the Power that hath made and preserved us a nation.
Then conquer we must when our cause it is just
And this be our motto. In God is our Trust.
And the star spangled banner in triumph shall wave.
While the land of the free is the home of the brave."

BOXING MANAGER ARRESTED.

Michael T. Mullen of Hyde Park was in the district court at Dedham on Wednesday says the Globe, charged with a violation of the boxing law, as manager of the boxing bouts of the Hyde Park A. C. Chief of police Grant appeared for the prosecution and Daniel C. Bread for the defendant. The court sat until well into the afternoon and then the case was continued until tomorrow morning.

The government testimony was that onlookers at the bouts, were drawn from the public in general, but the defence urged that only members of the club or guests were present.

The witnesses for the government were Chief Grant, Lieut Edward Welsh, Michael Cashman, Joseph Garside, James G. Bolles, Chief of police Lavers and Patrolman Radell of Norwood. Those for the defence included Edward S. Swendermann and M. T. Mullen.

The Norwood officers introduced fliers found in Norwood tacked to bulletins advertising the bouts. The others who had been members of Hyde Park A. C. testified to purchasing tickets.

Swendermann is the clerk of the club and explained the method of handling the admissions.

In court today Mullen was found guilty of promoting a public sparring or boxing exhibition in Hyde Park Dec. 19, Jan. 30, Feb. 22 and March 13, and fined $50 on each count or $200 in all. He appealed and was held in $800.

Judge Grover said, in summing up the case, that a large number of the club's 1,555 members were not members; he held that the exhibitions were public, and said that in his opinion the club was only formed to evade the law and that no dues had been collected.

Mullen intends to carry the case to the supreme court, if necessary, to make a test case of it. It has aroused deep interest in boxing circles throughout the state ,as the decision may affect several boxing clubs.

BROKE ARM IN PLAY.

Alexander Gay the little son of E. G. Gay, the Y. M. C. A. secretary, broke his arm Wednesday afternoon while playing with his automobile cart. The little fellow did not realize what he had done and did not notice that anything was wrong until he tried to lift his arm. He pushed the cart up to the door with the other arm and went in to tell his mother how funny the broken one felt. The doctor was summoned and upon his examination it was discovered that the break was a double one.

MRS. MARY WARD GROSS.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Ward Gross who died while on a visit to her sister Mrs. E. A. Snow of East Elm avenue, was held from the home of the latter on Wednesday afternoon. The services were conducted by Rev. Carl G. Horst pastor of the Wollaston Unitarian church. Several numbers were rendered by the Westland quartet among them "In the sweet bye and bye" which was a favorite of the deceased. The remains were taken to Brockton for burial. Mrs. Gross is survived by a half brother, two sisters and a son in Auburn, Maine.

COMMON VICTUALLERS.

Attention of persons holding common victuallers licenses in the city is called to the amendment to the City Ordinances relating to the fee for the same which is advertised today. Up to last years the law did not provide any fee for this class of licenses. The legislature of 1910 however passed an amendment to the law which provided that a fee not exceeding five dollars may be charged for the license. The City Council took advantage of this law and passed an ordinance relating to the same which fixes the fee at $5 for such a license.

Last year the City Council granted over one hundred of these licenses and if the same number is granted this year it means a revenue of $500.

WASHINGTON LETTER,

Washington, Mar. 17,1911.

There is much interest in diplomatic and political circles in Washington concerning a possible peace treaty between the United States and Great Britain, a treaty which will have the potential effect of an international alliance, although it will not be known by that name. President Taft in a recent speech on the subject of peace, said that he thought all questions, even including questions of honor, might be left to an international arbitration court, and Earl Gray, minister of foreign affairs for Great Britain, in a recent speech referred to President Taft's speech and spoke earnestly in favor of a peace treaty between the two great English-speaking nations. Those who have kept abreast with current history will remember that there have been two recent efforts to secure a ratification of peace treaties between Great Britain and this country, but inasmuch as the final ratification must depend upon th e Senate, these treaties struck snags in that body. Some of these snags were removed on the 4th of March last, and it is believed now that the treaty will meet the approval of the Senate and that Secretary Knox and Ambassador Bryce are at work in preparation of an agreement to be submitted to Congress, though perhaps not earlier than the regular session which will assemble next December. There will doubtless be more or less opposition in the Senate to friendly proposals between this and the mother country, but, as remarked, some of the snags have been removed. Senator Root of New York, who is Chairman of the Carnegie Peace Foundation for which ten millions of dollars were recently donated by Mr. Carnegie, will doubtless do everything in his power in the Senate to promote this peace entente. He was Secretary of State during the second Roosevelt administration, and he is closely in touch with pacific and philanthropic endeavor. Mr. Carnegie has said that if two great nations like this country and England could reach an agreement to submit all questions, even those involving honor, to an arbitration court, it would not be long before the other powerful nations would fall into line.

As might be expected, the first kick against efforts at peace, comes from the irrepressible Irish section. John Dillon, an Irish member in Parliament, says the peace proposals make no provision for small nationalities struggling against injustice or seeking freedom, and he insisted that peace proposals were but combinations of mighty empires for the purpose of coercing others who would not submit to arbitration. The Irish member is unhappy at anything that proposes to stop a row, big or little. The interference of the United States in Cuba for the promotion of peace, or the probable interference in Mexico for the same purpose, the pacification of the Soudan by Great Britain or Great Britain's armed interference in India for the suppression of centuries of strife between the petty principalities of that country are, by Mr. Dillon's interpretation, coercion. Any interference with mobocracy or anarchy is according to this Irishman, an interference with the rights of men.

Congress will reassemble in two weeks, and there is of course much interest and speculation with reference to what it will do. It is assumed that the Canadian reciprocity treaty will be approved by the Senate and there is expectation that some of the important tariff schedules will be lowered, or that an effort will at least be made to lower them. It is deplorable that politics must enter so largely into questions that should be purely economical and that both parties have heart and eyes askance on the presidency in every question that comes up for legislation. There is much speculation with reference to political divisions and combinations of insurgents and stand-patters, progressive and retrogressive Democrats. The sensational retirement of Senator Bailey of Texas on the last day of the last session and his precipitate jump back into the Senate it is thought has considerably weakened such influence as he may have had with the Democratic minority. He was one of the "snags" that did not go on the 4th of March.

WILL CHECK UNWISE ASSESSMENTS

Powers of a Metropolitan Council Explained by Henry L. Kincaide

Metropolitan District Groaning Under a Big Debt

In speaking of the Real Boston movement, Henry L. Kincaide of this city is quoted as saying that the only apparent opposition to the proposed Metropolitan council comes from those who confuse the bill with annexation those who do not fully understand the measure and a few politicians who have selfish motives.

The proposed bill provides for an advisory council composed of the Mayors and chairman of Selectmen from the 40 cities and towns in the Metropolitan district. This body can make no appropriations, save incidental clerk hire, has nothing whatever to do with the local government of the cities and towns they represent, which government continues identically as at the present time.

The sole power of this Metropolitan Council is to consider problems and expenditures proposed for the district—and if ever there was need of concerted action and representation to check unwise Metropolitan assessments, that time is now.

A little incident occurred a few weeks ago. The City of Newton presented a bill for additional park reservations which would undoubtedly call for an appropriation of a half million dollars, as usual to be charged against the various cities and towns in the Metropolitan district. At the hearing it is reported that not one person appeared in opposition. With a Metropolitan Council things would be different.

The Big Four Commission in their recent report recommend an artificial island in the Charles river to beautify the appearance. Recommendations for appropriations of this sort for improvements ,etc., will be continually presented to the Legislature for action. The cost of course to be apportioned among the various cities and towns in the district.

Is it any wonder we are groaning under debt—which today in our Metropolitan district alone is greater than the entire State debt of New York.

What happens when these matters are brought before the House of Representatives for action. The representative, who desires to secure an appropriation for his district, interviews the various members of the House to secure their vote for his pet measure. The representatives from the Berkshire Hills and other parts of the State will agree to vote for any measure which has apparent merit, providing that some measure of theirs will receive the support of the solicitor. Thus votes are traded and men not in the Metropolitan district vote for measures that assess on us tremendous sums. Who pays the bills? With a metropolitan council, to consider these matters and recommend to the Legislature what is best for the district, we will have more equitable expenditures, a better understanding between our neighbors and Quincy's voice will then be heard.

DEGREE TEAM GO TO BOSTON

And Exemplify Encampment Degree in Approved Style

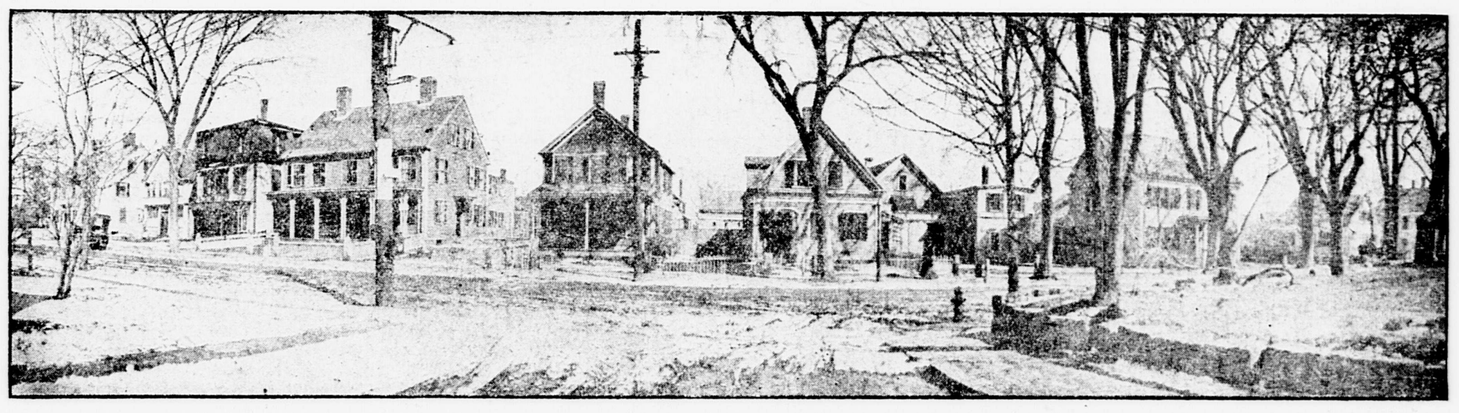

The degree staff of Manet encampment, I. O. O. F., of this city, went to South Boston on Thursday evening, and were the guests of Mt. Washington encampment. The visit had been heralded all over the Metropolitan district and many of the cities and towns were represented, there being a gathering of over 400 encampment Odd Fellows. They had heard of the fame of the Manet degree team, and they were not disappointed.

At 6.30 the degree team was entertained at a banquet by the home encampment, and at 8 o'clock Past Chief Frank W. Flowers and his staff were ready to put on the degree as good as it was ever worked in Massachusetts. Thats what the members of the other encampments said. To use the homely expression of one brother, you have got the other teams "scun a mile." It was a revelation to many who had never seen the Quincy team work.

NO CONGESTION FROM TROLLEY EXPRESS SERVICE

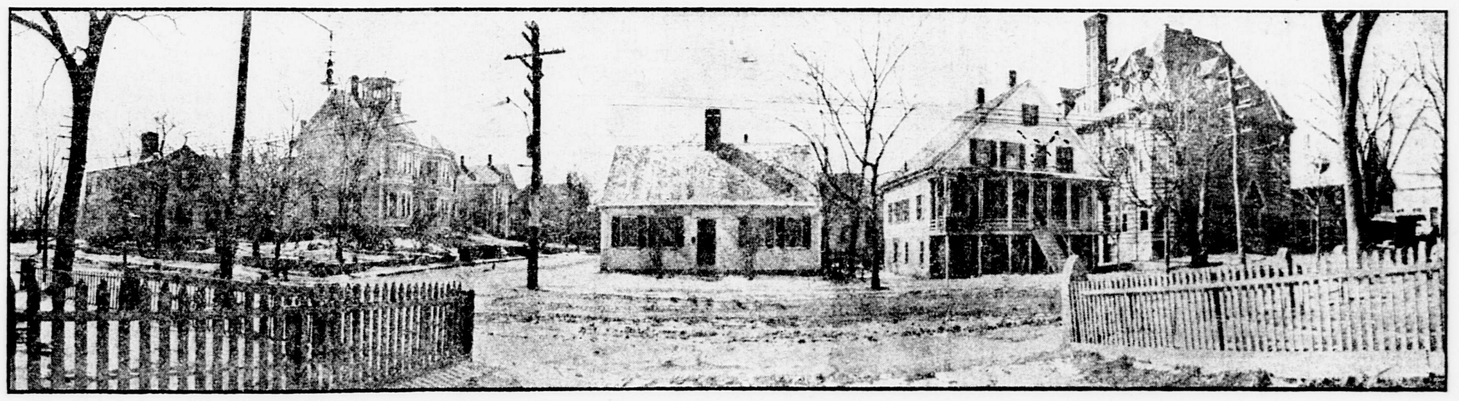

Old Colony Street Railway Company Denies Likelihood of Such a Condition Arising from Location of New Station on Tisdale Property—Building to be of Concrete Construction with Front of Colonial Design and Will be a Distinct Addition to the Locality, Especially in View of the Probable Future Expansion of the Business Center Along Washington Street

Panoramic View of North Side of Washington Street, Looking from Foster Street, Showing Tisdale Property as it Now Appears at Right of Centre of the Picture

Panoramic View of South Side of Washington Street, Opposite the Section Shown in Above Photographs

The trolley express service proposed to be established in this city by the Old Colony Street Railway Company will be a distinct benefit to Quincy.

It has proven so in every community where it has been operated and there is no sane reason why there should be a reversal of these conditions in Quincy.

In order that the greatest possible benefit may be derived from the service, it is essential that the company have a properly located receiving and distributing station with reference to the center of business and population.

Officials of the company have thoroughly investigated several sites for such a point. In the light of their experience and knowledge of the facilities required, they decided upon the old Tisdale property on Washington street as the best site available. The engineers found it was properly adapted to the purpose of an express station and that such cars as were needed could be safely operated at this point.

Misapprehension undoubtedly exists as to the effect on surrounding property of the location of the building upon this site. We believe it to be due to a large extent to a lack of knowledge of the character of the proposed building and the general operation of the service.

The property in question has a frontage of about 100 feet and a depth of about 165 feet. There is located upon it an old cottage house, which has been vacant for some time and delapidated livery stable buildings. Between this property and the Public Library are five buildings, several bearing "To Let" signs. On the opposite side of the street and east from this location to the canal no one can claim the buildings are of such an artistic character as to lend tone to the aesthetic conditions.

The argument has been made that if a change should be made in the property under consideration, it should be made to contribute something in the way of civic beauty. This demand the company is ready to meet in its proposed building. Plans call for the erection of a concrete building, simple in design, with a front Colonial in its outlines, placed back from the street about 15 feet. The building in its outward appearance will be fully in keeping with such buildings as the Post Office and will when finished add greatly to the appearance of the locality.

It is believed to be true by those who have the city's best interests at heart and who have a thorough knowledge of its conditions, that with the rapid growth due to come to the city, the natural expansion of the business centre will be along the line of Washington street. The present location of the Post Office will help this tendency. It is fair to assume that when the present old buildings are torn down, as they undoubtedly will be in a short time, their sites will not be chosen for new and handsome residences, but for business blocks with offices and stores. In this case the proposed trolley express building will be in full accord with and will set a high standard for other buildings along the road of progress toward a more attractive civic centre.

The building is to be 40 feet wide and 80 feet deep. This will allow 20 feet on the west side

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It is almost time for Champ Clark to annex Mexico.

In the Lorimer case the senate committed itself to unpopular election of a senator.

Just try to imagine how it would have shocked Adam had Eve worn one of those scar'em skirts.

The Democratic program of splitting the Republican party wide open smacks of a work of supererogation.

The Census Bureau tells us that last year 89,500,000 animals were slaughtered for food. What proportion is still in cold storage?

President Taft has just scored one of the greatest triumphs in the fine art of statesmanship that has been recorded in 40 years, namely the affirmation of the tax, on the net income of corporations. This law was sustained by the Supreme Court last week and brings in twenty-seven millions of revenue per annum—all out of the rich. The able argument in support of the law by Taft's Attorney General, had much to do in securing the victory.

That is good news for youngsters that they are to have a good big playground H. M. Faxon giving the use of his land on Coddington street for that purpose. The land is to the west of the street and west of Valley street. The location is retired and therefore no matter how much the boys exercise their lungs there will be none to object.

A playground in a thickly settled residential section can hardly be anything but a nuisance. Although the children may enjoy themselves it is far from being a pleasure to occupants of nearby dwellings. It is good day to boys and a quiet hour for the elderly. Many residents of Foster and Maple streets were sufferers from the one back of the Y. M. C. A. last season. The promoters were earnest in doing a good work and it was a good work but its accomplishment caused discomfort to many. Houses cannot be picked up at will but playgrounds can be so located as not to be a nuisance.

We believe in playgrounds and hope some good locations are going to be reserved in our growing city for the children.

It is surprising the number of people who do not understand just what a co-operative bank means. It is a simple proposition and is well illustrated by an exchange as follows:

Earh share is worth $1. A shareholder on the purchase of a share must pay a dollar per month on each share that he owns for a period of about 12 years when it matures. At maturity a share is worth $200. For instance, suppose it takes exactly 12 years to mature, that is 144 months. You actually pay into the bank $1 a month on each share you own for 144 months (12 years) and the interest which has accrued is added to the $144 you have paid in and brings the value of each share to $200.

If you borrow money to build or buy a place you pay one dollar on each share and the interest for the loan of the money in addition, and at the end of 12 years your place is paid for and is yours. It is simply a matter of keeping constantly at it.

Many have an idea also that they lose their money if they fail to pay. If you fail to meet your payments you are fined two cents a month on each share for a period of six months and then if you do not pay your share is retired and your money paid back to you. A shareholder can at any time give up his share and withdraw his money and he is paid every cent that he has put in and three quarters of the profit that his money has earned besides.

Many in Quincy can attest to the value of cooperative banks and the great savings which have resulted.

THE STARS AND STRIPES.

The tendency of Europe to take as its face value the off hand remarks of our politicians is one of the humors of international relations.

The starched, bewigged, and frilled statecraft of the old world has often referred to our frequently impulsive leadership as "shirtsleeves diplomacy." Language to them should be a means of concealing thought.

So when Champ Clark got up in the House Feb. 14, and remarked in a semi-humorous vein, that he believed the stars and stripes would one day float over the entire western hemisphere, there was a commotion among premiers and kings.

They do not understand the American temperament over there. One gets some idea of it by comparing differences between the various sections of our own country. With the conservative New Englander, speech is guarded, premeditated. In his mind there is a certain obloquy attaching to any failure to realize all of his words in actual performance. He is not apt to announce his plans until he has the means for carrying them out nailed down tight.

The American Westener, on the contrary, is accustomed to reveal those more transitory purposes formed by all of us in secret thought, even if the cold reflection of the morning after should reveal those purposes as illusory.

The former temperament is the safer, the latter the more interesting. It is in the latter spirit that many of our statesmen often speak with regard to national aims. The European temperament goes beyond even the New England attitude in its cautious reserve. They are as much at sea over there in estimating underlying aims, as a Bostonian would be in dealing with an inhabitant of Reno, Nev.

It will be a long day before the stars and stripes are extended over any very considerable additional American territory. Some of it needs our control badly enough, goodness knows. But Americans do not like the idea of having their domestic affairs settled by representatives in Congress from the hot blooded Latin bred races of the tropics.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

During the week of March 25th to April 1st, Boston will be the mecca of all florists, horticulturists, and flower lovers, at which time the great National Flower Show is listed to occur in Mechanics building, in connection with the conventions of seven distinct societies of florists and ornamental horticulturists. Never before in the history of the trade has such a stupendous undertaking been planned, and the 1911 conventions will probably go into the records as the best attended and most enthusiastic ever held by the various associations. The conventions will bring to Boston all the leading representatives of the trade throughout the country.

Prizes amounting to more than $12,000, are offered for the most beautiful and artistic exhibitions, and many growers have definitely filed their applications for competitive exhibitions. The Management of the Show asserts that the term National Flower Show is hardly broad enough to cover all the exhibits which have been procured, for already arrangements have been completed for exhibitions from Scotland, Holland, Belgium, Mexico, China, Japan, and India, as well as several from various parts of South America. Local retail florists are vying with each other in erecting exceptionally beautiful exhibits. on this feature. Among the interesting exhibits will be a Holland garden, the garden of a Mexican hacienda, a Japanese garden, and an India Garden, in addition to many other handsome showings of flowers and garden architecture. Saples of best American landscape gardening will also be reproduced on a liberal scale.

A special arrangement of departments has been found necessary in order to complete a really artistic decorative effect, and imagination can hardly impress the wonderful transformation that will take place in Mechanics building. It suffices to say that the bare brick walls and heavy pillars of its interior will be transformed into varigated perspective rural scenery and blossoming trees, while the aisles will be comparable to country roads and by-lanes, except that here all seasons will be crowded into one, and no flower or bud will be missing. Sweet peas, violets, dahlias, roses, lilies, hyacinths, peonies, pansies, poppies, mignonetts, forget-me-nots, chrysanthemums, and wistera will be just as much in evidence as the rarer and more expensive varieties, for the forthcoming Show is intended to cover the flower kingdom completely. To the practical man, the department devoted to the exhibition of gardening, pruning, and landscape tools will appeal, and the simple lovers of nature can devote themselves to the floral exhibits and enjoy the best of music and most artistic surroundings.

FOR GOOD CITIZENSHIP

Rally at Water Street Church with Dr. Gifford as Speaker

The next meeting of the East Norfolk C. E. Union will be held in the Water Street Presbyterian church on Monday evening, April 3. The executive committee has been very fortunate in securing Dr. O. P. Gifford of Brookline for the speaker. Dr. Gifford is conceded to be one of the most brilliant speakers in the state along civic, social or religious lines. The meeting on April 3 will take the form of a good citizenship rally, and owing to its significance and the reputation of the speaker, it has been decided to invite the other young people's organizations in the city to join the Christian Endeavorers in this rally. Three denominations, Baptist, Presbyterian and Congregational are represented in the union, and a cordial invitation is extended to all young people of the other denominations, Methodist, Episcopal, Unitarian, Universalist and so on. It is the desire of the C. E. union to have all the young people in the city and surrounding towns interested in good citizenship. Join in an enthusiastic rally and give Dr. Gifford the rousing reception he deserves.

WHY QUINCY IS BEST

Challenges Any City or Town to Show More Exemptions

"I believe that if a test were made to determine the cities and towns most desirable as places to live in, it would be found that they are those where the percentage of property exempt from taxation is the highest. And the higher the amount of exempted property, whether it be college property, hospitals, museums, lakes, rivers, parks, schools or public buildings, the more desirable that city or town as a place to live in," said Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, at the dinner of the American Society of Landscape Architects at the Hotel Victoria.

Quincy challenges any city or town in the State to show more property exempt. The Quincy list includes over 2600 acres in the Blue Hills reservation, over 90 acres in Merrymount park, 27 acres in Faxon park, five playgrounds, Public Library grounds, 17 large school lots, 26 church grounds, the Quincy shore reservation and Squantum head.

WHY MAYORS OPPOSE

Real Boston Bill a Plan to Usurp Other's Powers

Mayor E. A. Walker of Waltham, chairman of the special committee formed this week at the Boston Exchange club to complete the organization of protest against the Real Boston loose confederation bill, issued a statement Thursday in which he discussed the purpose of the proposed confederation as it appeared to the protesting city and town officials.

He said, in part: "What these people are aiming to create is a district legislative body to take over certain of the functions of the cities and towns, and there is no getting away from it.

"It is also plain to my mind that they seek to usurp the powers of the legislature committee on metropolitan acairs, to carry on its investigations and studies of metropolitan needs, by developing a condition where the committee, it is hoped, will take over entire the findings of a body of annually shifting personality.

"In Boston the chamber of commerce keeps talking about the statistical advantage which the city will gain, which has yet to be shown, but the main purpose is to create this organization, which will inevitably lead to annexation.

"What the real Boston committee is trying to foist on us it a compulsory federation, at the meetings of which the representatives of the cities and towns will have to attend for their own protection and irrespective of the importance of the topics which may come up. It would be an association which encroaches absolutely on the home rule theory of local government.

"The Real Boston bill provides for a compulsory association. At such meetings, also the men present will of necessity be bound by the votes of the majorities, according to custom, if not rule. Even if there was a guarantee that such meetings would only be held on matters of very considerable importance, it would be some safeguard, but the executives of the various municipalities will be obliged to attend for the discussion of the most trivial matters, which are not of any substantial interest.

"By coming together as we did Wednesday, we really showed that without any legislation the towns in question have now the power to meet, to discuss matters, and take a stand, when any emergency developes which really calls for such a course."

REPORT ANTICIPATED

Grade Crossing Commissioners May Close Saville Street

Editors Daily Ledger:

I understand that the grade crossing commission, having charge of such matters relating to the railroad in Quincy will, if they ever do report, close any ready means of access to the station from the westerly side of the track, to carriages at least.

Now, though the city has the right to take this question to the Railroad Commissions, I apprehend that the railroad company will have a legitimate answer to any claim that a road crossing the track near the station, by showing that there never has been a public way at this point, or for that matter, one running from Goffe street at this point to the station.

And it would further appear, that although a substantial part of the population of the town were compelled to use this private way, absolutely unfitted for carriages and very difficult for foot passengers, yet this has been the only means of transportation afforded for generations, by the municipality of the standing of the City of Quincy.

That is to say, in order to save a few dollars the duty of furnishing a proper way is neglected, to the inconvenience of every one, with the further effect that such an eye sore prevents the building up of the town and consequent depreciation of real estate. Even Rip Van Winkle would have aroused himself to enter a protest, if this had occurred at Sleepy Hollow.

WHAT ORGANIZED LABOR HAS DONE

Secretary Duncan Speaks at South Quincy Church

James Duncan, the secretary-treasurer of the International Granite Cutters Union, and vice president of the American Federation of Labor spoke in the United Presyterian church Thursday evening on "What organized labor has done for the people." He traced the development of the Labor movement from its origin up to the present time. He said in part: Time was when it would have seemed radical for a labor man to speak from the same platform as the minister. Henry Ward Beecher was the first minister to give up his pulpit to a representative of organized labor. Now there is common ground between the church and the labor organization.

It was lack of honesty along commercial lines that brought about organized labor. The church has had much to do with civilization. There was not much accomplished in past ages without bloodshed. Organized labor was practically a bloodless fight.

We have some illustrations of early strikes: (E. G.) The children of Israel in Egyptian bondage. Jesus in Babylon and other instances. On the part of these as well as on the part of many who strike today the object was: for improved social, economic and industrial conditions. The speaker gave a review of the conditions of the working classes in the dark ages which was far removed from the conditions of organized labor at the present time.

In 1860 the labor party was formed. It failed on account of political interference. He discussed the various struggles through which it passed. Showed very graphically what it has done and is doing for childhood, and for women compelled to earn their own living. He discussed some phases of the immigration question and showed what it is doing for the immigrant. He referred also to the Knights of Labor and the work they accomplished. He closed his remarks by giving some interesting facts and figures relative to advantages of organized labor as against unorganized.

The 15,000 Granite cutters represented in the association receive 75 cents per day more than they would if unorganized. This means $11,250 a day for the 15,000 men. This represents for the 300 working days of the year $3,375,000 going into the pockets of the working man, because of organization.

He showed the cost of keeping up the organization in the way of dues and other expenses and proved conclusively that it was money in the working man's pocket to be organized. He spoke for about an hour and a half and was listened to throughout with intense interest.

The choir of the church sang a couple of anthems which were well received. The pastor of the church on behalf of the Men's league (under whose auspices Mr. Duncan lectured) thanked the speaker for his excellent address.

KATHARYN CRANE MEMORIAL CLUB.

A club of ten little girls has been organized for the purpose of giving loving service to others, in memory of Katharyn Crane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emery L. Crane. They have named their circle the "Katharyn Crane emorial Club." The members are: Norma Johnson, president; Dorothy Hall, secretary; Alice Miller, Harriet Barbour, Mary Whiton, Doris Sampson, Natalie Saville, Florence Mead, Roxana Schenkelberger Lillian Schenkelberger. Directors, Miss Sophie French, Miss Mary Holden, Miss Carrie Crane, Mrs. Emery Crane.

At their last meeting, held Tuesday, March 21, each member brought a contribution for the Day Nursery, with the result that two large market baskets were filled with oranges, jellies, crackers and many other things that are to treat to all children, particularly to the children of the Day Nursery.

If the members of the club could have seen the enthusiasm and delight of the children when the baskets were unpacked at the nursery they would surely feel that their loving and kindly efforts to bring happiness to others were successful.

REMEMBER: THE GUARANTEE—For one year against breakage "from any cause whatsoever."

REMEMBER: THE RECORD—Over 20,000 E-M-F "30" cars today in hands of owners and every owner boosting—ask them.

REMEMBER: THE SAVING—E-M-F "30" at $1,000 saves you $500 as compared with the same size and power and quality others ask $1,500 for; and $250 from price of "assembled cars" that list at $1,250 and cannot sell for less because of having to pay the extra parts maker's profits.

REMEMBER: That the $250 difference pay $20 per month toward your rent; or it is savings bank interest on $6,250, while $500 that you save on a car of equal quality is interest on $12,500 dollars for a year.

REMEMBER: That the difference between price of E-M-F "30" and would be competing cars at $1,250 will pay, twice over, your year's maintenance account—gasoline, oil, tires, repairs and an annual overhauling—twice over, no matter how hard you drive your E-M-F "30."

REMEMBER: That no other thirty or thirty-five horsepower car is made of such excellent materials, and is therefore as light, therefore as economical in operation and maintenance.

REMEMBER: That the E-M-F Company has over $7,000,000 invested in plants and that, not only is every part after the Pig Iron and the Raw Steel bars made in our own factories, but that every pound of steel or brass or other metal that enters into these cars is first made from our own formula; then analyzed to prove its quality and finally tested to prove its efficiency.

REMEMBER: That cars for which you must pay more are "assembled" product—that while their makers may prate loudly about quality, they don't know what material actually goes into their cars, but must take the word of others who are making the parts for profit and who have no interest in the ultimate user of the car.

AND FINALLY REMEMBER the record of the E-M-F Company—never repudiated a guarantee or a promise, written, verbal or otherwise. Remember that when we guarantee our cars for a full year we know whereof we speak, for we have made every part and we know absolutely the strength and quality of every piece of steel in it. Remember, that we are the largest automobile manufacturers in the world—that we now have thousands of delighted owners recommending our product and that, in view of our tremendous output, we need a lot more of such friends. Remember that we have always said, "a satisfied owner is the best salesman"—and that we have always kept in mind and seen that every owner was satisfied.

"If It's a Ralston It's Correct"

It is knowledge rather than "knack" which enables a man to dress both correctly and becomingly.

No part of a man's apparel changes in style more often or more radically than does his shoes. That is the reason why men who care to be correctly shod and who are particular about their personal appearance insist on getting "Ralston Authority Styles." We carry a sufficient variety of correct styles to enable you to express your own individuality in your selection.

The new shoe fashions are almost always first shown in Ralston Shoes. Come in and see the season's latest.

LIFE A REAL THING AND MAKES DEMANDS

Dr. William Gallagher Addresses Parents Association on Conditions Affecting the Child

We Need Training to Take up This Life Like a Major

Gentlemen's night was observed by the Wollaston Parents-Teachers' association in the Wollaston school on Thursday evening. The society was fortunate in having as speaker, Dr. William Gallagher, master of Thayer Academy who spoke on conditions affecting the child.

At the business meeting which preceded a motion was made and unanimously carried to petition the School Committee for a room in the new Wollaston school building in which to house the Wollaston Free Kindergarten.

Dr. Gallagher said that he was too late in life to attempt to speak authoritatively on his subject. If he had been asked 25 years ago he would have felt thoroughly competent to advise but the more one lived the less cocksure he became.

He spoke of the subject from the standpoint of a parent as well as a teacher, as he was in a family of six brothers and one sister, had six children and six grandchildren.

"When a question comes up in my school," said Dr. Gallagher, I always ask myself two questions. 'How will I look at this ten years from now?' and 'What would I do if it were my own boy?'"

"The question is first: What are your children for? How are you looking at them? Are they simply a plaything like a French doll to delight you with their cute actions and smart sayings? Is there no interest in the deeper and wider idea of that girl? If we but see this we meet all problems.

"Will it be the selfish way or the unselfish and serviceable way which leads to infinite possibilities of growth. If we have decded this we have decided a good deal.

"Do we treasure the child as a precious commission from on high with infinite possibilites. If so what are we going to do with it. If we shove the responsibility off on nurses, governesses and the like we know what that means.

"I do not like to hear a father say he doesn't wish his son to have as hard a time at school as he did. Does business demand less competent men now than before? Are its wheels slowing down? Is the world more considerate? Is it easier or harder? Does it require more pluck or less, better or less training?

"We want to bring up a man that will not cry baby but will put his upper and lower jaws together and hold them there.

"Dr. Gallagher said that the office boy of today had a tendency to come to work 15 minutes late, go home 10 minutes early, and take more time for lunch than the boss did. When asked to do something he does what he considers as near enough.' "Near enough for what?" asked the speaker.

"We need training to take up this life like a major without flinching. It is not the utmost excitement and play we can get out of it with the least amount of work.

"I have camped out on every island in Boston harbor, and I am ready to walk to Boston or climb mountains with anyone of you. I believe in having a good time, but this idea of pleasant associations between the home and school and 'that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy' is overdone.

"We must learn that life is a real thing that makes demands upon us and we are expected to do the sturdy thing. We must do a good job and make a finished piece of work.

"Parents should not lay down precepts, but should create an atmosphere that will be naturally and readily absorbed by the child. The father who does everything for his son is a drag, but what is needed is a strong and steady co-operation.

"I do not say that the only thing under Heaven is the school and the schoolhouse, but there are certain years if in which there are not certain habits of attention, concentration and application, started and developed he will never get it.

"When a boy is sick or hurt it is the father's idea to 'take him to his mother.' If the father does not bring up his son for sturdiness and business where will he be.

"I have never whipped a pupil in my 42 years of school teaching, but I have often thought that once a month it would be a good thing. We do not want to be cruel but we want the child to know that life is real. He has got to learn that life is not an afternoon fete or a picnic and he should learn it in the home now.

"There was a good deal in the words of the old English writer who said that we employ a more cunning man for our horse than our children. This makes for tame and well ordered horses and wild and unfortunate children resulting in the parents taking more pleasure in the horse than comfort in the child.

Dr. Gallagher closed his address with several quotations which he applied to the child among them Portia's speech in the Merchant of Venice which reads:

"If you had known the virtue of the ring,
Or half her worthiness that gave the ring,
Or your own honor to contain the ring,
You would not then have parted with the ring."

Refreshments were served at evening's close by a committee consisting of Mrs. H. H. Albee, Mrs. David Goodspeed, Mrs. Amos T. Leavitt, Mrs. Alfred J. Richards, Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, Mrs. George Perry, Miss Dorothy Sayward.

In the program were selections by an orchestra consisting of Miss Olive Allen, Miss Ninon Lacey, Miss Gertrude Lacey, Max Pinkham and Ernest Pletsch.

PUBLIC DOCK MEETING

Ladies and Gentlemen Invited to City Hall

The residents of Quincy, both ladies as well as gentlemen, are to have an opportunity tonight to hear the subject of public docks discussed by one who has made a deep study of the subject, and is therefore thoroughly conversant with it.

The speaker is Henry C. Long, a well known Boston attorney, who has been engaged by Mayor Shea to give his talk in the Council chamber, City Hall.

Quincy as it is well known is particularly fortunate in having a water front that is unsurpassed anywhere in New England, and it only needs development to make our shore front a scene of busy business activity.

The development of this water front as well as the water fronts of other parts of Metropolitan Boston by the establishment of public docks is a subject that is now demanding the attention of Board of Trades and other similar organizations.

Some of the possibilities that will result by the establishment of public docks to be connected by a belt line railway running around the city will be told by Mr. Long tonight. He will tell how the great cities of the world have taken advantage of their water fronts, particularly Canada, by building public docks and building belt line railways.

His lecture will be illustrated by numerous stereopticon slides which will more forcibly bring out the many advantages that are bound to come from such development.

Quincy has been lacking in development along its water front and when it is seen what has been done elsewhere, where possibilities were not near as good as in Quincy, it may stimulate the citizens to take action.

The lecture is bound to be interesting and Mr. Long should be greeted with a large audience.

GRAND HOLIDAY OUTING

Proposed by the West Quincy Improvement Society

There was but little business transacted at the regular meeting of the West Quincy Improvement association Thursday evening. During the first part of the evening there was an informal discussion on matters of interest to the ward.

The question of the annual outing was then brought up and it was voted to hold an outing the seventeenth of June, and if possible to hold it on the West Quincy playground. John Evans was appointed as chairman of the committee to have the matter in charge.

It was reported that the Metropolitan Park Commission would probably put twenty seats along the parkway between Copeland street and Babble rock.

After the meeting the committee appointed to confer with the Boston Elevated railway relative to extending its tracks to East Milton, held a meeting and arranged its plan of action. It was announced that the East Milton association would cooperate with them.

MORE TRAINS SECURED

New Park and Downs Society Doing Good Work

At Poland hall on Thursday evening was held the first ladies' night of the newly formed Park and Downs Improvement Association. From the goodly number present it was evident that the interest in this movement is on the increase, and this coupled with the perfecting of the organization at its next meeting serves to put the society on a firm footing.

The evening opened with a business meeting which included a reading of the minutes by the secretary Wilbur H. Snow and a report of the train service committee of which Louis F. R. Langelier is chairman.

Owing to the difference of opinion at the hearing before the railroad commission on March 13 in regard to more trains for Norfolk Downs, the matter was taken under advisement by the commissioners.

The work of the committee has, however, resulted in two more trains being put on by the railroad and Representative Langelier urged the need of interest and cooperation in the matter.

John Poland reported for the committee on constitution and bylaws, but owing to the entertainment which was to follow, the matter was laid on the table until the next meeting which occurs April 6.

The meeting was then turned over to an entertainment committee consisting of Edwin Poland, Walter Winlock and George Colburn and a pleasing program was in order.

With the aid of a stereopticon, war scenes were depicted by Mr. Cahill, and a soloists he brought with him rendered several selections.

George Critchley accompanied on the piano by his daughter Miss May Critchley contributed several cornet solos which met with favor. The singing of Mr. Cahill with the choruses sung by the audience were also appreciated.

A reading from Kipling entitled "Moulmein Pagoda" was well given by Wilbur H. Snow, after which a social hour was enjoyed until time for adjournment.

TROLLEY EXPRESS

for the tracks running in on the company's premises parallel with the building, bringing the cars flush to its side where the express matter will be discharged directly through the open door of the car into a corresponding door in the building. On the east side of the building will be about 40 feet for a driveway, which, with the space in the rear of the building will give plenty of room for express teams and auto-trucks to back up to the building, stand or turn around so that there will be no necessity for them to stand upon the highway itself.

As to the location of such a business at this point it may be said in the first place that the word "freight," or "trolley freight" which has been applied as a designation of the business does not accurately describe its character. "Trolley express" is a better term. It is really a general express business, no different in this respect than such business as carried on by other well organized express companies.

Something has been said in opposition to the proposed site as to the congestion of the street likely to grow out of the establishment of this building at this point and citizens have been given to understand that there will be a continual line of cars and teams arriving at and departing from the station. That there will be any congestion because of the operation of the trolley express service here the company emphatically denies, basing this denial upon its experience in such cities as Brockton, Taunton, Fall River and Providence. From the very nature of the business and the methods of operation there can be no congestion.

It is proposed to inaugurate the service with two cars in and out a day, these cars leaving between 6.30 and 8 in the morning and about four in the afternoon, one at each time. Two more cars will be added in and out when connections are made with Boston. Some five years ago the service was established between Brockton and Taunton with one car a day. Brockton is now connected with practically all the cities and towns south, east, and west and sends out of the city as its maximum number, six cars.

In the natural conduct of the business it will neither be necessary nor likely that cars or express teams will mass at this location at one time. The business will be spread over the business hours of the day, not concentrated at any one time. It would be a remarkable coincidence if a variety of shippers should so arrange that their shipments should all reach the station at one time, or if expressmen should so figure as to call for consignments simultaneously. Most certainly the schedules of the operation of the cars would not be arranged to bring them in together. It would not be logical or feasible, nor in accord with economic and efficient handling of the service.

A large part of the express business is the receipt at the offices of the company of merchandise, produce and bundles from the retail storekeepers and people who have occasion to go to the centre of the town, individuals in many cases bringing this merchandise themselves in order to get a low rate of charge. The location on the Faxon property on Coddington street on the marsh would not be much more convenient to the general public than the car barn property, upon which the company could, without authority, erect a station. The company, feels, however that it wants to make this service a real convenience to the citizens and not establish its offices in an inaccessible place.

In Brockton, particularly in the summertime, a great many bundles and packages are sent by people doing business in the city to their summer places outside, especially provisions. This would probably hold true in Quincy. To have such service of value, a central location is of the utmost importance. The locations on Hancock and Canal streets were all considered, but found unavailable or objectionable from one point or another. This was true of other possible sites. The company has no pride of opinion as to any particular location. It simply desires to locate where it will be most convenient to the greatest number, that the service may reach the highest point of efficiency and value to all.

No apprehension need be felt as to a spur track being an obstruction to the highway, or that any unusual and disturbing noise will come from operating the express cars over this curve or about the building. The question of noise at unseemly hours is taken care of by the distinct limitations in the franchise granted as to the hours when cars can be run. As to the matter of obstruction or noise from the spur, it can be said that it is proposed to lay vitrified brick in the street for a sufficient distance to take care of such necessary rise as there may be in the surface of the street occasioned by the laying of the track. This will make it practically as flat and smooth as a macadam road. An example of this work can be found at the crossover on the Hingham side of the back river bridge in Weymouth and anyone who was driven over this in automobile, or other vehicle, can testify that it is perfectly smooth and causes not the slightest discomfort.

In a matter of this kind which involves the best interests of the whole city, the question should be viewed from the broad view-point of the city as a whole. Personal, or sectional preferences should not be allowed to cloud the vision of what is to be the best thing for the city and its citizens.

General Manager Old Colony Street Railway Co.

DOCK AND HARBOR BILL.

A delegation from the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange conferred with Gov. Foss yesterday about the development of the harbor front from Nahant to Hull advocated by Henry C. Long who will speak at Quincy City Hall this evening.

The exchange will support House bill 1112 by Henry C. Long, known as the metropolitan harbor bill, which is modelled on the Montreal plan. In that city the plan has resulted in one of the best docking systems in the world.

The exchange asks the co-operation of all towns and cities in the metropolitan section in the support of the bill, and suggests that boards of trade and other business and civic organizations pass resolutions favoring it, and send delegations to the State House on April 3 to secure its passage. Already a number of towns have taken action. Gov. Foss expressed himself as in full sympathy with the movement.

BRIEFS

Cold this morning.

Today is not the last Friday of the month.

A military whist party will be held by Maple lodge at Protection hall on Wednesday evening, April 5.

Very little snow and ice remains but there is quite a heap on the east side of Bethany church where the sun seldom reaches.

William Deacon of Franklin street who was operated on Thursday at the Deaconess hospital in Brookline is reported resting comfortably.

The Ledger is going to get out a big spring edition the week before Easter which will be full of special features, news of the city, and surrounding towns, and be especially attractive as to Easter advertising.

Herbert Ward of Atlantic and P. R. Wanseck of Neponset are giving an assembly this evening in Brasee hall, Wollaston which promises to be a social good time for the young people attending.

BIBLE SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT.

A very pleasing entertainment was given Wednesday evening in the vestry of the First Presbyterian church by the Bible school. A fine program was prepared consisting of several recitations, singing and tableaux such as "The Womanhood of Egypt," "The Gleaners," "The Ten Virgins" and given by several young ladies of Mrs. Matheson's class. Other tableaux "Held by a thread," "Woman suffrage" and "Pilgrims on way to church" were also shown. Master Hilton Marr rendered some very pleasing selections on the piano. Mr. Meekum gave a reading, Mr. Heggi sang solos "Mary of Argyle" and "Flow Gently Sweet Afton." Miss Elsie McLennan and Margaret McLeod a piano duet and several of the younger members of the Bible school took part in singing and recitations. Before and after the entertainment fancy articles and candy were for sale.

WILL ACCEPT NO PROMISES

Revolutionists Want Formal Negotiations For Peace

OUTLINE OF THEIR ATTITUDE

Laying Down of Arms Without Formal Guarantee Would Be, Followed by Mysterious Death of Leaders, No Reforms Would Be Granted and Oppression Would Be Greater Than Ever—Expect Americans' Support

Washington, March 24.—Diplomats expect that within a short time announcement will be made at the White House and in European chancelleries of the formation of the world-wide peace federation, organized under the leadership of President Taft.

The first steps toward this organization, they declare, have already embraced Japan, United States, France and England. The conferences held at the White House are understood to have been marked by important progress in negotiations.

President Taft talked for some time with Baron Uchida, ambassador from Japan, and Robert Bacon, United States ambassador to France. Uchida and Taft are said to have discussed a general arbitration treaty which will embrace Japan, the United States, France and England. With these four powerful nations in a general arbitration treaty, the peace of the world would be assured.

It has already been semi-officially announced that the British government favored such a treaty. The French government let it be known in Paris that it favored a limitation of armaments and an international arbitration treaty. Bacon carried France's answer to Taft yesterday.

Japan, menaced in Manchuria by Russia despite existing treaties, if she should go to war with the United States, is understood to be very willing to be a signatory to a treaty with the three other countries which would assure a fair share of the Far Eastern trade and fix for all time her control of Manchuria and Korea.

The four countries mentioned would be able to preserve the peace of the world by force if necessary and compel the other nations to agree to limitation of armaments.

Diplomats say that the treaty is now well under way and will be simultaneously announced in Washington, Tokio, London and Paris. It is supposed that Austria, Italy, Russia and Germany are now being sounded by Washington on these plans. These countries undoubtedly will join such a universal peace pact, with the possible exception of Germany. But if Germany should not become a signatory she would find herself occupying an isolated position.

A prominent diplomat here said: "Should such a treaty be made, and there is small doubt that something of the kind is under way, it would mean in time the partial disarmament of the nations, the limitation of armies and navies and one of the greatest forward steps ever taken by humanity since war and diplomacy began."

A Call For Recruits

San Antonio, Tex., March 24.—With the call for 6000 or7000 recruits, the issuance of an order by General Carter making provisions for a sudden move, should it be required, and a statement by Dr. C. F. Caricristi of the Mexican revolutionary junta that "the United States will intervene in Mexico unless there is a definite show of tranquility by May 1," the recently diminished war cloud looms larger.

Dr. Caricristi felt sure enough of his facts to embody them in a report to Francisco I. Madero, the revolutionary leader, who, the latest report has it, is within thirty miles of the city of Chihuahua. Caricristi urged the insurrecto chief to achieve a decisive victory at all costs by May 1, for, he wrote:

"President Taft will not wait longer than that for quiet to be restored, business resumed and traffic over the railroads to be secure."

Limantour Admits Grave Crisis

Mexico City, March 24.—Admitting that Mexico is facing a crisis even greater than he believed, Minister of Finance Limantour said that the administration had no definite plans for the solution of the problems confronting the government. It had no alternative but to continue the military program upon which it had entered, he said.

Notwithstanding the government's aggressive attitude, reforms which were intended to remedy the alleged grievances were under consideration. The most important of these reforms was that relative to the revision of the electoral laws.

This is an outline of the situation as presented by Limantour to a representative of the press, following a meeting of the cabinet. That a great change in the attitude of the people toward the administration had taken place within the time that Limantour was abroad was a significant admission made by him. The administration, he said, was conducting a searching investigation to determine the exact cause and to find a remedy for the existing sentiment.

There was no disposition on its part to oppose any wise reforms which might be demanded by a reasonable public. At the same time the administration did not purpose to accede to demands backed up by arms.

In a word, the administration recognized two classes in the dissatisfied public; one represented by the intelligent but non-combatant element and the other by the followers of Madero. For the latter the administration had no terms other than those formulated at the war department.

Such is the program announced by Limantour as the result of conferences with President Diaz and other members of the cabinet. Limantour frankly expressed surprise at the antagonism towards the administration that he had discovered.

TAXES OVERLOOKED BY HUB ASSESSORS

Shaw Estate Pays $492,020 as a Moral Obligation

Boston, March 24.—Despite the fact that the Boston finance commission found, upon investigation, that the assessors were at fault in not exhausting all means of obtaining information regarding the taxable personal property left by the late Quincy A. Shaw, and that the city, as a result of the peculiar conditions under which the inventory was filed for probate, making the city unable to collect in full taxes to which it was entitled for the years 1908 and 1909, the beneficiaries under Shaw's will were asked as a moral obligation to pay the city the amount so overlooked, and they have paid $492,020.42. The amount has been turned into the city treasurer's hands.

A check for $74,520.87 was yesterday afternoon received by Tax Collector Edwards of Beverly, covering tax assessments on legacies left to beneficiaries under the will of Quincy A. Shaw, who for many years was a summer resident there. Of this amount $744.35 was for interest.

BEWARE OF TIGHT COUGH, PRECEDES PNEUMONIA.
Home-Made Syrup Loosens.

You can make a simple laxative cough syrup which will loosen the tightest cough in one hour and cure any cough or cold in a very short time. Here is the formula:
Essence mentho-laxene .....2 1-2 Ozs.
Granulated sugar syrup....13 1-2 Ozs.
Make the syrup by using a pint of granulated sugar and a half pint of boiling water. Mix, stir and let cool. Then go to the drug store and buy a 2 1-2 oz. package of Essence Mentho-Laxene (concentrated,) empty it into a pint bottle and fill up with the syrup. Take a teaspoonful every hour or two as needed and you will soon be entirely rid of your cough and cold. This relieves and cures old people quicker and surer than anything ever heard of, and it is just fine for children, they like the taste so well.

JELLY BEANS SEIZED

Federal Inspectors Claim That the Confections Contain Talcum

Providence, March 24.—One thousand pounds of "jelly beans," a confectionary, were seized by United States food and drug inspectors from Boston. The candy had been shipped from Buffalo to this city and was confiscated because the inspectors claimed it contained talcum.

Recently the same inspectors seized a lot of candy Easter eggs in Boston. This is the first seizure under the pure food law in this city.

REPEAL IS DEFEATED

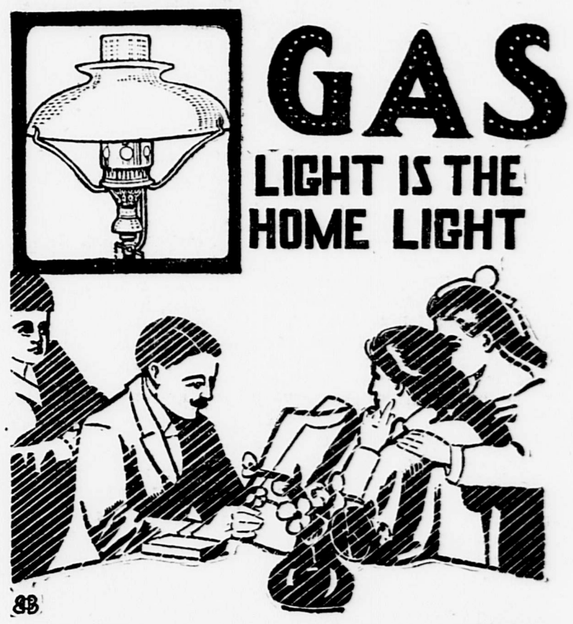

Bar and Bottle Bill Remains on Massachusetts Statute Books

Boston, March 24.—The repeal of the bar and bottle bill was refused in the house by the vote of 131 to 103. The bill was enacted last year to take effect next May. If it is not repealed by that time, no bar license will be joined with a bottle license..

The argument for repeal was to the effect that the act was on trial in several municipalities and that it has failed. The opponents of repeal urged that it be given a longer trial.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wertrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

McVickar defies Senator Blount to nominate Evan. Patricia and her geologist father arrive at the Sagebrush capital.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics, but finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Evan has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's mixing in politics. His father pulls wires unknown to him to have him invited to speak in a distant mining town. Hathaway, who has been trying to do business with the road and with Senator Blount, is to have a talk with Mrs. Blount.

Hathaway wants a rebate from the road in consideration of political favors. He is referred to Evan and is advised by Mrs. Blount to put Professor Anners' name on his list of stockholders.

Evan's interview with Hathaway reveals the road's misdoings. In a rage he resigns. Gantry holds up the resignation. Evan insists that it go through to McVickar.

Patricia refuses Evan again. She advises him to stick to the road and work for clean politics. He withdraws his resignation and is sent into the field on a speaking tour.

CHAPTER XIII.

BARRIERS INVISIBLE.

BLOUNT drove himself back to the capital the following morning in the big roadster, and there was no opportunity for further confidential speech with Patricia before he left. But with the new day had come a new determination. To the best of his ability he would try to live up to the high standard set for him by the woman he loved, not only preaching the gospel of political righteousness, but doing his utmost to try to make it effective.

With this high purpose in view he drove on past the city garage and made an early call upon Gantry.

"Hello, old man! Come back to row me some more about that telegram?" was his greeting.

Blount shook his head. "No. If you have sent it, well and good; if you haven't, you may pitch it into the wastebasket. I came to talk about something else."

"Good, sound, sensible second thought," said Gantry, laughing. Then he took out his pocketbook and passed the suppressed telegram across to Blount. "Here it is. You can do the wastebasket act yourself. I couldn't let you commit harakiri without at least trying to get the cutting tool out of your hands. What is the other thing you've got on your mind this early in the morning?"

"It's this, Dick. You know what I've been doing—what I supposed I was hired to do—assuring everybody, right and left, that we were going into this campaign with clean hands?"

"I know," admitted the traffic manager, developing a sudden interest in the figures of the rug at his feet.

"I have been doing this in a business way at my office uptown in season and out of season, and night before last at Ophir I did it publicly. As the campaign progresses I shall doubtless put myself on record many times to the same effect."

"Good man!" applauded Gantry, striving to drag the talk down to some less portentous altitude. "I'm sure we need all the whitewashing anybody can give us."

"That is just the point," Blount went on gravely. "It mustn't be merely a coat of whitewash, Dick. It has got to be the real thing this time. I began by firing the 'little brothers,' as you called them, but I mean to go higher up if I am compelled to. I am here this morning to ask you to give me your word as a gentleman and my friend that you will not, directly or indirectly, do or cause to be done anything that will make me stand forth as a self convicted liar before the people of this state. I want you to promise me that you will cut out all the deals, all the briberies, all the bargainings, all the"—

"Oh, say, see here," protested the man under fire; "you've got the wrong dig by the ear, Evan. I'm not the Transcontinental Railway company."

"I know you are not. But to a greater degree than any other official in the management you have Mr. McVickar's confidence. If you don't feel competent to handle this thing on your own responsibility pass it up to those who can and have it understood that there must be no compromise."

"Great Scott!" murmured Gantry. "And you're on the pay sheets the same as the rest of us! But candidly, as man to man, Evan, the thing can't be done. We've got to play the game. They'll eat us alive if we don't. You needn't figure in it. It was a mistake letting Sim Hathaway go to you, and I said so at the time. But your—er—the powers that be said it had to be that way, and I had to let him go and ball you all up. It shan't happen again. I can promise you that much, anyway."

Blount caught quickly at the hesitant pause.

"Who were 'the powers that be' in Hathaway's case, Dick?" he demanded.

"I can't tell you that; honestly I can't, Evan," was the anxious refusal. "Don't ask me."

"All right; then I shall assume that Mr. McVickar was responsible," said Blount calmly, thus proving that he had not taken his degree in the law school for nothing.

"Oh, hold on; you mustn't do that, either," protested the unwilling occupant of the witness stand.

"Thank you," said the postgraduate, with the true Blount smile. "Now I know that it was my father. No; don't deny it. But we are wandering from the real issue. I've asked you for a promise, Dick. Will you give it?"

"I—I can't give it, Evan, and that's the truth."

"No; it isn't. But that was about what I expected you to say. Now hear my side of it. If you don't clean house—you and the other officials of the company—I shall not only resign; I shall take the field on the other side and tell what I know. I have been telling everybody that this is to be a campaign of publicity. I shall keep my word."

"YOU KNOW TOO MUCH—A GREAT DEAL TOO MUCH!"

"Oh, you would not do that!" protested Gantry, now thoroughly alarmed. "You know too much—a great deal too much!"

Blount got up and relighted his cigar with a match taken from the traffic manager's desk box.

"It's up to you," he said, with his hand on the doorknob. "Get into communication with whatever 'powers that be' there are that can give the necessary orders and see to it that the orders are given and that they are put in the way of being carried out. Dick, I mean what I say. It's a clean sheet—or an exposure that will make a lot of you wish that you had never been born."

"Hold on—one question before you go, Evan," pleaded Gantry, "and give me a straight answer. Is this another move of the honorable—of your father's?"

Blount's smile was as grim as any that Gantry had ever seen on the face of the Honorable David.

"My father is much more likely to take sides with you, I am sorry to say. No, Dick; you've got only one man to fight, but you mustn't forget that his name also is Blount. Go to it and send me word and let the first word be that you have scotched the head of this lumber company snake. That's all for today. Goodby."

Returning to his office in Temple court, Blount found that the morning mail had been busy with him also. There were three invitations from widely separated cities in the state, all based upon the newspaper reports of his Ophir speech, and the afternoon mail brought three more.

It was evident that the campaign of education had struck a popular chord, and the young political manager saw what a miraculous opportunity was opening for the railroad if only the "powers" that Gantry had refused to name could be broad enough and high minded enough to seize it.

After that for three weeks Blount scarcely saw his office in the capital. One appointment followed another in rapid succession, and everywhere there was a repetition of the welcome extended by the Ophir miners—a cordial welcome, generous applause and kindly hospitality at every turn.

It was not until he was deep into the fourth week of the hurryings to and fro that he began to admit a suspicion which grew like a juggler's rose when he had once given it place. These invitations, which were now coming from all parts of the state—could it be possible that they were all spontaneous? And if they were not—

If they were so many subtle moves in the great game he could see no possible end to be subserved by them save one—they were effectually keeping him away from the capital, which was the nucleus and center of the campaign activities.

Was there something going on at headquarters that "the powers" did not wish him to find out? Of one thing he was fairly well assured—Gantry was dodging him, was apparently keeping an accurate record of his movements, for whenever the hurryings to and fro permitted a flying visit to the capital Gantry was always out of town.

With the awakening suspicion came a rapid putting together of two and two. Wherever he went there was always the same pressing hospitality, with many urgings to delay his going. At the same time it became evident in many little ways that he was in reality merely skimming over the surface in his campaign work.

That a hot political fight was going on all around him he could not doubt. The newspapers were full of it, and in many sections of the state the fight had become acrimonious and bitter. But, although he was supposed to be in the fight, it began to be apparent that he was little more than an onlooker when it came to the really vital struggle of the moment.

It was as if everything had been carefully prearranged, like a sort of triumphal procession. None the less the invisible barrier, the barrier which was shutting him out from the inner workings of the campaign, was there, and he could neither surmount it nor push it aside.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MEANS PEACE OF THE WORLD

Four Powerful Nations In General Arbitration Treaty

IS ALREADY WELL UNDER WAY

United States, England, Japan and France Can Compel Other Nations to Agree to Limitation of Armaments—Italy, Austria, Russia and Germany Being Sounded by Washington In Regard to Peace Pact

Washington, March 24.—Announcing that they will not lay down their arms until formal negotiations for peace are under way, the revolutionary party of Mexico, through Vazquez Gomez, their representative in Washington, has issued a statement outlining the attitude of the revolutionists toward peace overtures and reforms in the republic. The statement says:

"The revolutionary party, which is constituted of the best men of the country, doctors, lawyers, artisans, workingmen and the like, are firm in declaring that they will not enter into anything but formal negotiations for peace. It cannot accept as a guarantee only the promise of a government that has for more than thirty years been promising and has never fulfilled a single one of its promises.

"It cannot believe that the government will change its methods of so many years, methods imposed upon the people by force, despite the possibility of such assurances in a guarantee. The revolutionists think, and with reason, that immediately following the laying down of their arms many of the leaders would die mysteriously, no reforms would be granted and the oppression would be greater than ever.

"For this reason the revolutionists will not accept as a guarantee the promises of the government, because they know that none of them will be complied with. As little, too, will they accept as a guarantee Mr. Limantour or any other individual, because one man cannot and must not serve as a guarantee for a political party fighting for the liberty of a people, and much less when such a man has been and is the right hand of the oppressing government.

"The revolutionary party must be represented in the government of the states, in the congress and in the cabinet. It is well known that up to the present not a single member of the cabinet or a representative of the people has ever made the least protest in regard to the great political abuses, the unjust imprisonments and the numberless political assassinations.

"If the government should unfortunately, through bad counsel, refuse to enter into formal negotiations, the revolutionary party will regain with arms the liberties of the people, and they expect to have the sympathy and moral support of the American public in this aim, as have had all people fighting for justice and liberty."

"LOAN SHARKS" MUST GO

Can No Longer Do Business In Various Government Departments

Washington, March 24.—The ferreting out of the "loan sharks" in the several government departments will follow activity displayed by their chiefs as a result of the initiative taken by Director Ralph of the bureau of engraving and printing.

The director has suspended twelve of his employes for alleged "loan shark" operations and suspensions or dismissals are very likely to ensue in other branches of the government service where a practice has prevailed among a number of capitalist employes of lending money to their more needy fellows at exorbitant rates of interest.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

MAJESTIC. THEATRE.

Mrs. Leslie Carter will be the attraction at the Majestic Theatre for two weeks beginning Monday sight, which will include in addition to her regular Saturday matinees, special matinees on Wednesday of each week, in her new play by Rupert Hughes, "Two Women," which has proven the most satisfying vehicle America's foremost emotional actress has had since "Zaza" and Du Barry." The story of "Two Women" has to do with Count Remy de Margyl, who has wasted two fortunes in dissipation. He marries a little seamstress of lowly birth, Jeannette Moreau, and takes up art as a profession. Under the beautiful influence of Jeannette he regains his character and is making a brave effort to relieve the poverty that oppresses them. Just when fortune again smiles upon him, she dies. Her half-finished portrait and the remembrance of her lovely spirit remain with him. He lives in the companionship of the latter, and in the hopes of completing the former. Two years later he meets the other woman, Jeannine Bartet, a public dancer. She is vicious and utterly selfish, but physically the exact counterpart of Jeannette. Remy hires her to sit as a model for the unfinished portrait of his wife in the little home in the country where he and Jeannette had lived so happily together. The atmosphere of the place and the man's beautiful devotion to his wife's memory, work a complete transformation in the life of Jeannine. These two characters, the one sweet, pure and noble, the other the direct opposite at the beginning of the story, afford Mrs. Carter splendid opportunities for the display of her wonderful emotional acting. Particularly is this so in the character of Jeannine, where all the fire she has shown in her other great roles is shown plentifully. The author has endeavored in this play to demonstrate the effect of the good life upon the bad and the redeeming qualities of noble example.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

Frank Daniels in the newest musical comedy success imported from Vienna, "The Girl in the Train," will be seen at the Colonial beginning next Monday, under the management of Charles Dillingham. "The Girl in the Train," is now being played in most of the capitals of Europe, and has been the rage of musical centers for the past year. It was written by Leo Fall, the famous composer of "The Dollar Princess," and the entertaining book was written by Victor Leon, who gained fame as the author of "The Merry Widow." The American adaptation has been made by Harry B. Smith. The story of "The Girl in the Train" relates to an adventure on a sleeping car. A young husband, leaving his wife behind after securing a sleeping car compartment, meets an actress on the train and gives up his compartment to her. A talkative sleeping car conductor draws wrong conclusions and reports the matter, so that the wife brings suit for divorce. This is brought out in the first act, showing the divorce court of Amsterdam, Holland, with both ladies contending to establish the truth of their statements, and the funny judge (played the Daniels) endeavoring to conciliate both. The first act is without doubt one of the funniest ever shown in musical comedy. The succeeding acts show a masquerade ball, and a village fete in a small seaport town of Holland, and the developments show the judge in love with both ladies, and unable to decide whether to marry the ex-wife or the fair actress. Ultimately, husband and wife are reconciled, and the judge wins the actress. In the development of this entertaining story, while the lines are brilliant, and the situations could be easily twisted into unconventional lines, it is said there is not the least hint of anything offending good taste. The cast is a strong one, with Mr. Daniels in the stellar role of the Judge. Miss Sallie Fisher will be the young wife, and Miss Vera Michaelena will be the fascinating actress, "the girl in the train," who causes all the trouble. There are a dozen other principals, and a chorus of sixty.

B. F. KEITH'S.

When somebody designated "the amusement centre of Boston" as B. F. Keith's Theatre, there was no attempt to question the aptness of the expression. And judging by the crowded houses found there even through Lent, it is quite evident that Mr. Keith is able to maintain his reputation for furnishing the Boston public with big shows that must command attention. And the secret of it all is the fact that he gives the people real enjoyment and something that will drive away dull care and start a good, wholesome laugh. Next week for instance, he will present Valerie Bergere, who is unquestionably one of the greatest favorites ever on the American stage and a comedienne of the first water. It is some years since she appeared in "His Japanese Wife," and this season so many requests have been made for it that Miss Bergere will again be seen in this daintiest and prettiest of Japanese comedies. For real laughter of a more boisterous kind, Clarence Wilbur and His Ten Funny Folks will be responsible in a comedy called "The New Scholar" which is one long succession of laughs. Marshall Montgomery, the ventriloquist who has accomplished more in his line than any other who has preceded him, is also on the bill, and other features will be F. Wilbur Mack and Nella Walker, in "The Girl and The Pearl," Sharkey, Geisler & Lewis, one of those lively rathskeller trios; Art Bowen, caricaturist and singer; and DeRenzo and LaDue, sensational trapezists.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

"M'lle Rosita" is the title of the new opera which Victor Herbert has composed for Fritzi Scheff and which will have its premier at the Shubert Theatre next Monday night. It is a modern piece with the scenes laid in Paris and Mme. Scheff appears as Rosita Boutonniere, daughter of Aristide Boutonniere, the florist. Beyond these simple facts the management vouchsafes little information regarding the plot of the opera. Victor Herbert and Fritzi scheff have long proven one of the "happiest combinations" of the modern stage. The composer has written practically all of the operettas in which the star has so successfully appeared and it is only natural therefore that when Mme. Scheff placed herself under the management of the

FRITZI SCHEFF,
In " Mlle. Rosita," Shubert Theatre, Boston.

Messrs. Shuberts last summer that they should immediately contract with the composer for a new starring vehicle. The book which was written by Joseph Herbert provided the star with just exactly the sort of role she desired and those who are conversant with the whole situation do not hesitate to say that never were the conditions more auspicious towards success. The most sincere compliment that the Shuberts culd possibly pay Mme. Scheff has been to surround her with a company which would certainly dim the lustre of a less brilliant star. It is very evident that they feel that this is one artiste who can hold her own in any company. There is also an augmented chorus of unusually pretty girls whose vocal endowments would entitle them to sing in grand opera. The production is said to be one of the most elaborate ever made by Messrs. Shubert.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The extraordinary success of "The End of the Bridge" has forced Mr. Craig to continue it for still another week at the Castle Square. This will be its fourth week, and the demand for seats show not the slightest sign of lessening. For an unknown play by an unknown playwright, this is remarkable, and its popularity is a great tribute to its intrinsic merits. The setting moreover, is of exceptional quality Mr. Craig's impersonation of the doctor ranking among his best efforts, Miss Young's Joan Mannering being delightful and Miss McDannal's Peter a triumph of realistic boyhood. None who wish to see "The End of the Bridge" should delay their purchase of seats, for the call for the final performance is bound to be very large.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Elizabeth A. Hall and John Hall to Jacob Hersey, dated April 22, 1874, recorded in Norfolk Deeds, libro 454 folio 5 and assigned by said Jacob Hersey to the Quincy Savings Bank, by assignment dated Jan. 14, 1875, recorded as above in libro 463 folio 72, for breach of the conditions contained in said mortgage deed, and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction, on the premises hereinafter described, on Wednesday, the Fifth day of April 1911, at two o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:—a lot of land in said Quincy with all the buildings thereon and bounded and described as follows:—Northeasterly by Sea street, three and one-half (3 1-2) rods. What Lenox Soap looks like.

A cake of Lenox Soap is about 4 inches long; 3 inches wide; and 1¾ inches thick.

The ends, top and bottom are rounded, so that the cake is easily held in one's hand.

The top side of the cake bears the word Lenox; the reverse side, the name of the makers, Procter & Gamble.

On the inside of the wrapper are suggestions as to the best way to use Lenox Soap, that are well worth reading.

BRIEFS

The torpedo boat destroyer Walke left the Fore River dock at 8 o'clock this morning for Provincetown for a builder's limbering up trial.

At the meeting of the Young Women's club, Saturday evening, a play entitled "The lover's strategem" will be presented by club members. The play is in six scenes and calls for six characters.

In place of the regular prayer meeting a missionary rally was held in the Calvary Baptist church Thursday evening. Rev. Walter Bullen of Japan gave a splendid address on missions with special reference to Japan and China.

Chief of Police Burrell returned from Baltimore Thursday, when he was called on account of the illness of his brother Walter Burrell. The chief says that his brother is doing well and hopes to be able to return to Quincy soon.

The dramatics to be given this evening by the Junior Laymen of First church promise to be exceedingly funny as the entire cast in both plays will be taken by the boys. Some of them, it is said make rather cute girls and all are artists in their parts. They will doubtless get out a large audience. The proceeds are to go for the work of Dr. Grenfel in Labrador.

Another of the whist parties in the series under the direction of Mrs. Calvin Fletcher was held Thursday afternoon, at her home on Garfield street. Souvenirs were won by Mrs. McQuarry, Mr. Lapham, Mrs. George Spooner, Mrs. L. Wales, Mrs. A. Pratt, Mrs. T. Newcomb and Mrs. S. E. Cashman. Consolation prizes went to Mrs. A. Morrison and Mrs. L. McIntosh. Eight tables were in play throughout the afternoon.

NEW SEA LINE TO MAINE

Means the Opening Up of a New Summer Resort Section

Boston, March 24.—State street and transportation circles are interested in a report that several well-known Boston financiers have planned a new steamship line from this city to Wiscasset, Me., with railroad connections with the Wiscasset and Waterville railroad, tapping a freight terminal now controlled by the Maine Central railroad.

A new summer resort section will be opened up by the new line, it is reported. The company has been organized, and will soon ask for incorporation. Its only ocean competitor will be the Eastern Steamship company. Lower freight rates are promised.

THE MAYOR'S BIRTHDAY

A Detailed Report of How He Observed Anniversary

Today is Mayor Shea's birthday which he is spending much the same as other days. Arising at 7.30 he had breakfast and an hour later was in the municipal barber shop, being touched up for the day.

Arriving at City Hall a little after 9 o'clock he opened and read his morning mail. There were some congratulatory notes, invitations to social gatherings, some kicks and other miscellaneous matter.

He then rung for his stenographer, dictated a few letters, lit a cigar and walked into the City Treasurer's office to see if the city funds were all right.

At 10 o'clock he asked the City Clerk the price of marriage certificates, and on being informed that one dollar was the charge, said he only had fifty cents and walked out.

MAYOR SHEA

At 10.30 met reporters and several citizens in the corridors and refused to be held up for cigars.

At 10.45 sent City Messenger Tirrell on secret mission.

At 11 o'clock said good morning to Contractor Crowley and disappeared in his office, then he went into private session with callers and did some telephoning.

Thus the Mayor passed the morning hours of his birthday.

This evening he will receive at City Hall at 8 o'clock. He will not pay a bachelor tax this year.

CLEAN JOURNALISM.

A meeting will be held in the interest of clean journalism at First church of Christ, Scientist, P. O. block, near depot, Braintree, on Monday, March 27, at 8 P. M. This meeting will be held under the auspices of First church of Christ, Scientist.

SCHOOLHOUSE INJUNCTION

None Yet Served on the City Treasurer

There were numerous inquires at City Hall this morning to learn if an injunction had been served on City Treasurer Curtis to prevent his paying any money on account of the Wollaston plans, but none had been served up to noon.

Mr. Crowley was about City Hall this morning, and asked what about that injunction, but he had nothing to say, only shaking his head in a knowing way. It is an open question whether the injunction will be served or not, but the general impression seems to be that nothing will ever be heard from it.

COUNTY AND SOUTH SHORE

Little Items of Interest in Towns About Quincy

At a town meeting in Hyde Park on Thursday evening it was voted unanimously to instruct the selectmen and water commissioners to make application to the metropolitan water and sewerage board to furnish the town with water for domestic and fire purposes and to introduce the new system into the town pipes at or near the corner of Hyde Park avenue and West River street.

Moderator Woodsum has appointed the following committee on new schoolhouse for Braintree. George O. Wales, Elmer E. Abercrombie, Herbert F. Kneeland, J. Parker Hayward, Hon. Albert E. Avery, F. Eugene Dyer and Paul Monaghan. This committee will report at some future town meeting.

Fire destroyed five summer cottages near the Weymouth Back river in Hingham on Thursday evening. The fire started in the cottage of J. B. Smith of Brockton, which was the least damaged ,and spread to those of F. E. Bolan of Boston, Frank N. Newell of Dorchester, Peter B. Bradley of Hingham and W. D. Lyons of Boston. None of the furniture was saved. Hingham and Weymouth fire apparatus responded.

By the will of Mrs. Anna P. Peabody of 47, Commonwealth avenue, Boston, which was filed in the Suffolk County probate office, Rev. Arthur Howe Pingree, of Norwood, is left $50,000. Mrs. Peabody died March 6, leaving as next of kin, David Pingree, a brother, of Salem, and Mrs. Anna M. Wheatland, a sister, also of Salem.

W. Y. C. CUPS PRESENTED

And Club Listens to a Talk on Japan

At the guest night of the Wollaston Yacht Club held at the club house on Thursday evening, a large number were present to hear the interesting lecture of James F. Paige of Dorchester on "Modern Japan."

Mr. Paige who is chief engineer at the Fore River shipyard, headed the corps that were sent to Japan to install turbines in the battleships of that nation. Many of the curios he picked up on his visit were on exhibition.

Regarding a war with Japan. Mr Paige said that while such a thing might be possible he regretted to think it so. There are many reasons for a belief to the contrary.

Most Japanese realize that the Americans are their best friends and that in trade relations this country has the most to offer. The first bale of cotton and the first sack of flour were sent from the United States into Japan.

It would mean isolation for the Japanese if they carried war to this country. They might land on the Pacific coast but what would they then do 6000 miles from home. There is nothing in the story that the Japanese have a naval base in Mexico.

Americans treat the Japanese with scant courtesy when they should not be discriminated against. While some large corporations are much in favor of employing the Japanese others wish to exclude him from this country.

This hurts the pride of the Japanese and leads to war talk among the lower classes and in the more sensational newspapers. President Taft shows good judgment and common sense in the manner in which he is handling this problem.

The attitude of the higher class of Japanese is shown by the fact that one Japanese minister when asked his opinion said he would resign if the Japanese went to war with the Americans.

Ambassador O'Brien does not see any reason for war, neither do the naval attaches. In fact the former is at the head ofa peace movement that has been organized in that country.

At the meeting cups were presented the captains of the club's winning boats of last season. The presentation speech was made by Commodore Croscup, and the awards were as follows:

Class A,—Elcanor, Capt. W. L. Jefferson.

Class B,—Aspinquid II, Capt. Ralph Crocker.

Dory class,—Elizabeth F., Capt. Leverett Brown.

Ocean race,—Thordis, Capt. Dawes.

As each award was made the recipient was called upon for a speech to which he responded to in a fitting manner.

W. C. T. U. MEETING.

The meeting of the Wollaston W. C. T. U., was held at the home of Mrs. Albert Teed, on Tuesday afternoon and was well attended. The president Mrs. Amos D. Albee, presided. After devotional service led by Mrs. Armstrong, the usual secretary's and treasurers reports were read.

It was reported that the unions of the state are to erect a drinking fountain in the yard of the Boston Seaman's Friend society's Bethel at Vineyard Haven, for the use of the many thousands of sailors who find home and welcome there, to which was contributed $2.00.

It was also voted to give $2.00 each to the Francis Willard Memorial fund, The "Union Signal" Philanthrophy fund, and the Boston Flower mission.

The leader of the afternoon was Mrs. Martha J. Barker, an dthe subject, "Anti-Narcotics," is one of the seven different branches under the department of education. The National Union realizes that the tobacco and drug habit is fast becoming a national vice, and that we must meet it and protect our most precious heritage—our boys and girls. The work is being carried on systematically, and much good accomplished.

PLOT TO RESTORE KING

Confession of Portuguese Army Officer Who Is Charged With Treason

Lisbon, March 24.—Sergeant Lispero of the Ninth regiment, who was arrested, charged with treason, has confessed that a great monarchist plot against the republic has been formed.

He says that the revolution was to have started in the first week of April. The First regiment of chasseurs is the only one wholly faithful to the republican government, according to Lispero.

ROUGHER AT HARVARD

Says Witness at Quincy Boxing Bouts

Several members of the City Council and several physicians were guests of the Quincy Rowing association Thursday evening at the boxing bouts at the Coliseum. There has been some adverse criticisms publicly expressed about these matches, during the past few days and the members of the City Council were present by invitation of the association that they might see for themselves. All expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the exhibition which was entirely free from the brutality with which it has been characterized.

Inspector McKay was present with a large squad of officers and his orders were to stop the bouts the minute they appeared to go beyond the limits of boxing. They had no occasion to interfere, however, for it was one of the cleanest exhibitions of its kind ever seen in Quincy. As one well known gentleman, who is said to be a member of the Watch and Ward Society, said, he had seen more roughness at Harvard in five minutes than he saw there all the evening.

There were four bouts in all, and the boxers seemed to be pretty evenly matched. The first bout which was between Benny Burke and Kid Burns, which was scheduled for six rounds, was stopped by the referee at the end of the second round, as it appeared that Burns was getting weak.

The second bout was one of six rounds, between Joe Egan of East Boston and young Kenney of Quincy. Kenney used up a lot of energy trying to get in a right swing and Egan got the decision.

Then came a ten-round bout between Tommy Flanagan and Frankie O'Connor. This was a very fast bout, and there was some clever boxing from start to finish. It ended in a draw.

The main bout of the evening was one of ten rounds between Johnny Glover of South Boston and Jeff Doherty of New Haven, and also ended in a draw. Doherty was the heavier of the two but Glover's nimbleness and long reach kept him out of the danger zone, and many blows aimed at him did not reach their mark. In the second round it looked as though Glover would not be able to finish the ten rounds, but soon got his second wind and came back strong. It was a very fast exhibition from start to finish, and it was evident to the spectators that it would be a draw.

The attendance at the exhibition was large and perfect order was maintained throughout. At the least sign of boisterlousness the referee would raise his hand and request that all applauding be done by clapping of the hands.

W. H. HOLMES DEAD.

B. M. Holmes of Chester street, Wollaston, has returned from Augusta, Maine, his former home, where he went to attend the funeral of his brother, William H. Holmes. The deceased has visited in this city where he has made many friends. At an early age Mr. Holmes went to sea, and his experience included many coasting voyages, a trip to the Arctic and five year's service in the United States Navy. Entering the infantry at the beginning of the Civil war, as did his brother, both received the rank of non commissioned officers and were wounded. The late Mr. Holmes has held many positions of responsibility and honor in public and private life and was a member of the G. A. R. and Sons of the American Revolution.

G. A. R. MAN DEAD.

Albert Nason, who has made his home of late with his son John A. Nason of 33 North Central avenue, Wollaston, died suddenly this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Gardner at Weymouth. For many years he was an officer at Deer island, but for some time had been in poor health and nearly lost his eyesight. He was a member of Gen. Sylvanus Thayer Post G. A. R. of Braintree, and had a good war record, having enlisted first as a Minute Man and then in the 3d Mass. cavalry. He was about 70 years of age.

TODAY'S COURT.

The continued case of Peter Delory, who it is alleged has been selling Jamaica ginger and who was raided two days ago, came up in court this morning, and was continued until March 31 for judgment.

NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE.

Miss Floretta Vining of Hull for several years editor and owner of several papers circulating in the South Shore towns of Weymouth, Hingham, Scituate, Cohasset and Hull, has decided to retire from the newspaper field. Several Republicans among them Mr. Tilden of Cohasset, Senator Barnes of Weymouth, and Lieut. Governor Frothingham are to buy the papers and make them strong Republican organs. Incidentally they are to pick up a few papers in Norfolk county that can be bought for little or nothing, which will doubtless prove a godsend to their present owners if not to the prospective owners.

BRIEFS

"A little tiff" and "A pair of burglars" will be presented by members of the Junior Laymen in First church chapel this evening. Mrs. Florence Sturtevant will sing. A candy sale will be held in connection with the entertainment.

A meeting of the Britishers association will be held in the association hall at the Y. M. C. A., this evening. After a short business session an entertainment will be given by local talent. All men of British birth are invited.

The funeral of Charles H. Richards was held Thursday afternoon from Christ church, and was largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. Richard E. Armstrong, after which the burial service of the Sons of St. George was held. The order represented at the services were Court John Adams, Foresters of America and the Granite Cutters' Union. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

City Would Have to Pay Large Sum to Metropolitan Board

Water will not flow from the Quincy reservoir at Braintree to the Fore River shipyard this year or next, and in the future the City Council may not rush orders of this kind through without more investigation.

Mayor Shea has learned from the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board that the city of Quincy would be charged with all waters taken from the reservoir just the same as though it was taken from the regular Metropolitan supply.

In other words the city of Quincy might be called upon to pay $5,000 to $10,000 annually to the State, for

Henry C. Long Talks on Dock and Belt Line Railroad

There was a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen at City Hall last evening to listen to the illustrated lecture by Henry C. Long, a well known Boston attorney on "Docks and belt line railways."

The lecture was scheduled for eight o'clock but was delayed that the members of the board of Trade might attend until eight-thirty. Then Mayor Shea introduced the speaker.

Mr. Long said that he desired the members of the Board of Trade should see the slides so he would talk against time for a few minutes. He talked for fifteen minutes, and then getting tired of waiting, went ahead with his lecture.

At the outset he said he desired to show some of the ways we handle commerce. In olden days men protected their homes by wars. In these days it was by commerce. Commerce is war without guns. Centers are contesting with each other and those that lose die. Centers are merely transfer stations in the line of commerce. When we get off that line we go down. The business of a city depends on the lines of travel that lead to their community.

Boston's greatest rival was New York, which has concentrated most of the lines of travel. Its business men are energetic and all cities that exhibit life attract life. In 1950 New York will be a city of twenty-five millions. New York is robbing us of every line of travel. Our money is controlled through Wall street. They dictate what the rates shall be.

REAL BOSTON ENDORSED

But Members Reserve Right to Dissent

The Quincy Board of Trade at a special meeting last evening endorsed the "Real Boston" bill, but the meeting was not largely attended and the action was not unanimous. President E. R. Stone was in the chair.

Henry L. Kincaide offered resolutions and spoke in favor of the bill which he read.

A question was raised whether a quorum was present, but it was found that eight constituted a quorum.

Charles C. Foster spoke against the resolutions.

Frank F. Prescott asked if a Metropolitan council would not check the completion of Metropolitan parkways in Quincy.

Mr. Kincaide doubted if it would.

Councilman Ericson asked if a council would increase or decrease expenses of the Metropolitan district.

Mr. Kincaide told of how things were railroaded through now.

J. A. Sedgwick saw no objection to endorsing resolutions.

W. H. Teasdale queried if it was not a movement toward annexation.

Mr. Ericson thought Census bureau now gave Boston a Metropolitan rating.

Councilman Richards saw some merit in "Real Boston," but yet there was a question, and doubted the expediency of endorsing.

Mr. Prescott moved to lay on table and adjourn that members might attend lecture at City Hall.

Some opposed and some favored.

Representative Thomas was asked to express his views. He said he did not wish to be quoted for or against as his committee would pass upon the bill. But he could not understand how a Metropolitan Council meeting once a month could pass on Metropolitan measures. Now these measures require daily meetings of the committee of the Legislature, and the committee is crowded. Mayors should not be asked to meet oftener than once a month, and could not afford to. Even if weekly they could not consider properly. He questioned how long the representation proposed in bill could exist,—one vote for Boston, one for Quincy and one for Dover. He questioned if Real Boston granite would be as good as Quincy granite.

The motion to lay on table was lost, and by a small majority the resolutions were adopted. Some of the members reserved the right to dissent from the action of the board.

TROLLEY EXPRESS IN OTHER PLACES CAUSES NO ADDED CONGESTION

Mayors, Presidents of Boards of Aldermen and Chairmen of Boards of Selectmen in Cities and Towns on Old Colony St. Ry. Co. Lines Say This Service Does Not Interfere With Other Traffic---Extracts from Their Letters on the Matter.

HARRY C. HOWARD, Mayor, Brockton:---"I have heard no complaints in regard to the injury of the passenger service by reason of this trolley express service."

ZIMRI THURBER, President Board of Aldermen, Brockton:---"It has never interfered with operation of passenger cars in any way as far as I know."

CHAS. S. ASHLEY, Mayor, New Bedford:---"I desire to state that I have never had a complaint relative to the same, and that the people of this city seem to be very well satisfied with the service. Neither have I observed or been cognizant of the fact that it has interfered with traffic."

W. S. WOODS, Mayor, Taunton:---"I hear of no complaints in regard to passenger service which would seem to indicate that the Trolley Express in no material way interferes with proper passenger service on your railroad."

JAMES H. KAY, President Board of Aldermen, Fall River:---"I think it a very good thing and as far as I know there are no bad features, and it does not interfere with the passenger traffic."

PATRICK J. BOYLE, Mayor, Newport, R. I.---"I have no complaints to that effect, nor have I from observation noticed any interruption of your passenger service on that account."

GEORGE B. LEONARD, Chairman Board of Selectmen, Raynham:—"Having the time and opportunity afforded by several years of operation, the undersigned, in expressing the opinion of the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Raynham, can unhesitatingly say that the so-called Trolley Express service of the Old Colony St. Ry. Co., has been of decided advantage to this community."—"And moreover at no time during this period has the operation of the freight cars interfered in the least with the passenger service so far as our knowledge and belief goes."

WILLIAM M. HASKINS, Chairman Board of Selectmen, Middleboro:—"Although running over the same rails as the passenger cars, in my observation it causes no inconvenience or delay to the passenger service, and I believe has made a place for itself which could not well be dispensed with without great inconvenience to its patrons."

HARRISON D. PACKARD, Chairman Board of Selectmen, Bridgewater:—"I have never heard any complaint that it has in any way interfered with the regular passenger service."

FRED A. SHOCKLEY, Chairman Board of Selectmen, Lakeville:—"So far as its operation is concerned, it has in no way interfered with the regular passenger traffic, and it has been used with very gratifying results by a large portion of our summer residents for whom it is very much more convenient than any other method of express transportation to which they have access."

J. F. KENNEALLY, Chairman Board of Selectmen, Whitman:—"Since the Old Colony Street Railway Company has been handling freight in connection with the transportation of passengers, into and through our town, I am pleased to say that there has been no interference with the passenger service."

GEORGE H. CARPENTER, Chairman Board of Selectmen, Seekonk:—"It has not interfered with the regular passenger service, and would be a serious loss to many of the residents of this town near the lines if the service was removed."

CHARLES A. TOWNSEND, Chairman Board of Selectmen, Rockland:—"The people are well pleased. I cannot see that it interferes with the passenger traffic in the least."

FRANKLIN S. SIMMONS, Chairman Board of Selectmen, Somerset:—"I have never known the express cars to interfere with the passenger service.

W. L. JONES, Chairman Board of Selectmen, Abington:—"We think that the larger number of our merchants regard it as favorable to the transaction of their business, and in no respect conflicting with the passenger traffic or accommodations."

WHIST AT WOLLASTON.

A party of over fifty attended the evening of whist held under the auspices of the Wollaston Unitarian church-Helpers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Rohn on Winthrop avenue, Friday evening. Mrs. A. H. Farnham held the highest score at the close of the evening, twelve tables being in play. She was the recipient of a potted plant. Ice cream, cake and candy were served and the pleasant evening ended with songs around the piano at which Mrs. E. Tyler Brigham presided. Composing the committee in charge were: Mrs. A. W. Rohn, Mrs. William E. Rowe, Mrs. Edmund Taylor, Mrs. Gorham Nickerson, Mrs. H. A. Boynton.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

When Sherman made his now famous remark about war he had no idea that Mexico could make joy ride out of it.

The New England preacher who made the astounding statement that blush is lost to modern womankind is decidedly in the wrong. Not lost, only covered.

When that theatrical company at the Hollis Street theatre ran up against Boston's Mayor the other night they thought "The Easiest Way" was to go back to New York.

One cannot help laughing a bit over the legislators of Washington, that state which has so recently granted equal suffrage. Evidently these legislators desire above all things to make the ladies happy, for they have not only granted them the right to vote, but finding the ladies object to performing jury service, (most men do, don't they?) they have exempted them from this. It seems that the ladies were of divided minds: Some wished to serve on juries, regarding it as patriotic duty, others did not. So these gallant legislators,—all things to all women,—hit upon a plan to satisfy everybody, those who did, and those who didn't. Both Houses passed a bill that any woman who wanted to perform jury duty might do so, and any woman who did not want to, needn't. Consistency, thou art a jewel! Who shall say after this that chivalry is dead in the heart of man?

We trust if the Board of Trade is really anxious to enlist support and secure the cooperation of the business associations and the city government that it will be very careful in the selection of its dates ,especially for special meetings. It was not important that the Board of Trade should go on record either favorable or otherwise on the "Real Boston" bill before the State House hearing. It was far more important that the members of the Board of Trade should cooperate with Mayor Shea in his efforts to establish a municipal dock in Quincy, and hear every word of the lecture of Henry C. Long at City Hall. The Board should have notified all its members of the lecture and urged their attendance. Other hearings at the State House next week are of more importance to Quincy than that on the "Real Boston" bill; these are the extension of the Quincy Shore reservation to Hancock street via. Merrymount; the completion of the Furnace Brook parkway; and a bathhouse at Quincy Shore reservation, all to be heard next Friday. The Board of Trade has taken no action on these improvements.

It is well that Representative Thomas was at the Board of Trade meeting, and saw just how the resolutions in favor of "Real Boston" were put through. He is a member of the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs which will pass upon the bill. No opportunity was offered to debate the bill; in fact the meeting was not called for that purpose. The call for the meeting read "to endorse the Real Boston bill" not to take action thereon. The action of the meeting was far from unanimous, and the number of supporters could be counted upon one's fingers. When Mayors of Newton, Waltham, Medford and other cities, and the Selectmen of several towns, actively oppose the Real Boston bill, and very few Mayors really favor, the Quincy Board of Trade should not take hasty action. Opponents of the bill claim that Quincy would get fewer improvements under a Metropolitan Council than they now secure through the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs of the Legislature. They claim that the Mayors of the cities have not the time to consider all the Metropolitan improvements which come before the Legislature, or to act upon them intelligently without hearing the arguments of the petitioners.

TWO IMPORTANT HEARINGS

Appropriations Much Desired to Complete Improvements

Three hearings of importance to Quincy will be held at the State house next Friday morning, both being scheduled at 10.30 before the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs, of which Representative Thomas is a member.

One is House bill No. 929 for the completion of Furnace Brook parkway and another for completion of Quincy Shore reservation between Hancock street and the Quincy Shore reservation in the rear of the National Sailors Home. These are improvements which Quincy and vicinity have desired for some time that the people may enjoy the benefits of the Blue Hills reservation and the Quincy Shore reservation now unknown to many because these parkways come to a dead end and lead to nowhere. The North Shore and Middlesex towns have to date received the lion's share of the Metropolitan parkway appropriations.

The other hearing is on House bill No. 1113 for a public bath-house on Quincy Shore reservation. If the State had not taken possession of this beach some years ago, the city would undoubtedly have established a public bath-house there, but now the Metropolitan Park Commissioners, would not permit it so that it is up to them to provide a bath-house. Representatives Langelier and Thomas can be depended upon to use their best endeavors to secure both of these appropriations, but Quincy should be largely represented at the hearings next Friday.

ADVERTISING SOCIAL.

A large gathering of the Epworth Leaguers of the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church and their friends spent a very enjoyable evening at the church Thursday evening. The entertainment was in the form of an Advertising social and prizes were offered for the one guessing the largest number of the names of the advertisers or the things advertised, and a "booby" prize for the one guessing the smallest number. The first prize was won by Mrs. Maude Andrews, the church deaconess and the "booby" prize was won by Miss Ella Axburgh. The different scenes were as follows:

Song medley representing sun flowers, Marion Green, Lucia Cheney, Mary Beal, Edna Smith, Alena Kilpatrick, Emily Keeler, Alice Beal and Agnes Kinneburgh.

Cream of Wheat, Lois Parlee.

Toasted Corn Flakes, Alice Beal.

Pork and Beans, Mary Beal, Emily Keeler, Edna Smith and Marion Green.

Uneda Biscuit, George Kilpatrick.

Welch's Grape Juice, Emily Keeler and Robert Kinneburgh.

Tooth Brush drill, Adrian Parker, George Kilpatrick, Ruth Parker and Eva Kilpatrick.

Bon Ami, Lucia Cheney.

Domino Sugar, Georgia Cheney.

Japanese rose soap, Mary Beal and Alena Kilpatrick.

Van Camp's pork and beans, Mary Beal, Robert Kinneburgh, Adrian Parker, Ruth Parker, Emily Keeler.

Kodak, Charlotte Fox and Eva Kilpatrick.

Gold Medal flour, Alena Kilpatrick.

Peter's Chocolate, Susie Moffat.

Baker's Cocoa, Emily Keeler, Robert Kinneburgh, Marion Green and Harry Spinney.

Another song by the Sun Flowers, "Swanee River."

The program Committee were Mrs. Theodore Parlee, Mabel Cheney and Mary Beal, and deserve great praise for the well arranged program presented. The price of admission was a cent for every foot tall and a cent for every inch over. The recepits at the door were nearly six dollars. Ice cream and cake were sold after the entertainment. After refreshments the young people gathered around the piano and enjoyed a few familiar songs together.

SAVINGS BANK LIFE INSURANCE.

The Brandeis plan for furnishing insurance at cost to the people of Massachusetts appears to be making steady progress. At the end of the financial year—October 31, 1910, the amount of insurance in force was $1,367,363, representing 3,318 policies. As a result of the educational work carried on by the Massachusetts Savings Insurance League, the net gain in the last four months, ending February 28, 1911, has been $254,985 and the number of policies in force has been increased by 714.

BRIEFS

A hearing will be given at the State House next Monday at 10.30 on the "Real Boston" bill, by the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs in room 240.

The regular work is progressing at the Baker Yacht basin, but owing to the extreme cold weather none of the boats are fitting out yet.

Mr. Reilly, the Quincy Point grocer has found a new way of getting rid of his coppers. When the landlord came round for the rent between 2,000 and 3,000 were dumped out on the counter and the landlord was allowed to count out the right amount.

Miss Edna Spry, well known in Boston musical circles, is to sing at the "Spring Revue" of the Men's club Wednesday evening, April 26, at Music hall.

John Prince of the State board of Education visited the Quincy school on Tuesday.

Miss Janette Linscott of Lincoln avenue who is ill with scarlet fever was taken to the Homoeopathic hospital this week. Many friends extend best wishes for a speedy recovery.

VESPER SERVICE.

Following is the service for the quarter of five vesper service at the Wollaston M. E. church on Sunday:

Organ Prelude—Hymne Cleste Faulkes
Anthem, Spirit of God Humason
Prayer
Solo, There's a Beautiful Land on High Taylor
Responsive Reading, I will bless the Lord at all times
Anthem, Cast me not away Belliars
Offertory, Intermezzo in E Major
Solo, O Divine Redeemer Gounod
Sermonette—Subject: Is Life Worth Living
Anthem, They that Sow in Tears Gaul
Hymn, Jesus calls me 545 Hymnal
Benediction

Miss Ethel Hague Rea of Dorchester will be the soloist and Mrs. F. G. Bennett will be the organist.

ENTERTAINED PUPILS.

Wednesday afternoon, the pupils of the Mather school, Dorchester, had the pleasure of being entertained in the school hall by Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis of Quincy and Miss Ella Chamberlain, the whistling soloist. The school numbers about fifteen hundred children and they went into the hall in two divisions, a different program being rendered for each. Every number was pleasing, but Mrs. Davis, with her fine selections well suited to young people, and rendered in her inimitable manner quite won the hearts of the children, and did her full share in making the afternoon one of pleasure and delight for all.

GET THE FACTS.

Editor Daily Ledger:

Quite a few citizens called on Mayor Shea on Thursday to protest against the boxing exhibition announced for that evening. Mayor Shea instructed Lieut. McKay to attend and see that the bouts were kept within the confines of scientific boxing. The letter of Mr. Chase, published in the Daily Ledger, a few days ago, has aroused considerable feeling as it intimated that none but ruffians, and the worst element of society attended these exhibitions. As a matter of fact, many prominent professional and business men have been in attendance at all of the exhibitions, and it has been generally remarked by all that a more orderly or quiet crowd would be hard to find.

Perfect order is maintained, and after the exhibition the crowd quietly disburses and disappears.

Much of the objection to those exhibitions apparently comes from from those who have never seen them. Take Thursday night, for instance, there were quite a few in attendance who went for the express purpose of seeing for themselves and all said they were surprised at the orderliness of the large crowd in attendance, and that they saw nothing objectionable. There was also present Thursday night a secretary of the Watch and Ward society from Lynn, who was accompanied by a special officer from that city, and they found nothing to criticise.

Some of the worst black eyes that Quincy has had, have been from articles published in a Boston morning paper that were said to have been furnished by a young man who is now posing in public print as a guardian of the good morals of the city by characterizing the boxing matches as "prize fights."

It seems unfair for any man, without possessing any knowledge of the facts, to characterize people who attend these exhibitions as the worst element of the city.

As for Constable Hultman, it is apparent some one is using him for a catspaw to pull chestnuts out of the fire.

At the daintily appointed dining table Mrs. Ogden poured tea and Miss Hull served lemonade, the Misses Edwards, nieces of Mrs. Sturtevant assisting in the hospitality.

AUTO TRUCK WRECKED.

An auto truck heavily loaded with lunmber, owned by Gale the Neponset lumber man, was badly wrecked Friday afternoon on Adams street at the foot of Rice's hill. The truck was coming down the hill, and when near the turn at the foot of the hill the driver evidently lost control of the car, for it shot across the street striking a lamp post, which it broke off short. The truck then bounded to one side and brought up with a bang against the stone wall. Several blocks of granite in the wall, were knocked out of place, and the engine and front part of the truck badly smashed. The driver escaped uninjured.

TWO SLIGHT FIRES.

The alarm from Box 138 at 8.05 this morning was for a slight fire on the roof of a house on Roberts street occupied by Donato Marini. The fire started from sparks from a chimney and did but little damage.

The alarm from Box 153 at 10.08 was for a grass fire on the west side of Farrington street near the old golf links. The fire burnt over quite a space and was getting dangerously near some houses. The women folks became frightened and the alarm was sounded.

Quncy women who heard Mrs. Ellen H. Richards lecture recently at Bethany chapel in the Mothers' association series regret to learn of her illness at her home in Jamaica Plain.

TWO PLAYS PRESENTED

Parts Well Taken by Members of Junior Laymen

The dramatic entertainment given under the auspices of the Junior Laymen in Unitarian chapel last evening called forth a large audience. Two one-act farces were given, the first "A Little Tiff" calling for six characters, and the second "A Pair of Burglars" with a cast of four.

In the opening sketch, Edith Burton, a young woman of ideas, and Teddy Ronalds, to whom she is engaged, have a falling out, and Teddy wishing to get back into her good graces plans an exploit in which he is to play the herioc. His farmer and gardener are told to go into the sitting room of the Burton home and create an awful disturbance, as if they were robbers. At an opportune moment Teddy is to arrive and heroically drive them away The working out of the plan starts all right but the appearance of Dusty Rhodes, a tramp, and his capture by the farmer and gardener upset Teddy's calculations . Finally things are set at rights, and Edith takes back the ring which she had returned after the little tiff.

Bruce Saville made a very attractive Edith Burton, and showed himself well acquainted with the mannerisms of the fair sex. Maurice Blackmur as Nancy, the maid, did very well, and looked the part to perfection. The male parts were well taken also, especially that of Dusty Rhodes impersonated by Jack Pfaffmann. Jack was so disguised as to look the part to perfection and his poetical speech and grotesque actions brought down the house. Dick Crane made a good Irishman, and Donald Crane as Gubbins, the farmer, imitated the twang of voice and the agrarian method of locomotion very successfully.

The cast:

Edith Burton, with ideas concerning a woman's ability — Bruce Saville
Nancy, her maid — Maurice Blackmur
Teddy Ronalds, engaged to Edith — Henry Huston
Finnegan, Ronalds' farmer — Richard Crane
Gubbins, Ronalds' gardener — Donald Crane
Dusty Rhodes, a tramp — Jack Pfaffmann

The plot of the second play hinged upon an old sugar bowl, an heirloom, which a cranky father of two marriagable daughters was holding between them and matrimony on some pretext or other. Herbert Johnson and "Bill" Edwards as Jack Nife and Billy Case in their dual personalities of gentlemen and burglars, acted with ease and ability. The Crane brothers made fetching young ladies and received the lavish affections of their ardent wooers with a naturalness that belied unfamiliarity. The cast:

Jack Nife, Vera's sweetheart — Herbert Johnson
Billy Case, reporter on the Telespatch — William Edwards
Vera St. Clair, the first baby — Donald Crane
May St. Clair, "Scoopy," the baby — Richard Crane

Between the plays two solos, "How many a lonely caravan" and "Just a wearyin' for you," were sung by Miss Catherine Saville with Miss Ruth Penniman as accompanist. Both songs received much well earned applause.

During the first part of the evening there was a sale of home made candy but by the time the second play was started all had been sold.

Bill Edwards was chairman of the candy committee, Paul Blackmur acted as stage manager, Kenneth Edwards had charge of the tickets. Frederick M. Atwood, Allan Miller, Frederic Schenkelberger and Albert Parker were the ushers. Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis, who coached the casts of the two plays was presented with a five-pound box of candy as a token of appreciation of her services. The evening was very enjoyably spent by the audience and the entertainment was altogether a success.

SPEED OF 30 KNOTS.

The new United States torpedo boat destroyer Walke, constructed at the yards of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company at Quincy, was given her first trial trip yesterday, and acquitted herself well. Despite heavy seas, the destroyer attained a speed a slight degree under 30 knots an hour. After covering nearly 150 miles the vessel returned to the yards late in the afternoon. The government test will be made later.

Little Items of Interest in Towns About Quincy

The Committee on Metropolitan Affairs will give a hearing April 5 on the bill for a boulevard from Mattapan Square to Pauls bridge, Milton.

A sum of $4,227.08 reverted to the town treasury of Milton from the 1910 appropriations. This is over $2,000 less than the surplus in 1909.

Mrs. George C. Beals of Braintree was matron at the third annual dance of the Cushing academy club held in Court hall, Boston, last evening.

The merchants of Rockland have decided to have a co-operation day each week. Wednesday has been chosen as the special bargain day when each merchant will offer some specialty at a reduced price.

A firemen's muster will be held in Highland park on Patriots' day, April 19. The Defender of East Weymouth and the Active of East Braintree are among the prominent entries.

At the annual meeting of the Third Universalist church at North Weymouth it was voted to keep the present pastor, Rev. Rufus H. Dix, at an increase in salary.

Michael E. Stewart, a young man 27 years of age was appointed chief of police in Rockland at a meeting of the board of selectmen on Thursday. Stewart is probably the youngest chief in the state.

Norwood children led the country in the amount of deposits in the Postal Savings bank.

GRANITE AGREEMENT.

The strike of the granite cutters at Cape Ann has been settled and the men will return to work next week. The agreement calls for 40 5-8 cents per hour for eight hours and a Saturday half holiday to go into effect in 1913. The agreement is to run for five years.

CONTRACT

which it would receive from the Fore River shipyard but $1,000 annually. The city would not only lose the revenue of $4,000 to $5,000 which it now receives for water sold to the shipyard, but an additional $5,000 or $10,000.

The contract, fortunately, is not in force, but is in the hands of the Mayor. Under the circumstances the Fore River Shipbuilding Company was not anxious to press the fulfilment of the contract and have acted very honorably in the matter. Under the contract they would have got all the water they wanted at an annual cost of about $1,500, but they did not want to put the city into a hole.

Mayor Shea tells the Daily Ledger that he does not consider the ruling of the Metropolitan Water Board to be good law, but for the present it must stand.

Because of the new light the proposed contract is out of the question, but the Daily Ledger contends that the city would have been a big loser even if it was not called upon to pay anything to the State, so it is very fortunate the contract becomes null and void.

The vote authorizing the Mayor to execute the contract with the Fore River Company was passed Feb. 20 by the following vote:

YES—Bailey, Bolster, Boyd, Branch, Duffy, Ericson, Forde, Gardner, Histen, Leslie, Parlee, Ross, Sandberg, Studley—14.

NO—Campbell, Craig, Jenkins, Nowland, Richards, Smith, Sodergren—7.

ABSENT—Cherrington—1.

NOT VOTING—President Bryant.

"If It's a Ralston It's Correct"

It is knowledge rather than "knack" which enables a man to dress both correctly and becomingly.

No part of a man's apparel changes in style more often or more radically than does his shoes. That is the reason why men who care to be correctly shod and who are particular about their personal appearance insist on getting "Ralston Authority Styles." We carry a sufficient variety of correct styles to enable you to express your own individuality in your selection.

The new shoe fashions are almost always first shown in Ralston Shoes. Come in and see the season's latest.

BRIEFS

At the weekly Lenten service at the Wollaston Unitarian church on Wednesday evening Rev. C. E. Park of First church, Boston, will preach. Miss Ernestine M. Litchfield will be the soloist.

The boys of Quincy Point are hoping to see the baseball diamond at the Ward Two playground put in good shape early this spring. The grammar school league games start on April 19 and the boys will want things in good shape for the opening contest.

Miss Nettie Cassidy of Edwin street who has held the position of glove buyer with the Gilchrist Co., for several years, has severed connection with that firm and accepted a similar position at Chandlers.

The monthly whist contests of John Adams Council Royal Arcanum of Wollaston have developed such enthusiasm, that the entertainment committee has made preparations for a ladies' night and whist party.

"Just for Fun" a three act farce is to be presented by the Lawrance union of Dorchester on Friday evening in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church under the auspices of the Y. P. R. U. and promises to attract a large audience.

The Woman's Missionary society of Bethany church is arranging for its annual supper on Thursday evening to be followed by a stereopticon lecture.

M. T. Holbrook is to address the Galahad club of Christ church at its meeting on Thursday night.

The choir boys of the Congregational church held a successful concert in the church vestry Wednesday night.

The Rt. Rev. William Lawrence will preach and administer confirmation at St. Chrysostom's church next Thursday evening. The Bishop and Mrs. Lawrence arrived home Thursday after a trip of several weeks to the Pacific coast.

The Women's Guild of Christ church has decided to have a fair next fall, materials for which have been bought and members are already at work making up the articles, bringing considerable enthusiasm to the meetings.

The Pilgrims are talking over baseball prospects for the coming season and expect to have a team. During the spring vacation they will take "hikes" about the country. One of them will be to Sea View where their summer camp was last year.

The regular weekly prayer meetings the Memorial Congregational church will be held Thursday nights instead of Friday as before.

The Wollaston lodge A. B. S. again has cause for rejoicing, seven candidates being initiated at their meeting Thursday evening. It was voted to hold a supper and entertainment at their next meeting April 20 for members and their friends, these are always enjoyable affairs. After the business session refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served and a pleasant social hour enjoyed.

Wallace Bryant the artist is having an exhibition of oil paintings at the gallery of Doll & Richards, Newbury street, Boston. There is also a group of miniatures by Mrs. Bryant which will interest the artistic.

Rev. William E. Gardner former rector of Christ church is to address St. Margarets Guild of that church on Friday evening. It is also hoped that Mrs. Gardner will be able to come also so that the meeting will be doubly pleasurable. Members may bring guests.

William Ellis is building a new house of the bungalow order on the Boulevard.

Miss Lucy Coolidge of Farrington street was hurriedly taken to the City Hospital Thursday afternoon. Miss Coolidge fell down a flight of stairs at the High school early in the week which it is feared caused appendicitis.

GREAT POSSIBILITIES

North of us we have the coming country, Canada. It is developing fast and must have a port somewhere. The Grand Trunk, Canadian Northern and Canadian Pacific railroads are extending their lines, and when completed its commerce will be six times what it is today. New York is making every effort to get that commerce. To divert it from Boston. In five years there will be two great cities. New York and its rival, which will be either Boston or Providence.

The Canadians want to come here but we do not lift our hands to help them. Boston can equal and pass New York in 15 years if it will wake up. On April 3, there is to be a hearing at the State House on a bill to put our whole harbor in the hands of a commission for development.

He then showed a map of the railroads of the United States and of the Boston & Maine and showed how extensions were being made, so that everything should be diverted to New York. The Canadian lines would naturally lead to Boston, and they want to make Boston their port, but cannot because there is no port. There is not a crane or derrick in Boston harbor. The railroads are gorged with commerce, and Boston can be the best port on earth if it will only wake up.

Your future if well worked out in Quincy is assured. The Fore River shipyard is a nucleus. When the Erie and Taunton canals are done you can land iron ore seventy cents cheaper per ton here than it can be landed in Pittsburg. You can also get coal as cheap as Pittsburg. Quincy ought to be one of the iron centres of the world as you have deep water, and land for the docks and the money.

Today New York controls the rates, and is the receiving centre. Boston has nothing to say in the world's commerce. We have given our railroads away to our enemies. We have put all the power in their hands, and then wonder why we do not grow. Millions are being expended for development in New York, while all we get is hot air. All lines of railroads are being built so as to go direct through to New York without disturbing Boston while we are studying sociology and Esperanto. We are fools to grant any request the New Haven road asks.

He then presented a number of views of Canada showing what it was doing to develop its ports, and views showing it vast resources. Views of immense farms miles from any railroad. He also showed views of the docks in Canada and the cranes loading and unloading vessels. Boston is unable to unload a block of granite weighing ten tons in its harbor without the use of dredging machines. There is not a thing in Boston harbor to unload a vessel with.

Views were then shown of some of the large docks of the world and the immense cranes operated by electricity that unloaded vessels and placed merchandise aboard of cars or in storehouses or other vessels without its being touched by human hand. Also views of dock equipment. All of these things were lacking in Boston.

Steamship lines were constantly looking for dockage in Boston but were unable to get it.

Views were then shown of belt line railroads that other countries and cities west of New York were building. He also showed the development contemplated at South Boston. His last picture was one of a proposed belt line about Boston covering a radius of fifteen miles from the State House, which should lead to a mammoth dock in Hingham harbor. On this railroad industries could be located and connect with all railroads.

He also spoke of the possibilities for the development of Boston harbor and the water front at Quincy and closed by urging all to attend the hearing at the State House April 3.

The stereopticon was operated by Abbot Johnson.

AN ASSURED SUCCESS.

The nest will be instituted on the 30th of April at 2 P. M. in Alpha and Union Halls.

It is the desire of all concerned in the Quincy Nest to make it one of the leading fraternal organizations of the city, and in view of this fact, we have been especially careful as to the people admitted. What names we now have are those that have been secured through recommendations or introductions, and a committee will be appointed to look over all applications carefully and all "undesirable" will be rejected, thus avoiding a "weeding" out process in the future and thereby securely establishng our Quincy Nest.

The number of applications received to date far exceeds the expectations of the organizer. Blank applications have been placed in the hands of the committee, a list of which is given in another column. Other names will be added to this committee at a later date.

ALBERT MERRITT.

Albert Merritt, a former Republican State Senator from Camden, N. J., and High Priest and Prophet of Kismet Temple Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of Brooklyn, N. Y., died March 3 at his residence, 434 Kosciusko street Brooklyn, his death being caused by heart trouble, after an illness of three weeks. Funeral services were held March 5, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Robert Rogers, rector of the P. E. Church of the Good Shepherd. The interment was at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

The deceased who was born in Quincy, Mass., January 1, 1844, was the son of Jonathan and Caroline Merritt. He served his country during the war of the Rebellion and during the entire war was paymaster of the Federal Squadron on the Mississippi river. He came to Brooklyn twenty-five years ago, and had been engaged in the wholesale burlap business. He also acted as confidential broker for the Arbuckles and other large handlers of coffees and sugars. He was Past Master of Bedford Lodge, F. and A. M., and Past Grand Sword Bearer of the Grand lodge of New York State. He was also a member of Orient Chapter R. A. M., Clinton Commandery Knights Templar, the Invincible club and the Aurora Grata club.

He is survived by a daughter Ethel M., wife of Dr. Herbert S. Dixon, and a son, Dr. Frank D. Merritt, of Auburn, Washington and two sisters Mrs. Helen F. Thomas of Malden and Miss Katie F. Merritt of School street, Quincy.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

The art exhibit at the Thomas Crane Public Library until April 10 consists of 60 photographs of old Hollandish interiors from the 14th to the 18th century. From the best examples of this period are shown in their quaint picturesqueness the timbered ceilings and furnishings, the huge fireplaces richly decorated, the curious hangings, etc., of these stately old interiors.

The circulation of the main hall for the short month of February was 5,782 an increase of over 200 from that of February, 1909. The West Quincy reading room circulated 1,625 volumes an average of over 70 per day.

A beginning towards a permanent collection at West Quincy has been made by the gift of 83 volumes from Miss Wainwright. These include a set of Scott's novels, a number of excellent later novels by standard authors, some books of travel, a few biographies, Taine's English literature, poetry, some books on the fine arts, and a half dozen in the French language. At the beginning of the year the deposit was increased from 500 to 600 volumes, thus making the total number of books available for use there 787.

SUNNY MONDAY

Sunny Monday is an ideal soap for washing flannels, woolens and finer fabrics, because it contains no rosin and there is absolutely no danger of shrinking; it leaves them as soft and fleecy as they were originally.

In addition to this, Sunny Monday Laundry Soap contains a marvelous dirt-starter which saves time and rubbing, as well as wear and tear on clothes.

THE PROBLEM
Of combining two pairs of glasses in one has been solved in Kryptok Bifocal lenses.
THE SOLUTION
Does away with the objectionable "line" between the distance and the near vision parts of the lens.
THE ADVANTAGE
No separate pasted-on segment to become cloudy and scale off.
Looks like a single lens, is thin and light.
Can be worn with comfort when the ordinary bi-focal cannot be tolerated.
We have worked out a complete and result-giving system of testing the eyes for glasses.

CRYING FOR HELP

Lots of it in Quincy But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys cry for help.

Not an organ in the whole body so delicately constructed.

Not one so important to health.

The kidneys are the filters of the blood.

When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous.

There can be no health where there is poisoned blood.

Backache is one of the first indications of kidney trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills are what is wanted.

Are just what overworked kidneys need.

They strengthen and invigorate the kidneys; help them to do their work; never fail to cure any case of kidney disease.

Read the proof from a Quincy citizen.

Mrs. E. Burke, 143 Quincy street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills an excellent remedy for kidney trouble. I used them and the results were of the most satisfactory nature. Doan's Kidney Pills were procured at the Cox Drug Store and have my highest recommendation."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

McVickar defies Senator Blount to nominate Evan. Patricia and her geologist father arrive at the Sagebrush capital.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics, but finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Evan has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's mixing in politics. His father pulls wires unknown to him to have him invited to speak in a distant mining town. Hathaway, who has been trying to do business with the road and with Senator Blount, is to have a talk with Mrs. Blount.

Hathaway wants a rebate from the road in consideration of political favors. He is referred to Evan and is advised by Mrs. Blount to put Professor Anners' name on his list of stockholders.

Evan's interview with Hathaway reveals the road's misdoings. In a rage he resigns. Gantry holds up the resignation. Evan insists that it go through to McVickar.

Patricia refuses Evan again. She advises him to stick to the road and work for clean politics. He withdraws his resignation and is sent into the field on a speaking tour.

Notwithstanding the hard work and the hard traveling he was doing he did not let the missionary effort outweigh the sturdier purpose, which was to hold his principals rigidly up to the mirror of a vigilant watchfulness.

Arguing that the opposition newspapers would be quick to seize upon any charge of corruption involving the railroad company, he read them faithfully. As yet there had been nothing more than spiteful innuendoes and a raking over of past misdeeds, though many of the editors were charging a secret alliance between his father and McVickar and warning their readers to look out for startling developments later on.

Not content with mere watchfulness, however, Blount got his finger upon the pulse of occasions whenever he could. On his brief stopovers in the capital he kept his eyes and ears open for the earliest hint of any charge of chicanery, and, though he was unable to get hold of Gantry personally, he kept up a steady fire of letters and telegrams, all pointing to the same end—absolute and utter good faith and the upholding of his hands in the public plea for a square deal.

To these the traffic manager replied guardedly, but optimistically. The management was delighted with the good work done and doing by the new division counsel; public opinion was slowly but surely changing; it would be a landslide election, and Blount could take credit for his due.

In all this Blount did not fail to remark that there was never anything said about the Hathaway bargain, and the omission made him the more watchful. A little investigation unearthed other and similar bargains made in the past.

For example, there was a practical and very effective irrigation trust, an alliance, offensive and defensive, of the big irrigation companies. Controlling the water under proprietary rights, as most of them did, these companies could influence many votes among the beneficiary farmers. Land deals in the past with the railroad company had been the basis for corruption here, and, with the electric power people, preferential freight rates had been traded for the votes of employees, as with Hathaway.

Some of these special rates were still in force, as the quiet investigation on the ground developed, whereupon Blount's communications to Gantry took on a more emphatic tone. The tariffs must be revised and one of two things must be done—either the preferential of the favored corporations must be withdrawn or the public rates must be leveled down to meet the specials.

It was on a second speechmaking visit to Ophir that Blount had his first face to face chance at the traffic manager after the opening of the correspondence battle.

A meeting of the Mine Owners' association, moving for a readjustment of the classification on copper matte and bullion at a time when the railroad company might be supposed to be on the giving hand, took Gantry to the great camp in the Carnadine hills, and the first man he met at the hotel was the new dictator of policies for the Transcontinental company.

"Made a mistake, didn't you, Dick, coming while I was here?" said the reformer, with a very lifelike replica of his father's grim smile. "I suppose you've got an immediate engagement to go somewhere or see somebody."

"No; I wish I had," was the hearty admission. "Say, Evan, you are getting to be a perfect nightmare with your letters and telegrams. You've got me so I'm afraid to open my desk. Why can't you let well enough alone? You haven't heard of any skulduddery lately, have you?"

"Nothing new, no. But a housecleaning is supposed to take down all the old cobwebs. Those preferentials for United Electric and the Siwash Land and Improvement"—

"Heavens and earth! You call yourself a lawyer, and yet you ask us to set aside promises that are or ought to be as binding as so many written contracts, with penal attachments! It can't be done, Evan—that's all there is to it; it can't be done."

"'Can't' goes out of the window when 'must' comes in at the door, Dick. I've been digging into the records, and I have evidence enough to turn the people of this state into a mob that will tear up your tracks if I should publish it."

"But I tell you we can't withdraw the specials, you wild eyed fanatic!"

"All right; then level down the public's rate to fit them. And do it quickly, Dick. The time is growing fearfully short, and my patience isn't what it used to be."

"Anybody would think you owned the Transcontinental, lock, stock and barrel! Where under heaven did you get your nerve, Evan? Blest if I don't believe you could outbluff the old—er—your father himself if you once got the fool notion into your head that it was your duty to try."

This time Blount's smile was rather sorrowful, and he shook his head.

"Come and hear me speak tonight if you're staying over that long. Then you'll know why I must have the solid rock of good faith under my feet, Gantry. You spoke of my father just now. I bear the name, too, Dick. Don't you see that I've got to make good?"

It was during this hardworking interval that Blount saw, with keen regret, the gradual widening of the breach between him and his father. That the long arm of the machine of which his father was the acknowledged head was reaching out into all corners of the state there was ample evidence, and that the machine campaign was a thing to be reckoned with and fought against was a cardinal principle with the young reformer.

But it is hard to fight in the dark. The organization was so perfect that its very existence seemed mythical at times—a mere bugbear set up to be knocked down by the honest voter at the polls on election day.

Yet Blount knew that it was no myth. Sometimes he fancied that it was the machine which was interposing the invisible barrier beyond which he was not permitted to pass. With that thought came the old doubts and fears that his father and McVickar had consulted together to make him the fence behind which all the trickery of a venal campaign could be safely screened. But while this thought visibly widened the growing breach it made him only more determined to fight to the bitter end. What one man could do to herald the dawn of a new political epoch for his native state should be done.

It was on one of his short stopovers in the capital city that Blount found himself seated opposite his father at a table for two in the Inter-Mountain cafe. The meeting was purely accidental, as most of their meetings had come to be. Inquiring for his father at the desk, Blount had been told that the senator was out of town. But an hour later, when he had taken his seat at the dinner table, the supposed absentee had walked in to take the opposite chair.

For a time their talk was of the doings at Wartrace Hall, of the professor's enthusiastic digging for fossils, of Patricia's keen enjoyment of the life in the open and—this put with gentle hesitation on the part of the news bringer—of Mrs. Honoria's growing love for the young woman whose ambitions reached out toward a "career."

"Working you pretty hard these days, aren't they, son?" was the friendly remark that opened the way for more to follow. "If you belonged to my generation instead of your own you wouldn't be cold shouldering that young woman out at Wartrace the way you do—not for all the politics that was ever hatched."

"I have my work to do," said the son gravely, "and Patricia Anners would be the last person in the world to put obstacles in the way of it. I wish I could say as much for other people."

The boss looked up quickly. "Somebody been trying to block you?"

Evan Blount met the gaze of the shrewd gray eyes without flinching.

"I don't know of any good reason why we shouldn't be frank with each other, dad," he said, using for the first time since his return the old boyhood father name. "You know better than any one else, I think, what the stumbling blocks are and who is putting them in my way."

(To be Continued.)

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

No More Home Cooking, Says a Winchester Woman—Suffragists May Be Put off a Year by Beacon Hill Solons—New England Hardware Folk Hold Boston Latchkey—Great Decorative Arts Exhibition Interests Eastern Massachusetts—Cheerful Conversation at a Restaurant Table.

A town full of students as Boston is, makes lots of fun for the observant spectator. A young couple entered one of the inexpensive "home dining rooms"—seven courses for a quarter—which flourish in the educational district, and found themselves somewhat embarrassed by the necessity of sitting at the same table with a stranger. The young man, evidently recently enrolled at a medical school, did his best to keep conversation flowing smoothly and to put the girl at her ease. "Say, don't you want to come up and see some of the operations some Saturday?" he asked as the soup was served. The girl looked slightly dubious, but asked politely what kind of operations they usually performed. "Oh, we have all sorts, but mostly appendicitis on Saturdays. Come on up sometime." His companion was wanly appreciative of the invitation and applied herself to her lunch rather half heartedly. After a pause which the young man seemed to find uncomfortable he exclaimed: "Say, what do you think of a man being able to eat without any stomach? Fact—they cut it out!" The girl swallowed hard and murmured something to the effect that he probably couldn't eat very much. Thus encouraged the youth of medical inclinations launched forth on a detailed and graphic explanation of the intricacies of the operation and other kindred subjects, which lasted throughout the fish, entree, meat, salad, dessert, and coffee stages of the lunch.

A sumptuous Italian festa to follow the equally sumptuous retrospective exhibition of the decorative arts which closes March 28, is announced by the public spirited Copley Society of Boston. The festa, in celebration of St. George's Day, will take place in Copley Hall, Wednesday evening, April 26. Like the decorative arts exhibition which has attracted club women, teachers, students and others from every part of eastern New England, this event will interest a wide area. The exhibition now on has been well attended week ways and Sundays, though, as is usual, a considerable section of the public will be applying for admission for a week or more after it has been closed and the "treasures of old Boston" have been dispersed to the homes of the owners who munificently lent them for the occasion.

Wait another year says the Massachusetts committee on constitutional amendments to the suffragists. The legislature may or may not affirm their judgment, but at least their recommendation is a little better than "leave to withdraw." Meantime the Hub continues to be a seething kettle of suffragism. There's a spirited suffrage play that's quite the thing, as proved by its presentation at an At Home and Dramatic Entertainment at 585 Boylston Street, March 31—a real drama of political equality written by Mrs. Bertha Papazian and entitled "The Best Thing That Could Have Happened." Mrs. Emily M. Bishop at a private residence in the Back Bay lectures on Dramatic Scenes for the United States Senate—an address said to be replete with argumentative material for the suffrage cause. Noddle's Island, otherwise known as East Boston, is to be stirred to the nether depts of the harbor with a mass meeting at which former Governor John L. Bates, a resident of the island, will be principal speaker. Organization of equal suffrage clubs throughout Massachusetts goes on apace. New Bedford and Waltham have just acquired such associations; others are in immediate prospect. Several of the Bay State suffragists are working energetically to get as much accomplished as possible before sailing for the other side where they will study English suffragette methods, and perhaps take a little part in them. The spring fever, in short may already be affecting business activities but its germs have not yet invaded the suffrage camp in Copley Square.

Winchester, a pretty suburb of greater Boston, is agog over the latest plan for abolishing old maids, divorces and dishwashing, along with several other undesirable elements of our civilization. Mrs. Herman Dudley Murphy, wife of the well known artist, and an active worker in several branches of social improvement work, has devised a scheme whereby there shall be no more cooking of meals, no more dishwashing, no more bed making and the like, by the housewife, but she shall be relieved from these evils and afforded more time to fit herself to capably care for her children and make her home attractive, and study things worth while. The plan is to have a community establishment where meals shall be prepared scientifically and at reduced cost for all families who wish to join the movement, and where an army of strong and skilled young women shall be available to make the beds, wash the dishes and do other work of this nature. This plan also solves the servant problem, according to Mrs. Murphy's belief. The drudgery of the kitchen is blamed by Mrs. Murphy for woman's lack of progress in many directions. Relieved from this, the infant, the small child and the grown-up daughter would have a much greater share of the mother's care and attention, and many evils would be done away with which now are the cause of strife and unhappiness, family jars and divorces. Mrs. Murphy is upheld by many leading Winchesterites, and has already secured the cooperation of a prominent hotel man who is ready to go ahead with the plan if a sufficient number of residents will guarantee to make use of his kitchen and help.

The New England hardware men made Boston ring during their convention and exhibition at Mechanics' Hall—the greatest exhibition of its kind ever held in this city. Think of 50,000 people on hand for this single event, many of the wives and relatives of the members accompanying them and holding a little convention of their own. Think of an exhibition including all sorts of things ranging from rapid potato pealers to rapid fire revolvers, the sale of which to every would be murderer or suicide ought to be stopped. Minstrel shows, banquets and other entertainments occupied all the time that could be spared from the business of the convention, and the genial gentlemen vacated the Mechanics Building just in time to give the florists and horticulturists a chance to get their great national flower show in readiness.

BRIEFS

Warmer Sunday.

"Cinderella in Flower Land" a bright operetta is to be given next Friday evening in First Church chapel by the children of the Sunday school.

The battleships North Dakota, Vermont and Rhode Island, built at Quincy, arrived yesterday at Hampton Roads.

Rev. Dr. Hardy has been appointed one of a committee of five to edit a hymnal for Men's club and Bible classes.

T. L. Williams ,the jeweler, has started a contest among the schools of the city and offers fountain pens as prizes.

The Faxon L. T. L., annual entertainment which takes place next Friday night bids fair to excel all previous attempts by these young people.

A sociable will be held in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Thursday evening. Heading the supper committee is Mrs. Frank A. Page. An entertainment will follow.

A lodge of sorrow will be held by Quincy lodge of Elks Tuesday evening in memory of Brothers Robert M. Gunning, who died March 16, and John S. Krocher who died March 20.

A private dancing party will be held in Alpha hall Friday, March 31. H. E. Glover, M. S. Nicoll and G. H. Eggleton are the committee in charge of the arrangements. Wilson's orchestra.

Rev. G. W. Palmgren of the Swedish Congregational church, Garfield street, announces two interesting topics for unday, the morning subject being,—"Man's hunger for God"; while the evenin gtheme will be, "God's hunger for man." Special singing at both services.

Work has begun on the erection of several houses on the Pratt lot on Spear street. This street which has remained about the same for many years is changing. The old residents have passed away and their estates passing into other hands are being cut up into houselots.

BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Parker of Malden mourn the loss of their five-year-old son Warren by diphtheria. They formerly resided in Quincy.

Rev. Thomas W. Davison of the Atlantic Memorial church will preach at the Village church, Milton, Sunday morning.

Charles Ganzel and family, who have been occupying the Dwight estate in Weymouth during the winter, are soon to move to Wollaston.

The wireless club met in the Y. M. C. A., last evening for its second regular meeting. Frank Evans continued his series of lectures on the subject of wireless telegraphy.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Parker of Merrymount road have received news that their daughter, Miss Sadie Parker, is out of danger at Bremerton, Wash. Miss Carrie Parker and William are also well.

The funeral of Mrs. Lydia C. Blanchard, widow of Mr. Alvin Blanchard, was held this morning from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Albion I. Dixon, at 60 Goddard street. The services were conducted by Rev. James Matheson of the First Presbyterian church. The burial was at Plymouth.

Although it has been possible to reach by special invitation only those in some way identified with the Y. M. C. A., all friends of General Secretary and Mrs. E. C. Gay are cordially invited to be present at the farewell reception to be given at Association hall, Wednesday evening, March 29, from eight to ten.

WATCH AND WARD.

Editors Daily Ledger:

There seems to be a decided difference of opinion in the minds of the public as to whether the affairs that take place on Thursday evenings at the Coliseum are exhibitions of art (manly art) or "slug-fests," as one sporting writer designated them.

To the end that reliable and disinterested evidence may be obtained as to the true character of those social functions, I suggest that the club permit to be present at each one of them a member of the Watch andWardsociety, he to report the following day through the press his observations and conclusions. Will the club agree to this? If so, I can make the necessary arrangements for the next exhibition, or fight, whichever it will be.

Russian Cabinet Crisis Ends by Dismissal of Two Ministers

St. Petersburg, March 25.—Premier Stolypin, who last Monday sent in his resignation, has agreed to remain in office and the cabinet crisis therefore is at an end.

An imperial decree suspends M. Trepoff and M. Dernovo, members of the council of empire, from all sittings of the council until January, 1912. Stolypin had insisted on the removal of these reactionary opponents of his policy as the price for his retaining office and it is understood that it was the negotiation of this point that led to a prolongation of the cabinet crisis.

SPORTING NOTES.

The Quincy bowling team in the Columbus club league was defeated by the Mt. Bowdoin team Friday evening in three straight strings. Mt. Bowdoin's score was 472-476-494-1442. Quincy rolled as follows: 412--444-450 -1306. Bliss was high man for Quincy with 120 as his best single string and 301 for a total.

The basketball series between Oliver Ames high and Franklin high has been cancelled because two of the Franklin players are unable to play on account of injuries. Oliver Ames will play Westfield high school next Saturday evening on the first game of the championship series.

In the Y. M. C. A. extension club league, Quincy Adams defeated Quincy Point 19 to 11 and Atlantic won from Wollaston by default last evening. The last games will be played next Friday evening, Quincy Adams vs. Wollaston and Quincy Point vs. Atlantic. The Quincy Adams team has clinched the pennant already. At a later date a big social probably in the form of a banquet will be given to the members of the four teams.

The dual meet between the Employed Boys and the Students of the Y. M. C. A. promises to be of great interest. The meet will be held Monday evening in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The odds are in favor of the Students with Trask, Estey, Sutermeister, Holmes, White and W. Cranshaw to depend upon.

LATEST REAL BOSTON HEARING

Affirmative Today and the Opponents Tomorrow

At 10.30 A. M. tomorrow the opponents of the Real Boston bill will be heard at the State House.

Today at 10.30 and 3.30 the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs gave hearings to the advocates and Room 240 was filled, a few women being in the audience.

Arguments in favor were presented at the morning session by Hugh Bancroft, March G. Bennett President Smith of the Chamber of Commerce, Fred W. Dallinger of Cambridge, Albert P. Worthen of Weymouth and F. W. Gantz of Newton.

Representative Thomas is a member of the Metropolitan Affairs committee and asked several pertinent questions, as did other members of the committee.

At 1.15 the committee adjourned until 3.30.

Opponents to the "Real Boston" bill now claim that these 21 cities and towns out of 40 are against the Real Boston metropolitan council idea; the cities of Waltham, Woburn, Medford, Malden, Newton and Melrose; the towns of Belmont, Braintree, Brookline, Cohasset, Dedham, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Nahant, Stoneham, Swampscott, Watertown, Winthrop, Winchester, Weston.

TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

Lowell to Celebrate March of 6th Regt. in Baltimore

Lowell is planning for a grand celebration to be held Patriots' day, April 19, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the march through Baltimore of the 6th Massachusetts regiment. Surviving members of the old 6th regiment will be special guests and Gen E. F. Jones of Binghamton, N. Y., who commanded the regiment has promised to be present.

It is intended to have in the procession the U. S. troops from points near Boston, the 6th and possibly the 9th regiment, M. V. M., Grand Army post Sons of Veterans and Spanish War Veterans.

The city has appropriated $2,000 for the celebration and a resolve appropriating $3,500 has been approved by both branches of the legislature.

Invitations have been extended to the governor of Maryland and the Mayor of Baltimore and it is hoped that President Taft may be present, while the Spanish War Veterans hope to have ex-President Roosevelt. The principal speaker will be Hon. John D. Long.

The plans include a parade and banquet.

THE THOMAS BAND WAGON

Quincy Representative Claims 89 Votes for Speakership

George R. Conroy the State House correspondent of the Sunday Herald, alluded to the speakership contest of 1912 as follows:

Representatives "Billy" Thomas of Fore River and "Ike" Willetts of Fall River, known familiarly as the "water-wagon twins," were coming down the hill the other day, arm in arm and smiling like the proverbial basket of chips, when they met one of their friends from the upper branch.

"Hello there, old man," greeted Ike, changing the smile to a cabalistic grin; "we've got 'em."

"Yes," chimed in Billy, "no fooling we've got 'em, sure as shootin'."

"Really?" said the senator. "Well, now, that's what I call hard lines. What have you been up against, anyway?"

"Aw, quit yer kiddin'," said Ike, lapsing into slang, as even legislators sometimes will. "You know wha t I mean—we've got 'em tied up—89 of 'em. How's that, eh?"

"Oh, well," said their friend, backing away, "if you've got 'em tied up, why that's different. But 89 of them! Gee whiz! And I suppose they're all the colors of the rainbow, too eh? Well, so long, boys. I hope you'll feel better tomorrow."

Nobody knows what Billy and Ike thought as they watched their friend's hurriedly retreating form, but whatever it was they maintained a discreet silence until they had reached the Bellevue cafe. Then:

"I suppose, Billy, he thinks we have the D. T's. Why didn't you tell him what you were talking about?"

"Why didn't you?"

"Hanged if I know. I thought he knew."

Lots of people who are not candidates for speaker, or managers for candidates make the same mistake. They think everybody must know what's in their minds, and instead of starting at the beginning when they want to tell something they start in the middle and make a mess of it.

Now, the fact is Billy and Ike had just been up on the hill rounding up pledges for Billy for speaker, and when they said, "We've got 89 of 'em tied up," they thought he should have known they meant that they had 89 representatives tied up to Billy's speakership band-wagon.

Thomas says Washburn and Cushing and Underhill are out of the contest, and his only opponents now are Cavanagh and Haigis. Well, he mustn't make the mistake of underestimating Cavanagh. As a matter of fact, looking at the situation from a respectful distance Mr. Cavanagh seems to have the lead—though, of course, there is that bundle of 89 that Thomas has "tied up."

So far as is known, neither Washburn nor Underhill nor Cushing has yet formally withdrawn from the race. Perhaps it would be safer, before entirely eliminating them, to wait until they give consent.

A three column cartoon of the Thomas band wagon was also printed.

GRASS FIRES NUMEROUS

Firemen Called Out Several Times on Sunday

The advent of mild weather brought with it numerous grass fires, and consequently the fire department was called out on needless alarms.

Saturday afternoon at 2.30 an alarm was sounded from Box 45 and was followed almost immediately by the recall. This was for a slight fire in the house of William E. Fitzgerald on Bates avenue, and was due to a grass fire.

Sunday afternoon at 3.45 one round was sounded from Box 612. This proved to be a false alarm.

About the same time there was a brisk grass fire in progress in Merrymount park which was extinguished without summoning the fire department by some men and boys.

Shortly after 4 o'clock the combination at the Central station was called out on a still alarm for a grass fire on Quincy avenue. The fire was working into the woods, when the firemen arrived.

There was also a brisk fire in the afternoon on the marsh between the parkway and the Neponset river.

Shortly after 6 o'clock a telephone call was received at the Atlantic fire station for a brush fire at Squantum that was getting dangerously near the house of Lotta Crabtree. The Atlantic combination started on the call, and when near Box 67 they saw the flames leaping high in the air and it seemed as though the house was on fire. Realizing that without help the apparatus would be useless and in order to summons the members of the Atlantic company, a stop was made long enough to sound an alarm from Box 67 at 6.15 o'clock. Fortunately, the department found that the house was not on fire. The recall sounded in half an hour.

On both of these alarms the heavy steamer at the Central station was given useless runs, for in neither case did they get to the box before the recall sounded. Many remarked Sunday that it seemed useless to send the steamer to boxes in this vicinity on the first alarm, for it often means a three mile hard pull for the horses when the local apparatus could readily handle the fire. If the steamer should be needed it could respond on a second alarm and there would be but little time lost between the first and second alarms. In the case of Box 612 it is supposed to have been rung in by four young men who were seen to be cutting up on their way from Atlantic to Quincy. A sharp lookout was kept for them, but they were not seen again.

NO INTERFERENCE WITH TRAFFIC SAY USERS OF TROLLEY EXPRESS

Some of the Leading Shippers By This Service on Old Colony St. Ry. Co.'s Lines Emphatically Assert This Fact and Tell of Great Advantages of This Method of Shipment.

GEO. E. KEITH & CO., Makers of the International Walk-Over Shoe for Men and Women:—"As we used your cars in transporting our goods daily between our Campello and Middleboro factories we had an opportunity to observe as to whether or not this express service in any way interfered with your passenger service and from our experience we can state that at no time, in either loading or unloading, have we found any delay to the regular passenger service."

CHARLES A. EATON CO., Shoe Manufacturers, Brockton:—"In the matter of delays to passenger traffic, can merely state that we have seen absolutely no evidence of any delay occasioned by the running of the Electric Express cars, nor have we heard of any complaints."

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE CO., Traffic Dept., Brockton:—We have never heard any complaint from any source that the passenger service was delayed or crippled in any way, and altogether we consider the trolley line a great thing for any city or town."

L. J. WILLETT, Wholesale and Retail, Cigars, Tobaccos and Smokers' Articles, Brockton:—"I have never heard any complaints in regard to interfering with your passenger traffic, and as your switch by which you transfer to other lines is directly in front of my place of business, I must congratulate you on the manner in which it has been done."

REGAL SHOE CO., Whitman, Mass.:—"Your equipment, we feel, is up-to-date, your cars always having the appearance of being well kept up and we will say that we have as yet to see wherein the same have in any way obstructed traffic in the streets of Whitman."

C. H. GOLDTHWAITE, Wholesale & Retail Druggist, Brockton & Taunton:—"We know of no reason why this traffic has in any way interfered with the passenger service."

J. S. SARGENT & SON, Builders' Hardware, Brockton:—"We have used your service locally to adjoining towns for some time, and find it a great convenience, and know of no instance where it has conflicted with the passenger service."

HILL BROTHERS, Confectioners, Brockton:—"We never have known of your express cars causing any blockade to passenger service."

THE PLYMOUTH ROCK CANDY CO., No. Abington:—"The service and prices have been very satisfactory. As far as we know, the passenger traffic is not hindered by the Express business."

GRAND UNION TEA CO., Brockton:—"We have never had occasion to find fault with the service and from observation have never thought that the express or freight of your line has interfered with the passenger traffic on the street cars as I have noticed your express cars invariably follow the passenger cars."

I. F. WHITMARSH, Plumbing, Steam & Hot Water Heating, etc., Taunton:—"We have noticed that your system of operating the Trolley Express has not interfered with the Passenger Service at all."

HOWARD. CLARK & CO., Carpets & Rugs, Brockton:—"We find the trolley express a great convenience, and do not think it interferes with passenger traffic."

QUINCY FLORIST A WINNER.

The national flower show in Mechanics building, Boston, the second one ever held in this country, is attracting considerable attention from flower growers as well as flower lovers. William Patterson the Wollaston florist has a fine exhibition of Dutch flowers of every kind and won 10 first, 10 second, and 1 third prize. He is very enthusiastic over the exhibit and thinks it one of the most beautiful he has ever seen. Every kind of flower, plant, and vine from all over the world is exhibited and artistically grouped. It is pleasing that in all this floral wealth that a Quincy man should carry off so many honors. Good for Mr. Patterson.

COUNCIL MEETING.

An important meeting of the City Council is scheduled for tonight. The principal matter that will come up is the annual appropriation order. It is expected that there will be more or less discussion on the order before it passes. It is also possible that the half holiday order for City laborers and mechanics may be taken from the table and again thrashed out.

DISTURBERS ARRESTED.

Officer Curtin assisted by Officer Hathorn of the Metropolitan force rounded up three Italians on West street early Sunday morning who were making the night unsleepable for the residents of that immediate vicinity. The three men who gave their names as Antonio Pagnons, Cesidio Marini and Angelo DiBona arrived in West street about 1 o'clock Sunday morning, all more or less under the influence of liquor and begun to shout and sing wild songs. They were having a glorious time when the two officers appeared and scooped them in. They were locked up for the night and in court this morning were fined $15 each for creating a disturbance and $2 each for drunkenness.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

President Taft wishes it understood that he is a protectionist but he wants to call attention to the fact that "the world do move."

California has voted for the recall, but San Francisco need not think she can shift the exposition on to some other city by a trick like that.

If Gov. Dix. were to act upon all the advice he is receiving with reference to the Senatorial situation in New York his movements would resemble those of a pinwheel.

"Champ Clark says he is not running away from the Presidental nomination." He needn't to. He may stand perfectly still in full assurance that it will not catch him.

Mrs. J. D. Murphy, living at 1827 East Riverside avenue, Spokane is advocating a movement that all owners of cats provide their pets with bells in the interest of preserving the birds of song, which are now coming back to their haunts for the summer. Mrs. Murphy has interested a large number of club and society women in her campaign and it is likely that a "Bell on Cat" society will be organized to take charge of the work. The plan is to attach a small bell with a strap or ribbon on the neck of every cat in the city and suburbs, the argument being that if it were made a custom generally there would be more birds in Spokane. No mention has been made so far of the tinkling at midnight serenades by Thomas and his back-yard acquaintances, but it is no wild guess at this time to say that some one may organize a crusade to not only put the bells out of commmission but also exterminate the wearers. The theory advanced is that this method would make doubly sure of protecting the birds for all time.

Although the appropriation reported for the Police department this year is in the aggregate larger than last year, the increase is for pay of regular salaries as fixed by ordinance to additional men. Extra men usually increase the expenses of a department as they do in private business. Yet Chief Burrell is asked this year to conduct the department with less money. When the people are expecting better and better service, it is almost impossible to give satisfaction on a small appropriation, especially a sum smaller than the preceding year. Quincy's appropriation for miscellaneous expenses of the Police department, including care of auto patrol wagon, police signal system, police station, enforcement of liquor laws, etc., is extremely small, only $6,000 which is less than 19 cents per capita.

The miscellaneous expenses of the Fire department are also kept down to last year's figures and have advanced very little in recent years. They are less than $13,000 and include care of fire alarm, horse shoeing and keeping, fuel and lighting, new hose, horses and harnesses, repairs and fixtures, keeping Chief's horse, clothing and miscellaneous, which is less than 40 cents per capita, and calls for less than 35 cents of the tax levy.

It was a great surprise that the Daily Ledger gave the Councilmen and citizens generally on Saturday when it announced that the contract to supply the shipyard with reservoir water had been cancelled, but we knew it for several days before that date. It is now very evident that the order was rushed through with undue haste. One would have thought that the Finance Committee of the Council would have interviewed the Metropolitan Water Board. The substitute order was not even read on the night it was adopted. Although reported in print the Councilmen had no time in which to read or digest it before the vote was taken. The contract really involved over $300, but the order was rushed through in one night. Then it was passed by a majority vote instead of a two-thirds vote. The contract could not have been put into force without an appropriation to meet the first cost of laying mains which would later be repaid by the Fore River Company. When a substitute order on a half holiday for city employees was reported one evening the president ruled that the order must lay over until the next meeting. Had this been done with the substitute reservoir contract the mistake might not have been made. Important orders like this should receive from the City Council more consideration than they do. All appropriation orders require deliberation. Then again no contract should be signed until an appropriation has been passed to put it into effect.

RUNNING A NEWSPAPER.

George Ade says about every other fellow you meet thinks he could run a good hotel, and we have come to the conclusion that about every one you meet could run a fine newspaper, remarks Eugene L'Hote, the genial editor and publisher of the Milford (Ill.) Herald, editorially in a recent issue of that bright and interesting paper.

Men will take the liberty to tell you how to run a peper, asserts L'Hote. when they wouldn't think of hinting to the merchant how to conduct his store or tell the preacher what to preach. They pay good money for schools and don't know whether John is learning the rule of three or how to hold a cigarette gracefully, but when it comes to the newspaper, sizzling cats! there's where they all get off.

During the past week a friend wanted to know why we didn't try and run a paper a little more along the lines of how Christ would run a paper. We don't know just how that would be. In the first place if Christ was back on earth we don't believe he would go into the newspaper business at all, and if he did we are sure he wouldn't come to Milford to do it. If our friend had wanted it more on a religious plane we could tell him frankly that it wouldn't pay.

There is not an editor or a preacher that could tell the truth for thirty days and stay in the community in which they live. If our friends doubt this, let him try telling the absolute truth for just one week and see where he lights. We never were much to "soft soap" or "blarney" anyone; in fact, our bluntness and honesty of speech has cost us many friends. Tell the truth! We aren't going to do it, yet we believe there would be a better understanding with humanity, many times if people had the courage to do it.

A Kansas editor announced he would try for one week, and he is still in the hospital. He didn't get past the first day. The following item appeared in Monday's issue and now the boys are getting out the paper. This is what he said: 'Married, Miss Sylvia Rhode to James Cannaham, last Sunday evening at the Baptist church. The bride was an ordinary town girl who don't know any more than a rabbit about cooking and never helped her mother three days in her life. She is not a beauty by any means and has a gait like a duck. The groom is an up-to-date loafer, has been living off the old folks all his life, and don't amount to shucks nohow. They will have a hard life while they live together.'

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The state is to be urged to go into another colossal expenditure in a matter of municipal ownership and build a system of great docks to accommodate the largest shops, stretching from Nahant to Hull, a four-track belt line railway embracing the cities and towns surrounding Boston for thirty miles with freight spurs running directly to the docks to avoid transfers and cartage. Enthusiasts who are advocating this plan, according to their conclusions, would make Boston the second seaport in the world. Of course the state is expected to condemn all the property in the territory mentioned. There is nothing small about this scheme. If developed it would be one of the greatest municipal ownership affairs in the world, all for the glory of Boston and incidentally for the enjoyment of all tax payers of the state who will have to pay their share of footing the bills. When a Boston man gets to dreaming of a bright and rosy future for that city some plan by which the citizens of the whole state from the sea to the western and northern lines will pay the bills is always an inseparable element of the alluring vision.—Taunton Gazette.

A LOVER'S STRATAGEM

Presented for Ladies Only by Young Women's Club

The Quincy Young Women's club met in the Women's clubhouse Saturday evening for its monthly social gathering. After a short business meeting the social committee was given charge and all were greatly pleased with the program they had prepared. A play entitled "A Lover's Stratagem" was presented by members of the dramatic class under the direction of Mrs. Gurney, president of the Women's club and leader of the class.

The plot was simple involving the usual bump which the course of true love often receives, in the shape of a crusty old uncle who wishes his nephew to marry a wealthy poetess. To please his uncle the nephew goes to make his proposal but he simulates idiocy and effeminacy so well that the poetess scorns his advances, and, with the obstacle removed, Rowland is free to marry Nathalie, having gained his uncle's consent a little surreptitiously.

The part of Mother Gwynne which was to have been taken by Theodora Luward was carried through very successfully by Mrs. Litchfield at a moment's notice. Mabel Pratt took the part of Madge with ability, and appeared deliciously hoydenish in contrast with the poetess. Gertrude Herne made an excellent Squire Hinsdale, and acted with ease and masculine swagger as soon as she became accustomed to the presence of the two "nervy" reporters.

Mary L. Browne took the part of Nathalie, Rowland's sweetheart, with great naturalness and appeared delightfully demure in comparison with the austerity of Miss Murdoch. Mabel Lovejoy showed really great ability in the part of Rowland. She assumed the masculine manner of carrying herself very readily, and both in simulating idiocy and in proving Rowland's mettle, she gave the part more than justice. Perhaps the best piece of acting was that contributed by Ruth Kemp in the part of Stella Murdoch, the poetess. Voice, gesture and general appearance were suited to the part, and she carried herself admirably, first as the dreamy poetess, and later as the scornful woman and censor of mankind.

After the performance the cast lined up on the stage and Mrs. Gurney's presence was requested. Mabel Lovejoy in behalf of the Dramatic class presented her with a dozen handsome pinks. The members of the cast each received a gift at the hands of Miss Edith Lovejoy. Mrs. Litchfield was given a parsnip tied with black velvet; Miss Brown received a bouquet of thorns; Miss Kemp a huge doughnut, Miss Herne a head of cabbage, Miss Pratt 2 potatoes on a stick tied with ribbon, and Miss Lovejoy a head of lettuce.

Edith Lovejoy and Bertha Herne had charge of the scenery, and Miss Hannah Litchfield furnished music for dancing, which took place after the presentations were made. Needless to say the Squire and Rowland were much in demand as partners. The attendance was as large as the reception room would accommodate ,and the audience showed a very proper appreciation of the play.

It was voted to change the constitution so that the annual business meeting and election of officers would take place on the 8th the second Saturday in April and gentlemen's night would be held on April 29, the last Saturday in the month.

The cast was as follows:

Squire Hinsdale, rich uncle to Rowland — Gertrude Herne
Rowland, just out of college — Mabel E. Lovejoy
Nathalie Gwynne, Rowland's Sweetheart — Mary L. Brown
Mother Gwynne, mother to Nathalie, — Mrs. Jesse Litchfiled
Stella Murdoch, a poetess — Ruth Kemp
Madge, her maid — Mabel Pratt

A REAL CONVENIENCE.

The annual report of the Brookline Board of Health tells of the establishment of a public sanitary which has been found to be a real convenience and a necessity. The report states that the sanitary was opened in January of 1910, and that from Feb. 1 to Dec. 31 it was visited by 500,433 men and 132,065 women. In commenting on it the report says: "The large attendance shows that the sanitary has served its purpose and that its erection was not in advance of the needs of the public."

DEATH LIST WILL REACH ABOUT 150

No Light on Cause of Factory Fire

200,000 VISIT MORGUE

Unidentified Dead Will Lie In a Common Grave

A TRIPLE PROBE HAS BEGUN

Not an Outside Fire Escape on New York Building

New York, March 27.—What will go down in history as the fire disaster of Washington square has entered upon its aftermath with 82 out of nearly 150 victims identified. The official death list has been lessened rather than increased.

A revised count shows 141 dead, with 12 women and girls at death's door in the hospitals. One hundred and fifty, all told, will probably cover the casualties, when those whose horrible hurts and burns seem fatal shall have joined their fellow workers now in the coffins of the dead.

Careful enumeration still makes the female victims, young and old, approximately ten to every male. Broadly speaking, they were Jews and Italians, living either on the East Side or in a small Italian quarter near the scene of the fire.

Two hundred thousand people visited the morgue Sunday, but identification of the victims proceeded slowly, because of the charred condition of the victims' bodies.

On Thursday night a mass meeting will be held at Cooper Union to agitate for more adequate protection of so-called fireproof buildings. The United Hebrew Charities and the Hebrew Free Burial society announce that they are ready to relieve any distress caused by the fire. The ndiependent Order of B'Nai B'Ruth has opened a subscription fund throughout New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and a portion of Canada for the sufferers. Directors of the Metropolitan opera house have offered the building free for a benefit performance.

Law Not Complied With

George M. Price, chairman of an investigation committee appointed by the cloak, suit and skirt industry of New York last September to investigate and remedy unsanitary and protective conditions affecting members of that union, gave out a statement last night with a long list of factory buildings which he says fail to comply with fire regulations.

"What was expected has happened," says the statement. "Those who know of the flimsy fire protection in the loft buildings of New York long ago predicted such a disaster as occurred in Washington place. If, however, this building was the only one of those unprotected, the situation would not be so terrible. But the fact is there is hardly a large loft building in New York which is better protected against fire."

In a statement which he issued to the press Borough President McAneny said that 500 firemen, recently detailed by Fire Commissioner Waldo for the purpose, reported 3500 buildings lacking adequate fire escapes. The building department has already investigated 700 of these cases, and reported that only 10 percent of them were in violation of the building code. The building in which Saturday's disaster occurred had not been reached among the cases reported by the fire department.

Mr. McAneny urges a thorough revision of the code, leaving the provisions relative to fire escapes to a commission of buiding and fire experts to be appointed by the city.

Victims Found In Cellar

While a crowd of morbid thousands was held back by the police, firemen with grappling irons and fire hooks rought victims in the flooded cellar of the building all Sunday forenoon. A steam pump emptied the basement of water during the morning, and the firemen believed, when they rested at the dinner hour, that they would find no more bodies.

Last night, however, they carried out another body, making three recovered during the day. The overcount Saturday night was probably due to checking off a charred portion of a body as a corpse.

The work of the day shed no light upon the cause of the blaze. This will probably never be known.

The Charities pier with the dead and the streets surrounding the burned building were thronged by thousands, some sobbing, some silent, and many munching peanuts. But the unidentified dead, who probably will lie in a common grave, attracted the greatest number of grief-wracked persons. It is planed by the Waist Makers' union to have every shirtwaist maker in the city stop work for a few minutes when those charred forms are buried.

Officers of the Ladies' Waist and Dressmakers' union said last night that their lawyers will begin an investigation immediately, with a view of fixing responsibility for the disaster.

Given Clean Bil of Health

It was declared by Max Blanck, of Harris & Blanck, proprietors of the Triangle Waist company, which occupied the three upper floors of the building, that a deputy factory inspector only ten days ago had inspected the place and given a clean bill of health so far as fire safeguards were concerned.

The fire escape was useless, Blanck declared, and the flames cut off approach to it on the ninth and tenth floors. He said the quick spread of the fire was due in part to the great quantity of light, flimsy stuff used in making lingerie on the eighth floor.

"I can't imagine what caused the fire," he continued. "Smoking was forbidden in all departments, and we had four machinists watching the electrical equipment for flaws or sparking."

When the fire first flashed up Blanck was in his office on the tenth floor with his partner, Isaac Harris, and his two daughters. All made their escape with sixty others on that floor, by rushing to the roof, where they were rescued.

The names and addresses of all his employes, he said, were kept in a card index, which was destroyed, and this will make it impossible to know just how many of the 700 employes of the firm escaped for several days.

Rigid Probe by Grand Jury

Without the slightest delay District Atorney Whitman will direct the April grand jury to make a rigid investigation into the disaster to determine who was responsible. Assistant District Attorneys Bostwick and Manley, who were assigned to the district attorney's investigation before the ruins began to cool, will subpoena every survivor of the fire.

Mr. Whitman appointed his two assistants to make their preliminary investigation after Fire Chief Croker had said:

The Sirolin Sentinel

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

QUINCY, MONDAY, MARCH 27, 1911

Good Grippe Weather

This kind of weather produces epidemics of grippe and heavy colds.
Protect yourself by—
1st. Wearing warm, dry clothing.
2nd. By keeping your feet dry.
3rd. By eating plenty of nourishing food.
4th. By taking a dose of pleasant-to-taste Sirolin night and morning.

With these precautions you need not fear the grippe, or any other pulmonary affection.

Modern medicine is largely a science of means to prevent disease.

Sirolin—the celebrated Swiss preparation—not only prevents colds and coughs, the grippe and other disorders of the respiratory organs, but it relieves these ailments, when they are developed, in a few days.

Individuals who "take cold easily," upon exposure, can defend themselves against the attacks by the use of Sirolin, together with the proper observance of the rules of hygiene.

SIROLIN, the Famous Remedy for the Grippe, is at your Druggist's.

THE SIROLIN COMPANY, 365 & 367 Canal Street, New York

Always Keep A Bottle of Sirolin In the House.

Sirolin is the leading remedy for coughs and colds for both adults and children.

It is commended by physicians in every medical centre.

It is wonderfully useful in treating consumption. It absolutely prevents the occurrence of it.

It is a cure for wasting diseases.

It is universally popular.

Its value is unique.

Your Physician Knows Sirolin. Your Druggist Sells It

Sirolin is very agreeable to the palate. It is a preparation possessing all the virtues of guaiacol and creosote, without the disagreeable taste of these most valuable drugs. Sirolin is compounded with a palatable non-irritating derivative of guaiacol, the active principle of creosote. Sirolin is not only palatable but it also improves the appetite, assists digestion and aids nutrition.

Sirolin is a physician's remedy—not a patent nostrum. It comes to America with the highest European reputation.

China Receives an Ominous Ultimatum From Russia

WANTS SATISFACTORY REPLY

March 28 Is Set as Time Limit, After Which Czar's Government Feels Free to Act If It Is Ignored—China Is Charged With Adopting Evasive Policy—Pekin Believes That Forcible Measures Will Be Taken

St. Petersburg, March 27.—The Russian government is determined to force China to take decisive action with regard to the Russian demand that the provisions of the treaty of 1881 be complied with. Russia's ultimatum, which was presented to the administration at Pekin through the Russian minister, declares that China must give a satisfactory reply to the Russian note of Feb. 16, setting forth in detail the Russian claims, before March 28. Otherwise it will hold the Chinese government responsible for such action as Russia deems advisable to take.

The ultimatum was contained in a telegram from M. Neratoff, the acting minister of foreign affairs, to M. Korostevetz, the Russian minister at Pekin, and is as follows:

"Negotiations in recent months have convinced the imperial government that the Chinese government is seeking by cryptic and evasive answers to reject the points of the note of Feb. 16. As an instance, on March 19 the Chinese memorandum presented to the Russian minister yielded, on the one hand, to our repeated representations and agreed that the establishment of a consulate at Kobdo should not be made dependent upon the introduction of customs treaties, while on the other hand it remained silent regarding the establishment of other consulates for which provision was made in article 10 of the St. Petersburg treaty, and also regarding monopolies, which, contrary to the agreements among the powers, had been introduced in the province of Sin-Kiang.

"It is also intimated in the matter of trade in local products that Russian traders must observe the same conditions as the Chinese, thus entirely ignoring the treaty provisions exempting Russians trading in Mongolia and western China from the payment of customs duties and other taxes whatsoever.

"In view of the absolutely futile character of such negotiations, during the course of which the Chinese government has sought only to restrict Russia's treaty rights by advancing arguments which it afterward abandoned, the Russian government sees itself obliged to end this procrastination, for which there is no justification, and requests the Chinese government formally to admit that all the points in the note of Feb. 16 are valid and conform to the treaty stipulations.

"Only after such admission can the Russian government agree to enter into negotiations on the questions of the introduction of customs duties, the establishment of a special regime of the tea trade, or any other partial modification of the treaty of 1881.

"If an exhaustive and satisfactory reply to all six points of the note of Feb. 16 is not received by March 28, Russia reserves to itself freedom of action and will make the Chinese government responsible for the obstinacy displayed by it."

Demands Are Presented

Pekin, March 27.—M. Korostovetz, the Russian minister to China, presented to the Chinese foreign board a note from his government, demanding a full and unequivocal compliance with the Russian semiultimatum of Feb. 16.

The situation is very grave. It is believed here that unless China accepts the Russian views unconditionally within a stated period, forcible measures will follow.

END OF FIREMEN'S STRIKE

No Negroes Will Be on Engines North of Oakdale, Tenn.

Cincinnati, March 27.—The strike of the white firemen on the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific railroad has been declared off, as an agreement has been signed by representatives of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and Horace Baker, general manager.

The agreement holds that employes who went out on strike shall be reinstated. Negro firemen cannot be employed north of Oakdale, Tenn.

New York, March 27.—George W. Wanamaker, for the last three years appraiser of merchandise of this port, has resigned, giving as a reason that he desires to enter private business.

Canal Digging Record Broken

Washington, March 27.—All records for daily excavation in the central division of the Panama canal were broken on March 11, when 80,341 cubic yards were excavated.

SUNDAY SERVICES

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

At the Sunday morning service the pastor preached from the text, Matt. 16:21 "From that time forth began Jesus to show unto his disciples how that he must go unto Jerusalem and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and be killed and raised again the third day."

The quarterly review was taken up in the Sabbath School.

At the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting there was a good audience and a fine meeting. Miss Annie Russell who is home on a vacation, spoke briefly.

In the evening the pastor spoke on the theme, "Duties of Christian Citizenship," taking his text from I Peter 2:17 "Honor all men, love the brotherhood, fear God, honor the king."

The attendance at the meeting was large. An anthem, "Nearer My God to Thee" was rendered by the choir.

A cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Alex Ross, 97 Interwale street, Tuesday evening at 7.45.

The annual meeting of the officers and teachers of the Sabbath school will be held in the church Wednesday evening at 7.30. The election of officers and teachers and other business will take place.

The regular mid-week prayer meeting will be held on Thursday at 7.30.

The monthly meeting of the Men's league will be held Friday evening at 7.30. Regular business will be transacted.

There will be no meeting of the Stewards for the World-in-Boston this week.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. William B. Ayers, the young and able pastor of the Park and Downs church, preached at Bethany church Sunday morning, and delighted a large congregation. His text was from John 19:15—"Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns and purple robe. And Pilate said unto them, behold the man!" It was a vigorous discourse portraying the characters of Pilate and Jesus in contrast. Previous to the sermon Mr. Ayers made an appeal for his society which hopes to begin the erection of a new church in April but needs about $1,500 before work is started. A committee of the church was also in attendance, and will during the week make a canvass in Quincy.

At the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting, Alden H. Blanchard was the leader. Short addresses on C. E. Union work were made by Stanley Sherman, Miss Winnifred V. Church of the Wollaston Baptist church, and Miss Ida L. Thomas.

At the evening service Rev. A. S. Walker of Wellesley preached an excellent sermon on "The Golden Rule." The Boys' choir furnished some fine music.

On Thursday the Woman's Missionary society will have its annual meeting. Supper will be served by the Philatheas at 7 o'clock and in the evening Mrs. W. E. Alden will read a lecture on Turkey. The reading will be supplemented by fine stereopticon illustrations.

A Union fellowship meeting with the Norwegian worshippers will be held Friday evening at 7.45. Rev. Olaf Jonsvold, the pastor, will speak briefly.

An important business meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. will be held Friday evening at 8.45.

SWEDISH LUTHERAN.

The pastor preached the Sunday morning sermon using as his theme "The real hunger and the real bread."

In the evening a Lenten sermon was preached by the pastor. The attendance was good at both services.

A Young People's meeting will be held in the church on Thursday evening.

The pastor is to move on Wednesday of this week. His new address will be 48 Euclid avenue.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The fourth of the series of Lenten lecture conferences in the upper vestry of the Arlington Street Church, Boston, will be held Thursday, at 5 P. M. Subject: "New England Congregationalism."

"The Boy Scout Movement of America" was considered at the regular meeting of the Boston Ministerial Union this morning and "Our girl workers" was the theme of an instructive address by Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly in the afternoon.

The third Congress of the National Federation of Religious Liberals will be held in New York city, April 26, 27 and 28.

The fourth of our mid-week Lenten services will be held Wednesday at 7.45 P. M. Preacher: the Rev. Chas. E. Park, minister of the First church in Boston, organized in 1630. Soloist, Miss Ernestine M. Litchfield.

The regular meeting of the Women's Alliance will be held in the vestry on Wednesday, at 2.30. The "Ideal home" and "Home training" will be the subjects for the afternoon. Papers will be given by Mrs. W. H. Doble of Quincy and Mrs. John H. Litchfield of Wollaston. This is the last program meeting of the season, and promises to be one of the best. All women interested, whether they belong to the Alliance or not, are cordially invited to attend.

Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Women's Alliance of which Mrs. Frank A. Page is the very efficient acting president, a church social supper and entertainment will be held. Supper will be served at 6.30. This is a fine opportunity to get acquainted with the new comers in our church.

The Junior Lend-a-Hand Club will meet Tuesday at 3.45 P. M. with Mrs. E. J. Cummings, 123 Winthrop avenue.

A farce "Just for Fun" will be presented in the vestry under the auspices of the Young People's Religious Union, Friday evening.

Rev. and Mrs. Carl G. Horst are "at home" to receive callers Monday evenings.

WOLLASTON M. E.

"Righteousness the promoter of peace" was the subject of an interesting discourse by Rev. Wesley Wiggin at the Wollaston M. E. church Sunday morning.

Sunday school followed the morning service with an attendance of 145.

At the vesper service, 4.45, Miss Ethel Hague Rea of Dorchester was the soloist.

The subject of the Epworth League meeting at 6 o'clock was "A good soldier."

Tuesday evening at 7.30 a meeting for the Stewards study will be held in the vestry.

Thursday a talen social will be held in the vestry, when home-made candies, useful and fancy articles will be on sale. Refreshments will be served.

Remember the Friday evening prayer meeting. Come and cheer your pastor by your presence and gain a blessing to your own soul.

The financial year closes March 31, and the finance committee desire to have all weekly and special pledges paid up by that date.

Next Sunday there will be a love feast in the vestry at 10.15, and communion service after the morning sermon.

CHRIST CHURCH.

A corporate communion service for members of St. Margaret's guild and the Junior Auxiliary was held at 8 o'clock Sunday morning.

At the 10.30 service the rector preached a sermon on the fourth beatitude: "Blessed are they that hunger and thirt after righteousness, for they shall be filled."

On Sunday evening the Rector gave another of his discourses on "The Excepts of the Gospel." "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven."

A Men's club rehearsal will be held Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Junior Auxiliary will meet on Tuesday afternoon at 3.45.

At the Galahad club meeting Thursday evening, M. T. Holbrook, sub-master at the High school, will be the speaker.

The World in Boston Stewards will meet in the Rectory, Thursday evening at 7.45.

At the meeting of St. Margaret's Guild, Friday evening, Rev. W. E. Gardner, former rector of the church, will be the speaker. Mrs. Gardner will also be present. Members may invite their mothers and friends to the meeting.

FIRST CHURCH.

"What shall we do to be saved" was the topic of an interesting sermon preached Sunday morning by Rev. Ellery C. Butler at the First church. Music was by the choir quartette.

Sunday evening H. Houghton Schumacher addressed the meeting of the Young People's Religious Union on "Fellowship" Miss Edith Randal gave a musical selection.

Mrs. Emily A. Fifield speaks on "The Alliance and the Club" at the meeting of the Alliance this afternoon.

This evening Rev. Charles B. Ames will speak at the meeting of the Junior Alliance on "The central ideas of Unitarianism."

Friday evening the cantata ""Cinderella in flower land" will be given in the chapel under the auspices of the Sunday school. Miss Newman, Miss Waldron and Miss Harris are the committee.

HALL PLACE M. E.

Rev. Carl H. Raupach spoke on "Men and Religion Forward Movement" at the Hall Place M. E. church Sunday morning. It was a great pleasure and joy to all to have the regular choir members back in their places again after an absence of some months. The choir sang "The Kingly Pilgrim."

Sunday School was held at the close of the morning service. Preparations are being made for the Easter concert.

Junior League was held at 3 P. M. and Epworth League at 6.15.

The pastor spoke on "A great opportunity lost, taking his text from St. John 18-13.

On Wednesday evening the "Experience Dollar Social" will be held in the vestry. A pleasant entertainment is being planned and preparations for refreshments are progressing.

Prayer meeting will be held Friday evening at 7.30.

As next Sunday closes the Conference year and also the present pastorate, special plans for the services of the day are being made and the public is cordially invited to cooperate with the members in making these services helpful and inspiring and especially to attend the evening service at 7 P. M. the last service of the year.

The candy sale held by the Busy Workers class Saturday afternoon on Copeland street, was a great success.

QUINCY POINT CHURCH.

At the Sunday morning service, the pastor spoke from the text John 10:10 "I am come that they might have life."

The evening sermon was preached from the text Gen. 37:19 "This dreamer cometh." The audiences were large at both services.

The Priscilla sorority will meet at Mrs. T. B. Pollard's on Tuesday. The annual business meeting and election of officers will take place after which a banquet will be served. Later in the evening an entertainment will be furnished by several members of the sorority.

An open meeting of the Men's club will be held Wednesday evening. An illustrated lecture on "The evolution of the steamship" and "A trip through Europe" will be given by Mr. Burns lecture agent of the Cunard S. S. Co. Ladies are especially invited.

The Ladies Aid society will have an all-day sew at the home of Mrs. T. W. Lincoln Jr., on Thursday.

The regular church prayer meeting will be held Friday evening at 7.45.

SWEDISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The pastor preached special sermons both mornings and evening on Sunday. The morning topic was "Man's hunger for God" that of the evening, "God's hunger for man." An abstract of the morning sermon is given below. The male chorus furnished excellent music at both services, in the morning singing two anthems and in the evening singing three.

The monthly business meeting of the church will be held Tuesday evening.

The Ladies' Aid society will have its monthly meeting Thursday afternoon at 2.30. Refreshments will be served.

At the prayer meeting Thursday evening there will be a special discussion on the relation of faith to works. The abstract:

It is real, a well-known fact. No human being has ever been created without this hunger for the eternal. It is just as real to the soul as the desire for food or other natural appetites are to the body. Indeed, it would have been a fatal mistake in the creation of man, had these lofty desires been left out. They are the only foundation in man on which God can work, the only way in which many are linked to their creator.

It may be hidden, obscured, invisible. In many there are no outward signs of it. Other issues may crowd it to one side, so to speak.

But the surface of man never tells his entire life story. Beneath it is an unseen world. And among other facts which constitute this world is the hunger for the infinite. Zaachius showed no outward sign of his heart's hunger a few hours before Jesus entered Jericho. Nicodemus did not disclose it to the world at large, but it drove him to the Lord at midnight. The woman of Samaria was herself unconscious of it, but it was there.

It cannot be satisfied with things material. This is where man makes his deplorable mistake. The pleasure seeker fails to find it in amusements. The insane desire for corruptible treasures is disappointed in its mad rush. It is a failure no matter how successful. The "globe trotters" return home dissatisfied in spite of the wonders seen and heard. These things are merely stimulants, temporary indulgences, but never soul food.

It can be satisfied in Christ. In him dwells the fullness of the Godhead. God's treasures of wisdom and grace are hidden in him. He is God's answer to man's inquiries and yearnings. He is the bread of life, come down out of heaven to a hungry world, its only hope and salvation. As the storehouses of Egypt were left in charge of Joseph by the King, so Christ has the keys to the infinite supplies of the Almighty. Therefore the ends of the earth are earth are invited to him for present and future needs.

PEACE MESSAGE FROM EMPEROR OF JAPAN

Relations With America Were Never More Cordial

Washington, March 27.—The following message from the Emperor of Japan to President Taft was made public at the White House:

To the President of the United States of America:

I was greatly pleased to receive your very kind message, conveyed to me through my ambassador in Washington, and I thank you for it. I was already well convinced that you had given no credence to the false and wicked reports regarding Japan, but it was especially a source of profound satisfaction to me to receive from you the assurance that the relations of amity and good understanding between our two countries were never better or more cordial than at this time. I am most happy to be able to entirely reciprocate that assurance.

HIGH COST OF DYING

Boston Pastor Says Coffin Trust Helps to Keep Figures Up

Boston, March 27.—It costs more to die nowadays, just as it costs more to live than it did, say, ten yeas ago, according to Rev. Charles L. Cady, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Trinitarian church, Dorchester, who spoke on the "High Cost of Dying."

Mr. Cady said the present funeral bill of the nation is about $200,000,000. "We are told that a funeral cost $84 sixty years ago, cost $116 thirty years ago and today costs $208," he said.

"There is a coffin trust that undoubtedly helps to keep the figures up. It is apparent that if municipal regulation would cut down the cost to a decent profit on the original goods, many men would have to go into something else where they would have to work more days in the week."

QUARREL OVER CARDS

Visitor Uses an Axe With Serious Effect on Face of Host

Walpole, Mass., March 27.—Joseph D'Angelo, in a fight over cards in his home with a visitor, was attacked and his face cut open nearly to the chin with an axe. It is thought he will die.

The Walpole police are searching through the woods near Norwood for Tony Gallo, who is charged by the police with the assault. The police of the surrounding towns have been enlisted in the hunt.

California Banks Close

Redding, Cal., March 27.—The bank of Shasta county voluntarily closed its doors. President Bush says it will be able to meet its liabilities, which are $1,061,304. The First Saving bank of Shasta county, a collateral institution, stopped payment.

Daring Theft of Jewelry

Fall River, Mass., March 27.—While two policemen were standing across the street and hundreds of shoppers were passing, a daring thief entered the store of A. D. Sorub and stole a $300 tray of rings from the show window. He escaped.

SUNDAY CARD PLAYERS.

Officers Dineen and Duane discovered a game in progress at David Hannans pool room on Quincy avenue early Sunday morning, and without disturbing the players the patrol wagon was called. In a few minutes the auto dashed up and then the officers entered the pool room and scooped in the bunch. There were five men playing cards besides the proprietor, and they were all placed under arrest and locked up. They were arraigned in court for gaming on the Lord's day.

BROCKTON MERCHANTS' WEEK.

Decorators from out of town are already in Brockton making contracts for the decorating to be done for Merchants' week which comes the first week in June this year. There are also several novelty men who have been visiting business men with a view to interesting them in taking features for the window completion which is to be made a feature of Merchants' week festivity.

RED HAIR IN BRUSH

Proves Sufficient For Kansas City Woman to Secure a Divorce

Kansas City, March 27.—Because red hairs found in her husband's hairbrush were just like the head adornment of his pretty stenographer, Mrs. Emma B. Mason obtained a divorce from Howard L. Mason, a wealthy real estate man.

Mrs. Mason met her husband at a railroad station one day last year, and he had with him his secretary, a pretty young woman with auburn hair. The explanation was satisfactory—so much business to transact. After another trip a few weeks later, Mrs. Mason said she found the red hairs on the brush.

BRIEFS

City Council tonight.

Another showery Monday.

Chief Engineer Bailey of the Electric Boat Co., gave a talk to the Fore River Apprentice boys Saturday morning on submarines.

Mrs. George A. Hibbard of Dorchester is coaching the cast of the Lawrance Union who will present "Just for fun" in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry on Friday evening.

A sale of candy, cake and fancy articles will be held by the Ladies Benevolent society in the vestries of the Wollaston Congregational church on Thursday afternoon and evening.

Many Quincy people have already attended the National Flower show in Boston, which is certainly a big show, all the street floor of the Mechanics Building being used. It is beautiful and artistic.

Miss Ellen Johnson of Cranch street was given a surprise on Saturday evening. Games and dancing were enjoyed, and refreshments were served. Anna Carlson, Florence Steel and Albert Akerstrom were on the committee and the former presented Miss Johnson a gold ring.

The Congregational club of Wollaston will observe its annual ladies night at the next meeting on Tuesday evening. Miss Marie N. Buckman, secretary of the Egyptian exploration fund, will be the speaker and her subject, "Hewers of stone along the Nile" The talk will be illustrated by stereopticon and many interesting curiosities from Egypt will be shown. The club's double quartette will be in evidence during the evening.

BOY SCOUT WORKERS.

Many requests have been received at the National Headquarters of the Boy Scouts of American for executive secretaries to take charge of the boy scout work in various cities throughout the country. The local committees in charge of the scout movement have realized the necessity of having a man experienced in handling boys and trained in the psychology of boy work to be the executive head. Requests for seven secretaries have been received in the last week. Among the citis asking for skilled organizers are Boston, Oakland, St. Paul and Minneapolis. Philadelphia already has opened a branch office of the National Headquarters and has installed a paid Secretary and Chicago also has a paid Secretary. The Boy Scout movement, however, is spreading so fast and the demands for organizers to get the Scout Masters started on their work, have been so great that Headquarters cannot fill them. Considerable training and experience in addition to an innate talent for handling boys are required in an executive secretary.

—Those who attended the performance Friday afternoon at the Tremont theatre, Boston, of Julia Ward Howe's play Hippolytus will appreciate the following anecdote in the Boston Record:

The teacher, who had a freshman geometry class in the high school, asked: "What is the hypothenuse?" One bright child's hand went up.

Teacher: "What is it, Willie?"

Willie (the star pupil): "It's the name of the new play by the lady that wrote "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

DIAZ FOREMOST MEXICAN FIGURE

Called "Greatest Ruler of Our Age" by Tolstoy Because of Nation Building Reforms He Brought About In His Country.

Part Indian, He Fought From the Ranks to Practical Benevolent Despotism of a Republic That Revered Him.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

THE world esteem in which President Porfirio Diaz, the aged ruler of Mexico, is held has been illustrated by the universal concern displayed over the recent rumors of his illness and impending death. While these reports have been denied, they alarmed the nations and may have played a part in the dispatching of an American army to the Mexican border.

President Taft and President Diaz have the same birthday, Sept. 15, and their warm mutual regard was evidenced at their meeting in El Paso and Juarez two years ago.

Count Leo Tolstoy once referred to Diaz as "the greatest ruler of our age." Theodore Roosevelt called him "the greatest statesman now living." What manner of man is this who can win so high encomiums from such sources? In the first place, he is part Indian, his mother having been a halfbreed and his father, an innkeeper, having had Indian blood. Porfirio was born in 1830, on Sept. 15, the anniversary of Mexico's strike for liberty. While still a child he lost his father and his youth was one of struggle and poverty.

Intended For Priesthood.

The mother's ambition was that he should take orders, and he was placed under a priest for study. The lad had more martial and worldly aspirations, but compromised by reading law. When the war with the United States broke out he went from his home in Oaxaca to become a soldier, but before seeing a battle his country had surrendered. Returning to the law, he studied and taught by turns, becoming a full fledged professor at the age of twenty-four. Then he took up arms against Santa Anna and, placing himself at the head of a band of peons, helped in the dictator's overthrow. In 1858 he joined the army of Juarez in the fight against the clericals, first serving as captain and leading a charge with a bullet hole in his side. For gallantry in this and in a later battle which he fought to recover his native town Diaz was promoted rapidly till he became a general, governor of a state, commander of a district and member of congress.

When our own civil war occurred and the Monroe doctrine was hung up for a season, France, England and other European powers took the opportunity to intervene in Mexico. It was then that Diaz became known as "the hero of Puebla."

On the invasion of the French he held the town against the besiegers and repulsed them, although outnumbered three to one. Later the French were re-enforced and in the end compelled his surrender. He refused to sign a parole and was imprisoned, but made a perilous escape disguised as an Indian and became commander of the army of the east.

Glory In Defeat.

So splendid was the defense of Puebla that the anniversary of the first battle, the 5th of May, was made a national holiday.

A brusque American once asked the president, "Why do you Mexicans celebrate a defeat when you know that the French finally took Puebla?"

President Diaz, with a twinkle in his eye, replied: "Perhaps we have imitated the Americans even to the extent of celebrating our defeats, for I have been told that the British defeated the colonists at the battle of Bunker Hill, and yet you built a monument to commemorate the event."

After Maximilian became emperor of Mexico and Bazaine was placed in command of the imperial army Diaz refused allegiance to the empire and was still further imbittered by the execution of his brother, a republican soldier like himself. Bazaine at first tried to corrupt Diaz and, failing in this, led a great army against him, capturing him after stubborn fighting and throwing him into prison a second time. While incarcerated Diaz received an offer of liberty direct from Maximilian if he would be a general of the empire. Spurning the second opportunity to become a traitor, the future president once more escaped by clambering over the tops of buildings and falling into a sty full of pigs, making his getaway during the resultant clamor.

After the American civil war was ended the Monroe doctrine was taken down from its nail, dusted off and tacked on Uncle Sam's front door in sight of all the world. Napoleon the Little was reminded by our state department that this would be a good time for him to remove his French soldiers from the western hemisphere, which he did forthwith, leaving Maximilian to shift for himself. It was the twice imprisoned, twice tempted and twice escaped patriot general, Porfirio Diaz, who at this juncture captured the City of Mexico, and Maximilian lasted about long enough to be taken out one morning before breakfast and shot.

Power Follows Defeats.

General Diaz's first marriage was celebrated during his siege of the Mexican capital. After the end of the opera bouffe empire he was a candidate for the presidency against General Juarez, but was defeated. He then retired to a farm, but soon after took the field at the head of a revolution, claiming that the president had failed to make promised reforms. Juarez soon afterward died, and Lerdo was declared his successor.

In 1871 Diaz was again a candidate for the presidency, but was a second time defeated and was this time proscribed. Escaping to the United States, he waited his opportunity in New Orleans and returned to Mexico in disguise. Being discovered, he jumped overboard and swam about until rescued by the purser, and, keeping concealed in a box couch until the ship came into port, he once more escaped in a new disguise. Returning to Oaxaca, he placed himself at the head of a revolutionary army and won victory after victory until, making his triumphal entry into the capital city in 1876, he was elected to the presidency the same year.

Mexico then had a law that the president could serve but one term, and in 1880 Diaz had Gonzalez elected as his successor, he himself serving successively as cabinet member, senator and governor of Oaxaca. It was during this interregnum that his second marriage occurred, the bride being the daughter of a bitter enemy. The honeymoon was spent in the United States. Naturally he fondly remembered this trip in later life.

President Gonzalez proved a weak sister, and, the law relating to a second term having been repealed, Diaz was re-elected in 1884 and has been successively chosen from that day to this. His friends say that he has frequently tried to lay down the burdens of office, but the Mexican people would not have it. By the size of the present revolution it is apparent that at least a part of the electorate is willing to dispense with his services.

There are also various stories floating across the border to the effect that in his old age President Diaz is several different kinds of a cruel tyrant. A book was even written and published in New York to prove this, the author going to jail for a year on the charge that he libeled one of Diaz's lieutenants.

World Pays Tribute.

These tales are likely to be told against any man who has been in power as long as Porfirio Diaz. On the other side of the shield is the world's universal regard and a national progress such as Mexico had never before known. In this development Diaz has been the leading figure. His work has been thus recounted:

Among the foremost achievements of the existing Mexican government must be counted the founding of a national school system, free from sectarian influence. The strong hand of the president is also seen in the marvelous regeneration of the capital city, which is now drained by the greatest piece of sanitary engineering in the world and which is being rapidly modernized in the matter of good pavements, parks, public buildings and canals.

Another great achievement of the Diaz administration has been the improvement of Mexican harbors on the gulf and the Pacific. The latter fact is especially notable in the instance of the Tehuantepec route. By this highway goods in transit from Atlantic ports to California have an advantage of 1,500 miles over the proposed Panama canal.

Conspicuous also has been the railway development, of which the Tehuantepec is the latest phase. At the beginning of the first term of President Diaz, in 1877, but one railway—the Mexican or Vera Cruz line, 283 miles in length—existed in the republic. In 1880 the two great systems of the Mexican National and Mexican Central railroads were commenced. Railroads now traverse every state except Lower California, Tabasco and Campeachy. At present about 12,000 miles of railroad, operated by ten companies, are in service.

An equally remarkable feature has been the solving of national financial problems. When Diaz came into power the public debt amounted to above $150,000,000, and the annual deficit in national revenues was near $10,000,000. In fourteen years the debt had been reduced 50 per cent and the government's income had met expenses.

Prevented Railway Trust.

It was Diaz that stepped into the breach and prevented a railway trust from taking charge of Mexico's transportation facilities. His remedy for that was government ownership.

He has ever been friendly to Americans. When at an earlier stage of his career the grant to an American railroad in Mexico was withheld by the parliament Diaz was out taking a ride. He came up into congress and addressed them, saying:

"Senors, you will either pass this bill or go straight home."

They looked a minute and raised the cry of "Long live the president!" and passed the bill.

When Diaz became president the first time, before his principles became known, his relatives and friends used to go to him for easy jobs under the government. They expected to be allowed to plunder the treasury in the good, old fashioned Mexican way, and they were very much disgusted when Diaz made it plain that he neither intended to loot on his own account nor to allow anybody else to do so.

Believer In Revolutions.

Although called a benevolent despot, Diaz has not forgotten his battles for liberty and is still a believer in revolutions.

"Up north," he once remarked to an American visitor, "you do not understand the evil conditions which prevail in Latin American countries and the need which exists for armed protest against them. I am still a revolutionist at heart, because I believe in progress. In Latin America revolution is the spirit of progress, the spirit of resistance to evil.

"It was through a bloody military revolution that Mexico found herself on the road to advancement, and it is owing entirely to the industrial revolution now going on, to the disgust of many conservative people, that progress is being made.

"Without frequent, persistent revolutions the political question of Spanish America would be insoluble and the Spanish American people would lapse into the conditions which prevailed in Europe during the middle ages."

Perhaps it is this belief in revolution, liberty, progress and fundamental democracy that explains Porfirio Diaz's hold on Mexico and on the world.

"If It's a Ralston It's Correct"

It is knowledge rather than "knack" which enables a man to dress both correctly and becomingly.

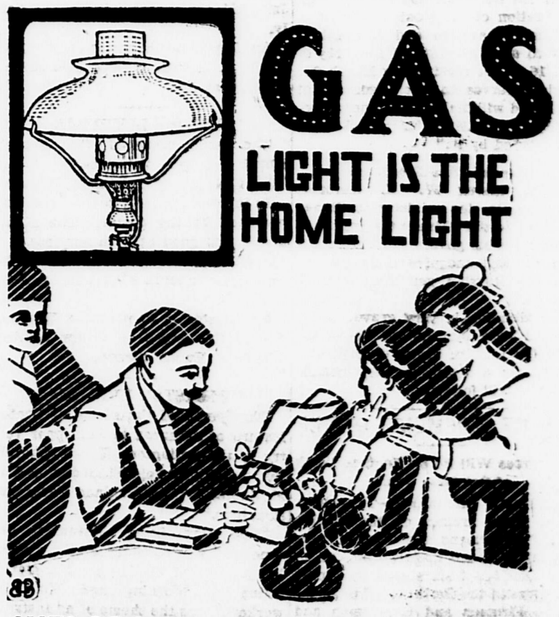

No part of a man's apparel changes in style more often or more radically than does his shoes. That is the reason why men who care to be correctly shod and who are particular about their personal appearance insist on getting "Ralston Authority Styles." We carry a sufficient variety of correct styles to enable you to express your own individuality in your selection.

The new shoe fashions are almost always first shown in Ralston Shoes. Come in and see the season's latest.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is accosted by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

McVickar defies Senator Blount to nominate Evan. Patricia and her geologist father arrive at the Sagebrush capital.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics, but finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Evan has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's mixing in politics. His father pulls wires unknown to him to have him invited to speak in a distant mining town. Hathaway, who has been trying to do business with the road and with Senator Blount, is to have a talk with Mrs. Blount.

Hathaway wants a rebate from the road in consideration of political favors. He is referred to Evan and is advised by Mrs. Blount to put Professor Anners' name on his list of stockholders.

Evan's interview with Hathaway reveals the road's misdoings. In a rage he resigns. Gantry holds up the resignation. Evan insists that it go through to McVickar.

Patricia refuses Evan again. She advises him to stick to the road and work for clean politics. He withdraws his resignation and is sent into the field on a speaking tour.

Instantly the faraway look came into the gray eyes.

"I know a heap of things that I can't tell—not just yet, son. Has McVickar been calling you down?"

"No one has called me down, but some one or something is keeping me out of the real fight. There isn't any fight that I can get into. Everywhere I go there is the same cut and dried welcome, the same predetermined enthusiasm. Sometimes it seems as if all the people I meet had been instructed to make things pleasant and easy for me."

The senator's chuckle was barely audible.

"I wouldn't find much fault with that if I were you, son," he said. "You'll get enough of the real thing by and by."

Blount felt his anger rising. He was in precisely the right mood to believe that his father, failing to make him a cog in one of the wheels in the machine, had gone about in some mysterious way to insulate him, to make it impossible for him to get into the real tide of affairs. But he kept his temper.

"It's no use," he said, with a tang of abruptness in his tone. "We are diametrically opposed to each other—you and I, dad. I stand for democracy, the will of the people and its fullest and freest expression. You stand for"—

"Well, son, what do I stand for?" queried the father, and the question was accompanied by the quizzical smile that brought the hot blood boyishly to Blount's cheek.

"If I should say what all men say—what some of them are frank enough to say even to me"—He stopped short and then went on again with better self control:

"Let's keep the peace if we can, dad. I'm sorry that you are finding it necessary to fight me and a thousand times sorrier that I've got to fight you. But I'll tell you here and now that I'll never quit this state—this native state of mine—until it has had at least one decently clean election. I have told Gantry to pass the word that I shall show the railroad up if it doesn't play fair, and I've got to hand the same thing out to you, dad. I don't want to threaten, but it is only fair to say that I haven't been going about with my eyes shut. Whether you have authorized it or not, there is a lot of crooked work going on, and if I am driven to it I can print some things that would change the political map of this state so it won't be recognizable."

For some little time after his son had left the cafe the Hon. Senator Sagebrush sat absently toying with his dessertspoon. When he rose to go out the battle light in the fierce gray eyes was the signal which not even his most faithful henchmen could always interpret, but which most men feared.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE DYNAMITER.

It was about the time that Evan Blount was finishing his fourth week of the campaign of education that the senator's wife began to detect signs of country weariness in the eyes of Miss Patricia Anners. During the last week or two some impulse which she did not take the trouble to analyze seemed to be drawing the girl toward the city. The roads around Wartrace were just as good as ever, and the free pleasures of motoring in a country where speed restrictions were conspicuous by their absence were just as keen. But now Patricia confessed freely to a longing for the sight of city streets.

"Only you mustn't consider us or me so much as you do, Mrs. Blount," she protested. "I have a dreadful suspicion that we have already interfered shamefully with your autumn plans. You are merely too kind and hospitable to admit it."

"You have interfered with nothing," was the ready assurance. "No inducement that was ever devised would take the senator away from his own state during a political campaign, and your coming has been a blessing. But for the good excuse to bring your father out here to the fossil beds we should have been mewed up in the Inter-Mountain hotel from the firing of the opening gun to the day after election. But that is neither here nor there. You are tired of the country. Shall I telephone the senator that we are going in this afternoon to stay awhile?"

"I shall be delighted," said Patricia, and the eyes which were so apt to tell tales confirmed it. Then she added, "Now that father has his box of books from the university library he will never miss us."

On their first day in the capital Evan was away, but he returned the following morning, and Mrs. Blount captured him for a theater box party.

It proved to be a rather more formidable affair than Evan had anticipated. There was a sufficient number of guests to fill two of the open dress circle boxes. Gantry was of the number, and so were the Weatherfords—father, mother, daughters and son.

Blount had been counting upon a pleasurably undisturbed evening with Patricia, but fate or a designing hostess intervened, and he found himself cornered between Mrs. Weatherford and her younger daughter, with the square shouldered reform candidate for governor strengthening the barrier which separated him from Patricia.

Blount had met Gordon socially a number of times, and in the intervals allowed him by Mrs. Weatherford he was silently studying the face of the big man, who, if the gods should so direct, might be the leader and chief political figure in the state for the succeeding two years.

It was a good face and, in Blount's estimate, an exceedingly strong one. Almost unconsciously he fell to contrasting it with that of Reynolds, the candidate for whom the corporation interests were working.

Though Blount himself was on the corporation side, he could not help admitting that the comparison was not favorable to Reynolds. He said to himself that Reynolds' face was the face of a timeserver.

Weighing the two men one against the other—Reynolds was sitting in an adjacent box with a party of railroad officials—Blount was conscious of a twinge of regret that chance or his convictions had made him a partisan of the weaker man.

Throughout the play and the intermissions the Weatherfords—mother and daughter—kept him from exchanging so much as a word with Miss Anners, whom Gantry was shamelessly monopolizing. But on the short return walk to the hotel after the play Blount resolutely pushed his friend aside and gave Patricia his arm.

"I think you owe me a very abject apology," was the way she began on him when they had such privacy as the crowded sidewalks conferred.

"Consider them made and then tell me what for," he countered.

"Consider a moment. You come to me with a really harrowing story of your new experiences, and just as I am beginning to get interested there is an interruption, and in the morning, at some perfectly impossible hour, off you go, and we hear no more of you for weeks and weeks. What have you been doing?"

"I have been doing precisely what you told me to do—preaching the gospel of honesty and fair dealing and trying my level best to make other people practice it."

"You have been successful?" she asked quickly.

"Reasonably so in the preaching, since that depended solely upon me. As to the other, I don't know. Sometimes I think the housecleaners are honestly at work, and at other times I am afraid they are putting up a front only to deceive me. Some time perhaps I may tell you how far I have had to go into the 'practical politics' armory to get my weapons."

"And your father, Evan—are you coming to understand him any better?"

He shook his head despondently. "No, or, rather, yes. I am afraid I am coming to understand him or his methods only too well. The only way we can keep from quarreling now is to banish politics when we are together."

"I am sorry," she said, and the sorrow was emphatic in her tone. "As I have said before, you don't understand him. You are judging him by standards which, however just and true they may be, are peculiarly your own standards. I know you can be broad for others when you try. Can't you be broad for him?"

It was good to hear her defend his father. It was what he would have wished his wife to do. Suddenly there arose within him a huge reluctance to lessen or to weaken in any way her trust in David Blount.

"Let us say that the fault is mine," he said hastily. "God forbid that I should be the means of making you think less of him in any respect!"

"He is simply a grand old man—the first I have ever known for whom the hackneyed phrase seemed to have been made," she asserted warmly. "If he has faults I am sure they are nothing more than gigantic virtues, the faults of a man who is too strong to be little in any way."

With Patricia in town, the "silver tongued spellbinder of Quaretaro Mesa," as the Daily Capital called the new division counsel, would have been glad to evade some of the speaking appointments, but as his engagements had been made for some days in advance he was obliged to go.

"I have expected a catastrophe of this kind. It has happened before and will happen again. I have prophesied this because of my knowledge of conditions of buildings as they exist in New York which are of the so-called fireproof kind, but which are merely slow burning. This is true because the structural conditions are such that it is easy to save the building, but hard to save life."

The investigation will be split into three correlated sections:

First—The coroner's inquest to fix the responsibility and to determine the cause of deaths.

Second—The independent investigation by Bostwick and Manley to gather evidence to be submitted to the grand jury.

Third—The personal investigation to be made by the grand jurymen.

No Outside Fire Escape

Nearly all, if not all, of the victims were employed by the Triangle Waist company on the eighth, ninth and tenth floors of a ten-story loft building at 23 Washington place. There was not an outside fire escape on the building.

A corner on the eighth floor was the point of origin of the fire and the three upper floors only were swept. On the ninth floor fifty bodies were found, sixty-three or more were crushed to death by jumping, and more than thirty bodies clogged the elevator shafts. The loss to property will not exceed $100,000.

Pedestrians going home through Washington place to Washington square at 4:50 Saturday afternoon were scattered by the whiz of something rushing through the air before them; there was a horrible flop on the pavement and a body flattened on the flags. Wayfarers on the opposite side of the street saw the windows of the three upper floors of the building black with girls crowding to the sills. There were no fire escapes.

"Don't jump, don't jump!" yelled the crowd. But the girls had no choice. The pressure of the maddened hundreds behind them and the urging of their own fears were too strong.

Fire Out In Half an Hour

Four alarms were run within fifteen minutes. Before the engines could respond, before the nets could be stretched or the ladders raised, five girls had fallen from the eighth and ninth floors so heavily they broke through the iron roofs of the subcellar and crashed through the very streets into the vaults below. In an hour the fire was out; in half an hour it had done its worst; probably the death list was full in twenty minutes.

The building stands on a corner with exposure on two sides, but the only fire escape was on the interior, opening on a light and air shaft. In all there were seven exits—the single fire escape, two freight elevators at the rear, two passenger elevators in front and two stairways. All of them proved useless, and practically all who escaped either climbed to the roof and scrambled thence to the roof of the building occupied by the American Book company adjoining, or fled in the first rush for safety before the crush and smoke grew too thick.

Caught In Death Trap

The building stands with shell intact and barely scarred, and it is impossible for one who did not see it to imagine how the flames in so short space could have wrought such havoc. Seven hundred hands, 500 of them women, were employed by the waist company. They sat in rows at their whirring machines, the tables before them piled with flimsy cloth, the floors littered with lint, the air itself ful of flying, inflammable dust. The first rush of flame was almost an explosion. Operators died in their chairs, their lungs seared by inhaling flame. Others were crowded into the elevator shafts after the cars had made their last trip. Still others were pushed off the inadequate fire escape.

In such a horrible stream did the bodies overflow from the windows that the fire nets, stretched by the first companies to arrive, were soon gorged beyond capacity. Twelve bodies weighted one net to the bursting point, but the bodies kept on raining to the pavement, through meshes that could no longer support them.

Many were suffocated or burned to death within the building. Many who fought their way to the windows and leaped met death as surely but perhaps more quickly on the pavements below.

Taft Congratulates Ambassador When He Announces That He Will Be Diaz' Premier—Considered a Master Stroke by Mexico's Chief Executive—Peace Advocate Who Will Be Acceptable to All Factions In Country

Washington, March 27.—The report that John H. Dignowitty and three other Americans had been executed by order of a Mexican courtmartial in Chihuahua, Mex., on account of connection with the revolution, is untrue. American Consul Edwards, at Juarez, who had been instructed by the state department to investigate the report, telegraphed this information.

The reported execution of four Americans, Adams, Young, Howard and Shanley, at Agua Prieta, for participation in the revolution, is denied by the Mexican military authorities at Nogales, according to a telegram received by the department from American Consul Dye, at that point. Dye is continuing his investigation.

Converse and Blatt, the Americans now held in Juarez jail, were arrested by Mexicans and taken across the border, according to a report of surveyors who went over the ground thirty-two miles east of El Paso. The surveyors reported the Americans were captured about 200 feet north of the nearest bank of the river. The report then states the Mexicans entered United States territory to capture the boys.

Francisco De La Barra, Mexican ambassador to the United States, was named minister of foreign relations of the new Mexican cabinet by President Diaz. De La Barra telegraphed his acceptance of the portfolio to Mexico City.

Immediately after telegraphing his acceptance De La Barra went to the White House and informed President Taft. The president expressed pleasure at the ambassador's appointment and congratulated him warmly.

Senor De La Barra has not been identified with any particular political party in Mexico and the significance of his appointment is that it is confidently expected to meet with the hearty approval of all factions in that country. He has devoted himself chiefly to the foreign relations of Mexico, having been ambassador to various countries.

He has always taken a deep interest in arbitration and universal peace, and has taken a prominent part in furthering the cause of arbitration among Washington diplomats.

The ambassador is popular with the local revolutionary representatives. They have confidence in his ability.

In Mexican circles it is pointed out that Diaz has accomplished a master stroke by naming De La Barra to a place in his cabinet because of his renown in Mexico as well as the confidence that foreign financiers would place in his governmental policy because of the record De La Barra made in Europe.

HORSES BURNED AT BRAINTREE

Barn on the Old Poor Farm Destroyed Sunday Night

The fire in a barn on the old Poor farm at Braintree Sunday evening made quite a spectacular blaze that was plainly seen from Quincy. Many thought the fire in Quincy but it was a Braintree alarm.

The barn was occupied by Frank A. Hayden and entailed a loss of $1800, which included three horses, two express wagons, harnesses, farm implements, hay and grain. Mr. Hayden is engaged in the express business and had retired for the night. He had been to the barn earlier in the evening to feed the horses, but brought his lantern back into the house. He was aroused by hearing the horses stamping and hastily dressing ran out and tried to get the horses out, but was unable to do so, as the fire had become too hot.

In the meantime some one had seen the fire from a distance and had sounded Box 43. Mr. Hayden ran to Box 147 near his home which he sounded. This acted as a general alarm and called out all the apparatus. The L of the house caught fire, but was extinguished, although the heat smashed all the windows.

PRESIDENT BRYANT PRESIDENT.

Although President Bryant, who has become famous for his Rhode Island Reds, does not now go so fully into the raising of this particular breed of fowl as formerly, he still retains his interest in poultry raising, and his activity in the American Poultry Association of which he is president. The annual meeting of the association was held at St. Louis last August and was presided over by President Bryant. The stenographic report of this meeting has just been received and a perusal of its pages shows that President Bryant presided over the deliberations of that body in his characteristic way; and that business was not allowed to lag during the four days' session. The report is a printed document of over 200 pages and is brim-full of matters that are of interest to all poultry fanciers. Several interesting lectures were given during the meeting which contain much valuable information.

President Bryant was reelected president for the year 1910-1911, and is chairman of a special committee appointed to revise the constitution and by-laws of the association the committee to present the revised edition ready for consideration at the next annual meeting.

NEW WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

Evidences of extensive building operation are fast assuming shape on the new Wollaston school lot. The ground has been staked out, and excavations for the foundation are partially made. C. S. Cunningham & Son, the contractors, have erected a good sized office building and the entire tract is taking on a businesslike air. The situation of the building provides for a large playground in the rear. It is expected the new building will be ready for occupancy about January 1, 1912. The two-family house located on the eastern side of the lot, corner of Beale and Taylor streets, will be disposed of in the near future and the ground left clear for improving the land. When completed the building and its grounds will be a valuable asset to the surrounding neighborhood.

Telegraphers Threaten Strike

Louisville, March 27.—Chairman C. H. Mulhall of the general grievance committee of the Order of Railway Telegraphers announces that the telegraphers on the entire Illinois Central system will strike March 30 if the railroad has not consented to the increase in wages on or before that time.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teasponful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BRIEFS

Ninety-seven meetings in the interests of clean journalism will be heard this evening one at Braintree. All are under the auspices of the Christian Science churches.

While there is a falling off in the number of scarlet fever cases some new cases have been reported during the past few days. The Board of Health however believes that the worst is over.

Many residents in the vicinity of the Massachusetts Fields school passed a sleepless morning on Sunday. Sometime in the early hours between one and two, on account of crossed wires the gong on the north side of the school began to ring and continued until late Sunday morning when the proper authorities were notified and the trouble remedied.

If you cannot get in to the flower exhibit in Boston call at the Ledger Office and see one of the prize winners, the finest pot of single daffies we ever saw. William Patterson our local florist makes a specialty of Dutch bulbs and has wonderful success judging by the specimen in the Ledger Office. The foliage is very tall and green and the blossoms a mass of large yellow bells. We are the envy of all callers but we are not afraid of having our floral ornament stolen for it is no little plant easily carried off but a sizeable affair. Thanks Mr. Patterson, we appreciate the gift.

SCARLET FEVER.

Reports concerning the scarlet fever epidemic have been wrong both with regard to the number of cases and the people who were infected. The situation has been grossly misrepresented to many people, one instance being that of a woman who was told there were 80 cases among the Finns. As a matter there is not a single case among the Finnish people. Rev. J. E. Lillback, pastor of the Buckley street church spent two days last week visiting the sick not only of his own congregation but of all the Finnish families in town and not one case of scarlet fever was discovered. The physicians who have charge of the Finnish families were all visited and they are willing to carry out the statements of Mr. Lillback. Most of the cases existing at the present time are among the Italians. A few Swedish children are infected and one or two American children. The epidemic has been stopped and in a weeks' time all the present cases will be convalescent.

TRIBUTE TO QUINCY BOY

Kind Words Said of Work of Richard E. Brooks

The Sunday Globe had a half-page illustrated article on the work of Richard E. Brooks of Quincy who has taken high rank as a sculptor. It was with the unveiling of the bronze statue of Col. Cass on Boston common, says the article that it was seen that a new sculptor of real merit had come to the fore. It is one of the very best works of its kind in America and in dignity and graphic power it ranks with the Farragne of Saint Gaudens.

This statue was exhibited in the salon in Paris in 1899 and received a gold medal. Mr. Brooks was for several years a pupil of Truman H. Bartlett and in 1893 went to Paris studying in the Colorossi school and later with Ingelbert and Jean Paul Aube.

Before going abroad he produced portrait busts of several prominent men among which was that of Gov. William E. Russell.

Other notable works are the bust of Oliver Wendell Holmes, The "Chant de la Vague," Charles Carroll and John Hanson. It was of these works that Marcel Fonquier wrote in Le Journal: "They are equally remarkable for their simplicity and decorative style. Better treatment could hardly have been given to subjects seemingly so unpromising, but which in this case are elevated and ennobled by dignity and sentiment."

Other commissions executed by Mr. Brooks are the statues of John Haynes and Roger Ludlow for the Hartford state capitol, a bust of Gen. Francis A. Walker, so long the honored president of the Massachusetts institute of Technology, 15 medallions of the ex-mayors of Boston in the mayor's office and many busts and relief portraits of private individuals. Mr. Brooks' latest finished work is the statue and monument to William H. Seward, recently unveiled in Seattle, Wash. In his Paris studio he is now bringing to completion a statue and monument to J. M. Hood of Baltimore.

Although Mr. Brooks prefers Paris as the ideal city for a sculptor, he is no less an American in his sympathies and affiliations. Standing before his Seward in his studio in the Rue Falguiere, he said that in Paris he found it much easier to carry out the design of a large work, owing to the better facilities there than in Boston or New York, as well as the greater skill of the assistants. It should be understood that he sculptor makes his first design on a small scale, from which the full-size figure is enlarged chiefly by mechanical processes.

Mr. Brooks' alert intelligence and his enthusiasm for his art have brought him into association with many of the most distinguished men of his profession in Paris and America. His wide knowledge and public spirit have made his services much in demand in the installation of exhibitions, and he is always willing to give generously of his time and thought for the furtherance of the best art interests. Besides the commendation of his fellow sculptors, Mr. Brooks has received many official honors; a gold medal of the third class at the Paris salon of 1899, a first-class gold medal, Paris exhibition, 1900, and a first-class gold medal Pan-American Buffalo 1903. His public and private commissions would seem to have left him little leisure for the production of purely ideal or fanciful subjects—such as a sculptor enjoys doing to please himself—unless we place in this class his relief portraits of children. These reveal a fine observation of the grace and charm of youth, and are designed and modeled with much taste and skill.

HAIR TURNED WHITE

Woman Seeks $6000 Damages From a Motor Car Company

Fort Wayne, Ind., March 27.—Mrs. Dorothea Roose has filed suit here against a motor car company to recover $6000 for damages alleged to have been sustained when the car struck an automobile from which she was watching the Vanderbilt cup race on Long Island, Oct. 1 last.

Louis Chevrolet was driving the machine which, she says, struck and overturned the automobile in which she sat, inflicting serious injuries to her spine and head, causing her hair to turn white from the shock.

Despondent Bartender a Suicide

Lowell, Mass., March 27.—Despondent because he had lost his position, Antoine Manville, a bartender, committed suicide by shooting. He leaves a widow.

—From the number of second hand automobiles advertised, one concludes that the same social stigma attaches to last year's motor as to last year's Easter hat.—Chelsea Record.

SURPRISED THEIR FRIENDS.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Nix are extending felicitations to the happy pair who returned from their wedding trip Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Nix (nee May L. Harmon) were united in marriage Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock at the home of Rev. R. J. Davis of the Calvary Baptist church, who officiated at the ceremony. The couple started for New York immediately after the knot was tied and surprised many friends upon their return on Saturday by announcing the tidings of their marriage. They will make their home temporarily with John Nix brother of the groom.

THAYER ACADEMY MEET.

The events at the Thayer Academy indoor meet at Braintree on Saturday evening resulted as follows:

Potato race—Won by Bower '14, Small '12 second, Page '14 third.

Three-legged race—Won by Bates '14, McClue '14 second.

High dive—Won by Burnham '14, Bradford '13 second, Carson '13 third. Distance—5ft. 10 in.

Hight jump—Won by Whitten '12, Carson '13 second, Churback '11 third. Height—5ft. 11in.

Sack Race—Won by Small '12, Carson '13 second, Abercrombie '12 third.

Class 1914 took first place with 19 points. Class 1912 was second with 16 points, Class 1913 scored 4 points. Class 1915 took one, and Class 1911 but one.

A SPRING DAY.

Sunday was an ideal spring day and as a result heavy garments were laid aside and spring clothing made its appearance. Many people improved the opportunity for an outing walk, and the parks were full of people enjoying the day. Extra cars were run on all street car lines and there were thousands of automobiles out.

SUES FOR $100,000

Chorus Girl Charges Millionaire's Son With Breach of Promise

New York, March 27.—Suit for $100,000, in which breach of promise is alleged, was brought by Miss Rose Deutsch, a chorus girl, against Harold Dady, son of a millionaire Brooklyn contractor and political leader.

Scores of letters bearing such endearing terms as "Sweet Rose" and "My Dearest Rose" figure in the case. The plaintiff alleges that she first met Dady in Havana. Subsequently Dady married an actress of "Parisian Widows" company.

WOMAN'S NECKLACE MAY FURNISH CLUE

Naval Private Found Murdered In Kittery Baseball Park

Portsmouth, N. H., March 27.—The owner of a woman's necklace is being searched for by navy yard and civil authorities to clear up the murder of Private J. E. Rasmussen, 28, attached to the prison ship Southery, whose mutilated body was found lying in the Kittery baseball grounds Sunday. The necklace was found close by the body of Rasmussen.

Following an autopsy, Corporal J. E. Ganson, attached to the prison ship Topeka, was put under guard on the prison ship Southery. Ganson left the yard with Rasmussen on a twenty-four hours' leave of absence at 4 p. m. Saturday. He is said to have returned to the ship Saturday night at 10 o'clock, his hands discolored with iodine.

CONVICTED BY A SHADOW

Man's Attack on His Wife Was Seen on a Window Shade

London, March 27.—A shadowgraph of a crime was described in a London court, when John Francis was sent to prison for two months for assaulting his wife.

A neighbor, passing in the early morning, saw thrown on the window blind by the light of a lamp the shadow of a man threatening his wife with a hatchet. As she ran to the window she saw, in the shadow picture, the axe fall on the woman's head.

The injured wife made an amazing plea in court. She said it was an accident, but the magistrate nevertheless passed sentence and bound the man over.

NEW ENGLAND APPLES BEST

They Are Great Money Makers, Says a Noted Orchardist

Boston, March 27.—It was asserted by John H. Hale that New England apples are far superior to those raised in other parts of the United States. Hale is a famous nursery man and orchardist. He spoke on "The Horticultural Awakening" in Horticultural hall, under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural society.

"Here in New England there is a great field," said Hale, "for legitimate investment in our orchard properties if handled by men of integrity and wide experience."

WOLLASTON TENNIS CLUB

Make a Bid for Norfolk County Tournament

The annual meeting of the Wollaston Tennis club was held in Odd Fellows hall on Saturday evening, a large number being present.

The following officers and directors were re-elected for the coming year:

President—Arthur B. Hillman.

Clerk—Herbert H. Albee.

Treasurer—Charles E. Barker.

Directors—The above officers, F. L. Hayes and C. H. Baker.

By a vote of the club the directors were authorized to purchase the land now occupied by the club's courts off Beale street and look into the purchase of additional adjacent land with the intention of installing six in place of the present four courts.

The club is in an excellent financial condition and has a membership of about fifty with a waiting list of fifteen. With the enlargement of the grounds it is probable that the waiting list may be accomodated and new members added.

Application has been made to the United States National Lawn Tennis Association for the holding of the doubles championship for Norfolk county on the club's courts. It is expected that this event will, as last year, be held in Wollaston on June 17.

The work of putting the courts in condition will be started in the next two weeks and play will be started on April 19.

DRIVE THEM OUT.

To the Editor:

Messrs. Chase, Richards & Hultman have over their own signatures protested in your columns against the boxing exhibitions which have been given in our city. The only utterance on the other side is from an anonymous writer who conceals his identity over the signature "Fair Play." The latter starts in by saying "Quite a few citizens called on Mayor Shea to protest against the boxing exhibition" and ends by an attack on Constable Hultman. I take it for granted that the three gentlemen who signed their names to their letters like myself, speak for scores of our citizens. The prominent men who will meet Mayor Shea this evening with another protest also speak for others as well as themselves. We who have had to deal with fake organizations for years "Smelt a mouse" as soon as the Quincy Rowing Club (?) started in business. If it is legally incorporated let the public know it and who are its officers. One need not beat about the bush in discussing the present situation. The ethical side of the question can be for the present ignored. The law which Constable Hultman has already quoted is sufficiently explicit. Here it is again.

REVISED LAWS.

Chapter 207, Section 12.—Whoever engages in or gives or promotes a public boxing match or sparring exhibition, or whoever engages in a private boxing match or sparring exhibition for which the contestants have received or have been promised any pecuniary reward, remuneration or consideration whatsoever, directly or indirectly, shall be punished by a fine of not more than two hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Will he, they or it, whoever run these exhibitions insult the common sense of the Mayor by asking him to believe that men who make a business of sparring at exhibitions or others who engage in them come to Quincy and contribute "free gratis for nothin" their services where the admission fee is one dollar and more. The statement that none but members can secure tickets is absurd. I know personally two strangers who had little difficulty in securing admission and with the means at my command for investigation I hazard nothing in saying that I can learn of a good many others. Mayor Shea knows the law and will doubtless act under Sec. 1 of Chapter 274 which says the Mayor of the city may revoke or suspend such a license as that which was granted with the understanding that the boxers receive no compensation and that the club was a bona fida organization to whose boxing exhibition only members were admitted. Brockton, Hyde Park, Chelsea, Salem and other places have driven out similar fake organizations. Why should Quincy which is not only the city of presidents, but the city of homes, tolerate them?

Rufus B. Tobey.

COUNTY AND SOUTH SHORE

Little Items of Interest in Towns About Quincy

The net debt of Dedham is $281,340. The total appropriations of 1910 were $252,000. The assessed value of the land is $4,245,325 and the value of the buildings is $4,923,550.

Copies of the complete original records of the town of Hull for the past 275 years have been made. A list of births and marriages during a number of years about the middle of the 19th century lost by fire have been recovered from records at the state house.

SUNDAY SERVICES

SWEDISH METHODIST.

The pastor preached at the Sunday morning service taking his text from Lev. 4:29.

The Sunday school services were conducted by William Gelotte.

The Epworth league meeting at 6.30 was led by David Wollander. The Bible reading was from the 66th Psalm.

In the evening the pastor spoke on the subject "Jesus, the cross bearer." Two texts were used, Mark 15:20,21 and John 19:17. A pleasing duet was sung by Miss Edith Olson and Harry Anderson and Miss Olga Olson rendered a splendid solo.

The regular prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening.

The monthly business meeting of the Epworth league will be held Friday evening in the vestry. Refreshments will be served after the business is transacted.

The death of Mrs. Maria Olson has removed from the congregation the oldest church member. Mrs. Olson died last Monday morning at the home of her daughter, 35 Arthur street at the age of 81 years and one day. The funeral services were conducted by pastor Rydstrom Thursday afternoon. Many friends attended the services and the floral tributes were plenteous and beautiful. A handsome wreath was sent by the church. The pastor took the text for the sermon from Zech 14:7.

FINNISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The pastor preached at the Sunday morning service taking for his theme, "Children of law and faith." Spiritual slavery and the freedom of faith were contrasted.

At the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting the pastor gave a special charge to young men taking for his theme: "Modern Baal Worship."

In the evening the pastor's theme was "Positive and Negative advice to Christians."

At a meeting held Saturday evening four new members were voted into the church, one of these was Swen Christiansen who is expecting to enter the ministry. Mr. Christiansen has had a fine education and has attained a mastery over four languages, Russian, Swedish, Finnish and English.

A Laymens movement among Finns is to be started next Sunday. Fourteen church members have offered their services for the week, two speaking each night. It is expected that all the Finnish people of the city will be reached in this way. There will be special music each evening.

An experience meeting for church members will be held Tuesday evening of this week. John Palomaki will be present and will speak.

The Ladies' sewing circle will meet Thursday afternoon in the church vestry.

The regular church prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening.

The pastor will deliver the fourth of his series of lectures on American Citizenship Friday evening in the church.

The Christian Endeavor society will hold its monthly business meeting Saturday evening.

CALVARY BAPTIST.

The pastor took the text of his Sunday morning sermon from the third verse of Jude's epistle. "Contention for the Faith," was the subject of his sermon.

At the session of the Sunday school the first quarter's lessons were reviewed. Deacon Farquhar took up the review of the first six lessons, and the pastor conducted the study of the last six.

The Y. P. S. C. E., meeting was led by Miss Eva Scarborough.

In the evening the pastor spoke on the theme "Man's complaint," Text Gen. 42.36.

The audience was unusually large at the evening service. Four people were baptized.

The annual business meeting of the church will be held Tuesday evening.

The regular prayer meeting will be held on Thursday evening. "Power and Prayer" is the subject.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

The Sunday morning sermon was delivered by the pastor who took for his subject "Confidence in God." Text Prov. 3:26.

In the evening, Rev. W. J. Leverett of Hainan, China, who is on a year's furlough, spoke on "Conditions in China."

The World in Boston Stewards will meet in the church this evening.

On Tuesday evening there will be a meeting of the Boys' club.

The Ladies' Aid society will meet on Wednesday evening at 7.30.

Rev. W. J. Leverett will speak at both prayer meetings on Thursday evening. The Young People's prayer-meeting is held at 7 o'clock. At the 7.30 service, a stereopticon lecture will be given on the "customs and people of China." Nature Chinese costumes will be shown. This will take the place of the monthly missionary meeting usually held under the auspices of the Women's Missionary society.

A meeting of Session will be held immediately after the prayer meeting. Any people wishing to unite with the church will have an opportunity to meet the committee at that time.

The Home department of the Bible school will meet Friday evening.

The Sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered next Sunday morning.

SPORTING NOTES.

The Milton Five defeated Lawrence Y. M. C. A. 39 to 37 in a very exciting game of basketball Saturday evening. Powell, Shields and Craig were the star men for the home team and Gavin excelled for Lawrence. Shields shot the winning basket during the last few seconds of play.

John Reardon of Holbrook has signed up for the fourth season with the Utica, N. Y., team. He has been the star twirler for this team all four seasons. He is a southpaw with great speed and control. He leaves Holbrook on April 1.

The dual meet between the Employed Boys and Students of the Y. M. C. A. will be held this evening in the local gymnasium. Many interesting contests are expected.

The annual championship events will take place in the Y. M. C. A. next Saturday evening.

The Milton Midgets defeated the Fall River boys club basketball team 17 to 16 at Cunningham gymnasium, East Milton, Saturday evening. This game decided the Junior championship of southern Massachusetts.

CLEAN JOURNALISM THEME OF MANY MEETINGS

Publisher Must Exercise His Function As Preceptor to Old and Young Alike

The Home is the Bulwark and High Standards Necessary

Simultaneous meetings in the interests of "Clean Journalism" were held all over New England on Monday evening under the auspices of the Christian Science churches. People in this vicinity were invited to the hall in Post Office block at Braintree. The attendance would have been much larger had the evening been favorable.

Lewis C. Strang of Weymouth presided, and spoke from experience in the newspaper field before introducing Henry L. Upton of Quincy, who had the principal address. Mr. Strong enlarged on five essentials for clean journalism:— Accuracy, discrimination, enterprise, freedom, and knowledge.

The address read by Mr. Upton was one prepared for all the meetings and only one-half of it is printed below. The Daily Ledger heartily endorses it in its entirety, and is pleased to give the movement encouragement. Mr. Upton said:

In discussing clean journalism tonight it is not the intention to enter the realm of the impossible. Instead, this address will be confined to a practical basis—a basis that is taking as a standard the policy that has been adopted by one successful newspaper. When criticism is made it is not of individual instances, but of a condition that obtains throughout the great field of journalism. Also let us remember that clean journalism has just as many essentials as any other class of journalism, and its three potent factors are policy, readers and advertising.

But above all, clean journalism must appreciate the brotherhood of man. It must recognize no difference between the worthy poor man and the multimillionaire; it must commend those who succeed and encourage those who fail; it must believe in the country and its workers; it must deal with measures more than with men.

Broadly speaking, yellow journalism comprises the newspapers and periodicals that are without conscience; those publications which pander to the prejudices and passions of the ignorant; that serve up brutalizing sports, the follies of society, the abnormalities of crime and degeneracy; those publications that take it for granted there is some moral justification for printing advertisements that are flagrantly dishonest; that for their own business ends forget the community is dependent upon the newspapers for its information and guidance concerning political, social and commercial matters.

When you take up a newspaper, you have before you a window through which you should look upon the activities of mankind. In your mind's eye, each can go over the first page of today's paper and the concrete opinion will be that nothing good has happened.

THAT IS THE POINT.

Why disaster and crime should be considered prime for blatant display, and the good that mankind is doing hid away, no one seems able to reason out. But there is a reason. It is not apparent to the casual headline reader, but the student of newspaperdom will tell you that more than forty years ago journalistic endeavor was wrested from its well-established position of editorial worth, and since then the standards of newspaperdom have been ephemeral.

The unthinking publisher of today's newspaper will tell you that the public demands the class of journalism in existence, but to the thinker it is patent that the public takes what it gets, reads the black-typed statements, and in a skeptical attitude turns elsewhere for instructive information.

What then is the basic reason for a change in a public sentiment that once awaited the arrival of the press be-

Card Tables And Folding Chairs To Rent

Don't go scouting around the neighborhood for chairs and tables when you hold that card party.

Just think of it! How out of place the various styles of tables and chairs look.

A big table there, a small table here. A reception chair at this table and a large rocker there.

The Burrows' folding tables and chairs take less space. They're in a class with the best furniture.

Mahogany finished, nicely polished, without a scratch or mar, they give tone to the party and make the gathering doubly delightful.

Large gatherings accommodated as well as small parties.

Delivered at your home, and taken away again for 50 cents a set. *

Will rent chairs or tables separately.

WOLLASTON SCHOOLHOUSE

What Shall Be Done With Old Building and Lot

With the acquisition of a new lot and the commencement of a new building for the Wollaston school comes the question of the disposition to be made of the old schoolhouse and grounds.

Talk was current at one time of turning the lot into a public playground but as ample space has been provided for this in the rear of the new building no move in this direction will probably be taken.

The location of the old lot on Beale street, between Winthrop and Prospect avenues, is a most central one and the demand for available house lots in this vicinity is great. As the city can evidently have no use for the land following its abdication as a school site; it may be cut up and sold for building purposes. The original Safford deed, through which the city received the greater portion of the land, provides that the city may sell the land if the money received is retained as a fund for educational purposes in Quincy.

The present school house is in excellent condition for a building of its kind, and the newer addition in the rear might well be removed, remodeled and used by some church as an attractive parish house. A portion of the building with slight changes might be made to serve as a public hall.

The movement for a community house in Wollaston furnishes possibly another use for the structure as the committee in charge of the project might see fit to purchase the entire building remodel it and use either a whole or part of the lot for the purposes contemplated.

Whatever use is finally made of the structure it is certain that it will be but a short time after the new building is occupied before some distinct change is seen in the property, as it will not be allowed to long remain idle and deteriorate in the wide awake community of Wollaston.

CHIEF PACKARD GETS OIL BATH

Falls into Oil Well at Scammell & Sons Fire

The alarm from Box 172 at 6.43 Monday evening called the department to a blaze in the blacksmith shop of S. Scammell & Son on New road. When the department arrived dense clouds of black smoke was pouring from the building and it was hard to tell just how much of a fire was in progress. District Chief Packard was in charge and three lines of hose were run from hydrants and gallons of water was poured into the building.

The blacksmith shop butted up against a garage where there was more or less gasoline and although the garage is built of concrete there was danger of the fire communicating to it. Good work of the department however confined the fire to the blacksmith shop.

The fire was out in half an hour and then it was seen that although there had been a great amount of smoke that the fire loss was small it being estimated that $300 would cover the loss.

It seems that in the blacksmith shop is a pit in which wagon tires are placed to be heated. Oil is poured over the tires and set on fire. This furnace was in use late in the afternoon and it is supposed that some of the oil about the pit took fire. It was the burning oil that made the dense smoke.

During the fire while groping through the smoke Chief Packard fell into a well of fish oil used in heating tires. Some of the firemen saw him fall and pulled him out uninjured although he will smell of oil for some time.

The alarm from Box 136 at 8.05 Monday night was a false alarm.

The news was a severe shock to the little girl as she believed her father to be in the best of health, although he has probably had heart trouble for some time.

MAYORS AND SLECTMEN

Out Strong Against the "Real Boston" Bill

The mayors and selectmen o fthe Metropolitan district were out in large numbers at the State House today and spoke in opposition to the "Real Boston" bill. Probably 150 opponents in all were before the Committee on Meropolitan Affairs, including Henry M. Faxon and Frank F. Prescott of Quincy.

City Solicitor Slocum of Newton conducted the opposition, and other speakers against the bill were: Roger Wolcott of Milton, Mayor Hatfield of Newton, Arthur W. Blackmore of Newton, the town solicitor of Winthrop, Mayor Walker of Waltham, ex-Mayor B. B. Johnson of Waltham, selectman Galliano of Hull, selectman Rice of Brookline, Councillor Bemis of Brookline, Mayor Taylor of Medford, selectman Pond of Winchester, ex-Mayor Lovering of Medford, W. H. Colcord of Revere, Arthur E. Horton, and residents of Lynn, Nahant, Watertown and other places.

Some of the objections were that Boston is not a decadent city; that Mayors and Selectmen were elected to control local affairs; that the bill was not workable; that members could not give necessary time to council; that it was an annexation movement; that loose federation would lead to close federation; that representation in council would be unequal; that it was a useless bill and dangerous bill; that the smaller towns would be ignored; that it was not needed to boom Boston industrially; that bill was unconstitutional; that it was experimental; that towns would not be able to get as good men for selectmen, and they would not have time to attend the council; and others.

The hearings closed about 1 o'clock this afternoon.

ATLANTIC OUT OF IT.

The trustees of the Thomas Crane Public library were i hopes to open a reading room similar to that at West Quincy in Atlantic this summer but as the Finance committee cut the amount asked for in the annual budget it will probably be impossible to open the contemplated reading room.

LAUNCH POSTPONED.

The launch of the steam trawler Crest which was to have taken place Wednesday at the Fore River yards has been postponed until next week. Probably Tuesday.

NO AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATIONS

Annual Order as Reported by Finance Committee Is Adopted Without Change

Modification of Plans for Montclair School Authorized

Monday night's adjourned meeting of the City Council was short yet considerable important business was transacted. The meeting was held to push along the order for the annual appropriations. Several attempts were made to amend the order, but all failed, and the order was passed as reported. It was printed in full in the Daily Ledger March 21.

Councilman Craig was absent.

JURORS.

A venire was received for the drawing of traverse jurors for the Supreme court. The Mayor, City Clerk and Councilman Studley drew the following: Joseph A. Dasha, Frank E. Kennard, C. Frank Randall, Walter H. Andrews and Daniel Schouler, Jr.

MONTCLAIR SCHOOL.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Commissioner of Public Works stating that the bids for the Montclair school amounted to $3,835.-26 more than the appropriation, and to go ahead with the work meant more money or to change some features in the plans.

The Mayor in his communication stated that after consultation with the School Committee certain changes had been made, which would in no way interfere with the usefulness or durability of the building, and that these changes had been approved by the School Committee and he therefore asked the Council to approve the changes.

A communication was also received from the School Committee approving of the modifications made in the plans.

Communications laid on the table until later when Councilman Sandberg offered an order authorizing the Mayor to cause the specifications of the building to be modified. Adopted.

ASSISTANT ASSESSORS.

The Mayor forwarded a list of assistant assessors as follows:

Ward One—James P. Dunn.
Ward Two—Joseph A. Delory.
Ward Three—Leo J. McMaster.
Ward Four—Edward T. Monahan.
Ward Five—John T. Cain.
Ward Six—Eben Stocker.
Placed on file.

REGISTRAR OF VOTERS.

A communication was received from the Mayor reappointing Henry W. French a member of the Board of Registrars of Voters for a term of three years beginning April 1. Placed on file.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Secretary of State asking the Council to certify if the applicants for incorporation as the Quincy Athletic Association had ever been convicted of violation of the laws, etc also a letter from the Chief of Police stating that none of the incorporators had been convicted. Referred to Committee on Licenses.

PETITIONS.

A petition for a sewer on Centre street was referred to the Executive.

A petition for the sprinkling of Safford street was referred to the committee on Streets.

A petition against granting the street railway a trolley freight location on Washington street signed by Theophilus King and many others were referred to the Committee on Streets.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

We dread to think of the dearth of society gossip that will ensue when the Gould family is all married off.

When doctors disagree, the patient suffers, but when Senators disagree we have an extra session.

Arctic Explorer Shackleton says there is nothing like extreme cold and frost to make the hair grow. Dr. Cook should resemble Samson.

Senator Chauncey M. Depew says that all members of Congress "follow the bell wether" in their opinions and votes. As the leader says, so say all. Except Hobson. The will-o'-the-wisp is his guide.

"Might not an earthquake put a finish to the Panama Canal?" inquires an uneasy contemporary. Certainly; an earthquake might open up the ditch the rest of the way across.

DRIFT OF OPINION

A New York paper, speaking of an eminent player of the royal game of chess, remarks: "And chess, after all, is only a game—a magnilcent game, to be sure, but mastery of it is not a particularly enviable achievement, since it lead to nothing in itself beyond a scanty and not very dignified livelihood, and from it only few and dubious inferences can be drawn as to the mental equipment of its possessors. Strangely few of the best players have been able to do anything else notably well, and the common belief that chess supplies mental training applicable in other directions is not borne out by the history of the game." And is any game worth the candle that is played for anything more than recreation or the pleasures of victory? Chess taxes the mental powers to a greater degree than any other sport that commands the interest of mortals, and those who are devotees of the game, or who become professional and expert demonstrators of its mysteries and its possibilities, are rarely good for anything else, and are almost certain to become intellectually unbalanced and ending their lives prematurely. Of other games that are followed to the neglect of more important matters it may also be said that when one has reached the point of acknowledged championship the victory is found to be of small value. Recreation is needed by everybody, and to excel in sport is as worthy an ambition as to succeed in any other line of endeavor, but to professionalize in what should not be more than a healthy, mental, physical recreation is not good business—Lynn Item.

Benjamin Greene, who, with his partner Gaynor, in conjunction with Captain Carter, stole millions of dollars from the government, under cover of harbor improvement work in Savannah, is now a free man, after four years of servitude. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $575,000. Government attorneys sought ,without effect, to show that Greene had made financial provision for the time when he should be free from the toils of the law. It then remained for him to take the pauper's oath.

Just two lines at this juncture from a press dispatch: "Greene left Atlanta for New York. Later he will go to Europe with his wife." Which makes, as an old-time journalist was wont to say, "mighty interestin' readin'."—Salem News.

—The battleship New York will cost $13,000,000. How that figure would have made people stare twenty-five years ago. And at the end of fifteen years, she will probably be out-classed, and retired to the rear. That has been the history of national fighting craft since the Spanish-American war, all the vessels that then formed the pride of the navy being regarded today as of little account. It is an old story.—Salem News.

YOUNG LADY HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Stray Bullet Enters House of Herbert S. Barker

The family of ex-Councilman Herbert S. Barker received quite a scare Monday evening when following the report of a rifle a bullet entered the dining room and crashed through a plate glass mirror, then into the plastering and finally dropping to the floor.

The family were at dinner at the time and Mr. Barkers daughter Florence had just left the table when the shot was heard. The bullet, a 22 calibre passed directly over the chair where Miss Barker had been seated and it was very fortunate that she left the table as she did nor she surely would have been hit.

Officer Larkin was notified and immediately began an investigation. He found that at the time the shot was fired a well known young man was on his way to the depot and that the bullet had whized through the air just over his head giving him quite a scare.

Following up the clew Officer Larkin found that the bullet had come from a small shed in the rear of Mr. Barkers house although 400 feet away. In this shed were some young men who had a rifle. They had been shooting the rifle aiming it as they supposed toward the floor. Instead of that however the muzzle was pointed higher than they thought and the bullet had gone wide from its mark.

Some idea of the power of the bullet may be had when it is known that it went through the planking of the shed, travelled 400 feet, then went through a screen in the window of Mr. Barkers house, thence through a plate glass mirror, through the back board and into the plastering.

The family of Mr. Barker have frequently heard shots during the early evening but never paid much attention to them thinking that the sound came from someone shooting at Norfolk Downs. Now that the source of the shooting has been learned it is probable that steps will be taken to put a stop to further practicing with the rifle.

It seems that the young men have been in the habit of shooting in the shed at a target and they have supposed that they aimed low enough so that the bullets would not go outside.

It is very fortunate that Miss Barker moved as she did or the careless shooting might have resulted in a fatality. Much credit is due Officer Larkin for the prompt manner in which he ran the case down.

ART EXHIBIT.

A large delegation of members of the Quincy Women's club and Junior Friday club attended the retrospective exhibition of decorative arts at Copley hall, Boston, on Monday afternoon, taking advantage of the few remaining days before its closing. The women's clubs of Medford and other cities also sent groups or individual members, and a number of teachers and pupils of the Everett High school were in attendance.

The wonderful collection of quaint furniture, old pewters, textiles and embroideries in the New England room attracted many of the visitors especially, while the Georgian room, with its examples of a little later period of art was crowded throughout the afternoon. The Sheffield plate, rare old laces, examples of Chippendale, Sheraton and Hepplewhite furniture proved instructive as well as entertaining. The ancient jewelry and valuable prints and miniatures in the little room off Copley hall drew an enthusiastic crowd from the women's club, the remarkable collection of Malbone miniatures in particular holding their attention.

In the main hall the beautiful porcelains, tapestries, jaintings and rare old books and manuscripts revealed unrealized treasures, while such interesting individual exhibits as the great bed in which Queen Elizabeth once slept, the Gothic dresser with mysterious secret compartments which once belonged to Empress Eugenie, the silver gilt tankard presented by George IV of England to the Duchess of Cleveland and by her sold to George Peabody the American millionaire received their quota of admiration and interest.

LYNN FINDS IT EXPENSIVE

To Make Change from Elevation to Depression

The Lynn Daily Item quotes engineers figures to show that it will cost the city of Lynn $597,050 more to depress the track through that city than it would if they were elevated according to plans already started. Yet the Item advocates depression, and asks the question—"can the city afford to have anything but depression?" Here are the official figures, as given by the Item, for depression of tracks:

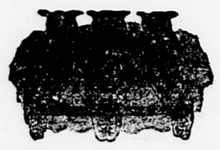

Estimated cost, two-track depression	$4,495,000
Estimated cost, two-track elevation	1,412,000
Lynn's part, two-track depression 10 per cent	449,500
Constructios already done	350,000
Cost of removal	130,000
	$480,000
Less allowance for new street at School street and for salvage	$130,000
Lynn's net cost for removing old work	350,000
Total cost to city for depression	$799,500
The city is already committed to cost for elevation	141,200
And 35 percent of $175,000 to depress Silsbee street	61,250
	$202,450
Added cost for depression over cost of elevation	$597,050

Because Lynn was so slow in waking up to its best interests, it must pay dear. Quincy should awake now before the special commissioners make their report. It will be an expensive job at best and Quincy cannot afford to make changes.

SUNDAY HOURS AT POST OFFICE.

Postmaster Mansfield referring to the matter of closing the offices in the Boston postal district on Sundays, says:

"The department is deeply interested in the wide-spread movement toward closing the postoffices on Sunday, in order to give the clerks and carriers one day's rest in seven. Many post-offices have already proceeded along these lines, and the Sunday closing has met with the general approval of the public. I am making a careful study of the situation in the Boston postal district and shall report my conclusions upon this subject to the department in the near future."

A number of petitions for minor licenses were received and referred.

TAX REFUND.

The Finance Committee reported ought to pass on the order refunding tax of $51.50 to heirs of C. H. Hardwick. Adopted.

Councilman Ericson offered an order for a tar concrete sidewalk on east side of Spear street between Coddington street and Orchard place. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Richards offered an order for a light on Quarry street near the junction of Kidder street. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Bailey offered an order granting an auctioneer's license to Emil Twomala. Adopted.

Councilman Jenkins offered an order amending the building ordinance so as to provide that no three-family dwelling should be built unless the exterior walls were of brick, cement or granite. Referred to Committee on Ordinances.

Councilman Bailey offered an order revoking the pool table license of David Hannon. Adopted. Hannon was convicted to court Monday for having gaming in his shop on the Lord's day.

Councilman Bailey offered an order for a light on Highland avenue. Referred to Executive.

SEWER EXTENSIONS.

The order appropriating $30,000 for sewer extensions took its second reading, and the rules were suspended.

On motion of Councilman Branch the number of bonds was changed from fifteen to thirty so as to read thirty notes or bonds of $1,000 each, two to mature each year.

The order was then passed to be ordained, 19 voting yes and two no as follows.

YES—Bailey, Bolster, Boyd, Branch, Cherrington, Duffy, Ericson, Forde, Gardner, Histen, Leslie, Nowland, Parlee, Richards, Ross, Sandberg, Smith, Sodergren, Studley—19.

NO—Campbell, Jenkins—2.

ABSENT—Craig.

NOT VOTING—President Bryant.

ANNUAL APPROPRIATIONS.

The order for the annual appropriations took its second reading and the rules were suspended.

Councilman Cherrington moved to amend by changing the amount for the City Council from $375 to $2,475. His object was so that an expert might be employed to investigate certain departments.

Motion lost, 4 voting yes, and 17 no.

Councilman Nowland moved to amend by making the amount for books and supplies for the school department $12,500 instead of $11,500.

Councilman Smith opposed.

Chairman Miller of the School Committee took the floor and urged the amount be increased. He was submitted to a cross fire of question by Councilman Branch, Gardner and President Bryant.

Councilmen Richards, Nowland and Bailey favored, while Councilmen Bolster and Leslie opposed.

The amendment was rejected 8 voting yes and 12 no.

Councilman Richards moved to amend by making the amount for the second clerk in the assessors department $624 instead of $676.

Councilman Smith opposed.

Motion lost.

Councilman Richards moved to make the amount of the Mayor's "Miscellaneous" $2000 instead of $3000. Motion lost.

Councilman Nowland moved to make the amount for Fire department horses and harnesses $500 instead of $1000.

Motion lost; 7 voting yes and 13 no.

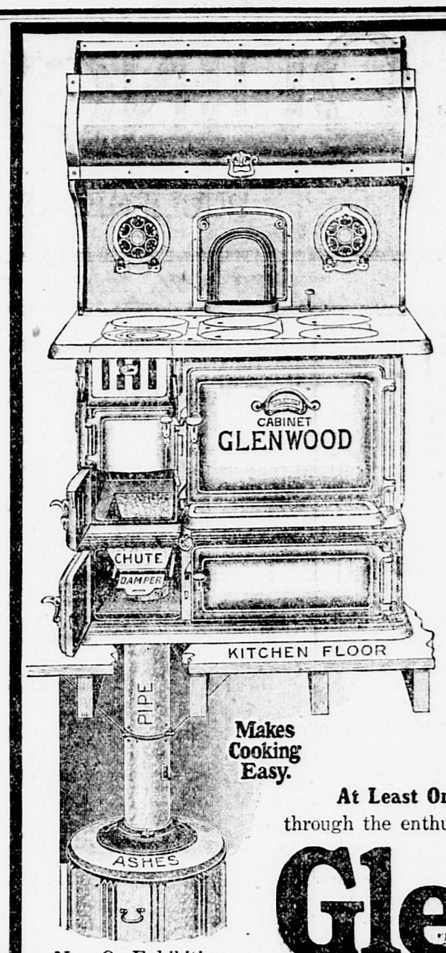

The order was then passed without amendment to be ordained.

Here's Something New

No more ashes to lug. No clumsy pan to spill dust and dirt on the kitchen floor.

The Glenwood Ash Chute

solves the problem. It is located just beneath the grate and connected by a sheet iron pipe straight down through the kitchen floor to ash barrel in cellar. No part is in sight. Not a particle of dust can escape. Just slide the damper once each day and drop the ashes directly into the ash barrel.

The Dust Tight Cover

to barrel is another entirely new Glenwood Idea and is very ingenious. The Ash Chute is sold complete with barrel and all connections, as illustrated, at a moderate price to fit any cabinet style Glenwood. This is only one of the splendid improvements of the Plain Cabinet Glenwood the Range without ornamentation or fancy nickel, "The Mission Style" Glenwood. Every essential refined and improved upon.

Up-To-Date Gas Attachments

This Range can be had with the latest and most improved Elevated or End Gas Range attachments. It has a powerful hot water front or for country use a Large Copper Reservoir on the end opposite fire box. It can be furnished with fire box at either right or left of oven as ordered. When the Ash Chute cannot be used an Improved Ash Pan is provided.

THOMAS INTERESTED

Asks Pertinent Questions at Real Boston Hearing

Among those from Quincy at the "Real Boston" hearing at the State House on Monday were W. F. Nichols, H. Everett Crane, John C. Murray, Wendell Hull, Frank F. Prescott, A. L. Whitman, Henry L. Kincaide and P. R. Blackmur.

Most of the time was occupied by Hugh Bancroft and March G. Bennett in favor of the bill. F. W. Dallinger and others claimed that Boston was 10 years behind the times, while A. P. Worthen of Weymouth thought they were 10 years ahead of time and that there had not been proper check on appropriations.

Representative Thomas of Quincy took up Mr. Dallinger's claim that the council can do more than the legislative committee on metropolitan affairs, and asked how. This point had been raised very strenuously to Mr. Bennett, and it seemed as though the committee was somewhat jealous of this attempt to quality its powers.

Representative Lomasney asked: "Do you think it fair to give Boston only one vote in the council, considering the proportion of the taxes she pays?"

"I think that Boston's large and able representation on this committee can take care of her interests after the council has reported to the committee."

Mr. Lomasney next asked whether the council is likely to do better or wiser work than paid, expert state commissioners which report to this committee.

Mr. Dallinger said that the council would at least tell the committee what the towns want.

"Haven't we a pretty good sewerage system, provided by a state commission?" asked Mr. Lomasney.

"Yes."

"Water system?"

"Yes."

"All the parks the people want?"

"I've never seen any two men agree on that."

"Well, it seems to me that having these things, you're about 10 years be hind the times," said Mr. Lomasney. (Laughter.)

"I do think the metropolitan district is about 10 years behind the times." (Great applause.)

"Hasn't Boston always got the worst of it? Did her mayor, or the mayor of Cambridge, want the Charles river basin? And now you come here and ask for a council in which Boston has one vote, paying most of the bills. Pretty generous, I call it."

"There are other problems coming up—the transit question for instance," said Mr. Dallinger.

"Don't you think the experts of the transit commission better qualified to handle a transit question than this council,' 'asked Representative Thomas.

"In technical matters, yes," said Mr. Dallinger. "But I think that he council could tell them what is wanted."

"Hasn't Cambridge, which never guaranteed to pay for transit improvements, come in and ruined our property in the West End with an elevated structure when we ought to have had a subway?"

"Perhaps you wouldn't have had it if this council had existed," said Mr. Dallinger.

A. P. Worthen, town counsel for Weymouth, said his town is unalterably opposed to annexation, but that Weymouth believes that here should be a committee to scan appropriations for the district, just as there is a committee in the town before town meeting.

Representative Thomas asked Hugh Bancroft of the chamber of commerce committee whether he would object to a referendum in the bill.

"Not if it were not for the purpose of blocking the bill," said Mr. Bancroft. "But unless this bill is passed within a very few weeks, we shall have irretrievably lost something."

"If you gain what you want Boston rises from fifth to fourth place among the cities?"

"She rises from 670,000 to 1,400,000, from a place among the 'also rans' and 'has beens' to a place in the forefront."

Mr. Thomas asked if the petitioners wouldn't be in better position if backed by votes of mass meetings in the towns. And if not, whether he didn't think the council itself unnecessary.

To questions Mr. Bancroft said that he is opposed to annexation generally: that this bill will, in his belief, operate against annexation. He thought that there is time to put the bill through in three weeks, and that if the legislature could not do it in this time, a referendum would be desirable.

"THE MAYOR HAS NO HAIR"

Mayor's Niece Writes Poem On Uncle "Bill"

Mayor Shea moved to Boston last Saturday at the request of certain prominent men in Quincy. It was found that in order to carry out the duties of his position it was necessary for him not only to leave the neighborhood but even to get out of his own home. Margaret, the little daughter of his brother, "Mike" Shea came down with scarlet fever the latter part of last week and in order that the other children should not be quarantined, she was moved up to the Mayor's house on Common street. In consequence, His Honor had to pack a tooth brush and clean collar in his travelling bag and hike it out the back window to avoid quarantine himself. For the time being he is staying in a Boston hotel outside of business hours and is commuting in the reverse order.

The Mayor's niece, little Margaret, is very fond of "Uncle Billy" and has been a frequenter of his home during her well and wakeful hours. As a proof of who was uppermost in her mind on a certain occasion the following incident may throw some light. The teacher asked Margaret to write a rhyme about sometning or someone for whom she cared very much. After considerable time spent in deep thinking, this was handed in to the teacher: "The Mayor, Has no hair."

This morning little Margaret seemed bright but considerably worried. Asked what was the trouble she said she was afraid her uncle would get the seventy cents she left in her purse at home and put it in the contingent fund.

IDEAL HOMES SHOW.

The Greater Boston Real Estate and Ideal Homes Exposition, given under the auspices of the Real Estate Exchange, will open, April 3, in Horticultural hall, Boston, and continue for two weeks from 10 A. M. to 10 P. M. The exposition which is given for the purpose of encouraging the building of moderate cost homes will have on exhibit models, plans and sites of bungalows, city and suburban homes and gardens; heating, lighting and plumbing conveniences; latest improved home decorations and furnishings. The Morrill-Moulds Corporation of Washington, D. C., will pour each day a model of a cement house which they claim is an improvement over the Edison poured cement house for the reason that while it takes a small fortune to purchase the Edison moulds, the Morrill moulds may be rented or purchased outright for a small amount of money. They will also have on exhibit models of poured cement chicken houses, garages and other suburban home buildings.

The feature exhibit will be the Ideal Home built of tapestry brick and completely furnished. The rooms will be full size and will occupy the greater part of one of the smaller halls in Horticultural Hall. A large New York cement company will exhibit a model of a farm showing all buildings built of cement. There will also be exhibited a portable bungalow, full size and completely furnished. The City of Boston will occupy two of the largest spaces in the building and the City of Cambridge will also have a comprehensive exhibit.

Ideal Home concerts will be given each morning and afternoon and evening by M. Steinert & Sons Company and music will be furnished by the Edna Frances Simmons Woman's orchestra. Each lady purchasing a ticket for the exposition will be given a valuable souvenir and the first 100 ladies purchasing tickets for each morning session, after 10 A. M., will be given free with the compliments of one of Boston's large bread bakers, a loaf of what they consider the ideal bread for the ideal home.

"DEAD END" BLOWS OUT

Steam Pipe Explosion Kills Three Men and Injures Six Others

Manchester, N. H., March 28.—One man was instantly killed, two died from their injuries afterwards, one was seriously and five others painfully scalded as the result of the blowing out of the "dead end" of a 12-inch steam pipe in the new power house of the Amoskeag Manufacturing company's plant here. The dead are: Frank Cassidy, Frank A. Dyer and Horace C. Crawford.

It is believed that there was some defect in the "dead end" inasmuch as it was subjected to only 170 pounds pressure and had been tested to 189 pounds.

The new power house contained sixty-four boilers of 200 horsepower each, which operated turbine engines that generated electrical power to the extent of 6000 horsepower.

RECLASSIFICATION FAILS

Bar and Bottle Bill Again Wins In Massachusetts Legislature

Boston, March 28.—The bar and bottle act won a second and decisive victory in the house when the reclassification bill, which repeals the act by indirection, was lost by a vote of 127 to 104. The vote whereby the house refused to repeal the bill last Thursday was 131 to 103.

Representative Doyle gave notice that he will move to substitute the reclassification bill for the adverse report of the committee on liquor laws.

The bar and bottle act was passed last year to provide that after the first day of May this year no bar license shall be issued to be exercised on the same premises with a bottle license. The intent of the act is to prevent the sale of liquor by the glass and by the bottle in the same place.

TRIED TO ENFORCE DEMAND WITH A GUN

Former Mill Superintendent Starts Tragedy In Office

Hudson, Mass., March 28.—After a fierce fight in the office of the A. D. Gleason woolen mill in Gleasondale, Phineas Feather, former superintendent of the mill, was overpowered and placed under arrest on a charge of shooting Charles E. Roberts, present superintendent, through the right lung, in a dispute over back pay which Feather claims. Roberts' condition is critical.

When Roberts was shot A. D. Gleason, the owner of the mills, grappled with Feather and threw him to the floor. In the scuffle a second revolver dropped from Feather's pocket and was discharged on striking the floor. The bullet hit Feather in the left elbow.

Feather, despite his wound, kept fighting with Gleason. He kept his hold on the revolver with which he had shot Roberts, and pulled the trigger again. The bullet went through the hand of Robert Davis, a mill operative, who ran into the room in answer to the screams of Miss Hickey, the bookkeeper.

ANSWERED CRY OF "TONY"

Alleged Murderer's Anxiety Lands Him In Police Station

Boston, March 28.—The anxiety of Tony Coletta to answer to his name loudly called by Officer Cavagnaro led to his arrest and his being held on a charge of the murder of Pasquale Nespilo in Bridgeport, Conn.

Coletta was walking down Hanover street when Cavagnaro, to ascertain his identity, called out "Tony." Coletta turned to see who was calling him, and when he saw the uniform, started to run, but was soon overtaken by the officer. He will be held pending the arrival of a Bridgeport officer.

WIRELESS FOR FORT MEYER

One of World's Most Powerful Station to Soon Be Erected

Washington, March 28.—A powerful wireless telegraph station of the navy, capable of communicating with naval vessels 3000 miles distant from Washington, will soon be erected at Fort Meyer.

This high power plant will be designed to keep the headquarters of the American navy in close touch with war vessels in the Atlantic ocean. The station will be one of the most powerful in the world.

fore forming its opinion to a condition that now says, "it is a newspaper story," and believes that this places upon any newspaper statement the seal of unworthiness and distrust? Seek the reason in commercialism which embraces progress, invention and competition, and in sensationalism, which are undoubtedly the foundation stones of the new yellow journalism.

Civilization has always moved along certain given lines and the record of progress shows perpetual battle between the right and wrong positions. Great editors have accepted this record of progress as news. Underlying the entire structure of newspaperdom, however, is what might be termed —a temper to decry the good works of men—and when this viewpoint was applied to the world's progress present-day journalism had an easy decadence into a disposition to exaggerate the abuses of society, and now shows an inability to be other than pessimistic of mankind's achievements.

A DESTRUCTIVE THOUGHT

Mechanical genius instead of editorial ability must be credited with the rapid development of modern journalism, and although modern editors as a ciass are of great ability their energies are hampered by what is termed business policy.

It was predicted when the linotype machine reached a stage of development where its utility was established, that this invention would greatly reduce the cost of newspaper publishing. Strange as it may seem, instead of effecting an economy it increased the cost of newspaper production over five hundred per cent. The steady perfection of the printing-press and all the labor-saving devices for newspaper making, while they have been the motive power of journalistic extension, have at the same time forced the newspaper publisher to make up for his plant expenditures in extraordinary circulation and advertising revenue. Before he could get advertising he must have circulation, and circulation is secured through an appeal to the greatest number.

Thirty years ago a newspaper's contents were extremely small, compared with the contents of the newspaper of today. This was due to the fact that newspaper facilities were in process of development; but in those days editors and publishers were glad to have their publications measured by the standard of their editorial championship, thoroughness and comprehensiveness, and not upon a basis of having carried so many thousand agate lines of advertising more than their contemporaries.

We have now reached a point in this discussion where it is well to consider upon which the press in our own country was founded. It is patent that every editor should uphold the dignity of the press and maintain inviolate the true mission of the newspaper as a public servant in order to make journalism a growing power for good. The framers of our Constitution in establishing the American nation had painfully learned and clearly foresaw that without a free press and free speech there could not be a free government. Thus we see the press is ineradicably woven into our governmental fabric, and that American journalism had its birth in and through the struggle for liberty and freedom.

Consequently the publisher of the modern newspaper must ever remember the influence of the press upon the public mind and must exercise his function as preceptor to old and young alike, in discussing all issues affecting the people. He must always champion every interest looking toward the benefit and well being of the majority, socially, politically, economically, and as readily challenge the usurper, demagogue and promoter of political intrigue.

The news policy of clean journalism must be established through evolution rather than through revolution.

THE STARTING POINT

of this reform must be in the great news distributing centers, and as we have confined our remarks to American journalism, New York City represents the objective point of this statement. Fully 90 percent of the news reports of the great American press associations is made up from the proof sheets of the New York daily papers. It is sent by telegraph, to the the newspaper offices throughout the continent where it is accepted as a standard for news; and consequently as New York thinks, so thinks the American press. Give thought to the class of newspapers in our metropolis and all will agree that with one or two exceptions they are far from conservative.

This evolution is now in progress and one clean newspaper has been the cause elevating the tone of an entire news report of one of the great globe encirculing news corporations, because of its insistence upon the censorship of newsmatter sent over the wires. If this has become possible in two years it is not unreasonable to hope for a greater betterment in news and a general demand for it.

But reform in the news does not fully

MEET THE NEED.

The character of advertising accepted and the general business policy of the modern newspaper as well must be improved if the ideal in journalism is to be attained. As in every other plane of human effort, the great American public has plunged recklessly into the field of publicity, and after some 25 years we find a condition which might be termed "yellow journalism" in advertising.

To meet this great need, and to establish a daily newspaper which should be fully in the van of human intelligence and attainment, and yet wholly constructive, and withal conservative of morality and purity, and that embraces the highest standard of business integrity, was the task set for herself by Mary Baker Eddy, discoverer and founder of Christian Science. Convinced that she could find sufficient readers among those who love the good and pure, she did not hesitate to establish The Christian Science Monitor, although newspaper publishers and business men for 30 years had been of the firm belief that a reform newspaper would not pay. Many are familiar with the story of how this great undertaking was started and how within a few months it became recognized as a newspaper with a world-wide circulation.

THE HOME

is the bulwark of society. As its high standards are maintained and influences broadened, the nation will progress. The character of reading matter going into homes is a fair gauge of their standards. In every well ordered home a clean newspaper is a necessity.

We have briefly set forth the essentials of clean journalism and epitomized the good it is doing in the world. We have found it is a return to the rightful function of journalism and is making an effort to place mankind upon a common plane of knowledge and intelligence. It searches the four corners of the globe for facts concerning little known localities in its efforts at educational extensions; it takes to the farther-most parts of civilization its story of cleanliness, of the great achievements in every walk of life. To the youth it gives a message of ambition; to the adult, be he educated or otherwise, it gives valuable information whether his tastes be for the marts of trade, literature or art.

AUCTION OF LIVE STOCK.

The auction at the Burkhardt estate in Squantum owned by Miss Lotta Crabtree, was carried on yesterday under the direction of Frank F. Crane. By 10 o'clock the grounds were well filled with propective purchasers of live stock, tools and vehicles belonging to the estate. At noon a lunch consisting of sandwiches and coffee were served in the caretaker's cottage.

Many of the effects went under the hammer at greatly reduced prices but some of them brought fairly good prices.

During the morning the farm wagons, tip carts, market wagons, etc., were auctioned off. One tip cart brought $1.50, another $10, a carryall which originally cost $400 went for $46, and a $225 market wagon sold for $139.

The afternoon sale brought some ridiculously small prices. Plows sold for $1 and $2, a haycutter in first class condition brought $3, a sleigh was knocked down at $9.50, and a barrel of molasses at $3.75. The mowing machines were sold for fairly good prices. A hard wood bedstead with spring brought 25 cents and a hammock 75 cents.

SUNDAY SERVICES

ATLANTIC M. E. CHURCH.

At the Methodist church at Atlantic Sunday morning, the pastor, John L. Garland spoke on the subject: "Power through victory over temptation." Text Luke 4-14. "Jesus returned to Galilee in the power of the Spirit."

The gist of his message is as follows: "Christ must have discerned that His baptism in Jordan was the beginning of a public ministry that might end in some Calvary since He had felt the experience of brotherhood with all men. He had just been called "The Lamb of God" and He accepted a designation which foretold suffering. The voice at His baptism spoke most clearly through the sober words previously uttered by Him that He "must be about His Father's business" when that voice now said "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." That was a baptism of water. Another baptism must come." Purification at the hands of John, the Baptiser, was not enough to make a Christ. There was now to be a baptism, not of water, but of fire and it was to be experienced in the temptation in the desert. After His experience with John feeling the footfalls of an immeasurable destiny, He hastens to the wilderness—Moses preparatory school, John's mission field, Jesus' battleground—to examine His credentials. His credentials are, first, a profound faith in the Fatherhood of God; and second, that He Himself is God's divine Son.

"Satan's first attack was designed to make Christ doubt His Father's Fatherhood. "If Thou be the Son of God." Christ met the proposition "Bread is indispensable" with the proposition God alone is indispensable to His child." Not what a man gets makes him rich but how he gets it.

"The second trial is so managed by the tempter that Jesus is urged to fall a victim to His own convictions and to depend wholly upon His Father's Fatherhood. "If thou be the Son of God, cast Thyself down," and prove that God shall send guardian angels. The master's reply to this temptation teaches us that the true proving of God is to obey His laws; the true dependence upon God is to confide that God will lead from duty to duty.

"The last trial in this temptation of the Master was more subtly and carefully planned and executed than either of those preceding it. The appeals of Satan had risen, step by step, until this last one was to be urged upon Christ's noblest faculties and loftiest aims. "The end justifies the means" was one of its precepts. "Be of the world in order to help the world" was one of its wise conceits. The attack was aimed at Christ's idea of universal sovereignty. Satan pointed out the immense realm of worldly sovereignties. He rose to the occasion and said: "Fall down and worship me and all these shall be thine." Christ, who knew the Holy Writ as well as Satan, replied: "It is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God."

The long siege of evil directed against good had failed. Not an inch had been won from Jesus; He had won new victories for the Christ. The faith of Jesus in God, as Father, which gave to humanity a divine destiny, was kept intact by this signal victory. Such was the course of inward training by which our Master "returned to Galilee in the power of the Spirit."

At the evening service, Mr. E. J. Burnstead of Dorchester, gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the subject "The broad and narrow way," illustrating his message with a large descriptive map. An increased attendance was noted.

On Thursday evening, an entertainment and social will be given the Home department of the Sunday School. Parents and children, friends of the church and Sunday School are all cordially invited to this gathering. The pastor will speak on the subject "Home duties."

The regular Friday evening prayer meeting will be held at 7.45. After the service a choir rehearsal will be held.

Next Sabbath a special offering will be taken to meet the conference claimants apportionments. This is an annual collection to help support the general boards of church activity and a generous response is expected.

BRIEFS

Please keep in mind the three Quincy parkway hearings at the State House on Friday morning.

The Hospital Aid association meets Thursday afternoon, March 30, at the home of Mrs. George H. Wilson, 47 Revere road.

The Rev. F. H. Steenstra rector of St. Chrysostom's church, Wollaston will preach at the Lenten service in Christ church Wednesday evening at eight o'clock.

City Treasurer Curtis has awarded another temporary loan of $100,000 at 3.54 per cent discount, plus $1.35 premium to Blake Bros. & Co. It expires March 23, 1912.

RECITAL.

The piano pupils of Miss Ella Horton of Squantum street, Atlantic, gave a recital at the home of their teacher Friday afternoon March 24. The affair was private, only a few invited guests being present. One feature of the program much enjoyed by all was the violin playing of Master Raymond Higgins, who has been studying under Miss Clara Clarke of Dorchester. Every number on the program was rendered from memory and showed not only careful training on the part of Miss Horton, but also earnest application and true love for music by the youthful performers.

Those taking part were Misses Helen Hanson, Zenith Kilpatrick, Elinor Phillips, Beatrice Rogers, May Stevens Marion Letteny, Agnes Bradford, Margaret Read, Teresa Edwards, Mary Golden, Clara Von Emden, Louise Churchill, Winifred Pratt and Master Harold Hall.

The guests were Mrs. Harry W. Read, Mrs. John Burke, Mrs. John Higgins, Mrs. B. B. Downey and Misses Annie Bennett and Martha Jenkins.

QUINCY WARSHIPS.

The battleships North Dakota and Rhode Island, built at Quincy, will come to the Boston navy yard during May for important repairs. During May the scout cruisers Birmingham and Salem are expected and probably the Des Moines. The Rhode Island will be placed in reserve and the New Jersey will take her place in the fleet. The new battleships Florida and Utah are expected before July 1.

SEEKING CAUSE AND REMEDY

Dozens of Investigators Probing the New York Holocaust

DAMAGING EVIDENCE FOUND

District Attorney Says It Will Be Speedily Acted Upon—Cigaret Said to Have Started Fire Which Has Caused 142 Deaths Thus Far—Building Inadequately Equipped With Safety Devices

New York, March 28.—The fixing of the blame for the loss of 142 lives in the Washington square fire of Saturday has drawn to a focus the energies of the district attorney's staff, the fire marshal, the coroner, the state labor department and Borough President McAnaney of Manhattan.

Dozens of investigators have collected every scrap of available information. Grand jurymen turned personal probers, and an additional grand jury in a formal resolution presented to the court of general sessions offered their aid to the district attorney and declared that someone should be prosecuted for the disaster.

What the probers found—evidence that doors at exits swung inwards; the crumpled up fire escape in the airshaft, the one fire escape blocked by iron shutters when opened, an empty water tank on the roof, and the practice prevalent among cutters of lighting cigarets a few minutes before quitting time—all this, and what is yet to be ferreted out, will be placed speedily before the grand jury for action, District Attorney Whitman announced.

The tenement house department summoned owners of half a dozen faulty structures to police court as a preliminary step to a far-reaching investigation of tenements. One man was held for violating the law, and other cases, it was announced, will be pressed. Fire Marshal Beers summoned the proprietors of the Triangle Waist company and several employes to testify at a public investigation, largely to inquire into the truth of reports that doors leading to fire exits were locked.

"So far as I can discover," he said, "there has never been a fire drill in this factory. In my opinion it would take 700 girls three hours to reach the street by the one fire escape in that building. Nine-tenths of the employes cannot speak English, yet I could not find a sign in Yiddish or Italian pointing out the fire exits."

The fire marshal said he was convinced that a cigaret, lighted by a cutter and thrown in a heap of clippings, started the fire.

A relief fund for the sufferers is headed by a $5000 donation from Andrew Carnegie. The United Hebrew Charities, the Austrian Hebrew Free Burial association, and other organizations came to the fore with financial aid.

Thirty-three bodies, most of them shorn of all semblance to human form, lie unidentified at the Charities pier morgue. Twelve persons, most of them girls in their teens, are fighting for life in hospitals.

Fifty corteges traversed the East Side and the Italian district near the factory yesterday and as many more are scheduled for today. The unidentified will be buried in a single grave, but will be held as long as possible to give relatives and friends an opportunity to claim them.

Final figures place the death list at 142, one dying last night. Of these, 133 bodies were taken from the scene of the disaster and nine died in hospitals. The list will be swelled, surgeons say, by others who, still living, have no chance of recovery.

"Give us not merely fireproof, but deathproof buildings," bids fair to become a municipal slogan in the many-sided campaign of investigation which is under way in New York.

The slogan was coined by Fire Chief Croker as summing up his recommendations for the future. The entire nation, he declared, will learn a lesson from Saturday's fire such as it has learned only twice before—once when the Collingwood disaster taught the necessity of adequate fire protection and precaution in school buildings and when the Iroquois theatre fire taught the same lesson for theatres.

HUB STIRRED TO ACTION

Crusade Against "Death Traps" Is Begun by City Officials

Boston, March 28.—A crusade to protect the lives of employes in the factories and workships of Boston was begun in a practical way by Building Commissioner Everett yesterday.

He requested the law department to proceed against the New York owner of the three-story brick building extending from 110 Bedford street to 30 Kingston street.

This is one of very many buildings in Boston that have not been provided with a proper means of egress or with the necessary fire escapes to insure protection to the score or more men and women who are employed there.

WILLIAM H. LEWIS
Assistant Attorney General of the United States

TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

Lewis Becomes Assistant Attorney General of United States

Washington, March 28.—William H. Lewis, the Boston negro recently named by President Taft for the position of assistant attorney general of the United States, was formally sworn in Monday.

Mr. Lewis' nomination failed of confirmation by the senate and Mr. Taft gave him a recess appointment. The new official of the department of justice called later at the White House to thank the president.

FOLLOW CUSTOM OF THE FATHERLAND

No Maid of Honor Nor Best Man at Nobles' Wedding

Washington, March 28.—Countess Luise Alexandria von Bernstorff, only daughter of the German ambassador and Countess von Bernstorff, was married in Corcordia Lutheran church to Count Raymond Pourtales, until recently an attache of the German embassy here. The ceremony was followed by a reception at the German embassy.

President and Mrs. Taft, Miss Helen Taft, Vice President and Mrs. Sherman, members of the cabinet and practically the entire diplomatic corps in Washington attended.

According to an old German custom, there was no maid of honor nor best man. There were two sets of ushers, four seating the guests and four attending Count Pourtales.

NO PARDON FOR BANKERS

Morse and Walsh Likely to Serve Full Terms In Prison

Washington, March 28.—Charles W. Morse and John R. Walsh, the convicted bankers, must complete their sentences. According to reliable information President Taft has decided not to exercise executive clemency in the case of either. His decision was taken on the report of Attorney General Wickersham on the applications for pardon.

President Taft has had Morse's application for clemency under consideration about three weeks. He also has considered an application for the pardon of Walsh, now in the Leavenworth penitentiary. Morse is serving a fifteen-year sentence, while Walsh is serving a sentence of five years.

DEATH OF JAMES JACK

Treasurer of Mormon Church For More Than Half a Century

Salt Lake City, March 28.—James Jack, treasurer of Utah for twenty years and treasurer of the Mormon church for more than fifty years, died yesterday at his home. He was 82 years old.

Jack crossed the plains with an ox-team in the early '50s. Shortly after reaching Salt Lake City he was appointed by Brigham Young as treasurer of the church. He served in this office under all of Young's successors.

Scott's Ship Is Returning

Christ Church, N. Z., March 28.—The steamship Terra Nova passed Stewart island, returning from the ice barrier where the British Antarctic expedition under Captain Scott was landed.

Steamship on Florida Shoal

Key West, Fla., March 28.—Driven on a reef by a high wind, the steamship D. N. Luckenbach lies in a dangerous position upon the new ground shoal northwest of here.

Railroad Robbers Slay Detective

Middleboro, Ky., March 28.—Detective Rose was fatally shot from ambush by railroad robbers at Baxter, Harlan county.

FORCED INTO SUBMISSION

China Unreservedly Yields to Demands of Russia

THE ONLY COURSE LEFT OPEN

Russia Subject to Some Ridicule For Not Following Example Set by Great Britain by Preliminary Occupation of Territory—Japan Remaining Neutral, but Only Awaiting Russian Action, It Is Said, to Advance

Pekin, March 28.—China is not prepared to antagonize Russia completely, and as a result of prolonged conferences the Chinese foreign office has assured the Russian minister, M. Korostovetz, that China will acquiesce unreservedly to the demands made in the Russian ultimatum concerning the provisions of the treaty of 1881.

It is generally considered that there was no alternative course, in view of China's utter unpreparedness for war. Intense interest is being shown in the attitude of Japan, which has visibly been holding entirely aloof, although more powerful than ever at Pekin.

While the issues between China and Russia have been almost obliterated by the recent series of ultimatums, and, theoretically, insufficient cause for occupation exists, Russia apparently fears that she could obtain only paper promises, which the Chinese would not observe unless intimidated.

Russians here point out that they have less now in the way of concessions from China than when the treaty was signed. Some sections of the legation quarter ridicule Russia for not following in the first instance the recent example set by Great Britain in occupying territory and awaiting Chinese readiness to discuss the contested points. But it is recognized that Russia, by failing to do this, has shown that she does not possess aggressive designs.

The Chinese newspapers, which are intensely ignorant of foreign affairs, are very hostile to Great Britain, which they accuse of beginning the present land grab, and they prophesy that both Japan and France will not be long in following suit.

Reports from Harbin say that the Russian railway has refused to transport several carloads of arms and ammunition destined for Chinese garrisons on the frontier. From elsewhere in Manchuria come indications of Japanese readiness to invest South Manchuria, should the Russian investment in the north assume a serious aspect.

The Pekin Daily News, in an editorial, evidently inspired by the Chinese foreign board, declared that China would not submit to the so-called aggressions of various powers, and that she would not sign away her national rights, which must be taken from her.

MOTHERS MAKE THIS HOME MADE COUGH SYRUP.

The good, tender, thoughtful mother can make a full pint of the quickest acting, permanent result giving cough syrup which can be used by the whole family for coughs and colds, thus preventing pneumonia, sore throat, diphtheria and other fatal maladies. Just obtain a concentrated fluid known as Essence Mentho-Laxene—a 2 1-2 oz. bottle, and empty it into a pint jar or bottle. Then take a pint of granulated sugar and pour over it a half pint of boiling water; stir cool and fill up the bottle with the syrup. Full directions for making and using are contained on each package. All good druggists sell it or it can readily be obtained of their wholesaler. Thousands of families are using this because of its cheapness and thoroughness.

TO BE TURNED INTO SOAP

Eastern Factories to Buy Five Hundred Head of Wild Horses

San Bernardino, Cal., March 28.—Within a few months 500 head of wild horses on the San Bernardino desert will have been transferred into cakes of soap and be in use in the homes of New York and Chicago.

Felipe Quieroz and George Tyler have contracted with Los Angeles agents for eastern soap factories for the sale at $5 a head of the mustangs that now roam the region between Victorville and Holcomb Valley.

Most of the horses are scrubs and useless for anything but cattle driving.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

McVickar defies Senator Blount to nominate Evan. Patricia and her geologist father arrive at the Sagebrush capital.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics, but finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Evan has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's mixing in politics. His father pulls wires unknown to him to have him invited to speak in a distant mining town. Hathaway, who has been trying to do business with the road and with Senator Blount, is to have a talk with Mrs. Blount.

Hathaway wants a rebate from the road in consideration of political favors. He is referred to Evan and is advised by Mrs. Blount to put Professor Anners' name on his list of stockholders.

Evan's interview with Hathaway reveals the road's misdoings. In a rage he resigns. Gantry holds up the resignation. Evan insists that it go through to McVickar.

Patricia refuses Evan again. She advises him to stick to the road and work for clean politics. He withdraws his resignation and is sent into the field on a speaking tour.

On his return to the capital he was delighted to find the party of three still occupying the private dining room suit in the Inter-Mountain. Arriving on the morning train, he was permitted to make the party of three a party of four at the breakfast table.

Later, however, when he went to his offices in the Temple court building the strenuosities asserted themselves again with somewhat startling emphasis. Though he found his desk closed and was reasonably sure that he had in his own possession the only key that would unlock it, he found his papers scattered in confusion under the roll top and the letters and telegrams which had come during his absence opened. A touch of the electric button brought the stenographer from the anteroom.

"Who's been in my desk, Collins?" he demanded, pointing to the confusion and scrutinizing the face of the young man for signs of guilt.

"Goodness gracious! I don't know," was the instant reply, and Blount concluded that the secretary was either innocent or an astonishingly good actor. "I have been putting the mail and telegrams through the letter slit, as you directed, and I've kept the private office locked."

"Nevertheless," said Blount, "it is very evident that somebody has been here." Then he had a sudden shock. "What did you do with that packet of papers I gave you last Monday and told you to put in the safe?"

"I did just what you told me to—put it in the cash box and put the key of the cash box on your desk. Didn't you get it?"

Blount felt in his pockets and found the key.

"Get the packet and bring it to me," he directed, giving the stenographer the key to the inner compartment of the safe.

It was not more than a minute later, while he was attempting to bring order out of the confusion on his desk, that a sudden prompting led him to go quickly to the door of the outer office. Snapping it open with a jerk, he caught the clerk in the act of untying the string which bound the thick packet of papers together.

"What are you doing? Why don't you bring it to me?" he called angrily.

There were still no signs of guilt in Collins' face.

"I was just going to make sure that it was the same package," he said innocently, handing it over at once.

With the packet in an inside pocket of his coat, Blount put on his hat, had himself shot down the elevator and a few minutes afterward was renting a private box in the deposit vaults of a bank in the next street. When he returned to his office another touch of the electric button resummoned Collins.

"Sit down," said Blount, indicating a chair. "I have been reasonably kind to you, haven't I, Fred?"

"Yes, sir; very kind indeed," was the clerk's admission.

"Yet you have let some one bribe you to be disloyal to me," was the direct charge. "Who was it, Collins?"

"I don't know anything about it, Mr. Blount. If I was going to die the next minute I couldn't say anything different."

"You've got to say something different if you want to stay with me," said the master decisively. "Did you know what was in that package you put in the safe?"

"No."

"Yet you said you were untying it to see if it were the same package I gave you last Monday. You are lying to me, Collins. You opened my desk to hunt for the key of the cash box. Sit tight in the boat. I'm not going to fire you. I merely want to know who hired you to do this."

"If I did it I must have done it in my sleep," was all the reply he could make, and after trying a threat or two Blount dismissed him.

This was the first of a series of incidents all pointing toward the same conclusion—that some one was evidently determined to let him have no privacy in his correspondence. Unless he happened to be present when the mail was brought in it was pretty sure to show signs plainly indicating that it had been tampered with.

Blount could think of only one explanation, and he accepted it without question. The machine of which his father was the dictator had no conscience.

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING? WHY DON'T YOU BRING IT TO ME?"

Some of its spies, doubtless working under instructions given by his father, were keeping tab on him, and the purpose of the espial was easily guessed. His statement made to his father across the dinner table in the Inter-Mountain cafe had not been an empty boast. The packet safely put away in the bank's deposit vault contained affidavits, sworn statements, evidences of fraud, and there were enough of them fully to substantiate everything he had said.

That evening there was a reception given by Mrs. Irving Gordon, wife of the reform candidate for governor, and Blount went, hoping that Patricia would be there. She was there, and the young man, in need of a confidant, wasted two good hours trying to get private speech with her. When his chance came it was only a half chance, since there was little privacy to be had in the crowded rooms.

"It is a question of conscience this time," he told her when she had agreed to sit out a dance with him in one corner of the canvas carpeted assembly room. "I have discovered positive evidence of frauds to be perpetrated in the election next Tuesday. How far am I justified in suppressing this evidence?"

"Mercy!" she exclaimed. "How you can bring a thunderbolt down upon one out of a perfectly clear sky! Is it ever right to shield criminals or criminality?"

"That is just what I should like to know," he persisted. "At the present moment I am shielding not one criminal, but a good many."

"May I know the circumstances?" she asked after a moment's consideration.

"Yes. There has been fraudulent registration in a number of the state legislative districts, and I have secured positive evidence of it."

"On which side?" she asked pointedly.

"On both sides, I am sorry to say," he returned gravely.

"Whom does it implicate?"

"That is further than my information goes," he admitted. "I know only the fact of the false registration. But with a fully equipped political machine on the ground the inference is pretty plain, isn't it?"

"I suppose so," she admitted. "Yet you say the frauds are on both sides."

"That doesn't make any difference," he declared. "It is a fight for men and not for parties. So far as I can see, the machine picks its men quite irrespective of party. There is already reason to believe that some of the candidates who have the most to say now about the 'free ballot and will of the people' are themselves the sworn henchmen of the machine, ready when the time shall come to vote yea or nay, as my father shall direct."

"I can't believe it," she protested, with generous warmth—"of your father, I mean. I am sure he has never authorized anything so despicable."

Blount shrugged. "Shall I publish this evidence that has come into my hands, or shall I continue to suppress it?"

It was the first time she had ever failed him. "Give me a little time," she pleaded. "Tomorrow—come to see me tomorrow. It's a dreadful thing for you to have to do, Evan—the most dreadful thing that could be imagined. I"—

But here young Gordon, to whom the next dance had been promised, came to claim her, and Blount's hard won interview was at an end.

When he left the Gordon house, which was rather far out in the southeastern suburb, he meant to go direct to the hotel and to bed. He had been losing much sleep in the strenuous activities of the campaign, and it was beginning to tell upon him. As the trolley car was passing the Temple court building he saw a dim light illuminating his upper floor office windows.

With all his suspicions rearoused, he dropped from the car and took the all night elevator to his office floor.

The sleepy elevator man let him out in the upper corridor, and almost immediately the car sank away out of sight.

Before Blount had taken two steps toward his office door there came the dull crash of a muffled explosion, and two or three of the glass doors in the suit were shattered.

QUAKER CITY SWEPT BY SEVERE STORM

Houses Unroofed and Factories Destroyed by High Wind

Philadelphia, March 28.—A severe electrical storm, accompanied by a high wind which at times blew with the force of a tornado, swept over the northern section of this city shortly after 6 o'clock last night.

Buildings were demolished, houses were unroofed, and the New York division of the Pennsylvania railroad was placed out of commission temporarily by the demolition of its tower at Helmesburg and station at Tacony, cutting off all telegraphic communication.

Tacony, the section where the greatest damage occurred, was completely cut off from the rest of the city. The police station at Tacony was demolished. An unidentified man was killed when a portion of a structure was blown away. Many houses in this section were unroofed or completely demolished.

In the manufacturing section of Kensington several factories were destroyed, trolley wires were blown down, and roofs of houses hurled to the streets.

VETOED BY GOVERNOR

State Will Not Pay For the Proposed Celebration at Lowell

Boston, March 28.—Governor Foss vetoed the resolution appropriating $3500 for the celebration at Lowell, April 19, of the fiftieth anniversary of the first shedding of blood by Union troops in the Civil war. In his message accompanying the veto, Foss said:

"If any anniversary celebration in connection with the Civil war is to be established in the future at the expense of the state it should, in my judgment, commemorate the return of peace."

A WARNING TO DYNAMITERS

One of Four Is Sentenced to Ohio Penitentiary For Ten Years

Columbus, O., March 28.—William Cavanaugh, the first of a quartet of dynamiters to be found guilty, was sentenced to ten years in the Ohio penitentiary by Judge Rogers.

Cavanaugh was found guilty on two counts, one of having dynamite unlawfully in his possession, and the other of placing it on the street car tracks during the recent strike. Rogers gave him five years on each count.

Against Butter Statue

Boston, March 28.—The proposition for an equestrian statue for the late General Benjamin F. Butler was rejected in the senate ways and means committee without a dissenting vote. The resolve for the Butler statue carried an appropriation of $25,000.

The Weather

Almanac, Wednesday, March 29.
Sun rises—5:43; sets—6:17.
Moon rises—6:05 a. m.
High water—10:30 a. m.; 10:45 p. m.
Forecast for New England: Generally fair; high, shifting to west and northwest winds.

SUNNY MONDAY

Naphtha soaps can be used successfully only in cold water. Sunny Monday laundry soap does its work, no matter what kind of water you use—hard, soft, cold, luke-warm, hot or boiling; it also softens hard water.

Sunny Monday will not shrink woolens or flannels, and will not fade the colors in colored goods. It will double the life of your clothes and is the most economical soap you can use.

CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD

PAY FINES OF $10,000 EACH

Government's Civil Suit For $5,000,000 Against Duveen Broos. to Be Compromised by Payment of $1,200,000 For Their Participation In Customs Frauds—Indictments Are Pending Against Two Other Brothers

New York, March 28.—Louis J. Duveen and Joseph Duveen, members of the art importing firm of Duveen Bros., pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy to defraud the federal government by making under-valuations of imports of art objects. Judge Martin of the United States circuit court fined the importers $10,000 each, the maximum fine, which was paid.

United States District Attorney Wise and counsel for the Duveens have reached a compromise agreement for the settlement of the government's civil suit for $5,000,000 against the firm of Duveen Bros. According to the reported terms of the settlement the Duveens deposit $1,200,000 with the United States treasurer in full discharge of all claims against the firm for duties alleged to have been underpaid in importation of objects of art.

It is understood that Wise will recommend that the government accept the Duveens' $1,200,000 offer in settlement of all claims to date in the civil suit against various members of the firm. Indictments are still pending against Benjamin S. Duveen and Henry J. Duveen, other members of the firm. They are at present out on bail.

The case of the government against the art firm rivals in magnitude that of the sugar trust, and in many respects the interest in it is still widerspread, for the Duveens enjoy an international reputation as dealers in all sorts of antique and artistic wares. In fact, it has been alleged that the case made so great a stir in England that projected knighthood for Joseph Duveen, upon the announcement of the indictment, was withdrawn by King George.

The first of the present month there was a rumor that the Duveens had offered to settle the case out of court by the payment of $1,000,000 to the federal authorities, but this was denied by Wise, and the following statement was made by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Curtis:

"The policy of securing jail sentences for rich lawbreakers will be followed out to the last letter. The government will accept no compromise offers that have a string tied to them. No matter how much money the Duveen firm, or any other firm that has violated the law, offers to pay back, the government will proceed with criminal prosecutions just the same."

MAN AND WIFE ARRESTED

Offered Armed Resistance to Officers Hunting Stolen Goods

Bar Mills, Me., March 28.—Dr. F. E. Snow, a local veterinarian, and his wife were arrested on a charge of assault with intent to kill, as the result of having put up an armed resistance when officers went to the house to search for stolen goods.

The officers were looking for household goods stolen from summer homes at Buxton, Alfred, Cornish and other nearby towns.

After placing Snow and his wife under arrest, the officers searched the premises and seized a number of articles alleged to have been stolen.

SHELDON IS ARRESTED

Canada's Much Wanted Frenzied Financier Caught In Pittsburg

Pittsburg, March 28.—Canada's missing "get-rich-quick" wizard, Charles D. Sheldon, wanted in Montreal on charges of obtaining nearly $2,000,000 by embezzlement and false pretences, was arrested in this city yesterday afternoon at Fourth avenue and Smithfield street by Assistant Manager Hatfield of the Pinkerton National Detective agency.

Sheldon was taken to the central police station, where he was locked up. He admitted his identity.

BANKER IS MURDERED

New York Man Is Shot Down and His Safe Plundered

New York, March 28.—Julius Debroziky, a private banker, was found shot in his office at 20 Avenue B and died before a doctor could reach him.

The police, after an investigation which showed that about $1000 was missing from the office strong box, decided that the banker had been murdered.

Fifteen Hundred to Attend Ball

London, March 28.—A wonderful fancy dress ball will be given in the Savoy hotel on May 18 in aid of the Princess of Teck memorial fund for the Middlesex hospital. Fifteen hundred persons will sit down to supper at the same hour.

ATTLEBORO NOT SATISFIED

Mistake Was Made When Grade Crossings were Abolished

Five years ago, after a period of much discussion, the citizens of Attleboro decided that they would like to have the tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad elevated through the town. After five years of trial they are of the unanimous opinion that the elevation of the tracks was the biggest mistake that was ever made.

Trains thundering along the four tracks, which now run on a level with the tops of many of the buildings, prove a veritable nuisance and the unsightly embankments and granite bridges detract much from the former attractive appearance of the city.

Before the elevation of the tracks the city was most prosperous throughout and the business was very equally divided along the principal streets. Since the elevation of the tracks and the building of the embankment and bridges through the very centre of the city it has been practically divided into two parts, the east side and the west side.

Previous to the elevation what is now called the east side was really the busiest part of the town. Now much of the business has left the east side and flocked to the west side. For every new place that is opened in the east side there are at least three places starting up on the west side.

Recently a fine new building, the Carnes block, was built upon the east side. It had every modern convenience and was up to date in every way, but it would not let. Finally its owners got wise to what was the trouble. It was on the wrong side of the track. The rents were reduced, but still there was no business for the block.

The incident of the Carnes block is only one of a number that might be cited. Prominent citizens of the city are responsible for the statement that if the subject of grade abolition was to come up again fully 95 per cent. of the people of Attleboro would favor depression, even at a large cost.

CHANGING MEMORIAL DAY.

The plaint on the part of veterans of the Grand Army over the desecration of Memorial day, through the prevalence of sports or general jollification on the anniversary, has repeadedly met with sympathetic responses from a public appreciative of all that the "boys in blue" did and dared in the dark days of the rebellion. In a number of communities, although the total is by far too small, there is enough of decent regard for the proprieties to cause an abstention from sports during that portion of the day in which the veterans visit the cemeteries, for the purpose of decorating the graves of departed comrades. The futility of seeking relief through resort to the be-it-enacted power was long ago made manifest. In the meantime, the advisability of changing Memorial day from May 30 to the Sunday which falls on or nearest to that date has steadily been commending itself to interested elements. Whether or not the change will ever be brought about is conjectural. Advocates of the proposed substitution, it is only fair to add, have arguments ,and sound ones, why a change should be made. They can therefore well continue the agitation.—Salem News.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake If You Follow This Quincy Citizen's Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are all symptoms of kidney trouble, and you should seek a remedy which is known to cure the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has cured many stubborn cases in Quincy. Follow the advice of a Quincy citizen and be cured yourself.

Charles Somers, 17 Newcomb Place, Quincy, Mass., says: "It is a pleasure for me to make known to other kidney sufferers, the benefit I received from Doan's Kidney Pills. I had lame back, as the result of weak kidneys for about ten years. I could get no relief from the many remedies I tried and when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention, I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. Before long this remedy completely cured me."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Friends of Miss Lucy Coolidge of Farrington street will be glad to learn that she is doing nicely since she was operated on at the City Hospital last Thursday afternoon for appendicitis.

Mrs. Elisha D. Atkins of Bromfield street who went early in the month to Baltimore to visit the Otto Schmidts and join her husband Captain Atkins, sailed with him on his vessel last week for Tampa, Florida.

A Booster's Brigade has been formed in the Atlantic M. E. Sunday school which will start the first of the next quarter April first to "Boost" the attendance and general interest in every department of the school.

Miss Georgiana C. Lane is the proud possessor of a large throne chair of the Elizabethan period purchased by her at the Lotta Crabtree auction at Squantum last week. The chair is ten feet high, with gold trimming and lions claws carving. It must have been used at some time by Lotta in some play and probably has an interesting history.

Monday evening the Golden Circle tendered the Misses McInnis a farewell party, as they are leaving for the West in the near future. The Circle and friends gathered at the home of Miss Mary McKay, Smith street, where an enjoyable evening was spent in games, music, etc. Miss Mary McKay in behalf of those present, presented Misses Ethel and Christina with beautiful hand bags. The party broke up at an early hour wishing the Misses McInnis success in their new home.

KNEW HIS TIME TABLE.

A woman waited and waited for a car in a Boston suburb and no car came. Finally she lost all patience. "Will you please tell me," she demanded of the starter, an old man seated on a keg chewing tobacco, "if there are any cars left on this line, and if so, when they will pass here?"

Without moving his eyes from the distant horizon and without stopping his chewing, the old man answered: "A quarter arter, a half arter, a quarter to and at."—Success.

NOT HIS.

A tall nervous-looking man entered the department in the railroad station where lost articles are kept.

"Anything turned in here today?" he shouted to the man at the desk.

There was no reply.

"I say, has anything been turned in here today?" he repeated in a louder tone of voice.

"Yes, sir," calmly replied the man at the desk, without raising his eyes.

"Well, why couldn't you say so? I've lost an umbrella."

There was no reply.

"I say, I've lost an umbrella."

"I heard you, sir."

"You heard me? Well, why can't you tell me what was turned in?"

"Well, sir, a man was in here this morning who turned his toes in. They wouldn't happen to be yours, sir, would they?"—Yonkers Statesman.

—The Italian government, on account of the number of tuberculosis cases among Italian emigrants sent back from America, has appointed boards of examiners in the seaports, whose duty it is to report the arrival of tuberculous persons. These are then kept under observation in those places where they settle, to prevent further spread of the disease. The erection of new sanatoria and other tuberculosis institutions is being urged in Italy, and the number of beds for consumptives has been considerably increased in different places.

DUAL MEET AT Y. M. C. A.

The Students Defeat the Employed Boys

The dual meet between the Employed Boys and Students of the Y. M. C. A. held in the local gymnasium Monday evening was won by the Students, 56 1-2 to 41 1-2. McCarty of the Employed Boys was the star of the meet taking first place in three events, third in one and tying for second in another event. His performance in all three events which he won was good. In the 3 broad jumps he cleared 28.1 1-2 which was remarkably good jumping.

L. White won both high jumps and the running broad jump.

Trask tied with W. Cranshaw for first in the 220 yard dash. Won the 440 and took second place in the potato race and running broad jump.

Sutermeister won the 1000 yard run quite handily in 2.46 3-5 and was second to Trask in the 440 yards dash.

Estey and R. Cranshaw were missed from the floor. Estey, who is laid up with tonsilitis, was practically sure of first place in the high jump and would have taken one of the first places in the 220 and 440. R. Cranshaw was sure of a place in the 440 and 1000 and would have been one of the best performers in the high jump.

The events were all closely contested and interest was kept up through the last event.

The summary:

15 yards dash—Won by McCarty, (E. B.) Holmes, (I) 2nd, R. Prout (I) 3rd, Randall (I) 4th. Time—2 3-5 sec.

220 yards dash—H. Trask (I) and W. Cranshaw (I) tied for first; E. Clark (E. B.) 3rd, Holmes, 4th. Time 29 4-5 sec.

440 yards dash—Won by Trask (I), Sutermeister (I) 2nd, Kemp (E B) 3rd, Thomas (E. B) 4th. Time—66 1-5 sec

1000 yard run—Won by Sutermeister (I), W. Cranshaw (I) 2nd, Robertson (I) 3rd, Porter (E B) 4th. Time 2 min. 46 3-5 sec.

Potato race—Won by McCarty (E B) Trask (I) 2nd, G. Bergford (E B) 3rd, F. Bergford (E B) 4th. Time—22 1-5 sec.

Running broad jump—Won by White (I), Trask (I) 2nd, McCarty (E B) 3rd, Holmes (I) 4th. Distance 18 ft. 6 in.

Running high jump—Won by White (I), Favorite (E B) 2nd, Thomas (E B) 3rd. Height 4 ft. 10in.

Spring Board High jump—Won by White (I). McCarty (E B), Briggs (E B), Holmes (I), Djerf (E B) tied for second. Height 6ft. 4 in.

Three broad jumps—Won by McCarty (T B), Murphy (E B) 2nd, Favorite (E B) 3rd, Briggs (E B) 4th. Distance— 28 ft. 1 1-2 in.

Relay race (3 laps per man) Intermediates (Holmes, R. Prout, Robertson, Trask, Sutermeister, W. Cranshaw) defeated.

Employed Boys (Briggs, Djerf, McCarty, E. Clark, Thomas, G. Bergford.)

NO MORE BOXING.

There will be no more boxing in Quincy under the auspices of the Quincy Rowing association. This was made certain Monday when Chief Burrell reported to the Mayor that he had notified the officers of the association that he would allow no more bouts.

Mayor Shea had arranged for a conference Monday afternoon with several prominent citizens, the officers of the association and Chief Burrell, but as the Chief had already moved in the matter the conference arranged for was called off.

Although the boxing matches have been discontinued the association will continue to hold other athletic exhibitions during the summer its plans including a first class ball team, water sports etc.

Little Items of Interest in Towns About Quincy

At the town meeting in Plymouth the town voted to subscribe $50,000 to the stock of the Plymouth and Sandwich street railway.

A fellowship of $500 has been offered by the Alumnae Association of Wellesley College for the next academic year for advanced study in preparation for the master of arts degree. The winner must be a graduate with a bachelor of arts degree.

Trains on the Shawmut branch of the N. Y., N. H., & H. R. R. are not run on the elevated structure.

The Citizens Association of Weymouth and Braintree has elected: President, L. A. Trainor; vice-president, Charles G. Jordan; secretary, Elmer A. Alexander; treasurer John P. Hunt; executive committee, Walter E. Thompson, Joseph A. Haley, John F. Dwyer, F. O. Wellington, C. B. Edwards and Melville O. Cate.

A house owned by Miss Mary V. Jordan on Union street, Holbrook, was broken into recently and the furniture and furnishings were thrown about and the rooms left in confusion. As far as could be ascertained nothing whatever was stolen. One of the beds looked as if it had been slept in.

Robert M. Wiley, one of Bridgewater's oldest residents passed away on Sunday at the age of 81 years. Mr. Wiley had been employed in the Stanley Iron Works at Bridgewater for over 50 years.

Charles M. Oldham returned to Plymouth Monday after an absence of 20 years. A few of his old time friends recognized him so he was not quite of the Rip Van Winkle stamp. During this score of years Mr. Oldham has been in the Occident and has visited the Orient.

Stewart B. McLeod, president of the Brockton city council and Dr. John S. Burbank also of Brockton were in New York city at the time of the big fire and were only a few blocks away from the scene of the conflagration, but owing to the immense crowd that flocked to the place they did not attempt to become eye witnesses of the disaster.

At Carver, Mass., there is a deadlock on the board of assessors. The three men of the board differ in political preference one being a Democrat, one a straight Republican and one a progressive Republican. The three have been unable to decide upon a chairman in the three meetings held for the purpose thus far.

Hon. Norman H. White gave his address on "Some Recent Legislation at the Massachusetts State house" before the brotherhood of the South Street Methodist church, Campello, last evening.

ITALY'S UNITY JUBILEE

It Is Opened In Person by King Victor Emmanuel

Rome, March 28.—The celebration of the jubilee of Italian unity began with the formal opening by King Victor Emmanuel of the international art exhibition. On Wednesday an industrial exhibition will be begun at Turin, where in 1861 Victor Emmanuel II, grandfather of the present monarch, assumed the title of King of Italy (as Victor Emmanuel II).

The celebration is offensive to the holy see and some of the less orderly tried to approach the Vatican, but were turned back by the police.

FIVE PERISH IN FLAMES

Doctor Dies While Trying to Rescue Four of His Children

Aurora, Mo., March 28.—Dr. E. D. Morris and four children were burned to death in a fire that destroyed the Morris home, three miles from here.

Mrs. Morris and one child, Aubrey, 7, were the only ones to escape. Morris escaped from the house once but returned to rescue his children and perished.

Raid on Brokers' Office

New York, March 28.—In a raid on the brokerage firm of A. L. Wisner & Co., Postoffice Inspector Kinkaid made three arrests. Fraudulent use of the mails is charged.

SLAYER IS UNKNOWN

Finding of Coroner's Jury Which Investigated Rasmussen's Death

Portsmouth, N. H., March 28.—The coroner's inquest on the death of Louis E. Rasmussen, a private in the marine guard of the prison ship Southery, whose body was found just outside the gate of the Kittery ball grounds early Sunday morning, resulted in the finding that Rasmussen met death by violence and exposure at the hands of a person or persons unknown.

Corporal J. C. Ganson of the Topeka, the last man alleged to have been with Rasmussen, was present under guard at the inquest, and testified that he had left Rasmussen at 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, and that Rasmussen was returning to Portsmouth.

The necklace which was found near the body, but on the other side of the fence of the ball park, was a tiny rosary. Neither Rasmussen nor Ganson was a Catholic, and the authorities think that the rosary was dropped at another time.

WANTS HIS MONEY BACK

Boston Man Has $5000 Tied Up In Big Bill Keliher's Bail

Boston, March 28.—Bartholomew Connor of Boston has made a claim before the supreme judicial court that he is the owner of $5000 of the $50,000 which was put up by "Big Bill" Keliher with the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance company and which has been tied up by an injunction obtained by John L. Bates, receiver of the National City bank of Cambridge.

Receiver Bates, at the time he secured his injunction, claimed that Keliher aided and abetted George W. Coleman in looting the Cambridge bank and that much of the money stolen could be traced into his hands.

Connor desires to have the injunction modified to the extent that he may be permitted to receive back his $5000.

—As President Hamilton of Tufts college views the subject, "the Lorimer vote was astounding." Nor have decent people all over the country felt the better for noting the behavior of Lorimer, who, upon finding his seat secure, turned around and helped to defeat the measure for direct election of senators. It was a sorry day's business, so sorry that if every senator that voted in favor of Lorimer were to be defeated, in seeking re-election, he would receive no more than his just deserts.—Salem News.

STRONG MOVEMENT FOR MEMORIAL HALL

City Asked by the Patriotic Societies of Civil War to Provide a Building

Where Relics Can be Preserved and Exhibited

The City Council Committee on Public Buildings gave a hearing Tuesday evening to the petitioners who ask the city to provide a Memorial Hall for the use of the Grand Army, either by erecting a building or by providing quarters in some municipal building already erected.

At the present time the Grand Army have their headquarters in a small building near the old Hancock hall. Not only is the building small and generally out of repair, but the property having changed hands the old veterans are liable to be ordered out at any time. The building is entirely inadequate to meet the wants of the post. It has many maps and valuable relics of that great conflict which it wishes to preserve, and which are now stored at the Thomas Crane Public library. If a memorial hall was provided these relics could be placed in the hall where they could be seen.

The hearing brought out a large number of veterans of Post 88 as well as members of the Sons of Veterans, Spanish War Veterans, Ladies' Auxiliary and other patriotic organizations. The hearing was held in the Council chamber and was open to the public.

Harry E. D. Gould, commander of the Sons of Veterans, and chairman of the general committee of allied patriotic societies, was the first speaker. He said that last year an order for $5,500 to purchase the present hall had been presented to the City Council, but the allied societies who had now taken up the matter thought that something else should be provided. We have not presented any figures knowing that the City Council would put a building worthy of the city. He understood that it was permissible for the city to appropriate funds for that purpose which could also be a memorial hall where patriotic exercises could be held. What we want is a place to show foreigners who come to our city the esteem in which the Grand Army is held.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide said that he came to this hearing from his deep interest in the Grand Army. It seemed to him that the City of Quincy could well afford to show their appreciation of the men of '61. It seemed as though Quincy had done nothing. He felt that we owe a tribute to these men of '61. If we have any charity we should show these men who have now reached an old age that their efforts were appreciated, and he hoped that we would lend our aid to these old comrades and provide a place where they could pass their last days in comfort and enjoyment.

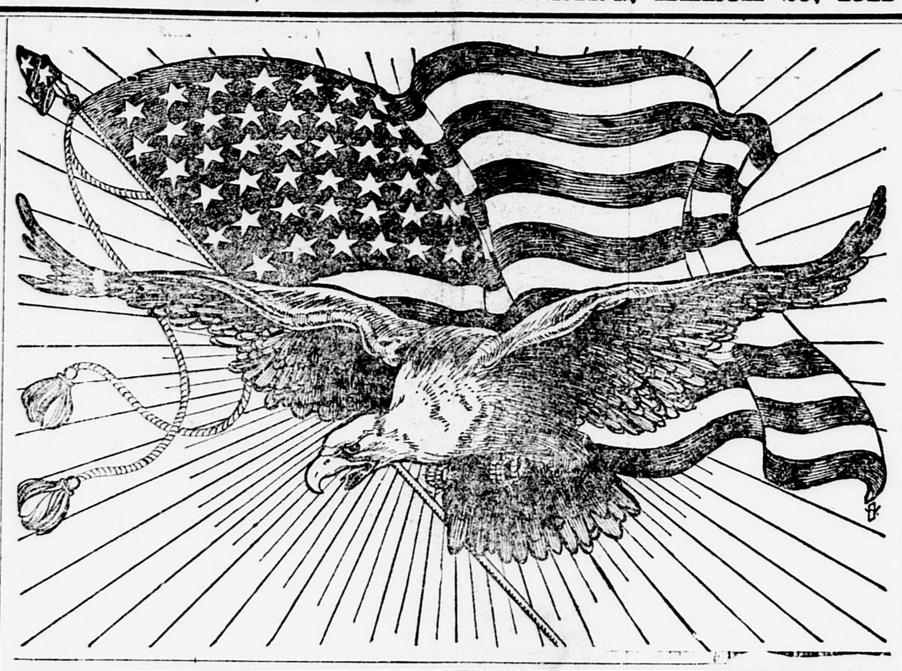

Mrs. Kate A. Blaisdell said that she had lived in Quincy since 1885 and had seen Quincy grow. Her father died in Salisbury prison, and if there was any patriotism in Quincy it was up to the City of Quincy to provide quarters for the Grand Army.

Mr. DeWolfe, adjutant general of the department of Massachusetts, said that he was deeply interested in this movement. He knew what was being done in other places, and that now two-thirds of the cities and towns of the state had memorials of some kind. Our Grand Army post is a centre of patriotic influence in every community. Since the welfare depends on patriotic citizens, and what the defenders have done for it, it is right every community should assist every such association. There is nothing but the noblest and purest patriotism in these organizations and in a city like Quincy, with its history, it seems that a building should be provided in which could be placed the memorials of the city. It would be something that would instil the ideas of patriotism in the minds of the young people, and Quincy cannot do better than appropriate money for fostering such an organization.

In reply to questions, Adjutant DeWolfe said that in some places a building was provided that was used in part for municipal purposes and the Grand Army was charged a nominal rental of $1 a year.

George A. Wardwell spoke of the attitude of the Spanish War Veterans. That organization was in this movement wholly to help the Grand Army. We wish by patriotic action to show the country that we want to follow in the footsteps of the men of '61. We want a place in Quincy, "where American Independence began," that will be fitting. There is nothing here now, except the monument. We want something that the school children can see and have the spirit of patriotism inculcated into them. Today there is not even a bronze tablet. As patriotic citizens, the members of John A. Boyd camp have not gone into this for themselves, but to see that the City of Quincy honors the men of '61. The building would not only be used for the Grand Army, but would be something that children can visit and see the relics that will instil patriotism.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR

Institution of New Commandery Tonight Big Event

Quincy Commandery, Knights Templar, will be instituted tonight, and will become a notable addition to the Masonic bodies in this city. The new commandery will start off with a charter membership of fully 175 swords, and in addition already has a large number of applications for the orders.

The institution will be by the Grand Commander of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and will be attended by many high in the council of the Masonic fraternity throughout the state.

Quincy Commandery will meet at 7 o'clock in its asylum in the Masonic apartments, and the Grand officers will be received with all due honors at 8 o'clock.

In addition to the many Grand officers a large number of sir knights from other commanderies throughout the state are expected.

CHURCH IS PROSPERING

Good Reports at Annual Meeting of Calvary Baptist

The annual meeting of the Calvary Baptist church was held Tuesday evening in the church auditorium with an unusually large attendance. Reports of the officers and pastor showed the past year to be by far the most prosperous in the history of the church.

All the organizations of the church are running successfully, the Ladies Mission Circle and Christian Endeavor society which have been organized during the year are doing good work. Nearly twice as much money for missions was raised than a year ago. The treasurer's report showed a substantial balance in the treasury.

The following officers were elected

Deacons—Joseph W. Prario and Frank G. Pettee.

Clerk—Edward Mundie.

Collector—Robert Farquhar.

Missionary Collector—Miss Blodwen Walters.

Treasurer—Benjamin Williams.

Auditors—Joseph Prario, Chester Hobart.

Ushers—Alex Henderson, Joseph Prario, Chester Hobart and William Esterbrook.

Organist—Miss Blodwin Walters.

Baptismal committee—Mrs. Harriet Hobart, Mrs. William Williams, William Renze, Benjamin Williams.

Superintendent of Sunday school—Alext Henderson.

Associate superintendent of Sunday school—Robert Farquhar.

Secretary of Sunday school—Miss Charlotte Hobart.

Superintendent of primary department—Miss Lena Archibald.

Associate superintendent—Miss Eva Abbott.

CHARTER MEMBERS AT ROLL CALL

Mt. Wollaston Lodge of Odd Fellows Instituted 27 Years Ago

Early History of the Institution in 1884 Recalled

The annual roll call of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows on Tuesday evening was a notable event in the history of the lodge which now covers 37 years, for it was attended by some of the charter members and a large number of the charter petitioners, and those who were initiated into the lodge over 25 years ago. Nearly 150 in all were present.

PAST GRAND PRESCOTT

Abel S. Gomez was chairman of the roll call committee, and he read the names in the order of their initiation. The first active member on the list was Past Grand Frank F. Prescott, who reviewed the early history of the lodge even before the institution March 10, 1884.

Bro. Prescott said he was initiated in Atlantic lodge in Marblehead, July 18, 1883, and that he was pleased to help along the reinstitution of Mt. Wollaston lodge, for it seems there was a lodge in Quincy as early as 1845. He served as secretary of the petitioners, and aided by publicity work in the Quincy Patriot in January and February 1884. Bro. Prescott paid tributes to the late George L. Gill, the late James H. Bell and the late Charles B. Newton and others for work before the reinstitution. It was on Jan. 11, 1884, that the Quincy petition was forwarded to Grand Secretary Cole, and it contained 22 charter members, and 72 candidates. Jan. 22, 1884, the committee on charters of the Grand Lodge visited Quincy and were entertained at supper. Frequent meetings of the charter members followed, and Feb. 7, 1884, the petition was granted, the new lodge taking the number of the old lodge, No. 80.

The charter members were as follows, those present at roll call being marked with an asterisk:

George L. Gill, P. G.
Dudley Folsom, P. G.
Frank F. Prescott*
James Craig
Peter Bisson
J. H. Layton*
Henry A. Willey
Joseph Prairio

Thomas Talbot
George W. Cummings
Edward Hodge*
James G. Crossman
John Dunstan
Aubigne A. Hunt
William H. Mears
William L. Qualey
James R. Qualey

* Present at roll call.

At least eight of these have answered the roll call above.

The lodge was instituted at 2 P. M. Monday, March 10, 1884, and a class was initiated that afternoon and other classes each evening that week, a total of 94 the first week. The first officers were: N. G.,—W. L. Qualey; V. G.,—J. R. Qualey; R. S.,—Frank F. Prescott; Treas,—George L Gill; R. S.,—Walter H. Ripley.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Owing to the cold storage crusades, there is to be an eggless Easter..

"Swat the fly" may not be an elegant expression but it means much and is good advice.

Even now the attention of the baseball fan is wandering from the Mexican war news over to the sporting page.

Congratulations to Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows. The lodge is old only in years. It has nothing to fear from any of the new organizations, but is one of the solid institutions of Quincy,—active, progressive and flourishing. It has a State reputation for the excellence of its degree work and evidently proposes to maintain the standard.

Quincy's credit is not the best, however much we may wish it were. Facts cannot be denied. Tuesday the Daily Ledger reported that Quincy had borrowed $100,000 on a temporary loan at 3.54 per cent discount, plus $1.35 per cent premium. But the same day the city of Lawrence borrowed a like amount on a temporary loan at 2.92 per cent discount, plus $1.05 premium, and Middlesex county borrowed $100,000 on a temporary loan at 2.94 per cent discount, plus 85 cents premium. There is a reason, and the sooner Quincy realizes it the better.

Now that the movement for a Memorial Hall in Quincy has taken a good start, it will receive support from unexpected quarters. The Daily Ledger believes it possible that a friend of Paul Revere Post will assist the city to build or purchase a Memorial Hall if it is shown that the Civil War veterans really desire it. They have in the past been too modest in presenting their claims. It is due to the veterans that a memorial hall shall early be established which shall be a home as well as a show house; a temple of patriotism to all our citizens and especially the children.

As spring approaches and our neighbors' back yards loom up in all their untidiness of ashes and tin cans our thoughts turn to the need of renewed activity in giving the city a thorough clean up. Personal and municipal attention should be given to making Quincy a clean city. Cooperation is needed. The New Britain Herald in referring to municipal spring cleaning says: "A little judicial advice as to throwing sweepings and handbills into the streets may not be amiss. Using the streets for such a purpose is a violation of the city ordinances and is punishable by a fine in the police court. As long as the city is taking up the work this ordinance ought to be enforced. It would not be a bad idea, however, to give some notice of the existence of such a law, for a great many people may not know anything about it."

SIDEWALK BIDS.

Bids were opened by Commissioner Bainbridge Tuesday afternoon for building tar concrete sidewalks. The bids were submitted on the assumption that the City Council would order a certain amount of work done. Three bids were received, but only two were considered, one of the bidders neglecting to inclose a certified check as required. The bids were as follows:

Simpson Bros. corporation	$7,860
W. A. Murtfeldt Co.	$7,876

The bids were taken under advisement.

The quantities estimated on were 7,000 yards of 3 inch, 3,000 yards of 4 inch, 100 yards street crossings, 1,000 yards of drives and some repair work.

Commander Ring of Post 88 said, we ask you to appropriate money to give us a hall where we can meet. It costs high now for rent, and many who are now getting old cannot afford to pay dues. We want a place where we can keep the records of the living and the dead, and the relics of the Civil war. Where we can have the charts of the great battles hung on the walls that are now in the public library. Something that will be a source of education to the rising generation.

Charles H. Johnson said it seemed to him that the City of Quincy of all places should rise to the occasion and answer the call of the men who by their valor and deeds gave us what we have today. It was time for the citizens of Quincy to rise to the occasion. The time has come when the city should procure a proper place for the gathering of patriotic citizens. He would suggest that the Dr. Everett estate on Elm street be secured. He believed that it could be secured for a reasonable sum and that it would make an ideal place, with its beautiful grounds, babling brook and trees.

Francis P. Loud, of Paul Revere post, said that he had resided in Quincy since 1857, and had paid taxes 54 years. At the time of the war Quincy had a population of 5,000 or 6,000, and sent 900 men to the front. He could remember of the meetings held in the old Town Hall, and of the nightly scenes when with fife and drum they marched up and down the street drumming up recruits. He was then a musician and played on these occasions. Paul Revere post had 200 or 300 men on the rolls, and had lost 130. It now had upwards of 73 men. Many of these are poor and cannot pay dues. We want a memorial hall. We have hundreds of pictures and relics we want to preserve so that our children's children may see them.

David Hanson of the Red Men told of his visit about Quincy in search of some memorial. The present hall of the Grand Army was a disgrace, and no place to keep the records and relics of the Civil war. As a representative of an organization that was patriotic yet would not participate in the use of the hall, he urged the city to erect a memorial hall. Ie seemed to him that these old gentlemen who went to the front and risked their lives ought to have adequate quarters. A place to enjoy their last days.

Councilman Sandberg, chairman of the committee, requested all in favor of the erection of a memorial hall to rise ,and all present did so. The hearing then adjourned.

GRAPHITE.

Government Report on an Interesting and Useful Mineral.

Everybody now uses a lead pencil, but not everybody knows that the "lead" is graphite, a rather interesting mineral. Some graphite is nearly pure carbon, almost as pure as diamond, which it does not at all resemble. Graphite is not fusible and is therefore, employed, either pure or mixed with clay, for making crucibles for use in the steel, brass and bronze industries. Most of the graphite used in crucibles, is imported from Ceylon, which furnishes a fibrous variety not found elsewhere. Graphite has no equal as a lubricant and is used extensively in electrotyping and electroplating, for it is a better conductor of electricity than most other forms of carbon. It is also a constituent of a paint used to preserve iron and steel.

Although graphite is most commonly seen in "lead" pencils, less than 10 per cent of the world's output is used in pencils. Until a few years ago all American pencil makers imported their graphite from Bohemia or Bavaria, but they now obtain a large part of it from Sonora, Mexico, where a deposit that is excellent for pencil making is operated by an American company.

Graphite is now made at Niagara Falls by electric power. Anthracite coal that carries a small amount of finely distributed ash is used in making the ordinary grades; the better grades are made from petroleum coke. There is still, however, a large market for natural graphite.

MEMORIAL HALL TO VETERANS

The Plans at Melrose Call for $70,000

Those who are working for a Memorial hall to Civil war veterans of Quincy should take courage. The Globe reports that the Melrose soldiers and sailors' memorial association announced plans Monday for the erection of a memorial building on Main street, at a cost of about $70,000. The site is near city hall, and it is proposed to purchase land between the fire station and the shop owned by chief engineer Joseph Edwards, which is now occupied by four buildings The price of the land and buildings is $17,000, and an option has been secured until June 23.

The association has appointed a committee, of which, Victor A. Friend is chairman, to appear before the city government at the next meeting and urge that the city issue bonds to the amount of $35,000 to help out the project. The association will raise $17,500 by public subscription and ex Alderman John C. F. Slayton, who is one of the chief movers of the new building, will make a gift of $17,500.

The proposed building would contain a large auditorium and also permanent quarters for U. S. Grant post 4, G. A. R., and affiliated organizations.

Ex-Mayor Levi S. Gould is president of the memorial association. Two years ago the association presented plans to the city for an appropriation of $60,000 for a memorial park and playground. The scheme was defeated by 91 votes, but the leaders of the opposition to it are said to be in favor of the proposition to erect a memorial building.

Brokers Charged With Fraudulent Use of the Mails

New York, March 29.—Charged with fraudulent use of the mails in inducing persons to invest in shares of the California Diamond Oil company, Archie L. Wisner and his brother, Emmet S. Wisner, of this city, and John J. Myers of San Francisco were indicted by the federal grand jury late yesterday.

The Wisner brothers were unable to secure bail last night and were locked up in the Tombs. Myers is under arrest in San Francisco.

The three men operated as A. L. Wisner & Co., and following a raid of their offices on Fifth avenue the postal inspectors estimated that transactions in excess of $10,000,000 throughout the country had been carried on by the concern during the last few years.

LADIES NIGHT AT WOLLASTON

Congregational Club Listens to Talk on Egypt Exploration

The annual ladies night of the Congregational Club of Wollaston was held in the vestries on Tuesday evening. A large number of gentlemen with their wives and sweethearts were present to enjoy a most pleasing program.

The speaker of the evening was Mrs. Marie N. Buckman, secretary of the "Egyptian Exploration Fund" who delivered a most instructive and finished lecture entitled "Hewers of stone along the Nile." Her talk was augmented by relics of dynastic and prelynastic times and by interesting views thrown by the stereopticon. The subject dealt, as the title indicates, more specifically with the great pyramids and temples of ancient Egypt and the means and materials used in their building. Among the relics shown were utensils including those of the earliest time when those of crude sunbaked clay were used to those of the beautiful alabaster.

The mystery of the sphinx, which has been unraveled by means of ancient hieriglyphics was explained. This is simply a mammoth statue set to guard the pyramid, the tomb of one of the rulers.

The speaker related how by means of sloping rampways manual labor under the direction of human intelligence was enabled to construct the pyramids and transport the huge blocks of stone used to their proper places. For the most famous of the pyramids it took 100,000 men 20 years to build, 3,200,000 blocks of immense proportions being used.

It had always been a source of wonder, said Mrs. Buckman speaking of the dress of ancient Egypt, how the women were able to move around in their tight costumes. Last year brought the explanation in the invention of the modern hobble skirt.

The lecture closed with scenes and descriptions of some of the temples that are doomed to destruction by inundation caused by the dams.

The Egypt Exploration Fund was established in England in 1883 and in the United States a year later. It has on its lists of officers and members many men of note, both scientific and otherwise in England and this country. Chester I. Campbell of Wollaston is honorary treasurer of this society.

The musical portion of the program consisted of vocal selections by Henry F. Van Buskirk and the club quartet. Mr. Van Buskirk, accompanied by his wife, sang "Three for Jack" and "Lilac Tree." His efforts met with hearty applause. The quartet composed of C. J. Hogue, W. A. Seiders, H. F. Van Buskirk and George B. Curran rendered "When the corn is waving, Annie dear," "A family matter," and a variation of "Swanee River."

The remainder of the evening was spent with a social hour, during which refreshments were served by the following young ladies: Miss Lucy Chase, Miss Carolyn Lewis, Miss Flora Wight, Miss Frances Jones, Miss Helen Jones, Miss Helen Farwell and Miss Helen Seavey.

At the business meeting a nominating committee composed of C. J. Hogue, C. A. Randall and T. E. Perley was appointed and George B. Curran and George Fleming as an auditing committee.

Attention was called to a minature model of Northland College the work of W. A. Mann, which it is hoped to fill with contributions to aid the work of Dr. Fenenga in Wisconsin.

By the courtesy of Chester I. Campbell a club member who was unable to be present an account of his direction of the National flower show, each lady present was presented with several large and beautiful pinks.

PEACE IS NEAR SAYS MADERO

Father of Insurrecto Leader Will Act as Envoy

TROUBLES ARE NEARLY OVER

Mexican Peace Negotiations May Be Held on American Soil—Discussion Broken Off In New York Will Be Resumed In San Antonio—Indications That Diaz' Resignation Will Soon Occur

San Antonio, Tex., March 29.—Francisco I. Madero, Sr,. father of the insurrecto leader, upon his arrival at San Antonio, declared that peace in Mexico is assured within thirty days and probably within ten days. He will be one of the revolutionary representatives.

Diplomatic exchanges have proceeded sufficiently, Madero added, to make it safe to state that the office of vice president, for the time being at least, and at present occupied by Senor Corral, whom he called obnoxious, will be abolished.

Diaz will save his face by remaining in office for just a few months and then resign. He will plead the weariness of his many years. The administration party, it is believed by Madero, will choose Limantour, the minister of finance, as its candidate for the highest office in the land.

There is every indication at this moment that San Antonio will be selected as the neutral ground upon which the terms of peace in Mexico will be concluded.

Madero intimated in an interview that he preferred to negotiate on American soil, but that if the Mexican government insisted, the meeting could be held in some city of northern Mexico.

There is lacking but little to make positive the fact that the war in Mexico is near an end and that President Diaz will step out.

The elder Madero expects to meet the rebel leader, his son, "Patcho," here within a few days, the trip being made in automobile from a point on the border about 150 miles from San Antonio.

Senor De La Barra will be here within the next thirty-six hours and in all likelihood the discussion of the peace proposals will be taken up where they left off in New York when Madero, Limantour and De La Barra outlined the necessary steps of which yesterday's announcement is undoubtedly a part.

Madero talks like a man who is pursuing a course of action which has been well planned in advance and he is positive in his assertion that the troubles of the southern republic are about over.

Advices received here indicate that the government is in a hopeless military position in three Mexican states and that the uselessness of further contending against the rebels has at last forced itself home upon the Diaz administration.

It is known that Diaz has acceded to the terms brought by Limantour, upon which alone can peace be secured, and that means that the principal demands of the Maderists have been acceded to, viz.—a new election, the resignation of Diaz and the elimination of Corral and Creel from public affairs.

Diaz Will Seek Retirement

Mexico City, March 29.—The report that President Diaz will resign is regarded as not wholly without foundation, though the date of such action is contingent upon the re-establishment of peace.

Semi-officially it is stated that President Diaz has no intention of going abroad, as has also been reported, while the present state of insurrection continues, but, peace established, the same authority said that it was not improbable that Diaz would seek retirement.

The performance the other evening gave us something to think about, and it sure gave us something to talk about. It will be many months before the affair is quieted down. We all take off our hats to the Whitman Women's club which gave us such a delightful performance, and will line up at the next performance and get tickets for the front row."

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

Although the afternoon was stormy there was an interested gathering of members of the Quincy Alliance to greet Mrs. Emily A. Fifield, the guest and speaker of the afternoon. Following the devotional service and business there was an enjoyable musical program with Mrs. Frank A. Page of Wollaston as the soloist and Mrs. Henry M. Faxon at the piano. Mrs. Page is a great favorite and her singing was much enjoyed.

Mrs. Wilson Marsh presented clearly and concisely what the Charities Conference hoped to accomplish in having a paid secretary and the great need of such a helper in our city. The Alliance will undoubtedly do its part in the good work the matter of contributing being referred to the appeals committee of the incoming board.

Mrs. E. B. Marsh president of the Alliance introduced Mrs. Fifield a well known worker in the Unitarian church whose subject would be "The Alliance and the Club."

Mrs. Fifield in introductory said her paper was written several years ago, in the latter part of the last century but seemed as applicable now as then. She had read it many times in the original manuscript and had not altered it in any way.

She had a good word for the women's clubs in the broad, up-lifting, educational work they were doing all over the land but of course the club could not by the nature of its organization appeal to the spiritual side of woman. The Alliance is religious, doing a religious work; it touched the conscience in a way a woman's club could not. It stood for reverence, unselfishness and a striving to help those less fortunate.

Mrs. Fifield was earnest and her message appealed to Alliance members giving a fuller appreciation of the far reaching work of the National Alliance through its branches. She was heartily applauded at the conclusion of her paper.

The hostesses for the social hour were Mrs. Thomas Fenno and Miss Ellen Fottler.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Pots of jonquils, vases of jonquils and a jonquil for each guest made the club house look bright and festive on Tuesday afternoon for Federation day of the Quincy Women's Club. It is a yearly event in the club program to entertain club presidents in a good neighborly fashion and in a measure return the courtesies received from other clubs.

As usual a short business session was held Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney presiding. The Education committee regretted to announce that the annual Children's festival usually held in Music hall the last of April would have to be given up this year on account of the prevalence of scarlet fever but it was hoped to have an out door festival later. At the club meeting on April 25 there would be maybaskets and candy on sale so that the children could be ready for May night.

Mrs. E. B. Marsh for the Art and Literature committee invited members of the club to attend the last lecture of the current events class on April 13.

A letter was read from Mrs. Moore, National Federation President welcoming the Quincy club into membership.

Mrs. Henry Tirrell made a motion that the club send resolutions to Mrs. George W. Morton expressing the loving regard and sympathy of the club for its past president in the death of her husband.

Attention was called to the large and beautiful pot of jonquils which adorned the president's desk, presented to the Quincy Women's club with the compliments of William Patterson. Accompanying the card was the wish that club members visit the flower show in Boston and enjoy the fine exhibit. A vote of thanks was extended Mr. Patterson for the gift and it was also voted to send the jonquils to Mrs. Morton after the meeting.

Miss Mary Louise Gavin of the Philanthropy committee made an interesting report of the young Women's club as follows:

The Young Women's club through the untiring efforts of its President, Miss Packard, during the past year has had a most interesting and enjoyable program.

On Oct. 8 its season started with a social evening, at which time our President, Mrs. Gurney, addressed the club. On Oct. 22, Miss Georgiana Lane gave a most interesting and instructive talk "Some Phases of Art." Miss Edith Randall took the members of the club with her on a "Vacation in Switzerland" for an evening and told many very interesting things which are not found in the ordinary story of the country. Col. Edward Anderson entertained for an evening, his subject being "Characteristics as shown in People I have met." Another evening was given to a talk on settlement work, giving the members an insight into the work which plays such an important part in all large cities. Feb. 11 Mrs. Gay and Miss Agnes Ryan spoke on Women's Suffrage. Each speaker took up points in favor and after speaking answered the questions which the members asked. It proved to be a very interesting meeting. Following this members of the club took part in a debate on Women's Suffrage. Those taking part deserve great credit for the way they placed their arguments and conducted the debate. March 25 the dramatic class, under the direction of Mrs. Gurney, gave a play entitled "A Lover's Stratagem," which was greatly enjoyed, reflecting great credit on teacher and class. Each of these meetings closed with a social hour and it is gratifying to see the young people mingle together for games, dancing and music. The four social evenings given the club and their guests have been very successful. The committee having charge always providing a very pleasing program.

As the spirit of the age seems to be bent on pleasure, so it is with the club and I feel that it is through these social evenings that many may be reached to take an interest in the class work.

The members of the Quincy Women's club might be of great assistance in this respect, consider that these young girls of today are to be the backbone of society in the future, their influence is to be felt in all spheres of life; the home, the business and political world, and in society in general. Each member should try to influence her young friends to become members, some of these new members may have had all the advantages that home and education can provide, their influence would be to elevate the less fortunate sisters and by becoming members they are doing a two-fold good; sharing the benefits derived from education with other members and gaining the pleasure which is to be had at the club meetings. Another new member may have had very little education and perhaps home influences which are not conducive to making a woman to take the position in the world which we wish all might take; by mingling with others having something of the higher things of life she becomes interested, wants to improve herself and be like her more fortunate sister. A few evenings may change the aspect of the whole life of this girl.

The objects of the club are philanthropy, education and social. Having the membership increased will improve the class work and I trust that the Quincy Women's club having for one of its objects Philanthropy will assist the Young Women's club by increasing the membership.

This year the club has had three classes; basketry, in charge of Mrs. Parker; aesthetic dancing in charge of Miss Ruth Bass, and dramatics in charge of Mrs. Gurney. The assessment made for those taking up class work was one dollar ($1.00) for five lessons. The expenses of the class work have all been met, leaving a balance of one dollar and forty-five cents.

The Treasurer's report which will be given in detail at the close of the year shows a balance of $26.44. At one of the social evenings a candy sale was held, the proceeds for Mt. Pleasant camp.

In closing I would ask each member of this club to take an interest in the Young Women's club, encourage them in their work and help them increase their membership, so that in the fall it will be 200 with a waiting list.

Mrs. Gurney who has taken a great interest in the Young Women's club hoped club members would attend some of their meetings. She thought the older club women would benefit by contract with the younger women. The way to feel young was to keep young with the young people.

In opening the afternoon's program the president said we have all been looking forward to Federation day for two reasons, first because it draws together members of neighboring clubs and secondly because we want to know all about federation—a wish likely to be gratified this afternoon. The musical program arranged by Mrs. Chandler W. Smith consisted of piano and vocal solos by Mrs. Mary Chandler West and Miss Dayton. Mrs. West played with brilliant execution and was loudly encored. Miss Dayton in a group of three songs, gave much pleasure having a deep contralto voice of sweetness and quality. She was given most appreciative applause.

Miss Georgia Bacon of Worcester, State Federation President, the speaker of the afternoon was given a most cordial greeting, partly because of being the representative of so many clubs but more perhaps because of her own personality which has made her known personally to so many club members.

Miss Bacon said she wished clubs would realize that they are the Federation. With enthusiasm everything can be accomplished. The enthusiasm of the west would work wonders in the east but she was proud of the state where committees were doing a work of love; finding opportunities for work and carrying it out. A finer work was done where all were harmonious where clubs and Federation worked together. What was being done in Massachusetts was being watched by other states and so the good work spreads.

Miss Bacon told interestingly of the work of the Federation committees—how the legislative committee looked into industrial conditions—of a scholarship whereby a young woman went through Simmons and Radcliffe colleges, afterward obtaining employment in factory to study conditions and found great need of sanitation. The Federation sent her to the legislature to show need of sanitation and inspection of factories. The inspection service is lax. There are so few inspectors that many places cannot be inspected at all. By the new law the work is divided, the State Board of Health assisting the inspectors.

The committee on Industrial and Social conditions were looking into the Child Welfare work this season, studying conditions of the child at home and on the street.

Food Sanitation was important, one that every woman should familiarize herself with. Read the labels and buy only those properly labeled. Look to the markets and bake-houses, don't buy uncovered goods or goods exposed to dirt. Celery should be tied and not nailed. Make yourself an observer of local conditions. Flies—watch the flies and kill them. April was the month they breeded. Traps were being invented for catching the flies.

A public halth conference was to be held in Revere Thursday. Interest in stamping out Tuberculosis was started by the State Federation. Has a traveling exhibit for schools. Look to the common drinking cup. Vermont has adopted our laws regarding it but if going by train to the south or to New Hampshire when the state line is crossed out comes the drinking cup from its hiding place and the children as well as adults revel in its germs.

In Social Hygiene work there are big possibilities in our women's club. In Worcester a course of seven lectures was being given. Reached the girls in the factories, distributing 1100 tickets and got 800 girls out to the first lecture. The great good is hard to estimate but is far reaching the girls being appreciative. Another year the subject of how to dress simply and well on a little money would be taken up for the benefit of the girls.

The State Federation is always careful how it enters into legislative matters and has the subjects well in hand. Has been interested in the Appalachian bill, the Spanish War Veterans bill, night messenger service by minors between the hours of 10 P. M. and 5 A. M. The milk bill is endorsed by the Federation, it being a question of clean milk or dirty and women know what dirty milk means.

Education committee was looking to better conditions is our schools. Believed the school house should be a social centre especially in rural places.

Civic was a large and broad question—stamp saving, play grounds and clean-up days of interest. Every one in a community should be interested in a clean-up day or week, and first of all club members should clean up their own back yards, then take up their district. The work of the juvenile court depends much on the Judge of the court, he must know children to do a successful work. Club members could become volunteer probation officers.

There were many more committees in the State Federation all doing a good work and Miss Bacon hoped the Quincy club would feel that it was a part of the State and the National Federation and carrying the message all over the land.

Again hearty applause expressed the appreciation of the club in the message brought to it by Miss Bacon and Mrs. Gurney thought there would be even greater interest in future meetings of the Federation exprssed in a larger attendance from Quincy.

The program closed with another piano solo by Mrs. West after which an informal reception was tendered Miss Bacon. The hostesses Mrs. John L. Gow, Mrs. Ralph L. Lovell and Mrs. Russell C. Low served delicious homemade cake and hot chocolate, the pourers being Mrs. Charles W. Guy, Mrs. Francis H. Corey, Mrs. Horace G. Crocker and Mrs. Everett Crane.

The children's party is to be held this week Saturday afternoon at half past two at the club house. Children can come with parents or on the calling card or membership ticket of a club member.

DAUGHTERS OF REVOLUTION.

Mrs. Susan M. Plummer, state regent of the Daughters of the Revolution, presided for the first time at a meeting of the state council Monday in the society headquarters in the Colonial building, Boston. A long list of applicants for membership was acted upon and the appointments for the committees of the coming year made. A musicale was held Tuesday at 11 A. M. in the College Club, 40 Commonwealth avenue, under the auspices of the Massachusetts members of the general board. On April 11 there will be another musicale in aid of the fund of $5000 for the bronze bas-relief memorial by Sculptor Cooper of New York, which will be dedicated May 11 in the naval academy, Annapolis.

CIVIC WORK.

A circular has been sent out by the civic department of the General Federation of Woman's clubs, Mrs. Edwin F. Moulton of Warren, O., chairman, calling attention to the increasing interest in civic improvement in all parts of the country, to the work done by the clubs along this line and giving some recommendations as to future activities. Among these is the holding of public conferences on civic subjects; continuation of the annual "clean-up day;" a campaign of education regarding the enforcement of city ordinances pertaining to street cleanliness; continuing warfare on the house fly; recognizing the importance of waste disposal; organizing junior republics or civic leagues, or good citizen clubs in the schools, and a more decided stand against bill boards. At the end of the circular are the following suggestions:

Do one thing at a time.
Work for school gardens.
Study artistic planting.
Is your own back yard clean?
Secure "before and after" photographs.
Read reliable civic literature. For this and other information, apply to your state chairman of civics.

BANQUET OF PRISCILLAS

Magazines of Courtship Illustrated—Prizes Awarded

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Priscilla Sorority of Quincy Point was held at the home of Mrs. T. B. Pollard, Edison street, Tuesday evening.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing pear:

President—E. May Oliver.
Vice President—Ada Gerroir.
Secretary—Cora E. Barnes.
Treasurer—Clara B. Buzzell.

After the business meeting the members adjourned to the dining room to find an empty table where they had expected a banquet. After the first pangs of disappointment were over, they were instructed to don their wraps and wend their way down the street to the home of Mrs. Arthur B. Foster. There a sumptuous repast awaited them. The table was prettily decorated with jonquils, and covers were laid for twelve. At each place was a dainty menu in the form of a "P. S." designed and executed by Miss Marian E. Johnson, Wellesley '12; also a place-card, with a verse containing a gentle knock for the person whose name it bore. The menu was as follows:— Grape-fruit cocktail, beef loaf, mashed potatoes, spiced apple jelly, rolls creamed chicken, cranberry sauce, olives, shrimp salad, saltines, ice cream, cake and coca.

Miss Isabelle Foster and Miss Elizabeth Beattie waited on table, and proved themselves expert if no experienced waitresses.

The repast over, the members proceeded to the parlor, where each in turn read aloud the verse upon her place-card. As the verses, which were composed by Miss Clara Buzzell and Miss Helen Sherburne, were rather personal, some of the girls required a little coaxing.

The entertainment committee, Miss May Oliver and Miss Cora Barnes, next passed each one a scrap-book, a magazine, a pair of scissors and some pins. They were instructed to cut pictures from the magazines and illustrate the scrap-books, which were labeled "A magazine courtship." The prize, consisting of a small yellow chicken, was secured by Miss Ada Gerrior for the most original. Next on the program came a jumbled list of articles for a sewing room. Miss Marian Johnson received the prize for this—a piece of frosted cake.

The members then gathered around the piano, presided over by Miss Helen Lincoln, and sang college songs. The Sorority song, composed by Miss Helen Sherburne, was also sung.

It is to the tune of "Fair Harvard," as follows:

To the fair town of Plymouth, long, long years ago,
A good ship o'er the ocean did come;
Her name was the Mayflower and with her there sailed
Many Pilgrims who made there their home.
And one was Priscilla, who later is said
To have spoken those words so unique,
To John Alden, who came to propose for his friend,—
"John, why for yourself don't you speak."

Now, many years later, a band of young girls,
In Quincy, that city of fame,
A sonority started, and thought it was well
To have "The Priscillas" their name.
For four happy years, with our kind leader's help,
We have prospered and worked with a will
And we hope that for many more years we'll remain
"The Priscilla Sorority" still.

After thanking Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Pollard and the two waitresses for their kindness, the Priscillas departed to their homes about 11.15, all pronouncing it a most enjoyable evening.

Those present were: Cora E. Barnes, Ada Gerroir, Clara B. Buzzell, Viola A. Hayden, Helen M. Lincoln, Hazel Harris, E. May Oliver, Bertha M. Smith, Elsie E. Kirby, Lillian L. Eaton, Marian E. Johnson, Helen A. Sherburne.

VEILING JEWELS.

The fashion of veiling has been extended to the veiling of jewels. It is the fad in London to wear all the pendants and brooches of precious stones that on can muster and then hide their glitter under a veil of chiffon so they appear as a glowing part of the underdress.

The Oriental embroideries and garnitures which were used in the early Spring have reappeared also with this veiled effect, and they are very beautiful when their Eastern vividness of color is partly obscured by veilings of dark blue, indefinite mole or gray.

Gowns of gold or silver tissue or trimmed with broad gold or silver embroideries are veiled with chiffons and voiles. Even valuable old lace trimmings for evening gowns are only suggested, for they, too, are partly covered by thin veilings.

Superior Court. Norfolk, ss.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court next to be holden at Dedham within and for the County of Norfolk:

Respectfully libels and represents Bessie Maskileison of Quincy in said County that she was lawfully married to Max Maskileison, residence unknown at Mensky, Russia on the fourth day of March A. D. 1903, and thereafterwards your libellant and the said Max Maskileison lived together as husband and wife in this Commonwealth to wit, at said Quincy since April 1909; that your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations but the said Max Maskileison being wholly regardless of the same while your libellant and the said Max Maskileison were living together as husband and wife in said Quincy contracted gross and confirmed habits of intoxication caused by the voluntary and excessive use of intoxicating liquor and has been guilty of cruel and abusive treatment towards your libellant.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Max Maskileison and that the care and custody of the three minor children to wit, Thomas aged six years, Samuel aged four years and Lewis aged three years may be committed to your libellant and that alimony for the support of your libellant and said minor children may be decreed to your libellant. Your libellant also prays that the said Max Maskileison be prohibited and enjoined from imposing any restraint on the personal liberty of your libellant during the pendency of this libel. And your libellant further prays for such further relief as is equitable in the premises. Dated at said Quincy the 13th day of February A. D. 1911.

BRIEFS

All roads lead to Music hall Wednesday evening, April 26—Men's club "Revue" and vaudeville.

Miss Helen King of Washington D. C., is spending the spring vacation with her parents Mr. and Mrs Edgar A. King of Clay street.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Gourley of Union street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter born Tuesday.

Although officially the yachting season is not yet on, a party of young Wollaston people were out Tuesday evening, though for good and sufficient reasons they did not sail far.

Mrs. George H. Wilson of 47 Revere road has sent out cards inviting her friends to attend the meeting of the Hospital Aid association at her home tomorrow, afternoon at half past two.

Mrs. John C. Randall of Quincy announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Louise John Randall, to Mr. Rodney Dean, Yale 1911, of Orange, New Jersey.

Among the passengers sailing on the George Washington of the North German Lloyd line, from New York to Bremen, via Plymouth and Cherbourg, Thursday is William Dahlquist of this city.

Mrs. Elbert Whitney of Waltham was among the guests at the meeting of the Quincy Women's club on Tuesday afternoon and enjoyed meeting many of her old friends. She represented the Waltham Woman's Club but was the special guest of her sisters Mrs. Charles H. Porter and Miss Dora A. French.

FORMER RESIDENT.

Word has been received of the death of Los Angeles, California, Jan. 20, of William M. O'Connor. Mr. O'Connor, who was 34 years of age, was a son of Cornelius O'Connor, a former resident of Quincy and remembered by many of the older residents. When in Quincy Mr. O'Connor lived on Brackett street, and went to California in 1852, when he became a millionaire. He became very prominent in political life and was at one time chairman of the Republican State Committee. His son William who has just died, was graduated at Harvard college and resided in San Francisco, but died in Los Anegles.

IN FASHION'S REALM

Striped Fabrics Popular for Spring, Also Short Tunics.

Season's Costumes in Brilliant Coloring in Great Favor.

There is no one of the new styles on which you can put the finger and say, this is an invention; this is striking; this is a novelty. This summary does not include the trouser skirt; in its present state that is a freak. It is only when it is modified into decent suitability that we will consider it as a probability and not as an absurdity.

There are new uses of old materials, and there is a perceptible drawing away from the so-called peasant styles. The fashionable colors, the sleeve in one with the shoulder, and the embroideries are still with us, but one would consider the full skirt of chiffon over satin and the full blouse with round neck as a bit old-fashioned.

These lines have been strictly modified. We have worn them long enough; that is often the world's only excuse for changing anything. It is probably the same in fashions as in all other things—that to stand still is to go back. Progression is development, but fashion does not always move onward; it darts backward and forward and keeps things in a mighty stir.

The new gowns show a decided scantiness everywhere. Tunics of transparent cloth are excessively used, but they are narrow and short, and seem to do without gathers or plaits. The satin and silk slips on which they are mounted are dropped in straight lines from the waist, and do not measure quite two yards around the hem. They are more apt to be long than short, but this length has nothing in common with the voluminous folds that lie on the floor. If there is a train it is a queer little pointed affair that takes on none of the dignity or elegance of the sweep of material that was once called a train.

Bodices and blouses are appreciably influenced by the Directoire styles, which call for slenderness. The kimono sleeve is lifted from the middle of the underarm line to the arm's eye. It no longer swings away from the upper arm, but clings to it until it reaches the elbow.

The only feature that the Spring styles have in common with those that have preceded them is the lack of flare. Everything is cut on a straight line; nothing is circular or projecting or flaring. There is not the slightest return to a skirt that swings out at the hem from the knee line. If anything, the seams may go in a bit toward the ankle, but the aim and the desire is to keep them straight. To this end they are heavily leaded, and to hear some women walk you would think we were back in the days of Salammbo, wearing anklets of metal. Small steel chains are put in the hems of gowns that have a tendency to swing out, and the ordinary method is to use disks from five to six inches apart.

The fashion we may most confidently look forward to in the next few weeks is the use of striped materials, not only for trimming but for the whole gown. To this end the manufacturers have brought out all manner of soft satins and silks in stripes of black and white, red and blue, yellow and brown, purple and black, cerise and white. These are to be used for underslips, instead of plain materials, and over them are draped voile, chiffon cloth, marquisette and mousseline.

The recrudescence of stripes will make us hark back to other gowns of striped silks that have been awaiting resurrection. And a good deal can be done with them this Spring and Summer. They should prove a joy to the home dress-maker, who can buy a few yards of double width veiling and construct for herself a gown which shows the wearer knows what's what in the world of fashion.

Purple, with its many shades, is to be much in evidence, and one of the artistic gowns made up in it of stripes and plain voile has a foundation slip of violet and white striped satin with a short empire waist and a slim plain skirt. Over this is a Manon Lescaut tunic of white gauze, with purple morning glories in it. It is edged with two inches of lace and caught up at each side of the back. The short-waisted bodice is of the same material and almost covered with a fichu of white mousseline run with lace bands and edged with lace plaiting. This is caught in front with a single satin morning glory, and is pulled down into the short waist line at the back by a huge cameo.

By the way, cameos are to be at the height of style this year. Not as brooches, but as cabochons. They fasten the drapery on the Empire bodice, and catch aigrettes on Indian turbans.

Black and white stripes will naturally have first place in the early season's gowns, because we are under the seductive thrall of this combination. Several of the important dressmakers have already turned out gowns of black and white striped satin, draped with black chiffon cloth or marquisette, with a touch of handsome heavy lace on the shoulders. With these gowns go turbans or large hats of black net, with white aigrettes and green scarfs, or Alsatian bows of black and white striped ribbon. The whole idea is a good one for Spring, for attractive as black is, its universal usage this Winter has rather depressed one. If it had not been for the freedom of wearing vivid colors as a contrast we would have been a sombre assemblage, indeed.

It is true that black and white is in fashion yet. It really takes precedence over colors, and it is supposed that the French arbiters will keep up the fashion until the English Court goes into brilliant colors. There is a good deal of talk, with or without authority, of designers resurrecting the styles of George IV. under the reign of George V. after his coronation, and it is probable that we shall see many of the fashionable details of that time brought into use. We will surely not adopt the costumes in their entirety.

The high folded stocks for men which were made famous in the Regency by Brummell and the Prince of Wales are already being worn by ultrafashionable men in London, and the American men are beginning, slightly, to take them up. They are without doubt the most picturesque neckwear that men can adopt, and it would seem to the feminine mind they would jump at the chance of doing something to relieve them from the dull ugliness of their present attire.

The Manon Lescaut style was brought in by Redfern last Summer, but it did not become popular until now. And half of this present favoritism for the tight sleeve, the wide fichu, and the high waist has as much to do with the revival of the French Revolution fashions as it has with Manon. Whatever the reason for the revival of the V neck, the plaited fichu, and the long, tight sleeve with its frill at the wrist, they are back in fashion, with those who are tired of the loose carelessness of the Grecian and peasant draperies had best make the most of the new fashions while they last.

The fichu is probably the one part of them that will take a deep hold on the public. It has always been a likable little accessory. It works in well with Summer garments, is far more becoming to slender figures than the Dutch neck, and—economically speaking—it hides many a defect, either of usage or of ill fitting.

When fichus were in fashion before they were the boon of the home dressmaker, for she could run up a simple little organdie or muslin waist and cover the majority of its surface with a soft fichu that could be plaited into good lines. One was then effective with little effort. It is probable the same makeshift will appear when the fichu becomes well established.

Among the novelties in evening clothes are gowns made of brilliant dark blue jet, or made of chiffon or net in that shade with quantities of blue jet attached. This tone of blue has nothing in common with turquois or sapphire. It is the brightest dark blue that can be manufactured and it takes on a wonderful gleam and sparkle at night. Gowns of white satin are draped with tunics of heavy blue net, lavishly bordered with this jet, and one-piece frocks of the jet are draped over black satin with the shoulders lightened up with corded white tulle over pink, spangled with crystals or brilliants.

One gown made entirely of the jet has a deep fringe on the tunic, which shows about four inches of ivory satin at the hem. It is caught above the left ankle with a huge red satin rose, that deep wine red that goes with flashing dark blue. The bodice has one shoulder of the jet over white tulle, and the other shoulder of Venetian lace. There is another red rose below the bust to match this drapery where it melts into the high straight lines of the skirt. It is rather a wonderful gown and stands out from its fellows with startling distinctness.

All kinds of jet will evidently be in favor ,to judge by the first showing of the new Spring frocks. White, blue, cerise, black, and amethyst are among the different kinds used for high girdles, for flat bodice pieces that go under the arm, and as ornaments stiffened with crinoline. Women always like the return of jet for some reason; and many who should never wear a piece of it plaster themselves with black jet the moment it makes its periodic bow.

White jet is excessively attractive, and goes well with the black marquisette gowns which we will evidently wear from now until October. And, by the way, there is no end to the use of beads on all kinds of gowns, hats, and blouses. The rubber ones are not used as much as they were last Summer, although they are quite attractive and far less perishable than the china and crystal ones which crush and break quickly. Wooden beads have proved heavy and they are used sparingly.

Red in every shade is to be at the height of fashion—again the French Revolution, you see—so ornaments in this color are very much to the front. Buckles, cabochons, Empire girdles, and fringes are used for all manner of gowns. And this is the time for you to bring out your garnet jewelry, if you have any, and wear it with coat suits as well as indoor gowns. The necklace of garnets gives just the proper splash of color to a white blouse, and is in better taste than the gold chain and the cheap pearls with which so many women deck themselves.

Coral jewelry is also to be in fashion and if you have a really artistic set of it you are to be envied.

As is the case with many exploited fashions, the little short Greek chemise of chiffon or silk voile came into general fashion after the extremists had let it alone. It is seen on many of the new Spring frocks, and it is quite effective. It is nothing more or less than an abbreviated tunic, and as such is easily made at home by one who does not care to give the price asked by the important designers. It is in line with the fashion for short coats which has taken possession of the world, and it also is suggestive of the Indian hunting shirt, which was offered last Spring, but never accepted.

It is cut off below the hips, worn over a slim slip of soft satin, which has no trimming, goes over the shoulders, has small kimono sleeves, and fastens in front or back. It is trimmed with two-inch fringe, either of silk or crystals, and it has a loose girdle, making it high waisted, which is fastened at the side or in the middle of the back. It might not be a bad idea for the woman who has a thoroughly good satin slip, and who is tired of the long-draped tunics, to try this little Greek chemise as a finishing touch. She will have a gown that is at least stylish, if not becoming, and she ought to be able to make it the latter by a clever adjustment of color and lining. These little garments are not the same color as the one-piece frock beneath. Their beauty lies in the fact that they are a vivid contrast. Cerise chiffon cloth will be put over a robe of black satin and girdled in by a band of cerise jet. King's blue is an admirable color for black, for gray, and for white. A black one is worn over a white satin slip, and possibly has a girdle of blue jet.

Some think they look like a dressing sacque worn in the drawing room, but if they do it is the fault of the wearer, who puts it on carelessly or who has not made it right.—Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

LITTLE CAKES FOR TEA.

The hostess who likes novel little cakes for afternoon tea will find these palatable. A sort of sweet biscuit, shaped like a ladyfinger, is made from the well-beaten whites of three eggs, into which is beaten almost half a pound of confectioner's sugar. Add four ounces of melted butter, and stir in quickly at the last four ounces of pastry flour.

Put this paste into a pastry bag and force through a tube on well-buttered baking sheets. Form finger shapes not too close together, as they spread, and bake in a moderate oven until a delicate brown.

For an almond cake, beat to a cream three ounces of butter and half a pound of soft A sugar, then add gradually half a pint of milk and enough flour to make a light dough. Stir in a quarter of a pound of blanched and minced almonds, lightly floured. Put on a floured board, roll about a quarter of an inch thick, and cut into diamonds and squares.

Almond macaroons are made by beating the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth, then stir in half a pound of confectioner's sugar and the strained juice of half a lemon, and last half a pound of ground almonds. Put paper on a flat baking sheet, drop the mixture on by teaspoonfuls, and bake in a quick oven until a light brown.

Little German caraway cakes are made by mixing two cups of flour, a cup of butter, a cup and a half of sugar, four eggs, two teaspoonfus of rosewater, and half a cup of caraway seed. Drop on baking sheet and bake in a slow oven from twenty minutes to half an hour.

WOMAN BARRED FROM SPEAKING IN CHURCH

Bishop Quotes From the New Testament as Argument

Albany, March 29.—Bishop Doane refused to permit Mrs. Elizabeth B. Grannis, president of the national league for the promotion of purity, to speak in All Saints cathedral at the convention of the Purity league, which was to have been held here. In refusing Mrs. Grannis permission to speak Doane quoted from the Bible, First Corinthians, 14:34:

"Let your women keep silent in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak."

Speaking of the affair the bishop said that when he gave the league the right to hold the convention in the cathedral he was under the impression that Rev. J. A. McCuaig was to speak. The meeting of the league will be held in New York, where Mrs. Grannis will address it.

USEFUL CARD PRIZES.

A recent hostess gave as prizes to a bridge party a book that had proved a household friend to her. It was a manual containing recipes for all sorts of repairs and stain removing, with other useful household information.

As the binding of these books was anything but handsome, she covered each one herself with glazed English chintz in gay patterns. This could be wiped off with a damp cloth when soiled.

She had the title of the book printed on a decorative label and pasted on the outside cover.

The cost of these prizes was small, and they will prove of lasting use to the women who receive them.

Almost every housekeeper has one such book by which she goes, and the idea of making it artistic and giving it to her friends should prove enticing. —N. Y. Times.

Three Thousand Pines From Germany Found to Be Diseased

Albany, March 29.—There will be a bonfire in Westchester county when the state department of agriculture burns 3000 4-year-old pine trees just imported from Germany.

The trees are afflicted with blister rust, which is fatal to white pine forests. It destroyed the white pine of certain parts of Germany and, according to Commissioner of Agriculture Pearson, would wipe out the magnificent pine groves of America if it got a start. The Westchester trees belong to a private nursery man.

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

McVickar defies Senator Blount to nominate Evan. Patricia and her geologist father arrive at the Sagebrush capital.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics. But finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Evan has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's mixing in politics. His father pulls wires unknown to him to have him invited to speak in a distant mining town. Hathaway, who has been trying to do business with the road and with Senator Blount, is to have a talk with Mrs. Blount.

Hathaway wants a rebate from the road in consideration of political favors. He is referred to Evan and is advised by Mrs. Blount to put Professor Anners' name on his list of stockholders.

Evan's interview with Hathaway reveals the road's misdoings. In a rage he resigns. Gantry holds up the resignation. Evan insists that it go through to McVickar.

Patricia refuses Evan again. She advises him to stick to the road and work for clean politics. He withdraws his resignation and is sent into the field on a familiar tour.

Blount quickened his pace to a run, let himself silently with his latchkey through the door of his private room, flung open his desk and groped in an inner drawer for the revolver which was part of its furnishings.

With the weapon in his hand, he passed on through the swinging door into Collins' room. There was an acrid odor of high explosives in the air, and when he hurried through to the room beyond the fumes were stifling.

His first act was to press the electric button which turned on the lights. The workroom beyond Collins' office was a wreck. Desks were broken open, the safe door had been blown from its hinges, and a man with an electric pocket lamp in his hand was crouching in front of the wrecked cash box.

A MAN WAS CROUCHING IN FRONT OF THE WRECKED CASH BOX.

On the blazing up of the lights the man sprang to his feet and dashed out past Blount, snapping the light switch, to leave the rooms in total darkness, as he passed.

With a savage exclamation directed at his own lack of presence of mind, Blount turned to follow, fell over a chair, picked himself up and, groping for the latch on Collins' door, let himself out into the corridor.

There were no signs of the escaping safe blower, and Blount ran hastily to the elevator and rang the bell until the sleepy operator set the machinery in motion and lifted himself to the floor of happenings. Here the incident came to an abrupt end. The elevator man had heard no one descending the stairs which circled down the elevator well from floor to floor to the street level.

Blount went back to his office, turned in a police alarm and waited until an officer came from headquarters. Leaving the man in charge of the wrecked workroom, he went to report the safe blowing in person to the captain on duty at police headquarters, after which he carried out his original intention of going to the hotel and to bed.

But for a long time after the post-midnight quiet had settled down upon the hostelry he lay wide awake, wrestling with this newest problem which had risen up to confront him, for now there was no longer any doubt in his mind that the long arm of the machine was reaching out for him personally and that sooner or later it must come to a life and death grapple.

CHAPTER XV.

ON THE KNEES OF THE HIGH GODS.

IT was on the evening of the day following the safe blowing in Blount's offices in the Temple court building that a one car special train slipped unostentatiously into the capital from the east, running as second section of the overland.

Coincident with its sidetracking, O'Brian, the vice president's secretary, dropped from the step of the car and made his way across the tracks in the yard to the nearest railroad telephone, which chanced to be in the yardmaster's office.

Fifteen minutes later the result of O'Brian's telephoning became evident. Gantry and Kittredge, the division superintendent, left their respective offices in the railroad building, met in the echoing train shed and walked together down the yards.

The vice president, sitting at the great table in the open compartment which served him as a desk in working hours, looked up and nodded when his two subordinates entered.

"You got my message?" he queried.

Gantry answered for both. "Yes, and we were waiting. Your orders have been carried out. Nobody outside of the dispatcher's office and the few men in the yard crew knows that you are here."

Mr. McVickar sat back in his chair, took one of the large black cigars from the open box on the table and passed the box across to his two subalterns.

"Light up," he said tersely. "I am due in Twin Canyon City tomorrow morning, and we've got to thrash this thing out in a hurry. Any change in the situation since your last report?"

Gantry shook his head. "Nothing very important. Blount's uptown offices were broken into last night, and his safe was ripped open with dynamite. That's all."

"Well," said the big man at the table, "what came of it?"

"Nothing so far as any one can find out."

To a disinterested observer it might have seemed a little curious that the vice president made no further inquiry into the safe blowing. As a matter of fact, his next question completely ignored it.

"What has Blount been doing this week?" he asked.

"He has spoken twice, once at Ariquipa and once at Hellersville. Collins says he has engagements enough to keep him out of town right up to election day."

"That's good," was the nodded approval. "He'd only be in the way here at the capital."

"That young man has been pretty nearly a frost," remarked Kittredge casually. "If he isn't a wild eyed fanatic, as Gantry here insists he is, he is deeper than the deep blue sea. I've been keeping tab on him, as you directed, and he has worn out three of my best office men trying to keep cases on him."

"You are prejudiced, Kittredge," was the vice president's comment. "It was the best move in the entire campaign putting him in the field. I don't suppose he has accomplished much in a practical way, but we have kept the Honorable Dave from using him, as he meant to."

"I don't know about the accomplishment," put in Gantry. "There is a four ply mystery linked up in this speechmaking business. At first I thought Evan Blount's sudden popularity dated back to some word sent out from your Chicago office, but when you told me it didn't I began to do a little wondering on my own account. I can't make up my mind yet whether it is pure popularity growing out of his speeches or whether it's the assisted kind."

"Assisted?" said the vice president, with a lifting of the heavy penthouse eyebrows.

"Yes," Gantry went on. "It has been too unanimous. Collins has kept me posted, and he says the invitations have fluttered in thicker than the autumn leaves in Vallombrosa, and Kittredge's men tell us that the young orator has been making what figured as a triumphal progress all over the state—bands, receptions, committees, banqueting and all that everywhere he has gone."

"But his speeches have been straight to the point, our point," interrupted the vice president. "I've been reading them."

Kittredge shook his head.

"Gantry says 'Yes,' but I say 'No,'" he contended. "There is such a thing as putting too much sugar in the coffee. Blount's been overdoing it. He's been putting the whitewash on so thick that any little handful of mud that happens to be thrown will stick and look bad."

"We must take chances on that," was Mr. McVickar's decision. "Young Blount's good work has undoubtedly had its effect upon public sentiment. There is a distinctly better feeling toward us, and it is fairly state wide. We must be exceedingly careful not to let the opposition newspapers get hold of anything that can be used against us."

"They are moving heaven and earth to do it," said the superintendent. "And I believe that old David is helping them. That is the explanation of the safe blowing incident, as I put it up."

Again the vice president refused to comment on the office breaking.

"What I am most afraid of now is that our young man will be overzealous," he said musingly. "He is something of a fanatic, as you have intimated, Gantry."

"He's more than that," Kittredge put in quickly. "I've had one man keeping tab on him—Farnsworth—who is as good as any detective that ever walked. He says Blount isn't half as innocent as he looks. His speechmaking has taken him into every corner of the state, and Farnsworth says he has been doing a lot of quiet prying and investigating on the side—looking up evidence, was what my man thought."

Gantry began to look uncomfortable.

"Perhaps I ought to have mentioned it before," he said. "Blount has been holding me up to the rack all along; says if he preaches straight we've got to walk straight. I've argued with him, but it doesn't do any good."

Once more the vice president's heavy eyebrows rose.

"You mean that he might be tempted to try compulsion?" he asked.

"Yes—er—in fact, he has threatened to do just that," stammered the traffic man.

At that the shaggy eyebrows bent themselves into a frown of abstracted reflection.

"We must take care not to give him a chance," he announced finally. "During the few days that intervene between now and the election he must be kept safely in hand. It won't do for him to be around and in the way while you two are trying to do business with Hathaway and the others. Keep him out of the capital. And if you think he has been gathering evidence see to it that he doesn't get a chance to use it. How about that matter in the Fifth ward? We've got to make sure of Gryson this time."

Kittredge held up a thumb and forefinger tightly pressed together.

"We've got the city wards right there," he said, "with the Honorable David pretty safely euchred. He is playing a deep game this time—so deep that it is altogether underground and out of sight. But we have him down just the same."

The vice president reached over and pressed the bell push which signaled to his train conductor.

"That is all I have to say," he concluded. "Keep your eye on young Blount and get rid of him for a few days. I'll leave the details to you. Get orders for me as you go up, Kittredge, and let me out as soon as possible. I ought to be halfway to Alkali by this time."

SECRET SERVICE MEN AFTER BLACK HAND

Chicago Offenders May Soon Be In Grasp of the Law

Chicago, March 9.—United States secret service operatives are about to explode a Black Hand bomb that is expected finally to bring to justice officers and members of the body that in a little more than one year has claimed nearly forty lives and caused a reign of terror in the Italian district.

The threat upon the life of Judge Landis of the United States district court was but one feature of a program of threats and blackmail that has been carried into the midst of the government's department of justice in Chicago.

The threats resulted in the recalling of members of the F. G. Alongi jury, which disagreed after hearing evidence in a Black Hand case and the discovery that members of the jury had been terrorized and that their inability to reach a verdict probably was the direct result of fthese threats.

Numerous Italian secret service men, imported from New York in order to prevent them being marked by the organization which is being investigated, are seeking evidence to be used in the scheduled move of the government.

MANY UNSAFE BUILDINGS

Rigid Inspection Has Been Begun by Authorities In Boston

Boston, March 29.—Twenty buildings have been reported to the city law department by Building Commissioner Everett because he believes the premises to be in so dangerous a condition that immediate legal action is necessary for the safety of the occupants.

In submitting the list to the mayor's office Everett stated that his inspectors had hardly begun to cover the city, and that it represents but a small fraction of the structures which have grossly inadequate means of egress in case of a fire, or are not provided with fire escapes.

KETCHUP GOES INTO SEWER

Fifteen Hundred Gallons Destroyed by Order of Federal Court

Boston, March 29.—Under the direction of United States Deputy Marshal Waters, twenty-nine barrels, amounting to 1500 gallons, of tomato ketchup, which the government claims was made from tomato skins and scrapings in candy factories, were destroyed, the contents being emptied into a sewer manhole at the junction of Hanover and Commercial streets.

The ketchup had been condemned by order of Judge Dodge in the United States district court under authority of the pure food law.

THE NEW YORK HOLOCAUST

Steps Being Taken to Prevent a Similar Occurrence

FUNERALS OF FIFTY VICTIMS

Pathetic Scenes as Mourners Become Frantic With Grief—Fire Marshal Finds That Girls Found Traps at Every Turn as They Tried to Escape Flames In Triangle Waist Factory

New York, March 29.—While the funeral services for fifty victims of Saturday's shirt waist factory in Washington square were being held yesterday steps were taken for a revision of the building laws to prevent similar holocausts in the future. A committee of five experts will frame amendments to throw safeguards around men, women and children who work in crowded shops and big manufacturing structures. As soon as the necessary changes are framed they will be presented to the legislature with a plea for prompt action.

With a death list still standing at 145, 125 of the victims have been identified. It is believed that but few of the remaining twenty bodies in the morgue can be identified.

The scenes attending the funerals of the fire victims were the most pathetic ever witnessed on the East Side. At some of the funerals the crowds were frantic with grief. Women wept aloud, while men stood with bared heads and tear-dimmed eyes. Thousands of people turned out. In some instances the hearses were followed by hundreds on foot. At times a hearse carried two and even three members of the same family.

Fire Marshal Beers declares that so long as present conditions remain there is continual menace of similar catastrophies in New York.

As pathetic as the scenes at the morgue on Sunday—though in a different way—were some of the revelations brought out by Beers in his public inquiry into the causes of the Asch building disaster. It was shown that the poor girls in that panic rush to escape from the flames found traps at every turn.

It seemed that the very arrangement of the workrooms was a trap. With hundreds of women jammed back to back at their machines when the panic started the narrow aisles became blocked with chairs and the girls were in confusion before they even started for the doors. Then there was the scarcity of exits, the inward opening doors and the death trap "fire escape."

Marshal Beers conducted the inquiry at fire headquarters. Ostensibly it was merely to ascertain the cause of the fire, but the marshal went deeper and questioned at length the fifteen witnesses as to the conditions in the factory and the events of the fire. Beers had questioned all the witnesses beforehand and merely wanted to put their statements in official form.

"The fire, without any question, started from a cigaret or a match thrown into a pile of lawn clippings—light cotton stuff—on the Green street side of the building," said Beers. "There was no gasolene about the place so far as I could learn, and the machinery power was furnished by electric motors. But I can prove that cigaret smoking was no uncommon practice among the men employed in the factory. I found the stains of cigarets in places where they had been laid down by the smokers."

The funeral of the unidentified dead will be made the occasion for a gigantic protest by union labor of the conditions in factories. The leaders in the various trades that are herded in loft buildings where a living is eked under conditions that are a menace to life and health expect the demonstration, which is to take the form of a parade, to be the largest of its kind in the history of the city.

There is a bitterness among the waist makers over the disaster that has been intensified because the Triangle Waist company was a non-union shop, where the rules of the union as to closed doors, fire exits and hours of labor were not observed.

Fire Chief Croker received more than 500 letters from citizens yesterday, praising his action in starting the movement to safeguard the lives of women, men and children employed in office, loft and factory buildings. Many offered their services to aid him in any possible way. Others offered suggestions for further improvements and safeguards.

"The good work has been started, and from all indications will result in immediate and sweeping changes so drastically needed," commented the chief.

Russia Is Reported to Be Preparing to Fight China

St. Petersburg, March 29.—Despite diplomatic denials of prospects of war between Russia and China, Russia is strengthening all her military posts in Manchuria. The commissary department is purchasing heavily.

Chinese are being driven out of southern Russia. The Russian press spreads stories of Chinese military activity and as a whole apparently favors a clash between the two empires.

Trains heavily loaded with troops are reported eastbound from Irkutsk, and large consignments of arms and ammunition are being distributed to all the Russian posts in Manchuria and Siberia.

BRIEFS

Quincy parkway hearings at the State House on Friday.

The Parents association of the Adams school meets tomorrow night.

A meeting of the ball committee of Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, was held Tuesday evening.

J. Winthrop Pratt and family of Independence avenue are moving today to the Taylor house on Faxon avenue.

The annual missionary supper at Bethany chapel tomorrow night will be followed by a stereopticon lecture.

Charles Crane, one of Quincy's old residents is seriously ill at the Hancock house. He has had a severe attack of pneumonia.

Souvenir postals from W. G. Shaw and family of Butler road show that the season is early at Atlantic City, and that Sunday was a big day.

At the meeting of the Men's club of the Washington Street Congregational church this evening there will be a lecture.

At the regular meeting of W. R. C. held Tuesday evening Mrs. Ella Hayden was the successful winner of a handsome apron.

The miliary whist to be given by Maple lodge is calling out the players as over a hundred have already subscribed to the party.

The school children are becoming interested in T. L. Williams' prize contest and every boy in the city wants one of those fountain pens judging by the numbers that gather in front of his show window.

Secretary and Mrs. Ernest Gay are to be tendered a farewell reception this evening at the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Gay has been secretary for several years of the association and the reception is given by the officers of the Association and the Women's Auxiliary.

Rev. Joseph Walther pastor of the Wollaston Baptist church gave an address on Tuesday evening in a series of special religious services in Bethany Baptist church, Roxbury. Recently he gave a roll call address in this same church.

Sylvia H. Ramsdell of Billings street, Atlantic, celebrated today the passing of her 81st milestone. Many called to extend their greetings and many tokens of the occasion were received. Relatives and friends were remembered with an appropriate souvenir of the occasion.

Phillips Innis, son of Arthur Innis of Bigelow street, who was taken to the Massachusetts Homeopathic hospital at Brighton on Sunday with scarlet fever, is reported comfortable. As Friday will be his 12th birthday it has been suggested that souvenir postcards be sent by friends.

BOTH LIBELS DISMISSED

Woman's Nose Breaks Up Wollaston Home

The cross libels of Mrs. Mary Malcolm and John D. Malcolm, formerly of Wollaston avenue, Quincy, were dismissed in the Superior court on Tuesday.

They were married in 1894. From 1902 to 1906 they lived in Wollaston. There Mrs. Malcolm's nose caused trouble. She went to Dr. John Roe in Rochester, N. Y., had seven operations on her nose; stayed there so long, she said, that her husband got jealous and told her that if she ever went to Rochester again she could never return to him. She went, nevertheless, she testified, and never lived with her husband after that. She admitted that she corresponded with Dr. Roe's assistant, to whom she gave German lessons by mail. After she left him, she said, her husband had never contributed a cent to her support, nor was she allowed to see her children.

Mr. Malcolm, a photographer and a contractor, testified that the treatment was undergone by his wife in order to improve her looks.

Judge Raymond said he thought it was certain that the two had agreed several years ago not to live with each other, so dismissed both libels. He found that she had gone to have her nose treated for good and sufficient reasons; that her husband had not countenanced her efforts in that line as he should have, and that, on the other hand, the wife had not acted as a mother should.

COMING EVENTS.

JAMAICA GINGER CASE

Seizure Under Pure Food Law Heard in Quincy Court

A case of considerable local interest was heard before Judge Avery in the District court this morning, that of Ernest V. Fitts charged with violation of the pure food law.

Last week Inspector Goodhue seized a large quantity of Jamaica ginger extract from the wholesale grocery storehouse of the Fitts company on Depot street, claiming it was a violation of the law.

The principal witness in court was Mr. Hickey, first assistant analyzer of the State Board of Health. His testimony, in brief, was that the Jamaica ginger did not comply with the standard of purity. In other words it did not contain the required amount of alcohol. The sample analyzed contained 63 per cent alcohol which was not sufficient to dissolve the solid of the solution. According to his testimony, for the amount of solid, the solution should have had 89 and a fraction percent of alcohol.

Mr. Shepardson, the chemist who compounded the formula for the firm who put out the extract, said it had been tested by the Federal authorities and passed. He also claimed that it contained a larger per cent of alcohol than had been testified to, but that a certain percent had been lost by moisture.

The main question was whether or not it was a proprietory preparation. According to the testimony of the experts a proprietory preparation was one whose formula was secret and was known only to the person who prepared it. Jamaica ginger was one of which there was no secret, and which any druggist could compound.

J. J. McAnarney appeared for the government and George W. Abele for the defendant.

After hearing the arguments the case went over until Friday.

In addition to the regular business at the meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks Tuesday evening, a lodge of sorrow was held in memory of Robert M. Gunning, who died March 16, and John S. Krocher, who died March 20.

A .A. Shurtleff, landscape architect is to address the Board of Trade of Stoughton, Thursday evening on "How to Make Stoughton Beautiful."

ROLL CALL

The roll call of the lodge then proceeded, and among thosepresent who have been members of Mt. Wollaston lodge for 25 years were: George Monk, James Dunstan, H. W. Totman, C. G. Willey, Charles L. Hammond, E. Frank Mitchell, E. O. Carlton, A. G. Dolliver, John Q. A. Field, Samuel De Forrest, Francis Veazie, William J. Williams, Asa P. Pope, Jesse F. Curtis, John E. Manhire, Walter H. Cobb, Thomas E. Furnald and Arthur W. Stetson.

Several of these and others gave reminiscences of past years, or told of the good work of Odd Fellowship in general. It is expected there will be three million Odd Fellows in the world when the centennial is celebrated in 1919. Mt. Wollaston lodge has initiated 416 in 27 years.

Letters were received from T. F. Burke (now at Washington), George Pawsey, John H. Deane, John Robertson (now in Oregon) John R. Kane (now in Gloucester) C. M. Gifford and others.

An entertainment and refreshments followed the roll call.

—Reciprocity with Canada seems far off, but it is bound to come because so many people want it. Open trade with Canada will be a great help to New England. With it these states could again become one of the great units in this big land of ours.

BOYS AGAINST ANNEXATION

Good Arguments However Pro and Con on Question

At the meeting of the Quincy Adams extension club of the Y. M. C. A. held Tuesday evening in the lecture room of the First Presbyterian church, a very lively debate on the subject of annexation to Boston took place. The negative side composed of Everett Clark, Walter Morrison and Alex Robertson, won the debate: Thomas Veale, Charles Bishop and George McDonald spoke on the affirmative of the question which was "Resolved that Quincy should be annexed to Boston."

The arguments brought forth by every speaker had weight, and when it was put up to the judges to give a decision, they were confronted with a formidable task. After considerable discussion it was decided that the negative side had won. The judges were Wallace Kemp, John Butler and William Michael.

The best arguments on the affirmative side were: (1.) The Quincy waterfront would be developed. (2.) Quincy would have a better sewerage system. (3.) Manufacturing plants would be placed here giving opportunity for better situations to many.

The arguments which won for the negative side were: (1.) Loss of trade for Quincy merchants if annexed to Boston. (2.) The saloon would be introduced into Quincy. (3.) There would be a big increase in rents and taxes.

At a business session, following the debate, it was decided that "The Country Minister," a five-act comedy be presented by the club later in the spring. Another debate will be held on May 23 on the question "Resolved, that Napoleon was a greater man than Sheridan."

The younger boys of the club also held a meeting Tuesday evening with Louis Merini presiding. It was voted that they too have a debate, to take place April 11. Question,—"Resolved that the United States was in the right in sending troops to Mexico."

COMMANDERY OF KNIGHTS TEMPLAR

Organized With a Charter List of Nearly 200 Sir Knights and Many Candidates

Grand Commander Blake and Other Grand Officers Assist

COMMANDER FAY.

GENERALISSIMO PIPER.

A notable addition was made to the institutions in Quincy Wednesday night when Quincy Commandery, Knights Templar was organized under the dispensation of the Grand Commandery of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. It will be known as Quincy Commandery No. 47. It is the first commandery organized in the jurisdiction since 1896, when Ivanhoe of Gardner, was instituted.

The occasion was one that was attended by many high in the councils of Masonry throughout the state, as well as many sir knights from neighboring commanderies; including a large number from South Shore commandery of Weymouth, the mother of Quincy commandery, practically all of its members having received their orders from South Shore, and includes two Past commanders, Albert W. Fay and Arthur W. Stetson.

BUSINESS MEN SHOULD COOPERATE WITH THE NEWSPAPERS
TO ADVANCE QUINCY

Quincy commandery will work under the dispensation of the Grand commandery for six months, Sir Albert W. Fay having been appointed as the representative of the Grand commandery, and the officers whom he has elected to assist him during this period are as follows:

Commander—Albert W. Fay.
Generalissimo—Walter E. Piper.
Captain-General—John Morgan.
Senior Warden—Otis B. Oakman.
Junior Warden—Edward H. Bushnell.
Prelate—William A. Bradford.
Associate Prelate—Rev. Rufus B. Tobey.
Treasurer—Jonathan S. Swingle.
Recorder—Alfred H. Richards.
Standard-Bearer—Walter S. Pinkham.
Sword-Bearer—George L. Cole.
Warder—John H. Whitehead.
Captain of the Guards—George E. Adams, Thomas L. D. Gurney and George E. Sampson.
Assistant Guards—J. Fncis Merrill, Carl Striford and Waldo B. Fay.
Organist—Herbert Y. Follett.
Sentinel—Dexter Remick.

The commandery was opened in due form by Commander Fay at 7 o'clock and after transacting some business the Grand officers were received being escorted to the aslyum with all due honors by a committee which included Walter E. Piper, Arthur W. Stetson, John Morgan, Andrew Milne, Charles M. Bryant, Alfred H. Richards, Jonathan S. Swingle and W. G. Field, with John W. Boyce, acting adjutant in charge of the escort.

Right Eminent Sir J. Albert Blake, Grand Commander of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, who was present to confer the dispensation was attended by the following suite:

Very Eminent Sir Lafayette G. Blair, Deputy Grand Commander.
Eminent Sir Benjamin W. Rowell, Grand Recorder.
Eminent Sir William H. Everson Grand Sword Bearer.
Eminent Sir R. Walter Hillard, Grand Warder.
Eminent Six Henry H. Litchfield, Grand Lecturer.
Right Eminent Sir Charles I. Litchfield, Past Grand Commander.

In addition there were the commandery representatives:

Boston, Jesse E. Ames, EC.
St. Omer, Charles H. MacGarvey, EC; William Sears, Fletcher K. Tirrell, G, and Henry M. Nash, PC.
South Shore, Arthur W. Burr, EC; Henry P. Furnald, William Wallace, G; David J. Pierce, John Evans, T, and Eben H. Cain, PC.
Natick, James F. Higgins, EC; Beauseant, Alvin F. Pease, EC; Cyprus, Irving C. Webster, G, and Samuel H. Capen, PC.
S. Bernard Richard W. Smith, PC.
Holy Sepulchre, E. Percy Davis, PC.
Gethsemane, Samuel Shaw, PC.

After being received by Eminent Sir Albert W. Fay, the Grand commander remarked that he was delighted to be present on an occasion so unique in the history of the grand commandery.

The devotional exercises were led by Rev. Rufus B. Tobey, after which the dispensation was read, and Grand Commander Blake announced that the organization had been completed. Commander Fay took the chair as the appointed commander.

Then followed several addresses. The Grand commander trusted that the new organization would progress and so conduct its affairs that in due time he would be able to recommend that the charter be issued. He advised that it build on a sound and sure foundation so as to take a prominent place in the grand jurisdiction. It pleased him to see that South Shore had given its approval, and he thought that they would be a help to each other. "I give you my congratulations and best wishes."

Deputy Grand Commander Lafayette G. Blair said his wish was "That you may go on from this night with every encouragement and your career be one of growth and success." With having been born in a city around which was clustered so many historic associations he thought it would be a stimulus to the members to make the commandery one of the highest stars in the galaxy of the grand commandery.

Eminent Commander Burr of South Shore commandery extended his congratulations with the remark that the latchstring of the asylum of South Shore would always be held out by the mother to the child. "God bless you."

Brief remarks were also made by Grand Warder Hillard, Past Grand Commander Litchfield, Grand Sword Bearer Emerson, Grand Recorder Rowell and Eminent Commanders Pease and Davis.

At the conclusion of the addresses Commander Fay expressed his thanks to Grand Commander Blake and other Grand officers and others for their presence. A collation was served.

The charter members of the new commandery number nearly 200 as follows:

George W. Abele
Charles S. Adams
George E. Adams
A. W. S. Anderson
Dr. J. H. Anderson

FAREWELL RECEPTION

Work of Secretary and Mrs. Gay Appreciated by Y. M. C. A.

The farewell reception to General Secretary and Mrs. E. G. Gay was held in the assembly hall of the Young Men's Christian Association Wednesday evening from 8 to 10. During the two hours over 400 people came to pay their respects to Mr. and Mrs. Gay and to wish them Godspeed as they go to their new home in Lawrence.

During the evening ice cream and cake were served by members of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and a number of young ladies from different sections of the city acted as waitresses. Music was furnished by the Wollaston orchestra.

Mr. Gay received a handsomely framed set of resolutions from the board of directors, and a splendid picture of "Christ, the Youth" framed in mission oak, from the dormitory men. Mrs. Gay was given a beautiful bouquet of pinks by the dormitory men, and one of pansies from the Women's Auxiliary.

Before the reception the fellow workers in the association gave Mr. and Mrs. Gay a banquet in the private dining room at Thompson's. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Gay, Mr. and Mrs. LaRose, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Acker, Mr. Clee, Miss Steele, Miss Emma Spaulding, Mr. Gumb and "Bill" Wood. Brief after-dinner speeches were made by all and "Bill" Wood made the hit of the evening in his. Mrs. Gay was presented with a handsome bunch of violets.

Letters of congratulations were received by Mr. Gay from Messrs. Goodhue, Gifford, Maxwell and Bugby, who have worked with him as physical directors in previous years. Mr. Clee gave the prophecy of Mr. and Mrs. Gay's future in Lawrence.

Those who joined in making the reception a success were: Mrs. E. I. Beal, chairman of general committee; Mrs. Elizabeth Sayward, Miss Addie Park, Mrs. E. R. Stone, Mrs. T. B. Pollard, Mrs. W F. Cummings, Mrs E. W. Sheppard, Mrs. Carroll Bates, Mrs. C. O. Randall, Mrs. John F. Roache, Mrs. George H. Brown, Mrs. James A. Matheson, Mrs. Alexander Clark, Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Mrs. George Abele, Mrs. W. A. Thompson, and Mrs. J. A. Sedgwick

The young ladies who assisted were: Miss Edith Stone, Miss Helen Mayer, Miss Esther Beckford, Miss Margaret Hunt, Miss Gladys Hunt, Miss Elizabeth Sayward, Miss Mildred Sayward, Miss Lillian McIntosh and Miss Edith Elrick

The ushers were: John G. McGregor, H. L. Fenner, C. L. Hudson, C. J. Mooney, W. J. Tate, C. L. Wilcox, C. D. Bond and F. M. Evans.

Both Appointed on New Waterways Commission

Quincy wil l have practically two men on the new inland waterways commission of Massachusetts appointed on Wednesday by Gov. Foss. The seven appointed are Clarence W. Barron of Boston chairman, Loyed E. Chamberlain of Brockton, Bernard J. Rothwell of Boston, Francis T. Bowles of Boston, John J. Martin of Boston, A. Homer Skinner of Fall River and Frank Fessenden Crane of Quincy.

The commission will serve without pay and report in print to the general court on or before May 1 of the present year. The new board is designated "the commission on the development of inland waterways."

Mr. Barron, the chairman is the head of the Boston News Bureau. Judge Loyed E. Chamberlain of Brockton was the head of the canal commany which investigated the proposition of a canal between Boston, Brockton and Taunton, and is judge of probate of Plymouth county. Bernard J. Rothwell is ex-president of the Boston chamber of commerce, and while president devoted much of his time to considering the waterways problem.

Admiral Francis T. Bowles is the president of the Fore River Shipbuilding company of Quincy, and has for years made a study, both as a naval officer and as a private citizen, of this problem of development of inland waterways. John J. Martin, as the president of the Massachusetts real estate exchange, has given this topic much thought. A. Homer Skinner, wholesale lumber dealer in Fall River, as representing Fall Fiver and vicinity, has for a number of years been deeply interested in this ship canal.

Frank Fessenden Crane is water front commissioner of Quincy, and one of the foremost advocates in the country of inland waterway.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Whatever may happen Diaz can rest secure in the feeling that James Creelman will never invade Mexico.

One great need of the House of Representatives is an anti-appropriation committee.

Where there's so much smoke there must be big profits for the Tobacco Trust.

Mayor Fitzgerald says "cities and towns that oppose Real Boston fall back upon Boston's fire protection in case of a three-alarm fire, yet Boston never charges a cent for such service." In the personal recollection of the editor of the Daily Ledger Quincy has furnished more help to Boston in case of fires than Boston has furnished to Quincy.

The proposed location of a trolley freight station on Washington street is causing quite a little excitement as there is a strong faction against as well as many in favor. Those against the proposed location were given a hearing by the City Council and there have been numerous letters in the newspapers as well as petitions circulated. The Old Colony Street Railway Co. has published half tones of the office and freight station and the proposed location, also letters of commendation from other towns and also have petitions out in favor. There may have to be a mass meeting before the matter can be decided to the satisfaction of the townspeople. It is many moons since there has been so much acitvity over any local affair.

Although there are two Quincy parkway bills before the Legislature, and both will be given a hearing tomorrow at the State House, it is important that Quincy should not ask too much this year, and that it should be united in its demands. The Metropolitan Park Commission recently reported that the most important link to be completed was that between the Quincy Shore reservation and Hancock street near the High school. For this reason alone Quincy should cooperate and accomplish something. The building of this section of the parkway, for which land has already been taken, would be the greatest improvement that has been made in Quincy for years. It opens up a new section which will be appreciated by all. Its close proximity to Merrymount park of 92 acres makes it very desirable.

While the grade crossing problem is pending and the railroad tracks may be depressed or elevated, it would be unwise this year to attempt to secure the completion of the section of the parkway between Adams street and Hancock street. It will be done only in connection with the abolition of the grade crossings and the Metropolitan Park Commission will safeguard the interest of Quincy.

DRIFT OF OPINION

A large stock exchange house protests in sorrowful style as follows: "It is unfortunate for everything and everybody concerned, of course, that the supreme court has not been able to make up its mind sooner as regards the trust cases. Probably no one appreciates more the importance of correctly solving these questions, and doing so at the earliest possible moment, than the court itself, so that we must try and be as patient as possible under this enforced restraint." Washington papers please copy. United States supreme court please mind. Does it not know the state of things in Wall street? Does it not know that a broker's private wire to Chicago costs $16,000 a year, and that there are 60 of them; that a private wire to Philadelphia costs $2000 a year, and that there are 150 of them? Does it not know that these wires and hundreds more are corroding from disuse, because people will not trade in stocks until it makes up its mind on the trust cases? Though it "probably" does appreciate as much as anybody the importance of deciding the cases rightly it most obviously has not preceived as clearly as Wall street the importance of deciding them quickly.—New York Evening Post.

The little savings bank into which a small hand slips a penny at a time, and which precedes the opening of an account for the child in the bank of deposit where interest is paid accruing to the child's account, should not be overlooked by the thoughtful parent. The temptation to spend every penny received assails our little ones as in very truth it confronts older people. The windows of the confectioners' shops are filled with candy and sweets and many a penny is dropped into the drawer of the merchant when it should instead be put by for future use. To utterly condemn children for spending money is unwise, but if a little girl or boy has, to begin with, an allowance of a penny a day, a certain amount should be se t aside for some purpose that will bring results. We must not teach the children to hoard their little fund, but we ought to teach them to invest it judiciously.—The Christian Herald.

Various city treasurers in Massachusetts, following the prescribed routine, are now engaged in negotiating either new loans or additions to former ones, in anticipation of taxes. The question suggests itself anew whether or not it would be advisable, from the public standpoint, so to revise the present system as to have tax receipts available in large part for municipal uses at time of appropriation, instead of spending the money eight or ten months prior to collection. The policy pursued in a number of southern cities does away with the necessity of negotiatig heavy loans in anticipation of taxes, and thus saves the interest charges. The change would be a matter of detail.—Salem News.

LENTEN SERVICES.

The fourth in the series of Lenten services was held in the Wollaston Unitarian church Wednesday evening. Rev. Carl G. Horst, the minister offered prayer at the opening. Rev. Charles E. Park of the First Church in Boston preached the sermon taking as his subject "The obligations of religion." Reference was made to the large class of people who would gladly embrace all the benefits of religion, but in return would not be willing to pay the price of self-sacrifice, and a renunciation of the things that hinder the growth of the spirit.

"The obligations of religion" declared the speaker "are very fine and subtle, and involve something more than a transient desire for goodness and happiness. They are spiritual and moral and mental obligations, and mean a sacrifice of self that is rooted in a desire for the welfare of others; a purifying of the heart which is vital and manifests itself in daily living on a high plane. Even as the disciples in those long-ago days "left all and followed Him," so must we leave our low aims and set our hearts toward high ideals, if we would be worthy followers today.

To the disciples, Jesus was an inspiration and guide, in whose cleansing presence they saw not only Him, but themselves as they might be. All latent good in them wished to meet Him, and they had visions of what God meant their lives to be. And so today; in the life of God, we find our own lives, in the strength of God, our own strength, obligation becomes opportunity, and the renunciation of self and low aims, as the price of spiritual growth, becomes a privilege.

Miss Ernestine M. Litchfield was the soloist of the evening and the congregation united in the singing of two hymns. William E. Weston presided at the organ.

DIRECTOR CLEE ALSO RESIGNS

Has Been Very Successful with Boys at the Y. M. C. A.

At the board of directors meeting held on Tuesday evening at Young Men's Christian Association Lester H. Clee, boys work director resigned, same to take effect Aug. 1, 1911.

Mr. Clee leaves Quincy to take up similar duties in Providence Young Men's Christian Association. It is an unusual opportunity and considered one of the best opportunities for work among boys that there is in the country. Mr. Clee will have entire charge of boys department of this large association. Mr. Clee came to Quincy some three years ago from Worcester, and has labored with unceasing energy for the boys of Quincy ever since his arrival. Not only has he extended the scope of work of the department increased its membership and efficiency, but has also served during the past year as deputy probation officer of the East Norfolk district, having full charge of Juvenile court. The work here has been large and most efficient and Mr. Clee's untiring efforts have brought forth lasting results.

For the Young Mens Christian Association a city wide work is now being conducted in South Quincy, Wollaston Quincy Point and Atlantic. During his administration the efficiency of the boys' department has steadily increased until today its work is known by all in our city, and is considered by the State and International Y. M. C. A. headquarters as one of the leading boys departments in North America. A summer camp has been developed during the three years and is now conducted as an annual event.

Mr. Clee has been a frequent speaker at the churches and young peoples' societies, and has taken an active interest in everything in our city for the upbuilding of boy life.

This resignation has been received with deepest regret by th e board of directors, and every effort has been put forth to have him stay. Mr. Clee feels, however, that he can accomplish more good in the larger city, and will abide by his decision to go. His loss will be felt keenly, not only by the Young Mens Christian Association but by all parents whose children have been under his oversight, and by the good government forces, and those interested in the moral welfare of the city.

He has devoted himself to the fullest extent of his strength and ability, in carrying out the plans he has wrought, and the splendid success which has attended his effort furnishes a lasting testimonial to his energy and efficiency.

The scope of the work is as broad as need be, and his successor will not need to organize forces, but to attempt to maintain the high standard of excellence in service of the youth of our city, which has been set by Mr. Clee. The boys are rejoicing because he is to stay through the summer and will have charge of the camp in July.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

At the meeting of the Wollaston club this evening, Mr. Hune, editor of the Baseball Magazine will be the speaker.

The Wireless club will hold its regular meeting Friday evening.

The Juniors will have a straw ride Saturday afternoon. Starting at 2 o'clock, they will go to Hingham where an opportunity will be given for a baseball game and refreshments. The party is expected to get back at 6.30.

Rehearsals for the play "College Chums," to be given by the College club on April 18, are being held three times a week. Instead of presenting "Dr. Baxter's Invention" as was originally intended, "Rooney's restaurant" will be given by the South Quincy five in connection with the larger play.

HOUGHS NECK.

Harry Hudson who has been spending the winter in Cuba and Florida, returned home last week.

New concrete sidewalks are being put in on Rock Island road.

An addition is nearly completed on the Midland hotel, to be used as a pavilion.

Mr. and Mrs. LeBrecque are soon to occupy their new cottage in Albatross road.

Archie F. Baird who has spent several weeks abroad returned Wednesday. Mr. Baird visited France, Spain, Italy, Switzerland and Greece. A reception was held Wednesday night by the Winter club in honor of Mr. Baird's return. A pleasant evening was spent and many interesting stories were told by the host.

Danderine

Grows Hair and we can PROVE IT!

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. It at once imparts a sparkling brilliancy and velvety softness to the hair, and a few weeks' use will cause new hair to sprout all over the scalp. Use it every day for a short time, after which two or three times a week will be sufficient to complete whatever growth you desire.

A lady from St. Paul writes in substance, as follows:
"When I began using Danderine my hair would not come to my shoulders and now it is away below my hips."
Another from Newark, N. J.
"I have been using Danderine regularly. When I first started to use it I had very little hair, now I have the most beautiful long and thick hair anyone would want to have."

NOW at all druggists in three sizes 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle

Danderine enjoys a greater sale than any other one preparation regardless of kind or brand, and it has a much greater sale than all of the other hair preparations in the world combined.

GYM DEMONSTRATION.

Dr. J. Gardiner Smith, director of department of physical education in the public schools, conducted a party of 7th and 8th grade teachers to the gymnasium of the Boston Normal school last Saturday morning, to witness a demonstration of gymnastics, class room and apparatus, games marching and folk dances, given by the 7th, 8th and 9th grades of the Boston and Brookline schools at a meeting of the Boston Physical Education Association.

Those accompanying the doctor from Quincy were:

From Adams school—Miss Eliza C. Sheahan and Miss Beatrice H. Rothwell.

From Cranch school—Miss Carrie A. Crahe. Also Arthur S. Townsend, master of Adams and Cranch schools.

From Coddington school—Miss Bragdon.

From John Hancock school—Miss Daisy F. Burnell.

From Lincoln school—Miss Alice T. Clark and Miss Mabel S. Wilson.

From Massachusetts Fields school—Miss Ruth A. Taylor and Miss Annie L. Blacklock.

From Washington school—Miss Elizabeth G. Anderson also Thomas B. Pollard the master.

From Willard school—Miss Margaret E. Sweeney and Miss Ellen B. Fegan.

From Wollaston school—Miss Agnes A. Fisher.

The demonstration lasted two hours and a half and was greatly enjoyed by both masters and teachers.

QUINCY HIGH.

Owing to the illness of Mr. Holbrook no new games have been arranged for the open dates and the date for the Milton game has not been readjusted. The Milton games were scheduled the day before the hardest games of the season, Groton and Newton and it was thought wise to rearrange the dates. Probably only one game will be played but the date is not settled definitely. A game will be arranged with Brockton to fill one of the open dates and the Milton game will fill another of the open dates thus leaving only two to be filled.

The schedule as arranged so far is as follows:

April 19—Powder Point, Duxbury, at Quincy.
April 25—Open.
April 26—Cambridge Latin at Cambridge.
April 28—Hingham at Quincy.
May 2—Arlington at Arlington.
May 5—Open.
May 9—Oliver Ames at Quincy.
May 10—Brookline at Quincy.
May 12—Open.
May 17—Groton at Groton.
May 19—Hingham at Hingham.
May 23—Oliver Ames at North Easton.
May 26—East Boston at Quincy.
May 30—Open.
June 2—Lynn English high at Lynn.
June 9—South Boston at Quincy.
June 13—Lynn English high at Quincy.
June 15—Newton at Newton.

A petition has been circulated among the scholars and teachers for signatures asking the Mayor and the city council to give the High school, the use of the pasture beyond the car barn on Hancock street, for an athletic field. If the petition is granted, a baseball diamond and football field will be laid out, and there will be an opportunity for a quarter mile cinder track, with 100 yards straightaway.

This will be an ideal place for the High school boys to have their sports, and the girls too will be able to have their track meet and baseball games unmolested.

A number of prominent citizens are backing the scheme, and there is reason to believe that the petition will be granted. The field which is part of the Merrymount park property is now used as a pasture, and it would appear that little argument would be necessary to secure the use of it for the High school.

The girls were called out for baseball practice in the gymnasium on Tuesday. They are expecting to have a regular team this year, and the indications are that the team will be a good one. Miss Kirmayer is acting as coach.

• • •

At the dual indoor meet at the Y. M. C. A. the "Students" defeated the "Employed Boys" 57 to 41. White and Trask were the heaviest point winners for the Students, each scoring 15 points. Sutermeister made 8, W. Cranshaw 7 and Holmes 6 1-2. Hunt '14 breasted the tape first in the potato race but on his way back discovered that he had neglected to pick up one of his potatoes.

• • •

A number of High school pupils attended the annual indoor track meet and gymnastic drill at Thayer academy last Saturday evening.

• • •

A number of alumni are home from the colleges on their spring vacations. Among those who have been seen are Allison Marsh, Ralph Blake, Charles Kendall, Stanley Sherman and Harold Gore.

• • •

A. Page, '11, is back in school after an enforced absence of several weeks.

• • •

Mr. Howlett will speak at the meeting of the Massachusetts Fields Parents and Teachers association next Thursday evening.

• • •

• • •

R. Estey, '13, was unable to compete in the Y. M. C. A. track meet on Monday owing to an attack of the grippe.

GRADED SCHOOLS.

The ice cream sale held at the Cranch school last Thursday afternoon was very successful netting $27.40. While the sale was in progress music was furnished by the following pupils: Marie Schenkelberger, Otis Angier, Clara Warshaw, Alice Powers, Carl Pfaffmann, Eric Nelson, Henry Patterson, Dorothy Houlihan, Ethel Sutherland, Mary Macomber, Harold England, Elsie Danielson, Grace Miller and Helen Miller.

• • •

Phillips Innis, a pupil at the Coddington school has been taken to the Boston Homoeopathic hospital, Brighton, ill with scarlet fever.

Mr. Upton, principal of the Willard school, delivered an address on "Clean Journalism" before a large audience gathered in Christian Science church, Braintree, Monday evening. A detailed report of the speech appeared in Tuesday's Ledger.

Walter H. Bentley, master of the Coddington and Atherton Hough schools, has resigned his position, the resignation to take effect May 1. Mr. Bentley gives as his reason, a desire to devote all of his time to running a boys' camp.

• • •

Raymond Robinson, a pupil at the Coddington school, is out with the whooping cough.

• • •

Earl Bates has been elected captain of the Cranch school baseball team. Mr. Townsend, the master, will act as manager. The boys are being measured for suits and will appear in uniform at the opening game on April 19.

• • •

The Parents and Teachers association of the Adams school has been fortunate in securing as the speaker for Thursday, April 6, Dr. William Gallagher, principal of Thayer Academy at Braintree.

• • •

The Massachusetts Fields school baseball team was defeated by the Park and Downs Sunday school team last Saturday by a score of 11 to 9. Morgan and Fowler were the battery for the school team and Brown and Northup for the victors.

• • •

At the meeting of the Parents' association of the Cranch school on Wednesday, April 5, Dr. George M. Sheahan, the school physician, will speak on "General health of school children, and methods of preserving it." Miss Perkins ,supervisor of music, will sing.

• • •

At the next meeting of the Parents and Teachers association of the Mass. Fields school, James D. Howlett, head master of Quincy High school, will be the speaker. Mr. Howlett will speak on the subject "Modern advance in education."

• • •

The girls of the Wollaston school will give a candy sale next Tuesday, April 4, instead of the plays which they were expecting to present.

• • •

The candy sale at the Massachusetts Fields school last week netted $20. The money has been put into the athletic fund.

• • •

The John Hancock baseball team has been organized with Joseph Sugrue as captain.

• • •

Miss Burke, a teacher at the Coddington school was out the first of the week. Her place was taken by Miss Munsey.

• • •

The boys of the Washington school are having regular practice. The seventh and eighth grade teams are playing practice games after school.

• • •

Miss M. Alice Kennedy has been given a permanent appointment at the Atherton Hough school. She has been teaching there ever since the school opened but only upon a temporary appointment.

• • •

Miss Lucy L. Hennigar, a teacher at the Gridley Bryant school has been taken to City Hospital and will be unable to resume her duties until next term. Miss Rogers of Watertown is substituting in her absence.

• • •

Miss Mary Geary, a teacher at the Coddington school, took her visiting day on Wednesday. She visited other Quincy schools and several grammar schools of Newton.

• • •

The baseball team of the Gridley Bryant school has been organized with John Bennett as captain and John Flaherty as manager.

• • •

Miss Costello and Miss Grace Elcock, teachers at the Coddington school, visited schools in Newton and Waltham today.

• • •

There will be a candy sale in the Washington school shortly after spring vacation to raise money for baseball suits.

• • •

A number of Boston teachers visited the Coddington school this week.

• • •

The janitor of the Gridley Bryant school, John Hinnegan, who was obliged to give up work for a few weeks on account of a serious fall, returned to work last week, as well as ever. Mr. Hayden of Quincy Point took his place during his absence.

• • •

The equipment for the Coddington school baseball team has been ordered. Last year's suits are in good condition and will be used by the 1911 team. Mask, protector, mitts, balls and bats have been ordered.

Miss Marion Strange, teacher in grade 8 at the Willard school has been unable to attend to her duties during the past week. Her place has been taken by Miss Ann Pigeon.

• • •

The Willard baseball team has been picked after careful consideration, but is still liable to change. In choosing the members of the team not only ability to play baseball is considered but the sportsmanship of the boys and their average in scholarship. The team: John Bonafini catcher, Anthony DiBona, pitcher and second base; Walter Egan, first base and pitcher; James O'Connor second base and pitcher; Sigurd Almquist, short stop; Loreto Marini, third base; Herbert Hawes left field, Fred Baylor, centre field; James Conway, right field. Substitutes, Albert Desmond and Walter Hinchon.

• • •

The Quincy school baseball team has been organized with Peter Creeden as captain. Mr. Sampson, master of the school will act as manager.

• • •

The fifth grade room of the Willard school was thoroughly fumigated this week as a preventative against scarlet fever. Margery Shea was a pupil in that grade.

• • •

After the quarterly report cards are sent to the parents, deficiency slips are also sent calling the attention of the parent to the fact that the pupil is below passing in a certain subject. Oftentimes the recipients of these cards give them no attention, apparently, and when the end of the year comes, and the child is not promoted, there is a great stir and much talk of unfairness and so on. The parents who receive these cards should understand that they are sent for a purpose and not merely as a matter of form, and it is up to the parent to come to an understanding with the child and the teacher, and ascertain why the pupil is deficient—then find a remedy.

• • •

The Quincy Schoolmasters club will meet Friday afternoon in the High school building for a discussion of the subject—"Sex and Education."

BEGGING THE QUESTION

Other Locations Not As Objectionable for Trolley Depot

Editors Daily Ledger:

"We fear the Greeks though they bring us gifts."

The street railway people, it seems to the writer, are either begging the question in their attempt to show that trolley freight is a good thing or trying to throw dust in the public eye by directing attention away from the point at issue, namely, the location of a freight depot in the busy centre of our city.

The objection is not so much against trolley freight, that may or may not be a good thing, but we do consider the proposed location of the freight station decidedly objectionable.

To read the articles inserted by the railway people, one might be led to believe that their actions and motives were entirely philanthropic, and their desire was only to benefit the public and beautify our city by the erection of a beautiful freight station formed along beautiful and artistic Grecian lines. Many of these same benefits received at their hands are almost forced from them and as a rule are obtained only after strong pressure has been brought to bear, and this whole matter is not philanthropic but simply a cold business transaction pure and simple.

The grounds and this beautiful Grecian temple as it appears to the writer with green grass growing around, looks more alluring to the writer's fancies in the picture than it will in reality when the sides and rear are exposed to view. We notice the tracks running into the yard run directly under the sleeping rooms of a house situated only a few feet away.

Quincy is growing rapidly and soon one track will not suffice. How long before a second track running into the Square will be necessary? With a spur track in addition to these two tracks, we fail to see why logically there should not be objectionable congestion on this, our busiest street, especially during the summer season when the street is crowded with autos rushing toward our beaches.

A few years ago, at junction of Foster street and Washington, directly opposite this proposed location, occurred what came near being a fatal accident, when a trolley car struck a horse and wagon crossing the street at that point. With another track added this danger of collision is greatly enhanced.

If this were the only location possible the case would be different but there are several good sites offered which will not interfere with the public travel or convenience. The railway, in the face of all the benefits received from this same public, ought to be willing to locate elsewhere even if at a little additional expense.

Many of our prominent men, our heaviest tax payers, the bone and sinew of our city, have come out in open petition against this location and we think their wishes should receive great weight with our Council. Once a location is granted the railroad has the public at a great disadvantage, and it will be most difficult to remedy an improper location.

Is it wise to place ourselves in such a position? We doubt if any city, where there is much public spirit, has granted a trolley freight location in the heart of the city, on its principle street and close to its finest public buildings. If so, we should like to know it. If not, why isn't Quincy as good as other cities and why should the railroad expect here what it has not been granted elsewhere.

Quincyite.

YOUNG PEOPLES RALLY

The young peoples meeting to be held under the auspices of the East Norfolk Christian Endeavor Union in the First Presbyterian church, Water street, next Monday evening, will be addressed by Dr. O. P. Gifford of Brookline. Dr. Gifford is not an emotional orator, and yet he is considered one of the best in New England. He is a deep thinker and a speaker of long experience, so that every sentence is like a volley from a gatling gun. The general theme of his address will be "Good" citizenship. Owing to the eminence of the speaker and the character of the meeting, the executive committee has voted to invite all young people in general, and the members of the different denominational young people societies in particular. Dr. Gifford will not speak as a believer in a certain creed, but as an American citizen working for the best interests of his country. It is the hope of the committee that all denominations will be well represented in the audience.

BRIEFS

Showery last night.

A whist party will be held in Clan McGregor hall on Friday evening.

"Billy" Tarbox will receive a warm reception on Wednesday evening, April 26 at the Men's club Revue, Music hall.

The "U. S. C." met at the home of Master Raymond Ford, 62 Independence avenue Wednesday night and spent a very enjoyable evening. Games were played and piano solos were given by Miss Violet Smith, Miss Ardelle Mc Donald, Miss Eva Linton and Miss Mildred Smith, also a vocal solo by Master Stanley Ross accompanied by Miss Violet Smith. A dainty collation was served.

EVERYBODY IS JOINING THE OWLS.

As the time is fast approaching when the Quincy nest of Owls is to be installed, it would be well for those who are desirous of becoming affiliated with this progressive and flourishing order, to submit their names to any one of those who now constitute the membership committee. The opportunity which this order affords is too well known to require any further explanations, and the many advantages to be derived therefrom are so patent to men of all walks of life that it ill becomes one to enter into any lengthy discussion of the same.

The local branch to be instituted on the 30th of April may include in its membership a list that exceeds in numbers anything ever witnessed within these confines in the line of fraternal work.

The success of the nest is already assured from the fact that the Brockton nest of Owls degree team, one of the best in the state, will do the initiatory work. Now is the time to get busy. When the charter closes, the fee for admission will be advanced to at least $11. The opportunity is now knocking, and the time is still ripe to become a charter member of the fastest growing fraternal organization in the country today.

A RECORD LUNCHEON

Six Thousand Women Sit Down at Tables In New York Hotels

New York, March 30.—Six thousand women, attending the Woman's National Foreign Missions jubilee, sat down simultaneously to 750 tables at three hotels at what is probably the largest luncheon ever held.

Because of the great crowd, the dining space of three hotels was required—the Plaza, the Waldorf and the Astor. Three thousand lunched at the Astor, 1600 at the Waldorf and 1400 at the Plaza. Mrs. Helen Barret Montgomery appeared at each gathering and delivered speeches.

Mexican Insurrection Not Likely to Last Much Longer

DIAZ DRAFTING HIS MESSAGE

Congressmen Expect to Have Presented to Them a General Amnesty Act—President Will Grant Rebels' Chief Demand by Retiring From Office—Vice President Will Ask to Be Relieved For an "Indefinite Period"

Mexico City, March 30.—President Diaz has begun work on his message to congress, which convenes Saturday. The document is being prepared under the direction of Minister of Finance Limantour, who has conferred with the Maderos and other insurrecto leaders and understands fully Mexico's situation at home and abroad.

From semi-official sources it is learned that members of congress expect to have presented to them shortly after convening a general amnesty act, granting full pardon to all men now in arms who surrender within the thirty days following the passage of the measure. This would give all men now in the mountains time to deliver up their arms.

Peace is believed to be near. There is little doubt here that President Diaz will ultimately retire, thus granting to the rebels their chief demand. He will not, however, quit office until the rebellion is ended and the republic tranquil. In his message Diaz is expected to outline in full his views on the rebellion and the reforms proposed to placate the men now up in arms. Upon this will depend largely the question of general amnesty and the deliverance of arms.

Members of congress believe that Diaz will order a new election with popular suffrage. It is almost certain that the resignation of Ramon Corral as vice president will be laid before congress. Under the Mexican law he has no right to resign, but he can get around this point in a diplomatic manner by asking congress that he be relieved for an indefinite period. Corral is expected to sail with his family for Europe early next month. His petition for retirement will be based upon the precarious condition of his health.

Some of the more radical members of congress favor the abolition of the post of vice president.

Peace will reign in Mexico within a fortnight, in the opinion of Francisco L. De La Barra, who is enroute to Mexico City to assume his new duties as minister of foreign relations. In this he echoes the forecast of Francisco I. Madero, Sr., father of the insurrectionists' leader, in the interview given at San Antonio. What plans he has to lay before Diaz he declined to discuss.

Despite evasions in interviews, which are given with every courtesy, between every line it is apparent that the mobilization of the American troops has played the major part in bringing the two sides in Mexico together. In Mexico there is no one, except foreigners, who can see any catastrophe greater than intervention by the United States.

VOTE IS SEVEN TO FOUR

Committee In Bay State Legislature Favors Income Tax

Boston, March 30.—The joint committee on federal relations, in executive session, voted, 7 to 4, to report tive session, voted, 7 to 4, to report fa-lution accompanying the petition of Frank J. Donahue for a ratification of the amendment of the constitution of the United States authorizing congress to lay and collect taxes on incomes.

The Democratic state platform pledged all candidates for the legislature to vote for the amendment, and all the four Democrats on the committee did so. They were joined by three Republicans.

UNCLE CY IS FORTY-FOUR

Grand Old Man of the Diamond Is In Fine Physical Condition

Kansas City, March 30.—Denton T. ("Cy") Young, who is here with the second division of the Cleveland American league baseball squad, was 44 years old yesterday.

Young was born in Gilmore, O. This is his twenty-second year in major league baseball. He is said to be in better physical condition now than he has been for two years.

To date Young has won 504 and lost 306 games he has pitched in the major leagues.

$200 MURDER FUND PAID OUT BY ALFANO

Abatemaggio's Share In Cuocolo Killing Was $80

Viterbo, March 30.—Gennaro Abatemaggio, the Camorrist informer, again took the witness stand yesterday to continue the details of his confession. The proceedings were constantly interrupted by taunts and threats hurled from the great steel cage containing Enrico Alfano, the Camorrist leader, and his co-defendants.

Abatemaggio swore that he had received $80 for the part which he had played in the murder of the Cuocolos. The informer said that protests were made against his receiving so large a sum when he had not participated in the actual murders, but these protests were silenced by Alfano.

Abatemaggio testified that the reason for his receiving so large a sum was to silence him as to the secrets of the Neapolitan society. The balance of the $200 murder fund was divided among those who had helped assassinate Cuocolo and his wife, the distributions being made by Alfano in person.

PEABODY'S SUDDEN DEATH

Maine Justice Expires In Chamber of Supreme Court Room

Portland, Me., March 30.—Death came to Henry C. Peabody, associate justice of the supreme court of the state of Maine, a few minutes after he had told a friend that although not in the best of health he had no intention of retiring unless "the Lord interferes."

Judge Peabody died in one of the chambers of the supreme courtroom, the only person present being Everett Reynolds, with whom he was conferring. In an adjoining room, three other members of the supreme bench were engaged in hearing a case.

Justice Peabody was born in Gilead, Me., seventy-two years ago, and is survived by a widow and two sons, both members of the bar.

KILLS CHILD AND SELF

Woman Had Been Despondent Since Death of Her Mother

Southbridge, Mass., March 30.—Mrs. Helena Garfield almost decapitated her 6-year-old son, Earle, with a razor and afterward killed herself in a like manner with the same weapon. Both bodies were found by her husband, William E. Garfield, in the blood-spattered kitchen of the Garfield home.

Mrs. Garfield had been known to have been suffering with acute melancholia since the death of her mother last December and it is the opinion of the police and medical examiner, as well as Garfield, that she committed the murder and suicide in a fit of despondency.

Suicide In Reformatory

Concord, Mass., March 30.—Louis Hoffer, 16 years of age, committed suicide at the Concord reformatory by hanging himself in a detention cell, where he had been locked up for disorderly conduct. He was sentenced to the reformatory for breaking and entering a store in Stoneham.

LOSS TO STATE OF $5,000,000

Will Cost That Sum to Repair Capital at Albany

PRICELESS RECORDS BURNED

Original Dutch Documents of 1630 to 1674 Are Destroyed—Washington and Lincoln Relics Are Uninjured—Construction of Building Began In 1867 and Was Not Wholly Completed When Fire Seized It

Albany, March 30.—Five million dollars probably could not repair the damage done by the fire in the state capitol, but money cannot restore the historical records which were the pride of the state library.

The flames licked up the state library, the court of claims, the assembly library and the document rooms, most of the offices of the excise department and the quarters of the senate finance committee, and water and smoke augmented the work of the flames.

The most precious fuel the flames found in their path were the twenty-three manuscript folio volumes of the official records of the governors of the city of New Amsterdam, covering a period from 1630 to 1674. To have these translated the state last year appropriated $3000 a year and engaged A. J. F. Van Laer to do the work.

This was expected to take fifteen years. Van Laer's partially completed translations were burned with the original Dutch documents.

The fire was still burning last night beneath what was once the beautiful cloud-painted ceiling of the state library reading room, and the water kept pouring in from seven lines of hose. A hundred national guardsmen stood guard in the deserted corridors and fifty policemen patrolled the streets outside to protect the ruined end of the building.

The state carried no insurance. The capitol had been regarded as absolutely fireproof.

Both houses will meet in the city hall, a short distance from the capitol building, the senate in the common council chamber and the assembly in the county court room.

In addition to the Dutch manuscripts the state lost the correspondence of Governor Clinton, 5000 pieces in all, and the original letters of Sir William Johnson and Governor Tompkins.

The priceless colonial and Washington and Lincoln relics in the custody of the education department were in the big safe on the ground floor and were uninjured. These include the original manuscript of Washington's farewell address, the original of Lincoln's emancipation proclamation, all the original copies of the state constitution and the Major Andre papers.

No trace has been found of Samuel J. Abbott, the aged night watchman in the state library, and there is little doubt that he perished in the flames.

It is believed that the fire was started by a fused electric push button becoming electrified. The fire was discovered by a night watchman.

The "quartered oak" ceiling in the assembly chamber, composed of papier-mache, was partially destroyed, as was the also the famous "million dollar staircase" in the west wing.

Begun in 1867, at an estimated cost of $4,000,000, the state capitol was not wholly completed when the fire seized it, and had cost in the vicinity of $27,000,000. Built on an insecure basis of quicksand and puddled clay, it has been a constant source of difficulty and tribulation to its repairers, even though the contractors, and, it has been said, many legislators, have profited hugely.

JUMPED HERSELF TO DEATH

Fate of Little Girl to Gain Title of "Champion Rope Skipper"

New York, March 30.—Her title as "champion rope skipper" of public school No. 147, in Williamsburg, cost 8-year-old Mary Tamplin her life after she had demonstrated her right to that distinction by skipping a rope 700 times in a contest with several schoolmates near her home.

"Dilatation of the heart, due to rope skipping," was the official diagnosis of the cause of her death, as rendered by the coroner's physician, who made an autopsy on the little girl's body after her death ensued.

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

QUINCY, THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1911

Who Should Take Sirolin

Everybody who is inclined to 'catch cold.' It is easy to prevent a cold by the systematic employment of Sirolin.

Everybody who has "caught cold." It is the part of wisdom to do all one can to cut the disorder short, and Sirolin does that.

Everybody who is suffering from cough, hoarseness or catarrh. These are symptoms which thus treated are soon done away with.

Everybody, child or adult, who has scrofula. The gland swellings are relieved very quickly and most completely by the use of it.

Every child with whooping cough. All physicians appreciate it as an uncommonly good remedy in easing the disease and preventing complications.

Every person who habitually suffers from asthma, and this includes hay asthma (hay fever, rose cold). The relief is immediate.

Everybody who suffers from influenza ("la grippe"). The restoration to health is one of the most promising features of the remedy's employment.

Everybody who has "sore throat" (laryngitis, pharyngitis), the symptoms of which yield to this treatment in a most marked degree.

Everybody who has the consumption. This refers especially to those who have it in the earlier stages, although it is always indicated.

If your druggist has not yet got Sirolin, send $1.00 for a full-sized bottle. Send for our interesting Sirolin booklet.

Scores of Quincy Citizens Have Learned It.

If you suffer from backache,
There is only one way to cure it.
The perfect way is to cure the kidneys.
A bad back means sick kidneys.
Neglect it, urinary troubles follow.
Doan's Kidney Pills are made for kidneys only.
Are endorsed by Quincy people.

W. Charlesworth, 33 Cranch Street, Quincy, Mass., says. "About five years ago I began to suffer from kidney trouble. I had pains in my back which were very severe at times and cold or damp weather aggravated my suffering. I knew that my kidneys were at fault and used everything I could think of in an effort to obtain relief, but to no avail. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly advertised, I finally decided to give them a trial and procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. Before I had finished the contents of two boxes, the backache was a thing of the past and I felt better in every way. Doan's Kidney Pills have my highest endorsement."

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

McVickar defies Senator Blount to nominate Evan. Patricia and her geologist father arrive at the Sagebrush capital.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics, but finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Evan has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's mixing in politics. His father pulls wires unknown to him to have him invited to speak in a distant mining town. Hathaway, who has been trying to do business with the road and with Senator Blount, is to have a talk with Mrs. Blount.

Hathaway wants a rebate from the road in consideration of political favors. He is referred to Evan and is advised by Mrs. Blount to put Professor Anners' name on his list of stockholders.

Evan's interview with Hathaway reveals the road's misdoings. In a rage he resigns. Gantry holds up the resignation. Evan insists that it go through to McVickar.

Patricia refuses Evan again. She advises him to stick to the road and work for clean politics. He withdraws his resignation and is sent into the field on a special car.

Exposure of the railroad is threatened by Evan to Gantry unless rebating and other unlawful practices are stopped. Evan suspects his secretary, Collins, of tampering with his desk.

The desk is blown up by a burglar, evidently after Evan's papers. Gantry tells McVickar that Evan is getting to be too much for him to handle.

It was young Ranlett, a reporter for the Daily Capital, who told Evan Blount of the arrival of the president's car, running as second section of the overland.

Ranlett had tried ineffectually to get to the private car, having for his object the interviewing of the vice president.

Blount thought it a little singular that the vice president should come to the capital secretly, but he did not stop to speculate upon this.

Having something more than a suspicion that Gantry was not passing his threat of exposure up to McVickar, he determined at once to seek an interview with the vice president.

Walking rapidly down to the Sierra avenue station, he saw a light in Gantry's office, and, meaning to be fair first and severe afterward, if needful, he ran up the stair and tried the door of the traffic manager's office. It opened under his hand. Gantry was at his desk.

"Ranlett tells me that McVickar is in town," he began abruptly. "Where is he?"

"Ranlett is mistaken—about twenty minutes mistaken," was Gantry's reply. "Mr. McVickar passed through here a few minutes ago on his way to Twin Canyon City. His special has been gone some little time."

"When is he coming back?"

"I don't know."

"Did you see him?"

"I did."

"Did you take up with him the matter of issuing new tariffs—to do away with the preferentials or to level the public rates down to them?"

Gantry shifted uneasily in his chair and tried to evade. "There was very little time," he said. "Mr. McVickar was in a great hurry, and his special was held only a few minutes."

Blount crossed the room and sat down.

"Dick, we've come to the last round-up," he said gravely. "In the nature of things I can't give you any more time. You've got to do something and do it quickly. Let's go up and see the editor of the Capital."

"What for?" demanded Gantry.

"I want you to give him an interview to the effect that a revision of the freight rates is in process and that shippers having grievances should present themselves at once. That will at least start the ball to rolling in the right direction."

"I should think it would," scoffed the traffic manager. "What you don't know about the making of freight tariffs would sink a ship, Evan. These things can't be done while you wait."

"But they've got to be in this instance," Blount insisted. "If you don't withdraw the preferentials given to the corporations you must do the other thing. Post your legal notice of a reduction of the rates on the commodities upon which you are now allowing rebates, and I'll fight straight through on the line I've been taking."

"And if we don't?" queried Gantry.

"If you don't do one or the other there will be an explosion, just as I've told you. Of course you know that my safe was broken open last night—wrecked with dynamite?"

"Yes."

"Well, unluckily for you, the packet of papers which might otherwise have been taken or destroyed didn't happen to be in the safe. The documents are still where they can be used at a moment's notice. And, Dick, I'll use my ammunition if you don't play fair."

Gantry, long suffering and patient to a fault in a business affair, was not altogether superhuman.

"Evan, you are a frost—a black frost. You stand up so straight that you lean over backward. Don't you know that the Transcontinental is big enough and strong enough to chivvy you from one end of this country to the other if you turn traitor? I love a fighting man, but I haven't any use for a fool."

Blount laughed.

"If I have succeeded in making you angry perhaps there is a chance that you will do something. You may curse me out all you want to, but the fact remains. I'm going to explode the bomb, and it will be touched off far enough before election to do the work if you keep on refusing to make my word to the people good. That is all—all the all. Now, will you go up to the Capital office with me and dictate that bit of information that I mentioned?"

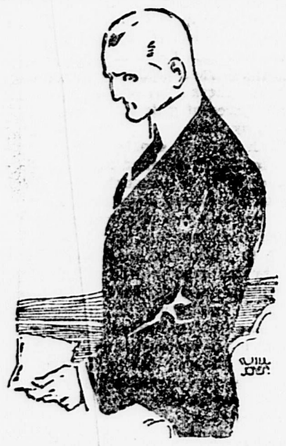

"Not in a thousand years!" raged Gantry. "Not in a thousand years!" Nevertheless he rose, closed his desk and prepared to accompany the importunate political manager. Halfway along the first block he said: "There is no use in our going to the Capital office at this time of night. Blenkinsop doesn't get around to his desk much before 11. Let's go up to the club."

At the railway club the traffic manager developed a keen desire to kill the intervening time in a game of billiards. Blount indulged him, beat him three games in succession and consistently refused to drink with him. At the end of the third game Gantry gave a terse definition of a man who would force his friend to go and drink alone and went to the bar. Ten minutes later when Blount went after him he had disappeared, and the visit to the newspaper office was postponed perforce.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE EVE OF BATTLE.

On the following morning Blount found a telegram on his desk. It bore the vice president's name, and the date line was Twin Canyon City. It directed him to go to a remote portion of the state beyond the Lost River mountains to examine the papers in a right of way case which was coming up for trial at the next term of court.

IT DIRECTED HIM TO GO TO A REMOTE PORTION OF THE STATE.

This was in Kittredge's department, and Blount called up the superintendent on the phone. Kittredge was in his office, and he evidently knew about the vice president's telegram; also he seemed very anxious to have the division counsel go to Lewiston at once, so anxious that he offered his own service car to be run as a special train.

Blount saw no way to evade a positive order from his chief, but he was more than suspicious that Gantry or Kittredge or possibly both of them were conspiring to get him away from the capital at the critical moment. What did not occur to him at the time was the fact that Mr. McVickar's telegram might have originated in Kittredge's office.

Asking the superintendent to have the service car made ready immediately, he packed his hand bag, left a note for Patricia and began the useless journey.

In all his traveling up and down the state he had never found anything to equal the slowness of the special train. Four mortal hours were lost on the lonely siding. There was no station, and Blount could not telegraph. So far as he knew, the service car might stay there for a day or a week. It was all to no purpose that he quarreled with his conductor. The train crew had orders to wait for westbound 17, and there was nothing to do but to keep on waiting.

Late in the afternoon train 17 or some other train came along, and the special was once more set in motion eastward, but at dinner time it was again sidetracked, eighty odd miles from its destination, and once more at a blind siding, where there was no telegraph office. The car was still standing on the siding when Blount went to bed. But in the morning it was in motion again, jogging now on its leisurely way up the branch line.

At Lewiston, the town at the end of the branch where the right of way trouble had originated, Blount found more delay, carefully planned for, as he had now come firmly to believe. The plaintiffs in the right of way case were out of town, and their lawyers had gone to the capital. Blount saw that he might wait a week without accomplishing anything; hence he immediately instructed his conductor to get orders for the return.

After having been gone a leisurely half hour the conductor came back to the service car to say that the single telegraph wire connecting Lewiston with the outer world was down and that the orders for the return journey could not be obtained until the telegraph connection was restored. At that point Blount took matters into his own hands.

There was a mining company having its headquarters in the isolated town, and Blount had met the manager once in the capital—met him in a social way and had been able to show him some little attention. Hiring a buckboard at the one livery stable in the place, he drove out to the Little Mary mine and luckily found Blatchford, the friendly manager. It did not take over a minute to renew the pleasant acquaintance and to state his dilemma.

"I'm hung up here with my special train, the wires are down, and I can't get out," was his statement of the crude fact. "Didn't you tell me that you owned a motorcar?"

"I did," was the prompt reply. "Want to borrow it?"

"You beat me to it," said Blount, laughing. "That was precisely what I was going to beg for—the loan of your car. I believe you told me that you had driven it from here to the capital."

"Oh, yes, several times. You ought to make it in six hours and a half or seven at the most. Drive me down to the burg and I'll put you in possession."

LORIMER PROBE IN HOME STATE

Expected to Furnish Ammunition For Insurgents

THE CASE MAY BE REOPENED

Illinois Senator's Opponents Lost on Two Issues In Closing Days of Congress, but Are Hoping to Bring Case Up Again, Counting on Men Who Succeed Lame Ducks to Accomplish Their Purpose

Washington, March 30.—President Taft's disclaimer of any conscious assistance in the election of William Lorimer to the senate comes at the peculiar moment, as it happens, when steps are afoot to reopen the whole Lorimer case in the senate.

It will be recalled that when the Lorimer matter was under discussion in the senate last February the insurgents were expected every day to present new evidence to strengthen their contention that the junior senator should be unseated.

This evidence was understood to concern itself with the alleged fact that the insurgents could put their hand on the man who went to Springfield with the money which was used in the purchase of votes and which three legislators admitted receiving. But for some reason or other, supposed to be the difficulty of keeping certain persons in the country, this evidence did not materialize.

It is said that now the case is in better shape for presentation and that for this and other reasons the insurgents will attempt to reopen it. They expect that the investigation now being conducted by the Illinois senate will reveal more evidence of improper methods than was extracted by the Burrows investigating committee and they are watching the investigation with keen interest.

They also believe that Edward Hines, the western lumberman and Lorimer's champion, and who testified before the senate committee that President Taft was partly responsible for inducing Lorimer to enter the senatorial field, should have been called before the Burows committee, and they desire to examine him. Hines spent much time in Washington while the Lorimer case was called before the senate and was the chief lobbyist in behalf of Lorimer.

While the case was pending and after the tide had turned in Lorimer's favor, the Republican insurgents tried as hard to postpone the vote as they had tried before to get one and the deadlock was broken only by an agreement whereby a vote on the tariff board bill was permitted in return for a vote on the Lorimer resolution. Lorimer won, but the tariff board bill, although passing the senate, was defeated in the house by Democratic filibustering.

The anti-Lorimer insurgents thus were defeated on both issues and they, with many others, have not concealed their opinion that had the stand-pat Republicans of the house and senate, most of them Lorimer men, done all in their power to get the tariff board bill through both branches, it would be law today.

QUINCY CAN BE SAVED

What Is True of Lynn Is True of Quincy

The city of Lynn owes much to the Evening Item for its great work for "track depression" in Lynn where work had already commenced on "track elevation" to abolish grade crossings. The Item is a vigorous advocate of track depression as will be seen by these arguments:

Through a fortunate combination of circumstances, Lynn is now offered a chance to correct a former grievous and disastrous error.

Practically everybody in Lynn believes in and really wants track depression. Some have been timid on the question of cost, and an unprincipled attempt has been made to increase this needless alarm.

This would not so much matter, were the situation less grave; but Lynn's opportunity is passing while this deliberate attempt at municipal assassination is being made. Rome burned while Nero fiddled!

The civic pride of Lynn is now thoroughly aroused, as never before. The great majority of our people are working to bring about track depression. Every one can help by attending the hearing at the State House. Now is the time to strike a blow for what is right. The result of our action can never be undone.

Irrespective of rank or station in life, every citizen admits that track depression is better for Lynn than elevation.

Shall it hereafter be said that, although everybody knew elevation to be a great mistake, we deliberately chose it with our eyes wide open? Shall we apply only the sordid measure of the dollar, in testing this great work?

Elevation would create an artificial barrier, dividing the city into two hostile camps. On many questions of public utility it would be the "east side" against the "west side." Springfield and Attleboro have elevation and would give anything to change.

Elevation would forever offend the eye and cause men to be ashamed that such a thing could have been permitted in our city. Elevation would create an unbearable noise through the business centres; it would wreck values.

Depression would unify the city; would prevent its mutilation; would eliminate almost all the noise of trains; would make possible a union station from Washington street to Market street; would add taxable valuation to property.

The man who owns his own home—"the small tax payer" has been urged to oppose this great public improvement, on the ground that it would add to his tax rate.

If this claim were true, it might seem a reasonable complaint, but the reverse is true—there is real danger of an increased tax rate as the result of elevation, while depression will increase values and pay for the whole improvement.

The "Lynn Shore Drive" is of inestimable value to all Lynn people and it is open to them all forever. Those who were prominent in obtaining for the city this great improvement are now working for depression. Some of those now quoted as in opposition to depression were several years ago prominent in trying to kill the shore drive movement. It was said "Oh that is a rich man's toy! The poor man will never be allowed on it!" And now the Shore Drive promenade is thronged on every pleasant day, and it belongs to the poor and rich alike, forever!

The affairs of one individual are so closely interwoven with those of all others that whatever benefits or injures one has a like effect on the whole, to a greater or less degree.

As our whole city is improved by the Lynn Shore Drive, so will all derive advantage from track depression, and all alike would suffer from elevation.

If every man does his duty now, it is possible to win, through unity of action and sentiment.

Will you do all you can for depression?

☞Have you a want? If so do not want any longer. Advertise in the Ledger and get that long felt want filled right away. tf

BRIEFS

Commissioner Bainbridge advertises today for bids for building the Monclair school building.

Tonight promises to be a busy one socially about a dozen entertainments being scheduled to come off tonight.

John Adams aerie of Eagles will have a Dutch supper in Protection hall this evening.

The Play Square club of the Universalist church hold their dance in Colonial hall Friday evening.

An important business meeting of Makaria fraternity will be held next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

William F. Slee, the artist, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $428 and assets of $150.

Michael E. Shea, superintendent of streets, who has been laid up nearly all winter with rheumatism, is on his job again.

The saying "Curfew shall not ring tonight" might be changed to read—"There will be no boxing match in Quincy tonight."

Almost time for Quincy's auto chemical and hose wagon to appear on the scene. It would come in handy answering spring grass fire alarms.

The sealer of Weights and Measures gives notice in another column of the law relative to weights, measures and balances being adjusted and sealed.

The Central station combination was called out on a telephone alarm at 1.30 this noon for a grass fire in the rear of the residence of C. A. Howland on Adams street.

Clan McGregor received a visit this week from a large delegation of members of Clan MacKenzie of Boston. There were speeches by members and visitors, and refreshments followed.

A party of young people are coming over from Dorchester tomorrow night to give a play under the auspices of the Y. P. R. U. of the Wollaston Unitarian church.

Quincy people should be united at the State House tomorrow morning for the completion of the Quincy Shore parkway. There are good reasons why the Furnace Brook parkway must wait.

Horace E. Spear and Warren H. Rideout were the high men at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club Wednesday evening. The former had 67.9 per cent and the latter 67.7 per cent. The weekly tournaments closed for the season Wednesday night. The best scores for the season will be announced later.

The last in a series of six lectures at the Bulfinch Place church, Boston, was given Wednesday night by Charles H. Johnson of this city his subject being Historic Quincy. The audience was especially interested and many expressed their appreciation of the lecture to Mr. Johnson pronouncing it one of the most enjoyable of the course.

Agent of Cunard Line Addresses Men's Club

James A. Burns, travelling passenger agent of the Cunard steamship Co., gave a very entertaining and instructive stereopticon lecture at the Washington Street Congregational church, Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Men's club. Mr. Burns has been in the employ of the company for over 40 years, and knows its history perfectly. About 100 views were shown, depicting the development of the steamship since 1837, and giving an idea of the magnificence of the modern transatlantic greyhounds. The pictures were supplemented by a steady flow of natural wit from the lecturer, which kept the audience in an excellent humor throughout the evening.

Besides views of the ships, a number of scenes in England, Scotland, Ireland and New England were shown, and several pictures showed the comparison in size between the big ships of the company and large buildings in New York and Boston. Mr. Burns gave his audience an idea of the equipment of the vessels and the amount of fuel and food and the force of men necessary for each trip. Views of first, second and third class accommodations were shown, commodious engine rooms, smoking rooms, dining rooms, state rooms, and so on.

In closing the lecture, pictures of the Franconia Notch in New Hampshire and the new Franconia named after the notch, which will run between Boston and Liverpool were thrown on the screen. This steamship will make its first trip on May 2, and on May 1 she will be open to the public for inspection. Likenesses of Queen Victoria, King Edward and his Queen, President Washington and President Taft were then thrown upon the screen, and finally the words of America, which was sung with great spirit by the audience.

During the lecture two songs, "Asleep in the deep" and "Rocked in the cradle of the deep" were sung very acceptably by Harry Marr.. The lecture was given in the church auditorium, which was well filled even to the gallery. Over 250 people were present and all spent a most enjoyable evening.

GRAND K. of C. BALL.

Arrangements have been practically completed for the grand ball of Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, to be held Easter Monday evening. Edward D. Barrett is chairman of the committee of arrangements, James F. Burke chairman of the reception committee, and Grand Knight John J. Cunniff floor marshal. Acceptances of invitations to be present have been received from Deputy Charles J. Brady, Mayor Shea, President Bryant of the City Council, Postmaster Hammond, the grand knights of Weymouth, Randolph, Braintree and West Quincy councils and Representatives Thomas and Langelier.

David J. Fulton of Wollaston was graduated on Tuesday from the Massachusetts nautical training ship Ranger, from the engineering department.

The boys of the Loyal Legion are to give the play "Pair of Burglars" tonight under the direction of Mrs. Isabelle Davis ,their leader. The play is given to raise funds for carrying on the work of the Legion for another year.

Representative Thomas and Langelier both voted on roll call Wednesday in favor of expediting a vote on the trust company tax bill to make it operative before April 1. A four-fifths vote was required, and the first vote was 116 to 30, and the roll call 144 to 67, not the necessary number.

Several from Quincy attended the fourth district conference of the Women's auxiliaries of the Y. M. C. A. held at the Central Congregational church, Middleboro. The secretaries report was read by Mrs. Edwin I. Beal of Quincy. Among those who took part in the discussion at the afternoon session were Mrs. L. A. LeRose of Quincy on "The relation of Auxiliaries to the Association" and Mrs. Herbert W. Pinkham of Wollaston, on "How can we make the district conference worth while?" It was voted to hold the next convention at Taunton.

EXPERIENCE SOCIAL.

The last of a series of social events for the present conference year, was held at the Hall Place M. E. church, Wednesday evening and was known as the "Experience Dollar Social."

The exercises opened with prayer by the pastor. The entertainment consisted of duets by Miss May and Ada Williams and recitations by Miss Ada Williams.

The roll call of those who had pledged to earn an "experience dollar" was then read, the persons being expected to tell their experiences in earning it. Many funny incidents were told which caused a great deal of laughter.

After the entertainment coffee and cake were served by the following committee: Mrs. Hawes, Mrs. Badger, Mrs. Newcomb, Miss Ada Williams and Miss Hilda Francis.

The entertainment committee included Mrs. Bent, Miss May Williams and Rev. C. H. Raupach. A pleasant and profitable evening was spent and enjoyed by all.

THINKS TAFT IS OUT OF IT

Bourne Gives His Views as to the Next Presidential Race

Boston, March 30.—The next presidential race will be between Governor Wilson, Democrat, of New Jersey, and United States Senator LaFollette, Republican, of Wisconsin, according to the opinions expressed by Jonathan Bourne, United States senator from Oregon and president of the National Progressive Republican league, in an interview at the City club.

"I most emphatically think that Taft will not be renominated," declared Bourne. "I would like to see LaFollette a candidate, and the sooner he declares his candidacy the better. Of course, there are other Republican possibilities. Ex-President Roosevelt, Senator Cummins of Iowa and Justice Hughes are possibilities."

FOR ARBITRATION OF ALL DISPUTES

Work Begun on Treaty Between America and Great Britain

Washington, March 30.—The drafting of a new arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain, to cover all probable future disputes between the two countries, has been begun by Secretary of State Knox and Ambassador Bryce. The negotiations of the convention will be expedited as much as possible in order that it may be submitted to the senate for the ratification at the special session, to begin April 4.

The treaty will be the first of its kind ever negotiated and will provide for the arbitration of all disputes between the United States and Great Britain. The work of drawing up the new convention will be difficult because of the fact that the document will be the first of its kind and will be used as a model for similar conventions with other countries.

Seventy-Year-Old Man a Murderer

Independence, Kan., March 30.—A. A. Truskett, 70 years old, a wealthy business man of Caney, was found guilty last night of murdering J. D. S. Neeley, millionair oil operator at Lima, O. The jury was out twenty-seven hours.

Little Items of Interest in Towns About Quincy

John W. McAnarney and J. J. McAnarney of Quincy represented the government on Wednesday in the district court at Dedham when Lester P. Winchenbaugh and George Jeffers of Hyde Park were charged with the violation of the election laws, by distributing and posting unsigned circulars. The government called 83 witnesses. The case was continued after hearing until April 4 when counsel will discuss the law.

Representative Wolcott of Milton presided as speaker of the Massachusetts House on Wednesday.

The Metropolitan Affairs Committee of the Legislature gave a hearing Wednesday on the bill to annex Hyde Park to Boston. There were advocates and opponents.

The public sale of the personal effects of the late Rebecca Fairbanks at Dedham on Wednesday attracted a large number of relic hunters. A minature of Abner Fairbanks sold for $52.50.

During the last 30 months 777 have been admitted to the State hospital at Foxboro, and 324 cases have resulted favorably. The trustees recommend a continuation of the probation system, and record their appreciation of the assistance of the probation officers of the state. A site will be purchased in the towns of Norfolk and Walpole for a new institution before the end of the present year, the trustees believe. The legislature has already appropriated $50,000 to purchase land.

The senior class of the Norwell high school recently netted $100 at a fair.

The Sunday school of East Braintree M. E. church has elected officers as follows: President, Fred H. Hardy; vice president, Lester M. Slater; secretary, Miss Alice Wilson; treasurer, Miss Mattie B. Deland; organist, Miss Helen Smith.

The selectmen of Randolph have appointed John Haney as chief of the police; E. Laurence Payne and John F. Diauto as police officers and James Riley as inspector.

Hanover is considering a water supply and has appointed a committee to look into the matter.

The Union Literary Circle of Weymouth and Braintree held a meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Crane, Quincy avenue, Tuesday evening. Mr. Crane read a paper on "The Scandinavians in Science and Literature." Mrs. Charles Leavitt gave a reading.

CLOTHING MAN ARRESTED

Charged With Selling Shoddy Goods to the Government

New York, March 30.—Charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States Indian service of the interior department by substitution of shoddy trousers for those of standard quality, Arthur Rose, a clothing manufacturer of Newark, N. J., was arrested on a federal warrant.

Rose held a sub-contract for furnishing clothing to the Indian service and it is alleged that with Charles H. Furman, chief clerk in the United States Indian warehouse, in this city, he conspired to remove from the warehouse several cases of standard goods, which had passed inspection, and substitute for them cases of shoddy goods.

Woolen Man Disavows Interview In Regard to Tariff Schedule K

Boston, March 30.—William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen company, in a dispatch from San Francisco received at the company's Boston office, disavows the Los Angeles interview in which he was quoted as predicting that if the Democrats should lower schedule K it would close every woolen mill in the country and defeat the projected building of a large mill on the Pacific coast.

Wood declared that he was misquoted in that interview, and desires to have it widely contradicted.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Woman Brings Suit For Divorce Against "Vegetable Diet Man"

Pittsfield, Mass., March 30.—Albert F. Tyler, who with his wife and three children has become famous as the "vegetable diet man," has been sued for divorce by Lucy E. Tyler of Haverhill, who says Tyler married her there sixteen years ago and deserted her eight years later. His property has been attached for $5000.

Tyler has been living in this city for several years. The woman who has lived with him as his wife has borne him three children. The children are O. B. Joyful Tyler, Lucy Drinkwater Tyler and Alfred Frederick Tyler.

The woman who is bringing the divorce proceedings declares that she has been unable to learn of Tyler's whereabouts until very recently when she read a story about him in a Boston paper.

HIS DREAM COMES TRUE

Farmer Locates an Oil Well Which Soon Becomes a Gusher

Butler, Pa., March 30.—The biggest gusher of the year in the Butler oil district came in yesterday on the James Smith farm, in Penn township, wildcat territory.

Smith, in a dream, saw oil spouting over the derrick in a ravine on his farm. "It was so real," said Smith, "that I was sure it must be true. I went to the place the next day and marked the spot."

The gusher may be good for 200 barrels a day. It is not quite as good a strike as that of "Lucky Pumper" Harry Hoffman, who located a well as a result of a dream three years ago in the same field. Hoffman spent his last cent drilling. Today he is wealthy.

DOORS WERE LOCKED IN WAIST FACTORY

Testimony of Two Girls at Fire Marshal's Investigation

New York, March 30.—Two girls testified at the investigation which Fire Marshal Beers is conducting to place the responsibility for the Triangle Waist company fire, in which 145 lives were lost, that doors on the eighth and ninth floors of the factory were locked when the flames were discovered. These doors opened inwardly and scores of girls and men were trapped by them.

Joseph Fleicher, cashier of the Triangle company, admitted that rubbish was permitted to accumulate for ten days in the cutting room of the factory. He said this was done so that enough cloth cuttings could be obtained to make into bales and turn over to the ragman who called for the rubbish every ten days.

Another development in the fire inquiry was furnished when Isaac Harris, one of the proprietors of the waist company, declared that to his knowledge there were no standpipes or hose in any of the three lofts occupied by his concern.

King George Thus Provides Poor Man With Cigars For Life

London, March 30.—King George recently visited an aged couple in moderate circumstances who had resided for a long time on the royal estate at Norfolk, and after a friendly chat the king offered to the husband a cigar. The man thanked the king, adding: "I don't often get a chance to smoke cigars."

The man has received a letter in the king's handwriting, giving to him his house rent free for the rest of his life and expressing the hope that this little relief in his income would enable him to afford cigars as long as he lived.

GOUT IN RIGHT FOOT

Return of Frye's Old Malady May Keep Him Out of the Senate

Washington, March 30.—Senator Frye of Maine has suffered a return of his old malady, gout of the right foot. In his enfeebled physical condition and with his advanced age this is regarded as very serious and may interfere with the senator's plans for work during the approaching special session of congress.

Senator Frye, as president pro tem of the senate, presided over that body for many years, and has now served in that capacity longer than any other senator in the history of the body.

WOLLASTONS BEAUTIFUL NEW SCHOOLHOUSE

Large Assembly Hall on the Second Floor One of the Features

Architecture After Style of the Georgian Period

The new Wollaston school-house certainly has architectural beauty and the city of Quincy may well be proud of it when completed. The Daily Ledger has already printed descriptions of the building, but with the half-tone before us there is considerable new data which will be of interest.

The school house is situated on Beale street, Highland avenue and Taylor street, fronting on Beale street and the plans, made by McLean & Wright, architects, show a building two stories in height, with eight class rooms, the master's office and teachers' rooms in the first story and four class rooms and an assembly hall in the second story. The main entrance is in the middle of the broad front, with stone steps and a wide platform in front. From the vestibule, a short flight of steps leads to the main corridor.

On the front of the building on one side of the entrance, are the master's rooms, consisting of a waiting room and a private office, separated by a glass partition; and a toilet and coat room.

On the other side of the main entrance, is the teachers' retiring room, with toilet room, lockers, etc.

Opening off the main corridor, are the eight class rooms on this floor, four on each side of the corridor. These rooms are each 23 feet by 29 feet, seating 42 pupils each and connected with each room by two double swinging doors, is its coat room; these being arranged as in Boston schools, to open off the rooms instead of the corridors.

At each end of the corridor are the main entrances for the pupils; the stairways are placed here also, and run from basement to the second floor, being lighted by large windows on the landings; the stairs being of iron with thick slate treads.

In the second story, occupying the entire centre of the building, is the assembly hall, 43 feet wide, 70 feet long, by 20 feet high. This hall will seat the entire school, and is lighted by five large arched windows in the front wall. On the opposite side of the hall is a stage, framed by a proscenium arch. Adjoining it, are the dressing rooms, connected by a passage back of the stage. Access to the hall and dressing rooms is had from large lobbies on either side of the hall the head of the two stairways. On the side of the lobbies opposite the head of the stairs, are the ante-rooms, each with toilets, etc. These ante rooms open also into the main hall.

At each end of the building in this story, are two class rooms, also entered from the lobbies; of the same size and accommodations as the rooms in the first story.

In the basement are placed the boiler room and the heating aparatus, with its coal bunkers opening into it; the sanitaries and playrooms. The play rooms are each 45 feet by 58 feet; the main stairways descending directly into them. There are also entrances to each directly from outdoors; and from the floor of the boiler room an inclined runway rises to the yard level. The floors of all basement rooms will be of concrete and pitched to drains so water can be thrown in through a hose for cleaning.

The heating and ventilating system, will be of the low pressure gravity type, with steam generated by two twinned boilers, either or both of which can be used as required. The steam will be carried to brick fresh air chambers, where fresh air will be heated by pin radiators, and taken to the assembly hall and class rooms above through brick ducts. At least 30 cubic feet of air per minute for each pupil in a room, will be supplied, and an equal amount taken out, the exhaust duct being equipped with steam radiators to move the air in warm weather when the main radiators are shut off. Each coat room is also supplied with exhaust ventilating ducts in the same way.

The sanitaries are of the latest type each compartment being ventilated into the brick duct at the back, from which the air is taken to vent flues with steam coils in them to move the air. Electric fans are also provided to move the air when the boilers are not in use.

The main entrances and corridors are heated by direct steam radiators and in the floor of the lower corridor are placed foot warmers.

Bubble drinking fountains are provided for each story.

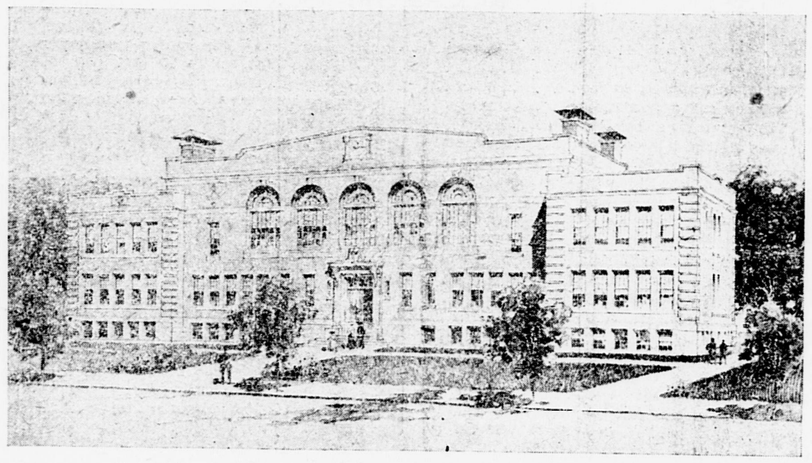

Each school room will have a bookcase, cabinet and coat closet for the teacher. All blackboards will be of Pennsylvania slate. The floors will be of narrow, matched maple, and the finish and trim in the rooms and corridors will be of North Carolina hard pine, stained, with painted burlap dadoes 5 feet high, and plastered walls, painted above. All interior doors, will be of birch and the outside doors of oak.

The building throughout will be wired for electric lights, and have electric time and program clocks.

The building on the outside will be after the style of the Georgian period, modernized to meet its requirements and uses. The basement walls will be of colored sap faced stone; the walls above the basement of red brick with granite trimmings.

The roofs will be flat with interior drains, and be surrounded by a brick parapet; the central portion containing the assembly hall, rising somewhat higher than the end pavilions. These flat roofs can be readily adapted for use as open air class rooms, if needed.

Building operations have been started and the building carried to completion before the end of the year.

UNITED ON PARKWAY

Mayor and Representative Favor Extension at Hearing

Quincy was well represented at the hearings on the Quincy parkways in the State House this morning. The recommendation of the Metropolitan Park commission called for immediate action in getting estimates and looking into the advisability of constructing the remainder of the boulevard from the present dead end of the Quincy Shore reservation to Hancock street.

Representative W. R. Thomas was the first speaker. As a member of the committee on Metropolitan Affairs, he spoke very strongly in favor of the construction of the boulevard. The portion between Adams street and Hancock was not as much a necessity, so he spoke chiefly on the extension of the Shore drive to Hancock street. The increased value of the property was pointed out and the need of a continuous thoroughfare between Neponset and Quincy was treated very convincingly.

Representative Langelier spoke of the dead end of the shore drive in the rear of the National Sailors' Home, and the difficulties of traffic, especially in wet weather. The fact that the cost would be only $240,000 where the appropriation called for $250,000 was a good argument in its favor.

Mayor Shea stated that the property at the West Quincy end was greatly improved by the Furnace Brook parkway, and inasmuch as the Wollaston park section was building up rapidly, the construction of the continuous boulevard would be a big asset. As it is, with the dead end at Fenno street, it is not used anywhere near as much as it should be, and the money expended is not giving the citizens its full value.

Ex-Mayor Bryant spoke in favor of the bill ,and as a resident in the section of the proposed addition, spoke of the rapid development of the property along the present boulevard and the possibilities along Fenno street.

Ex-President Ralph W. Hobbs, Councilmen Gardner and W. H. Teasdale were heartily in favor of the continuation of the Quincy Shore drive to Hancock street.

G. B. Bates was the only one who spoke in opposition. His argument was that until the grade crossing question was settled it would be foolish to expend a lot of money with a possibility of its being necessary to reconstruct after the railroad had done its work. Representative Thom-

EXCHANGE WILL SUPPORT

Metropolitan Harbor Commission Get Good Endorsement

The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange after thorough investigation has decided to support the petition of Henry C. Long, Esq., and others for legislation authorizing the establishment of the Metropolitan Harbor Commission as provided for in House Bill No. 1112 as presented in Quincy last week. The Committee on Metropolitan Affairs will give a public hearing on this bill Monday, April 3, at 10.30 A. M.

In view of the fact that this measure vitally effects all the cities and towns within a radius of fifteen (15) miles from Boston, the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange urges the hearty co-operation of the business men of Quincy.

Among the speakers invited to represent the city of Boston are ex-Gov. Curtis Guild, Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, Henry C. Long, Esq., Woodward Emery, Esq., William Harper, Jr., Esq., and Admiral Francis T. Bowles of the Fore River shipyard.

CONFIRMATION BY BISHOP LAWRENCE

Takes for His Theme at St. Chrysostoms "What the Church Stands For."

Class of Twelve Presented For Confirmation

The Rt. Rev. William Lawrence preached and administered the rite of confirmation at St. Chrysostoms church Thursday evening. The rector Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra presented twelve persons to the bishop for confirmation.

There was a large attendance at the service and the bishop's address was listened to with marked attention. He began by a few words of welcome to the rector, as this was his first visitation during his rectorship. He had known him since his boyhood; that he had come to the church to lead, to help especially in pastoral relations; always feel privileged to call on him; he had come to be a servant in Christ's name, for Christ's sake. A division of labor depended on all, with hearty support and devotion he can be even more helpful.

The Bishop took for his subject—"What the church stands for." The church is dependent for missionary work as well as the community work; one is as important as the other. The future city is molded by the coming manhood and womanhood serving the community to the finer life; to more substantial things. Christ's church stands for the deepest and finest work, and the human springs and streams of life bring out the character. The school brought out the point of industry, truth, obedience, democracy and molding of character; and the church is the hand maid of the school, a stream of the spiritual side ofcharacter.

We should be proud to be in Christs church, which stands for the finest and noblest of work, and with hearts humble, with devotion pure and earnest comes spiritual power, which radiates and illuminates the home, and we can be a good deal stronger because we are of that company.

In speaking directly to those who were confirmed, he called their attention to the fact of the privilege of being members of this institution that stands for the highest in the community, and congratulated them for taking this step.

The vested choir with Miss Louisa Allison Ross organist rendered the musical program. The anthem "Through the day Thy love has spared us" was sung during the offertory, Miss Jessie Fowler soloist.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The financial situation in Quincy, as it relates to the solution of the grade crossing problem, is not the same as in Lynn, because work has not commenced. Quincy will not have to pay heavily to change from one plan to another, because no report has yet been made by the special commission and no plan has yet been adopted.

It is important now that the right plan shall be adopted, and it is not so much a question of dollars and cents as it is to do the job right. The abolition of the grade crossings should be accomplished without injury to the city generally. The city has more at stake than the railroad. Results in other cities and towns show that property is depreciated by a general elevation of the railroad tracks as at Harrison Square and Pope's Hill.

Elevation of the tracks would mean the elevation of the bridge at Adams street. If the tracks should be raised four feet it might be necessary to raise the bridge eight feet to give proper clearance. Then it would be necessary to raise the Dimmock street bridge, and to close Saville street. The only street where track elevation would result in an improvement is Granite street, but track depression might be as satisfactory even there. Track elevation would also raise the bridge at School street, and cause a tunnel under the railroad at Water street, and prevent a new bridge over the railroad near the pumping station of the old water works.

The present freight yard for handling granite at Quincy Adams should not stand in the way of the proper solution of the problem, for it could be relocated to good advantage. It could easily be located on the low land in the rear of the Police station adjoining the Quincy freight yard, with entrances for granite teams from Fort square and Granite street. The city could be depended on to construct a new street on a level grade from Fort square to Water street to make it accessible.

A new plan is suggested which would be feasible if the track were depressed and the railroad electrified, and that is to build a wide avenue over the railroad from the Adams street bridge to the Granite street bridge. This would relieve much of the congestion on Hancock street between Adams street and Granite street, and is worth considering.

THE PULL IS STEADY.

"If there is one enterprise on earth that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone it is advertising. To make a success of advertising, one must be prepared to STICK like a barnacle on a boat's bottom. ADVERTISING DOES NOT JERK; IT PULLS. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."—John Wanamaker.

ABINGTON MEMORIAL.

Abington voted this week to appropriate $12,000 for a memorial bridge and arch over Island Grove pond in memory of the men who served in the Civil war from Abington. It was carried 201 to 2. The town also voted $1,000 for the coming celebration of the 200th anniversary of the old town of Abington in 1912, and money was appropriated for plans and specifications for the Adams street school building at North Abington. Col. William B. Arnold presented plans showing the proposed bridge and memorial. He said that Abington sent more than 1,200 men into the Civil war and probably more than any other town of its size in the state.

Mrs. Elvira Glover, wife of William H. Glover died at her home on High street Thursday in her 76th year. Mrs Glover has been a resident of Quincy for many years and had a wide circle of friends. She leaves a husband and two sons who are twins,—William S and Walter Glover.

HE'S A JOLLY GOOD FELLOW

Birthday Celebrated at a Wollaston Social

The monthly sociable held by the ladies in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Thursday evening resolved itself into a mammoth observance of the 65th birthday of Walter E. Simmons.

The Simmons family and its branches occupied a large table on the stage of the vestry, and at the close of an excellent repast a cake of colossal proportions, lighted with candles galore, made its appearance borne by Arvin Page. As this was placed before the honored guest those present arose and raising high the glasses of grape punch drank a toast and sang, "For he's a jolly good fellow."

The cake, which was of fine quality and attractive frosting, was the work of Mrs. Adelaide C. Armstrong. Following its presentation it was cut up, and each one present received a sample, Mr. Simmons distributing it in person.

One of the best suppers of the season was served by a committee composed of: Mrs. Frank A. Page, Mrs. Samuel Chapman, Mrs. E. G. Howe, Mrs. George H. York, Miss Fanny Johnson, Mrs. Harrison Loud, Mrs. W. R. Atwood, Mrs. Harry A. Stevens, Mrs. Edward J. Cummiugs, Mrs. J. N. Smith.

The entertainment of the evening consisted of several acts by the Moulton Sisters, in the persons of Miss Elsie Moulton and Miss Margaret Hall, and a reading by Mrs. Clarence Hutton.

The opening scene brought the "see saw" song, and the pretty music, the dainty steps of the dancers, and the colored light effects of the see saw, drew a prolonged round of applause.

In a reading entitled "A mother's day," Mrs. Hutton was pleasing, and her striking delineation of the duties of a busy housewife was most amusing.

Miss Margaret Hall in the quaint costume of a sweet and demure Colonial dame was the soloist of a song act entitled, "In the chimney corner." Miss Hall rendered as an encore another pleasing selection.

The concluding and culminating piece of the evening was the butterfly or fire dance done by Miss Elsie Moulton. The graceful and everchanging figures formed by the undulating masses of fabric and played upon with spot lights of varied hues, made a picture of extraordinary beauty. The performer was encored again and again until she was unable to proceed further. The last dance was enacted behind a curtain of gauze upon which sky, witch, peacock, butterfly and patriotic effects were cast by means of a stereopticon.

Miss Eva C. Hungerford presided at the piano as accompanist while Roy C. Baker was responsible for the light effects.

HOUGHS NECK.

Mrs. B. C. Leonard of Oregon terrace entertained this week Miss Eliza E. Manley and Walter H. Staples of Brockton.

Senator J. P. Timilty and family of Cambridge will occupy the Trilby cottage on Bay View avenue this season.

The Corinthian club of Whitman will soon occupy the Irene cottage. The Corinthians have had this cottage for the past five or six summers.

J. C. King and family of Allston are soon to open their summer home, the Wellesley cottage on Bell street.

Miss Thelma Piper of Dorchester is the guest of her aunt Mrs. Laura Piper of Parkhurst street.

TRIAL TRIP.

The torpedo boat destroyer Walke left the Fore River plant this morning for a builder's trial. After reaching the harbor she headed for Provincetown. Several wireless messages have been received from her stating that she was making sixteen knots and making no attempt at speed, the trip being a consumption test. After reaching Provincetown, if the weather conditions are favorable, she will make some speed runs.

A PAIR OF BURGLARS

Little Play a Feature of L. T. L. Entertainment

The annual entertainment of the Faxon Loyal Temperance Legion was given in Electa hall Thursday evening before a large and appreciative audience. The opening number on the program was a splendid piano solo by Emma Corcoran. This was followed by a recitation by Kenneth Johnson which met with the heartiest approval of the audience. A violin solo by William Cummings was well rendered. Raymond Cummings, his brother accompanied him on the piano. A recitation was given by Leslie McCormack in a very acceptable manner.

The fifth number on the program was a little play entitled "A pair of burglars." All the parts were well taken, and the girls were "just too cute for anything."

The cast included:

Jack Nife, Vera's sweetheart, Kenneth Johnson
Billy Case, reporter on "The Telespatch," Charles Williams
Vera St. Clair, the first baby, Edward Gibson
May St. Clair, "Scoopy" the baby, Eric Nelson

Two splendid solos were rendered by Miss Catherine Saville after the play was finished, and Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis completed the program by reading a number of very enjoyable pieces.

A successful sale of candy and Easter cards and booklets was held before and after the entertainment. The proceeds of the entertainment and sale will go toward paying the expenses of the Legion during the coming year.

MISSIONARY SUPPER

Illustrated Talk on Turkey by Mrs. W. E. Alden

The annual meeting of the Women's Missionary society of Bethany church was held Thursday evening. The business session began at 6.30 with reports of the officers. The president, Mrs. Charles W. Miller, told of the work the society was doing and what it hoped to do during the coming year. A special effort is to be put forth in this, the jubilee year, to get more members and to raise more money for the work.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. Charles W. Miller.
Vice Presidents—Mrs. Lizzie E. Wetherell and Mrs. Charles Gragg.
Secretary—Mrs. Charles Sampson.
Treasurer—Mrs. George A. Sidelinger.

An excellent supper was served by the Philatheas after the business meeting. About 50 people sat down to the following menu: Cold meats, peas, creamed potatoes, pickles, rolls, pies and coffee.

The following young ladies served: Misses Aljuline Keene, Ruth Murray, Elsie Lawrence, Margaret Gardner, Agnes Fisher, Daisy Burnell, Ida Mattson, Bertha Pearson, Annie Pearson, Augusta Crane, Gladys Ganzel, Elizabeth Ruxton, Christina Booth and Mrs. Wheeler.

At the conclusion of the supper all were invited upstairs to listen to a lecture on "Turkey" read by Mrs. W. E. Alden. About 75 stereopticon views illustrated the lecture very beautifully. The people and the conditions under which they live, the country in which they live, and the vicissitudes of their existence, were made very clear by means of the splendid lecture and illustrations.

GRAND BALL OF ORANGEMEN

Large Crowd at the Annual Party Last Night.

The sixth annual concert and ball of the Quincy L. O. L., was held Thursday evening at Alpha hall and was the most successful of any similar affair ever held by this lodge. The attendance was unusually large, upwards of sixty couples participating in the grand march.

From 8 to 9 o'clock there was a concert by Wilson's orchestra the program being as follows:

March, "Yucatan" Henry
Overture, "Lustspiel" Keler-Bela
Concert Waltz, "Dream on the Ocean" Strauss
Cornet Solo, Selected
J. J. Crowley
Finale, "Namouna" Panella

The ball opened with a grand march which was led by Andrew Stewart, chairman of the committee of arrangements, and his daughter Miss Mary Stewart. Then came Wilbur Wynot, the floor director with Miss Jennie Ellis.

The march over the order of eighteen numbers was entered into with spirit. The order contained a sprinkling of square dances so that the tastes of all were considered.

At 10.30 there was a half-hour's intermission during which refreshments were served in a cafe adjoining the hall.

The comfort of the guests of the evening were well looked out for by a reception committee composed of Willard B. Jones, Andrew Stewart and Gustaf Lundberg.

Wilbur Wynot was the floor director and Murdock Gillis assistant. The aids were: Charles Dahl, A. T. Sinnerburg, Alexander Stephens, George Lyons and Herbert Sproul.

The committee of arrangements included: Andrew Stewart, Herbert Sproul, Gustaf Lundberg, Murdock Gillis, Wilbur Wynot, George Lyons, Alexander Stephens, Charles Dahl, Willard Jones and A. T. Sinnerburg.

BUCKETING IN WASHINGTON

District of Columbia Court Decides That It Is Not Illegal

Washington, March 31.—An attempt by congress to so closely define the offense of "bucket-shopping" as to make it impracticable in the District of Columbia has resulted in the complete failure of the legislation on the ground of unconstitutionality.

Justice Wright, in the supreme court, decided that the act referred to constitute an unwarrantable interference with the right of a citizen to enter into contract relations, and was therefore unconstitutional.

The statute is of local application only and noes not necessarily affect the actions which the department of justice has begun at other points against alleged bucketshop operators, for the prosecution in these cases has been under the postal laws on the plain ground of fraud.

CRIME HUNT IS BEGUN

Police Head Is First Witness Before New York Grand Jury

New York, March 31.—The grand jury has begun an investigation into the charges brought by Magistrate Corrigan that vice and crime are rampant in that city. Frank Moss, first assistant district attorney, and George G. Battle as special assistant, have charge for the city.

Commissioner Cropsey, head of the police department, was the first witness called. He was examined with reference to the physical condition of the force, its state of discipline, his methods of administration and the difficulties that surround his task.

Before the investigation runs its course, it is probable that all the deputy commissioners and many inspectors and captains will also be called to testify.

LEADERSHIP OF THE MINORITY IN HOUSE

Weeks or Mann Will Probably Carry Republican Caucus

Washington, March 31.—Developments in the contest for minority leadership in the house in the next congress indicate that the insurgents will hold the balance of power when the Republicans go into their caucus next Monday night.

It is now regarded as a foregone conclusion that Mr. Cannon will declare himself out of the race, thereby leaving the contest between Messrs. Mann of Illinois and Weeks of Massachusetts.

The friends of Weeks are counting upon almost undivided support among the eastern members of the house and as far west and including Michigan and Ohio. Mann's friends, on the other hand, claim that they have enough votes to insure his election, but admit that the attitude of the insurgents will be the determining factor in the event that Weeks decides to enter the race.

It is apparent, therefore, that the insurgents will once more find themselves in a position where they can control their own part for a time at least.

GOING BACK TO MINES

Lewis May Again Be a Candidate For International President

Pittsburg, March 31.—When Thomas L. Lewis relinquishes his position as president of the United Mine Workers of America tonight, he will leave the headquarters in Indianapolis for his home in Bridgeport, O., and on Monday will take his place as a miner in the Wheeling Creek mines of the Lorain Coal and Dock company.

It is stated that Lewis has received a number of business offers, but he prefers to remain in the miners' organization, and his friends here say he will again be a candidate for international president.

NINE DAYS IN COMA

Peculiar Condition of Springfield Woman Puzzles Physicians

Springfield, Mass., March 31.—For nine days Mrs. Emma Trudeau of 17 Howard place has been in a state of deep coma. Medical skill thus far has been unable to bring her to consciousness and only once during this period has there been an awakening of activities. This was on March 23, when she opened her eyes once.

On Tuesday a consultation of physicians was held, but they were unable to suggest any treatment that has yet brought a response from the patient.

LINE OF CLOTHING ADDED.

The many patrons of George W. Jones of the well known City Square, gentlemen's furnishing store, will be pleased to learn that the rapid growth of his business has prompted him to add a complete line of stylish ready made clothing for men, youths and children.

The house of Jones has long been recognized as one of Quincy's leading business centres. Years ago when the store was located in the Adams building a line of clothing was carried, but the growth of his shoe and gentlemen's furnishing lines cramped him for room, and the clothing was given up.

Then he removed to his present store on Granite street, but it was only recently that it was decided to again add a line of clothing. Recent changes in the interior arrangement of his store, such as elevating the office, gave the room desired, and today the opening day of the new departure finds him showing a line of goods in clothing that will be hard to beat.

The stock is all entirely new and has been selected with the utmost care and will please the most fastidious. The styles shown are all up-to-date, both in regard to make-up and material, and the prices, which are marked in plain figures, are most attractive of all.

The suitings are displayed in a most attractive way and are well worthy of inspection by the careful buyer. In addition to clothing a large line of the latest spring styles in gentlemen's furnishings is shown. A visit to the store is invited.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

OUR INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

Quincy Shipyard Conducts One That is a Model

Thursday was the closing day of the Fore River Apprentice school, which is conducted during the winter months by the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., under the principalship of James E. Neary.

The exercises consisted of an address by General Manager H. G. Smith, who also announced the bonuses allowed, and the prize winners in the different classes. These were as follows:

FIRST CLASS.

First prize—William Murray of Quincy.

Second prize, a tie between A. H. Price, Maynard and Kenneth Haskell of Quincy.

Third prize—Guy Bishop of North Abington.

Honorable mention—Winford Simms of Yarmouth and Louis Billings of Dorchester.

SECOND CLASS.

First prize—August Viden of Quincy.

Second prize—Chester Mayo of Provincetown.

Third prize—Henry Anderson of West Quincy.

Honorable Mention—Erick Gelotte of South Quincy.

THIRD CLASS.

First prize—Alfred Beneditti of Quincy.

Second prize—Earl Ash of North Weymouth.

Third prize—Archie McGilvray of Quincy.

The Fore River Apprentice school has now become a distinct feature at this immense bee hive of industry. It had its inception in 1905 when the officials conceived the idea of giving apprentices some practical instruction, and started the school which took the form of an evening class at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. The following year a portion of the joiner shop was partitioned off for the school, and arithmetic and drawing were taught. The school has been constantly expanding, however, until now it occupies an entire floor of the new office building.

The subjects now taught are shop arithmetic, applied geometry, practical mechanics, strength of materials, blue print reading and freehand and mechanical drawing. The apprentice boys, who are paid during their apprenticeship, attend school two hours each morning during the winter months.

On Saturday mornings there have been lectures by Chief Engineer Bailey of the Electric Boat Co., on the history of the submarine; by Mr. Drinker, on the manufacture of steel with illustrations showing the various processes; and by J. A. Sedgwick, treasurer of the company, on the details of keeping the cost during the manufacture of an article.

MILTON SCHOOL CLOSED

Fire Department Has Had Numerous Calls

The Belcher school closed Wednesday on account of scarlet fever. Four new cases were reported and inasmuch as the spring vacation was scheduled to begin on Friday only two days will be lost.

A lecture will be given in the East Congregational church this evening by Edward H. Forbush, an expert ornithologist. His subject will be "Birds and animals of Massachustts." The lecture will be given under the auspices of the Men's club.

"Ed." Linnehan is back at work in Hammers' drugstore, looking as well as ever despite his painful injuries of last week.

The play given by the Alpha club on Friday was a great success. The audience was large and appreciative and the young ladies all took their parts well.

The scarlet fever cases reported to date are, Paul Babcock, Adams street; the daughter of L. H. Parrot, State street; a child of Leroy Nevins, Westbourne street; and a daughter of Mr. Waite, Sheldon street. Another of Mr. Nevins' children has diptheria and it is rumored that there is scarlet fever in the Rhoan family, Grafton avenue.

The fire department have been busy lately answering telephone calls as well as general alarms. The fire record outside of a few small grass fires is as follows: Friday, March 24, alarm at box 172 for a small fire in a barn on Oakland street, Mattapan. On Saturday, March 25, the department responded to an alarm at box 47 for a fire in Mr. Morse's garage, School street. As he was cranking his machine, it took fire and the garage was considerably damaged before the fire was put out. A grass fire on the James Perkins estate called the fire department out on Sunday. The alarm was sounded at box 27. The high wind carried the fire through to the Bradley place and kept the firemen busy for some time. On Monday evening at 8.51 the Milton department responded to an out-of-town call at box 432. The fire was in a house in the grove on the Dorchester side of the river. Box 452 was sounded at 3.26 Wednesday afternoon for another out-of-town call. The fire was on River street, Mattapan.

The driver of one of Hazelton's express wagons was injured while driving around the corner of Granite place and Adams street on Wednesday. The wagon wheel went upon the curb and the driver was thrown out sustaining cuts about the face and hands and a badly bruised body.

WEST QUINCY IS WILLING

That Quincy Shore Parkway Should Be Built First

A largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of the West Quincy Improvement society was held Thursday evening at which several matters of importance to the city as a whole, and West Quincy in particular, were discussed.

President Stephen B. Little presided, and after the routine business read a letter from Representative Langelier relative to the use of twelve-ride books on the main and branch line of the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. Under the present arrangement a coupon from a twelve-ride book between West Quincy and Boston cannot be used on the main line between Quincy and Boston, which is a source of great inconvenience to West Quincy people who in returning from Boston frequently desire to come via the main line to Quincy.

Representative Langelier was requested to take the matter up with the railroad officials and his letter gave the result of his efforts in this line. Representative Langelier said that he had taken up the matter with the railroad officials. Their argument was that there was a little difference in the mileage. While no direct promise was made that the privilege desired would be granted, it looked more than probable that the railroad would grant the request.

A vote of thanks was accorded Representative Langelier for his efforts.

PARKWAY CONCERTS.

A letter was received from the Metropolitan Park Commission that was very pleasing to the association. Some weeks ago a committee of the association took up the matter of band concerts with the commission, the desire being that concerts should be given this summer on the Furnace Brook parkway.

The letter stated that an appropriation for band concerts had not yet been made, but when it was, West Quincy would be the first to be considered.

WILLARD STREET.

The repair of Willard street from the West Quincy depot toward the Randolph line was then discussed at length. It was pointed out that at the present time the street was in a deplorable condition, but realizing the other street appropriations which the ward desired the City Council to make, it was questioned if it would be wise to try and get an appropriation for this street.

On the other hand it was pointed out that the Randolph end of the street had been accepted and built by the Highway Commission, and it was deemed best that this commission be urged to build a section of Willard street.

This same matter was brought to the attention of the Commission last year, but was not pushed on account of the building of a section of State road on Quincy avenue. Every effort will be made this year however to get the Highway Commission to build a section of Willard street.

PARKWAY HEARING.

The only other matter of importance brought up was the hearing Friday on the building of the Quincy Shore boulevard.

It was pointed out that while West Quincy very much desired to see its end of the boulevard completed to Newport avenue and Hancock street it was agreed that the Quincy Shore end should be built first, and that West Quincy was willing to wait, feeling sure that eventually its end would be built, and that the association would not spoil the prospects of the Quincy Shore end being built by trying to force the other end. Several signfied their intention of attending the hearing in favor of the Quincy Shore bill.

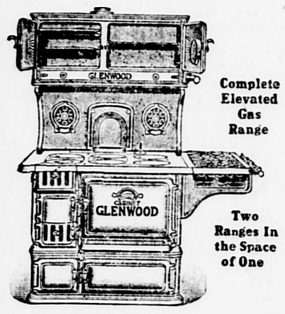

FINAL GERMAN.

The final German in the series given under the direction of Miss Agnes Braman Hayward of Braintree was held in Colonial hall Thursday evening. The dance took the form of a Mother Goose party, and all the young people were costumed to represent characters mentioned in Mother Goose melodies. The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, little boy blue, little bo-peep, the old woman who lived in a shoe, and many other notables were present. During the intermission, ice cream and cake were served. Dancing was continued until 10.30 when the melancholy strains of "Home Sweet Home" found them all wishing it were the first instead of the last in the series.

SENT TO GRAND JURY

Judge Avery Gives Verdict in Pure Food Law Case

The continued case of Ernest V. Fitts, for violation of the pure food law at Quincy, by selling Jamaica ginger that did not contain the required per cent of alcohol, came up for disposition before Judge Avery in the district court this morning.

At the hearing a few days ago the case seemed to hang on whether the Jamaica ginger siezed was a proprietary medicine. In disposing of the case Judge Avery said this was a case of great importance to the public. It was the first case of its kind ever tried. It was his own opinion that it was a proprietary medicine, but on account of importance of the case he had decided to send it up tothe grand jury. The court therefore found probable cause, and held the defendant for the grand jury.

BRIEFS

The last day of March and the last Friday too.

Another meeting of the City Council will be held next Monday evening.

The Tubular Rivet & Stud Co., of Wollaston is to run five days a week until further notice.

Frank R. Melville who was clerk for H. H. I. Smith a number of years ago, returned to his old position on Monday.

Miss Nellie Barnard of Washington street is improving in health daily and her friends are glad to see her out again.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Point church had an all-day sew at the home of Mrs. T. W. Lincoln, Jr., on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stoddard of Baxter street are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son on Tuesday.

Thomas McKenney, the popular clerk at H. H. I. Smith's store was out doors for the first time in three weeks today. He will be back at work soon.

H. H. I. Smith is displaying two Rhode Island Red hens and a cock in his store window. These birds were prize winners at the Brockton fair last fall.

Mr. and Mrs. George Dexheimer won first prize in the series of eight evenings at whist of the Jolly Sixteen. Mr. and Mrs. George W. Gragg were second.

Saturday, the first day of April is now the day upon which the assessors and assistant assessors will begin their annual tour of the city assessing property. It will be no April fool joke by any means.

Eugene Saunders of Beale street is this week at the New York office of Filene, the Boston dry goods merchant, holding a responsible position with the firm.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Gragg of Packard street attended the 25th anniversary of Gen. A. P. Martin camp, 62, Sons of Veterans, in Everett, Thursday evening. Mr. Gragg was the organizer of the camp.

Sylvester D. Rich has gone to Baltimore to look over a boat to take the place of the "Cape Cod" which has been running between Boston and Provincetown during the past eight or ten summers. Mr. Rich will stay down there until the boat is ready to sail north and then he will come up on her.

The son of Mr. Murphy of Shaw street was run into by an electric car Wednesday afternoon.By some chance he was not badly injured and declared that he felt better than ever afterward. The mother saw the car hit him and fainted away. Her nerves received a severe shock and she is still under the doctor's care.

MANY RECORDS ARE RECOVERED

Found Intact Under Tons of Stone In Albany

ABOUT $4,000,000 TO REPAIR

Estimated Cost In Rehabilitating Capitol Will Practically Wipe Out Estimated Surplus In State Treasury—Few Pails of Water or Fire Extinguisher Would Have Saved Building Had They Been Near at Hand

Albany, March 31.—More than 100 men attacked the smoking ruins left by the fire in the west end of the state capitol with shovels and crowbars and soon discovered that the wreck of the state's magnificent library was not as complete as at first supposed.

Buried under tons of stone shivered from the surrounding walls by the intense heat lay thousands of books which can be preserved by rebinding, and many that escaped unscathed. The salvage in books, pamphlets and manuscript records may amount to many thousands of dollars.

The records of the War of 1812 were found intact, and the custodians hope that as the work progresses other valuable relics at first believed to be lost may be found, if not unharmed, at least in a state worthy of preservation. Just what books and records perished and what books were saved will not be known for several days, since the workmen have an immense task before them in removing the debris.

The $100,000 which the legislature was asked to appropriate, by a bill introduced yesterday, is not expected to finance the work of construction. The appropriation is asked to pay for clearing away the ruins and restoring the water-soaked and smoke-stained walls and furnishings of rooms which escaped the flames.

Unofficial estimates place the cost of reconstruction close to $4,000,000. It is said that an appropriation of this size would practically wipe out the estimated surplus remaining in the state treasury at the end of the present fiscal year. The state cannot bond itself for this rebuilding and the money must be taken directly from the treasury.

A large part of the papier mache ceiling in the assembly chamber will have to be renewed. Before they can be used again the members' desks will have to be refinished, and it may be necessary to purchase a new outfit of interior assembly room furnishings.

The men who discovered the fire say that they could have put it out easily if they could have found an extinguisher or even a few pails of water.

No official attempt has been made to ascertain the cause of the fire nor has the vague talk of negligence resulted in definite charges to any one in authority. The militia probably will continue to guard the building as long as the firemen are at work there.

CHILD MURDER CONFESSED

Court Refuses to Accept Plea and Orders Trial of Prisoner

Freehold, N. J., March 31.—The murder of little Marie Smith, whose mutilated body was found in the woods near Asbury Park, and for which a negro suspect was at one time in peril of lynching, was confessed by Frank E. Heidemann, a German, before Judge Vorhees. He entered an unexpected plea of guilty.

The court, however, ordered that the defendant change the plea to not guilty and after ascertaining that the prisoner had no money to defend himself, appointed counsel. The plea followed an indictment returned yesterday, charging murder in the first degree. The trial was fixed for April 17.

CRUELTY INQUIRY KILLED

Legislature Will Not Authorize Investigation of Insane Asylums

Boston, March 31.—The rules committee of the legislature voted to report adversely on Representative Quinn's order for an investigation of alleged cruelties in insane asylums. The committee explains that the statutes now give sufficient authority, in its opinion, for the governor and council or the state board of insanity to conduct such an investigation.

A four-fifths vote of the members in each branch is necessary for the Quinn order to be admitted. The committee's statement, in effect, throws the matter back into the governor's office.

Death of Ellen Richards

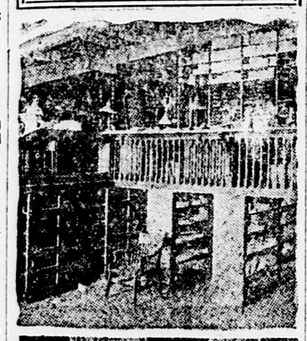

Boston, March 31.—Mrs. Ellen Richards, for more than twenty-five years professor of sanitary chemistry at the Massachusetts institute of technology, died last night. But a short time ago she celebrated her 68th birthday, and at that time was in the best of spirits and exceedingly active.

DEMOCRATS WORKING ON NEW SCHEDULES

Tariff Revision May Delay the Reciprocity Agreement

Washington, March 31.—Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee expresses the opinion that his committee will be ready to report a textile schedule to the house two weeks after congress convenes. It is generally believed that the sub-committee in charge of the wool schedule has been making such rapid progress during the past week that the wool schedule will first be presented to the house for consideration.

In some quarters Underwood's statement regarding an early report on the wool schedule is taken to mean that the senate and the president will first be asked to consider that schedule, the Democrats to hold the reciprocity bill back until such time as the senate and the administration signify their intention to accept the material reductions which are certain to be made in that schedule.

MONARCH IS LAUNCHED

Equipment of New British Dreadnought Is Already Installed

London, March 31.—An American woman, Mrs. Lewis Harcourt, wife of the colonial secretary, christened the superdreadnought Monarch, which was successfully launched at Elswick.

Thousands cheered as the fifth of this type of British battleship took the water. The Monarch inaugurated a departure in ship construction, being launched with her boilers, funnels, bridges and other equipment already installed.

Her displacement is 22,500 tons, and turbines of a total of 27,000 horsepower are expected to make possible a speed of 21 knots an hour. The vessel is 584 feet in length, and she is armed with ten 13.5-inch guns and twenty-four 4-inch guns.

TRACKED BY BLOODHOUNDS

Negro Must Answer to Charge of Murder of Detective

Chickasha, Okla., March 31.—Squire Goodwin, a negro, is in the Grady county jail, charged with the murder of C. H. McDonald.

Bloodhounds, which were put on the scent a few hours after the murder, stopped at the negro's door. He was found under a bed, crazed with fear. He carried a revolver of the same calibre as that which killed McDonald.

McDonald, a Rock Island detective, was found shot through the heart in the railroad yards at this place Sunday morning.

GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION

Method Has Proven a Costly Experiment In Haverhill

SHOWN BY AUDITOR'S REPORT

Mayor Wants Legislature to Grant Authority to Issue Bonds Outside Debt Limit—Net Bonded Debt Has More Than Doubled Within Three Years—Borrowing Capacity Has Been Reduced to $35,000

Haverhill, Mass., March 31.—Opponents of commission form of government are deriving no little satisfaction from the development of testimony borne out by figures taken from the auditing department of the city of Haverhill that this method of administering municipal affairs has proven thus far to be a costly experiment.

The appearance of Mayor Moulton before the committee on rules of the legislature in favor of a petition for authority to the municipal council of this city to issue $125,000 bonds outside the debt limit for the erection of a city hospital gave the commission critics an opportunity for which they have long been waiting.

To members of the committee, the information was submitted that the city of Haverhill is plunging headlong into debt, and in support of this contention, the following results of an analysis of the municipal finances were shown.

That the total amount of bonds issued during the past twenty-seven months, covering the period of operation of commission form of government, was $576,000; that the present borrowing capacity of the city is only approximately $35,000; that the city's bonded debt has increased from $441,264 to $1,181,314 in the past five years; that the net bounded debt has more than doubled within three years; that the assessed valuation has increased $5,000,000 and the tax rate has been raised from $17.40 to $19 in five years.

It was also shown that the borrowing capacity of $341,696 on Jan. 1, 1906, has decreased to $95,000 on Jan. 1, 1911, and that if the floating debt of $160,000 were added to the bonded debt, the present municipal debt would exceed the debt limit fixed by law to the amount of $55,000.

Commission form of government went into effect in Haverhill on the first Monday in January, 1909, and in his first inaugural address Mayor Moulton made the following statement:

"To raise money by the issuance and sale of mortgage bonds and to apply the proceeds so raised to the payment of current running expenses of the city is as illogical and unbusinesslike as to mortgage one's house to obtain money to pay the grocer and provision dealer."

REVEALS MORE SECRETS

Abatemaggio's Story Sets Camorra Prisoners In a Frenzy

Viterbo, March 31.—That Gennaro Abatemaggio, the Camorrist informer, was a paid hireling in the employ of the caribineers was the charge shrieked at him from the prisoners' cage when the informer went further into the details of the Camorra's crimes.

Alfano, or "Erricone," and his fellow-defendants seemed uneasy when Abatemaggio again plunged into his story, revealing further dark secrets of the Neapolitan band. Their rage overcame them as the witness proceeded, and loud cries came from the steel-barred cage.

SHOOTS WIFE AND SELF

Wonded Woman Lies Many Hours Beside Dead Body of Husband

Mechanicsville, N. Y., March 31.—For nearly twelve hours, Mrs. John C. Fuller, wife of a building contractor of Stillwater, lay mortally wounded in the cellar of her home, beside the dead body of her husband, who had shot her and then himself. The couple were found in a pool of blood. Mrs. Fuller probably will die.

Ill health and despondency from business troubles are assigned as the causes for his act. Fuller was president of the John C. Fuller Crushed Stone company, and was 60 years old.

Rebel Army Defeated at Fez

Tangier, March 31.—An army of 3000 Berbers attacked the Moroccan capital city of Fez and attempted to capture Sultan Mulai Hafid. In a fierce battle with native troops they were finally driven off.

Thousands of Plague Victims

Washington, March 31.—The plague is decimating northern Manchuria, according to advices received by the state department. In one region in Manchuria 5000 deaths occurred in February.

New Counterfeit Bill

Washington, March 31.—A new counterfeit $10 United States note, a photographic production of the Buffalo note, not very cleverly executed, is announced by the secret service.

A NERVY MURDERER

He Smilingly Assists Authorities at His Own Execution

Pottsvelle, Pa., March 31.—A remarkable display of nerve was made in the county jail yard here by Joseph Christock, who was hanged for the murder of Mrs. Ann Richards. Declining the proffered assistance of a priest and deputy sheriff, the man walked smilingly from his cell to the foot of the gallows, and ran lightly up the steps.

It was a public hanging and before him stood 1500 persons, to whom he waved his hand. Then he reached up, grasped the noose and placed it around his neck, put his arms by his side to be strapped and smilingly said: "Goodbye all." He then held his head in position for the adjustment of the black cap and in another moment the trap was sprung. He was dead in twelve minutes.

SUGAR CANE AND BAMBOO

Ingredients Used In New Process For Manufacture of Paper

Washington, March 31.—Another substance from which paper may be manufactured has been discovered by a manager of a sugar estate at Trinidad, according to Consul Hale at that place.

The new substance is ground sugar cane, to which is added bamboo fibre. The combining of these two, the discoverer believes, produces a substance of which the fibre is the right length to make a cheap and excellent paper. He has made paper by this process without the use of chemicals.

The quality of this paper, according to the report, can command the market against any wood paper now being manufactured.

VOTE ON INCOME TAX REVERSED IN MAINE

Governor Forces Democratic Leaders to Change Position

Augusta, Me., March 31.—Governor Plaisted forced the Maine legislature to reverse its action on the federal income tax amendment. The senate yesterday morning and the house previously voted against the federal tax and favored a state tax.

Governor Plaisted during the noon recess called a conference with some of the Democratic leaders, and at its conclusion the legislature, at its afternoon session, voted to ratify the proposed amendment to the federal constitution providing for a federal income tax, and voted to postpone indefinitely the state income tax amendment.

Both Republicans and Democrats indorsed the federal income tax amendment in their respective party platforms during the last campaign, but the measure met with much opposition in the legislature, until it was thought to be finally buried for this session by the action of the senate in concurring with the house in rejecting the federal income tax and favoring a state income tax.

DEATH LIST OF 144

Girl Who Leaped From Triangle Waist Factory Window Expires

New York, March 31.—The death of Sarah Kulpa, 16 years old, who jumped from the eighth floor of the Asch building during Saturday's fire horror, brought the list of victims up to a total of 144. The girl's back was broken and she had been unconscious ever since the fatal leap.

The identification of another girl's body by a strange arrangement of buttons on her shoe, brought the list of unnamed down to fourteen. There seems little likelihood of further identification and the charities board has made arrangements to bury the unidentified in a plot owned by the city.

TAUGHT BOYS TO STEAL

New York Fagin Is Convicted of Burglary and Larceny

New York, March 31.—Norman Schultz, whose vocation was being a janitor, and whose avocation was teaching small boys to steal, was convicted of burglary and larceny and remanded for sentence. Nine boys confessed to being his pupils and are now in the house of refuge.

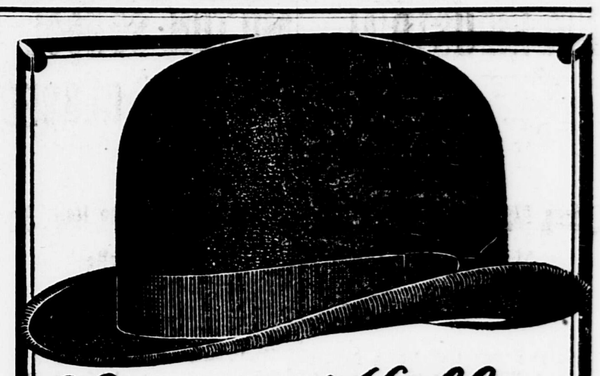

Twenty thousand dollars' worth of loot was recovered in Schultz's home. One boy confessed to twenty-six burglaries; another said he stole 305 bicycles. Both worked under Schultz's direction.

Mile Auto Record Broken

Pablo Beach, Fla., March 31.—The mile automobile record, straightaway from flying start, for stock cars, held by Oldfield, was broken when Wilcox, in a National car, went the distance in 40:32. Oldfield's mark was 40:35, made in a Knox last year on the Ormond-Dayton course.

Twelve Years For Black Hand Man

Montreal, March 31.—Pasquale Biareo was sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment for stabbing Antonio Manietti, an Italian hotel keeper, who refused the Black Hand demand for money.

GET THE HELP QUINCY GROW HABIT

The Honorable Senator Sagebrush

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS.

Evan Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount ("Senator Sagebrush"), has been rejected by Patricia Anners. Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is fighting his father. McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrel.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Going west to meet his father, Evan meets a man who takes him for a forestry employee.

Evan is kidnaped by a band of men, evidently land corporation agents, and is taken at night to a mansion seemingly presided over by a woman.

The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Evan's stepmother, whom he had never met.

The senator purposes running Evan for attorney general despite the young man's recent arrival in the state. Evan objects. He hears his father called a political trickster.

At McVickar's request Evan joins the railroad's forces as division counsel and political worker. He favors clean politics, but finds that his office is made a rallying point by small political hangers-on of the road.

Evan has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's raising in politics. His father pulls wires unknown to him to have him invited to speak in a distant mining town. Hathaway, who has been trying to do business with the road and with Senator Blount, is to have a talk with Mrs. Blount.

Hathaway wants a rebate from the road in consideration of political favors. He is referred to Evan and is advised by Mrs. Blount to put Professor Anners' name on his list of stockholders.

Evan's interview with Hathaway reveals the road's misdoings. In a rage he resigns. Gantry holds up the resignation. Evan insists that it go through to McVickar.

Patricia refuses Evan again. She advises him to stick to the road and work for clean politics. He withdraws his resignation and is sent into the field on a speaking tour.

Exposure of the railroad is threatened by Evan to Gantry unless rebating and other unlawful practices are stopped. Evan suspects his secretary, Collins, of tampering with his desk.

The desk is blown up by a burglar, evidently after Evan's papers. Gantry tells McVickar that Evan is getting to be too much for him to handle.

A little later Blount found himself handling the levers of a very serviceable knockabout car equipped for hard work on country roads. When he was ready to go he drove down to the railroad yard and hunted up his conductor.

"After you have had your vacation you may get orders from Mr. Kittredge and take his car back to the capital," he told the man. "When you do you may give him my compliments and tell him that I preferred to run my own special train."

The conductor grinned and made no reply, and he was still grinning when he sauntered into the railroad telegraph office and spoke to the operator.

"I dunno what's up," he said, "but, whatever it was, the string's broke. Old Dave Sagebrush's son has borrowed him an automobeel and gone back to town on his own hook. Guess you'd better call up the division dispatcher and tell him the broken wire gag didn't work. Get a move on. We hain't got nothing to stay here for now."

The traffic manager had left his office for the day, but Blount found him at the railway club.

"Just a word, Dick," he began when he had overtaken Kittredge's accomplice in the grill room corridor. "Kittredge put up a job on me, and I think you helped him. I had to borrow an automobile to come back in from Lewiston."

"Confound you!" said Gantry heartily.

But that was all that he had a chance to say, since Blount had turned abruptly and was already leaving the club to go on to the hotel.

Since the election was now no more than three days distant the Inter-Mountain lobby was filled with groups of caucusing politicians. Notwithstanding the position he had taken and the open eyed fearlessness with which he had discussed the political situation publicly in every considerable town in the state, Evan Blount was still a puzzle to those whose ways were, by need and the force of circumstance, the reverse of straightforward.

Blount was halted half a dozen times before he could make his way to the elevator, and the pumping process to which he was subjected at each fresh halting space amused him. It was plainly evident that in spite of all he had said and done a considerable majority of the politicians were still regarding him as in some sense his father's lieutenant. Somewhat to his disappointment he found that Patricia had gone out with his father and his father's wife to dinner; hence he was forced to sit at a table in the cafe with three of the caucusing politicians and was obliged to find his moderate pleasure in trying to make their very evident perplexity lose nothing of its acuteness during the table hour.

When he reached his office on Saturday morning, after an early and solitary breakfast at the hotel, the young reformer scored, or thought he had scored, his first small victory. Among the envelopes on his desk was one bearing the imprint of the traffic office. It inclosed a carbon copy of the notice required by law of a proposed change in freight rates.

Hastily comparing the figures with the memorandum in his pocketbook, Blount felt the tension relaxing for the first time in weeks. At the long last Gantry or his superiors had surrendered. The rates on lumber, electrical supplies and other commodities which had been given illegal preferentials were to be reduced to the figures given to the favored corporations.

Blount passed a busy Saturday, putting in most of his time at his desk. Calling up the hotel in the afternoon, he found that his father had taken Patricia and Honoria for a drive in the roadster, and at dinner time the automobile party had not yet returned. Blount went back to his office after a hasty dinner and worked late into the night. The eve of battle had arrived, and he was striving to clinch the nail of argument as well as he could by writing many letters to the political friends he had made in going up and down the state.

The Sunday proved to be a very quiet day, though the lobby of the Inter-Mountain was still the assembling place for the gathering clans of politicians. Blount went to church in the morning because Patricia insisted upon it, and his appearance in the pew as a member of the Honorable David's family would have caused fresh comment if there had been any churchgoers among the visiting politicians.

After luncheon he borrowed the roadster and took Patricia for a drive. The day was perfect, and the roads were in good condition. When he had put distance between them and the Sunday quiet of the city streets he told Patricia of his experience with Kittredge's special train.

"Do you think it was intended?" she asked when he had finished his story.

"I haven't the slightest doubt of it now. More than that, I think the telegram bearing Mr. McVickar's name was a bold forgery. But I am bringing them to time," he went on, exulting over his one small victory. "There is to be an evening up of freight rates, and one more room of the railroad house will be clean. I believe Mr. McVickar has meant to be fair all along, but the overzealous subordinate is always the hardest man to handle."

"I am glad," she said. And in the sunshine of her approval the young man spent a very happy afternoon.

At breakfast Monday morning Evan Blount again made the senator's party of three a party of four and at table found a puzzling surprise lying in wait for him.

The critical day of days in the campaign had arrived, and it was supposable on every hypothesis that the commander of an army would choose any other day rather than this to be absent from his post. But at the breakfast table he heard his father announce calmly that he was going to drive out to Wartrace, for no better stated reason than a purely routine purpose of having a talk with his ranch manager about the shipment of a trainload of beef cattle.

While Blount sat in open eyed astonishment the day was planned for there and then. The arrangement made was one that left Patricia free to keep an engagement at the Weatherfords' while the senator drove to Wartrace in the roadster. The little car, which Patricia had been told to call her own, was to be left at the garage, and she was to drive out in the afternoon, bringing Evan with her if he cared to come.

It was Mrs. Honoria who made this arrangement, and in the midst of his astonishment Blount acknowledged a warm kindling of gratitude. If the little lady whom he was trying so consistently to dislike had seemed to do her best to keep him and Patricia apart during the early part of the girl's visit she now appeared to be doing what she could to atone. Blount ventured one question and one only, as it was addressed to his father.

"Do you happen to remember that this is the final day before election?" he asked.

"So it is; so it is, son," was the even toned reply.

"I thought maybe you had forgotten it," said Evan quietly.

"I have in a measure," smiled the boss, "and if you'll take my advice you'll forget it too. The political spellbinder who hasn't said his say and done his do before sunrise this morning needn't expect that he's going to be able to dig the tree up by its roots between now and tomorrow morning."

It was not until the younger man was leaving the table, excusing himself on the plea of business, that the senator's wife clinched the arrangement for the afternoon.

"You'll come out with Patricia, won't you?" she said, putting it fairly up to him to consent or refuse.

"Of course," he stammered. "I shall be delighted."

"You don't say it quite as if you meant it," laughed the one who was to drive him out to Wartrace, "but I'll be charitable and give you the benefit of the doubt. Where can I pick you up, say, between 1 and 2 o'clock? Mrs. Weatherford's luncheon is to be really a French dejeuner, and I shall be able to get away early."

"If it wouldn't be too much trouble for you to stop by for me at the Temple court," Blount began, and when she nodded her acquiescence he went away, still wondering at his father's calm indifference on the very hour striking eve of the great battle.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Hamburg Steak Soup. Have lean beef hamburg and place on stove with cold water. Boil three-quarters to one hour only. Nice with rice and carrots, or rice only, also served as vegetable soup. Vegetables must be put in at once with the hamburg, as they will be done together. Season to taste. Quickly done and precisely the same as other soup.

Ham and Eggs Scrambled. One level tablespoon butter, four eggs, one and one-half cups cold boiled chopped ham, dash of cayenne. Melt the butter in a frying pan. Break the eggs into a bowl then add them, unbeaten, to the butter, and add the ham, to which the cayenne has been added. Stir until the egg is well mixed with the ham and cooked. Serve at once.

Carmel Cake. Two eggs, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of butter, two cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one half teaspoonful of soda. Caramel—Two cupfuls of sugar, two-thirds cupful of milk and butter the size of an egg. Boil 10 minutes and beat until cool. Flavor with vanilla and spread between the layers and on top of the cake.

Spice Pudding. One cup molasses, one-half cup brown sugar, one-fourth cup of butter, one cup stoned raisins, one -half teaspoon cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg, and a small teaspoon of soda dissolved in one-half cup of warm water; flour enough to make as stiff as common gingerbread. Put in a greased mold and stand the mold into a large kettle with not more than two inches of water in the kettle, just sufficient to keep up a large volume of steam, but not enough to come near the lid of the mold.

Oyster Soup. One quart oysters, one-third cup butter, one-fourth cup flour, one quart milk, one slice onion, two stalks celery, sprig of parsley, salt and pepper. Put the oysters in a strainer over a sauce pan and add one-half cup of cold water. Chop the oysters slightly and add to the liquor and water. Heat slowly until they boil. Remove from fire and strain through cheesecloth. Re-heat the liquor and add it gradually to the butter and flour cooked together. Scald the milk with the onion, celery and parsley. When scalded remove the seasonings and add to the oyster liquor. Season with salt and pepper. Serve with croutons.

Blending the Odors.

It has been proved that two odors which do not seem to have anything in common, that of putrefied cheese and that of pineapple, are so closely allied from the chemical standpoint that it takes but a few minutes to transform an intense stench into a sweet fragrance. This curious experiment is easily made and requires but a small amount of three chemicals—valerianic acid, sulphuric acid and amylic alcohol. Care must be taken not to spill over the fingers or dress any drop of the first two named liquids. Sulphuric acid is exceedingly caustic and the stench of valerianic acid, besides being unendurable, is very difficult to get rid of.—London Family Herald.

The Caddie's Advice.

A famous woman golfer was talking about the St. Andrews links.

"And as wonderful as the links," she said, "are the caddies. The Scotch caddie is the quaintest of mortals. For instance: 'I had skled a lot of balls one morning, much to my caddie's disgust. Finally he teed a ball for me and then, handing me my driver, remarked:

"'Noo, leddy, let's see a guid shot, and nae mair o' yer glory hallelujahs.'"

The Outdoor Nation.

No nation loves nature so much as the German. The Italian travels to get somewhere, the German to travel. The country walk for its own sake is a German discovery. The Englishman's ideal is a park, the German's a wood, and the Frenchman loves his boulevard.—Hamburger Zeitung.

She Admitted It.

A Mrs. Malaprop said to Clara Novello, the noted English prima donna, "You will admit that there is a great deal of evil life in the theater."

"True, indeed," replied Clara, "but on which side of the curtain?"

An Economist.

"You should ride a horse."

"Can't afford it," said the apprehensive person.

"But it will give you an appetite."

"Perhaps. But it will do the same for the horse."—Washington Star.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The End of the Bridge" is an extraordinary triumph at the Castle Square. Even four weeks have not been enough, and Mr. Craig is therefore compelled to announce a fifth week beginning nevt Monday. Whether it will be the last, remains to be seen. If the public ask it, Mr. Craig will be compelled to give it week after week until the demand ceases. As for the performance of Miss Lincoln's prize play, it is exceptionally effective, Mr. Craig, Miss Young, Mr. Hassell, Mr. Walker and Miss McDannel all having equal opportunity. With the character of Peter, the little boy, among the dramatis personae, "The End of the Bridge" will offer exceptional attraction for the children during the coming school vacation week.

PARK THEATRE.

The human appeal of "The Commuters," the comedy of American suburban life, makes for its great success at the Park Theatre where it is now running. This is the judgment of the Rev. Albert E. George, the well-known Boston clergyman-writer, who has written the following review of the great success for the American.

Here's a farce meteoric with fun. Through the four acts, it is one constant spray of amusement. If you have missed one item that some one else along side of you is thoroughly chuckling over, another comes right behind you and you join the chorus of laughs. It is not an empty laugh. It concerns some item or incident in the life of the commuter that you know to be true. If you live out in the suburban district of Boston, and you have to take a train every morning to the city, Act I is very suggestive to you. The scene at the breakfast table, the hurry and bustle of running for a train the study of your neighbor's doings, as well as bolting your food, all these trifling incidents are effervescent with amusing turns and twists that you know to be true and you cannot restrain the laughter. After two and the storm of Act 3 comes the quiet of a Sunday morning in the country. O, so superbly real. The excitements of the previous hours loom up with their varied changes. The very look and movement of every participant in that last act show fun still dangling in the air and as lively as ever. But what makes this farcial comedy so popular? It is invigorating. It is intensely human. It is just what appeals to the interest of every one who goes to the theatre. The simple facts of human life are well presented. They may be magnified at times, but you will not notice this as you will be tempted to cover them with your enjoyment of all that is said and done. It is no wonder that the theatre is crowded. You cannot forget it. You will speak well of it after seeing it. There is really nothing to criticise. You see too many things that are true to fall into this attitude. You go to laugh about something that you know to be true in life. You are not disappointed. You go from it and hear somebody say, "It is a good show." Of course it is a good show, because it makes a simple thing or event that everyone knows something about, so intensely amusing. This is what makes a good farce. To make a living issue show its funny side is to make it more interesting, and this is what "The Commuters" is doing at the Park Theatre.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

A big holiday programme has been arranged for the Easter holidays at B. F. Keith's theatre, and if all the boys and girls of Boston who are out of school do not fill the big playhouse it will be a wonder. But the bill is not made up entirely for the young folks. The features that will appeal to them will strike the older ones as well. Who has not laughed over the antics of the famous "Buster"Keaton, of the remarkable acropatic trio, the 3 Keatons? Who will not enjoy the lively sports of Al Rayno's Bull Dogs, who play football and do all sorts of remarkable things? For a big feature that will attract wide attention there will be Hugh Horbert, in the great Lamb's Club success, "A Son of Solomon," one of the funniest and most original comedies that Aaron Hoffmann, author of "The End of the World," has ever written, and one that has attracted a vast amount of attention in New York. Then there will be Augusta Glose, who originated the pianologue; Mr. and Mrs. Jack McGreevey, who will make their first appearance here in a comedy sketch called "The Village Fiddler and The Country Maid," which is described as a riot of fun from start to finish; Conroy and LeMaire in a new comedy entitled "The Pinochle Fiends;" Elida Morris, a dainty singing comedieene, and others yet to be announced.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

The Aborn English Grand Opera Company, which began its second spring season at the Boston Opera house, March 27th, has more than duplicated its remarkable success of a year ago, for their engagement opened with every seat in Boston's famous temple of music occupied, and so far the attendance has surpassed their records of last spring. For the second week of the Aborn season, Wagner's melodious and majestic "Lohengrin" will be presented, with practically the same array of principal artists, with the addition of Lila Robeson, a young western contralto who is making her first appearance in the East. Encouraged by their great success last year at the Boston Opera House, Milton and Sargent Aborn have ventured farther this year by installing a much larger organization than before, the double cast, chorus, orchestra and ballet at present numbering two hundred and fifty persons in all.

They will also give Boston a more varied and larger assortment of talent this year than before, for having other equally large companies located at the opera houses of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, they will exchange the principal artists from week to week between these various organizations, which will have the effect of filling most appropriately each important role in the various operas, as well as affording their clientele in each city an array, altogether, of over fifty noted singers on the season.

Following next week's presentation of "Lohengrin" the program will embrace "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Thais," "Il Trovatore," "La Boheme," "Carmen" and "The Tales of Hoffman" for a week each.

The Vacant Literary Throne.

There is, we must admit, today no monarch in any tongue upon the literary throne, no sovereign world name in poetry or prose, in whom, as has happened before now, not so many generations ago, in royal succession to Scott, Byron, Goethe, Hugo, Tolstoy, all the civilized world—Teuton, Latin, Celt, Slav, oriental—is interested, for whose new works it looks or where it seeks the gospel of the day. Nabochish, to use an Irish word that became a favorite with Sir Walter Scott, it does not matter. Do not let us nurse the humor of the despondent editor who mournfully told his readers, "No new epic this month."

Nobody can tell how the wonders of language are performed nor how a book comes into the world. Genius is genius. The lamp that today some may think burns low will be replenished. New orbs will bring light. Literature may be trusted to take care of itself, for it is the transcript of the drama of life, with all its actors, moods and strange flashing fortunes. The curiosity that it meets is perpetual and insatiable, and the impulses that inspire it can never be extinguished.—John Morley.

Thrifty Harry Lauder.

There are many stories told of the wonderful thrift of Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian. Once when Lauder was in New York he was in a wine buying party at the Astor. Everybody but the Scot bought wine. When it came his turn to buy he sighed.

"Well, boys," he said, "it's my turn to treat. Come along with me. I've got a fine bottle of old Scotch up in my room. I brought it over with me."

On another occasion he was with a drinking party and instead of liquor he took cigars, for which those who treated him paid 50 cents apiece. Harry put all but one in his pocket. He spent two hours smoking that one. After the drinking was over the little comedian went to the cigar counter and said to the man in charge, "I say, man, wud ye mind givin' me ten cent cigars for these fifty cent ones?" The exchange was made, and Harry went to his room with five times as many cigars as he had at the start.

Thought It Was Serious.

The burning of the famous Greyfriars church in Edinburgh occurred one Sunday morning, and the young people of a house which backed upon the churchyard were among the first, as they were preparing to start for church, to observe the flames. It was the housemaid's Sunday out, and old Kitty, the cook, was that day responsible for her duties. Hearing unwonted commotion and excited outcries upstairs, she came panting and hobbling up from her basement kitchen, crying anxiously at each stair:

"Oh, what is't? What is't?"

"Oh, Kitty, look here!" cried one of the girls from a window. "Greyfriars church is burning up."

Kitty dropped limply on a settee.

"Is that a', miss?" she grumbled between gasps. "What a fright ye geed me! I thicht ye said the parlor fire was out."—Youth's Companion.

Sleepwalking.

Somnambulism has been a mystery and a matter of discussion to the medical profession since the days of the ancients. They knew as well as we all now know that there is such a thing as somnambulism, or walking in the sleep. They attempted to explain it just as modern medical science has been endeavoring to explain it ever since. But as it was then so it is now. There are so many explanations that even the physician is puzzled to decide which to accept.

A Freak.

The elevator was waiting for passengers on the ground floor of the skyscraper when an excited woman fluttered over to the man running it.

"Does this car go up?" she inquired, breathless.

"No, madam," said the elevator man, unperturbed, "this is a crosstown car."—New York Times.

COUGH AND COLD SYRUP

Made at Home, Touches spot.

A great big, full pint of laxative cough syrup of the finest quality known to the medical world can readily be made by any woman or even child. To a pint of granulated sugar add a half pint of boiling water, stir and cool. Obtain at drug store 2 1-2 ozs. Essence Mentho-Laxene, empty it into a pint bottle and fill up with the syrup. A teaspoonful every hour or two will check or stop a cold in the head, and cure any cough that is curable. It will pay any family to keep it always in the home to avoid the diseases due to colds, such as pneumonia, bronchitis, sore throat, diphtheria and consumption. It is marvelously quick in action and permanent too.

La France SHOE for WOMEN

Children of First Church Sunday school are to give the operetta "Cinderella in Flower Land" this evening in the chapel.

Children of members of the Quincy Women's club are looking forward to the party to be given for them tomorrow afternoon at the clubhouse at half past two.

Mrs. E. E. Hoxie of 269 Beale street, who underwent an operation at Boothby hospital recently, is recovering rapidly from its effects and will be home in a few days.

THE NOON ALARM.

The alarm from Box 123, known as a danger zone box, at 11.58 this noon sent the fire department flying down Hancock street toward the car barn. The fire proved to be an extensive grass and brush fire that extended from the railroad toward Hancock street, and covered a large territory, The Wollaston chemical had been summoned on a telephone call previous to the alarm, but the fire was so wide spread that more help was needed, and the alarm was sounded. The fire raged near the sewer dumping house off Hancock street, and extended as far north as the Chamberlin estate and east to Hancock street. There are many houses in this immediate vicinity and as some of them were surrounded there was danger of their taking fire.

LOCAL SPORTS.

as pointed out that they were not dealing with the Adams street side of Hancock street at all, but Mr. Bates insisted that the grade question would surely cause trouble if the boulevard were constructed before the railroad plan of elevating or depressing the tracks was settled.

BATHOUSE.

The second hearing was on the construction of a public bath house at Wollaston beach.

Representative Langelier was the first speaker. He proposed the construction of one similar to that erected in Lynn. Many people of the Dorchester district could use the bath house as well as residents of Quincy. As it was many of the Neponset people bathed on the Quincy beach in summer.

Mayor Shea pointed out that between 400 and 500 people used the beach daily for bathing in summer, and that inasmuch as Wollaston beach was just about central between Revere and Nantasket it would be the ideal situation for a bath house.

Ex-Mayor Bryant spoke of the yacht clubs and the number of people they attracted to the vicinity, and called to the attention of the committee the fact that at the other end of Quincy, the city bath house accommodated about 15,000 people through the summer.

Councilman Gardner pointed out the danger to the health of the people, many of whom had to walk a mile in their bathing suits with nothing but a gossamer over them.

G. B. Bates expressed himself heartily in favor of the erection of a public bath house on Wollaston beach.

The only opposition was raised by M. L. Bergowitz, secretary of the United Improvement association of Boston. He argued that inasmuch as Boston paid 60 per cent of the Metropolitan tax, she did not care to saddle herself with the additional expense of a bath house which would benefit the people of one section only.

Representative Thomas put him through a course of sprouts, inquiring if he knew anything about Quincy. Why the Improvement association had not opposed the erection of a $100,000 bath house at Tinnean beach, and in general forced him to retreat from the floor.

IN THE TOURISTS' STATE.

Some Impressions of Florida by Lysander S. Richards.

After sojourning a season in Florida I think I can give a fair estimate of this far off tourists' state. I say tourists' state for half of the population in Florida is made up of northern tourists.

For warmth one must go to Palm Beach, or West Palm Beach. If you have a very fat wallet, go to Palm Beach, across the river, if it is rather lean, to West Palm Beach. At the former the Royal Poinciana will board you from $7. to $50. a day. At West Palm Beach you can get boarded from $10. to $15. a week—per week not per day as at the former.

Daytona some hundred miles further north is the next warmest place and the prettiest. December and January are the months for Palm Beach as February and March are too warm there for comfort. February and early March is the time for Daytona, and March and early April for St. Augustine. Florida raises oranges, grape fruit, pineapples, cocoanuts and magnificient flowers but no vegetables ,or cows worth mentioning. There is no pure milk because there is no grass. It raises climate and that is all, except fruit and flowers.

Daytona beach is the finest in this country, 32 miles long and as straight as an arrow. So hard a horse's hoof makes no imprint upon it. This is the beach where the great auto races take place.

Florida is not a very expensive place to visit. The round trip from Washington to Palm Beach is less than $60 and from Boston to Washington round trip $20 with first class service. The hotels are no more expensive than the same grade in Boston.

At nearly all the hotels you become acquainted easily with the guests, as they are about all tourists, traveling the same as you are for sight-seeing and warmth. They want to talk with you and you with them, asking you what state you came from and ten chances to one you will meet somebody who you may know about, or someone he or she left behind you may know of. It is virtually a family party. When you get out of Florida, north, it is quite another matter, as I found it. I stopped at Savannah, Hmlet, S. C., Raleigh, N. C., Richmond, and am now in Washington. At hotels in these places, you meet hardly anyone but traveling salesmen, whom you do not meet socially as generally they stop only a day and are off for the next city attending to business not pleasure.
